(a) 3 St. Tr. 152.

(b) 2 Haw. c. 46, s. 22. But it seems that the deposition must be proved to be the genuine one of the witness. In Lord Stafford's Case, Oates, the witness, proved that the paper produced contained his deposition. 3 St. Tr. 153.

(c) R. v. Paine, 1 Salk. 281; 5 Mod. 163.

(d) By the late stat. 7 Geo. 4, c. 64.

(e) Fost. 236, 337.

(f) Fost. 106. Radbourn's Case, Leach, 512.

Where depositions have been taken and lost, a witness may be cross-examined from copies (g).

Analogous to these depositions are the examinations which are judicially made under the direction of Acts of Parliament, which it seems to be now settled are not evidence where they are taken ex parte against one who had not the benefit of cross-examination. Therefore an ex parte examination of a pauper, although taken upon oath, is not admissible evidence against the appellant parish. For although the stat. 13 & 14 Car. 2, c. 12, s. 1, gives magistrates authority to remove upon complaint made, and incidentally to examine upon oath, yet the proceeding is ex parte, and the parties to be affected have no opportunity to cross-examine (h). In the case of The King v. Ravenstone (i) it was held that the examination of a woman pregnant of a bastard was admissible evidence, after her death, against the person whom she charged as the putative father, although the proceeding before the magistrate was ex parte, and the party charged was not present; the authority of this case may well be doubted (k). Examinations before justices. *387

DETINUE.

In detinue the plaintiff must prove, 1st, his property in the goods (1); and 2dly, the detainer by the defendant.

1. Property in the goods (A). This may be either absolute or special (l). But a present right of possession is essential (m); a mere reversionary interest is not sufficient. And the right must exist at the time of bringing the action. If A. deposit the title deeds of his estate with B., and before action convey the estate, he cannot recover, for the title deeds go with the estate (n).

2dly. The detainer by the defendant. Under the plea of non detinet, it is sufficient for the plaintiff to prove that the goods came wrongfully into the defendant's possession, though the declaration allege a possession by finding (o).

If a man detain the goods of a feme covert which came into his hands

(g) R. v. Shellard, 9 C. & P. 277. Where it is said also, that the witness ought to be asked only, whether he has always said the same thing, except before the magistrates.

(h) R. v. Ferry Frystone, 2 East, 54. R. v. Nuneham Courtenay, 1 East, 373. R. v. Eriswell, 3 T. R. 721.

(i) 5 T. R. 373. [See M'Farland v. Shaw, 2 Car. Law Repos. 102.] See also R. v. Clayton, 3 East, 58. supra, 201, n (g), and the observations upon it.

(k) The Court assumed that depositions under the stat. of Phil. & Mary, taken in the absence of the prisoner, would be evidence against him. Vide infra, tit. Examination.

(l) B. N. P. 50. The proof as to property seems to be the same as in an action of trover. Ibid. But greater certainty is necessary in the description of the property in the declaration.

(m) Gordon v. Harper, 7 T. R. 9. Pain v. Whitaker,[1] 1 R. & M. 100.

(n) Phillips v. Robinson,[2] 4 Bingh. 106. If A., tenant in fee-simple, enfeoff B. without warranty, B. shall have all charters and evidences, for B. is to defend the land at his peril; but if A. enfeoff B. with warranty, B. shall not have any charters or evidences which comprehend the warranty without express grant. If A. enfeoff B. with warranty to him, his heirs, and assigns, and B. by deed enfeoff C. without warranty, who enfeoffeth D. with warranty, C. shall have the first and second charter. Lord Buckhurst's Case, 1 Co. 1.

(o) Mills v. Graham, 1 N. R. 140; and semble, where the detention is wrongful, the declaration may always be supported on an allegation of finding, as in trover; per Sir J. Mansfield, C. J. Ibid. In cases of special bailments it may be fit to declare specially; but even there it seems to be unnecessary. Ibid. And see Co. Litt. 286, b.; tit. 2, N. B. 138 (E). Kettle v. Bromsall, Willes, 118; Mod. Ent. vol. 2, p. 422.

(1) [Actual possession by the plaintiff is not necessary to maintain detinue. Tunstall v. M'Clelland, 1 Bibb. 186. The plaintiff must prove property in himself and possession in the defendant; but proof of such possession anterior to the bringing of the action is sufficient, unless the defendant has been legally dispossessed—and this it is for him to show. Burnley v. Lambert, 1 Wash. 308.]

(A) (Where an appointment has been made by the President of the United States, but the commission withheld afterwards, an action of detinue will not lie for the commission. Marberry v. Madison, 1 Cranch, 137.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxi. 390. [2]Id. xiii. 362.

before the marriage, the husband alone may bring detinue, for the detention is the gist of the action (p); proof of possession is unnecessary (q); and if A. deliver goods to B. to deliver them to C., the latter may bring detinue against B., for the property is vested in him by the delivery to B. for his use (r).

*388 *If A. deliver goods to B. who loses them, and D. finds them, and delivers them to J. S. who has a right to them, A. cannot maintain detinue against D., for he is not privy to the delivery by A. (s) (1).

If a statute prohibit goods under pain of forfeiture, one part to the King, and another to him who will inform, seize, or sue for the same, any person may bring detinue for the goods, for the bringing the action vests a propety in him (t) (A). An heir may maintain detinue for an heir-loom (u).

The plaintiff must prove an actual possession of the goods by the defendant (x); hence detinue does not lie against the executor of a bailee who has destroyed the chattel (y). And if there be several executors, and one only has the possession, the action must be brought against him alone (z).

If goods be delivered to husband and wife, the detinue must be against the husband only (a); but if goods come to a feme covert before marriage, the action must be brought against the husband and wife (b) (B). In detinue for a bond, a variance as to the sum will be material (c). The detention of goods seized by excise officers, after payment of the penalty on a conviction by justices, is not unlawful if no demand has been made (d).

Under the plea of non detinet, the defendant may give in evidence any matter which shows that he does not detain the plaintiff's goods (e) (2); as for instance, a gift by the plaintiff; but he cannot give in evidence that the goods were delivered by way of pledge, as he may in trover (f).

(p) B. N. P. 50. Secus in detinue of charters of the wife's inheritance. 1 Rol. 347.
(q) Ibid.; and 1 Roll. Ab. 606. (r) 1 Roll. Ab. 606.
(s) 2 Danv. 511; B. N. P. 51.
(t) Salk. 223; B. N. P. 51. It has been said, that detinue does not lie where the property has been taken by trespass (Sel. N. P. tit. Detinue, 6 Hen. 7, 9, a; Bro. Ab. Detinue, pl. 53), because, as is said, the property is devested by the trespass, tam. qu.
(u) Bro. Ab. Detinue, pl. 30.
(x) 2 Roll. Ab. 703. Wilkins v. Despard, 5 T. R. 112.
(y) B. N. P. 50. [Or detained it. Walker v. Hawkins, 1 Hayw.]
(z) Bro. Ab. Detinue, pl. 19. (a) Roll R. 128; B. N. P. 51.
(b) Co. Litt. 351; B. N. P. 51; i. e. semble, for the detention before the marriage. [Johnson v. Pastern, 2 Hayw. 306.]
(c) 2 Roll. Ab. 703; B. N. P. 51. (d) Hutchings v. Morris,[1] 6 B. & C. 464.
(e) Co. Litt. 283; B. N. P. 51.
(f) B. N. P. 51. Under the plea of non detinet of a note, the defendant cannot show a justifiable detention. Richards v. Frankum, 6 M. & W. 420; and 8 Dowl. 346. And on the note being produced at the trial, there appearing to be a memorandum at the back, assigning it to G., a third party, and directing the

(1) [In North Carolina, detinue lies in every case in which the property is detained, without regard to the manner in which the defendant acquired possession. Johnson v. Pasteur, Cam. & Nor. 464. Even though the defendant has parted with the possession before the suit. Merrit v. Warmouth, 1 Hayw. 12. The plaintiff may have judgment for damages and costs, though the article detained has been restored to him. Merrit v. Merrit, Martin's Rep. 18. So he may have judgment, though the slave, for which the action is brought, died after the demand. Skipper v. Hargrove, Martin's Rep. 74.

In Kentucky, detinue is the proper action to recover property won at gaming contracts. Bess v. Shepherd, 2 Bibb, 225. The plaintiff must prove that the defendant was in possession before the date of the writ. Burton v. Brashear, 3 Marsh. 278. The death of a slave, pending in an action of detinue for him, does not abate or affect the suit. Carroll v. Early, 4 Bibb, 270.]

(A) (Bolland v. Bell, 1 Mason's R. 243.)

(B) (Detinue will lie against an infant for goods delivered upon a special contract for a specific purpose, after the contract is avoided. Penrose v. Curren, 3 Rawle. 453.)

(2) [In detinue for slaves, parol evidence to prove that a deed was executed for the purpose of defrauding creditors, and therefore void, is admissible upon the plea of non detinet, Stratton v. Minnis, 2 Munf. 329. See also Elam v. Bass's Ex'rs, 4 Munf. 301.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiii. 238.

And by the rule of H. T. 4 W. 4, the plea of non detinet shall operate as a denial of the detention of the goods by the defendant, but not of the plaintiff's property therein; and no other defence but such denial shall be admissible under that plea.

The jury must find the value of every particular thing demanded; for the judgment is to recover the thing itself, or the value of it, and if the jury find damages and costs, and no value, the defect cannot, it is said, be supplied by a writ of inquiry (g) (1).

DEVISE, PROOF OF TITLE BY. See EJECTMENT.

DIRECTORY.

STATUTE when directory as to Time. See TIME.
As to Mode of Sale (h), see INDEX.

*DISTRESS (i). *389

AN action of trespass is a proper form in all cases where the distress is either wholly illegal (k) or irregular (2), unless it be otherwise provided by a statute.

Where a distress has been irregularly made for rent, or for poor's rates, the action is in case or trespass (l), according to the nature of the irregumaker to pay the assignee the amount and all interest in respect thereof, it was held, that as amounting to a mere indorsement, it did not require a stamp; but that on the issues, "not the property of the plaintiff, and that the defendant held it as the servant of G." the verdict must be found for the defendant. Ibid. S. C. 9 C. & P. 221.

(g) Ibid.; 10 Co. 119. But they may find the aggregate value of that which consists of a number of particulars; as a flock of sheep, &c. Ibid.

(h) Doe v. Evans, 1 C. & M. 450. As to writs, Miller v. Bowden, 1 Cr. & J. 563. And see Davidson v. Gill, 1 East, 72. Clarke v. Palmer, 4 M. & Ry. 141. A statute is never directory when in the negative.

(i) As to justification under a distress for rent, see REPLEVIN.—TRESPASS. A Canal Act authorizing the company to distrain goods in boats for non-payment of toll, does not warrant a distress except on the canal. Fraser v. Swansea,[1] 1 Ad. & Ell. 354. As to distresses for small rents, see the stat. 57 G. 3, c. 93; 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 17. Distress warrants by justices of the peace, 27 G. 2, c. 20. As to notice of action, see NOTICE.—TIME. Goods were seized (under a warrant of distress, for church rates, admitted to be irregular) on the 27th October, but not sold until the 1st and 2d November, and the action was brought on the 30th January; it was held, that as the seizure was only conditional, if the amount were not paid, and the subsequent sale was the real grievance, the action was in time; and where the demand of perusal and copy of the warrant required it to be within three days, although by 24 Geo. 2, c. 44, no action can be brought until after refusal of such copy, and in six days after demand, held that the right of action was not affected thereby. Collins v. Rose, 5 M. & W. 194.

(k) If the landlord turn the plaintiff's family out of possession, and continue in possession after the rent is paid, he is a trespasser. Etherton v. Popplewell, 1 East, 139. As to what may be taken in execution under a distringas, see 3 B. & P. 256; 4 East, 467. Implements of trade are distrainable where there is no other subject of distress. Simpson v. Hartop, Willes, 512. Utensils in use are not distrainable. Secus, if not in use, and no other distress on the premises. Fenton v. Logan,[2] 9 Bing. 676. Wood v. Clarke, 1 Cr. & J. 484. See Appendix. Beasts distrained damage feasant must be fed whilst impounded. Cruelty to Animals Act. The collector of land-tax cannot break open a house, without the presence of a constable, to make a distress, the provision overruling the whole of sect. 17 of 38 Geo. 3, c. 5. Foss v. Racine, 4 M. & W. 419; 7 Dowl. 53; and 8 C. & P. 699.[3]

(l) Ib. By stat. 17 Geo. 2, c. 38, s. 8, "Where any distress shall be made for money justly due for the relief of the poor, the distress shall not be deemed unlawful, nor the party making it a trespasser, on account of any defect or want of form in the warrant of appointment of overseers, or in the rate of assessment, or in the warrant of distress thereupon; nor shall the party distraining be deemed a trespasser ab initio, on account of any irregularity which shall be afterwards done by him; but the party grieved may recover satisfaction for the special damage in an action of trespass, or on the case, with full costs, unless tender of

(1) [If on a declaration for several slaves (separate value being laid) the jury find a joint value, it is error. Higginbotham v. Rucker, 2 Call. 313. A writ of inquiry to ascertain their respective values should be awarded. Cornwall v. Truss, 2 Munf. 195. Failing to lay a separate value, as to each slave demanded, is fatal on demurrer, but is cured by a verdict severing the values. Holliday & ux. v. Littlepage, 2 Munf. 539. It is not error, if the jury find general damages for detaining several slaves; but the alternative value of each ought to be separately found. Ibid.]

(2) {Kerr et al. v. Sharpe, 14 Serg. & Rawle, 399.}

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxviii. 105. [2]Id. xxiii. 416. [3]Id. xxxiv. 591.

larity complained of. But the plaintiff may waive the trespass and bring case (m).

In an action on the case for an illegal or irregular distress, the particular gravamen is specified in the declaration, which governs the nature of the proof.

*390 Causes of action.

*The most usual causes of action are for distraining where no rent was due (n); or for more than was due (o); or for an excessive distress (p); or for distraining beasts of the plough, and sheep, where there is other sufficient distress (q); or driving a distress above three miles out of the hundred (r); impounding goods distrained off the premises, and not giving due notice (s); refusing to restore the goods distrained for rent, after tender of the rent and costs (t); selling the distress within five days after notice (u); amends be made before action brought."—By stat. 11 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 19, "Where any distress shall be made for any rent justly due, and any irregularity or unlawful act shall be afterwards done by the party distraining, or his agent, the distress shall not be deemed unlawful, nor the distrainer a trespasser ab initio,* but the party grieved may recover satisfaction for the special damage in an action of trespass, or on the case, at the election of the plaintiff; and if he recover, he shall have full costs." But by sec. 20 of the same stat. it is provided "that no tenant or lessee shall recover in such action, if tender or amends has been made before action brought."

(m) Distress made after tender of the rent, the plaintiff may waive the trespass and bring case. Branscombe v. Bridges,[1] 1 B. & C. 145; 3 Starkie's C. 171.

(n) By 2 Will. & Mary, sess. 1, c. 5, s. 5, the owner may, in action of trespass or case, recover double the value of the goods, and full costs.

(o) This is either at common law, or under the stat. of Marl. 52, Hen. 3, c. 4.

(p) Trespass does not lie for taking an excessive distress for rent (Lynn v. Moody, Fitzg. 85; 2 Str. 851. Hutchins v. Chambers, 1 Burr. 590), unless gold and silver be taken to excess, for they are of known value. Ibid.; and per Lord Kenyon, Crowther v. Ramsbottom, 7 T. R. 658. The proper remedy for taking an extensive distress is case upon the statute of Marlbridge, 52 H. 3, c. 4. Hutchins v. Whitaker, 2 Ld. Kenyon, 204. Trover will not lie. Whitworth v. Smith, 1 M. & R. 193. Bachelor v. Vyse, 4 M. & S. 552.

(q) Unquore est purveu que null homme de religion n'autre soit distreinte per bestes que gaignent sa terre, ne per ses brebis, taunt come lem trove autre destresce et autres chateux suffisaunt. 51 H. 3, st. 4. But such a distress is not illegal if at the time of making it there was reasonable ground for supposing, from the appraisement of competent persons, that without taking beasts of the plough there would not have been sufficient. Jenner v. Yolland, 6 Price, 3. The law does not compel the previous sale of such other goods. Ibid.; and see 2 Willes R. 167. An action is not maintainable for distraining beasts of the plough where there is no other sufficient subject of distress on the premises. Piggott v. Birtle, 1 M. & W. 441. Implements of trade are distrainable where there is no other subject of distress. Simpson v. Hartop, Willes, 512. Utensils in use are not distrainable. Secus, if they be not in use, and there be no other distress on the premises. Fenton v. Logan,[2] 9 Bing. 676. Wood v. Clarke, 1 Cr. & J. 484. Crops taken in execution under the statute, and left a considerable time upon the premises in order to be reaped, are not distrainable for rent becoming due after they were taken in execution; see Vol. I. 514; and where crops are so taken, sold, and left on the premises, and arrears of rent have been paid, under the statute of Anne, the landlord cannot distrain for subsequent rent on the ground that the purchaser has not entered into the agreement prescribed by the stat. 56 Geo. 3, c. 50, s. 3. Nor can it be presumed from the absence of such an agreement that the straw was sold to be carried off contrary to the 1st section. Wright v. Dewes,[3] 1 Ad. & Ell. 641. As to the general position that growing crops seized under a fi. fa. are not liable to the landlord's distress, see Peacock v. Purvis,[4] 2 B. & B. 362; 5 B Moore, 79. Eaton v. Southby, Willes, 131, and the dictum of Thompson, B. in Gwilliam v. Burke, 1 Price, 277, contra. Distrainers of cattle damage feasant are bound to provide a proper pound, and are liable for injury caused by the state of it; where the replication alleged that the pound was then wet, and wholly unfit, and whereby, &c., it was held, that the issue raised expressly its state at the time of impounding, and not whether generally sufficient. Wilder v. Speer, 3 N. & P. 536.

(r) 1 & 2 Phil. & Mary, c. 12, which entitles the party aggrieved to 5*l.* and treble damages.

(s) 2 Will. & Mary, c. 5, s. 2; 11 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 10.

(t) A tender of the rent upon the land before the distress makes the distress tortious; a tender after the distress, and before the impounding, makes the subsequent detainer, but not the taking, wrongful; a tender after the taking and impounding does not make either the one or the other wrongful; but in the case of a distress for rent, a sale after tender of the rent and costs, is illegal, under the equity of the stat. 2 Will. & Mary, c. 5. An action on the case will not lie for detaining the plaintiff's cattle, which have been distrained damage feasant, in the pound after tender of amends made subsequent to the impounding. Anscomb v. Shore, 1 Camp. 285; 1 Taunt. 261; nor where the tender is made after the distress, but before the impounding; for the proper action is replevin or trespass. Lindon v. Hooper, Cowp. 414; and see 6 T. R. 299; Sheriff v. James,[5] 1 Bing. 341.

(u) See the stat. 2 Will. & Mary, sess. 1, c. 5, s. 2. Where the landlord sold an unripe crop of corn

* An irregularity in the distress does not avoid the sale. Lyon v. Weldon,[6] 2 Bing. 334.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. viii. 43. [2]Id. xxiii. 416. [3]Id. xxviii. 172. [4]Id. vi. 154. [5]Id. viii. 338. [6]Id. ix. 424.

not removing *the goods distrained within a reasonable time after the lapse of five days (x); for not selling for the best price (y); for not leaving the overplus arising from the sale of a distress with the sheriff (z) or constable.

The omission of the bailiff to deliver a copy of his charges, under the stat. 57 G. 3, c. 93, s. 6, does not render the landlord liable (a).

The law does not prescribe any priority in the sale of goods; no action lies for selling beasts of the plough before other goods, where the distress is legal (b).

A count in trover is usually added to the special count; and therefore, mere proof of the defendant's seizure and sale of the plaintiff's goods will usually be sufficient to throw upon the defendant the necessity of justifying the act (c). Proof by the sheriff.

The more correct course seems to be, that the plaintiff should enter at once upon the whole of his case. If he alleges a distress for rent, and complains of an irregularity committed in the course of that distress, he should prove the defendant's hand-writing to the notice of distress, if such a notice has been served; this will usually be evidence of the tenancy, the quantum of rent, and the sum in arrear, if it be correct as to such particulars; if it be not correct, and the fact should be material, the defendant may prove the amount of the rent by evidence of the original contract, or by evidence of receipts given by the defendant, or of payments to him.

In an action for an excessive distress (d) the plaintiff should prove the tenancy (e), the rent due as alleged, and the distress. The tenancy may be *proved as already stated, or by the production and proof of the lease. A variance between the quantum of rent alleged, and that appearing to be due, will not be material (f). Excessive distress. *392 within the five days, the plaintiff cannot recover on a declaration for the seizure, per quod he would not replevy, for such a sale is wholly void, and the tenant might at any time before the corn was ripe have tendered the rent due, and if after that the landlord had taken the corn, he would have been a trespasser. Owen v. Legh,[1] 3 B. & A. 470. The five days appointed by the statute are inclusive of the day of sale. Wallace v. King, 1 H. B. 13. The act of appraisement at the end of five days does not take away the right to replevy. Jacob v. King,[2] 5 Taunt. 451. An arrangement between the landlord and tenant that the goods distrained shall remain on the premises after the five days, is not per se evidence of collusion between the landlord and tenant. Harrison v. Barry, 7 Price, 690.

(x) Although there are precedents of declarations in case for not removing a distress from the premises after the expiration of five days (see Chitty on Pleadings), yet it seems to be clear that the remedy is in trespass, and not case. As the stat. 2 Will. & Mary, sess. 2, c. 5, s. 2, and the stat. 11 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 10, authorize an appraisement and sale of the goods upon the premises after the expiration of the five days, it follows that the landlord is to be allowed a reasonable time for doing this, the statutes having fixed no particular time, and it being impossible, where each case must depend so much on its own circumstances, for the Legislature to prescribe any. What shall be a reasonable time, under the circumstances of the particular case, is a question for the jury. In the late case of Pitt v. Adams, Abbott, L. C. J., left it so to the jury, and the Court of K. B. afterwards held the direction to be right. If the party remain in possession beyond a reasonable time, he is a trespasser. Ibid. After the stat. 2 Will. & Mary, sess. 1, c. 5, s. 2, which gives the power of sale after the expiration of five days, and previous to the stat. 11 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 10, which authorized a sale on the premises, the landlord was considered to be a trespasser if he did not remove the distress at the end of five days. Griffin v. Scott, Str. 717. See also Winterborne v. Morgan, 11 East, 595. Wallace v. King, 1 H. B. 13. Etherton v. Popplewell, 1 East, 139. But the defendant in trespass may disprove the trespass by evidence of consent on the part of the tenant. See Harrison v. Bray, 7 Price, 610.

(y) According to the stat. 2 Will. & Mary, c. 5, s. 2, infra, note (p). But the price at which the goods were appraised will be presumed to be the best, until the contrary appear; 4 Mod. 390; Com. Dig. Distress, D. 8.

(z) According to the stat. 2 Will. & Mary, c. 5, s. 2, where the action is against overseers for the surplus under a distress for poor's rates, under the stat. 27 Geo. 2, c. 20, a demand must be proved to have been made previous to the commencement of the action. Simpson v. Routh,[3] 2 B. & C. 682.

(a) Hart v. Leach, 1 M. & W. 560.

(b) Jenner v. Yolland, 6 Price, 5.

(c) But trover will not lie for an irregularity in the sale where the defendant was entitled to distrain, although he sells before the expiration of the five days. Wallace v. King, 1 H. B. 13.

(d) Under the stat. 52 H. 3, c. 4, "et qui districtiones fecerint irrationabiles et indebitas graviter amercientur proptum excessum districtionum ipsarum."

(e) A local description of the premises must be proved as laid. Harris v. Cooke,[4] 2 Moore, 587. See Vol. I. tit. VARIANCE.

(f) Sells v. Hoare,[5] Bing. 401.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. v. 346. [2]Id. i. 154. [3]Id. ix. 219. [4]Id. iv. 204. [5]Id. xv. 479.

The taking of the distress by the defendant may be proved by the testimony of the person employed to distrain, if he can prove his authority from the defendant; or such authority may be proved by giving secondary evidence of the warrant to distrain, after giving notice to produce the warrant. Proof of the seizure of the distress is sufficient, without showing that the goods were sold or removed; and although no person be left in possession of the goods (g). So if the plaintiff pay the expenses of the levy under protest before any seizure is made or inventory taken (h).

It is not necessary to prove express malice; it should, however, appear that the excess was considerable (i). Neither is it necessary to prove the precise amount of rent alleged to be due (k) (A).

The proper test of value is the amount which the goods would have sold for at a broker's sale (l).

The action does not lie against the keeper of a pound merely for receiving a distress, though the original taking was tortious, unless he exceed his duty and assent to the trespass (m).

Proof by the defendant.

In an action on the case the defendant may, under the general issue, give any evidence in justification of his act (n). If the distress were for rent he should prove the tenancy, either by means of the contract, or evidence of the payment of rent by the plaintiff, or some other admission by him of the tenancy (o); the authority to the broker or other agent to distrain, for the particular cause; notice of distress according to the statute (p), (g) Swan v. Earl of Falmouth,[1] 8 B. & C. 456. (h) Hutchins v. Scott, 2 M. & W. 809.

(i) Field v. Mitchell, 6 Esp. C. 71. As if a man distrain oxen for a small sum, where a sheep or pig might have been distrained. Secus, where the distress cannot be made on an article of inferior value. Ibid. According to an ancient case, a cart and horse may be distrained for a small demand, because, as is said, they are not severable. Clarke v. Tucker, 2 Vent. 183. Proudlove v. Twemlow, 1 Cr. & M. 326. A landlord is not bound to calculate very nicely the value of the property seized, but he must take care that some proportion is kept between that and the amount due. Per Bayley, J., Willoughby v. Backhouse,[2] 2 B. & C. 823. To maintain the action there must be a disproportion to excess. Per Lord Ellenborough, Field v. Mitchell, 6 Esp. C. 71. A landlord is liable for excess in seizing growing crops, the probable produce of which is capable of estimation at the time of seizure, but the measure of damages is the inconvenience and expense sustained by the tenant in being deprived of their management, or which he is put to in providing sureties on replevying. Piggott v. Birtle, 1 M. & W. 441.

(k) Sells v. Hoare, 1 Bing. 401.

(l) Wells v. Moody,[3] 7 C. & P. 59: and therefore a witness ought not to be asked what might have been obtained for the goods from an incoming tenant. Ibid. Per Parke, B.

(m) Badkin v. Powell, Cowp. 476.

(n) Under the stat. 11 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 21, a previous recovery in replevin is a bar. Phillips v. Berryman, 3 Doug. 386.

(o) And for this purpose notice should be given to him to produce the lease or agreement under which he holds, the receipts for rent, &c.

(p) By the stat. 2 Will. & Mary, sess. 1, c. 5, s. 2, it is enacted, "That where any goods or chattels shall be distrained for any rent reserved, and due upon any contract, and the tenant or owner of the goods shall not within five days* next after such distress, and notice thereof,† with the cause of such taking, left at the chief mansion-house, or other most notorious place on the premises‡ charged with the rent, replevy the same, the person distraining may, with the sheriff or under-sheriff of the county, or constable of the hundred, parish or place, where the distress is taken, cause the distress to be appraised by two sworn appraisers,§

* See note (x) supra, 391.

† As to the form of notice, see Moss v. Gallimore, Doug. 180. It need not state at what time the rent became due. Ibid.

‡ But notice delivered to the party himself is sufficient (Walter v. Rumbal, Lord Ray. 53), for it is the most effectual way of giving notice.

§ It is irregular for the party distraining to act as broker,[4] 2 Bing. 334. Westwood v. Cowne,[5] 1 Starkie's C. 172. Andrews v. Russell, B. & P. 81. The measure of damages, in an action for selling without an appraisement, is the value of the goods, and special damage sustained, minus the amount of rent due. Buggins v. Good, 2 Tyrr. 447. Nott v. Curtis, cited Ib. 449.

(A) (In an action on the case against the landlord for distraining for more than was due for rent, the plaintiff can only recover nominal damages, where he has given his landlord a negotiable note as collateral security for the rent, which note is unpaid and not negotiated by the landlord. Lewis v. Lozee, 3 Wend. 70.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xv. 264. [2]Id. ix. 254. [3]Id. xxxii. 435. [4]Id. ix. 424. [5]Id. ii. 342.

by means *of an examined copy, after proof of notice to produce the original; a regular appraisement by two sworn appraisers (q) at the expiration of five days after the notice (r); the sale of the goods for the best price that could be got (s); the amount of the costs (t); the leaving the overplus, after payment of the rent and costs, with the sheriff or constable.

He cannot justify a joint distress for parcels distinctly let, though in the same lease (u); nor can he split his distress, and first distrain for part, and afterwards for the residue (x). A distress warrant for seven rates, one of which has been quashed, is void as to all (y). An arrangement after an illegal distress as to the sale does not devest the plaintiff's right of action (z); neither does payment or tender of rent, in order to obtain re-deliverance of the goods, bar an action for irregularity. An agreement to take interest on rent does not take away the right of distress (a) (A).

In an action for an excessive distress, the defendant may show that more rent was due than is stated in the notice (b). Previously to the late statute the broker who made the distress was held to be an incompetent witness for the defendant, to disprove an irregularity (c).

In an action under the stat. 11 Geo. 2, c. 19 (d), for a fraudulent and *clandestine removal of goods, to prevent a distress, the plaintiff must *394 whom such sheriff, &c. shall swear to appraise them truly; and after such appraisement shall and may lawfully sell the goods and chattels so distrained for the best price that can be gotten for the same, towards satisfaction of the rent, and the charges of the distress and appraisement, leaving the overplus (if any) in the hands of the sheriff, under-sheriff, or constable, for the owner's use." It seems that at all events reasonable care and diligence ought to be used to obtain the best price. Where a sheriff sells under a venditioni exponas, the meaning of the writ is, sell for the best price you can obtain; and the sheriff ought not to part with the goods for a price manifestly inadequate to their value. See Keightly v. Birch, 3 Camp. 521. Barnard v. Leigh,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 43. But where a sheriff cannot sell but under too great a sacrifice, under a writ of fi. fa., he ought to make a special return. Ib. The party is not bound by the notice of distress given at the time of the distress; he may distrain for one thing and justify for another. Crowther v. Ramsbottom, 7 T. R. 658.

(q) See the stat. supra, note (p). An appraisement by a party who makes the distress is irregular. Westwood v. Cowne,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 172. In case for wrongfully refusing to permit the plaintiff to appraise goods distrained, a plea that the goods were taken for arrears of rent, is an issuable plea, as going to the merits. Sealey v. Harris, 7 Dowl. 197.

(r) The five days are reckoned inclusive of the day of sale. Wallace v. King, 1 H. B. 13.

(s) Supra, note (p).

(t) The stat. 57 Geo. 3, c. 93, which regulates the costs of distresses for rents not exceeding 20*l.* directs (sec. 5) that evidence of the justice's signature shall be proof of the judgment.

(u) Rogers v. Birkmire, Str. 1040; Cas. T. H. 245.

(x) Wallis v. Saville, Lutw. 1532. Secus, if he seize for the whole, but mistaking the value of the goods, seize too little. Hutchins v. Chambers, 1 Burr. 589.

(y) Hurdy v. Wink,[3] 2 Moore, 417.

(z) Willoughby v. Backhouse,[4] 2 B. & C. 821.

(a) Skerry v. Preston,[5] 2 Chitty's R. 245.

(b) Gwinnett v. Phillips, 3 T. R. 645. Crowther v. Ramsbottom, 7 T. R. 658.

(c) Field v. Mitchell, 6 Esp. C. 73.

(d) By 11 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 1, "In case any tenant or lessee of lands or tenements, upon the demise whereof any rent is payable, shall fraudulently or clandestinely carry off his goods, to prevent the landlord from distraining, it shall be lawful for every landlord, or any person by him empowered, within thirty days next ensuing such carrying off, to seize such goods wherever the same shall be found, as a distress for the rent, and the same to sell or dispose of, as if the said goods had been distrained upon such premises." (1) Sec. 2: "Provided that no landlord shall seize goods sold bona fide, and for a valuable consideration, before

(A) (Nor is the right to distrain extinguished by an unsatisfied judgment for the rent. Chipman v. Martin, 13 John. Rep. 240.)

(1) {In Pennsylvania it has been decided that under the provisions of the act of the 21st of March, 1772, which is in substance the same as the statute 11 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 1, from which it was copied nearly verbatim, a removal of his goods by the tenant in the night time, is, in itself, clandestine, and sufficient evidence of fraud; but if the goods of the tenant be removed from the demised premises in the day time, without the knowledge of the landlord, to secure them from a distress for rent becoming due, such removal is not, independently of other circumstances, a clandestine and fraudulent removal, which will authorize the landlord to follow the goods and distrain upon them, within thirty days after their removal. Grace v. Shively. Hoops v. Crowley, 14 Serg. & Rawle, 217, 219.}

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 287. [2]Id. ii. 342. [3]Id. iv. 136. [4]Id. ix. 254. [5]Id. xviii. 322.

Proof in an action for a fraudulent removal, &c.

prove, 1st, that the rent was in arrear (e); 2dly, the fact of the removal of the goods, and their value. It is sufficient to show that the removal was with the privity of the tenant; 3dly, that the removal was fraudulent or clandestine, and made (f) with intent to prevent the landlord or lessor from distraining for the rent so due. It has been said, that it is necessary to prove that the removal was secret and clandestine, as well as that it was fraudulent (g); but this may well be doubted, the words of the statute being in the disjunctive. The statute, it seems, contemplates a removal by the tenant for his own benefit, and does not extend to a delivery to a creditor who presses for payment of a debt (h). Nor to the removal of the goods of a stranger (i). The fraudulent intention, which is a question of fact for the jury, is usually evidenced by the season and circumstances of the removal; as from its having been effected in the night-time, or at an unseasonable hour, with suddenness and precipitation after a threat of distraining, or with knowledge that a distress was intended.

Intention.

In an action against one for aiding and assisting a tenant in a fraudulent removal, it is essential to prove knowledge of the fraudulent intent (k).

In an action of trespass against the landlord, who has followed goods thus removed, he cannot give the fraudulent removal in evidence under the general issue (l); he must, on issue taken on the special justification, be prepared with the proofs already stated, and also show that he distrained the goods within thirty days after the removal (m).

DISTURBANCE.

Proof by the plaintiff.

In an action on the case for the disturbance of the plaintiff in the enjoyment of incorporeal rights, such as of common (n), way (n), watercourse (n), office, seat at church, or other possession, the plaintiff must prove, under the plea of the general issue, not guilty; 1st, his right, as alleged *395 in the *declaration; 2dly, the defendant's interruption of that right (A); and 3dly, the damage sustained.

1st. The usual allegation in the declaration against a wrong-doer, is habere debet, without alleging a grant or prescription (o); and although he such seizure made, to any person not privy to such fraud." Sec. 3. "If any such tenant shall fraudulently remove his goods, and any person shall knowingly assist such tenant in fraudulently conveying away his goods, or in concealing the same, all persons so offending shall forfeit to the landlord from whose estate such goods were carried off, double the value of the goods, to be recovered by action of debt in any of His Majesty's courts at Westminster, or in the courts of session in the counties palatine, or in the courts of grand sessions in Wales." The landlord may elect which remedy he will pursue, in case of fraudulently removing goods to prevent a distress, by action or by complaint to two magistrates, although the goods do not exceed the value of 50*l*. Bromley v. Holden,[1] 1 M. & M. 175.

(e) Unless rent be actually in arrear, the case is not within the stat. 2 Will. Saund. 284, a. n. (2). Watson v. Main, 3 Esp. C. 15.

(f) Lister v. Brown,[2] 3 D. & R. 501; 1 C. & P. 121.

(g) Watson v. Main, 3 Esp. C. 15, cor. Eyre, C. J. The point was doubted in Furneaux v. Fotherby, 4 Camp. 136; but in the case of Opperman v. Smith,[3] 4 D. & R. 33. subsequently decided, it was held, that an open removal, if fraudulent, of which the jury were to judge, would justify the landlord in following and distraining the goods. A withdrawing of cattle to a place where they were not likely to be found, is a concealment, although they were turned into an open field. Stanley v. Wharton, 8 Price, 301. An action lies, although the value does not exceed 50*l*. Ib.

(h) Bach v. Meats, 5 M. & S. 200.

(i) Thornton v. Adams, 5 M. & S. 38.

(k) Brooke v. Noakes,[4] 8 B. & C. 539.

(l) 2 Will. Saund. 284, a; 3 Esp. C. 15. Furneaux v. Fotherby, 4 Camp. 136. As to the justification by the landlord in an action of trespass, see TRESPASS.

(m) According to the stat. 11 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 1, 2.

(n) See these titles respectively.

(o) Com. Dig. Action on the Case, B. 1.

(A) (But a bare refusal of permission to exercise a right, does not amount to a legal disturbance of that right. Downing v. Baldwin, 1 Serg. & R. 298.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxii. 282. [2] Id. xi. 338. [3] Id. xvi. 187. [4] Id. xv. 289.

should allege a prescription, yet as it is but inducement, a variance from the prescription in evidence would not be material, provided the plaintiff proved himself to be really entitled to the right claimed (p); but the plaintiff must prove his right as claimed; as, if he claim a right as appurtenant to particular lands, by proof that it has been used by the occupiers of that land; and it would be insufficient to prove that the right was enjoyed as appurtenant to other lands, or by the tenants of the other manor (q) (A). Proof of the plaintiff's right.

The title to a right of this nature is proved, either, 1st, by direct, or 2dly, more usually by presumptive evidence; by direct evidence, as by proof of a grant of a right of way, as appurtenant to a house or land, or of a right to a pew, as appurtenant to a house, by proof of a faculty (r).

2dly, Prescriptive rights can seldom be proved except by presumptions resulting from constant usage and enjoyment, where the right is of a private nature; and from such evidence, and also from reputation and traditionary declarations, where it is of a public nature (s). Presumptive evidence.

An uninterrupted enjoyment of land for twenty years, in the claimant's own right, is primâ facie evidence of title to the land itself (t); and an enjoyment of a privilege or easement in the lands of another, affords also a presumption of a legal title by grant or prescription (u); this, however, is merely presumptive evidence of the right, which is liable to be rebutted by circumstances (x); and on the other hand, the presumption of legal title may be inferred from a shorter period of possession (y).

In an action for the disturbance of the plaintiff in his enjoyment of a pew in a church, proof of possession is sufficient against a wrong-doer, without *proof of repairs done by the plaintiff (z); but as against the ordinary, who by the common law has the disposal of all the seats in the church, a special title or consideration must be alleged and proved; as by proof of the building and repairing of the seat (a). The defendant may adduce evidence to rebut *396

(p) As against a stranger for a wrongful disturbance of a right, the mode by which he acquired the right is, it seems, no more material to be stated, than it would be if the plaintiff in an action of trover should aver that he was lawfully possessed of goods bought at a fair. Secus in trespass or replevin, where, if a plaintiff allege a particular estate, he would be bound to prove it on issue taken. Sir Francis Leake's Case, Dyer, 365. Gorman v. Sweeting, 2 Will. Saund. 206, note (22); 2 Cro. 630; Com. Dig. Action on the Case, B. 1; 1 Will. Saund. 346. Ricketts v. Salway, 2 B. & A. 360.

(q) Wilson v. Page, 4 Esp. C. 71. But where the plaintiff declared upon a right of common, in respect of a messuage and 150 acres of land, with the appurtenances, it was held that the declaration was divisible, and that proof of common right in respect of the land was sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to a verdict pro tanto. Ricketts v. Salway, 2 B. & A. 360. The allegation of a right of common for all the plaintiff's cattle, levant and couchant, &c. may be supported, although the common be not sufficient to feed all the cattle for a length of time. Willis v. Ward,[1] 2 Chitty, 297. So it was held that an allegation that the plaintiff was entitled to common of pasture for all cattle, levant and couchant, upon the land, was supported by evidence that the plaintiff was a part owner with defendant and others of a common field, upon which, after the corn was reaped, and the field cleared, the custom was for the different occupiers to turn out cattle in proportion to the extent of their respective lands within the common field; and although such cattle were not maintained upon such land in winter, and although the custom was to turn out according to the extent, and not the produce, of the land in respect of which the right was claimed; and that the right was well laid to extend over the whole common, without excepting his own land. Cheesman v. Hardham, 1 B. & A. 706.

(r) See Stocks v. Booth, 1 T. R. 428.

(s) Vid. Vol. I. and infra, tit. Prescription.

(t) See tit. Ejectment.

(u) See the cases, 2 Will. Saund. 175, a.; and also tit. Prescription.—Presumption.

(x) See tit. Presumption.—Length of Time.

(y) Ibid.; and see Bealey v. Shaw, 6 East, 208.

(z) Kenrick v. Taylor, 1 Wils. 326. [Sayer, 31, s. c.] The pew was there claimed by prescription, as appurtenant to a messuage. Burton v. Bateman, 1. Sid. 203. See tit. Pew.—Prescription.

(a) Ibid.; and 3 Lev. 73; 2 Lev. 241; Salk. 551; 1 Buls. 150; Godb. 200.

(A) (Where an action for a disturbance in the enjoyment of a fishery, was brought by several persons, some of whom had an absolute title to the fishery, and the others were in possession under a parol agreement, it was held, the plaintiffs had properly joined in the suit. Russel v. Stocking, 8 Conn. R. 236.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xi. 289.

the presumption of right arising from such continued enjoyment, by evidence tending to explain it, and to show that the enjoyment was founded not on right, but on leave and permission (b); or to destroy the prescription by proving the origin of the enjoyment, or showing that it has been interrupted, or that the prescription has been extinguished (c).

Proof of the disturbance.

2dly. The disturbance may be alleged generally, and the particular manner of the disturbance be given in evidence (d).

Of damage.

3dly. Proof of damage done, to the smallest amount, will be sufficient to support the action, although the plaintiff cannot prove damages to any specific and determinate amount; for if that were required where the plaintiff's right has been infringed, the wrong-doer might gain a title by length of possession (e); as, if a stranger turn cattle on the land where the plaintiff has a right of common (f): for it is a damage to the plaintiff that he cannot enjoy the right of common in so ample and beneficial a manner as, but for the defendant's act, he might have done (g). So, if the defendant take from the common any manure dropped there by the cattle (h).

DRUNKENNESS.

A DEFENDANT may avoid even a deed on non est factum pleaded, by evidence that he was made to sign it when he was so drunk that he did not know what he did (i), in which case it is entirely void (A). So à fortiori may he avoid an alleged agreement, not under seal, by such evidence (k). It has indeed been said that a Court of Equity will not relieve in such a case, unless the inability were occasioned by the management and contrivance of him who gained the deed (l). But at common law no such distinction seems to obtain: the law regards the contracts of one who for the time is bereaved of reason, though by his own folly, as void, and does not punish his moral delinquency by subjecting him to obligations to which assent is essential, when he was incapable of assent (m).

(b) See tit. PRESUMPTION.—LENGTH OF TIME. Bradbury v. Grinsell, 2 Will. Saund. 175, d. Daniel v. North, 11 East, 372. Campbell v. Wilson, 2 East, 294.

(c) See tit. PRESCRIPTION.

(d) 2 Cro. 606; Bridg. 4; Com. Dig. Action on Case, B. 1.

(e) See the observations of Buller and Grose, J^s^, Hobson v. Todd, 4 T. R. 71. [Angell on Watercourses, 50, 53.]

(f) Hobson v. Todd, 4 T. R. 71. (g) Ibid.

(h) Pindar v. Wadsworth, 2 East, 154. In case for a surcharge it is not necessary for the plaintiff to show that he put on any cattle of his own at the time of the surcharge, but only that he could not enjoy so beneficially. Wells v. Watling, 2 W. Bl. 1233.

(i) B. N. P. 172, cites Cole v. Robins, Hil. 2, Ann. per Holt, C. J., and per Ld. Ellenborough in Pitt v. Smith, 3 Camp. 33. Intoxication is good evidence upon a plea of non est factum to a deed, of non concessit to a grant, and of non assumpsit to a promise. Per Lord Hardwicke, in Cory v. Cory, 1 Ves. 19, drunkenness is not sufficient to set aside an agreement to settle family disputes, unless an unfair advantage be taken.

(k) Pitt v. Smith, 3 Camp. 33. Fenton v. Holloway,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 126.

(l) Johnson v. Medlicott, 3 P. W. 130; 1 V. & B. 30.

(m) See the observations of Bayley, J., in Baxter v. Earl of Portsmouth,[2] 7 D. & R. 614. It would be singular that the law should merely inflict a fine of 5*s.* on a man for getting drunk, but afterwards mulct him to the amount of 1,000*l.* by holding him to performance of a contract made when he was drunk. Sir E. Coke, 2 Inst. 747, a., says, that one who by his own vicious act for a time deprived himself of reason and memory, though a kind of non compos, shall gain no benefit or privilege thereby. And this is, no doubt, true, that a voluntary drunkard can never avail himself of his incapacity as an excuse, either civilly or criminally, for not doing that which he otherwise ought to have done; and it is also true, that a drunkard, voluntarius dæmon, as he is styled by Sir E. Coke, is liable both civilly and criminally in respect of every offence which he commits, whether it be against an individual or against the public. But if a party be made drunk by the stratagem of another, or by fraud, he is not responsible. Per Park, J., in R. v. Pearson,

(A) (Wigglesworth v. Steers, 1 Hen. & Munf. 70; but a contract under seal for a valuable consideration, will not be avoided on the ground of intoxication at the time it was executed, if his assent has been afterwards given when not disabled by intoxication or otherwise. Arnold v. Hickman, 6 Munf. 15.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 234. [2]Id. xvi. 304.

*It is an established rule of criminal law, that voluntary drunkenness is no excuse for any injury or offence to the public or to individuals, either criminally or civilly; but that the circumstance, where a crime has been committed, is regarded rather as an aggravation than an extenuation of guilt (n).

DURESS.

According to Bracton, to constitute a duress in law it must not be suspicio cujuslibet vani et meticulosi hominis sed tallis quæ possit cadere in virum constantem talis enim debet esse metus qui in se contineat vitæ periculum aut corporis cruciatum (o) (A). Lord Coke enumerates four instances in which a man may avoid his own act by reason of menaces: 1st, for fear of loss of life; 2dly, of member; 3dly, of mayhem; 4thly, of imprisonment (p) (1).

In the case of duress by imprisonment proof should be given that it is an unlawful imprisonment, for where the imprisonment is in due course of law the maxim applies, executio juris non habet injuriam (q) (2); and therefore, where a defendant after judgment against him without any legal cause of action, procured the plaintiff to be arrested on legal process, and threatened that he should lie and perish in gaol unless he executed a release, upon which the plaintiff sealed one, and was discharged, it was held that the release could not be avoided by duress (r). But even in the case of a lawful imprisonment, the use of illegal force, constraint, or the practising unnecessary privations or hardships, will constitute duress (s). But where one caused another to be arrested on a charge of felony, under a warrant from a justice of the peace, and discharged him upon his sealing a bond for 10*l*., it was held that the deed might be avoided, the proceedings being a mere pretext to cover the deceit (t) (B). Where the duress is by threats

2 Lewin's C. 145. See also the observations of the same learned Judge in Marshall's Case, 1 Lewin's C. 76; and of Holroyd, J., in Burrough's Case, Ib. 75; and Rennie's Case, Ib. 76. In Pearson's Case, Park, J., is also stated to have said, that drunkenness may be taken into consideration to explain the probability of a party's intention, in the case of violence committed on sudden provocation. See Appendix.

(n) Supra, note (m). (o) Brac. l. 2, c. 5.

(p) 2 Inst. 483; 2 Roll. Ab. 124; Bac. Ab. Ev. Duress. A threat to beat, or burn the house of the party, or to spoil his goods, it is said, is no duress (3), because in these cases, should the threat be performed, a man may have satisfaction by recovering equivalent damages (2 Inst. 481; 1 Comm. 131); but no suitable atonement can be made for loss of life or limb. Ibid. Qu. and vide supra, tit. Deed.

(q) Bac. Ab. Ev. Duress, 402. 2 Lev. 239.

(r) Cor. Bridgman, C. J., Guildhall Lev. 69. [See 6 Mass. Rep. 512; 1 Hen. & Mun. 350. Nelson v. Luddwith et al.]

(s) The effect of duress by imprisonment, in the avoidance of a deed or feoffment, is very analogous to the case of infancy. The act of the prisoner or of the infant is not void but voidable only, by entry or action, and can be avoided by privies in blood only; but a feoffment in either case made by letter of attorney is void. A bond, executed by an impressed man for securing his return in case of non-payment of the money, is illegal and void. Pole v. Harrobin, 9 East, 416.

(t) Allen, 92. So ruled by Rolle, upon the trial of an issue on the duress. See Bac. Ab. Ev. tit. Duress, 405. See tit. Deed.

(A) (A party who violates a penal statute must make out the vis major under which he shelters himself, so as to leave no reasonable doubt of his innocence. Circumstances will sometimes outweigh positive testimony. Brig Struggle v. The U. S., 9 Cranch, 71; 3 Conn. Rep. 276. See also, The Argo, Hughes claimant, 1 Gallis, C. C. R. 150.)

(1) [One obligor cannot plead that the bond was obtained of his co-obligor by duress—but this rule does not apply to a bond taken by a sheriff from a defendant whom he has no right to detain in custody; and the co-obligor, or surety, may avail himself of the offence of duress, in a several action against him. Thompson v. Lockwood, 15 Johns. 256.]

(2) [If a defendant, under arrest, agree to submit the matter in controversy to arbitration, the agreement is not void on the ground of duress—nor would a final settlement be void. Shepherd v. Watrous, 3 Caines' Rep. 168. See also Watkins v. Baird, 6 Mass. Rep 511.]

(3) [In South Carolina, duress of goods, under some circumstances, will avoid a contract. Sasportas v. Jennings, 1 Bay, 47. Collins v. Westbury, 2 Bay, 211.]

(B) (Duress arising from threats to destroy vessel and cargo cannot be admitted to avoid a contract of they must be of such a nature as are sufficient to overcome a man of mode-

*398 rate *firmness (u). Duress to avoid a deed must be pleaded specially (x) (A). And the question of duress per minas in case of treason (y), and, as it seems, in other cases, is a question of fact for the jury, subject, however, to the rules of law, where the law defines.

Upon an indictment for extorting money by duress, it must be shown that such means were used as common prudence and firmness cannot guard against (z).

EJECTMENT.

I. Proof of the title to enter.
II. Of the Plaintiff's title in general.
III. Of the title of an administrator or executor.
- Assignee of bankrupt (a).
- Conusee of statute-merchant, &c.
- Devisee, or tenant by.
- Elegit.
- Guardian.
- Heir at Law.
- Husband, &c.
- Landlord.
- Mortgage.
- Rector.
- Tenant in common, joint tenant, &c.

IV. Variance.
V. Defendant's possession.
VI. Competency of Witnesses.
VII. Trespass for mesne profits.
VIII. Effect of judgment in evidence.

(u) Br. l. 2, c. 5. R. v. Southerton, 6 East, 140; Com. Dig. Pleader, 2 W. 19.

(x) And the special manner must be set forth. 5 Co. 119; 2 Inst. 483. In assumpsit or debt on simple contract, duress is evidence under the general issue. Ib.

(y) Forster, 14; 3 B. & P. 73. The threat in such case must affect the life, and not merely the property.

(z) In R. v. Southerton, 6 East, 144, where the question was, whether it be an offence at common law to threaten another that he will procure a public officer to prosecute him unless he give him money, Lawrence, J., observed, it has been decided in many cases that even where money has been fraudulently obtained, yet it is not indictable; as in R. v. Jones, 1 Salk. 379, where the defendant obtained money of another by pretending that he was sent by a third person for it. One of the Judges in that case said, that one man cannot be indicted because another has been a fool. The case of The Queen v. Hannon, 6 Mod. 311, is to the same purpose. It is otherwise where money is obtained by such means as common prudence and firmness cannot guard against. The same distinction was adopted by the old law with respect to such as were deterred by threats from making entries into lands which they claimed. The threats must be such as will deter virum fortem et constantem from entering on the land, in order to render it sufficient for him to go as near to it as he possibly may, for the purpose of asserting his claim. But there must be a fear of personal violence. Co. Litt. 253, b. And it is there said "that it seemeth that fear of imprisonment is also sufficient, for such a fear sufficeth to avoid a bond or a deed." And that shows the ground of the decision in The Queen v. Woodward and others. That was not a case of mere threat, but the man was in actual duress at the time, and was threatened to be taken to Newgate; and one cannot say that that might not be such a threat as a man of ordinary firmness could not resist. But here, when the defendant threatened to prosecute the party for the penalties, a man of ordinary firmness might well have said to him, that he was not guilty of the offence charged, and therefore he might prosecute him at his peril if he pleased.

(a) These proofs have already been considered; see tit. Bankrupt.

---

ransom, where the captain was justified by probable cause. Maiponaire v. Keating, 2 Gallis, C. C. R. 337. Where a party discharged under the insolvent law of one state, is arrested for a debt due before his discharge, in another state, a plea of duress to an instrument given for the debt, while in confinement, will not be received. Secus, if the arrest had been in the state where he was discharged. Satopee v. Pecholier, 2 Wash. C. C. R. 180. See Watkins v. Baird, 6 Mass. Rep. 506, &c.)

(A) (A voluntary and free acknowledgement of a deed after its execution before a magistrate, especially some considerable time after, would be strong evidence against a plea of duress. The Inhabitants of Worcester v. Eaton, 13 Mass. R. 371.)

THE declaration in ejectment comprises four allegations,—the title of the *lessor of the plaintiff; a lease by him to the plaintiff; an entry by the latter; *399 and an ouster by the defendant. By the consent-rule the proof is usually confined to the title of the lessor.

Title to enter.

The lease, entry, and ouster being admitted, no proof of the plaintiff's entry under the supposed lease is requisite, although proof of an actual entry by the lessor is sometimes rendered necessary, as constituting his title to possession. So, except in some particular instances, the ouster by the defendant is also admitted (b). The plaintiff's proof usually consists, therefore, in proving the lessor's title to enter and possess (for the nature of the action is merely possessory) the identical lands in dispute (c).

Proof of a legal title to the lands is not always sufficient, for notwithstanding a legal title the party may not have a right to enter and possess. But in general, except where the right of entry is taken away by the statute of limitations (d), or of fines (e), and in some instances, where the right of entry is devested at common law (f), it is sufficient to prove, simply, the legal title to the lands.

Proof of, within twenty years.

The statute 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 2, enacts, that no person shall make an entry (g), or distress, or bring an action to recover any land or rent but within twenty years next after the time at which the right to make such entry shall have first accrued to some person through whom he claims, or if such right shall not have accrued to any person through whom he claims, then within twenty years next after the time at which such title shall have first accrued (h) according to the statute. Where, therefore, the title has actually accrued within twenty years next before the commencement of the action, it is usually sufficient to prove the legal title (A). Where the (b) Infra, 429.

(c) As to the latter point, see Possession by the Defendant, infra, 431. The plaintiff is not bound to produce the consent-rule as part of his case. Doe v. Raby,[1] 2 B. & Ad. 948. Contra Doe v. Lamble, M. & M. 237. It may be necessary to produce it where the plaintiff applies his evidence to premises which the defendant asserts he does not defend, for it may then be necessary to show what he does defend for. Per Ld. Tenterden,[1] 2 B. & Ad. 949.

(d) 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, and now by the st. 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 27.

(e) 4 Hen. 7, c. 24; and infra, tit. FINE. (f) Infra, 403.

(g) It seems that this statute like the stat. 21 J. 1, c. 16, takes away the right of entry after twenty years have accrued subsequently to possession under a legal title, or such receipt of rent, or acknowledgment, as is provided for by the statute. Where a jointress for life married again and joined her second husband in levying a fine, and he survived her, and held the land for twenty years, it was held that the reversioner was bound although the fine was void, Doe v. Gregory,[2] 2 Ad. & Ell. 14.

(h) This statute has superseded the former limitation of twenty years prescribed by the stat. 21 J. 1, and made numerous provisions for defining in particular cases the time when the right shall be deemed to have accrued. As this statute extends to distresses and other actions besides ejectment, its provisions are considered under the title LIMITATIONS and APPENDIX.

(A) (Where an adverse possession has continued for twenty years, it constitutes a complete bar in equity; an ejectment would be barred if the plaintiff possessed a legal title. Elmendorf v. Taylor, 10 Wheat. 157; 6 Cond. Rep. 47. Gordon v. Hobart, 2 Sumner C. C. R. 401. Ewing v. Bunet, 8 Peters, 41. But a man cannot object his own possession for twenty years against his deed given within that time. Duane v. Bibb, 3 Call. 362. In Pennsylvania, ejectment is almost the only action for trying title to land. Per M'Kean, C. J. Morris v. Vanderen, 1 Dall. 67. In that state it supplies to a great extent the place of a bill in equity. Thus a cestui que trust may maintain ejectment in his own name. Kennedy v. Fury, 1 Dall. 72. See also Crunkelton v. Evert, 3 Yeates, 510; Simpson v. Ammons et al. 1 Binn. 177; Moody et al. v. Vandyke et al. 4 Binn. 41. Lessee of Savage v. Burke, 12 Peters, 11. Whenever Chancery would execute a trust or decree a conveyance, the courts of that state, by the instrumentality of a jury would direct a recovery in ejectment. Peebles v. Reading, 8 Serg. & Rawle, 491. But in the Courts of the United States, whatever may be the practice of the State Courts, an equitable estate is not sufficient to support an ejectment. Carson v. Boudinot, 2 Wash. C. C. R. 35. Robinson v. Campbell, 3 Wheat. 212. The statute of limitations of Pennsylvania is substantially the same as that of 21st James I, ch. 16. The limitation begins to run from the time of actual adverse possession and not before. Lessee of Potts v. Gilbert, 3 Wash. C. C. R. 475. In Pennsylvania the same length of possession in the plaintiff in ejectment, which in the defendant would amount to a bar, is in title has accrued at a greater distance of time than twenty years, the plaintiff must prove that he laboured under one of the disabilities (i) within the statute.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxii. 219. [2]Id. xxix. 14.

Under the stat. 21 J. 1, c. 16, the plaintiff might show that he had virtually been in possession, although another had been in the actual possession; as by proof that the party in actual possession was his tenant under a lease, although no rent had been paid (k), and even although a forfeiture had been committed by the tenant (l), by non-payment of rent, for he was not bound to enter till the determination of the lease.

*400 *The mere receipt of rent by a stranger, without colour of title, was not evidence of adverse possession against one who had the legal title, for it was no disseisin but at the option of the latter, even although the stranger made a lease to the tenant by indenture, reserving rent, unless he made an actual entry (m).

Where the lord of a manor brought ejectment against a cottager, twenty years possession was a good title where the cottage had been built in defiance of, or without the consent of the lord, but this was liable to be rebutted by proof that it was built by the permission of the lord, or by any subsequent acknowledgement of his title; and in such cases it has been said, that it was rather to be presumed, in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, that the lord of the manor had assented (n). The question, whether the possession was adverse or permissive in such cases, was for the consideration of the jury.

The 2d and 3d clauses of the stat. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, have superseded the doctrine of non-adverse possession, except in cases within the 15th

(i) See the stat. 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 27, ss. 15 to 18 inclusive. (k) Runn. 457.

(l) 7 East, 299; where the devisee entered within twenty years after the expiration of the lease, but not until after twenty years from the death of the testatrix. See also Jayne v. Price,[1] 5 Taunt. 326; 1 Marsh, 68. It lies on the lessor of the plaintiff to show possession, &c. under a legal title within the last twenty years. See B. N. P. 102. Where a pauper had, thirty years ago, inclosed a piece of waste in an adjoining parish, and cultivated it until 1827, when he sold and conveyed it to a purchaser; he had shortly before erected a hut thereon, and resided in it a year and a half; the parishioners and commoners had, upon several perambulations, prostrated part of the fence, and rode through the enclosure, but the pauper was never present, and he had never paid any acknowledgement to the lord or other person during his occupation; held that it was to be deemed an adverse possession for twenty years, and that a settlement by estate was gained in the parish. R. v. Woburn,[2] 10 B. & C. 846.

(m) B. N. P. 104; 1 Roll. Ab. 659. And see Smith v. Parkhurst, Andr. 315. But it is said (B. N. P. 404), that if the tenant declare that he is in possession for the stranger, it may be evidence to go to a jury, especially if he has any colour of title. Damer v. Fortescue, B. N. P. 104.

(n) B. N. P. 104. Infra, tit. Manor. Where the defendant had enclosed a small piece of waste adjoining to the highway, and occupied it for thirty years, but afterwards the owner of the adjoining land demanded sixpence for rent, which the defendant paid on three several occasions; the evidence was held to be conclusive to show that the original occupation was permissive. Doe v. Wilkinson,[3] 3 B. & C. 413; and see Doe v. Clarke,[4] 8 B. & C. 717.

---

the plaintiff a sufficient title for him to recover on. To avoid the force of it, the other side must prove that he brought suit, or made an actual entry on the land within the time the law prescribes. Lessee of Holtzapple and wife v. Phillebaum, 4 Wash. C C. R. 356. But proof that the party claiming the land "attended every year on the land, prosecuting and claiming his title to it; that the witness was with him every year on the land, but could not remember what he said when he was there," is not sufficient evidence of a legal entry to avoid the statute of limitations. Ibid. Evidence of the mere silence of the plaintiff and the improvement of his property by others, will not deprive him of his title; yet aid and encouragement to keep up and repair the property, and the expenditure of money in consequence thereof, would in equity give a title to the defendant. Folk v. Bridelman, 6 Watts, 339. In South Carolina it is settled law, that an entry on land by one having the right, has the same effect in arresting the progress of limitation as a suit, but it cannot be sustained as a legal proposition, that an entry by one having no right, is of any avail. Henderson v. Griffin, 5 Peters, 151. Under the statute of limitations of Tennessee, the running of the statute can only be stopped by actual suit, if the party claiming under it has peaceable possession for seven years. But such a possession cannot exist, if the party having the better right takes actual possession in pursuance of his right. McClung v. Ross, 5 Wheat. 116.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. i. 121. [2] Id. xxi. 180. [3] Id. x. 135. [4] Id. xv. 331.

clause; the question being, whether twenty years have elapsed since the right accrued, without regard to the nature of the possession (o).

The plaintiff might also show that he was joint tenant, or tenant in common with the party in actual possession; for the possession of one joint tenant or tenant in common is the possession of the other, unless there has been an actual ouster (p).

Possession within 20 years.

On proof that the sister of the plaintiff occupied the estate for twenty years, and that the defendant entered as heir to her, her possession would before the late statute have been construed to be by courtesy and by license, *to preserve the possession of the brother; but the presumption would have ceased if it had appeared that the brother had been in the actual possession, and that he had been ousted by the sister (q). *401

But now by the stat. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 13, it is enacted, that where a younger brother or other relation of the person entitled as heir to the possession, or receipt of the profits of any land, or to the receipt of any rent, shall enter into the possession or receipt thereof, such possession or receipt shall not be deemed to be the possession or receipt of, or by the person entitled as heir.

The mere perception of profits by a joint tenant or tenant in common would not constitute an ouster, but when long continued was evidence of an actual ouster (r). Neither will a refusal to pay rent, coupled with a denial of the title, amount to an actual ouster (s).

It has been held that declarations made by a person in the actual possession of premises, that she was entitled to them for life, and that after her death they would go to the heir of her deceased husband, were, after her death, admissible in evidence to rebut the inference of an adverse possession (t).

In order to prove possession, in an ejectment for mines, it is not sufficient to show that the lessor of the plaintiff was the lord of the manor; an actual possession must be proved (u). Nor will a verdict for the plaintiff in trover for lead dug out of a mine prove possession of the mine, for the action may have been brought by the heir-at-law, who had property in the mine, but had no possession (x).

Where the husband was tenant by the curtesy of a copyhold estate which descended to the wife, who had never been admitted, and was also admitted after the death of the wife to hold, pursuant to a settlement of the (o) Nepean v. Doe d. Knight, on error, 2 M. & W. 894. A. mortgages in fee to B. subject to cesser upon payment on a day named (more than twenty years before the stat.); within twenty years A. admitted that the money was unpaid. B.'s heir brought ejectment (within five years after the passing of the Act). The jury found that the money was unpaid; and it was held that the possession not being adverse at the passing of the Act, the action was not barred under sect. 2, although the lessor was not shown to have been in possession or received rents or interest. Doe v. Williams,[1] 5 Ad. & Ell. 291; and see Doe v. Thompson,[2] ib. 532. A feme sole seised in fee having married, she and her husband quitted possession, and both died at times neither of which was shown to be within forty years after ceasing to occupy. The wife's heir brought ejectment within twenty years after the husband's death and within five years after the passing of the statute. It was held that the heir was barred under the 17th section, although it did not appear how the defendant had come into possession, or that any fine had been levied by the wife. Doe v. Bramston,[3] 3 Ad. & Ell. 63.

(p) Salk. 421; Peake's L. E. 333. [Giddings v. Canfield, 4 Com. Rep. 482.] As to what shall amount to an actual ouster, see Ld. Raym. 312, 829; 5 Burr. 2604. But now see the late stat. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 12. Infra, tit. LIMITATIONS.

(q) Page v. Selfby, per Weston, J. Sussex, 1680, B. N. P. 102. In that case it would amount to a disseisin. Vide infra.

(r) Doe v. Prosser, Cowp. 217; 2 Bl. 690.

(s) Doe v. Prosser, Cowp. 217. But now see the late stat. s. 12.

(t) Doe d. Humon v. Pettit, 3 B. & A. Vide Vol. I. and Ind. tit. HEARSAY.

(u) Lord Cullen v. Rich, 14 Geo. 2; Runn. 292; B. N. P. 102; Rich v. Johnson, Str. 1142.

(x) Ibid.; Runn. 292.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxxi. 340. [2]Id. xxxi. 390. [3]Id. xxx. 30.

estate of the wife, by which it was limited to the survivor in fee, it was held that his possession was not adverse to the heir-at-law of the wife (y), and that the heir might maintain ejectment within twenty years of the husband's death.

Where A., a copyholder for life, with remainder to B., surrendered his own estate for life, and thereby let in B. and took a new copy for the successive lives of himself, B. and C.; and on A.'s death after twenty years had run against B., B. got into possession, it was held that he might defend upon his legal title coupled with possession, against C. who had no title, whatever the effect of A.'s possession was (z).

Actual entry.

2dly. Where the ejectment is brought within the twenty years, the confession by the defendant, of a lease, entry, and ouster, includes all the essential formalities, and it is unnecessary to prove an actual entry (a).(A). Before the late statute, where the ejectment was brought by one under no disability, after the expiration of twenty years he might have availed himself of an actual entry within the twenty years (b), by himself, or by some person by his command, or with his assent (c), on part of the lands, in the name of the whole (d).

*402 *A ratification by the claimant, of the entry of another on his behalf before the time of the demise, was sufficient (e). It seems that the subsequent bringing of the action was sufficient evidence of assent (f), for omnis ratihabitio retro trahitur & mandato priori æquiparatur. The lessor of the plaintiff was also bound to prove, under the stat. 4 Anne, c. 16, that he commenced his action within one year next after such entry (g).

It is now expressly provided by the stat. 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 27, 10, that no person shall be deemed to have been in possession of any land within the meaning of the Act, merely by reason of having made an entry thereon.

Where the declaration in ejectment was delivered within the twenty years, and the plaintiff was nonsuited, and afterwards brought another action after the expiration of the twenty years, it was held that the confession of the lease in the former action was not evidence of an entry to bar the statute (h).

So, in some instances, where a fine has been levied with proclamations (i), unless the plaintiff can show that he is within one of the exceptions in the statute (k), he must prove an actual entry by himself, or an authorized agent, for the purpose of avoiding the fine (l). The claim must be made (y) Doe v. Brightwen, 10 East, 583.

(z) Doe v. Reade, 8 East, 353.
(a) 1 Doug. 484. And now see the provisions of the late stat. as to ENTRIES.
(b) 1 Will. Saund. 319, c.; 7 T. R. 433; 9 East, 17.
(c) 9 Rep. 106; Popham, 108.
(d) 1 Will. Saund. 319, c.; 6 Modd. 44. If the entry be made for the purpose of avoiding a fine, a declaration should be made to that effect on entry.
(e) See Podger's Case, 9 Co. 106.
(f) Str. 1128; B. N. P. 103; infra, note (s).
(g) As to the mode of proof, see TIME. Before the stat. 4 Ann. c. 16, the stat. of 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, was avoidable by continued entries made successively within the space of twenty years from each other. Co. Litt. 15; 3 Bl. Comm. 175; Salk. 285. Ford v. Gray, 6 Mod. 44.
(h) Runn. 62.
(i) For the cases in which an actual entry is necessary to avoid a fine levied with proclamations, see B. N. P. 99; Runn. 45; 2 Doug. 484; 2 Str. 1086; 3 Burr. 1895; 9 Rep. 106; Poph. 108; 2 Str. 1128; 1 Will. Saund. 319; 4 Hen. 7, c. 24. It seems that an actual entry is never necessary, except for the purpose of avoiding a fine. Doe d. Davenport v. Duncannon, Lofft, 360. Goodright d. Hone v. Cator, Doug. 477. Where a younger son, living with his father previous to his death, continued in possession, and afterwards levied a fine with proclamations; held, that the heir might maintain ejectment without actual entry, the original possession being permissive, and the continuance after the death of the father not founded on a new wrongful entry when the freehold was vacant, so as to constitute a disseisin or sufficient interest to give operation to the fine. Doe v. Davis, 12 Pri. 756. And see Doe v. Perkins, 2 M. & S. 271. Fines and recoveries are now abolished by the stat. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74.
(k) 4 Hen. 7, c. 24.
(l) Vide supra, note (i).

(A) (Sigler v. Van Riper, 10 Wend. 414. Fry et al. v. Smith, 2 Dana, 38.)

on the land. Where the proof was, that the claim was made at the gate of the house, it was held to be insufficient, but where it was shown that there was a court before the house which belonged to it, and that though the claim was made at the gate it was upon the land, it was held to be sufficient (m).

An actual entry need not be proved where the fine has been levied at common law without proclamations (n); nor where it has been levied by a bare tenant for years (o); nor where the son of a tenant by sufferance holds *over (p); nor where the defendants had no possession of the estate *403 when the fine was levied (q). And the receipt of rents previous to the time of levying a fine, is not evidence of possession without proof of title (r).

An entry by a stranger without authority is sufficient to take advantage of a condition, provided it be assented to before the day of the demise (s).

Proof of disability.

3dly. If there has been no possession or actual entry within twenty years next after the time when the title accrued, the lessor of the plaintiff must show in excuse of the want of entry, that he laboured under one of the disabilities specified in the stat. 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, i. e. infancy, coverture, insanity, imprisonment, the being beyond seas (t). And also, that he entered or made distress within ten years next after the time when the party shall have ceased to be under such disability (u). But it is a rule, that when the statute has once begun to run no subsequent disability will affect its progress (x).

Proof that the right is devested.

A right of possession and a right of entry are convertable terms (y). Hence, if the right of entry be taken away the plaintiff cannot recover in ejectment. If A. disseise B. by wrongfully ousting him from his possession of land, B. may regain the possession by mere entry, and therefore may maintain ejectment. But where the disseisor died seised, the common law presumed a rightful seisin in favour of the heir, and the disseisee's right of entry was taken away or tolled. The common law annexed exceptions to this rule, where the claimant laboured under a legal disability during the life of the ancestor, as of infancy, coverture, insanity, imprisonment, or being beyond the realm. And by the stat. 32 Hen. 8, c. 33, if the disseisor die within five years after the disseisin done, such disseisin

(m) Skinn. 412; B. N. P. 103. (n) 2 Wils. 45.

(o) Rowe v. Power, 2 N. R. 1. Podger's Case, 9 Co. 106. It is a general rule, that no fine or warranty shall bar any estate in possession, reversion or remainder, which is not divided or put to a right before or at the time of the fine, or by the operation of the fine itself; for a party not put out of possession has all that claim or possession could give. Entry is not necessary, though one tenant in common of a reversion levy a fine of the whole. Roe d. Truscott v. Elliot, 1 B. & A. 85. And though a tenant in common levy a fine of the whole estate in possession, and take the rents and profits for nearly five years, yet it is no evidence on which the jury ought to be directed to find an actual ouster. Peaceable d. Hornblower v. Read, 1 East, 568. So if ejectment be brought after a fine levied by the defendant, but before all the proclamations have been made under the stat. 4 H. 7, c. 24. Doe d. Duckett v. Watts, 9 East, 17. So where the lessee of tenant for life continued in possession after the death of the tenant for life, without paying rent, and after his death his son levied a fine with proclamations, it was held that the son of the remainder-man might maintain ejectment without actual entry. Doe d. Burrell v. Perkins, 3 M. & S. 271; and see Doe d. Davis v. Davis,[1] 1 C. & P. 130. In order to constitute a disseisin the original entry must have been wrongful. See Doe v. Perkins, 3 M. & S. 271.

(p) Doe v. Perkins, 3 M. & S. 279. (q) Andr. 326.

(r) Smith v. Parkhurst, Andr. 326.

(s) Fitchett v. Adams, Str. 1128. Custis, v. Wolverton, Cro. J. 56. As to whether an actual entry in such case be necessary, vide Ib. A verbal assent is sufficient; Ib. And see Watkins on Descent, s. 73.

(t) The same exceptions are contained in the Statute of Fines, 4 Hen. 7, c. 24.

(u) 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 16. By s. 17, no action shall be brought after the expiration of forty years from the time at which the right first accrued.

(x) Doe d. Duroure v. Jones, 4 T. R. 300. [See Faw v. Robendean's Ex'r, 3 Cranch, 174.]

(y) 1 Burr. 89. A right of entry cannot be reserved to a stranger to the estate. Doe v. Lawrence, 4 Taunt. 23.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xi. 343.

shall not take away the right of the disseisee, although he has made no claim (z).

Evidence of a disseisin.

What is sufficient evidence of a disseisin is a question subject to some doubt. It seems originally to have meant an actual ouster or dispossession of the owner (in which all the definitions concur) by force, or in spite of the owner (a), for every dispossession was not a disseisin (b). The ambiguity seems to have arisen from an extension of the term disseisin, for the sake of the easy remedy by assize, and its meaning was restricted or extended alternately for the benefit of the owner. To entitle him to the remedy by assize against a mere wrongful possessor, almost every obstruction of the owner's right was construed into a disseisin. And again, in favour of the true owner, where he had been actually dispossessed, and to protect him against a claim founded on a wrong, the meaning of the term *404 was restricted *to an ouster in spite of the owner, or not congeable (c). This seems to have been the foundation of the doctrine of disseisin at election (d).

To the action of ejectment a mere dispossession is usually immaterial, since the title of the lessor is the only question, an ouster being admitted; therefore, where the defendant contends that the entry has been barred by an actual disseisin, and descent cast, feoffment, &c., it seems to be necessary that he should prove a disseisin in the ancient and strict sense of a personal trespass (e), an actual expulsion (f) and putting out of the owner, and usurpation of the freehold tenure, and not merely such a disseisin as the owner might have considered to be such at his election, for the sake of the remedy by assize.

A lease for years made by a tenant at will (g); an entry into lands by one who pays rent, and claims to hold as a tenant at will (h); the receipt by the tenant in tail of the rents of lands leased by his father to his younger brother for lives under a power (i), do not operate as disseisins, except at the election of the owner for the sake of his remedy; and if he has made no such election, do not take away any right of entry.

The doctrine that a descent cast tolled the entry, did not apply to the case of a devisee, nor to any case where the party had no other remedy than by entry, for if so he would be left without remedy (k); nor to customary or copyhold estates, where the freehold was in the lord (l); and therefore the devisee of a copyhold was not barred by a descent cast on the defendant by his father, who had been admitted as heir-at-law of the testatrix (m).

(z) The foeffee of the disseisor formerly acquired the right of possession by one year's non-claim; but the disseisee's right was capable of being kept alive by continued claims. Co. Litt. 256, a.

(a) See Litt. sec. 279; Co. Litt. 153, b. (b) Co. Litt. 153, b.

(c) Litt. sec. 279.

(d) See Blunden v. Baugh, Cro. Car. 303; Pal. 201; Cro. Jac. 659. Kynaston v. Parry, Salop Ass. 25 March, 1742; and Ld. Mansfield's observations in Atkyns v. Horde, 1 Burr. 89.

(e) Co. Litt. 153, b.

(f) Per Ld. Holt, Salk. 246; and per Ld. Ellenborough, 7 East, 312. And see William v. Thomas, 12 East, 141.

(g) Pousley v. Blackman, Palm. 201. And therefore a subsequent devise by the original lessor was held to be good, because he had not elected to admit himself to be disseised.

(h) Cited Cro. Car. 303. And therefore the entry of the heir of the person so entering does not bar the entry of the heir of the owner.

(i) Kynaston v. Parry, Salop Ass. March 1742. And therefore a recovery suffered by the tenant in tail did not operate as a bar.

(k) Co. Litt. 240, b. and Doe v. Danvers, 7 East, 321. But qu. whether the devisee has not a remedy by writ ex gravi querela. And see the note by Hargrave & Butler. And see Roe v. Read, 8 T. R. 118. Doe v. Wroot, 5 East, 138. The assignee of a copyhold by a common-law conveyance cannot bring ejectment even against the widow of the assignor. Doe v. Webber,[1] 3 Bing. N. C. 922.

(l) Doe v. Danvers, 7 East, 299.

(m) Ibid.; and now see the stat. 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 27; infra, tit. LIMITATIONS.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxxii. 383.

A vendee of land let into possession on an agreement to purchase has no adverse possession (n) against the vendor, unless he refuse to give up possession or pay interest (o). Possession claimed under a lease for lives which has expired, and a new one having been granted, is not adverse (p).

II. It is an inflexible rule, that the lessor of the plaintiff must entitle himself to recover by the strength of his own legal title, and that he can derive no support, either from any equitable title or from weakness of his adversary (A). Thus it has been held, that an unsatisfied term for securing an annuity might be set up against the heir-at-law, although he merely claimed the premises as subject to the charge (q). Title in general.

*The title must be proved to exist at the the time of the demise; and if it be proved to have existed, then it will be sufficient, although the right be devested before the trial (r). *405

Evidence of title consists either, 1st, in showing possession and acts of ownership from which a legal title may be presumed (B); or, 2dly, in proving a particular title, as heir-at-law, devisee, executor, &c.

In the first place, long uninterrupted possession of an estate by a man and his ancestors is the strongest presumptive evidence of an estate in fee. Where lands have descended for many generations from father to son, such possession may be the only evidence, and it is the best presumptive evidence of title. Presumptive, from possession.

In the next place, in analogy to the stat. 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, a clear undisturbed possession of twenty years is evidence of an estate in fee, if no other title appear; and upon such evidence a plaintiff may recover in ejectment (s).

The presumption of title resulting from such possession of twenty years is liable to be rebutted by evidence that the possession was not adverse to

(n) Doe v. Edgar, 2 Bing. N. C. 498. (o) Ibid.

(p) R. v. Axbridge,[1] 2 Ad. & Ell. 520.

(q) Doe v. Staple, 2 T. R. 684. But notwithstanding the general rule that the legal title must prevail in ejectment, yet a party may be estopped from contesting the title of the adversary. A man cannot recover contrary to his own covenant for quiet enjoyment. Goodtitle d. Edwards v. Bailey, Cowp. 597. Right d. Green v. Proctor, 4 Burr. 2208. A tenant cannot set up the title of a third person against his lessor. Doe d. Bristowe v. Pegge, 1 T. R. 750, n. infra. Nor can a mortgagor defeat his mortgagee's title by setting up a title in a third person. Doe v. Pegge, 1 T. R. 760. And see Doe d. Nepean v. Budden, supra, 22, note (q).

(r) For although the plaintiff would not be entitled to sue out an habere facias possessionem, he would still be entitled to the intermediate mesne profits, to be recovered through the medium of an ejectment. Doe v. Black, 3 Camp. 447. B. N. P. 105. Co. Litt. 285, a.

(s) Per Ld. Mansfield, Denn v. Barnard, 1 Cowp. 597; and per Holt, C. J. Stokes v. Berry, Salk. 421. And see Cholmondely v. Clinton, 2 Jar. & W. 156. Taylor v. Horde, 1 Burr. 119. And see the provisions of the stat. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 34, which expressly extinguishes title of one against whom possession has run. So if the plaintiff prove possession for twenty years, and the defendant prove possession for less than twenty, an ejectment is maintainable on twenty years' adverse possession, although it was in continuation of possession by a sister who entered by abatement into land to which her elder brother was entitled as heir (whose issue was still living), and who died more than twenty years before the ejectment suit. Doe v. Lawley,[2] 3 N. & M. 331. The plaintiff relied on a twenty-three years' possession prior to the later possession by the defendant for ten years; held, that the defendant proving no title in himself or any other, the prior presumptive title ought to prevail. Doe d. Harding v. Cooke,[3] 7 Bing. 346, and 5 M. & P. 181.

(A) (Kennedy v. Skeer, 3 Watts, 95. Jared v. Goodtitle, 1 Blackf. 30. Miller's Lessee v. Holt, Tenn. R. 49. An outstanding title in a person other than the lessor of the plaintiff in ejectment, is sufficient to defeat his recovery, though the defendant do not claim under that title. Jackson v. Harrington, 9 Cow. 86.)

(B) (Kennedy v. Skeer, 3 Watts, 95. A plaintiff in ejectment having given evidence that he and the defendant claimed under the same title, is not thereby estopped from showing the truth of his case, because it would conflict with the evidence of title which he had previously given. Zeigler v. Hantz, 8 Watts, 380. But before a deed can be given in evidence, it is necessary to show title in the grantor, though it need not be a perfect title; for any evidence, however slight, is sufficient; and upon evidence tending to show title having been given, it is error in the court to reject the deed, and peremptorily to direct the jury to find against the party offering it. Ib.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxix. 160. [2]Id. xxviii. 400. [3]Id. xx. 156.

the party legally entitled (t), or that the latter laboured under some disability when his right accrued, which continued down to a period within the twenty years (u).

Proof of a lease for a long period, coupled with possession, is evidence of a title to the remainder of the term, although the party cannot prove the mesne assignments from the original lessee (v).

And evidence of possession for a period short of twenty years affords presumptive evidence of title sufficient to prevail against a mere wrong-doer who shows no title (x).

In cases where there has been no continued occupation of the premises, the possession and title may be evidenced by any acts of ownership which the circumstances of the case afford, such as cutting down trees (y), digging for turves, and getting stones.

*406 *Proof of occupation for a period less than twenty years, will be evidence of title against a mere wrong-doer (z). But possession, to confer a right against one having title, must be adverse (a).

It is to be presumed primâ facie, that waste lands adjacent to a road belong to the owner of the adjoining freehold; this presumption is of course liable to be rebutted by evidence of acts of ownership by the lord (b).

As the plaintiff must recover by virtue of his legal title, he will fail if it appear that a term of years has been created which is still outstanding in another, there being no count in the declaration on a demise by the trustee. It will not be sufficient, however, for the defendant to produce and prove a lease for 1,000 years, unless he also prove a possession under it by the trustee within the last twenty years, for otherwise a surrender of the term will be presumed (c). So proof of the execution of a mortgage-deed by the lessor of the plaintiff will be insufficient, unless it be also proved that the money was not paid at the day; but if the defendant prove the payment of interest subsequent to the day, and within twenty years, the plaintiff will be nonsuited (d).

Presumptive evidence of a surrender.

An indorsement on a lease, of the receipt of principal and interest, and releasing the term, amounts to a surrender of the term (e).

When the trusts of a term have been completely fulfilled, a surrender will be presumed; thus, where trustees were directed to convey to a devisee when he attained the age of twenty-one, it was held that the jury might properly presume a conveyance at any time afterwards, and long before the

(t) Supra, 401. (u) Ibid.

(v) Earl v. Baxter, Bl. 1228.

(x) Doe v. Dyeball, 1 M. & M. 346, cor. Ld. Tenterden; and see tit. Possession. In Allen v. Rivington, 2 Saund. 11, it was held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover on a special verdict, which showed that the plaintiff was in possession but that the defendant had no title. And possession is clearly sufficient to enable the possessor to maintain trespass, but not, as it seems, to maintain ejectment, where the evidence negatives his title. See Doe v. Barber, 2 T. R. 749. Doe v. Billyard, 8 Mo. & Ry. 112.

(y) Stanley v. White, 14 East, 332. As to presumptive evidence of title, see Trespass.—Possession.—Liberum Tenementum.—Prescription.

(z) Where a party had the key of the premises delivered to him by the lessor of plaintiff, and went in and enjoyed peaceable possession for nearly a year; held, that it was sufficient proof of title as against a party taking forcible possession. Doe d. Hughes v. Dyeball,[1] 3 C. & P. 610.

(a) R. v. Okeford Fitzpaine,[2] 1 B. & Ad. 254. Where the party in possession of a cottage built on the side of a road above fifty years, upon possession being within twenty years, demanded by B., the owner of the land adjoining on both sides of the road, had gone out, and on retaking possession by leave of such owner, had been told that "if he let him in again it would be during his pleasure," and he continued to occupy it without paying any rent for fifteen years; held, that it was a question for the jury to say whether he remained in the cottage by adverse title or by permission of B., and they having found that he occupied by permission, the Court refused to disturb the verdict. Doe v. Clark,[3] 8 B. & C. 717.

(b) Steele v. Prickett,[4] 2 Starkie's C. 463. Vide Trespass.—Liberum Tenementum.

(c) B. N. P. 110. (d) Ibid.

(e) Ibid.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiv. 481. [2]Id. xv. 331. [3]Id. xx. 382. [4]Id. iii. 433.

expiration of twenty years (f). But if the surrender of the outstanding term cannot be presumed, or if the existence of such a term be proved, and the jury do not find a surrender, the plaintiff (there being no count on a demise by the trustee) cannot recover (g). But it seems that the surrender of a term attendant on the inheritance, either by operation of law or by special declaration, after the extinction of the purposes for which it was created, is not to be presumed (h); nor from mere satisfaction, and *without such evidence of dealing with the term as warrants the presumption (i). *407

Enrolment. In ejectment, upon the assignment of a term to secure an annuity, an enrolment of the memorial is to be presumed, unless the contrary be shown (k).

Estoppel. In general a party is estopped from claiming premises in ejectment by his covenant that the defendant shall enjoy them (l).

A lessee (m) or licensee is (n) not allowed to dispute the title of the party who admitted him into possession. So a defendant may be estopped by an arbitrator's award (o).

Administrator. III. An administrator, to prove his title to a term, should produce the letters of administration under the seal of the ecclesiastical court, or the entry in the book of orders of the court for the granting of administration (p), which may be proved by means of an examined copy. So he may show his title by producing an exemplification of the letters of administration (q). The assignees of a bankrupt, in ejectment to recover the bankrupt's leasehold property, must prove their acceptance (r). An executor proves his title by the production of the probate; the term vests in the executor (s) upon the death of the testator, before the probate, and he may recover on a demise laid after the death of the testator, but before probate (t). The

By executor.

(f) England v. Slade, 4 T. R. 682. Doe v. Lloyd, Peake's Ev. Appen. See further, on the subject of presumed surrenders, Doe v. Wright, 2 B. & A. 720. Doe v. Hilder, 2 B. & A. 791. Aspinal v. Kempson, Sugden's Vend. & Pur. 446. Doe v. Plowman, 2 B. & Ad. 573.

(g) Goodtitle v. Jones, 7 T. R. 47; and see Doe v. Wroot, 5 East, 132. That an equitable title cannot prevail against a legal title in ejectment, see the above case, and the cases cited, 5 East, 139. Cas. temp. Redesdale, 67.

(h) The owner of the inheritance becoming the cestui que trust of the term, there is no ground for such a presumption. Doe v. Hilder, 2 B. & A. 791. Townsend v. Champernown, 1 Y. & J. 544. Evans v. Bicknell, 6 Ves. 185; especially if the term has been expressly assigned to attend the inheritance. Doe v Plowman,[1] 2 B. & Ad. 573. Sugden's V. & P. 389, 391. And see Doe v. Cooke,[2] 6 Bing. 174, where Tindal, C. J. observes, no case can be put in which any presumption has been made, except where a title has been shown by the party who calls for the presumption, good in substance but wanting some collateral matter necessary to make it complete in point of form. In Doe v. Reed,[3] 5 B. & A. 237, Bayley, J. intimated that a jury ought not to be required to presume what they did not believe. In that case A. having devised to trustees for years, remainder to B., who eighteen years after the death of A. dealt with the estate as his freehold, granting leases for lives; it was held that a surrender ought not to be presumed.

(i) Doe v. Williams, 2 M. & W. 749.

(k) Per Lord Ellenborough, Doe v. Mason, 3 Camp. 7. [See Doe v. Bingham,[4] 4 B. & A. 672.]

(l) Goodtitle d. Edwards v. Bailey, Cowp. 597. Right d. Green v. Proctor, 4 Burr. 2203. Infra, 412, note (a).

(m) Infra, 424.

(n) See the observations of the Court in R. v. Baytup, 2 Ad. & Ell. 188. If the lessee or licensee be really entitled, his course is to give up possession and bring ejectment. Ib. Where A. without title entered on land and built a cottage, and afterwards took a lease by indenture from B., and then for 20*l.* gave up the possession to C., it was held that C. was estopped from controverting B.'s title. Doe v. Mills,[5] 2 Ad. & Ell. 17. But a party is not estopped from disputing the title of one through whom both he and his adversary claim. The plaintiff claiming under a lease from A. in 1818, the defendant may claim under a conveyance from A. in 1824, and show that in 1818 he had no power to make such a lease.

(o) Doe v. Rosser, 3 East, 15. Hunter v. Rice, 15 East, 100.

(p) 1 Lev. 25, 101; B. N. P. 138, 246; 8 East, 187.

(q) Ca. temp. Hard. 108; 8 East, 187.

(r) Copeland v. Stevens, 1 R. & A. 593. Broom v. Robinson, cited 7 East, 339. See tit. BANKRUPT.

(s) R. v. Stone, 6 T. R. 295. R. v. Horseley, 8 East, 410; B. N. P. 246.

(t) Com. Dig. Administ. B. 10; 2 Rol. 554, l. 15, 25; Salk. 303. But an administrator cannot commence an action before administration granted; 1 Salk. 303; Com. Dig. Administ. B. 19. It has been said that administration when granted relates to the death. Com Dig. Administration, B. 10. But Woolley v. Clark,[6] 5 B. & A. 745, is to the contrary; and see the provision of the st. 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 27, s. 6.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxii. 145. [2]Id. xix. 44. [3]Id. vii. 79. [4]Id. vi. 560. [5]Id. xxix. 17. [6]Id. vii. 249.

lease to the testator or intestate must also be proved. The defendant's answer to a bill in equity, stating that he believed that the testator was possessed of the leasehold premises in the bill mentioned, is primâ facie evidence that the testator had a chattel interest in the premises in the bill mentioned (u).

By the st. 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 27, s. 6, for the purposes of the Act, an administrator claiming the estate or interest of the deceased, shall be deemed to *408 *claim as if there had been no interval between the death, and the grant of letters of administration.

Conusee of statute-merchant.

2. The plaintiff who claims as the conusee of a statute-merchant (v) must produce the recognizance, or an examined copy of it (x); an examined copy of the writ of capias si laicus, and return (y), and also an examined copy of the writ and return of the extent and liberari feci.

An interest is vested in the conusee by the return to the extent, and the intention of the liberate is to give him actual possession; and by the return of liberari feci the conusee is estopped from saying that he has not had possession (z).

If the action be not against the conusor, but against one who had possession previous to the acknowledgement, the plaintiff must also prove the conusor's title; or if one claim under the conusor, that his interest is determined (a), and the identity of the parties.

Conusee of statute-staple.

The conusee of a statute-staple (b), or of a recognizance in the nature of a statute-staple (c), must prove the recognizance either by its production under the proper seals, or, as it seems, by an examined copy of its certification into the court of Chancery (d) by the clerk of recognizances, and by examined copies of the writ of capias and return, and also of extent and liberate. A copy of the record, containing the recital of the award of these writs, and of their returns, seems to be sufficient evidence to prove them (e).

In case of the loss of a recognizance taken under the stat. 23 H. 8, c. 6, it is provided by the st. 8 G. 1, c. 25, s. 2, that in order to enable the conusee to have process, a transcript from the roll should be certified by the clerk of recognizances into Chancery, in the same way as recognizances were directed by the former Act to be certified in the same manner as if the recognizance had not been lost. The same section also directs that in case of such loss or damage, a copy from the roll, under the hand of the clerk or his deputy, when duly proved, shall be as good evidence of the recognizance as if it had been produced under seal. Evidence of identity is also neces-

(u) Doe d. Digby v. Steel, 3 Camp. 115.

(v) See the st. 11 Edw. 1, and 13 Edw. 1, st. 3.

(x) B. N. P. 104; Salk. 563. The recognizance is sent by the mayor, at the request of the conusor, into Chancery. See the stat. 13 Edw. 1, st. 3.

(y) This writ issues out of Chancery, but is made returnable in the K. B. or C. B. by the provisions of the stat. 13 Edw. 1, st. 3; but by the stat. 5 Hen. 4, c. 12, after a writ once awarded and returned into the Common Pleas, the Justice may award process without any further showing of the recognizance.

(z) Per Holt, C. J., Hammond v. Wood, 2 Salk. 563. The statutes 23 Hen. 8, c. 6, and 27 Eliz. c. 6, s. 7 & 8, require a copy of every statute-merchant and staple to be delivered to the clerk of recognizances within four months after acknowledgement, or it will be void against subsequent purchasers. The latter stat. s. 9, requires the clerk to make the enrolment within six months after the acknowledgement, indorsing the day and year of entry on the statute; and by the stat. 29 Car. 2, c. 3, the day and year of the enrolment of recognizances is to be set down in the margin of the roll, and no recognizance shall bind a bona fide purchaser of lands for a valuable consideration but from that time.

(a) Doe v. Wharton, 8 T. R. 2.

(b) See the stat. 27 Ed. 3, s. 2, c. 9.

(c) See the provisions of the stat. 23 Hen. 8, c. 6.

(d) By the provisions of the several Acts referred to, upon the request of the conusee the recognizance is to be certified into the court of Chancery; and it seems that the recognizance itself should be sent into Chancery, properly certified by the clerk of recognizances. See the stat. 23 Hen. 8, c. 6, s. 5, and 8 Geo. 1, c. 25, s. 2; which provide for the certifying in case of the loss of the original recognizance.

(e) See 2 M. & S. 565; and infra, tit. ELEGIT.

sary; and if the proceedings be not against the conusor, the plaintiff must also give evidence of his title (f).

3. The devisee of a freehold interest must prove, 1st, The seisin of the *devisor; and 2dly, the execution of the will (A); 3dly, the death of the devisor (B). He need not prove his own possession, since the law casts the seisin on the devisee; and although the heir enter before him, his entry is not barred (g). Devisee. *409 Freehold.

1st. Seisin of the devisor. Proof of his possession is primâ facie evidence of a seisin in fee (h).

2dly. The execution of the will, see tit. WILL (i), and identity of the devisee (j).

3dly. The death of the devisor, see tit. DEATH.—PEDIGREE.

Proof of title, as devisee of a copyhold, has already been considered (k). Copyhold.

The devisee of a leasehold must prove, 1st, the lease to the devisor; 2dly, the will by the probate (l), and the identity of the devisee; and 3dly, assent of the executor (m). Leasehold.

1st. An admission by the defendant of the testator's interest will supersede the necessity of proving the lease (n).

2dly. The will must be proved in order to show the devise of the chattel real; and this must be done by means of the probate, the only evidence of such a title to personal property recognized by courts of law (o).

3dly. Inasmuch as the legal title to the personal estate vests in the executor, even where it has been specifically bequeathed by the will, and does not vest in the legatee until the executor has assented to it, proof of such assent must be given. It is sufficient to prove that it was given either before or after probate (p). The legal interest vests in the legatee irrevocably by the executor's assent (q). No particular form is necessary. A general assent is sufficient (r). So is a letter, by which the defendant promises to

(f) Supra, note (a). (g) Co. Litt. 240; and vide supra, p. 404.

(h) See tit. HEIR. To make a good devise there must be a seisin by the devisor at the time of making the will. Bunter v. Coke, Salk. 237; Co. Cust. 364; Rast. 747. The statute empowers those having land to devise, &c. But now see the statute 7 W. 4 & 1 Viet. c. 26.

(i) Whether a devise in trust takes a legal title, is of course a question of mere law, and sometimes one of difficulty. Amongst the general rules on the subject, the following may be mentioned: The legal estate is vested in trustees where anything is to be done by them which makes it necessary that they should have the legal estate for the purpose. See Powell on Devises, by Jarmin; the note to Jefferson v. Morton, 2 Williams; 1 Saund. 11. As where they are required to sell; Keene v. Dearden, 8 East, 148. To pay the testator's debts; Ib. To pay taxes; Ib. Keep the premises in repair; Ib.; and White v. Parker,[1] 1 Bing. N. C. 573. But although a trust to receive the rents and profits, and pay them over, vests the legal estate, a trust to permit and suffer the cestui que trust to receive them, vests the property in the cestui que trust. Doe v. Homfray,[2] 6 Ad. & Ell. 207. Broughton v. Langley, 1 Lutw. 814. Powell on Devises, by Jarman. And in the case of a devise in trust to pay, or permit and suffer the cestui que trust to receive the latter of the two inconsistent directions being contained in a will, is to prevail. Doe v. Biggs, 2 Taunt. 109. Where the estate is devised for particular purposes, it vests so long as is necessary for those purposes, and no longer. Doe v. Nicholls, 1 B. & C. 342.

(j) Doe d. Hanson v. Smith, 1 Camp. 196. (k) See tit. COPYHOLD.

(l) Antea, Vol. I. Ind. tit. PROBATE and tit. EXECUTOR; and see Stone v. Forsyth, Doug. 681.

(m) 1 Inst. 111, a. Young v. Holmes, Stra. 70.

(n) Doe d. Digby v. Steel, 3 Camp. C. 115. (o) Infra, tit. EXECUTOR.

(p) Doe v. Guy, 3 East, 120, 123.

(q) 4 Rep. 28. Paramour v. Yardley, Plowd. 539. Young v. Holmes, 1 Str. 70. And per Ld. Ellenborough, Doe v. Guy, 3 East, 123. In case of a deficiency of assets, a court of equity would interfere, and cause the legatee to refund a proportional part.

(r) See Duppa v. Mayo, 1 Saund. 278; and the observations of Lawrence, J., 3 East, 124.

(A) (The plaintiff in ejectment need not go further back in deducing his title in the first instance, than the will of a person under whom he claims, who died seised of the land. The law presumes a fee simple in the devisor, unless the contrary is shown. West v. Pine, 4 Wash. C. C. R. 691. See also Lessee of Ludlow's heirs v. Hemphill's heirs, 3 Ohio R. 236.)

(B) (See Wells v. Prince, 4 Mass. R. 64.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxvii. 493. [2]Id. xxxiii. 55.

give possession *at a particular time (s). It seems that an assent is not to be implied from the sufficiency of assets (t); but an express assent will vest a term in the legatee from the death of the testator (u). An action of ejectment does not lie for dower which has not been assigned (x).

Tenant by elegit.

4. The tenant by elegit should produce an examined copy of the judgment-roll, reciting the judgment, the award of the elegit, and the return (y) (A). It has indeed been formerly held, that an examined copy of the elegit itself, or of the inquisition and return, ought to be proved (z), but this seems to be unnecessary, since the judgment-roll is incontrovertible evidence of every matter which it recites (a). It must appear from the return that the sheriff has set out a moiety by metes and bounds, or the return will be bad (b); the objection may be taken on the trial (c). If more than a moiety appear to have been extended, the plaintiff cannot recover (d); but the sheriff is not bound to set out one-half of each particular tenement (e). If another than the debtor be in possession of the lands, the plaintiff must prove, in addition, the title of the debtor himself to the lands (f). As an ejectment will not lie unless the lessor has a right of entry, it seems that the tenant may take possession without an ejectment (g). Where a tenant has come into possession by lease, after the judgment, but before the issuing of the writ of elegit, notice to quit is unnecessary (h).

By a guardian.

5. A guardian in socage has an interest in the lands of the infant until the latter attain to the age of fourteen years, which will enable him to maintain an action of ejectment to recover them (i) (B). To make out his title he must prove 1st. That the infant is the heir to socage lands; which is to be proved, as in the case of title by an heir, by evidence of the seisin of (s) Doe v. Guy, 3 East, 120.

(t) Deeks v. Strutt, 5 T. R. 690; and per Lawrence, J., 3 East, 124.

(u) Saunders's Case, 5 Rep. 12, b.; 3 East, 125.

(x) Doe v. Nutt,[1] 2 C. & P. 430. (y) Ramsbottom v. Buckhurst, 2 M. & S. 565.

(z) Salk. 563; Ld. Raym. 718; B. N. P. 104; Gilb. Ev. 9; 2 Will. Saund. 69, c.; Trials per P. 386, 5th edit.; Tidd's Pract. 1013, 5th edit.; Runn. Eject. 330.

(a) 2 M. & S. 565.

(b) Fenny v. Durrant, 1 B & A. 40. [See Dalison, 26 pl. 2 and old precedents, contra.] Pullen v. Birkbeck, Carth. 453; Hutton, 16.

(c) Fenny v. Durrant, 1 B. & A. 40.

(d) Putten v. Purbeck, Salk. 563. Denn v. Ld. Abingdon, Doug. 456; B. N. P. 104.

(e) Doug. 472; 1 Salk. 563; 1 Sid. 91; Cro. Car. 319.

(f) It is sufficient to prove a prima facie title in the debtor; this throws it on the tenant in possession to show a title anterior to the judgment. Doe v. Owen. 2 C. & J. 71. Premises were conveyed to such uses as a party should appoint, and in the meantime to the use of himself for life, and afterwards a judgment was obtained against him, upon which an elegit was issued, but prior to the execution of it he executed the power in favour of a mortgagee, and appointed the estate for a term of 500 years; held, that as suffering judgment was an act in invitum and not done by the party himself, it was not within the exception to the rule, that where a power is executed, the person taking under it takes under him who created the power and not under him who executes it, and the lien of the judgment creditor upon the land was therefore defeated by such appointment. Doe d. Wigan v. Jones,[2] 10 B. & C. 459. And see Clere's Case, 6 Co. 18, and Witham v. Bland, 3 Swanst. 277, a.

(g) See the opinion of Gibbs, C. J., Rogers v. Pitcher,[3] 6 Taunt. 207; 3 T. R. 295; 2 Tidd's Pr. tit. Elegit; Eq. Ca. Ab. 381.

(h) Doe v. Hilder, 2 B. & A. 782. In ejectment under a sale by the sheriff under a fi. fa., it is unnecessary to prove the judgment, as in the case of an elegit or outlawry; Devon Lent Ass. 1811, cor. Power, J.; Vin. Ab. Evidence, T. b. 104. Secus, where the lessor sued out the execution. Infra, tit. SHERIFF, SALE BY. As to proof of the assignment, vide Ibid.

(i) Litt. sec. 123; Co. Litt. 88, 89; Bro. tit. Guardian, 70; Bac. Ab. tit. Guardian, 6; 2 Roll. Ab. 41.

(A) (It is well settled in modern practice, that the officer executing a writ of "elegit" does not put the creditor into actual possession of the land, but gives him only a legal possession which must be enforced by ejectment. Ronald's heirs v. Barkley, 1 Brockenb. C. C. R. 356.)

(B) (But a prochein ami cannot make a demise to sustain an action of ejectment. Lessee of Massie's heirs v. Long, 2 Ohio R. 293.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xii. 205. [2]Id. xxi. 113. [3]Id. i. 355.

the ancestor, of his death, and of the pedigree (j). 2dly. His own character as guardian; that is, that he is next of blood to the heir, to whom the inheritance *cannot descend (k); and by evidence that the infant was under *411 the age of fourteen at the time of the demise, for from that time the title of the guardian ceases (l). A guardian who has been appointed by deed or will, by virtue of the stat. 12 C. 2, c. 24, s. 8, 9, must prove his appointment, either by the deed of the father, or his last will and testament, executed as the statute directs, in the presence of two or more credible witnesses; the title of the infant, and his minority at the time of the demise.

6. The title of the heir-at-law consists, 1st, In proof of the seisin of the ancestor from whom he claims, or if he claims from a remainder man, that he was the person in whom the remainder vested by purchase (m) (A). 2dly, In proof that he is heir to that person (n). By heir at law.

1st. Seisin. Actual possession, or receipt of rent from a tenant of the premises, is primâ facie evidence of a seisin in fee (o). It is not necessary to prove an actual entry by the relation from whom the claimant derives his title. If a father die, leaving his estate let on a lease for years, the possession of the tenant will be a possession by his eldest son, so as to constitute a possessio fratris to the exclusion of the brother of the half-blood (p). If on the other hand the estate on the death of the father was let on a freehold lease, there would be no possessio fratris unless the eldest son lived to receive rent after the expiration of the lease (q). Where the father died, leaving two daughters by different mothers, and the mother of the youngest daughter entered generally as guardian in socage of her youngest daughter, it was held that this constituted a sufficient seisin of the eldest daughter to carry the descent of her moiety to her heirs (r). By the provisions of the late stat. 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 106, s. 2, every descent (s) shall be traced from the purchaser (t); and to the intent that the pedigree may never be carried further back than the circumstances of the case and nature of the title *require, *412

(j) See TITLE BY HEIR.—PEDIGREE.

(k) Sec 1 P. Wms. 260; Bac. Abr. Guardian, [A]; 9 Mod. 142; Hargr. Co. Litt. 87, b. n. 6. Qu. as to such a relation under the new statute for regulating the law of descents. [Byrne v. Van Hoesh, 5 Johns. 66.]

(l) Bac. Ab. Guardian, [E.]; Hard. 69. Doe v. Bell, 5 T. R. 471.

(m) If a reversion or remainder be expectant on an estate for life or in tail, then he who claims the reversion as heir ought to make himself heir to him who made the gift or lease, if the reversion or remainder descend from him; or if a man purchase such remainder or reversion, he who claims as heir ought to make himself heir to the first purchaser. Ratcliffe's Case, 3 Rep. 42.

(n) For proof of title as heir-at-law to a copyhold, or by virtue of a custom, see tit. COPYHOLD.

(o) B. N. P. 103; Co. Litt. 243, a. The possession of a tenant for years, or of a guardian in socage, constitutes an actual seisin by the owner of the inheritance or infant. Ib. Doe v. Newman, 3 Wils. 516. The holding of courts and appointing gamekeepers is evidence to prove the existence of a manor, or to prove the locus in quo to be within the manor. Doe v. Heakin,[1] 6 Ad. & Ell. 495; but evidence of shooting and appointing a gamekeeper is, it seems, no evidence of right to the soil. Per Bayley, J., Tyrwhitt v. Wynne, 2 B. & A. 560. See further tit. POSSESSION.—TRESPASS.—LIBERUM TENEMENTUM. As to declarations by tenants, see that title Vol. I., and Peaceable v. Watson, 4 Taunt. 16. Carne v. Nicoll,[2] 1 Bing. N. C. 430. That which must be pleaded in a real action must be proved in ejectment, in order to make out a title by descent. Shaw v. Lord, 2 Bl. 1099. Proof of the possession of lands, and pernancy of rents, is prima facie evidence of a seisin in fee. Jayne v. Price,[3] 5 Taunt. 326. But proof of forty years subsequent possession by a daughter, whilst the son and heir lived near, and knew the fact, was held to be much stronger evidence that the father had but a particular estate.

(p) Co. Litt, 15, a.; Jenk. 242. Doe v. Keene, 7 T. R. 390.

(q) Ibid. (r) Doe v. Keene, 7 T. R. 386.

(s) The Act (sec. 11) does not extend to any descent before June 1st, 1834.

(t) By sec. 1, purchaser means the person who last acquired the land otherwise than by descent. The words "person last entitled" extend to the last who had a right to the land, whether he did or did not obtain the possession or receipt of the rent and profit.

(A) (Where one takes by descent as a co-heir and tenant in common, in ejectment by his co-heir, or one claiming under him, he cannot show that the ancestor had no title. Jackson v. Streeter, 5 Cow. 529.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxxiii. 126. [2]Id. xxvii. 446. [3]Id. i. 121.

the person last entitled to the land shall, for the purposes of that Act, be considered to have been the purchaser, unless it be proved that he inherited the same, in which case the person from whom he inherited shall be considered to have been the purchaser, unless it be proved that he inherited; and in like manner the last person from whom the land shall be proved to have been inherited shall in every case be presumed to have been the purchaser, unless it be proved that he inherited.

By sect. 4, where any one shall acquire land by purchase, under a limitation to the heir or heirs of the body of any of his ancestors in any assurance executed after the 31st of December 1833, or in any will of a testator dying after that day, the land shall descend, and the descent shall be traced as if his ancestor had been the purchaser.

By sect. 10, an heir may trace his descent through an attainted person who died before the descent took place, unless the land escheated in consequence of the attainder before the 1st of January 1834.

Proof of heirship. 2dly. That he is heir. The requisite proofs to establish this fact are considered under the title PEDIGREE.—If the defendant rely on a devise of the lands to him, and give primâ facie evidence of the due execution of the will, it is incumbent on the plaintiff either to disprove the execution of the will according to the statute, or to prove the want of assent of the supposed devisor to make a will, by proof of the practice of some fraud, or of his inability; or to dispute the operation of the will (u); or lastly, to prove its revocation. These proofs are considered under the title WILL. If the action be brought by the heir-at-law against a devisee under the will, the plaintiff will, in the usual course, be entitled to begin, and to the general reply, but if the devisee admit the plaintiff's primâ facie case as heir, and rely solely on the devise, he will be entitled to the opening and reply (x).

The heir-at-law may show that a devise has been waived, but such a waver to be binding must be express and absolute. A repudiation of the devise by one who mistakenly claimed as heir is not sufficient (y). An heir-at-law may lay the demise on the day on which his ancestor died (z).

Husband and wife. Upon a demise by husband and wife, in right of the wife, title must be proved in the wife (a). If the wife be joint-tenant of a term, the husband and wife should join in the ejectment with the other joint-tenant (b). A joint demise by the husband and wife is negatived by a receipt for rent given in the name of the husband alone (c) (A).

By landlord. 7. If the ejectment be brought upon the determination of a lease, the plaintiff must prove, 1st, The demise. 2dly, Its determination.

Proof of the demise. If the demise has been by deed or other written instrument, it should be produced, and proved in the usual way, and if it be in the defendant's possession, notice must be given to produce it (d). After notice to produce the original, which is not produced, the plaintiff may give a counterpart in evi-

(u) In order to disinherit the heir, there must either be express words or a necessary implication. 3 Wils. 488; Doug. 763; Cowp. 31, 302, 661.

(x) Vide supra, Vol. I. (y) Doe d. Smyth v. Smyth,[1] 6 B. & C. 112.

(z) Doe v. Hersey, 3 Wils. 274. A posthumous son taking lands by way of remainder, under the stat. 10 & 11 Will. 3, c. 16, may lay the demise on the day of his father's death. B. N. P. 105.

(a) The husband is only possessed of a term in her right; the term or legal interest continues in her. 7 H. 6, 2; 2 Roll. Ab. 341; Co. Litt. 351.

(b) Bac. Ab. tit. Baron and Feme, [C. 2]. (c) Parry v. Hindle, 2 Taunt. 180.

(d) Supra, Vol. I. tit. PROOF OF WRITTEN DOCUMENT. Fenn v. Griffith,[2] 6 Bing. 533. Doe v. Harvey,[3] 8 Bing. 439.

(A) (It is not necessary that the wife should join with the husband in an action of ejectment, for the recovery of land conveyed to husband and wife. Jackson v. Leek, 19 Wend. 339.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiii. 113. [2]Id. xix. 159. [3]Id. xxi. 286.

dence, *or, if there be none, a copy (e). If there has been no written demise, the plaintiff may prove a demise by parol; proof of payment of rent by the defendant is primâ facie evidence of a tenancy from year to year (f). It is usual for this purpose to give notice to the tenant to produce the receipts, but the fact of payment may be proved by other evidence.

Evidence of the payment of an entire rent to the trustees of a charity, is evidence to support a joint demise, and it is not sufficient for the defendant to show that they were appointed at different times, in order to prove them to be tenants in common; in such a case express proof is requisite (g). Payment of small sums on three different occasions, as rent in respect of land enclosed from a waste thirty-three years, was held to be conclusive evidence of permissive occupation (h).

Where encroachments have been made by a tenant on waste lands adjoining to the demised premises, it seems that it is to be presumed that they were made in right of the demised premises, and that the lessor is entitled to show the determination of the lease (i).

A party holding over after the expiration of a lease, at an advanced rent, is presumed to hold upon the other terms of the former lease (j). So if he be let into possession under an agreement for a lease, and pays rent (k), or admits such rent to be due (l).

A tenancy may be presumed from circumstances; where the tenant of glebe lands continued in possession for eight months after the death of the *incumbent, it was held that the succeeding incumbent might be presumed *414 to have assented to the continuance of the tenancy, and that a notice to quit was necessary (m).

2dly. The determination of the lease. This may be proved, 1st, by the (e) Burleigh v. Stubbs, 5 T. R. 465; 7 East, 363. It seems that a counterpart is evidence in the first instance. Roe v. Davis, 7 East, 363.

(f) Doe v. Samuel, 5 Esp. C. 173. If the tenant for life leases and dies, and the remainder-man receives rent from the tenant, a tenancy from year to year is created. Sykes v. Burkitt, cited 1 T. R. 161; and see tit. USE AND OCCUPATION.

(g) Doe v. Grant, 12 East, 221. In Doe d. Brookes v. Fairclough, 6 M. & S. 40, where lands had been devised to the rector and churchwardens of a parish, and their successors, for the use of the poor, and there were two demises, one by five churchwardens who were in office when the tenant entered, and another by a rector since appointed and the same churchwardens jointly, and notice was given to deliver up the premises to the rector and churchwardens for the time being, it was held that the lessors of the plaintiff were not entitled to recover on either demise, though the defendant had paid rent to one of the churchwardens (who gave a receipt as churchwarden for the use of the poor), and had promised to quit after receiving the notice; that is, 182 days before the end of the year.[1] 5 Ad. & Ell. 351. But where the rent is payable on the usual feast days, notice on one feast day to quit on the next but one, being the end of the year, is sufficient. Right v. Darby, 1 T. R. 159. Roe v. Doe,[2] 6 Bing. 574. Doe v. Keightly, 7 T. R. 63. Howard v. Wemsley, 6 Esp. C. 53. Doe v. Green, 4 Esp. C. 199.

(h)[3] 3 B. & C. 413, where Holroyd, J. cited the following passage from Buller's N. P. 104: "A distinction has been taken and allowed by all the judges on a case reserved by Pengelly, C. B., that if a cottage is built in defiance of a lord, and quiet possession has been had of it for twenty years, it is within the statute; but if it were built at first by the lord's permission, or any acknowledgement have since been made (though it were 100 years since), the statute will not run against the lord." "Here," adds Mr. J. Holroyd, "the payment of rent was an acknowledgement that the occupation was by permission." When, however, the sum paid is very small, and has not been regularly paid, it may be a question for the jury, whether the payment did not result from some oppression. P. C., K. B. Easter term, 1829.

(i) Bryan d. Child v. Winwood, 1 Taunt. 208. Doe d. Challmer v. Davis, 1 Esp. C. 461, contra. Doe d. Colclough v. Miller, Ibid. 460. Note, that in the first of these cases the landlord was seised in fee of the waste, which had been inclosed and enjoyed by his tenant for life for thirty years; it was left to the jury to say whether it was not inclosed with the consent of the lessor, in right of the demised premises.

(j) Hutton v. Warren, 3 M. & W. 475. So in the case of a lease void by the statute of frauds, if the tenant being let into possession pay rent, the holding will be from year to year, regulated by the terms of the void lease. Doe v. Bell, 5 T. R. 471.

(k) Knight v. Bennett,[4] 3 Bing. 361. Mann v. Lovejoy, R. & M. 355; Doe v. Stratton,[5] 4 Bing. 446.

(l) Cox v. Bent,[6] 5 Bing. 185. (m) Doe v. Somerville,[7] 6 B. & C. 126.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxxi. 353. [2]Id. xix. 169. [3]Id. x. 135. [4]Id. xiii. 8. [5]Id. xv. 36. [6]Id. xv. 410. [7]Id. xiii. 118.

Determination of the lease. Notice to quit.

terms of the lease itself, where the term is certain; 2dly, by proof of notice where it is necessary (n); 3dly, by proof of some act of forfeiture.

1st. Where by the terms of the original lease the tenancy is to end on a precise day, no notice to quit is necessary, for both parties are apprized of the determination of the term (o).

Time of entry.

2dly. If the tenancy be from year to year (p), the plaintiff must prove that the defendant has had the usual notice to quit six months previous to the time of the year when the defendant entered (q) (1) (A). A receipt for

(n) A covenant to lease is not a lease, and is no defence to an action by the landlord. Fenny v. Child, 2 M. & S. 255. P., the lessor of the plaintiff, being seised in fee of lands, having agreed for the sale thereof to W. on or before a certain day, W. before that day agreed to let them to the defendant, who, with the permission of the vendor, was let into possession as tenant to W.; the conveyance was, after the stated day, executed, whereby the lands were conveyed to W., but for the use of P. the vendor for a term, subject to a proviso for redemption by W. on payment of the purchase-money, for default of which, the ejectment was brought; held, that the entry and possession of the defendant being only that of W. by anticipation, no notice to quit was necessary. Doe d. Parker v. Boulton, 6 M. & S. 146. A party defends as landlord; the occupiers having suffered judgment by default, he cannot object that his tenants have not received notice to quit from the lessor of plaintiff. Doe v. Creed,[1] 5 Bing. 327. The minister of a dissenting chapel is permitted by the trustees to occupy a dwelling-house; having no other estate in the premises than that of a mere tenant at will, it is put an end to by a demand of possession by the trustees, and they are entitled to recover the possession without notice. Doe v. Jones,[2] 10 B. & C. 718; S. P. Doe d. Nicholl v. M'Kaeg,[3] Ib. 721. The wrongful payment of rent to a person not entitled, does not operate as a disseisin of the landlord or disclaimer of his title, so as to amount to a forfeiture of the lease. Doe d. Dillon v. Parker, 1 Gow's C. 18. But where the defendant in ejectment alleged that the person through whom the lessor of the plaintiff claimed a title in fee held only as tenant to the defendant, such an assertion of title operating as a disclaimer of the title of the landlord, amounts to a forfeiture of the lease or subsisting tenancy, and notice to quit need not be proved. Doe d. Jeffries v. Whittick, 1 Gow's C. 103.

(o) Per Lord Mansfield, Right v. Darby, 1 T. R. 162. Messenger v. Armstrong, 1 T. R. 54. Cobb v. Stokes, 8 East, 358. A clause in an agreement by the lessee to give up a portion of the demised land to the lessor upon certain terms, in case the lessor should want it for building, without any clause of re-entry, operates as a covenant, and not as a condition in defeasance of the estate, and the lessor cannot recover in ejectment. Doe d. Wilson v. Phillips,[4] 2 Bing. 13. In some instances proof may from efflux of time be unnecessary; as where notice has been given to a weekly tenant to quit on Friday, or otherwise at the end of his tenancy next after one week from the date of the notice, and the ejectment is not brought until a time has elapsed which covers every day in that week. Doe v. Scott,[5] 6 Bing. 362.

(p) A demise for a year, and afterwards from year to year, operates as a demise for two years. Birch v. Wright, 1 T. R. 280. A demise from year to year constitutes a tenancy for two years at least. Denn v. Cartwright, 4 East, 29. Under a demise for twelve months certain, and six months notice afterwards, the tenant is at liberty to quit at the end of twelve months, giving six months previous notice. Thompson v. Maberly, 2 Camp. 573. But a tenant who enters under an agreement for a lease for seven years, and who occupies for the whole of that time, is not entitled to a notice to quit at the end of the seven years, although a notice would have been necessary for the purpose of ejecting him within the seven years. Doe v. Stratton, 4 Bing. 446. An under-tenant holding over is not bound by the terms of a lease granted after his coming in to the tenant, with the terms of which he is unacquainted. Torriano v. Young,[6] 6 C. & P. 8.

(q) Kemp v. Derrett, 3 Camp. 510. But that may be varied by showing a payment of rent for the portion of the quarter between entry and quarter-day. Doe v. Johnson, 6 Esp. C. 10. Doe v. Stapleton,[7] 3 C. & P. 275. Doe v. Selwyn, Adams on Eject. 129. A variation in the rent during the tenancy does not affect the time of notice. Doe v. Kendrick, Adams on Ejectment, 129.

(1) [See, on the subject of notice, Mr. Day's note to the case of Denn v. Rawlins, 10 East, 263.]

(A) (A notice to quit previously to bringing an action of ejectment is not required in many cases. To entitle a party to such notice there must be an existing relation of landlord and tenant. Jackson v. Deyo, 3 John. R. 422. Jackson v. Aldrich, 13 John. R. 106. Jackson v. Stackhouse, 1 Cow. 122. Jackson v. Burton, 1 Wend. 341. Whiteside et al. v. Jackson, Id. 418. Jackson v. French, 3 Id. 337. Jackson v. Robinson, 4 Id. 436. Jackson v. Moncrief, 5 Id. 26. Jackson v. Rowland, 6 Id. 666. Rockwell v. Bradley, 2 Conn. 1. Wakeman v. Banks, Id. 446.

Besides the existence of a tenancy, to give one a right to this notice, it would seem that it must be a tenancy from year to year. Cherry v. Batten, Cowp. 245. Logan v. Herron, 8 Serg. & Rawle, 459. Jackson v. M'Leod, 12 John. R. 182. Jackson v. Miller, 7 Cow. 747. Ellis v. Paige, 2 Pick. 71 (n). The principle is well established, that a tenant by sufferance is not entitled to this notice. But a tenancy by sufferance, when created after the determination of a lease for years, may readily be converted into a tenancy from year to year, and give the tenant a right to this notice.

If there is a lease for a year, and the tenant is afterwards permitted to remain from year to year, a notice to quit in the first month of a new year is illegal. The tenant has a right to hold for that year. Fahnestock rent due at a particular day is primâ facie evidence of a holding from that day (r). *And where the tenant continues to hold the premises after the expiration of a lease, and assigns his interest, the assignee holds from the day on which the tenancy under the lease commenced (s). It was once held that the notice to quit was in itself primâ facie evidence that the tenancy commenced at the day specified in the notice for quitting (t). But on subsequent consideration of the point by the Judges, it was thought that this rule was not sufficiently supported by any principle; and it is now held, that the notice is not evidence of the time of entry, unless it be unobjected to at the time of service upon the defendant (u). Hence the notice is not evidence for that purpose unless it be served personally (x); nor then, unless the party can and does read it (y). And whether the defendant did or did not assent is a question for the jury. Where the defendant at the time of service gave an angry answer, complaining that he had been harshly treated, it was held that he was not thereby precluded from showing that the notice had been served too late (z). But where the tenant, on application by the lessor's attorney, as to the commencement of his tenancy, misinformed him, and notice was given in conformity with his answer, it was held that he was concluded by it, and that it made no difference whether the information so given resulted from accident or design, since he had induced the party to act upon it (a). *415

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xv. 459. [2]Id. xxi. 153. [3]Id. xxi. 154. [4]Id. ix. 296. [5]Id. xix. 204. [6]Id. xxv. 253, [7]Id. xiv. 303.

Proof of notice.

In general it must be proved that the notice to quit was served half a year before the expiration of the current year (b). A longer notice may be (r) Doe v. Samuel, 5 Esp. C. 173. And so ruled in Doe v. Beaumont, York Summer Assizes, 1834, by Lord Lyndhurst, C. B. If no direct evidence can be given as to the time of entry, the custom of the country is prima facie evidence of the time; if there be no such custom, the rent-day is to be considered as the day of entry. If there be two rent-days, the plaintiff's notice shall be presumed to be right till the defendant prove it to be wrong; and if the tenant enters about the usual day, the entry shall relate to such day. Per Buller, J., Lancaster Lent Assizes, 1790. Salkeld, by Evans, 413, note (b). And see Doe v. Lambe, Adams on Ej. 316, 3d ed.; Timmins v. Rowlinson, 3 Burr. 1609.

(s) Doe v. Samuel, 5 Esp. C. 173. So in the case of holding under a lease void by the statute of frauds. Doe v. Bell, 5 T. R. 472.

(t) Doe v. Harris, 1 T. R. 161.

(u) Thomas v. Thomas, 2 Camp. 647. Doe v. Wombwell, 2 Camp. 559. Doe v. Foster, 13 East, 406. Doe v. Calvert, 2 Camp. 388.

(x) Doe v. Calvert, 2 Camp. 388.

(y) Thomas v. Thomas, 2 Camp. 647, by the Court of K. B. So where the notice being general, and not mentioning any time of quitting, a declaration was served nearly a year afterwards, laying the demise half a year after the notice, the tenant on service making no objection as to the time, Ld. Ellenborough held that it was a question for the jury whether the tenant must not be taken to have admitted that the notice was good. Doe v. Wombwell, 2 Camp. 559.

(z) Oakapple v. Copons, 4 T. R. 361.

(a) Doe v. Lambley, 2 Esp. C. 635.

(b) Right v. Darby, 1 T. R. 159. If a house be taken by the month, a month's notice is sufficient. Doe v. Hazell, 1 Esp. C. 94. A weekly reservation of rent is evidence of a weekly holding. Doe d. Peacock v. Faustenaur, 5 Serg. & R. 174. Bedford v. M'Elherron, 2 Id. 49. Danforth v. Sargeant et al. 14 Mass R. 491. Jackson v. Salmon, 4 Wend. 327.

It may well be doubted, whether a mere tenant at will, who is not by construction of law a tenant from year to year, can demand a notice to quit before the institution of an action of ejectment against him. Jackson v. Bradt, 2 Caines R. 169. Ellis v. Paige, 2 Pick. 71, n. are authorities against such a position, while the learned opinion of Putnam, J., in the latter case supports the opinion that a mere tenant at will is entitled to this notice. See also Jackson v. Miller, 7 Cow. 747. However, the principles to be elicited from the decisions generally on the subject of a notice to quit, appears to be in opposition to such a right.

In Ohio the notice to quit is legally given by the service of the declaration, ten days before the term to which it is returned. Lessee of Spencer v. Marckal, 2 Ohio R. 265. In Kentucky a notice to quit is not necessary to enable a widow to recover her land conveyed by her husband during the coverture. Miller v. Shackleford, 3 Dana, 289. And in Indiana, a judgment debtor in possession, or his vendee, subsequent to the judgment, is not entitled to a notice to quit in an action of ejectment brought against him by the purchaser at sheriff's sale under the judgment. Smith v. Allen, 1 Blackf. 27.

An ejectment may, in some cases, be supported on a warrant without a survey. Smay v. Smith et al. 1 Penn. R. 1.

An entry is not necessary in any case in Pennsylvania, in order to enable the person who has title, to recover the possession of lands. Carlisle et al. v. Stitler, 1 Penn. R. 6.)

*necessary, or a shorter one sufficient, if a custom to that effect be proved (c). There is no distinction between houses and lands as to the time of notice (d). Where a tenant enters upon different portions of the premises at different times, for the convenience of husbandry, and it does not appear from any express agreement from what point of time the tenancy was to commence, the rule of law is, that it shall be taken to commence from the time of entering upon that which is the principal and substantial subject of the demise (e); and it is a question of fact for the jury to ascertain what is the principal, and what the accessorial subject of demise (f).

In the case of Doe v. Snowden (g), the arable part of the farm was held from Candlemas, but the rent was made payable from Old Lady-day, and the tenancy was held to commence on the latter day (h). Where the tenant was to enter upon the arable lands at Candlemas, and all the other premises on the Lady-day following, and agreed to quit the same according to the terms of entry as aforesaid, and the rent was reserved half-yearly, at Michaelmas and Lady-day, the tenancy was held to commence from Lady-day, with a privilege for the in-coming tenant to enter on the arable land at Candlemas, for the purpose of ploughing (i). Under an agreement of demise of a dwelling-house, mills, and other buildings, for the purpose of carrying on a manufactory, together with meadow, pasture, and bleaching grounds; to commence, as to the meadow, from the 25th of December last, and as to the pasture, from the 25th of March next; and as to the housing, mills, and all the rest of the premises, from the 1st of May, reserving the first year's rent on the day of Pentecost, and the other half-year's at Martinmas, it was held, that the substantial subject of the demise being the house and buildings for the manufacture, which were to be entered upon the 1st of May, that was the substantial time of entry to which a notice to quit ought to refer, and not to the 25th of December, when the in-coming tenant had liberty of entering on the meadow, which was merely ancillary to the other and principal subject of the demise; and therefore, that a notice to quit, served on the 28th of September, was sufficient (k). Where the time of entry depends on the terms of a deed or other written instrument, no parol evidence can be admitted to vary the terms. Where the demise was

v. Raffan, 6 Esp. C. 4. And see Kemp v. Derrett, 3 Camp. 510. Where the tenant entered in the middle of a quarter under an agreement to pay rent for the half quarter and quarterly, it seems that the tenancy commences from the preceding quarter-day. Doe v. Selwyn, Adams on Ejec. 129. But a quarterly reservation of rent does not dispense with a half-year's notice. Shirley v. Newman, 1 Esp. C. 226. Where the entry was in the middle of a quarter, and payment was made for the fraction between the time of entry and Christmas, and the rent was afterwards paid at Christmas and Midsummer, it was held to be a holding from Christmas. Doe v. Johnson, 6 Esp. C. 10. Notice on the 28th September, to quit at the ensuing 25th March, is good; the customary half-year is sufficient. Roe v. Doe,[1] 6 Bing. 574. The tenant came in at the half-quarter, and at quarter-day paid the half-quarter's rent, and from thence paid quarterly; a notice to quit at the last quarter-day of the current year is sufficient, notwithstanding a previous notice expiring at the half-quarter. Doe v. Stapleton,[2] 3 C. & P. 275. And see Doe v. Johnson, 6 Esp. C. 10. Notice to quit to a weekly tenant "on F. provided his tenancy expired on F., or otherwise at the end of his tenancy next after one week from the date of the notice," is sufficient. Doe v. Scott,[3] 6 Bing. 362.

(c) Roe v. Wilkinson, Co. Litt. by Butler, 270, b. Roe v. Charnock, Peake's Cas. 4.

(d) 1 T. R. 162.

(e) Doe v. Spence, 6 East, 120. Doe v. Lea, 11 East, 312. Doe v. Howard, 11 East, 498. See Co. Litt. 68; Allen, 4; 2 Ld. Raym. 1008; 2 Jones, 5; 2 Salk. 413, 4; 3 Burr. 1603.

(f) Doe v. Howard, 11 East, 498. (g) 2 Bl. 1224, cited 2 East, 383.

(h) Ibid. This case is said to have been overruled by Lord Kenyon, at Nisi Prius, in the case of Doe ex dem. Lord Grey de Wilton, where the defendant entered upon the arable lands at Candlemas, and the buildings and pastures at May-day, the rent payable at Michaelmas and Lady-day, and the notice to quit was given six months before May-day, but not six months before Candlemas; and Lord Kenyon nonsuited the plaintiff. But it does not appear in that case whether six months notice previous to Lady-day had been given. See the observations of Grose, J., 2 East, 383.

(i) Doe v. Spence, 6 East, 120. (k) Doe v. Watkins, 7 East, 551.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 169. [2]Id. xiv. 303. [3]Id. xix. 104.

of lands to be held from the Feast of St. Michael, which must be taken to mean from New Michaelmas (l), it was held that evidence could not be admitted to show that Old Michaelmas was meant (m). Under an agreement between the *landlord and tenant that the other party may determine *417
the tenancy by giving a quarter's notice, such notice must expire on or Proof of notice to quit.
before the day of the year on which the tenancy commenced (n). According to the ordinary rule the words of a demise are to be taken fortius contra proferentum, and therefore when two periods of quitting are designated by the same words, the tenant shall have his option (o). Less than six months notice will not be sufficient, although it be accepted by the landlord, unless there be a surrender in writing or by operation of law (p).

The service of notice in writing is usually proved by the agent who served it, who produces a duplicate original (q), signed by the landlord; if there be no duplicate it seems that notice should be given to produce the original notice (r). If the notice has been attested, the attesting witness should be called (s). It is not, however, essential that the notice should have been in writing (t), although served on the behalf of a corporation aggregate (u): it is sufficient in such case to prove that the notice was given by the steward of a corporation aggregate, without showing that he had a power of attorney for the purpose, the adoption of the notice, by the bringing the action, being sufficient proof of his authority (x); and it seems that an agent who has authority to let lands and receive rents has also authority to give a sufficient notice to quit (y); as in the instance of a receiver appointed by the Court of Chancery.

Where a lease contained a proviso for its determination by either landlord or tenant, their respective heirs and executors, on giving six months notice under his or their respective hands, a notice signed by two of the landlord's executors, on behalf of themselves and a third executor, was held to be insufficient, for the proviso required the signature of all three, and the notice was not sustainable on the general rule of law, that one joint-tenant may bind the rest by an act done for their benefit, since there was no evi(l) Doe v. Vince, 2 Camp. 257.

(m) Doe v. Spicer, 11 East, 312. Secus, it is said, where the letting is by parol. Doe v. Benson,[1] 4 B. & A. 588; supra, tit. Custom. And where the demise is by deed, extrinsic evidence is inadmissible to show that by such words New Michaelmas was meant. Doe v. Lea, 11 East, 312. Smith v. Walton,[2] 8 Bing. 235. But where the letting has been by parol, it has been held that evidence was admissible of the custom of the country to show that, by Lady-day, Old Lady-day was meant. Doe v. Benson,[1] 4 B. & A. 588. Furley v. Wood, Runn. Ej. 112. 1 Esp. C. 198. In the case of Doe v. Benson above cited, the demise appears to have been not only by parol in the technical sense without deed, but also without writing; Abbott, C. J., and Holroyd, J., lay stress on the solemnity of a demise by deed, but the latter adds, that the letting being by parol, the party is at liberty to explain the words used. So evidence is admissible to explain the intention of the parties in such cases. Denn v. Hopkinson,[3] 3 D. & R. 507.

(n) Doe v. Donovan, 2 Camp. 78; 1 Taunt. 555.

(o) Per Heath, J., in Doe v. Donovan, 1 Taunt. 556, citing Dann v. Spurrier, 3 B. & P. 399.

(p) Johnstone v. Huddlestone,[4] 4 B. & C. 922. See Frauds, St. of.

(q) Kine v. Beaument,[5] 3 B. & C. 288.

(r) But see Ackland v. Pearce, 2 Camp. 261; supra, tit. Bills of Exchange; Grove v. Ware,[6] 2 Starkie's C. 174; supra, tit. Attorney; infra, tit. Notice.

(s) Doe v. Deanford, 2 M. & S. 62.

(t) Doe v. Crick, 5 Esp. 106. Secus, where by agreement a written notice is required, Timmins v. Rowlinson, 3 Burr. 1603, or by the provisions of a power. Legg v. Benison, Willes, 43.

(u) Roe, on the dem. of the Dean and Chapter of Rochester v. Pierce, 2 Camp. 96.

(x) Ibid.; 2 Camp. 96, cor. Macdonald, C. B.

(y) Doe v. Read, 12 East, 57; and see 5 Burr. 2694. Doe v. Wood, and Doe v. Blair, MSS. Doe v. Mizem, per Pattison, J., 2 Mo. & R. 56. But a mere receiver of rents has no power to determine a tenancy. Doe v. Walters,[7] 10 B. & C. 611, per Parke, J. The mere agent of an agent cannot give such notice. Doe v. Robinson,[8] 3 Bing. N. C. 677.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 527. [2]Id. xxi. 286. [3]Id. xvi. 177. [4]Id. x. 471. [5]Id. vii. 440. [6]Id. iii. 300. [7]Id. xxi. 139. [8]Id. xxxii. 278.

dence that the determination of the tenancy was for the benefit of all (z). And it was held, that the subsequent assent by the third executor did not make the notice good by relation, since the general principle did not apply to cases where the intermediate conduct of the parties would be affected by the ratification (a). Under a proviso in a lease, so that if either of the parties should be desirous to determine it, it should be lawful for either his execu-*418 tors or *administrators to do it, the devisee of the lessor is entitled to give such notice (b). If four joint-tenants jointly demise the land from year to year, such as give notice to quit may recover their several shares in ejectment upon their several demises (c). Where a leesee underlet a part, and gave up the remainder to the lessor, it was held that the latter could not determine the sub-lessee's tenancy by notice, since there was no privity between them (d). Proof of service at the dwelling-house of the tenant, although not upon the demised premises, is sufficient (e), and so is service on a servant on the premises (f), to warrant the presumption that the notice was received by the tenant. So where, on the tenant's having left the premises, notice is served on the party who takes possession after him, for it may be presumed that he came in as assignee (g). But after the death of the tenant, in an action against the widow, proof of leaving the notice at the dwelling-house without any proof of delivery to a servant, or that the defendant lived there, was held to be insufficient (h). Upon a joint demise to two, one of whom resides on the premises, service upon him is sufficient to enable the jury to presume that it reached the other (i). If the notice has been signed by an attesting witness, he must be called to prove it (k); and it is not sufficient in such a case to show that upon service of the notice the tenant read it over, and did not object to it (l). In the case of a corporation, notice should be addressed to the corporation, and served upon the proper officer (m).

It must appear on the face of the notice thus proved, that the tenant was sufficiently apprized by it of the landlord's intention to determine the tenancy at the expiration of the current year (n). A notice to quit at Lady-

(z) Right v. Cuthell, 5 East, 491. (a) Ibid.

(b) Roe v. Hagly, 12 East, 464.

(c) Doe d. Wayman v. Chaplin, 3 Taunt. 420. The several demises to the plaintiff in ejectment sever the joint-tenancy. Per Ld. Ellenborough, Doe v. Read, 12 East, 57. And where one gives notice in the name of all, it is a good notice for all. Doe v. Summersett,[1] 1 B. & Ad. 135; and, as it seems, such a notice is sufficient to determine the tenancy, although all the co-tenants did not concur, Ib. 140, and see 2 Man. & R. 434. Notice given by a stranger professing to act as agent for several joint-tenants, is not available unless it be ratified before the notice begins to run. Doe v. Walters,[2] 10 B. & C. 626. Contra. Goodtitle v. Woodward,[3] 3 B. & A. 689. A landlord having let premises to a firm in which he is a co-partner, may eject on notice given. Doe v. Francis, 4 M. & W. 331.

(d) Pleasant v. Benson, 14 East, 234. If the lessee, on receiving notice to quit, gives notice to his sub-lessees to quit, and they refuse, ejectment may be maintained against him for so much as his sub-lessees refuse to give up. Roe v. Wiggs, 2 N. R. 330.

(e) See Lord Kenyon's observations in Jones v Griffiths, 4 T. R. 464.

(f) Jones v. Marsh, 4 T. R. 464; Runn. 112; 4 T. R. 361. It is sufficient, although the tenant, by reason of absence, was not informed of it till within half a year of its expiration. Doe v. Dunbar,[4] 1 M. & M. 10. But service on a relation of the sub-tenant on the premises is insufficient, although it be directed to the lessee. Doe v. Levi, Adams Ej. 115.

(g) Doe v. Williams,[5] 6 B. & C. 41. (h) Doe v. Lucas, 5 Esp. C. 153.

(i) Doe v. Watkins, 7 East, 551. So a parol notice to one has been deemed to be sufficient. 5 Esp. C. 196. Doe v. Crick, Co. Litt. 49, b.

(k) 2 M. & S. 62. (l) Doe v. Durnford, 2 M. & S. 62.

(m) Doe v. Woodman, 8 East, 428.

(n) A notice, it seems would be sufficient, requiring the tenant to quit "as soon as by law he might." Per Ld. Abinger, in Good v. Howels, 4 M. & W. 199. A notice, however, will be insufficient, if it be too general, as if it be to quit forthwith, or henceforth, or simply "to quit" generally. Ib. Or be in the alternative to quit or hold on a new agreement; and therefore, although a notice to quit, or I shall insist on double rent, is good as referring only to the penalty of the stat. 4 G. 2, c. 28, against holding over (although *day generally, is a sufficient notice for Old Lady-day (o). Notice to quit on the 25th of March, or 8th of April, is sufficient, if it be delivered six months before the former day, although it be doubtful which of these was the day of entry (p). Where the lease was by parol from Lady-day, and notice was given to quit at Old Lady-day, it was held that parol evidence was admissible of the custom of the country to show that by Lady-day the parties meant Old Lady-day (q).

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xx. 361. [2]Id. xxi. 139. [3]Id. v. 424. [4]Id. xxii. 233. [5]Id. xiii. 105.

Where the tenancy of land began on the 2d of February, and of the houses on the 1st of May, a notice was given on the 22d of October to quit both land and houses "at the expiration of half a year from this notice, or at such other time or times as your present year's holding of the premises or any part thereof respectively shall expire, after the expiration of half a year from this notice," was held to be sufficient to determine the tenancy of the houses on the 2d of April 1834, and of the lands the 2d of February 1835 (r).

But a notice to quit part of the demised premises (s).

Where A. was tenant of the premises, but left them several years ago, and B. then entered and occupied, but no rent had been paid since A.'s occupation; it was held that it was sufficient to serve notice to quit on B., for an assignment to him might be presumed (t).

A mis-description of the premises in the notice will not be fatal, unless the party be misled by it. Where by mistake the Waterman's Arms was inserted for the Bricklayer's Arms, the variance was held to be unimportant (u). Although the notice be directed to the tenant by a wrong Christian name, yet if he keep it the mistake is waived (x). A notice requiring the tenant of lands demised to the rector and churchwardens of a parish in trust, signed by the rector and churchwardens, and requiring the tenant to deliver up the premises to the churchwardens for the time being (there being no such corporation), has been held to be bad (y). The plaintiff, instead of proving the notice to quit, may show that the tenant has denied his (the landlord's) title (z), and holds adverse-its terms were mistaken), was held to be good; yet if the notice had been to quit, "or else that you agree to pay double rent," it would have been insufficient. Per Ld. Mansfield, in Doe v. Jackson, Doug. 175. Objections of this nature, however, are reluctantly admitted by the courts. Doe v. Archer, 14 East, 245. And an obvious mistake will not avoid the notice. Where notice was given at Michaelmas 1795 to quit at Lady-day which will be in the year 1794, and the tenant was told, on service of the notice, that he must quit on the next Lady-day, it was held to be sufficient. Doe v. Kightley, 7 T. R. 63; and see Doe v. Culliford, 4 B. & R. 248.

(o) Dunn v. Walker, Peake's Ev. 367. Dunn v. Wane, Ibid. Doe v. Vince, 2 Camp. 256. Doe v. Brookes, 2 Camp. 257. See Furley v. Wood, 1 Esp. C. 198; Doe v. Lea, 11 East, 312. So a notice to quit on the 25th of March or the 8th of April, is sufficient, the disjunctive being used not to give an alternative, but to quit a holding from either old or new Lady-day. Doe v. Wrightman, 4 Esp. c. 5.

(p) Doe v. Wrightman, 4 Esp. c. 5.

(q) Doe d. Hall v. Benson,[1] 4 B. & A. 588. Secus, where the letting is by deed. Doe v. Lea, 11 East, 312. And see Furley v. Wood, 1 Esp. C. 198; supra, tit. CUSTOM.

(r) Doe v. Smith,[2] 5 Ad. & Ell. 350.

(s) Doe v. Archer, 14 East, 245. Doe v. Church, 3 Camp. 71. For the lessor cannot split the tenancy, determining it as to part and continuing it as to the rest; but the Court will, if the notice be capable of such a construction, construe it as putting an end to the tenancy altogether. Doe v. Archer, 14 East, 245.

(t) Doe d. Morris v. Williams,[3] 6 B. & C. 41. Doe v. Murless, 6 M. & S. 110.

(u) Doe v. Cox, 4 Esp. C. 185. (x) Doe v. Spiller, 6 Esp. C. 70.

(y) Doe v. Fairclough, 6 M. & S. 40.

(z) B. N. P. 96; Cowp. 622. What shall be deemed to amount to a disclaimer is usually a question of law. According to Best, J., notice is in no case necessary, unless a tenancy be admitted on both sides. Doe v. Frowd,[4] 4 Bing. 557. If a tenant denies his tenancy, there can be no necessity for terminating that which does not exist. Ib. The question is, has he denied the landlord's title? The act must be one inconsistent with the landlord's title; the mere paying rent to another does not operate as a forfeiture of the lease. Doe v. Pasquali, Peake's C. 96. But if a tenant pay rent to a person claiming to be landlord, and allow him as such to branch and cut the trees, the submission to such acts amounts to an acknowledgement of title.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 527. [2]Id. xxxi. 353. [3]Id. xiii. 105. [4]Id. xv. 70.

ly *(a); but if it appear that the tenant has refused to quit on account of a dispute between contending claimants, notice will still be necessary (b). Such disclaimer, to be available, must be proved to have occurred before the demise (c).

Tenant at will.

In the case of a tenancy at will or otherwise, where the party is lawfully in possession (d), the plaintiff must prove an entry upon the premises, or a notice to quit, or demand of possession, or some other (e) act done by him to determine the tenancy, previous to the day of the demise in the declaration (f). The confession of the defendant by entering into the common rule, is not evidence to show such determination (g). One put into possession *421 *upon an agreement for the purchase of land, cannot be ousted of the possession before the lawful possession has been determined, by a demand, Per Ld. Tenterden, in Grubb v. Grubb,[1] 10 B. & C. 824. Where a tenant at will dies, and his heir enters and claims the land as his own, notice is not necessary. Doe v. Thompson, 1 N. & P. 215. Where the defendant, holding under a tenant for life, in answer to a claim by the plaintiff as heir, stated, that, he held the premises as tenant to S.; that he had never considered the plaintiff as his landlord; that he should be ready to pay rent to any one proved to be entitled to it, and that, without disputing the plaintiff's pedigree, he must decline taking upon himself to decide upon his claim, without more satisfactory proof in a legal manner: he was held to have disclaimed. Doe v. Frowd,[2] 4 Bing. 557. It is a disclaimer if the tenant say to the landlord, "I have no rent for you, for A. has ordered me to pay you none." Doe v. Pitman, 2 N. & M. 678. Where the tenant gives possession, and also the lease, to one who claims hostilely, it is a forfeiture of the lease. Doe v. Flynn, 1 C. M. & R. 137. Where the disclaimer is merely as to part, the plaintiff may recover pro tanto; and so where ejectment being brought against several, in respect of several tenements, the plaintiff may recover as to those who have disclaimed, although he fail as to the rest. Doe v. Clarke, Peake's Add. C. 239. A defendant, holding under a tenant for life, on his death receives a letter from the plaintiff, claiming as heir and demanding rent; he answers that the defendant was tenant to S., and that he never considered the plaintiff his landlord, but would pay rent to the party entitled: held to be a disclaimer of plaintiff's title. There the lessor of plaintiff was, on death of tenant for life, entitled to treat defendant as a trespasser; and a notice to quit is only necessary where a tenancy is admitted on both sides. Doe v. Frowd,[2] 4 Bing. 557. A letter, dated June, 1813, disclaiming all connection with the lessor of the plaintiff (to whom he had once paid rent) for many years, is sufficient evidence to support a demise laid in May, 1813. Doe v. Grubb,[1] 10 B. & C. 817. See Doe d. Ld. Cawdor v. King, Exchequer.

(a) A mere oral disclaimer, without any act done, is insufficient. Per Parke, B. in Doe v. Stannion, 1 M. & W. 702. And where the tenant, having made a bargain for the purchase of the property from his landlord, refused to give it up on demand, saying he had bought and would keep it, and was ready to pay the money; it was ruled that it was no disclaimer superseding notice. Ib. Where any act has been done disclaiming the tenancy, and setting the landlord at defiance, as where the tenant attorns to another, the landlord may treat him as a trespasser. Doe v. Whittick, Gow. 195. Whether he be tenant merely from year to year, or for a longer term. Doe v. Flynn, 1 C. M. & R. 137.

(b) Doe v. Pasquali, Peake's C. 196.

(c) Doe v. Litherland, 1 Ad. & Ell. 784. Doe v. Cawdor, 1 C. M. & R. 398. So an admission of a disclaimer is insufficient, unless it be of a disclaimer before the demise. Ib.

(d) Denn v. Rawlins, 10 East, 261. Doe v. Jackson,[3] 1 B. & C. 448. Doe v. Stannion, 1 M. & W. 700. A party suffered to occupy cannot be deemed a trespasser. Per Parke, B. Ib.

(e) Goodtitle v. Herbert, 4 T. R. 680.

(f) Anything amounting to a determination of the will is, in the case of a tenancy at will or permissive occupation, equivalent to a demand of possession. Where a purchaser, let into possession, refuses to complete his purchase, and assigns his interest, the assignment, without any demand, amounts to a determination of the will. Doe v. Abbott. Winton Summ. Ass. 1838; Roscoe on Ev. 437; and see Doe v. Price,[4] 9 Bing. 356. Ball v. Cullimore, 2 C. M. & R. 120. Doe v. Thompson, 444. See further, tit. VENDOR & VENDEE. Such a demand may be made on the wife of the tenant at will, on the premises. Doe v. Street,[5] 2 Ad. & Ell. 329.

(g) Right v. Beard, 13 East, 210. In the case of a tenant by sufferance, it is sufficient that the owner make an entry on the premises previous to ejectment, without any demand of possession. Doe v. Lawder,[6] 1 Starkie's C. 308. In the case of Weakly v. Bucknell, Cowp. 473, where the defendant had had possession for eighteen years, under an unstamped agreement, for a lease for twenty-one years, and a half year's notice to quit had been duly served, it was held that the plaintiff could not recover, inasmuch as it would merely give the Court of Chancery an opportunity of undoing all again. Qu. In Doe d. Nowell v. Adam, where the defendant was let into possession under an agreement for sale, with stipulations that the purchase money should be paid by instalments, and some of the instalments had been paid, but default had been made as to others, it was held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover possession. K. B. Easter T. 1819. Where A. agreed to let a house to B. for life, supposing it to be occupied by B., or a tenant agreeable to A., and a clause was to be added to give B.'s son the option to possess the house when of age, it was held that this was a mere agreement for a term, and that on B.'s death A. might recover the possession from B.'s executrix. Doe d. Bromfield v. Smith, 6 East. 530. Doe d. Oldershaw v. Breach, 6 Esp. C. 106.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxi. 174. [2]Id. x. 70. [3]Id. viii. 126. [4]Id. xxiii. 305. [5]Id. xxix. 108. [6]Id. ii. 402.

or otherwise (h). And so it is where a tenancy at will is created by means of a lease for four years, without writing (i).

In ejectment for a forfeiture by the tenant or his assignee, the plaintiff must first prove the lease (k), and secondly, the breach of it (l). Forfeiture.

(h) Right v. Beard, 13 East, 210. Newby v. Jackson,[1] 1 B. & C. 448. [9 Johns. 330; 10 Johns. 335.] So where the party is in possession under a void or imperfect lease or conveyance. Doe v. Fernside, 1 Wils. 276. Doe v. Edgar,[2] 2 Bing. N. C. 503. Or, where the tenant continues in possession after the expiration of a former lease, and pending negotiations for a new one. Doe v. Stennett, 2 Esp. C. 717. And in general, one lawfully in possession.

(i) Goodtitle v. Herbert, 4 T. R. 680.

(k) A clause of re-entry is to be construed strictly. Per Ld. Tenterden, Doe v. Marchetti,[3] 1 B. & Ad. 720. But an agreement in a demise not to assign is a condition for the breach of which the lessor may maintain ejectment. Doe v. Watt,[4] 8 B. & C. 308. Where an underlease contained a proviso, that for breach of covenant the lessor and lessee might enter, it was held that the lessee alone might take advantage of the proviso. Doe v. White,[5] 4 Bing. 276.

(l) The defendant, on motion, is entitled to a particular of the breaches. Doe v. Phillips, 6 T. R. 597. As to proof of breaches, vide supra, COVENANT. A covenant not to let, assign, transfer, set over, or otherwise part with premises demised, is not broken by the depositing the lease as a security for goods sold. Doe d. Pitt v. Hogg,[6] 4 D. & R. 226. A lessee who covenants to pay rent and to repair, with an express exception of casualties by fire, is liable on the covenant for rent, though the premises are burnt down, and not repaired by the lessor after notice. Belfour v. Weston, 1 T. R. 300. Camden v. Morton, 1 Sel. N. P. 464. Hare v. Groves, 3 Anst. 687. Lessee covenanting to repair generally, is bound to rebuild, though the subject of repair be destroyed by accidental fire. Bullock v. Dommett, 6 T. R. 650. Digby v. Atkinson, 4 Camp. 275. So if a party covenant to keep a bridge in repair for a speeific period, and it be destroyed by an extraordinary flood. Brecknock Navigation v. Pritchard, 6 T. R. 750. A covenant substantially to repair, uphold and maintain a house, extends to inside painting. Marke v. Noyes,[7] 1 C. & P. 265. Notice given to repair in three months, according to the terms of a covenant, is evidence of the waver of a breach of a general covenant to repair. Doe d. Morecraft v. Meux,[8] 4 B. & C. 606. Note, that this was distinguished from the case of Roe d. Goatly v. Paine, 2 Camp. 550, where the language of the notice was to repair forthwith, which did not (per Bayley, J.) prevent the plaintiff from bringing his action at any time. If a tenant set up a title, or assist another in setting up a title hostile to the landlord, it is a forfeiture. Doe v. Flynn, 2 Cr. M. & R. 137. The mere act of paying rent to a third person does not operate as a forfeiture of the lease. Doe v. Parker, Gow. 180. An omission to repair is not an act done within the meaning of a clause of re-entry for doing or causing to be done any act, &c. Doe v. Stevens,[9] 3 B. & Ad. 299. By a memorandum of agreement to let as on lease, lands, part in possession and part as lives should fall in, it is "stipulated and conditioned, that the said lessee should not assign, transfer, underlet, or part with any part of the said lands, otherwise than to his wife, child, or children:" these words create a condition, for breach of which the landlord may maintain ejectment, and it is immaterial that the demise was by an instrument not under seal. Doe v. Watt,[10] 8 B. & C. 308. And see Cro. Eliz. 242, 384, 386; Co. Litt. 203. A covenant to insure, and keep the premises insured during the term, and to deposit the policy with the lessor, with a clause of re-entry for breach of any of the covenants, extends to the lessee, his executors and assigns: and it is a breach if the premises are left uninsured during any part of the term, and a continuing breach for every portion of the time during which they are left uninsured; where, therefore, the lessor distrained on the 30th of September for rent then due, and the premises being uninsured, brings an ejectment upon a demise laid on the 24th October, although the distress was a recognition of a tenancy subsisting on the 30th September, and a waver of any forfeiture previously incurred, yet the lessor is entitled to recover on a forfeiture incurred by the breach for not insuring between the 30th September and the day of the demise. Doe d. Flower v. Peck, 1 B. & Ad. 428. Covenant not to convert or use rooms in a dwelling for certain purposes; for a continuing breach, after a receipt of rent with knowledge of the previous breach, the lessor may still take advantage of the forfeiture. Doe d. Ambler v. Woodbridge,[11] 9 B. & C. 376. Covenant not to erect or alter buildings without consent in writing of the landlord; a breach, and omission to reinstate the premises in their former condition, within thirty days after notice, is not a cause of forfeiture within the meaning of the clause giving power of re-entry if the tenant should make default in the performance of any or either of the clauses, such a proviso being confined to the not performing acts to be performed by the lessee. Semble, where the original lessee has underlet, and afterwards surrendered and taken a new lease of the landlord, without any surrender by the under-tenant, the intention and effect of the 4 Geo. 2, c. 28, s. 6, is to place all parties, as to every matter, in the same situation as if no surrender had taken place. Doe d. Palk v. Marchetti,[12] 1 B. & Ad. 715. An agreement was made to demise premises for a term "at and under the clear yearly rent of —l.," and the lessee agreed to repair and insure, &c.; it was also provided, that in case of the rent being in arrear for twenty-one days, the lessor should have the like power of re-entry, in case of breaches of any of the agreements therein mentioned, as if a lease had been granted; it was held that the former part amounted to an agreement to pay that rent, and that assumpsit would lie for it, and that upon the latter clause, although inartificially expressed, the lessor might recover the premises for non-payment of the rent. Doe v. Kneller,[13] 4 C. & P. 3. Upon a covenant in a building lease to erect certain houses within twelve months, and power in default for the lessor to re-enter; held, that there being a clear ground of forfeiture, the steward of the lessor having knowledge that the defendant, after the day

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. viii. 126. [2] Id. xxix. 402. [3] Id. xx. 480. [4] Id. xv. 225. [5] Id. xiii. 432. [6] Id. xvi. 196. [7] Id. xi. 386. [8] Id. x. 417. [9] Id. xxiii. 75. [10] Id. xv. 225. [11] Id. xvii. 399. [12] Id. xx. 480. [13] Id. xix. 248.

*Although the forfeiture be in not performing a covenant, it lies on the plaintiff to give some evidence of non-performance (m).

In ejectment against the assignee on a clause of re-entry for non-payment of rent, it has been held to be sufficient to prove the execution of a counterpart, without proving the original lease, or notice to produce it (n).

2dly. Determination by forfeiture (A). Where the landlord is entitled to re-enter for a forfeiture, it is unnecessary to prove an actual entry (o), or demand of possession (p). In general, where the covenant is to do an act, the plaintiff ought to give some evidence, it is said, of the omission to do the act (q).

In ejectment, upon a condition for re-entry for non-payment of rent, the landlord must prove an actual demand (r) of the rent, although no one be there to pay it (s), of the precise rent (t), on the precise day (u); upon the *423 demised land, at the most notorious place upon it; *at a convenient time before sunset (v), by the landlord, or by a person duly authorized by him to demand it by a power of attorney (w), which he produced at the time, or which he had ready to produce, having notified it to the tenant (x).

The same formalities must still be observed where there is a sufficient distress on the premises, unless they be expressly dispensed with by the terms of the lease (y).

Non-payment of rent.

By the stat. 4 Geo. 2, c. 28, which was made to relieve the landlord from the difficulties under which he laboured at common law, the landlord may, when one half-year's rent is in arrear (z), and no sufficient distress is stated, had proceeded for a short time in completing the works, it was a waver of the right of re-entry. Doe v. Brindley,[1] 12 Moore, 37. A lessee who leases for the whole term on condition, may enter on condition broken. Doe v. Bateman, 2 B. & A. 168. So may a feoffer in fee. Ib.

(m) Doe v. Robson,[2] 2 C. & P. 245.

(n) Roe v. Davis, 7 East, 363; and see Nash v. Turner, 1 Esp. C. 217.

(o) It has been so held since the time of Lord Holt. 2 Will. Saund. 287, n. 16.

(p) Thus where the term is to depend upon the lessee's actual occupation, and he has become bankrupt, no demand of possession from his assignees, who have taken possession, is necessary. Doe d. Lockwood v. Clarke, 8 East, 185. Nor is a demand of possession, as it seems, necessary in any case where the lessee of the plaintiff has a legal right to enter, independently of any contract or demise on his part. See Doe v. Bradbury,[3] 2 D. & R. 706; Doe d. Shirley v. Carter,[4] 1 R. & M. 237; supra, 303, note (g).

(q) Doe d. Chandless v. Robson, 2 Esp. C. 245. Cor. Abbot, L. C. J.

(r) Proof that the lessor went upon the land, and said to an under-tenant, "I am come to demand of you such a sum for my rent," is sufficient. Doe v. Brydges,[5] 2 D. & R. 29. The grantee of a rentcharge, with power in default of payment to enter and receive the rents, may maintain ejectment, although no previous demand has been made. Doe v. Horsely,[6] 1 Ad. & Ell. 766.

(s) Kidwelly v. Brand, Plow. 69; 1 Roll. Ab. 458. Covenant by lessee, that if rent be unpaid twenty-eight days, lessor may re-enter; qu. whether a demand of rent be first necessary. Smith v. Spooner, 3 Taunt. 246.

(t) 1 Leon. 305; Cro. Eliz. 209, Fabian v. Winston. [Sav. 121, S. C.]

(u) See the cases, 2 Will. Saund. 287, n. 16; Doe v. Paul,[7] 3 C. & P. 613.

(v) Ibid. and 7 T. R. 117; 7 East, 363; Cro. Eliz. 209; Harg. C. Litt. 202. [See Jackson v. Harrison, 17 Johns. 64.]

(w) Co. Litt. 201; 1 Roll. Ab. 458; Mees v. King, 2 B. & B. 514; Forrest, 19.

(x) Roe v. Davis, 7 East, 363. (y) Doe v. Masters,[8] 2 B. & C. 490.

(z) It is sufficient if at the trial the plaintiff prove that half a year's rent is in arrear, although he has claimed more in his particular of demand. Tenny v. Moody,[9] 3 Bing. 3. A tenant may save the forfeiture under the statute, by a tender of the rent. If at the time of service of the declaration the tenant be ready to pay the rent, although he did not tender it when it became due, the statute gives him the same benefit as if it had been tendered at the time. Per Holroyd, J., Doe v. Shawcross,[10] 3 B. & C. 756.

(A) (In ejectment founded on waste, a judge is not authorized to instruct the jury that the acts complained of as working a forfeiture, have that effect simply because done without the permission of the landlord. The question should be submitted to the jury to decide whether the acts done were in truth prejudicial to the plaintiff's interest; waste being that which does a permanent injury to the inheritance. Jackson v. Tibbits, 3 Wend. 341.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxii. 429. [2]Id. xii. 111. [3]Id. xvi. 115. [4]Id. xxi. 426. [5]Id. xvi. 66. [6]Id. xxviii. 201. [7]Id. xiv. 483. [8]Id. ix. 158. [9]Id. xi. 4. [10]Id. x. 223.

to be found, and he has a right to enter for non-payment (a), serve a declaration in ejectment, or, in case it cannot be legally served, may affix it to the door of the demised messuage, or upon some notorious place on the lands comprised in the declaration, which service, or affixing of declaration, shall stand instead of a demand and re-entry. Under this statute, the plaintiff, after proof of the lease, and of service of declaration (b), or that it was affixed as the statute directs, must prove that there was not sufficient distress upon the premises. Proof must be given that every part of the premises was searched (c). Unless the tenant prevent such search by locking the door; for a distress which cannot be made without a trespass, is not available (d) within the Act.

Where the rent was due on Lady-day, and the declaration served on the 6th of June, and by the lease the lessor was empowered to re-enter in fourteen days after the time for payment, evidence that the plaintiff's broker went upon the premises in May and found nothing to distrain upon, was held to be presumptive evidence that there was no sufficient distress on the 2d of May, the day of the demise (e). On a clause not to assign or underlet, proof of occupation of the premises by a person appearing to be tenant, is, it is said, sufficient primâ facie evidence to throw it on the defendant to explain the nature of such possession (f).

*By the stat. 11 G. 4 and 1 W. 4, c. 70, s. 36, where a tenancy ends or right of action accrues during or after Hilary or Trinity terms, the lessor may at any time within ten days after serve a declaration in ejectment (the action being brought in any of His Majesty's Courts at Westminster) entitled on the day next after the day of the demise in the declaration, &c., provided that at least six clear days notice of trial be given. The not commencing the action within ten days is a mere irregularity, and cannot be objected at nisi prius (g). *424

By the provisions of a late stat. (h), if it shall appear that the tenant has been served with due notice of trial, the landlord may, on the production of the consent-rule, and proof of his title to the whole or part of the premises Damages.

(a) Where the proviso was, that if the rent was in arrear twenty-one days, the lessor might re-enter, "although no formal or legal demand shall be made for payment thereof," it was held that the landlord was entitled to recover without either demand or re-entry. Doe d. Harris v. Masters,[1] 2 B. & C. 490. Lease reserving rent payable quarterly, proviso if rent be in arrear twenty-one days, being lawfully demanded, the lessor may re-enter, five quarters being in arrear, and no sufficient distress, the lessor may re-enter without demand made. Doe v. Alexander, 2 M. & S. 525. Proviso in a lease for the determination of the term on non-payment of rent, it is not competent to the lessee to determine the lease by non-payment. Reid v. Parsons,[2] 2 Chitty's R. 247.

(b) The statute says, that the service of the declaration in ejectment shall stand in the place of the demand and re-entry; and the service of declaration has relation to the day when the landlord ought to have entered, as at common law. And therefore it is no ground of nonsuit that the declaration was served on a day subsequent to the day of the demise, the day of the demise being subsequent to the day on which the lessor ought to have entered at common law. Doe d. Lawrence v. Shawcross,[3] 3 B. & C. 754.

(c) Per Heath, J., Hereford Summer Assizes, 1800, and afterwards by the Court of Exchequer. See[4] 2 B. & B. 514. Rees v. King, 2 B. & B. 514; Forest, 19.

(d) Per Ld. Tenterden in Doe v. Tyson,[5] M. & M. 77.

(e) Doe v. Fuchau, 15 East, 286.

(f) Doe d. Hindley v. Rickarby, 5 Esp. C. 4. Doe v. Williams,[6] 6 B. & C. 41. And the declarations of such a person have been admitted in evidence. But see Doe v. Payne,[7] 1 Starkie's C. 86, where it was held to be insufficient to prove that the premises were in possession of a stranger, who said that they had been demised by another stranger.

(g) Doe v. Brindley,[8] 4 B. & Ad. 84.

(h) 1 Geo. 4, c. 87, s. 2. The statute applies only to cases where the term has come to a natural end, or been extinguished by a regular notice to quit: where the tenant had surrendered the lease, but afterwards refused to quit, the Court refused the rule calling upon him under the statute to enter into the recognizance. Doe d. Tindal v. Roe,[9] 2 B. & Ad. 922. Notice of trial must be proved in an action brought in the county palatine of Lancaster. Per Holroyd and Park, Js.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ix. 158. [2]Id. xviii. 322. [3]Id. x. 223. [4]Id. vi. 223. [5]Id. xxii. 256. [6]Id. xiii. 105. [7]Id. ii. 307. [8]Id. xxiv. 28. [9]Id. xxii. 211.

mentioned in the declaration, give evidence of and recover the mesne profits which shall have accrued from the day of the determination of the tenant's interest down to the time of the verdict, or some preceding day specially mentioned therein.

Evidence for the defendant(A).

It is a general rule, that a tenant shall not be permitted to dispute his landlord's title (i) (B), nor a mortgagor to impeach his own title at the time of the mortgage (k). Nevertheless it is competent to a tenant to show that the landlord's title has expired (l) subsequently to the demise. And as the

*425 *tenant cannot deny the landlord's title, neither can any one controvert it who claims by him. A third person cannot defend as landlord where the tenant came into the possession under an agreement with the lessor of the plaintiff (which has expired), and paid rent to him, but afterwards disclaimed (m).

(i) The estoppel of a tenant exists during his occupation only; during that he is not permitted to deny his landlord's title, for he has a meritorious consideration. A tenant under a tenant for life cannot dispute the title of the reversioner, for they are the same title (Doe v. Whitroe,[1] 1 D. & R. 1); neither can a tenant dispute the title of the lessee of the landlord. Rennie v. Robinson,[2] 1 Bing. 147. So if B., claiming under A., demise to C. for a year, and die, and A. bring ejectment against C., the latter cannot dispute the title of A. Barwicke v. Thompson, 7 T. R. 488. See Bryan d. Child v. Vinewood, 1 Taunt. 208. But if the tenant be ousted by a title paramount, he may plead it. Hayne v. Maltby, 3 T. R. 438. In Doe d. Lowden v. Watson,[3] 2 Starkie's C. 230, Lord Ellenborough held that it was competent to a sub-lessee, in an ejectment, to show that subsequently to the under-lease to him by the lessor of the plaintiff, the latter had assigned his interest. In Doe v. Clarke, Peake's Ev. App. 45, the defendants having paid rent in respect of cottages which were alleged by the lessor of the plaintiff to be encroachments, and having afterwards disclaimed, were admitted to disprove the prima facie evidence of right arising from payment of rent. Cor. Bayley, J. Though a tenant set up an adverse claim against his landlord, he may still defend his possession under the lease. Rees d. Powell v. King, Forrest, 19. See Appendix.

(k) B. N. P. 110. Lade v. Holford, 3 Burr. 1416. A tenant cannot set up the title of the mortgagee against the mortgagor (per Buller, J., 1 T. R. 760). A tenant cannot insist against the will of the landlord that his own act amounts to a forfeiture (Doe v. Banckes,[4] 4 B. & A. 401). Doe v. Whitroe,[1] Dowl. & Ry. C. 1. Doe v. Mills,[5] 2 Ad. & Ell. 17; and see Doe v. Baytup,[6] 3 Ad. & Ell. 188, supra. A party admitted to defend as landlord is subject to the same estoppel as the tenant would have been had he defended. Doe v. Mizem, 2 Mo. & R. 56. The widow of a vendor, under an agreement that he shall hold for life, is estopped after his death from setting up a mortgage against the alienee. Doe v. Skirrow,[7] 7 Ad. & Ell. 157. Where evidence of tenancy consists merely in showing payment of rent by the defendant to the lessor of the plaintiff, the defendant may show that the payment was to him merely as agent. Doe v. Francis, 2 Mo. & R. 57.

(l) England v. Slade, 4 T. R. 682. Doe v. Ramsbotham, 3 M. & S. 516. See Doe d. Grundy v. Clarke, 14 East, 488. A landlord does not by waiving his right on an under-letting, waive his right on any under-letting. Doe v. Bliss, 4 Taunt. 735.

(m) Doe v. Lady Smythe, 4 M. & S. 347. Where the lessor had demised mining premises, &c. to a company, of which he was also a partner, and who had paid rent to him, held that the company were estopped from disputing his title, although in an answer to a bill in Chancery, which was in evidence, he had admitted that he had no legal title; and that his being a partner was no objection to his maintaining the ejectment. Francis v. Doe, 4 M. & W. 331.

(A) (But a notice to quit at the end of a year certain, is not waived by the landlord's permitting the defendant to remain in possession an entire year after the expiration of the notice, notwithstanding the tenant held by an improving lease, that is, to clear and fence the land and pay taxes. Boggs v. Black, 1 Binn. 333. A. by his attorney executed a lease to B. for three years, and after the expiration of the term, the attorney gave B. permission to remain in possession until A. was heard from. It was held that B. was only a tenant by sufferance, and was not entitled to a notice to quit. Jackson v. Packhurst, 5 John. R. 128. A distress made for rent accrued after the expiration of a notice to quit, is a waver of the notice not to be qualified. Zouch d. Ward v. Willingale. Supra.)

(B) (A tenant cannot set up an outstanding title in a third person, holding directly from the state, in an action of ejectment against him by his landlord, or by those deriving their title from the landlord. Jackson ex dem. Cotton v. Harper, 5 Wend. 246. Nor will he be permitted to show that the landlord has acknowledged by parol, that the title was in another. Jackson v. Davis, 5 Cow. 123; but although a tenant will not be permitted to gainsay the title of his landlord, yet if possession was not obtained from the landlord, but from another who falsely represented himself to be the owner, it is competent for the tenant to show that the plaintiff was not the owner at the time the agreement to pay the rent was made, or liability to pay it accrued. Gleim v. Rise, 6 Watts, 44. {See also Miller v. M'Brier, 14 Serg. & R. 382.} Whether there

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xvi. 409. [2]Id. viii. 275. [3]Id. iii. 328. [4]Id. vi. 462. [5]Id. xxix. 16. [6]Id. xxx. 67. [7]Id. xxxiv. 64.

The defendant may prove in answer, a tender at any time on the last day for the payment of the rent (n), or a waver of the forfeiture by the receipt of rent subsequently due (o), or by giving advice to a purchaser to purchase the term (p), provided the landlord had notice of the forfeiture; and reasonable evidence ought to be given that he had such notice (q); such receipt of subsequent rent will not set up a void lease for years (r). But as a lease for life cannot be avoided without entry, the acceptance of subsequent rent without entry will restore the lease (s). So the defendant may show a confirmation by the remainder-man, of a lease by a tenant for life (t). If the defendant rely on a waver by the landlord of his noticeto quit, by the acceptance of subsequent rent (u), it is a question of fact for the jury, whether it was paid *as rent, and received as such, or merely as a compensation for damage (v). He may show that the landlord has distrained (x)

Waver of forfeiture.

*426

(n) Co. Litt. 201, 202, a.

(o) Goodright v. Davis, Cowp. 803. 3 Rep. 64; 2 T. R. 425; Co. Litt. 201. Goodright v. Cordwent, 6 T. R. 219. Fryett d. Harris v. Jefferys, 1 Esp. C. 393. Forfeiture by using rooms in a particular manner is not waived in case of continued user after acceptance of rent. Doe v. Woodbridge,[1] 9 B. & C. 376.

(p) Doe d. Sore v. Eykins,[2] 1 C. & P. 154. Secus where the party has an annuity secured on the premises, and the advice is merely "to take to them." Ibid. So it is said, that though there be no release from or dispensation with the covenant, yet, if the conduct of the lessor be such (when in possession of both parts of the lease) as to induce a reasonable and cautious lessee to suppose that he was doing all that was necessary or required of him in insuring in his own name, and not in his own name and that of the lessor, he cannot recover as for a forfeiture. Doe d. Knight v. Rowe,[3] 1 R. & M. 343.

(q) Cowp. 803. Roe v. Harrison, 3 T. R. 425. Pennant's Case, 3 Rep. 64, b.; 1 Will. Saund. 287, c.

(r) Co. Litt. 215; Will. Saund. 287; 3 Rep. 64; Willes, 176. See Doe v. Banckes,[4] 4 B. & A. 401. Reid v. Parsons,[5] 2 Chitty's R. 247. Where a lease for years is conditioned to be void for the benefit of the lessor, it is voidable only at his election. Doe v. Banckes,[4] 4 B. & A. 401. Reed v. Farr, 6 M. & S. 121. And though it be provided that a lease or leases for lives shall be void for breach of covenant, and that it shall be lawful for the lessor to re-enter, &c, it is voidable only. Arnsby v. Woodward,[6] 6 B. & C. 519. Roberts v. Davy,[7] 4 B. & Ad. 664. So if the condition be that the lessor shall re-enter. Goodright v. Davids, Cowp. 804.

(s) 2 Will. Saund. 287; Co. Litt. 211, b.; Co. Litt. 215, a.; 3 Rep. 64.

(t) The defendant held under a lease from a tenant for life, containing, besides the money rent, certain duties to be performed by the tenant, inter alia, of carrying three loads of culm from the pits to the lessor's dwelling-house yearly; shortly after the death of the tenant for life, at Michaelmas, the lessor of plaintiff, as the next remainder-man, desired his servant to go and look for carts to bring home culm, and he went to the defendant, and also to the other tenants, who accordingly carried a load to the house mentioned in the lease, and in the May following the defendant also sent two loads, which were received, as well as from other tenants; held, that whether the lease were valid or not, it was properly left to the jury to say, whether the culm was carried by the defendant and received by the lessor of plaintiff after his title accrued, in the way of rent, under the reservation to that effect in the lease; and the Court refused to disturb their decision that it was so carried and received. Doe d. Tucker v. Morse,[8] 1 B. & Ad. 365. And see Doe v. Watts, 7 T. R. 83. See Index, tit. CONFIRMATION.

(u) Where a provision avoided the lease in case of repairs omitted three months after notice, and notice was given on the 1st of January, the receipt of rent due on the 25th of March is no waver. Doe v. Brindley,[9] 4 B. & Ad. 84. The right of re-entry is not waived by distraining for the rent, for the non-payment of which the lease became forfeited; for (although it was otherwise at common law) the statute gives the right to eject only in the case where there is no sufficient distress. Brewer v. Eaton, 3 Doug. 231; 6 T. R. 220.

(v) Doe v. Batten, Cowp. 243; 2 H. B. 312. Goodright v. Cordwent, 6 T. R. 219. Goodright v. Davis, Cowp. 803. Sykes d. Murgatroyd v. ——, 1 T. R. 161, n. Note, that in the case of Doe v. Batten a receipt was given as for rent, in order to deceive the landlord. Per Wilson, J., 1 H. B. 312.

(x) Zouch v. Willingall, 1 H. B. 311. Doe d. Taylor v. Johnson,[10] 1 Starkie's C. 411. Secus, if he distrain for rent due before the expiration of the notice. Ibid. and Brewer v. Eaton, 6 T. R. 220. A payment of rent for a quarter ending after the expiration of a notice made to the landlord's banker without special authority, and without evidence that the money had come to the landlord's hands, is no waver, although the rent was usually paid to that banker. Doe v. Calvert, 2 Camp. 387. Under a provision for re-entry in case of rent in arrear for twenty-one days, the lessor distrained within the twenty-one days, but remained afterwards in possession; and Lord Ellenborough held that the forfeiture was not waived. Doe v. Johnson,[9] 1 Starkie's C. 411.

---

is a tenancy or not, is matter of fact, and the defendant may produce parol evidence to disprove the existence of it. Jackson ex. dem. Van Allen v. Vosburgh, 7 John. R. 186.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xvii. 399. [2]Id. xi. 352. [3]Id. xii. 112. [4]Id. vi. 462. [5]Id. xviii. 322. [6]Id. xiii. 241. [7]Id. xxiv. 136. [8]Id. xx. 398. [9]Id. xxii. 211. [10]Id. ii. 448.

for subsequent rent, or brought covenant (y) (A), or recovered for use and occupation (z), or brought any other action for the rent (a). But the merely lying by with knowledge of a forfeiture is no waver (b); an agreement to allow the tenant more than the three months time to repair expressed in the proviso, is a suspension, not a waver of the forfeiture (c). Where the breach which is the cause of forfeiture is a continuing one, the receipt of rent after one breach is no waver of a subsequent breach by using rooms in a manner prohibited by the lease (d).

But if, after the expiration of a notice to quit, the landlord gives the tenant a fresh notice that unless he quit in fourteen days he will be required to pay double value, the second notice is no waver of the first (e).

A second notice to quit on a subsequent day is a waver of the first notice (f). Where a tenant for years levied a fine, and the reversioner granted the reversion without taking advantage of the forfeiture, it was held that ejectment could not be maintained on the demise either of the grantor or of the grantee (g). It is in general a good defence to show that the lessor of the plaintiff has recognized a legal possession by the defendant as tenant, by the receipt of rent from him for a time subsequent to that on which the alleged title of the lessor of the plaintiff accrued, or by bringing an action
*427 of covenant for such *rent (d). Where a tenant for life made a lease, which was void, and a subsequent tenant for life received rent from the lessee the defendant, it was held that this was such a recognition of a lawful possession by the defendant that ejectment could not be maintained against him without notice to quit (e). But where the rent is not received as between landlord and tenant, but is attributable to another consideration, such receipt is not evidence of a recognition of a legal possession (f); and therefore the receipt of a nominal rent from one as cestui que vie, after the death of the tenant for life, is not sufficient to entitle the widow of the former to notice to quit (g).

(y) Crompton v. Minshull, Easter, 33 G. 2. Runn. Ej., 80. Where the lease contained a general covenant to repair, and a covenant to repair on three month's notice, and the lessor gave notice to repair forthwith, it was held to be no waver of the breach of the general covenant. Doe v. Paine, 2 Camp. 520. But in such case a notice to repair in three months is a waver of the breach of the general covenant, and ejectment does not lie until the expiration of the three months. Doe v. Meux,[1] 4 B. & C. 606. And see Doe v. Lewis,[2] 5 Ad. & Ell. 277. Doe v. Miller,[3] 2 C. & P. 348.

(z) Birch v. Wright, 1 T. R. 387.

(a) Roe v. Minshull, B. N. P. 76.

(b) Doe v. Allen, 3 Taunt. 78.

(c) Doe v. Brindley,[4] 4 B. & Ad. 84.

(d) Doe v. Woodbridge,[5] 9 B. & C. 376. But where forfeiture by insolvency is waived by acceptance of rent from the insolvent after his discharge, the non-payment of a scheduled debt to the lessor is not a continuing insolvency. Doe v. Rees,[6] 4 Bing. N. C. 384.

(e) Doe v. Steel, 3 Camp. C. 117.

(f) Doe v. Palmer, 16 East, 53, n.; and see Doe d. Scott v. Miller,[3] 2 C. & P. 348. Secus, if under the circumstances the tenant could not understand the second notice as amounting to a waver of the first (Doe v. Humphreys, 2 East, 237). Where a landlord gave notice to quit, and after the expiration of that notice, gave notice to quit or pay double rent, the second notice was held to be no waver of the first, or of the double rent to which the plaintiff was entitled under it. Messenger v. Armstrong, 1 T. R. 53. Doe v. Steel, 3 Camp. 115. So where no notice to quit was necessary. Doe v. Inglis, 3 Taunt. 54. A mere promise not to turn the tenant out unless the premises were sold, the premises being afterwards sold, is no waver of the notice, and the tenant refusing to quit after the sale, is a trespasser from the expiration of the notice. Whiteacre v. Symonds, 10 East, 13.

(g) Fenn v. Smart, 12 East, 444, [and Mr. Day's notes.]

(d) Supra, notes (x) and (y).

(e) Denn v. Rawlins, 10 East, 261. Doe v. Watts, 7 T. R. 83.

(f) 3 East, 260.

(g) Right v. Bawden, 3 East, 260.

(A) (Under the plea of "not guilty," the defendant in ejectment may prove that the plaintiff was dead at the time when the suit was instituted. Patterson v. Brindle, 9 Watts, 98. And in support of his possession, he may give in evidence any matter which could have operated as a bar, if pleaded by him by way of estoppel to a real action, brought for the recovery of the same premises, or to an action of trespass, brought to try the right to the same property. Wood v. Jackson, 8 Wend. 35.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. x. 417. [2]Id. xxxi. 333. [3]Id. xii. 163. [4]Id. xxiv. 28. [5]Id. xvii. 399. [6]Id. xxxiii. 384.

A notice may be waived by the tenant who gives it, as well as by the landlord. Where the tenant continued in possession after the expiration of the notice, it was held to be a question for the jury whether he meant to waive the notice, or continue the possession in the exercise of a right supposed to exist by custom (h).

9. The proof of the execution of the deeds (i) by the mortgagor, who is in possession of the premises, is usually conclusive against him, since he cannot set up a title inconsistent with his own deed (k). And the receipt of interest as such since the date of the demise is no recognition of a lawful possession by the mortgagor or his tenant, to make a demand necessary (l). But if a third person be defendant, it is necessary to prove that the mortgagor was in possession, by the receiving of rents or otherwise, at the time of the mortgage (m) (A). And where the defendant claims as tenant to the mortgagor under a lease prior to the mortgage, a regular determination of the tenancy by a notice to quit, must be proved (n). But where the mortgagor has let the premises subsequently to the mortgage, no notice is necessary (o), although the mortgage was assigned to the lessor after the defendant had been let into possession (p), unless he has by some act acknowledged a tenancy, as by the receipt of rent (q). If the tenant has a

By mortgagor.

(h) Jones v. Sheare,[1] 4 Ad. & Ell. 832.

(i) Doe d. Bristow v. Pegge, 1 T. R. 760, n.; and see tit. Deed; Estoppel. A second mortgagee, who takes an assignment of a lease to attend the inheritance, and has all the title-deeds, may recover against the first mortgagee (not having had notice of such prior mortgage). Goodtitle d. Norris v. Morgan, 1 T. R. 755. A mortgagee of such a proportion of the tolls arising from a turnpike road, and of the toll-houses and toll-gates for collecting the same, as the sum advanced by him bore to the whole sum raised on the credit of the tolls, may maintain ejectment, notwithstanding a clause in the Act that all the mortgagees shall be creditors on the tolls in equal degree. Doe d. Barclay v. Booth, 2 B. & P. 219.

(k) 1 T. R. 760. Peake's Ev. 313. The demise may be laid on a day anterior to the actual determination of the will. Per Buller, J., in Birch v. Wright, 1 T. R. 383. But if the deed contain a clause that the mortgagor shall remain in possession until default in payment, the demise must be laid on a subsequent day. Wilkinson v. Hall,[2] 3 Bing. N. C. 508.

(l) Doe v. Cadwallader,[3] 2 B. & Ad. 473. Rogers v. Humphries,[4] 4 Ad. & Ell. 313. Doe v. Hales,[5] 7 Bing. 322. But notice by the mortgagee to the mortgagor's tenant in possession, will not alone create a tenancy without attornment. Evans v. Elliott, 9 Ad. & Ell. 342. An agreement that the mortgagor may hold till such a day, operates as a re-demise till that day. Wilkinson v. Hall,[2] 3 Bing. N. C. 508.

(m) Ibid.

(n) Birch v. Wright, 1 T. R. 379.

(o) Keech v. Hall, Doug. 21; 3 East, 449.

(p) Thunder v. Belcher, 3 East, 449.

(q) Ibid. and Clayton v. Blakey, 8 T. R. 3. Where the mortgagor after the mortgage and the mortgagee applies for rent, he cannot afterwards recover in ejectment on a demise laid on a day previous to the application. Doe v. Hales,[5] 7 Bing. 322, and 5 M. & P. 132. In ejectment by a mortgagee, the mere fact of his having received interest on the mortgage down to a day later than the day of the demise in the declaration, does not amount to a recognition by him that the mortgagor or his tenant was in lawful possession of the premises till the time when such interest was paid, and consequently is no defence to the ejectment. Doe d. Rogers and Wife v. Cadwallader,[3] 2 B. & Ad. 473. By the mortgage deed it was covenanted that in default of payment on the day, the mortgagee might enter and proceed to sell, &c.; held, that after that day the mortgagee was in the situation of a lessee whose term has expired, and no notice to quit was necessary to entitle the mortgagee to maintain ejectment. The payment of interest does not give any right to the possession of the land, as payment of rent would do. Doe d. Fisher v. Giles,[6] 5 Bing. 421, and see Partridge v. Beere,[7] 5 B. & A. 694. Keech v. Hall, Doug. 21. Moss v. Gallimore, Ib. 282. A mortgagor remaining in possession is at all events nothing more than a tenant at sufferance, and is liable to be treated as tenant or trespasser at the option of the mortgagee. Doe d. Roby v. Maisey,[8] 8 B. & C. 767. The mortgagee is entitled to the growing crops. Birch v. Wright, 1 T. R. 383; secus where by special terms the mortgagor is tenant at will. Ex parte Temple, 1 Glyn and J. 216.

(A) (A stranger not claiming title under a mortgage, will not be permitted to set it up to defeat a legal title. Collins v. Torrey, 7 John. R. 278. And though no regular foreclosure of the mortgage be shown, yet the assignee of the mortgage being in possession may protect his possession by it. Jackson v. Minkler et al. 10 John. R. 480. See also Phyfe v. Riley, 15 Wend. 248. But where the mortgagee has never entered, and there has been no foreclosure, and interest has not been paid within twenty years, a mortgage is not a subsisting title. Collins v. Torrey, 7 John. R. 278. Jackson ex dem. Klock v. Hudson, 3 John. R. 375. An equitable lien or mortgage cannot be set up at law, as a legal estate, to defeat a recovery in an action of ejectment. Jackson v. Parkhurst, 4 Wend. 369.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxxi. 198. [2]Id. xxxii. 226. [3]Id. xxii. 126. [4]Id. xxxi. 72. [5]Id. xx. 147. [6]Id. xv. 485. [7]Id. vii. 204. [8]Id. xv. 335.

legal title to *the term, the lessor of the plaintiff cannot recover, although his only object is to get into possession of the rents and profits (r).

The lessor of the plaintiff need not prove any notice to the mortgagor to give up the possession, or any previous demand of possession (s).

It must appear that the title accrued by the mortgagor's default, before the day of the demise laid in the declaration.

A second mortgagee who takes an assignment of a term to attend the inheritance, and has the title-deeds, may recover against the first mortgagee (t).

By a rector, &c.

10. Where the plaintiff seeks to recover land as rector or vicar, he must, unless the defendant be estopped by an acknowledgement of tenancy or otherwise, prove his title. Where the rector has been instituted and inducted into a living, proof of the letters of institution (u), and of his induction, by which he acquires the corporeal possession, are sufficient evidence of title, without proof of title in the patron; for institution and induction (v) upon the presentation of a stranger is sufficient to bar the rightful claimant in ejectment, and to put the rightful patron to his quare impedit (x); and the plaintiff need not, until some proof has been given to the contrary, prove his subscription to, and reading of, the thirty-nine articles, and his assent to all things contained in the book of common-prayer, for the law will presume the affirmative where the negative includes a crime (y). Where, however, induction has not followed upon institution, it seems to be necessary to prove presentation by the patron, and that the recital of a presentation in the letters of institution would not be evidence of it (z). Where induction or possession has not followed, proof of a verbal presentation is sufficient (a): but it has been said that the patron would not be competent to *prove this right, although he were but the grantee of the avoidance (b). It has been stated, that reputation would be admissible to prove the fact; but this position may, with reason, be doubted (c). Some evidence is of course necessary to show that the property sought to be recovered is the property of the particular church; as that the premises were occupied or otherwise enjoyed by the preceding incumbent. Adverse possession is not in general evidence against the right of a rector or vicar, unless he be the party who has acquiesced in the possession (d). An in-

*429

(r) Doe v. Wharton, 8 T. R. 2. Aliter, B. N. P. 96; Doug. 23. And see Doe v. Maisey,[1] 8 B. & C. 767. Doe v. Giles,[2] 5 Bing. 420.

(s) Birch v. Wright, 1 T. R. 279. The mortgagor is strictly tenant at will to the mortgagee. Partridge v. Beere,[3] 5 B. & A. 604. The levying a fine by the mortgagor will not render an actual entry necessary. Hall v. Doe,[4] 5 B. & A. 687.

(t) Goodtitle v. Morgan, 1 T. R. 755. Right d. Jefferys v. Bucknell,[5] 2 B. & Ad. 278. See further, infra, tit. Estoppel.

(u) The institution may be proved by the letters testimonial of institution, or by the official entry in the public registry of the diocese. These ought to record the time of institution, and upon whose presentation, Gibs. Cod. 813, and seem to be evidence of the fact of presentation so stated, where induction has followed.

(v) Induction may be proved either by any witness who was present, or by the indorsement on the mandate directed by the Ordinary to the Archdeacon, or by the return to the mandate, if a return has been made. Chapman v. Beard, 3 Ans. 942. 2 Phill. Ev. 257.

(x) B. N. P. 105. Doe d. Kirby v. Carter,[6] 1 Ry. & M. 237. Heath v. Pryn, 1 Vent. 14.

(y) Monke v. Butler, 1 Roll. R. 83. Powell v. Millbank, Blacks. R. 851; 3 Wills. 355. Williams v. East India Co. 3 East, 199. Sherard's Case, cited 2 Bl. 853.

(z) B. N. P. 105; 1 Vent. 15; 1 Sid. 426. Letters of institution of a party, reciting the cession of his predecessor, followed by induction, are evidence of the cession. Doe v. Carter,[6] R. & M. 238.

(a) B. N. P. 105; Co. Litt. 120, a. R. v. Eriswell, 3 T. R. 723. A presentation by a corporation must be in writing under the common seal; Gibs. Cod. 794. A corporation cannot present the head of the corporation. Vin. Ab. tit. Presentation.

(b) B. N. P. 105. (c) Ibid.

(d) Doe d. Cooper v. Runcorn,[7] 5 B. & C. 696. Croft v. Howell, Plowd. 538. Stowel v. Zouch, Ib. 355. Barber v. Richardson,[8] 4 B. & A. 579.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xv. 335. [2]Id. xv. 485. [3]Id. vii. 204. [4]Id. vii. 232. [5]Id. xxii. 73. [6]Id. xxi. 428. [7]Id. xii. 359. [8]Id. vi. 523.

cumbent is entitled to recover glebe lands, although the current year of a tenancy created by his predecessor is unexpired (e). A rector may recover on a lease avoided by his own non-residence (f); so on his own demise to a spiritual person (g), and the description of the lessee in the lease is evidence that he is a spiritual person.

A resignation-bond having been declared simoniacal, the presentee of the Crown, who is put into corporeal possession of the church, on the avoidance, is entitled to maintain ejectment against the former incumbent (h).

11. Where the lessor of the plaintiff is a tenant in common (i), co-parcener, or joint-tenant with the defendant, he ought to be prepared with the consent-rule, to show that the ouster has been admitted (j); and it seems that if the defendant mean to deny the ouster, he ought to enter into a special consent-rule, which does not admit the ouster (k). By joint-tenant, &c.

The bare perception of the whole of the profits does not amount to an ouster (l); although such perception of the profits, continued for a great length of time, will be evidence of an actual ouster (m), for the mere possession supports the common title; and a bare refusal to pay over his share of the profits to a tenant in common is not sufficient evidence of ouster without a denial of title; but if upon a demand of possession by a tenant in common the co-tenant refuse, and claim the whole, it is evidence of an actual ouster (n). Proof of ouster.

*The payment of an entire rent to the lessors of the plaintiff is evidence of their joint-tenancy (o), such as to support a joint demise in the declaration; but although the defendant prove that he has paid an entire rent to a receiver, for two jointly, for which the receipts stated the rent to be due to the two, yet they may recover on a declaration, stating separate demises by the two of the whole property, for by the several demises the joint-tenancy is severed (p). So if four joint-tenants jointly demise, such as have given notice to quit may recover on separate demises (q). A notice by one of *430 By joint-tenants.

(e) Doe d. Kirby v. Carter,[1] 1 R. & M. 237, cor. Littledale, J. Secus, if an interval (e. g. of nine months) elapse from which an assent to the continuance of the tenancy may be presumed, Doe d. Capes v. Somerville,[2] 6 B. & C. 126.

(f) Frogmorton v. Scott, 1 East, 467, under the stat. 13 Eliz. c. 20.

(g) Ib. under the st. 24 H. 8, c. 13, s. 3.

(h) Doe v. Fletcher,[3] 8 B. & C. 25; 2 M. & Ry. 206. Doe v. Inglis, 3 Taunt.

(i) It is doubtful whether one of several parceners can recover in ejectment, on a forfeiture of a lease made by the ancestor. Doe v. Lewis,[4] 5 Ad. & Ell. 177.

(j) Doe d. White v. Cuffe, 1 Camp. 173; 7 Mod. 39. Oates d. Wigfall v. Brydon, 3 Burr. 1895; Runn. Ej. 195. [See Doe v. Roe, 1 Anst. 86.]

(k) Ibid. and Doe d. Gigner v. Roe, 2 Taunt. 397. But see Doe d. Hellings v. Bird, 11 East, 49; Salk. 392.

(l) Reading v. Rawstorne, 2 Ld. Raym. 829; Fairclaim v. Shackleton, 5 Burr. 2604. The tenant in common had been in possession of the whole of the profits for twenty-six years; but there was no evidence of his having actually claimed the whole estate, and he had been admitted to one moiety only of the land. And see Peaceable v. Read, 1 East, 568. The stat. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 12, provides that the possession of land, profits, or rent, by one or more as coparcener, joint-tenant, or tenant in common, of more than his or their undivided shares for his or their own benefit, or that of any other than the party entitled, shall not be deemed the possession or receipt of the latter. This it is said has made no difference in the practice in ejectment. Per Littledale, J. Bail court, M. T. 1838; Roscoe on Ev. 432; and see Doe v. Horne, 3 M. & W. 333.

(m) Doe d. Fisher v. Prosser, Cowp. 217.

(n) Doe d. Hellings v. Bird, 11 East, 49. Doe d. Fisher v. Prosser, Cowp. 217. So (semble) where three or four co-tenants authorized the using of the land for a railroad. Per Parke, B., Doe v. Horne, 3 M. & W. 333.

(o) Doe d. Clarke v. Grant, 12 East, 221. Qu. whether receipts given by an agent in the joint names of two, will be evidence of a joint-tenancy. Doe v. Read, 12 East, 57.

(p) Doe d. Marsac v. Read, 12 East, 57. Ejectment will lie on the several demises of three joint-tenants. Doe v. Fenn, 3 Camp. 190, cor. Ld. Ellenborough. Doe d. Raper v. Lonsdale, 12 East, 39.

(q) Doe d. Wayman v. Chaplin, 3 Taunt. 420. Doe v. Read, 12 East, 57.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxi. 426. [2]Id. xiii. 118. [3]Id. xv. 151. [4]Id. xxxi. 333.

several in the name of all, is sufficient as to all (r). It is sufficient for a purchaser under the sheriff to prove the writ without proving the judgment (s), unless he be the judgment-creditor, in which case he must prove the judgment also (t).

Variance from local description.

IV. Proof must be given of the subject-matter sought to be recovered, and of its local situation, according to the allegations (A). Houses may be recovered under the description of land, for they are mere accessories to the land (u). Although it be not necessary to allege the land to be situated in a township or parish, yet if it be so described, a variance in proof will be fatal (v).

Variance from the demise.

If it appear that the title of the lessor of the plaintiff did not accrue until after the day of the demise laid in the declaration, the variance will be fatal (B) (1); but a demise of copyhold lands laid between the times of the surrender and admittance, will be good, for the title relates from the admittance to the surrender, as against all except the lord (x).

*431 *A demise laid by the heir on the day when his ancestor died, is good; for the fiction that there is no fraction of a day, is not allowed to prejudice any party (y). So where the ejectment was brought by a posthumous son, and the demise was laid at the time of the father's death (z). No variance

(r) Doe v. Summersett,[1] 1 B. & Ad. 185. (s) Doe v. Merless, 6 M. & S. 110.

(t) Doe v. Smith,[2] 2 Starkie, C. 289.

(u) Ejectment will lie by the owner of the soil for land, part of the King's highway, or for an acre of land described as land, though a wall and park and part of a house be on it. Goodtitle d. Chester v. Almer, 1 Burr. 133; 1 Ld. Ken. 427. In Ireland, ejectment will lie for so many acres of mountain land, 1 Bro. P. C. 74; and see Cottingham v. King, 1 Burr. 621. The action does not lie for a messuage or tenement; but if the declaration be for a messuage and tenement, the Court will give leave to enter the verdict according to the Judge's notes. Goodtitle v. Otway, 8 East, 357. See Doe d. Bradshaw v. Plowman, 1 East, 441; and Doe d. Stewart v. Denton, 1 T. R. 11. The action is not maintainable against one who erects a stall in the street without leave of the owner of the soil; the proper remedy is trespass. Doe v. Cowley,[3] 1 C. & P. 123.

(v) See tit. VARIANCE. Proof that the place where the house stands for which the ejectment is brought is watched by watchmen of the parish where it is alleged to be situate, is prima facie evidence of its situation in that parish. Doe v. Welch, 4 Camp. 264. If the premises be described as situate in the parish of A. and B., and part be in parish A., part in parish B., but there be no such parish as A. and B., the variance will, it seems, be fatal. (Per Parke, B.) Doe v. Edwards, 1 M. & M. 319; but leave was given to amend. Had the word parishes been used the allegation would have been admissible, Ib.; and see Goodtitle v. Walter, 4 Taunt. 671; Vol. I. tit. VARIANCE.

(x) Holdfast d. Woollams v. Clapham, 1 T. R. 600. Doe d. Bennington v. Hall, 16 East, 208. But where the devisee of a copyhold surrendered to the use of the will, died before admittance, his devisee, though afterwards admitted, could not, it was held, recover in ejectment; his admittance has no relation to the surrender, but the legal title remains in the heir of the surrenderor. Doe d. Vernon v. Vernon, 7 East, 8. Doe d. Burrough v. Reade, 8 East, 353. Where the lord of the manor by copy of court-roll granted to A. the reversion of certain premises then in his tenure to hold to B. for his life, immediately after the death of A., it was held, that B. on the death of A. might maintain ejectment, having acquired a perfect legal title by the grant without admittance. For an admittance is necessary in those cases only where the estate passes from the surrenderor to the lord, and then from the lord to the surrenderee by admittance; when it passes immediately from the lord to another by grant, no admittance is necessary. And in analogy to the case of freehold, a reversion may be granted without liberty of seizin. Roe d. Cosh v. Loveless, 2 B. & A. 453. An admittance where there was no title to be admitted, as in the case of an administrator de bonis non, to the grantee of a copyhold per autre vie, cannot support an ejectment as on a grant by the lord. Zouch v. Forse, 7 East, 188. There can be no special occupant of a copyhold, the freehold being in the lord. Ib. Smartle v. Penhallow, 6 Mod. 65; 1 Salk. 88; 2 Ld. Raym. 994. See as to the surrender of chambers in an inn of court, Doe d. Warry v. Miller, 1 T. R. 393.

(y) 3 Wils. 274. (z) B. N. P. 105.

(A) (Leach v. Cooper's Lessee, Cooke's Rep. 249.)

(B) (Boyd v. Barkley, 4 Dana, 227.)

(1) [Van Alen v. Rogers, 1 Johns. Cas. 281; the demise must be laid at, or subsequent to the time when the lessor's right accrued. See also Bailey & al. v. Fairplay, 6 Binney, 454. Where there was no period stated in the declaration for the commencement of the term, and no date to the demise, the declaration was held bad even after verdict. Nokes v. Shaw, Cam. & Nor. 457. Where the declaration laid the demise, Feb. 1, 1801, and possession under it "afterwards on the 1st January last aforesaid;" it was held that the last words might be rejected, so that the possession would appear to be after the demise. Brown v. Lutterloh, Cam. & Nor. 425.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xx. 360. [2]Id. iii. 312. [3]Id. xi. 339.

between the extent of the lease laid in the declaration, and the extent of the interest of the lessor of the plaintiff, is material, for the lease is but a fiction (a).

If such a title be not proved as would enable the lessor of the plaintiff to make such a demise in point of law as is alleged in the declaration, the variance will be fatal (b); and therefore, if A. be tenant for life, with remainder to B., a count upon a joint demise by A. and B. cannot be supported, for it is not the lease of A. and B., but the lease of A. confirmed by B. (c). So a count upon a joint lease, by tenants in common, is bad (d). There should, in such case, be a distinct count upon the separate demise of each tenant in common, or they should join in a lease to a third person, who may make a lease to try the title (e) (A). But joint-tenants or coparceners may either join or sever (f).

Where the demise was upon a joint lease by the husband and wife, and proof was given of a lease made by a third person, by virtue of a power of attorney, executed by both, it was held to be a variance, but it was also held that the power of attorney was void as to the wife only, and that the lessee might declare on a lease by the husband alone (g). It seems that joint-tenants may make several demises (h).

Where the lease is alleged in the declaration to be by deed under the corporation seal, it is unnecessary to prove the fact, since by the rule the lease is admitted as stated (i) (1).

Evidence of taking tithes only, is not sufficient to prove an ouster from a rectory (k).

A variance in the fractional amount sought to be recovered will not preclude the plaintiff from recovering any smaller fraction; if the declaration be for one-fourth of one-fifth part, and he prove his title to one-third part of a fourth of a fifth part, the verdict may be taken accordingly (l), but the

(a) Doe d. Shore v. Porter, 3 T. R. 13; Runn. 94.

(b) For the word "demise," when used in pleading, is to be taken in its legal sense; 3. T. R. 15; 2 Bl. 1077; 5 Burr. 2604; 1 Wils. 1; Moor, 682; Cro. Jac. 166; 1 Show. 342; 2 Wils. 232; Cro. Jac. 83; 1 Brownl. 39, 134. But see below, note (d).

(c) 6 Co. 14, b.; Woodfall's Land. & Ten. 461; Co. Litt. 45, a.; Poph. 37.

(d) Cro. Jac. 166; 1 Ins. 200: 2 Wils. 232; 12 East, 221. Doe v. Errington,[1] 1 Ad. & Ell. 750; and see Vol. I. But qu. whether, as a lease is admitted by the consent-rule, a lease may not be presumed in which each demised his undivided share. See Doe v. Read, 11 East, 57; and the observations of Gibbs, A. G. [See Phil. Ev. 170, 171, n.]

(e) 2 Wils. 232.

(f) Doe v. Read, 12 East, 57. Doe v. Fenn, 3 Cowp. 190.

(g) Yelv. 1; 2 Brownl. 248; Cro. Jac. 617; Cro. Car. 165, contra.

(h) Doe v. Read, 12 East, 57. [See Milne v. Cummings, 4 Yeates, 577.]

(i) Per Ashurst, J., Farley on d. Mayor, &c. of Canterbury v. Wood, Runn. 150; 3 Esp. C. 198.

(k) Latch. 62; Runn. 136.

(l) 1 Sid. 239; 1 Burr. 330. [Santee v. Keister, 6 Binney, 36; Squires v. Riggs, 2 Hayw. 150; Den v. Evans, ibid. 222.]

(A) (It has now become immaterial whether tenants in common declare on joint or separate demises. Jackson v. Bradt, 2 Caines' R. 169. Barrett v. French, 1 Conn. R. 354. A co-parcener may declare in ejectment on her separate demise. Jackson v. Sample, 1 Johns. C. 231. [Where a declaration contains separate demises from several lessors, the plaintiff may give in evidence the separate titles of the lessors to separate parts of the premises and recover accordingly. Jackson v. Sidney, 12 Johns. 185.

In North Carolina, tenants in common may recover on a joint demise. Doe v. Potts, 1 Hawkes, 469.

In Kentucky, tenants in common cannot make a joint demise. Innis v. Crawford, 4 Bibb, 241. On a joint demise, the title must be joint, or the plaintiff cannot recover. Taylor v. Taylor, 3 Marsh. 19. An ejectment cannot be maintained on a joint demise by husband and wife, when the title is in the husband alone. Tucker v. Vance, 2 Marsh. 458. But where the plaintiff declares on separate demises by two, and fails to prove title in one of the moieties, he may nevertheless recover, according to the title proved in the other lessor. Allen v. Trimble, 4 Bibb, 21. A declaration, stating that the lessors jointly and severally demised, is supported by proving a tenancy in common. Courteney v. Shropshire, 3 Littell's Rep. 266].)

(1) [In ejectment by a corporation, the court will presume the demise to have been under their corporate seal. University v. Johnston, 1 Hayw. 375, note.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxviii. 197.

*verdict cannot be taken for more than is claimed (m). So the verdict may be for any quantity of land less than that specified in the declaration (n). Upon a demise of the whole, an undivided moiety may be recovered (o) (1). In general, the plaintiff may recover, according to his title, so much as he has a title to, where he declares for more, but not more where he declares for less (p).

Defendant's possession.

V. The plaintiff must prove that the defendant was in possession of the premises in question at the time of bringing the action (q); for otherwise, if the plaintiff could prove title to any premises answering the description in the declaration, he would be entitled to a verdict and his costs, although the defendant never intended to dispute his title to those premises, but only his title to others, which the plaintiff has failed to prove (r); but now, by a rule of the Court of King's Bench, a party, on being admitted to defend in ejectment, must, on entering into the common rule, specify the premises in respect of which he intends to defend, and admit that they are in his own possession, if he defends as tenant, or in the possession of his tenant, if he defends as landlord; and undertake to admit such possession on the trial of the cause (s). Where there is any doubt as to the identity of the premises sought to be recovered, the lessor of the plaintiff ought to produce the rule (t).

*433

Competency of witnesses.

*VI. Where two persons are contending for the possession, who are to pay rent in different rights, it seems that the landlord is not a competent witness to prove the priority of demise, in an action of ejectment. As where

(m) 1 Burr. 330. [Davies v. Whitesides, 1 Bibb, 510.]

(n) Cro. Eliz. 13; Yelv. 114. It was formerly held, that upon a declaration for one acre, a verdict for half an acre would be bad, because it would be uncertain of which half the plaintiff was to have execution. The Court will not on the trial of an ejectment, where the plaintiff has proved his title to a verdict, inquire as to the metes and boundaries, which are to be tried more properly in an action of trespass. 2 Starkie's C. 477.

(o) Doe v. Wippel, 1 Esp. C. 360. Doe v. Fenn, 3 Camp. 190. Roe v. Lonsdale, 12 East, 39. The Court will not try a question of metes and bounds in an action of ejectment. Doe v. Wilson,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 477.

(p) Doe d. Burgess v. Purvis, 1 Burr. 326.

(q) Astlin v. Parkins, 2 Burr. 668; and per Bayley, J., Doe d. James v. Stanton, 2 B. & A. 371.

(r) See Doe v. Cuff, Camp. 173. Smith v. Man, B. N. P. 110; 1 Wils. 220. Goodright v. Rich, 7 T. R. 327. Fenn v. Wood, 1 B. & P. 573. But see Jesse v. Bacchus, Runn. 293. Fenn v. Cooke, 3 Camp. 512. Doe v. Alexander, 3 Camp. 516. But the plaintiff is entitled to recover, although the defendant in possession is the servant of another. Doe d. Cuff v. Stradling,[2] 2 Starkie's C. 187. It is sufficient that the defendant has the visible occupation of the premises, and it is not necessary that he should have such an interest as would enable him to maintain trespass. Doe d. James v. Stanton, 2 B. & A. 371. Where the defendant on being served with the declaration (not on the premises), answered as tenant in possession, and it appeared that he sold coals on the premises as servant to the proprietor of the premises (a coal-wharf); it was held, that the plaintiff was properly nonsuited. Ibid.

(s) See the rule, 4 B. & A. 196. It is there recited that plaintiffs have frequently been nonsuited in ejectment for want of proof of the defendant's possession, contrary to the true intent and meaning of the consent-rule. It is therefore ordered, "That from henceforth, in every action of ejectment, the defendant shall specify in the consent-rule for what premises he intends to defend, and shall consent in such rule to confess upon the trial that the defendant (if he defends as tenant, or in case he defends as landlord, that his tenant) was, at the time of the service of the declaration, in the possession of such premises; and that if upon the trial the defendant shall not confess such possession, as well as lease, entry and ouster, whereby the plaintiff shall not be able further to prosecute his suit against the said defendant, then no costs shall be allowed for not further prosecuting the same, but the said defendant shall pay costs to the plaintiff in that case to be taxed." Before this rule, it was held, that on ejectment against several defendants, the lessor might recover from each severally the tenement in his several occupation. Doe v. Clarke, Peake's Ev. App. 45.

(t) Doe d. Lamble v. Lamble, 1 M. & M. 237. But see where there is no doubt as to the identity of the premises sought to be recovered and those for which the tenant defends, the lessor of the plaintiff is not required to produce the consent-rule. Doe d. Greaves v. Roby,[3] 2 B. & Ad. 948.

(1) [In Maryland and North Carolina, where an entirety is demanded in ejectment, there cannot be a recovery of an undivided part—the nature of such recovery being considered different from that of the claim. Carroll v. Norwood, 1 Har. & J. 463, note. Young v. Drew, 1 Taylor, 119. Secus, in Kentucky. Gist v. Robinet, 2 Bibb, 2. Ward v. Harrison, ibid. 304. Larue v. Slack, 4 Bibb, 358.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 439. [2] Id. iii. 307. [3] Id. xxii. 219.

A. the landlord demises to B., and afterwards to C., and the latter demises to D., against whom B. brings ejectment, A. is not competent to prove the demise to B., for the effect would be to change the possession (u). But if in such case no rent be reserved (v), or if the question arose on an action of covenant brought by C. against D., then A. would be competent to prove the priority of the demise to B.; for the result would not alter the possession, and the verdict would not be evidence afterwards, either for or against A. the landlord (w). So in ejectment by one claiming as heir of B., the son of an elder brother of B. is a competent witness for the defendant to show a better title in himself; if the defendant succeeds, the witness will not be benefited; if the plaintiff succeeds, his obtaining possession will not injure the witness, unless the defendant be his tenant (x) (A).

Where the party in possession would be liable for mesne profits if the lessor of the plaintiff should succeed, he is an incompetent witness for the defendant (y).

A remainder-man, after a tenant in tail, is not a competent witness for the tenant in tail, on ejectment for the entailed property; for he would acquire a vested interest (z).

An executor in trust may be a witness with respect to the estate, as to prove the sanity of the testator (a). So where a grantee is a bare trustee, he is competent to prove the execution of the deed to himself (b). A co-defendant is not a competent witness (c).

(u) Per Buller, J., in Bell v. Harwood, 3 T. R. 308, and Fox v. Swann, Sty. 482. Smith v. Chambers, 4 Esp. C. 164.

(v) Per Buller, J., in Bell v. Harwood, 3 T. R. 308.

(w) Bell v. Harwood, 3 T. R. 308. See also Rex v. Woodland, 1 T. R. 261; and Fox v. Swann, Sty. 482.

(x) Doe v. Clarke,[1] 3 Bing. N. C. 429; and see Doe v. Maisey,[2] 1 B. & Ad. 439; 5 B. & C. 335. Rees v. Walters, 3 M. & W. 527. As to the competency of creditors, executors, &c. of a testator to prove a will, see the stat. 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 26.—WILL.

(y) Doe v. Preece,[3] 4 C. & P. 556.

(z) Doe v. Tyler,[4] 6 Bing. 394.

(a) 1 Mod. 107; Doug. 139, 141; 4 Burr. 2254.

(b) 1 P. Will. 287, 290.

(c) Dormer v. Fortescue, Runn. 250. Doe v. Green, 4 Esp. C. 198.

(A) In an action of ejectment, it is not a valid objection to the competency of a witness called by the plaintiff, that he is one of the defendants, if he was merely made a defendant because he lived on the land. Hain v. Martin, 5 Watts, 179. Patterson v. Hagerman, 2 Yeates, 163. But see Jackson v. Hills, 8 Cow. 290. He is incompetent if liable in any event for mesne profits. Boyer v. Smith, 5 Watts, 65. A grantor with a covenant of warranty is a competent witness for his grantee in an action of ejectment brought by him for the recovery of the possession of the premises conveyed, the liability of the grantee attaching only in case of an eviction after possession obtained. Jackson v. Rice, 3 Wend. 180. Burns v. Lyon, 4 Watts, 363. But a cestui que trust is not made a competent witness by an assignment of all his interest in the land to a third person, who stipulated to pay all the costs which had accrued, and which should accrue in the action, without the right to reclaim the same in any event. Nothing short of an actual payment and deposit of the money in Court will render him competent. Campbell v. Galbreath, 5 Watts, 423. Nor is a defendant a competent witness for his co-defendants although in point of amount he has a greater interest in the plaintiff's recovery. Lies v. Stub, 6 Watts, 48. In an action of ejectment to recover a tract of land purchased at sheriff's sale by the defendant, on the ground of a fraud practised by him in making the purshase, after proof of the fraud, it is competent to give evidence that other persons were prevented from bidding, by the alleged fraudulent act of the defendant. M'Kennan v. Pry, 6 Watts, 137. In an action of ejectment, the field notes of a deputy surveyor, who is dead, containing a memorandum of the name of the person for whom the survey was made, and of the payment of the expenses of making it, are competent evidence. Galbraith v. Elder, 8 Watts, 81. So also a verdict and judgment or a nonsuit in a former trial between the same parties for the same land. Koons v. Hartman, 7 Watts, 20. The books found in the commissioner's office are official documents, and competent evidence in an action of ejectment for unseated land sold for taxes. So also is a receipt of the treasurer for the surplus bond required of the purchaser by the act of Assembly. Fager v. Campbell, 5 Watts, 287. A return of survey made after suit brought is competent evidence for a defendant in ejectment. In this respect there is a difference between a plaintiff and a defendant; the former, to entitle him to recover, must establish his title to have existed before he commenced his action; but the latter may prevent a recovery by proof of facts occurring subsequently. Galbreath v. Elder, 8 Watts, 81.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxxii. 191. [2]Id. xx. 420. [3]Id. xix. 525. [4]Id. xix. 111.

A tenant is not competent to defend his landlord's possession (d). Where primâ facie evidence has been given against the defendant, a witness is incompetent to prove that he himself is the real tenant, and that the defendant is but his bailiff (e).

A lessor of the plaintiff cannot, it seems, be called as a witness by the defendant, though no title be proved in him (f). Where a lessor had become a bankrupt, and released his assignees, it was held that he was competent *(g). It seems that one who sells an estate without any covenant or warranty, on which he may be liable in case the title be defective, is a competent witness for the plaintiff; otherwise, if he be a mere mortgagor (h).

*434

In ejectment by a mortgagee against an assignee under the Lords' Act, a letter written by the mortgagor to the plaintiff before the assignment is evidence against the defendant (i), and it will be presumed to have been written at the time of the date (j). The declarations of a deceased occupier against his own interest, and tending to show that his possession was not adverse, are admissible (k) (A).

An admission made by the tenant in possession is evidence against one who claims as landlord (l), and defends jointly with the tenant, and relies on the tenant's title.

VII. Trespass for mesne profits.

Proof in action for mesne profits.

Where trespass is brought against the tenant in possession (m), for mesne profits, whether by the lessor or by the nominal plaintiff, after a recovery in ejectment, the plaintiff need not prove a title; it is sufficient to prove the judgment in ejectment, and the writ of possession executed (n), the posses-

(d) Bourne v. Turner, Str. 633. Doe v. Williams, Cowp. 621. Doe v. Pye, 1 Esp. C. 304. H. and W. occupied a cottage divided, from 1808 till 1821 (as servants of C., without paying any rent); a year or two before C.'s death, H. having taken L. to live with him, by will devised the moiety occupied by him to W., and L. after the death of H. continued in possession: upon ejectment by W., the defendants coming in to defend as landlords of L., held, that as L. came in under H., who might have maintained ejectment against him, W., who claimed under H., had a sufficient prima facie title, and that as the defendants came in to defend L.'s possession, the latter was not a competent witness to dispute the title either of H. or W. Doe v. Birchmore, 1 P. & D. 488.

(e) Doe v. Wild,[1] 5 Taunt. 183. S. P. Doe d. Lewis v. Bingham,[2] 4 B. & A. 672. Where a witness stated on the voir dire that the lessor of the plaintiff had formerly assigned the premises to him to protect him from impressment, that he had given back the deed to the lessor of the plaintiff, and had never had any possession or beneficial interest in the premises, he was held to be incompetent, as having a direct interest in supporting the plaintiff's action. Doe d. Scales v. Bragg,[3] 1 R. & M. 87.

(f) Fenn v. Granger, 3 Camp. 177. But the objection was waived.

(g) Longchamp v. Fawcitt, Peake's C. 71. [1 Mass. Rep. 91.] Under the late statute it should appear either that his assignees accepted the lease, or that he delivered it up according to the statute. Vide supra, 189.

(h) Anon. 11 Mod. 354.

(i) Doe v. Milburn, 2 M. & W. 853.

(j) Ibid.

(k) Doe v. Harbrow,[4] 3 Ad. & Ell. 67.

(l) Doe v. Litherland,[5] 4 Ad. & Ell. 784.

(m) The action for mesne profits may be brought pending a writ of error. Adams on Ejectment, p. 181; 2 Roscoe on Real Actions.

(n) It is not necessary to execute a habeas where the plaintiff has been let into possession by the defendant. Calvert v. Horsefall, 4 Esp. C. 167.

(A) (The acts and declarations of a party to an action of ejectment, done or made before or after suit brought, and tending to show that he had not a good title, are competent evidence. Elder v. Galbraith, 8 Watts, 81. Reed v. Dickey, 1 Watts, 152. Jackson v. Miller, 6 Cow. 751. Jackson v. Leek, 12 Wend. 105. So where the plaintiff derives title from his grandfather, and the action of ejectment is brought subsequent to the death of his father and mother, admissions made by the father and mother during their lifetime, the father having had an interest for life in the premises, against which the admissions were made, as to the existence and loss of a will alleged to have been executed by the grandfather, may properly be received in evidence. Featherly v. Waggoner, 11 Wend. 599. And in an action of ejectment for dower, the admissions of the husband while living, are as competent evidence in bar of the title of his widow, as they would be in bar of the title of his heir or grantee. Van Duyne v. Thayre, 14 Wend. 233. Where an ejectment was brought to set aside a conveyance made by an executor to the defendant on the ground of fraud, evidence having been given to show the fraudulent combination, the declarations of the executor in the absence of the defendant were held admissible in evidence against him. Price v. Junkin, 4 Watts, 85.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. i. 68. [2]Id. vi. 560. [3]Id. xxi. 388. [4]Id. xxx. 32. [5]Id. xxxi. 179.

sion of the defendant, and the value of the profits; and this will entitle the plaintiff to recover from the time of the demise laid in the declaration (o). And in such case it seems to be sufficient to prove the judgment, without proving the writ of possession executed; for by entering into the rule to confess lease, entry, and ouster, the defendant is estopped from disputing the entry, both as to the lessor and lessee, so that either may maintain trespass without proving an actual entry (p). But where the judgment was against the casual ejector, no rule having been entered into, the lessor must prove the execution of the writ of possession (q). Where, in such case, the defendant was landlord of the premises, and the ejectment was served upon the tenant, it was held that the judgment was not evidence against the defendant, without notice of the ejectment, for he could not be bound by a judgment obtained without his privity (r).

The plaintiff may prove his possession also by showing that he was let into possession by the defendant's consent (s).

Where the plaintiff had recovered, in ejectment against the wife, who had a separate maintenance, and who had lived apart from her husband for many years, and afterwards brought an action of trespass for mesne profits against the husband and wife, and it appeared that the declaration in ejectment had been served upon the wife alone, it was held that the judgment in ejectment *was not evidence against the husband, on the ground that the wife's confession of a trespass committed by her was not evidence against the husband in an action which was to subject him to damages and costs (t). *435

But it is in evidence against one who comes into possession after the judgment, under the defendant in ejectment (u). It is otherwise if no privity of possession can be proved (x).

Where the action was brought by three plaintiffs, A., B. and C., and they gave in evidence a judgment in ejectment on a demise by A., and on another demise by B. and C., it was held to be sufficient, for the judgment showed that they were all entitled to the possession (y).

If the plaintiff can prove that his title accrued before the time of the demise, and also that the defendant was then in possession, he will be entitled to recover antecedent profits, but the defendant will be at liberty to controvert the title, which he cannot do if the plaintiff claim profits from the time of the demise only, for the defendant being tenant in possession must have been served with the declaration, and therefore the record is against him conclusive evidence of title. But the judgment is not evidence of an anterior title, and therefore to entitle himself to damages in respect of such anterior profits, the plaintiff must prove his own title to the previous possession (z); and if the action be brought against a precedent occupier, the plaintiff must also prove an actual entry; for trespass being a possesory

(o) B. N. P. 87. Astlin v. Parkin, Mich. 32 Geo. 2, per omnes Justic., on a case reserved. [Van Aler v. Rogers, 1 Johns. Cas. 281. Shotwell v. Boetin, 1 Dallas, 172.] Gulliver v. Drinkwater, 2 T. R. 261. Doe v. Davies, 1 Esp. C. 358. Doe v. Whitcombe,[1] 8 Bing. 46. The action lies where one tenant in common recovers against another. Goodtitle v. Tombs, 1 Wils. 668. But it seems that a tenant whose under-tenant wrongfully retains possession, is not liable for mesne process. Burne v. Richardson, 4 Taunt. 720.

(p) Thorpe v. Fry, B. N. P. 87; Str. 5. [Lessee of Brown v. Galloway, 1 Peters Rep. 299].

(q) B. N. P. 87.

(r) Hunter v. Britts, 3 Camp. 455. But the defendant having promised to pay the rent and costs to the plaintiff, the admission was held to be evidence of the plaintiff's possession and of the defendant's trespass.

(s) Calvert v. Horsfall, 4 Esp. C. 167.

(t) Denn v. White, 7 T. R. 112. (u) Doe v. Whitcomb,[1] 8 Bing. 46.

(x) Doe v. Harvey,[2] 8 Bing. 239; and it seems that the privity cannot be established by parol where the defendant came into possession under a written agreement; 8 Bing. 46.

(y) K. B. Easter Term, 1827. Chamier v. Clingo,[3] 2 Chitty's R. 410; 5 M. & S. 64.

(z) Decosta v. Atkins, B. N. P. 87; per Eyre, C. J., Hil. 4 Geo. 2. Doe v. Gibbs,[4] 2 C. & P. 615.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxi. 216. [2]Id. xxi. 286. [3]Id. xviii. 382. [4]Id. xii. 289.

remedy, it is essential to prove possession (a). And it seems to have been considered to be doubtful whether the plaintiff can recover any profits anterior to the time of actual entry (b), or whether a subsequent entry will not have relation to the time when the title accrued. As, however, trespass lies to recover mesne profits antecedent to the demise from the tenant in possession, on his confession of the plaintiff's entry (c), it seems, upon the same ground, that an actual entry would have a similar relation. Evidence should be given of the defendant's possession. As the action is against a trespasser in possession, it does not lie against a lessee whose under-tenant holds over after the expiration of the lessee's interest (d). The plaintiff is entitled to such profits only as accrue during the possession of the defendant (e).

If the action be brought after judgment against the casual ejector, the plaintiff may recover the costs of the ejectment as well as mesne profits (f). And he may recover as damages the costs incurred in a Court of Error in reversing a judgment in ejectment obtained by the defendant (g). And the defendant will not, under the plea of the general issue, be entitled to prove *436 an *agreement on the part of the plaintiff to waive the costs, the defendant paying certain rent for the premises (h). The defendant, where the judgment is not pleaded, is at liberty, it seems, to controvert the plaintiff's title (i) (A) (1).

(a) Ibid.
(b) See B. N. P. 87. Stanynought v. Cameron, 2 Barnes, 367.
(c) Ibid. and 1 Sid. 239; 2 Roll. Ab. tit. Trespass by relation.
(d) Burn v. Richardson, 4 Taunt. 720. But the defendant cannot defeat the action by showing that he entered by license of the defendant. Girdlestone v. Porter, Woodf. Land. and Ten. 511.
(e) Girdlestone v. Porter, Woodf. Lan. and T. 511.
(f) B. N. P. 89, as agreed by the Judges in Astlin v. Parkin, Anon. Lofft, 451. Doe v. Hicks, 7 T. R. 433. A party is entitled to recover in the action for mesne profits the costs of the ejectment, although they have never been taxed. Symonds v. Page, 1 J. & C. 29; and see Gulliver v. Drinkwater, 2 T. R. 261. Goodtitle v. Toombs, 3 Wils. 121. He may recover damages for his trouble, &c.; Ib. The amount of the taxed costs of the ejectment. Brooke v. Brydges,[1] 7 Moore, 471. Doe v. Davis, 1 Esp. C. 358.
(g) Nowell v. Roake,[2] 7 B. & C. 404.
(h) Doe d. Hill v. Lee, 4 Taunt. 459.
(i) Doe v. Huddart, 2 C. M. & R. 317.

(A) (In Pennsylvania, in trespass for the mesne profits, after a recovery in ejectment, the defendant cannot set up a title in himself. Lloyd v. Nourse, 2 Rawle, 49. Jeffries v. Zane, 1 Miles, 287. And the plaintiff is entitled to recover the profits down to the time of the verdict. Dawson v. M'Gill, 4 Whart. 230. [But he cannot go back beyond six years, in which case the statute of limitations may be pleaded. Hare v. Furey, 3 Yeates, 13. But in the case of one joint tenant, or tenant in common recovering against his partner, the plaintiff must obtain possession in a reasonable time after judgment in ejectment, and if he is remiss herein for years, he shall not charge the defendant as a trespasser. Ibid. A conveyance of the premises by the plaintiff to the defendant, pending a suit for mesne profits after a recovery in ejectment, with all the right, title, interest, claim, and demand in the same, is not a release of the mesne profits, but the plaintiff may nevertheless recover in the action. Duffield v. Stille, 2 Dallas, 156. S. C. 1 Yeates, 154.] In Indiana the defendant may show in mitigation of damages, that his possession was under a judgment of a competent tribunal. Buntin v. Duchane, 1 Blackf. 57. In North Carolina the record of the recovery in ejectment is conclusive evidence of the title of the lessee of the plaintiff at the date of the demise in an action for mesne profits. Poston v. Jones, 2 Dev. & Bat. 294. [But the defendant is not estopped from pleading liberum tenementum to trespass for mesne profits where the term had expired when the judgment in ejectment was entered. Murphy v. Guion, 2 Hayw. 381. It is not necessary to enter up formal judgment in ejectment to entitle the plaintiff to bring trespass for the mesne profits. Same parties, 1 Car. Law Repos. 95.] And it seems that the jury may consider in mitigation of damages permanent improvements honestly made by the defendant and actually enjoyed by the plaintiff. Dowd v. Fawcett, 4 Dev. 92.)

(1) The right to mesne profits is a necessary consequence of a recovery in ejectment. Benson et al. v. Matsdorf, 2 Johns. 369: And the defendant cannot set up a title in bar, even if he has a better title. Ibid. So where the lessor has taken possession under the judgment in ejectment, and brought his action for mesne profits, and the defendant has, in the mean time, brought ejectment for the same premises, and obtained a verdict; he cannot set up the verdict as a bar to the action for mesne profits. Ibid. No defence can be set up in the action for mesne profits, which would have been a bar to the action of ejectment. Baron v. Abeel, 3 Johns. 481. A recovery of nominal damages in ejectment is no bar to an action for mesne profits, nor is it

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xvii. 86. [2]Id. xiv. 61.

VIII. Effect of a judgment in ejectment.

In an action of trespass for mesne profits, against the former defendant, the record is evidence of his title at the time of the demise (k). So it is also evidence between those who claim in privity with the parties (l) (1). And where two recovered judgment in ejectment on several demises, it was held that this was admissible evidence in an action of trespass by them against two of the former defendants (m), since the judgment was perfectly consistent with their being tenants in common, and as such they might maintain trespass jointly. It is, however, to be observed, that in addition to the judgment, the plaintiffs proved a delivery of possession under a writ

(k) Astlin v. Parkin, Burr. 668; Ld. Raym. 730; supra, Vol. I. tit. JUDGMENT. But it is not conclusive unless it be pleaded. Doe v. Huddart, 2 C. M. & R. 317.

(l) Supra, Vol. I. p. 312. The judgment in the preceding ejectment is evidence, in an action for mesne profits, against a defendant who came into possession under the defendant in the ejectment. Doe v. Whitcomb,[1] 8 Bing. 46.

In an action for mesne profits, it appearing that the party had been put into possession under a written agreement which was not produced; held, that parol evidence was inadmissible to show under whom he held, and that in such an action the judgment in ejectment against a former tenant in possession was not admissible in evidence against the party afterwar ls found in possession, without proving that he came in under the defendant, so to make him privy to the judgment in ejectment. Doe v. Harvey,[2] 8 Bing. 239. A judgment against a tenant does not bind a landlord without notice. Hunter v. Britts, 3 Camp. 455.

(m) Chamier v. Clingo, 5 M. & S. 64; the issues were on not guilty, and liberum tenementum.

necessary to enter a remittitur damna. Van Alen v. Rogers, 1 Johns. Cas. 281. But as it is an equitable action, it will allow of every equitable defence. Murray v. Gouverneur, 2 Johns. Cas. 438. If, however, the tenant has made improvements on the land, under a contract with the owner, he will not be allowed for them in this action, if brought by a devisee, but must seek compensation from the representatives of the devisor. Van Alen v. Rogers, ubi sup. See Maris v. Simple, Addison's Rep. 215. An action for mesne profits lies against a person who has entered under a contract for a deed, and afterwards refuses to perform the contract. Smith v. Stewart, 6 Johns. 46. After a recovery in ejectment by default, against the casual ejector, the lessor of the plaintiff may maintain trespass for the mesne profits against the tenant, as well for the use of the land as for the costs of the ejectment. Baron v. Abeel, ubi sup.

In New Jersey, mesne profits may be recovered in the action of ejectment, and in assessing them, the jury may include all the plaintiff's reasonable and necessary expenses—such as counsel fees, &c. Denn v. Chubb, 1 Coxe's Rep. 466.

By statute in Virginia, trespass for mesne profits of land recovered in ejectment, survives against the defendant's representatives. Lee v. Cooke, Gilmer, 331. After judgment for the plaintiff in ejectment, trespass for the mesne profits, without proof of an actual trespass, does not lie against one who was no party to the suit when the judgment was entered. Alexander v. Herbert, 2 Call. 508.

In Maryland, a recovery in trespass for the mesne profits is only for the use and occupation of land, and does not bar an action of trespass quare clausum fregit, for injuries done to the premises during the same period. Gill v. Cole, 1 Har. & J. 403. If the plaintiff can prove that his title accrued before the time of the demise in the ejectment, and that the defendant has been longer in possession, he may recover antecedent profits: But the defendant in such case, may controvert his title. West v. Hughes, 1 Har. & J. 574. Though a writ of inquiry of damages will lie in ejectment (Joan v. Shields, 3 Har. & M'Hen. 7), yet the mesne profits cannot be given in evidence on the execution of such writ. Gore v. Worthington, 3 Har. & M'Hen. 96.

In South Carolina, a recovery in an action of trespass on land is a bar to an action for the recovery of mesne profits, anterior to the verdict in trespass. Coleman v. Parish, 1 M'Cord, 264. And an action for mesne profits, does not lie after an action of trespass to try title. Sumter v. Lehie, 1 Const. Rep. 102.

In Massachusetts, the tenant in a real action, against whom judgment has been rendered, may, after the reversal of such judgment, by writ of error, maintain assumpsit for the mesne profits against the original demandant or his representative. Cummings v. Noyes, 10 Mass. Rep. 433. After a judgment for the demandant in a real action where the jury has inquired of the value of the land and of the improvements pursuant to stat. 1807, c. 75, no action lies for the mesne profits, whether the demandant elected to abandon the premises, or to pay for the improvements. Jones v. Carter, 12 Mass. Rep. 314. Trespass for mesne profits does not lie after a recovery upon a writ of entry, unless the plaintiff had a right of entry. Cox v. Callender, 9 Mass. Rep. 533.)

(1) [Where the defendant in ejectment, pending the action, transfers possession to a third person, the latter is concluded by the recovery, and cannot set up a title in himself as a bar to an action for the mesne profits. Jackson v. Stone 13 Johns. 447.[a] But the defendant is not estopped by the judgment in ejectment from showing that the plaintiff was in possession of the land, between the demise laid in the declaration, and the judgment. West v. Hughes, 1 Har. & J. 574.]

[a] Jackson v. Hills, 8 Cowen, 290. Chirac v. Reinecker, 2 Peters, 622.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxi. 216. [2] Id. xxi. 286.

to their joint agent. Where the parties are different, the judgment is not evidence of title (n).

A judgment in ejectment is not conclusive as to the right, because it does not affect the inheritance (o).

ELECTION.

Proof of making an election to purchase, see R. v. Hungerford Market Co., 4 B. & Ad. 327; infra, tit. Notice. See tit. Bankrupt.

EMBLEMENTS.

See Graves v. Wild, 5 B. & Ad. 105. Williams on Executors, tit. Emblements; Com. Dig. Biens, G. 1. 2 (A).

EQUITY.

Questions peculiar to Courts of Equity devolve on Courts of Law in cases of bankruptcy (p). The rules of evidence are substantially the same in equity as at law (q).

ERROR (r).

It is a general rule, that error in a record of a judgment does not defeat the judgment, so long as it stands unreversed (s). Thus error in a judgment of record is no answer to an action on the judgment (t). So a defendant in a criminal case may plead in bar an erroneous judgment of acquittal (u).

*437 *A sheriff may justify under an irregular as well as under an erroneous judgment, so as the writ be not void; and a purchaser will, in such case, acquire a title under a sale by him, for they are not privy to the irregularity (x) (B). A party may justify under an erroneous judgment, though it be afterwards reversed, for the judgment was the act of the Court; but not under an irregular one which has been vacated, for the irregularity was in the privity of the plaintiff or his attorney (y).

ESTOPPEL (z).

Estoppels are by record (a), specialty (b), livery, or by special circum-

(n) Vol. I. tit. Judgment.
(o) Lomax v. Ryder, 7 Bro. C. P. 145.
(p) Doe v. Steward,[1] 1 Ad. & Ell. 311.
(q) Glynn v. Bank of England, 2 Ves. 38.
(r) It is a general rule that error shall not be assigned in a thing to the advantage of the party. 5 Co. 39, 44; 7 Co. 4; 8 Co. 59.
(s) R. v. Scott, Leach's C. C. L. 445; supra, tit. Counter Plea.
(t) Horsly v. Daniel, 2 Lev. 161.
(u) 9 H. 5, c. 2. See Starkie's Crim. Pl. 320.
(x) Tidd, 924, 3d edit.
(y) Philips v. Biron et al. 1 Str. 509; Ray. 73; Tidd. 924. So in the case of an administrator where the administration is revoked, not reversed. P. C. Str. 509. Where an officer joins in defence with one who has no justification, he loses the benefit of it. Ibid.; and 1 Saund. 28; Cro. Jac. 27.
(z) As to the estoppel of a jury, see Vol. I. Ind. tit. Estoppel. (a) See tit. Record.—Judgment.
(b) See tit. Deed. A. having an equitable fee in certain lands, on the 21st of January 1823, conveyed the

(A) (The general rule is, that the tenant is entitled to emblements whenever the determination of the lease is contingent upon the act of the lessor, who actually determines the lease before the time of its natural expiration. Comfort v. Duncan, 1 Miles 231. Stewart v. Doughty, 9 John. R. 108. But the tenant is not entitled to any compensation for improvements. Stewart v. Doughty, supra. The tenant is not entitled to emblements where the termination of the lease is fixed. Whitmarsh v. Cutting, 10 John. R. 360. And where there is a lease for a year, and an agreement for its renewal for another year, provided the lessor did not want the farm for his own use, if the lessee leave the premises at or before the expiration of the first year he is not entitled to emblements. Bain v. Clark, 10 John. R. 424. In Pennsylvania, for the encouragement of agriculture, a general custom has become general law, that a tenant for a term certain, is entitled to the way-going crop, whether such right be recognized in the contract or otherwise. Diffendorffer v. Jones, cited 5 Binn. 487. Stultz v. Dickey, 5 Binn. 285. Biggs v. Brown, 2 Serg. & R. 14. But the custom is limited to grain sown in the autumn, to be reaped the next harvest. Demi v. Bossler, 1 Penn. R. 224.)

(B) (Bank U. S. v. Bank of Washington, 6 Peters, 8. As respects third persons, whatever is done under an erroneous judgment while it remains in force, is valid and binding. Ibid. But as to parties, see United States v. Nourse, 9 Peters, 8.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxviii. 89.

stances, by which a man is excluded from some claim, averment, or proof. Unless a decree would operate as an estoppel if pleaded, it is of no effect in evidence (c).

Neither the tenant by the courtesy, nor the lord by escheat, can defeat an estate or freehold without showing the deed, for the act of livery is an estoppel which runs with the land, and bars all persons to claim it by virtue of any condition except such as appears on the deed (d); although the estate be created by law, the party has possession of the deed.

A party or privy (e) is usually concluded by his contract or admission, where that admission has been acted upon (A). A tenant is estopped from controverting his landlord's title to demise (f). A party who induces another to deliver goods to a woman, whom he represents to be his wife, cannot afterwards be admitted to say that she is not his wife. So a man is usually excluded from averment or proof by his own fraud. Where a tenant fraudulently concealed a declaration in ejectment, and the sheriff, with the concurrence of the tenant, on judgment by default seized not only land demised, but also mines not demised, in which the tenant had nothing more than a mere *liberty to dig, it was held that the latter, in an action by the landlord, under the stat. 11 G. 2, c. 19, s. 12, was estopped, by his fraudulent act, from contending that the declaration applied to the land only, and not to the mines (g). So one who has conveyed an estate in order to confer a colourable qualification to kill game, cannot allege his own fraud to defeat the conveyance (h). But trustees are not estopped by acts done contrary to their duty as public trustees (i). Nor is an executor de son tort, but who afterwards takes out letters of administration, barred by an agreement in respect of the intestate's property (k). *438

EXAMINATIONS IN CASES OF FELONY.

See tit. Admissions and Appendix.

Examinations taken under judicial authority by virtue of different statutes, are in general (unless the statute specially enact the contrary) inadmissible against strangers, even after the deaths of the witnesses: for although they are taken judicially and upon oath, yet inasmuch as they are Admissibility.

same to B. by lease and release. The release recited that A. was legally or equitably entitled to the premises conveyed, and the releasor covenanted that he was or stood lawfully or equitably seised in his demesne of and in and otherwise well entitled to the same. The legal estate was subsequently conveyed to A., and he afterwards, for a valuable consideration, conveyed the same to C. Upon ejectment brought by B. against C., held, first, that there being in the release no certain and precise averment of any seisin in A., but only a recital and covenant that he was legally or equitably entitled, C. was not thereby estopped from setting up the legal estate acquired by him after the execution of the release.

Held, secondly, that the release did not operate as an estoppel by virtue of the words "granted, bargained, sold, aliened, remised, released," &c., because the release passed nothing but what the releasor had at the time, and A. had not the legal title in the premises at the time when the release was made.

Held, thirdly, that this case did not fall within the rule that a mortgagor cannot dispute the title of his mortgagee, because C. claimed as a purchaser for a valuable consideration without notice a legal interest which was not in A. at the time of the mortgage to B. A. had then only an equitable interest which passed to B. whose title as to that was not disputed. Right d. Jeffreys v. Bucknell,[1] 2 B. & Ad. 278.

(c) 1 Ad. & Ell. 18. See further R. v. Directors of East India Co.,[2] 4 B. & Ad. 530.

(d) 10 Co. 94; Co. Litt. 226.

(e) A party admitted to chambers in Lincoln's Inn merely by order of the benchers, who are trustees in fee, without any formal conveyance from the party who surrenders under a like order, is not estopped as a privy in estate, by the acts of the former tenant. Doe v. Errington, 6 Bing. N. C. 79.

(f) Supra, tit. Admission.

(g) Crocker v. Fothergill, 2 B. & A. 652.

(h) Doe d. Roberts v. Roberts, 2 B. & A. 267.

(i) Infra, tit. Trustee.

(k) Doe v. Glenn,[3] 1 Ad. & Ell. 49. But he may legalize his own acts. Curtis v. Vernon, 3 T. R. 587. Per Lord Kenyon, citing Vaughan v. Browne, 2 Str. 1106.

(A) (But the government is not ordinarily bound by an estoppel. Johnson v. U. S., 5 Mason's C. C. R. 593.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxii. 73. [2] Id. xxiv. 112. [3] Id. xxviii. 33.

taken ex parte, the opportunity for cross-examination, which, it is to be remembered, is one of the two great tests of truth, is wanting (l). Hence the ex parte examination of a pauper, taken judicially (m) on oath before two magistrates (n), is not evidence in a settlement case; for the appellants had no power to cross-examine. But in the case of The King v. Ravenstone (o) the Court held that the examination of a pregnant woman, under the stat. 6 Geo. 2, c. 31, in the absence of the party upon whom she filiated the child, was evidence after her death, upon which the Court of Quarter Sessions might make an order of filiation. This decision is contrary to general principles; and the cases of depositions before magistrates, under the statutes of Philip & Mary, in felony, upon which the Court are reported to have relied in the above case, are in direct opposition to it.

Evidence of the examination of a prisoner before a magistrate, under the stat. 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 3, has already been considered under the head of ADMISSIONS. It seems that in order to warrant the reading of such an examination in evidence, it is sufficient to prove the magistrate's signature, without calling either the magistrate or his clerk (p).

Although the Mutiny Act (q) makes an attested copy of a soldier's affidavit evidence, the original is, by reasonable intendment, also admissible (r),
*439 and *either the original or the attested copy is admissible, although the soldier be dead, or be beyond the realm (s). But no other attested copy but that delivered to the soldier is admissible (t); and such attested copy does not upon production prove itself, but must be authenticated by evidence of the hand-writing of the magistrates (u).

EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS.

I. EVIDENCE IN ACTIONS BY EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS.

1. Proof of title, when necessary.
2. Title, how proved.
3. Proof of the cause of action.

II. EVIDENCE IN ACTIONS AGAINST EXECUTORS.

1. Under the plea of ne unques executor.
2. Plene administravit.
3. Outstanding bonds, and judgment recovered.
4. On nil debet—Non devastavit, &c. to debt on judgment—Scire fieri, inquiry, &c.

(l) Supra, Vol. I. tit. JUDICIAL INSTRUMENTS.

(m) By virtue of the stat. 13 & 14 Car. 2, c. 12, s. 1, which in giving power to the magistrates to remove, incidentally gives a power to examine upon oath. Per Lord Kenyon, R. v. Eriswell, 3 T. R. 721.

(n) R v. Ferry Frystone, 2 East, 54. R. v. Nuneham Courtenay, 1 East, 373.

(o) 5 T. R. 373. Vide supra tit. DEPOSITIONS.

(p) In the case of R. v. Chappel, Wells Summer Assizes, 1834, Lord Denman refused to receive the examination of the prisoner bearing a mark only but not the prisoner's signature, although signed by the magistrate, without proof, by the magistrate or his clerk, that the examination was truly taken. In a later case (R. v. Smith & another, 2 Lewin's Cases, 139), Parke, B. was disposed to overrule a similar objection, and Lord Denman doubted as to his former ruling. In R. v. Hope (Central Criminal Court, 1835), the examination was received, although marked only; there, however, the constable who proved the examination was an attesting witness to it; but Patteson, J., said, that he was by no means satisfied that in any case it was necessary to call either the magistrate or his clerk.

(q) 55 Geo. 3, c. 180, s. 70.

(r) R. v. Warley, 6 T. R. 534. Upon the same principle that the service of notice of distress on a party is good notice, although the statute directs that it shall be left at his house. See tit. DISTRESS; but see Burdon v. Ricketts, 2 Camp. 121.

(s) R. v. Warminster,[1] 3 B. & A. 321. Contrary to the opinion expressed by Lawrence, J., R. v. Clayton-le-Moors, 5 T. R. 706.

(t) R. v. Clayton-le-Moors, 5 T. R. 714.

(u) R. v. Bilton, 1 East, 13.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. v. 303.

1. Where an executor or administrator brings an action (x) in his representative capacity merely, as where he declares in trover on a possession by the testator (y) or intestate, and a conversion in his lifetime (z), or upon a contract made by him, he makes a profert of the probate, or of the letters of administration, and if the defendant mean to dispute his right to sue in the representative character which he assumes, he must do so by his plea in abatement, and cannot make the objection by evidence under the plea of the general issue, or of any other plea in bar (a); for such a plea puts in issue the cause of action merely, and not the character in which the plaintiff sues (b). Proof of title, where necessary.

Thus, if an administrator declare on an assumpsit to the intestate, the *defendant cannot, under the plea of non assumpsit, dispute the grant of administration to the plaintiff, and if the letters were to be produced, he could not object the want of a proper stamp (c). So the plea of non est factum on a bond to the intestate, admits that the plaintiff is a good administrator (d). But if the plaintiff declare on a cause of action arising in his own time, he must, under the general issue, if it be essential to his claim, prove his title as executor or administrator, and the defendant may controvert it. Thus, if he declares as administrator upon his own possession, the defendant may, under the general issue, impeach his title, and show that there is an executor (e); and even if the plaintiff declare in trover upon a possession by the testator, and a conversion in his own time, it seems that the case is just the same as if he had declared, as he might have done, upon his own possession (f), and that he must prove himself to be such under the plea of the general issue, which raises the question of the title (g) *440

(x) By the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 2, executors may bring actions for injuries to the real estates of the deceased, and actions may be brought against executors for an injury to property, real or personal, by the testator.

(y) Blainfield v. March, 7 Mod. 141.

(z) It has been said, that where the goods of the testator were never in possession of the executor, he must sue as executor. Cockerill v. Kynaston, 4 T. R. 280. And that whether the conversion were before or after the death, if the goods when recovered will be assets, he may sue for them as executor. And Lord Holt, C. J. in Marsfield v. Marsh, 2 Ld. Raym. 824, held, that if an administrator declared in trover upon a possession by the testatnr, and a conversion after his death, the defendant could not, under the plea of the general issue, show that there was an executor. But see the cases cited below, 440, note (g).

(a) Blainfield v. March, 7 Mod. 141. Per Holt, C. J., Marsfield v. Marsh, 2 Ld. Raym. 824. Loyd v. Finlayson, 2 Esp. C. 564; 1 Will. Saund. 275, n. 3; Salk. 285; Vin. Ab. Ev. P. b. 7, pl. 5; Peake's Ev. 373. And see Elden v. Keddell, 8 East, 187. Newman v. Leach, Barnes, 365. [Berry v. Pullam, 1 Hayw. 16.]

(b) Per Holt, C. J., Marsfield v. Marsh, 2 Ld. Raym. 824. Under the plea of non assumpsit, it cannot be objected that the will has been proved in an improper court. Stokes v. Bate,[1] 5 B. & C. 491. And by the general rule, 4 Will. 4, in all actions by or against executors or administrators, the character in which the plaintiff or defendant is stated on the record to sue or be sued shall not in any case be considered as in issue unless specially raised. The plea of the general issue, however, admits simply the title, not the sufficiency of the title. Adams v. Terre-tenants of Savage, 6 Mod. 134.

(c) Thynne v. Protheroe, 2 M. & S. 553. Watson v. King, 4 Camp. 272; Com. Dig. Abatement, [E.] 13. In Hunt v. Stevens, 3 Taunt. 113, the conversion was alleged to be in the time of the executor.

(d) Gidley v. Williams, 1 Salk. 38, 3d Resol.; Com. Dig. Pleader, [2 D.] 10; [2 D.] 14.

(e) Per Holt, C. J., Marsfield v. Marsh, 2 Ld. Raym. 824; Salk. 285.

(f) For the property in goods draws to it the possession in law. Jenkins v. Plombe, 6 Mod. 182. 2 Will. Saund. 47, k. and the cases there cited.

(g) Hunt v. Stevens, 3 Taunt. 113; and see the observations of Lawrence, J. Ibid. 10 East, 293; Grimstead v. Shirley, 2 Taunt. 116; and see Bollard v. Spencer, 7 T. R. 358, and the cases cited there; and 2 Will Saund. 47, k. to show that where the conversion was in the time of the executor, he is liable to costs. Contra, Cockerill v. Kynaston, 4 T. R. 280. So, if an executor declare on an account stated with him as executor, without saying concerning monies due from the defendant to the testator; Jones v. Jones,[2] 1 Bing. 249. See Hollis v. Smith, 2 Taunt. 119. The promises in the declaration were all laid to the plaintiff as executor; pleas, the general issue and the statute of limitations; the plaintiff was nonsuited; it was held that it was so far an action on a contract between the plaintiff and defendant, as to entitle the defendant to his costs under 23 Hen. 8, c. 15. Slater v. Lawson,[3] 1 B. & Ad. 893.

So where, in assumpsit by an administrator, the declaration containing a count upon an account stated with and promises to the administrator, the verdict upon the general issue being for the defendant, held that

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xi. 282. [2] Id. viii. 312. [3] Id. xx. 504.

(A). Where the plaintiff has not had the actual possession of the testator's goods, proof of his executorship seems to be essential to the proof of property in the goods; but where he has taken actual possession, evidence of this nature, as against a wrong-doer, is unnecessary, for bare possession is primâ facie evidence of property (h). Where the money of the testator is
*441 received by the defendant, *after the death of the testator, the executor may maintain an action in his own name (i), though he must make out his title by proof of his executorship. Where proof of the title as executor is necessary, they will fail unless all the executors are joined, though those who are omitted have not proved the will (k). Where the plaintiff is bound to prove himself executor or administrator, it is competent to the defendant to repel the proof by evidence. Thus he may show that the letters of administration are not stamped with a sufficient stamp (l).

2. The title of the executor is established, as has already been seen, by proof of the death of the testator, and by the production of the probate (m), which is the only mode of proving the title to personal property under a will (n), but the right of the executor is derived from the will, and accrues immediately upon the death of the testator; the probate is but the evidence of his title (o); consequently the grant of a probate subsequently to the

he was entitled to the costs, but as to the pleadings, to the costs of that count only in which the promises were laid as made to the plaintiff. Jobson v. Forster,[1] 1 B. & Ad. 6; and see Dowbiggin v. Harrison,[2] 9 B. & C. 666.

Where the cause of action arises in the lifetime of a testator, or intestate, and the executor or administrator cannot bring the action in his own name, he is not liable for costs. Jones v. Wilson, 6 M. & S. 178.

In assumpsit against an executor on promises by the testator, the defendant pleaded first, the general issue, and secondly, plene administravit; the plaintiff joined issue on the first, and took judgment of assets quando acciderint on the second plea; held in error that the defendant having, by pleading that the testator never promised, compelled the plaintiff to incur the costs of a trial, he was entitled to judgment as to those costs de bonis testatoris et si non de bonis propriis. Marshall v. Wilden,[3] 9 B. & C. 655.

And now by the statute 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 31, in any action by an executor or administrator in right of the testator or intestate, such executor or administrator shall, unless the Judge of the court in which such action is brought, or a Judge of any of the superior courts, shall otherwise order, shall be liable to pay costs to the defendant in case of being nonsuited or a verdict passing against the plaintiff; and in all other cases in which he would be liable if such plaintiff were suing in his own right upon a cause of action accruing to himself. The clause is retrospective. Freeman v. Moyes,[4] 1 Ad. & Ell. 338.

(h) Blackham's case, 1 Salk. 290. Basset v. Maynard, Cro. Eliz. 819. 5 Rep. 24. Moor, 691, 2. 2 Will. Saund. 47, c. Watson v. King, 4 Camp. 272. 2 Will. on Executors, 5. Where the conversion was after the death, the executor may declare on his own possession, whether ever actually possessed or not. Hollis v. Smith, 10 East, 293. A judgment recovered by an administrator belongs to himself personally; therefore he need not declare in his representative character, in an action either upon the judgment, or for the escape of the debtor taken in execution thereon. Bonafous v. Walker, 2 T. R. 126.

(i) Per Ashurst, J., 2 T. R. 477. Smith v. Barrow. So an administrator having recovered a judgment for a debt due to the intestate, needs not declare as administrator in an action on the judgment. Crawford v. Whittal, Doug. 4, n.

(k) Munt v. Stokes, 4 T. R. 561. (l) Hunt v. Stevens, 3 Taunt. 113.

(m) An executor has a right of action against the Bank for not permitting the transfer of stock by him, although such stock may have been specifically bequeathed. Franklin v. Bank of England,[5] 9 B. & C. 156; and see Mead v. Lord Orrery, 3 Atk. 239.

Where one only of three executors took probate, liberty being reserved to the others to come in, &c., held that an action to their reversionary interest in the premises was well brought in the names of all in whom the legal property was vested. Walters v. Pfiel,[6] 1 M. & M. 362.

Executors are not entitled to residue undisposed of, unless it appear to be intended so by the will or codicil. 1 Will. 4, c. 40.

(n) R. v. Inhab. of Netherseal, 4 T. R. 258. Smith v. Milles, 1 T. R. 480; Penney v. Penney,[7] 8 B. & C. 335; supra, tit. EJECTMENT: and Vol. I. tit. JUDGMENT.

(o) Smith v. Milles, 1 T. R. 480.

(A) (A declaration by a plaintiff as administrator, containing counts for goods sold, work done, and the common money counts, without stating any indebtedness to the intestate, or referring to the plaintiff, in his representative character in any subsequent part of the declaration, except in a profert of letters of administration, is bad on demurrer. Christopher, Administrator, &c. v. Stockholm, 5 Wend. 36.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xx. 331. [2] Id. xvii. 470. [3] Id. xvii. 467. [4] Id. xxviii. 103. [5] Id. xvii. 347. [6] Id. xxii. 334. [7] Id. xv. 230.

commencement of the action, but previous to the declaration, will be sufficient (p).

If the probate has been lost, an exemplification under the seal of the court, or an examined copy of the act-book (q), or the original will, properly authenticated, and indorsed as the instrument on which probate has been granted, will be admissible to prove it (r).

The defendant on the other hand may, on issue taken on a plea sufficient for the purpose (s), impeach the plaintiff's title as executor or administrator, *by showing either that the grant was void ab initio, as by evidence that *442 the probate was forged; or (t) where letters of administration have been granted by a bishop or other inferior judge in another diocese, that the deceased had bona notabilia in another diocese (u); that he is still living,

(p) Salk. 301. As to the relation of an administrator's right, see 1 Com. Dig. tit. Administration [B.] 10. 2 Roll. Ab. 554, l. 15 & 25; and R. v. Inhab. of Horseley, 8 East, 405. The grant of administration as to title to personalty, and the liability of the administrator, relate to the death of the intestate. Ibid.

(q) Ca. tem. Hardw. 108. 8 East, 187; et supra, Vol. I. tit. JUDGMENT; Ind. tit. PROBATE.

(r) Supra, Vol. I. tit. JUDGMENT. Gorton v. Dyson,[1] 1 B. & B. 219.

(s) When the defendant insists that the letters of administration are void by reason of extrinsic matter, or inapplicable to the purpose for which the plaintiff uses them, he must plead the facts specially; he cannot go into such evidence on issue taken on a plea merely denying that the plaintiff is administrator. And, therefore, if the plaintiff allege administration by the bishop of Chester, and the defendant deny that he was administrator, in manner and form, &c., the plaintiff cannot, under this issue, show bona notabilia in another diocese or province, by reason of his, the debtor's, residence there at the time of the death. Stokes v. Bate,[1] 5 B. & C. 491; and see Yeomans v. Bradshaw, Carth. 373. Hilliard v. Cox, 1 Salk. 37. Griffith v. Griffith, Sayer, 83. The power of the bishop to grant administration is founded, not on the fact that the deceased died within the diocese, but on that of his having left goods there, per Lee, C. J., in Griffith v. Griffith, Sayer, 83; and it will be presumed, in the absence of proof to the contrary, that there were not bona notabilia in another diocese. Ibid. and per Bayley and Holroyd, Js.,[1] 5 B. & C. 498, 9; contrary to the ancient practice, when it was held to be necessary to aver that there were not bona notabilia in another diocese, per Holt, C. J., in Denham v. Stephenson, Salk. 40; contra, Woodward v. Thomson, Cro. Eliz. 907. Skidmore v. Winston, ibid, 879. Probate granted by an archdeacon under authority from the diocesan, is valid, where the party died within the archdeaconry, although he was possessed of a term lying within another archdeaconry within the same diocese. R. v. Yonge, 5 M. & S. 119. The authority of an administrator appointed according to the provisions of the stat. 38 Geo. 3, c. 87, during the absence of an executor from this country, does not become actually void, but merely voidable. Paynton v. Hannay, 3 B. & P. 26.

(t) Note, that if letters of administration are granted by a bishop or other inferior judge, where the deceased had bona notabilia in another diocese, they are wholly void. Prince's Case, 5 Rep. 30. Blackborough v. Davis,[1] 1 P. Wms. 43. R. v. Loggen, 1 Str. 73; 2 Bing. N. C. 495. But in such case a probate is not void, but merely voidable, 1 Will. Saund. 274, note (3), per Ld. Macclesfield, 1 P. Wms. 767, 8; and per Thompson, L. C. B., R. v. Whitaker, Lanc. Sum. Ass. 1810. Where there are not bona notabilia within the province, the grant of administration by the archbishop is void. Shaw v. Stoughton, 2 Lev. 86; Com. Dig. Adm. B. 3. Where there are, however, bona notabilia in a diocese within the province, the grant by the metropolitan is voidable only. 2 Bing. N. C. 495; Com. Dig. Adm. B. 3. For the metropolitan has a jurisdiction throughout his province. A plea of bona notabilia in another diocese, is a plea in bar and not in abatement, for it does not give the plaintiff a better writ. In the case of an infant sole executor, administration is to be granted to the guardian till the infant attain his age. 38 G. 3, c. 87, s. 6.

(u) If a man have bona notabilia (i. e. to the value of 5*l.*) in several dioceses of the same province, there must be a prerogative administration; if in two of Canterbury and two of York, there must be two prerogative administrations; and if in one diocese of each province, each bishop must grant one; B. N. P. 141; Salk. 39;[1] 5 B. & C. 493. Debts due by specialty are deemed to be the deceased's goods in the diocese where the securities happen to be at the time of his death; 1 Will. Saund. 274, note (3); and this is so in the case of a covenant to pay money out of the funds of a company whose stock lies out of the diocese. Gurney v. Rawlins, 2 M. & W. 87. A lease for years is bona notabilia where the lands lie; Com. Dig. Adm. B. 4. Foreign bonds, and securities of foreign debtors, cannot be administered here without letters of administration in this country. Attorney-general v. Bouwens, 4 M. & W. 171. But debts by simple contract follow the person of the debtor, and are esteemed goods in that diocese where the debtor resides at the time of the creditor's death. Ibid.; and Cro. Eliz. 472. Off. of Ex. 46. Godolph. 70. [Thompson v. Wilson, 2 N. Hamp. Rep. 292.] Judgment and statutes and recognizances are bona notabilia in the place where they are given or acknowledged. Ibid. Dyer, 305. Kegg v. Horton, 1 Lutw. 401. Gold v. Strode, 3 Mod. 324. Adam v. Savage, 2 Ld. Raym. 855. The goods which a testator, dying in itenere, has with him, do not make his testament liable to the Prerogative Court. Doe v. Ovens,[2] 2 B. & Ad. 423. A metropolitan administration of goods within a peculiar is not void (and qu. whether voidable). Lysons v. Barrow,[3] 2 Bing. N. C. 486.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xi. 282. [2]Id. xxii. 115. [3]Id. xxix. 402.

or that the will was forged (x); or that the grant of administration has been revoked (y), of which the act-book would be good evidence.

Title of administrator.

The title of an administrator is proved, as has been seen, by the production of the letters of administration (z).

The defendant cannot, under the general issue, object that there is another executor who is not joined; he cannot make such an objection, except by plea in abatement after oyer of the probate, that the other executor is still alive (a). Neither can advantage be taken of the non-joinder of a co-executor as defendant, except by a plea in abatement, which must allege that the party not joined has administered, which must of course be proved on issue taken on such a plea (b).

*443 *If administration granted to a creditor be afterwards repealed at the suit of the next of kin, the creditor may still retain against the rightful administrator; for where administration is granted to a wrong person, it is only voidable; but where it is granted in a wrong diocese, it is wholly void, and there can be no retainer (c). So a payment to one who has obtained probate under a forged will is good against a subsequent rightful administrator (d) (1).

Where the widow of an intestate delivered goods of the intestate to a creditor of the intestate, in satisfaction of the debt, and the lawful administrator brought trover against the creditor, it was held that this single act of intermeddling by the widow did not constitute her an executrix de son tort (e), so as to legalize the delivery; and even if the widow had by her acting rendered herself liable as executrix de son tort, it would be very doubtful whether such a delivery could be set up in defence to an action by the lawful administrator (f). At all events, it seems that a payment by an executor de son tort will not be available either to himself or to the creditor, unless it be made in the due course of administration, and that the payment will not be allowed to the executor de son tort, even in mitigation of damages, where there is a deficiency of assets whereby the rightful executor is prevented from satisfying his own debt (g).

Cause of action(A).

3. A count by an administrator, on a promise to the intestate, will not be supported by proof of a promise to the administrator (h). And where (x) Supra, Vol. I. tit. JUDGMENT. (y) Supra, Vol. I. Ib.

(z) Supra, 407. [See Walker v. Hill, 17 Mass. Rep. 380.]
(a) Com. Dig. Abatement [E.], 13; 1 Will. Saund. 291, g, and the cases there cited.
(b) Swallow v. Emberson, 1 Lev. 161; and 3 T. R. 560. [Burrow v. Sellers, 1 Hayn. 501.] Where a creditor is made a co-executor, but neither proves the will nor acts, he may maintain an action against the other for his demand. Rawlinson v. Shaw, 3 T. R. 557.
(c) B. N. P. 141.
(d) Allen v. Dundas, 3 T. R. 125. Vide infra, note (n).
(e) Mountford v. Gibson, 4 East, 441. (f) Ibid.; and see Bl. Comm. 507, 8.
(g) Ibid.; and see the observations of Lawrence, J., 3 East, 453-4. And see 1 Will. Exors. P. 1, B. 3. C. 5; Layfield v. Layfield, 7 Sim. 172.
(h) Sarell v. Wine, 3 East, 409. [[1] 3 B. & A. 632.]

(1) [A sale by an administrator is valid, though a will be afterwards discovered and the administration revoked. Benson v. Rice, 2 Nott and M'Cord, 577. And a repeal of letters of administration, given to one person, gives no right to a subsequent administrator to sue a bond given to the first. Gordon v. Woods, 4 Bibb, 476.]

[Proof of a promise to an executor will not support an averment of a promise to the testator. Glenn v. M'Cullough, 2 M'Cord, 212.]

(A) (In an action against administrators, where there are several, the admission of indebtedness by one, it seems, will not entitle the plaintiff to recover. Forsyth v. Ganson, 5 Wend. 558. And the confession by an executor, of a debt due from his testator, is not admissible as evidence in a suit for the debt against his co-executor to establish the original demand. Hammon v. Huntley, 4 Cow. 493. Administrators who have given a note for the debt of their intestate, cannot be made personally responsible for the payment thereof, unless it be shown that they have assets, or that forbearance was the consideration of the note. Bank of the executor declared on a promise to the testator, in a note made to the testator six years before the action, and upon the plea of non assumpsit infra sex annos, the plaintiff proved a promise to himself within the six years, it was held, on a conference by all the Judges, that the evidence did not maintain the declaration (i) (1).

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. v. 406.

Executors may sue as such on promises to themselves as executors (k).

(i) Dean v. Crane, 6 Mod. 309; and see 2 Ld. Raym. 401; Willes, 27.

(k) One of two executors having alone proved the will, had received a debt due to the testator, which by his will was appropriated to the payment of specific legacies to his grandchildren, with interest thereof; and afterwards permitted the money to be lent out by a third person, by whom it was paid to A.; A. on being applied to by the executor, acknowledged that he had received the money, and that it belonged to the testator's grandchildren, but refused to pay it over to the executor. Held that both executors might join in an action brought to recover the money against A. Held also, that it does not amount to a devastavit if an executor lends out, on private security, money belonging to the testator, but not wanted for the immediate uses of the will, provided he exercises a fair and reasonable discretion on the subject. Webster v. Spencer,[1] 3 B. & A. 360. A note indorsed to an executor as such, belongs to him in his representative character; therefore he may join a count upon such note with counts on promises to his testator. King v. Thorn; Same v. M'Linnan, 1 T. R. 487. Where a bill of exchange was indorsed generally to A. as administratrix, for a debt due to B. the intestate, and A. died after the bill became due, but before payment, it was held that the administrator de bonis non of B. was entitled to recover. Catherwood v. Chabaud,[2] 1 B. & C. 150. For it is now settled, contrary to the old cases, that an administrator may sue in his representative capacity, on a contract made with him as such. A count for money paid by the plaintiff, as executrix, may be joined with a count for money paid by the testator. Ord v. Fenwick, 3 East, 104. So an executor may join a count, on promises to himself as executor, with counts on promises to the testator, whenever the sum recovered will be assets in his hands. Powley v. Newton,[3] 2 Marsh. 147; 6 Taunt. 453. He may join a count for money received to his use as such, with counts on promises to the testator. Petrie v. Hannay, 3 T. R. 659. A count for goods sold by A., as administrator of B. to C. may be joined with an account stated between C. and A. as administrator, whether the sale or the account be in the personal or representative character. Cowell v. Watts, 2 Smith, 410; 6 East, 405. So an administrator may join a count on goods of the intestate, sold by him after the decease, with counts on promises to the intestate. Thompson v. Stent, 1 Taunt. 125. Counts on promises to an intestate may be joined with counts on promissory notes given to the administrator since the death of the intestate, as administrator. Semble secus, if a bond or other higher security had been given, because the effect of such new and higher security would be an extinction of the simple contract debt. Counts on promises made to an intestate may be joined with counts on promissory notes given to the administrator, as administrator, since the death of the intestate, because, when recovered, the amount would be assets. Judgment on that ground was affirmed in error. Robinson v. Lyall, 7 Price, 591. And in general, an executor, suing as such, is not liable to costs where his demand, when recovered, will be assets. Thompson v. Stent, 1 Taunt. 322. In the above case of Catherwood v. Chabaud, it was held to be sufficient to make profert of the letters of administration de bonis non, Ibid, for they prove both administrations, Ibid. Administration de bonis non is essential to enable the administrator of an executor to sue a tenant for holding over in his own time, notwithstanding the tenant may have attorned to him. Tingrey v. Brown, 1 B. & P. 310. An administrator de bonis non cannot maintain an action to recover equitable assets in the hands of an agent to trustees, and a promise by such agent to pay is a mere nudum pactum. Clay v. Willis,[4] 1 B. & C. 164. An administrator who has made a wrongful payment (induced by misrepresentation, out of the assets, may recover in his representative character. Clarke v. Hougham,[5] 2 B. & C. 149. But counts on promises by a testator cannot be joined with counts which show a personal liability. Rose v. Bowler, 1 H. B. 108. Secus, where the count states an account stated by the defendant as executor, of monies due from him as such. Powell v. Graham,[6] 7 Taunt. 580. And he is not personally liable on such a count to judgment de bonis propriis. Ibid. Secar v. Atkinson, 1 H. B. 102; Powley v. Newton,[3] 6 Taunt. 453; Ellis v. Bowen, Forest, 98. But a count for money had and received by the defendant as executor to the use of the plaintiff, cannot be joined with a count on account stated by the defendant as executor. Jennings v. Newman, 4 T. R. 347; Ashley v. Ashley,[7] 7 B. & C. 444. An administrator de bonis non may, under equity of the stat. 17 Car. 2, c. 8, sue on a promise to the former representative. Hirst v. Smith, 7 T. R. 182. The executor residing abroad, administration was granted to M., his attorney, with the will annexed, for the benefit of the executor; held, that upon the death of the executor the grant to M. was at an end, and that administration de bonis non, subsequently granted to the plaintiff, was good; but that he could not recover upon a count stating the promise to have been made to the executor. Sewercrop v. Day, 3 N. & P. 670.

Troy v. Topping, 9 Wend. 273. So where the defendant, as administrator, promised to pay the amount of the note for value received, by J. B. and his heirs; it was held on demurrer that there was no consideration for the promise. Ten Eyck v. Vanderpool, 8 John. R. 120. See also Schoonmaker v. De Wit, 17 John. R. 304.)

(1) [This rule is adopted in Virginia, Pennsylvania, and Maryland, Fisher's Ex'r v. Duncan & al. 1 Hen. & Mun. 563. Quarles's Adm'x v. Littlepage & Co. 2 ib. 401. Jones v. Moore, 5 Binney, 573. Beard v. Cowman, 3 Har. & M'Hen. 152. Aliter, in Massachusetts. Baxter v. Penniman, 8 Mass. Rep. 133.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. v. 316. [2]Id. viii. 45. [3]Id. i. 449. [4]Id. viii. 103. [5]Id. ix. 47. [6]Id. ii. 223. [7]Id. xiv. 77.

Proof of cause of action.

*Where an executor sues on a promissory note, laying a promise to himself, the plea of non-assumpsit puts in issue the promise so laid, but not the making of the note (l).

An administrator to the effects of the husband may maintain an action against a second husband of the widow to obtain possession of premises rented by the deceased, without giving any notice to quit, although the defendant has for several years paid the rent to the landlord (m). The right of an executor is derived from the will, and he is in legal possession from the time of the death, even before probate granted (n), though the probate is the only legal evidence of his title.

*445 *An administrator of one who held as tenant from year to year holds as his testator did, and may recover on his own demise in ejectment (o).

In general an executor or administrator may recover in respect of any breach of contract by which an injury has been done to the estate of the testator or intestate, although the latter might at his election have sued in contract or in tort. He may maintain an action against an attorney for negligence in transacting the business of the deceased (p); or against a coach proprietor on a contract for safe conveyance, in respect of an injury to the person, occasioned by negligence in driving (q).

The administrator of a mortgagee of colliery may maintain trover for coals raised after he had taken out administration, although he had not and the mortgagor had not taken possession (r). (A.)

A creditor cannot defend an action by the legal representative by a delivery made by an executor de son tort (s).

If a stranger receive rent due to the testator in his lifetime, and afterwards, by desire of the tenant in possession, pays the demand of ground-rent, due at the same time, for the same premises, he may deduct such payment, in an action by the executor, for the rent; but not a payment of ground-rent, arising after the death of the testator (t).

If an executor or an administrator unnecessarily declare as such, it is mere surplusage, and no profert or proof is necessary (u). (B.)

(l) Timms v. Platt, 2 M. & W. 720.

(m) Doe v. Bradbury,[1] 2 D. & R. 706. The administrator of the husband who survived his wife and died without taking out administration of her effects, cannot recover her choses in action; for that purpose administration must be taken out to the wife. Betts v. Kimpton,[2] 2 B. & Ad. 273.

(n) Smith v. Mills, 1 T. R. 480. The property vests in an executor from the time of the death; in an administrator from the time of the grant of the letters of an administration; and therefore where A. took out letters of administration under a will, by which he was appointed executor, and after notice of a subsequent will sold the goods of the testator; held, that the rightful executor, in an action of trover, was entitled to recover the full value of the goods sold; and that A. was not entitled, in mitigation of damages, to show that he had administered the assets to that amount. Woolley v. Clark,[3] 5 B. & A. 744.

(o) Doe v. Porter, 3 T. R. 13. And see R. v. Inhabitants of Stone, 6 T. R. 295; 1 C. M. & R. 834.

(p) Knights v. Quarles,[4] 2 B. & B. 102. He may sue for holding over contrary to stat. 4 Geo. 2, c. 28. Tingrey v. Brown, 1 B. & P. 310. But he cannot sue for a breach, since the death, of a covenant for further assurance of an estate in fee made with testator, unless in respect of an injury which has thereby accrued to the personal estate. Kingdon v. Nottle, 1 M. & S. 355. A personal representative cannot sue for the breach of a promise of marriage made with the deceased, unless perhaps in respect of some loss which the personal estate has thereby sustained. Chamberlain v. Williamson, 2 M. & S. 408. An executor cannot, under the equity of the statute de bonis asportatis, have trespass for cutting down trees in the testator's lifetime. Williams v. Breedon, 1 B. & P. 329. Nor can an executor sue under stat. 9 Anne, c. 14, for money lost by his testator at play. Brandon v. Pate, 2 H. B. 311.

(q) Ibid.

(r) Fraser v. Swansea Canal Comp.,[5] 1 A. & E. 354.

(s) Mountford v. Gibson, 4 East, 441.

(t) Wilkinson v. Cawood, 3 Anst. 905.

(u) Crawford v. Whittal, Doug. 4.

(A) (Executors may declare in their own right in trover on a conversion after the death of the testator. Mann v. Baker, 5 Cow. 265.)

(B) (Kline v. Guthart, 2 Penns. Rep. 490.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xvi. 115. [2]Id. xxii. 71. [3]Id. vii. 249. [4]Id. vi. 34. [5]Id. xxviii. 105.

II. Upon the plea of ne unques executor (x), which must be specially pleaded if the defendant mean to deny that he is such (y), the plaintiff must prove the affirmative. Direct evidence is by the probate, or letters of administration, but as these can seldom be in the power of the plaintiff, *notice should be given to the defendant to produce them. It must be presumed that the document, if it exist, is in the defendant's possession, and therefore it seems that the ordinary proof of possession, as preparatory to the admission of parol evidence, is here unnecessary. Actions against executors.—Ne unques executor. *446

It has already been seen that an examined copy of the act-book, stating that letters of administration were granted to the defendant, as proof that she is administratrix, although no notice has been given to produce the letters of administration (z). So it seems that the original will, produced by an officer of the ecclesiastical court, bearing the seal of the court, and indorsed as the instrument on which probate was granted, with the value of the effects sworn to, and on which probate was obtained, is original evidence to prove the probate (a).

The most usual proof that a party is executor, arises from his acts of intermeddling with the property of the deceased, which in law constitutes him executor de son tort (A.) Executor de son tort.

What acts will make a man executor de son tort is a question of law, but it is for the jury to say whether the facts are sufficiently proved (b); but it is said that slight circumstances of intermeddling are, in point of law, sufficient for the purpose (c), such as the receiving money of the testator's after his death, although it was received according to an order in his lifetime (d).

Where a creditor took a bill of sale of the debtor's goods, and allowed them to remain in his possession, and after the death of the debtor took possession of the goods and sold them, it was held that he thereby made (x) An executor is usually liable personally on contracts which he himself makes, though they are made in his representative capacity. A bond by an executor, by which he, as executor, binds himself, his heirs, &c. makes him personally liable; so that he cannot plead plenè administravit, when sued thereon. Barry v. Rush, 1 T. R, 691. So if executors make a promissory note, by which they, as executors, jointly and severally, promise to pay on demand. Childs v. Monins,[1] 2 B. & B. 460. So an executor of a deceased partner who continues the trade, though for the benefit of the infant children, is liable personally as a partner. Wightman v. Townroe, 1 M. & S. 412. A testator directs that his business shall be carried on by E. P. The executors permit E. P. to get in the outstanding debts. There being no such direction in the will, the executors are liable. Pistor v. Dunbar, 1 Anst. 107. As to their liability to funeral expenses, see 3 Y. & J. 25.

(y) And therefore under the plea of plenè administravit, the defendant cannot show that he acted merely as agent to the executor. B. N. P. 143. The effects of an intestate having vested in the king by a forfeiture for felony, if the ordinary grant letters of administration to A. in consequence of a warrant from the king, and they run in the usual form, viz. "To pay debts, &c." though with this additional clause,—"For the use and benefit of his Majesty;"—A. may be sued by the intestate's creditors, and shall not be permitted to impeach the validity of the letters of administration. Megit v. Johnson, Doug. 542.

(z) Vol. I. tit. Judgment.—Probate. Davis v. Williams, 13 East, 231. And see Elden v. Keddel, 8 East, 187. See also R. v. Barnes,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 243, and Gorton v. Dyson,[3] 1 B. & B. 219. In the latter case, it seems that the original will was indorsed.

(a) Gorton v. Dyson, 1 B. & B. 219. And see the observations of Richardson, J. Ibid. 221.

(b) Padgett v. Priest, 2 T. R. 97. The authority of a servant, employed in selling his master's property, is determined by the death of the master. By continuing the sale, therefore, he becomes executor de son tort. Ibid.

(c) Edwards v. Harben, 2 T. R. 597. In one case the merely taking a book, and in another a bedstead, was held to be sufficient; Noy. 69. The entering on a lease for years, Bac. Ab. Exors. B. 3; or pleading any other plea than that of ne unques executor, Ib.; or the suing for, receiving or releasing debts due to the estate, will be evidence to prove the fact: Com. Dig. Adm. C. 1.

(d) 2 T. R. 597.

(A) (The laws of Ohio do not recognizean executor de son tort, and no action lies against such an executor. Dixon v. Cassell, 5 Ohio R. 533.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 200. [2]Id. ii. 374. [3]Id. v. 63.

himself executor de son tort, since the continuance of the debtor's possession was inconsistent with the deed, which was therefore fraudulent against creditors (e). But the interfering for purposes of decency, charity, or kindness, as in ordering the funeral of the deceased, paying his debts or legacies out of the party's own pocket, or taking an inventory of his effects, is not such an intrusion as will render the party liable (f). An executor who has not proved the will, does not make himself liable by assisting a co-executor who has proved (g).

Answer. The defendant may prove in answer that he acted under the authority of *447 *the rightful administrator (h), or as agent to an executor, who, though he never proved the will, yet acted as such (i), or that he had a claim upon the goods of the deceased (k) (A).

Where A. and B. are the executors of C., and on the death of A., D. his executor, possesses himself of the effects of C., it seems that he is not liable as the executor of C. (l). An executor de son tort cannot discharge himself from an action by the creditor by delivering over the effects in his possession to the rightful owner after action brought (m). The plaintiff on issue taken on this plea may have a verdict against the real executors, on counts alleging promises by the testator (n).

Plene administravit. 2. Upon issue of the plea of plenè administravit, it lies on the plaintiff to prove affirmatively that the defendant had assets (o). On this issue no evidence can be given of assets after the writ sued out (p). And if assets have in fact accrued since the issuing the writ, the plaintiff may, it seems, reply the fact (q).

In proof of assets the plaintiff may give in evidence the inventory of the (e) Edwards v. Harben, 2 T. R. 595.

(f) 3 Bac. Ab. tit. Executor, 21. Denman v. Hampton, K. B. Sitt. after T. T. 1830. So in locking up the goods of the deceased, directing the funeral, feeding his cattle, providing necessaries for his children; Will. on Ex. P. 1, B. 3, C. 5. Proof that the defendant, being the widow of the deceased, a hair-dresser, continued to live in the house, and opened the shop, the entrance to the house, but there was no evidence of any sale of goods by her, or of doing more than giving the note, and of having the goods valued, preparatory to taking out administration; held that these acts were not sufficient to constitute her executrix de son tort. Serle v. Waterworth, 4 Mees. & W. 9; and 7 Dowl. 684; but judgment reversed on error, 4 Mees. & W. 795.

(g) 2 Cox's C. C. 274. (h) Peake's C. 86; Cro. Eliz. 472.

(i) Cottle v. Aldrich, 4 M. & S. 175. A., B. and C. are appointed executors, of whom C. alone proves the will. C. makes D. jointly with B. his agent in the administration, who accordingly administers during C.'s lifetime under his authority. C. dies, leaving A. and B. surviving. D. continues to administer, consulting with B. from time to time; and acting under his advice. Held, that D. was chargeable as executor de son tort for the intermeddling since C.'s death. Had B. acted as executor, D. would not have been so chargeable; but this he did not, since the advice he gave was not an acting as executor. Ibid. Living in the house and carrying on the trade of deceased (a victualler), is sufficient intermeddling to make a defendant executor de son tort, and as such liable de bonis propriis; notwithstanding his wife proved the will after the action was commenced. Hooper v. Summersett, Wightw. 16.

(k) One who takes possession under a fair claim of right, is not chargeable as executor de son tort. Femings v. Jarratt, 1 Esp. C. 335.

(l) Hall v. Elliott, Peake's C. 86; but see 5 Co. 33.

(m) Curtis v. Vernon, 3 T. R. 587; 2 H. B. 18. Secus, semble, if he deliver the goods to the rightful executor before action brought. Ibid. Padget v. Priest, 2 T. R. 97.

(n) Griffiths v. Franklin,[1] M. & M. 146. He cannot recover on counts on promises by all as executors. Ib. Qu. Whether there can be an executor de son tort where there is a lawful executor. Hall v. Elliott, Peake's C. 87. Read's Case, 5 Co. 34.

(o) The produce of the sale of the good-will of a house held for some time by the administratrix as tenant at will, is assets. Worral v. Hand, Peake's C. 74. See Jury v. Woodhouse, Barnes, 333.

(p) Per Ld. Kenyon, C. J., in Mara v. Quin, 6 T. R. 10.

(q) Per Ashurst, J., Mara v. Quin, 6 T. R. 11.

(A) (The granting letters of administration to one who has made himself liable as executor de son tort, will legalize his tortious acts. Shillaber v. Wyman, 15 Mass. R. 322. Andrew v. Gallison, id. 325. An executor de son tort is liable only to the amount of the assets which come into his hands. He may be declared against and protect himself by plea as the rightful executor. Stockton v. Wilson, 3 Penns. R. 130.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxii. 270.

personal estate of the deceased, delivered by the defendant in the ecclesiastical court; but a copy of the inventory is not admissible, unless it be signed by the defendant, although it has been signed by the appraisers (r); and he may show that the goods have been undervalued (s) (A). A leasehold estate is assets to the value of the term (t). Evidence of such an inventory is sufficient to throw it on the executor, to show how he has disposed of the goods and money specified in the inventory (u). But if it be primâ facie evidence of effects or assets with which the executor is acquainted, it is *rebutted by showing that no effects actually came to his hands (x). Proof that articles of furniture were bought by the deceased and seen in his house shortly before his death, is evidence of assets (y). Proof of assets. *448

It has been held, that if the defendant in his inventory does not distinguish between sperate and desperate debts, it is primâ facie evidence to charge the defendant with all which are not actually stated to be desperate (z); but in a later case Lord Ellenborough required further and reasonable evidence to be given, in order to show that the debts had actually been received by the defendant (a). In principle, it seems to be rather unreasonable to construe an admission that a debt is due, and that it is not desperate, into an acknowledgement that it has been received, unless there be some ground for suspecting fraud; and the onus of proof, it is to be recollected, lies on the plaintiff. At all events the defendant may rebut the presumption by proving a demand of the debt, and a refusal to pay it (b), even in the case of sperate debts. If an executor submit to arbitration, agreeing to pay what shall be awarded, he admits that he has assets (c);

(r) B. N. P. 140. Welbourne v. Dewsbury, per Eyre, C. J. H. 12 Geo. 1.

(s) B. N. P. 140.

(t) Ibid. And where the plaintiff, in an action against the administratrix, held a lease in his hands, upon which he had a lien, it was held that the lease was to be considered as assets in the hand of the administrator, who had power to redeem it. Vinsent v. Sharp,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 507. And assets in Ireland are assets here. Ibid.; and 1 Barnes, 240.

(u) Ayliff v. Ayliff, B. N. P. 142. Gyles v. Dyson,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 32. In an action against several executors who all proved, and pleaded, plene adm., it was held that two only having signed the inventory, it could not be taken as evidence against the third, who was therefore entitled to a verdict. Parsons v. Hancock,[3] 1 Mood. and M. C. 330.

(x) Steam v. Mills,[4] 4 B. & Ad. 657. And the case of Foster v. Blacklock was not assented to.

(y) Mann v. Long,[5] 2 Ad. & Ell. 699. There Pattison, J., intimated that he dissented from the opinion expressed by Lord Tenterden in Foster v. Blacklock.

(z) B. N. P. 140. Smith v. Davis, M. 10 Geo. 2. Per Hardw. C. J., Shelley's Case, Salk. 296. Per Holt, C. J., Went. Off. Ex. 160.

(a) Gyles v. Dyson,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 32. And in a subsequent case, Parke, B., said, that he assented to Lord Ellenborough's doctrine.

(b) Shelley's Case, Salk. 296, and B. N. P. 240.

(c) Barry v. Rush, 1 T. R. 691. The question as to assets is concluded against the executor, by the arbitrator directing him to pay the sum awarded. Worthington v. Barlow, 7 T. R. 453. Debt against an executrix on an award on her own submission; plea, first, plene administravit; secondly, that no evidence was offered before the arbitrator of her having assets at any time before the making of the award. Held on demurrer, that the action of debt lies against the representative on an undertaking originating with him; secondly, that by submitting to the reference without protesting that she had no assets, she could not afterwards be permitted to say so: submitting to a final settlement could only be by paying what should be found to be due. Riddle v. Sutton[6], 5 Bing. 200; and 2 M. & P. 245.

(A) (An executor is liable for the amount of assets in his hands and no more. Fairfax's Ex'rs v. Fairfax, 5 Cranch, 19; 2 Cond. Rep. 178. In any action against executors or administrators, in which the fact of their having administered the estate of their testator or intestate, or any part thereof, shall come in issue, and the inventory of the deceased, made and filed by them, shall be given in evidence, the plaintiff or defendant may rebut the same by proof: 1. That any property or effects have been omitted in such inventory, or were not returned therein at their true value: 2. That such property has perished or been lost, without the fault of such executor or administrator, or that it has been fairly sold by them at public or private sale, at a less price than the value so returned; or that since the return of the inventory, such property has deteriorated or enhanced in value. (2 R. S. s. 14.) Willoughby v. M'Cluer, 2 Wend. 608.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 451. [2]Id. ii. 282. [3]Id. xxii. 326. [4]Id. xxiv. 133. [5]Id. xxx. 188. [6]Id. xv. 416.

but a mere submission to arbitration is not an admission of assets (d); neither does the payment of interest on a bond amount to such an admission; for it is unreasonable to conclude, from his having enough to pay the interest, that he has also enough to satisfy the principal (e). So, proof that an administrator admitted that the debt was just, and should be paid as soon as he could pay it, is not evidence to charge the defendant with assets, for he could not be understood to pledge himself to commit a devastavit, by paying that debt before others of a higher nature (f) (A). But where an executor on being applied to for payment referred the creditor to A. B. for information as to assets, it was held that the admission of assets by A. B. was equivalent to an admission by the defendant (g). If the executor compound with creditors, and in a suit by one plead plenè administravit, *449 such composition will be evidence against him of assets (h) (B). Proof *of the stamp on the probate is evidence of assets (i). But it is doubtful whether it be evidence as to the amount of assets (k).

Proof of due administration.

After proof of assets in the hands of the defendant, it is incumbent on him to discharge himself by proof of the due administration of such assets, which he may do under this issue (l). He may prove the existence and payment of debts of as high a degree, or of debts of inferior degree, without notice (m); but he cannot under this issue give in evidence the payment even of judgment debts made subsequently to the purchase of the writ; for the question is, whether the defendant had fully administered at the time when the action (n) was commenced. If the plaintiff reply specially, that

(d) [Hoare v. Muloy, 2 Yeates, 161.] Pearson v. Henry, 5 T. R. 6. And a promise by the administrator to pay the debt of the intestate where there are no assets, is nudum pactum. Per Buller, Ibid. [But if he have assets, he is personally bound. Sleighter v. Harrington, 2 Taylor, 249. Yelv. 11, note (2) and cases there collected.]

(e) Cleverly v. Brett, 5 T. R. 8, in n. But see the Corporation of Clergymen's Sons v. Swainson, 1 Ves. 75.

(f) Hindesley v. Russel, 12 East, 232. An undertaking by an executor, on accepting a bill for a demand on the estate, to pay on receipt of sufficient effects, means effects received after demands entitled to priority are satisfied. Bowerbank v. Monteiro, 4 Taunt. 844.

(g) Williams v. Innes, 1 Camp. 364. (h) B. N. P. 145. Per Holt. C. J.

(i) Foster v. Blaklock,[1] 5 B. & C. 328; 8 D. & R. 48. But it is evidence only of the smallest amount which the stamp would cover. Curtis v. Hunt,[2] 1 Carr. & P. 180. S. P. Duncan v. Hampton, Sitt. after T. T. 1830. (k) Britton v. Jones,[3] 3 Bing. N. C. 676.

(l) He is liable to the amount only of assets in his hands. Harrison v. Beecles, 3 T. R. 688. On a plea of judgment recovered, and plenè administravit præter, and replication of assets ultra, if assets are proved in the defendant's hands, he may give evidence of the payment of other debts with those assets previous to the action brought. Smedley v. Hill, 9 Blk. 1105.

(m) B. N. P. 143; 2 Show. 81; 1 Raym. 745. Even debts on simple contract may be paid before specialties, unless timely notice be given. Sawyer v. Mercer, 1 T. R. 690; 1 Mod. 174; 3 Mod. 115. Shetelworth v. Neville, 1 T. R. 454. [See United States v. Hoar, 2 Mason's R. 317, 318.].

(n) Anon. Salk. 153. Such payment should be pleaded. Ibid. Dyer, 32, a. Where the issue was whether there were assets in the hands of the defendant on the day when the writ was sued, and it appeared that he

(A) (Where a promissory note was given by an executor or administrator, it is prima facie evidence of assets, because they are the legal consideration upon which the promise ought to be founded: the note however does not conclude the defendant from showing that in fact there was a deficiency of assets. The burden of proof, however, in such case is on the defendant. The Bank of Troy v. Topping, 13 Wend. 557. And a judgment against executors or administrators by confession, is conclusive proof that they have assets sufficient to satisfy it. The People v. Judges of Erie, 4 Cow. 445. See also Griffith v. Chew, 8 Serg. & R. 17. But submission to a reference is no admission of assets. Hoare v. Muloy, 2 Yeates, 161.—Dubitatur in M'Kee v. Thompson, Addis. 24.

(B) (If an executor compound debts or mortgages, or buy them in for less than is due, with his own money, yet he shall not have advantage thereby. So if he redeem a pledge of the testator it will be assets in his hands for debts and legacies. Dawes v. Boylston, 9 Mass. R. 337. It is generally true that n executor extending the time of payment unreasonably, or taking inferior security, thereby bringing a loss to his testator's estate, shall be liable. Hunter v. Bryant, 2 Wheat. 32. But some latitude will be allowed for discretion to an executor who takes charge of the affairs of a man who was engaged in trade, and the Court will reluctantly enforce rigid rules in such case against him. Ibid. And so long as executors manage the estate of the testator in accordance with the views he had entertained of it, and do what there is reason to believe he would have approved of, could he have been consulted, it would seem to be unreasonable to make them responsible for losses as respects legatees. M'Nair's Appeal, 4 Rawle, 148.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xi. 246. [2]Id. xi. 358. [3]Id. xxxii. 277.

he sued out his original on a particular day, and that the defendant had then assets, and the defendant rejoin that he had no assets then, he thereby admits the day of suing out the original as alleged by the plaintiff; but if the plaintiff in his replication allege assets at the time of exhibiting the bill on a day specified under a videlicet, and conclude to the country, then, although that day be the first day of the term, the defendant may show that the bill was exhibited afterwards, for he could not in the latter case, as in the former, put the time in issue by his rejoinder (o), and the day mentioned in the replication is not material. By this plea the defendant alleges that he has administered the effects of the deceased, paying his debts according to the course and order which the law prescribes (p). He must prove the *existence of the debt, as well as the payment, and for that purpose the *450 creditor himself to whom the debt has been paid is a competent witness (q). Where the payments have been made upon the testator's bonds they should be produced and proved in the usual way, by means of the attesting witnesses; and though upon payment, they have been destroyed, evidence cannot be received of their existence, except by means of the attesting witnesses (r).

Where the action is on a specialty, he must prove that he paid the debts on bonds or other specialties sealed and delivered; but where the present action is on a debt by simple contract, he may prove the payment of a debt, without proof of the bond by which it is secured; for although there was no bond, it was still a good payment in the course of administration (s). A debt for rent arrere is equivalent to a debt by specialty (t). A judgment received money on that day, but paid it over by order of the court on the same day, before the writ was sued out, it was held to be insufficient, and the jury found assets; but the defendant might have protected himself by pleading the fact specially. Preston v. Hall, Clay, 66; Vin. Ab. Ev. P. b. pl. 3.

(o) B. N. P. 144. Corbet's Case, 1 Leon. 312. These provisions were previous to the alterations as to process.

(p). See 2 Bl. Comm. 511. According to the rule of priority he must pay, 1st, all funeral charges, and the expenses of proving the will, and the like; and none but necessary expenses of a funeral are allowed against creditors, nor usually more than 5*l*. See B. N. P. 143. In an action against an executor of a party who had been a captain in the army; issue taken upon the plea of plenè adm.; the Judge had allowed 79*l*. for funeral expenses, and the plaintiff being nonsuited, the Court thinking it too large a sum, directed a new trial, unless the defendant would permit the plaintiff to enter up judgment for such sum as, after allowing 20*l*. for the funeral expenses and the probate duty, would remain in the defendant's hands. Hancock v. Podmore,[1] 1 B. & Ad. 260; and see Stag v. Punter, 3 Atk. 119. It seems that the expenses of proving the will are to be allowed under this plea, although not actually paid, the executor being personally liable to them.[2] 2 Starkie's C. 528. 2dly. Debts due to the king on record or by specialty. 3dly. Debts which by particular statutes are to be preferred to all others, as for poor's rates. 4thly. Debts of record, as judgments (if docketed according to the stat. 4 & 5 Will. & Mary, c. 20), but otherwise not. See Hickey v. Hayter, 6 T. R. 384. Steele v. Rorke, 1 B. & P. 307. 5thly. Debts due on special contracts, as for rent; Thompson v. Thompson, 9 Price, 464; or on bonds, covenants, and the like, under seal. Lastly, debts on simple contracts; viz. notes unsealed, and verbal promises; and amongst these simple contracts, servants' wages have by some been preferred to any other. 2 Comm. 511. An executor de son tort is entitled to avail himself of payments duly made in the course of administration. The reasonable expenses only of the funeral will be allowed. Edwards v. Edwards, 2 C. & M. 612. If unreasonable, the administrator will be liable, even although he sanction them before taking out letters of administration. Lucy v. Walrond,[3] 3 Bing. N. C. 841. He will be liable to reasonable expenses although he did not order the funeral, if credit were not given to another. Brice v. Wilson, 3 N. & M. 512.

(q) B. N. P. 143. Kingston v. Grey, 1 Ld. Raym. 745; 1 Show. 81. In Campion v. Bentley, 1 Esp. C. 343, it is said, that on issue joined on a replication of per fraudem to a plea of judgment recovered, the conusee is not competent to prove that it was obtained bona fide; sed quære.

(r) Gillies v. Smithers,[4] 2 Starkie's C. 528. But where the suit is on a simple contract, and the defendant relies on the payment of bonds of the deceased, it is (as is said) sufficient to prove payment, for although they be not bonds, it is a good administration. See B. N. P. 143. Interest on a bond incurred by the laches of the executor will not be allowed. Saunderson v. Nichol, 1 Show. 81.

(s). B. N. P. 143, cites Kingston v. Grey, 1 Ld. Raym. 745. In that case it does not appear whether the action was on a bond or simple contract, but probably the latter; and from the terms of the short report of this case, it seems that the creditor proved the debt.

(t) Bac. Ab. Ev. L. Roll. Ab. 927. Off. of Ex. 145. The executor is liable in debt and detinet where land demised to his testator is of the value of the rent, and pro tanto, when of less value, Rubery v. Stevens,[5] 4 B.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xx. 382. [2] Id. iii. 460. [3] Id. xxxii. 349. [4] Id. iii. 460. [5] Id. xxiv. 50.

against the testator not docketed, is to be considered as a debt on simple contract only, and therefore the defendant, under this plea to an action of debt on a judgment against the testator, may give in evidence the payment of bond debts (u). An administrator may prove payment of a simple contract debt without notice of the specialty debt on which the action is founded (x). On issue on a plea of plenè administravit before notice, it was held that the defendant having invested the residue of the funds in his own name, although for the benefit of the legatees, to whom he had paid the dividends for many years, was still liable as for assets in hand (y). It is no defence to an action on a bond, that the defendant paid the money over to a co-executor, in order to satisfy the bond, and that he applied the money
*451 to the satisfaction of his *own simple contract debts (z). He may give in evidence a retainer for his own debt of equal degree (a); that the intestate before marriage with the defendant, gave a bond to J. S. conditioned to leave the defendant 500*l.*, and that she retained to satisfy the obligation (b); that he has paid debts out of his own money, to the amount of the assets (c); that he has redeemed part of the testator's goods, which had been pawned to their full value, with his own money, and has paid the value of the residue in discharge of his debts (d). So he may show that he has retained money to pay the expenses of administration, to which he has made himself liable, although the money has not been actually paid (e) (A).

An executor de son tort (f) is not entitled to retain for his own debt, though of higher degree, even although the rightful executor (after action brought) consent to the retainer (g); but if, under this plea, he give in evi-

& Ad. 241; and see the rule, Pollexfen's Rep. 192. A representative cannot get rid of a liability to rent without assent, as he must assign to a beggar. Per Wood, B. Thompson v. Thompson, 9 Price, 471. And the administrator may retain for a half-year's rent, during which the intestate died. Ibid. And such rent is equal to a specialty debt, Ibid. A chattel interest vests in the representative, in the same manner as in the testator. Doe v. Porter, 3 T. R. 13. He cannot waive for the term, he must waive in toto or not at all. Billinghurst v. Spearman, 1 Salk. 297. An administrator who has occupied the premises, cannot plead to an action of covenant for non-repair, and not paying rent and taxes, that the premises yield no profit. Tremeere v. Morison,[1] 1 Bing. N.C. 89.

(u) Hickey v. Haytor, 6 T. R. 384; Steele v. Rooke, 1 B. & P. 307. 3 Saund. 7, n.; Tidd. 919, 3d edit.

(x) Com. Dig. Administration, C. 2d edit. by Kyd.; 2 Cro. 535; 3 Lev. 115; 3 Mod. 115; 1 T. R. 690. Supra, 323 (a).

(y) Smith v. Day, 2 M. & W. 684; and qu. whether such payment before notice could be proved.

(z) Cross v. Smith, 7 East, 246.

(a) Plumer v. Marchant, 3 Burr. 1380. It is a general rule, that wherever the executor might have sued for the debt, or might have paid it, he may retain for it. And see Bond v. Green, Brownl. 75; Bro. Ex. 18. On the plea by an administrator of a retainer, it is sufficient to show a legal contract and liability. Harry v. Jones, 4 Price, 89. One of two executors may retain for his own debt out of a balance due from both to the estate. Kent v. Pickering, 2 Keene, 1.

(b) She is entitled to retain out of the personal assets so much as is equal to the damages which she has sustained by breach of the covenant. Loane v. Casey, executrix, 2 Bl. 965; B. N. P. 140–1; 3 Burr. 1380. But where the husband covenanted to pay the wife an annuity of 20*l.*, or that his heirs, executors, &c. should pay the sum of 400*l.* to the trustees, to remain vested in them; it was held, that the widow, being administratrix, could not retain the 400*l.* Thompson v. Thompson, 9 Price, 464. A. having lent money to B. on a bond, takes out administration de bonis non, he may retain for the bond debt. Weekes v. Gore, 3 P. Wms. 184; and after his death it will be presumed that he elected to pay his own debt first.

(c) B. N. B. 140. Co. Litt. 123. (d) Ibid.

(e) Gillies v. Smithers,[2] 2 Starkie's C. 528; Cor. Abbott, L. C. J.

(f) But if an executor de son tort take out administration, his previous acts are good by relation. Mo. 126; Com. Dig. Administration, C. 3.

(g) Curtis v. Vernon, 3 T. R. 587; 2 H. B. 18.

(A) (If an executor has been robbed of money belonging to his testator's estate, he will be exonerated from accounting for it. Farman v. Coe, 1 Caines C. 96. And after his death, his personal representative may avail himself of the excuse, though uncorroborated by the oath of him whom he represents. Ib. Where an executor does an act in good faith, but under a mistake, he will not be liable; as for making a surrender of a term, on the supposition that it was forfeited for a less consideration than it was worth. The People v. Pleas, 2 John. C. 376.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxvii. 315. [2]Id. iii. 460.

dence a retainer, the plaintiff cannot object, that as executor de son tort he cannot retain, without showing the will, and who are rightful executors (h). He may, after action brought by a simple-contract creditor, pay a specialty debt, and plead the payment of that debt in bar of action (i). An executor may also, it seems, give in evidence the payment of the residuary effects to the legatee, after the expiration of a year from the testator's death, without notice of the plaintiff's demand (k); so he may show that he was but executor durante minore ætate, and that he paid particular debts and legacies, and delivered over the residue of the testator's personal estate to the infant when he came of age (l); for his power then ceases, and the new executor is liable to all actions (m). But he will be liable for as much as he has wasted (n), to creditors, it seems, as well as to the new executor.

Under a plea simply of no assets, the defendant must still show payment in due course of administration (o).

The plea of plenè administravit admits the debt, but not the amount of it, and therefore, unless the action be of debt for a sum certain, the plaintiff must prove his debt, and the amount of his damages (p).

*On issue taken on the plea of plenè administravit præter, the defend- *452 ant may prove payment of debts before action brought, as well as under the general plea (q).

An executor cannot, under the plea of plenè administravit, give in evidence the existence of outstanding debts of a higher nature, without pleading them (r) (1).

3. Where the day of payment on a bond is past, although the defendant sets out the condition in his plea, he will thereby cover assets to the amount of the penalty, unless the plaintiff reply per fraudem; and on issue joined on such replication, proof that the obligee would have taken less than the penalty, and not exceeding the sum which the executor had to pay, will be evidence of fraud (s). Outstanding bonds.

Upon a replication per fraudem to a plea of judgment recovered, evidence that the creditor would have taken less than the sum, is evidence of fraud, unless the executor show that he had not assets to pay that amount (t). Evidence in such case, that the judgment was confessed for more than Judgment recovered.

(h) B. N. P. 143. But see Peake's Ev. 349, 3d ed.

(i) Oxenden, gent., one, &c. v. Clapp, executrix,[1] 2 B. & Ad. 309.

(k) 1 Esp. C. 276. Cor. Ld. Kenyon, C. J. The payment of legacies six months after probate does not discharge the executor's liability on a covenant, although he paid them without notice, Davis v. Blackwell,[2] 9 Bing. 5.

(l) 1 Mod. 174. He should produce the letters of administration.

(m) Ibid.

(n) Ibid. And 6 Co. Packham's Case; and Latch. 160. But see 1 Mod. 175.

(o) Reeves v. Ward,[3] 2 Bing. N. C. 235. (p) Salk. 296; B. N. P. 140.

(q) Smedley v. Hill, Bl. 1105. (r) B. N. P. 141.

(s) 1 Saund. 334 (n); B. N. P. 141. If issue be taken on the existence of the bonds, the defendant must prove them, and if he fail as to one he will fail to all. Salk. 312.

(t) Salk. 312; B. N. P. 141. If a judgment, confessed by an executor, for more than the sum due, is pleaded, the plaintiff may either reply, showing specially what sum is due, &c. or per fraudem generally; if the latter, and the issue thereon is found for the defendant, he is entitled to a general judgment. Pease v. Naylor, 5 T. R. 80. The plaintiff ought to reply the sums really due. Ib. An executor may plead as an outstanding debt, the penalty of a bond of indemnity given by the testator to the obligee who is surety for him in another bond, both of which were forfeited in his lifetime, and still unpaid, though the surety has not yet been damnified. And an averment that the bond was forfeited in the testator's lifetime, not showing the true debt, is strong, but not conclusive, evidence of fraud, and the defendant may show in answer that the judgment was entered for more than was due by mistake, and that the fact was known to the plaintiff before action brought (u). If several judgments be pleaded, and any one be proved to be false and fraudulent, the plaintiff will succeed as to all (v).

(1) [In what cases a special plea of plene administravit is necessary at the common law, and under statutes in Massachusetts, see United States v. Hoar, 2 Mason's Rep. 211.] {Where an executor has assets, but not sufficient to pay all the debts, he can only protect himself by pleading a special plene administravit of all beyond a sum sufficient to satisfy debts of a higher nature, and to pay other debts of an equal degree their proportions. Shaw v. M'Cameron, 11 Serg. & Rawle, 252.}

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxii. 84. [2]Id. xxiii. 243. [3]Id. xxix. 316.

Where the defendant pleads a judgment for 100*l.*, and goods to the amount of 5*l.* only, the substance of the issue is that the defendant has no more than will satisfy the judgment (w).

He may show that payments relied on, were out of trust funds, no part of assets (x).

Outstanding bonds, &c.

It will be presumed that an obligation entered into by the testator is *founded on a just debt, unless the contrary be averred in pleading, and issue taken upon it (y).

*453

Upon the plea of a retainer and judgment recovered, it is sufficient for the plaintiff to falsify either claim (z).

A letter written by a creditor to an executor intimating the intention of the creditor to charge the executor personally and not as executor, does not preclude the creditor from objecting to the course of administration (a).

Cause of action.

The proof of the cause of action is usually the same as it would have been against the testator or intestate himself (b).

Debt suggesting a devastavit.

4thly. If an executor suffer judgment by default, or judgment be given against him on a demurrer to the declaration; or if he plead payment of a how, is sufficient. Cox v. Joseph, 5 T. R. 307. Where to a declaration on the testator's covenant, after pleas of plene adm. and retainer for a simple contract, the executor at the assizes pleaded puis darrein cont. a judgment recovered on a bond "after the last continuance" (the last day of Trin. term), to wit, on 2d Aug. "as of the Trinity term preceding," to which the plaintiff replied, that the defendants had notice of the bond before the commencement of the action; held that the replication was bad on demurrer, and that the plea was properly pleaded, for although the judgment was alleged to have been recovered of the term, which by fiction of law, therefore, related back to the first day of the term, and so was strictly before the last continuance; yet the defendants might be permitted by averment to show, that in fact the judgment was recovered after that continuance, in order that they might not be deprived of the privilege allowed by law. Lyttleton v. Cross,[1] 3 B. & Cr. 317; and 5 D. & R. 165. A judgment cannot be pleaded for the benefit, not of the individual, but for the general benefit of creditors. Gorst v. Hutton, York Sum. Ass. 1834.

(u) Pease v. Naylor, 5 T. R. 80.

(v) Salk. 312; B. N. P. 142. See Chamberlaine v. Pickering, 1 Freem. 28; Gilbert v. Dee, Ib. 537.

(w) Moore v. Andrews, Hob. 133; 1 Saund. 333, (n).

(x) Marston v. Downes,[2] 1 A. & E. 31.

(y) Cro. Jac. 35; B. N. P. 142. A. being indebted in his individual capacity to a house in trade, of which he himself was a partner, in a sum of money, the amount of which could not be exactly ascertained, covenants to pay the firm all his then debts, and such other debts as should subsequently accrue. A. dies without having satisfied the original debt, and having contracted further debts subsequent to the execution of the deed. Held, that his executors, two of whom were partners in the house of trade, could not plead either of these debts by way of retainer, or as an outstanding specialty debt. De Tastet v. Shaw, 1 B. & A. 664.

(z) Campion v. Bentley, 1 Esp. C. 343.

(a) Richards v. Brown,[3] 3 Bing. N. C. 493.

(b) A promise made upon good consideration by a testator, that his executor shall pay, is a sufficient consideration for an action in assumpsit against the executor. And in such action it is neither necessary to aver assets, nor a promise by the executor. By three; Burrough, J. dissentiente. Powell v. Graham,[4] 7 Taunt. 580. An executor is bound by his testator's agreement not to bring error; such an agreement precludes him from bringing error on a judgment in scire facias brought to make him party to the former judgment, since that is not a new action, but a continuation of the old one. Executors of Wright v. Nutt, 1 T. R. 388. The personal representative of a tenant may be charged, in his representative character, for breaches of covenant, by one to whom the premises have come by assignment since the death. Lady Wilson v. Wigg, 10 East, 313. The general rule is actio personalis moritur cum persona. Where the cause of action is money due, or a contract to be performed, gain or acquisition by the labour or property of another, or a promise by the testator expressed or implied, the action survives against the executor. Secus, if it be a tort, or arise ex delicto, supposed to be by force, and against the peace. Hambly v. Trott, Cowp. 375. An action, ex contractu, lies against an executor for the value of timber wrongfully cut down by the testator. Utterson v. Vernon, 3 T. R. 549. Trover does not lie against an executor for a conversion by his testator. Hambly v. Trott, Cowp. 371. Debt is not maintainable against a personal representative, on the simple contract of the deceased. Barry v. Robinson, 1 N. R. 293.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. x. 93, 385. [2]Id. xxviii. 24. [3]Id. xxxii. 219. [4]Id. ii. 223.

bond, and omit to plead plenè administravit, or plenè administravit præter, it will operate as an admission of assets in an action against him on the judgment, suggesting a devastavit (c); for it is an universal principle of law, that if a party do not avail himself of the opportunity of pleading matter in bar to the original action, he cannot afterwards plead it in another action founded upon it, or in a scire facias (d). And, therefore, in an action against an executor on a judgment suggesting a devastavit, on issue taken on the plea of non devastavit, it is sufficient to prove the judgment, and the return of nulla bona to the fieri facias (e).

Whether the defendant plead non devastavit to a scire fieri inquiry, or nil debet, or not guilty, or non devastavit to an action of debt against him, suggesting *a devastavit, he cannot give in evidence the want of assets (f); nor can he do so upon a writ of inquiry after judgment by default in the original action (g); nor would a previous judgment be evidence for him (h), for although under the issue of non devastavit the defendant may give in evidence any matter which would have been a discharge to him under the plea of plenè administravit (i), yet under the latter plea the former judgment would not be evidence. *454

On the issue taken on the plea of non detinet to an action of debt, suggesting a devastavit, the issue is on the defendant, the judgment being conclusive as to assets (k).

A promise by an executor to pay a debt of the testator, where there are no assets, is a mere nudum pactum (l), even although he has given a written promise (m) (A); but assumpsit will lie against an executor on a promise made by the testatrix to pay a debt for which she gave her bond during coverture (n). Promise by an executor.

An executor is liable for the expenses of the testator's funeral, if on his omission another order it, if he has assets (o).

An executor of a joint contractor may show, under the general issue, that another joint contractor still survives (p).

No action lies to recover a party's distributive share of a legacy, though the administrator has expressly promised to pay it (q). It is otherwise Legacy.

(c) Erving v. Peters, 3 T. R. 685. Ramsden v. Jackson, 1 Atk. 292. Rock v. Leighton, Salk. 310; 1 Ld. Raym. 589; Hob. 199.

(d) Per Buller, J. 3 T. R. 689. The pleas of non est factum, release, payment, non assumpsit, &c. admit assets. 1 Saund. 335, (n). Judgment for the plaintiff by default, or on demurrer, is evidence of assets, although no devastavit has been returned by the sheriff. Leonard v. Simpson,[1] 2 Bing. N. C. 176. Rock v. Leighton, 1 Salk. 310. Palmer v. Waller, 1 M. & W. 689.

(e) Erving v. Peters, 3 T. R. 685. Skelton v. Hawling, 1 Wils. 259. Chaloner v. Chaloner, cited ibid.

(f) 3 T. R. 693; 1 Will. Saund. 219, c.

(g) Treil v. Edwards, 6 Mod. 308; 2 Str. 1075.

(h) Rock v. Layton, 1 Ld. Raym. 591.

(i) Per Gould, J. Rock v. Layton, 1 Ld. Raym. 591.

(k) Hope v. Bague, 3 East, 2.

(l) Pearson v. Henry, 5 T. R. 6. [Yelv. 11, note (2).] Rann v. Hughes, 7 T. R. 350. But a promise founded on a new consideration, as forbearance, is binding. 1 Will. Saund. 210, note (1). A promise by A. to B. that in consideration of his procuring, at his own expense, administration to the estate of C. to be granted to A., he would pay over to him dividends due, since the death, upon stock which C. held in trust for B., is not binding on the estate. Parker v. Baylis, 2 B. & P. 73.

(m) Rann v. Hughes, 7 T. R. 156. See Parker v. Baylis, 2 B. & P. 73.

(n) Lee v. Muggridge,[2] 5 Taunt. 36.

(o) Tugwell v. Hayman, 3 Camp. 298.

(p) 5 East, 261.

(q) Jones v. Tanner,[3] 7 B. & C. 542. It seems to be a settled rule of law, that no action at law lies to recover a legacy. Ib. per Littledale, J. the judgment of Lord Kenyon in Decks v. Strutt, 5 T. R. 690, has always been considered as an unqualified decision, that an action at law does not lie for a legacy.

(A) (Administrators who have given a note for the debt of their intestate, cannot be made personally responsible for the payment thereof, unless it be shown that they have assets, or that forbearance was the consideration of the note, and such forbearance will not be inferred merely from the note being drawn at sixty days. Bank of Troy v. Topping, 9 Wend. 273. But the giving of the note is prima facie evidence of assets. Same Case, 13 Wend. 557.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxix. 297. [2]Id. x. 10. [3]Id. xiv. 97.

where the executor has agreed to retain the stated amount for the legatee (r).

After the executor's assent to a legacy of a specific chattel, an action lies against him to recover it (s). The proof of title will be similar to that already stated in the action of ejectment (t); if the plaintiff bring trover he should prove a demand and refusal, subsequent to the assent, and before the commencement of the action.

A release by one of several executors binds the rest (u).

*455 *The declarations of the wife are not evidence against the husband, in a joint action by them in right of the wife as executrix; for the husband being a party to the record, has an interest in the cause, and that cannot be prejudiced by any act or by the evidence of his wife (x).

EXTINGUISHMENT.

Things out of the land due only in respect of the land, and part of the profits of the land are extinguished by unity of possession, if a man hath an equal estate in both; e. g. as in the case of a way common, and what has no existence during the unity. Vin. Ab. Extin. (G). Secus of things done in another respect, e. g. Franchises, or where the person, not the land, is chargeable. Dav. 5, Vin. Ab. Extin. (G.) Or of a thing natural, e. g. a water-course. Jury v. Pigot, Poph. 170. 3 Buls. 340. A gutter is not extinguished, but the mending of a gutter is. Bro. Ent. pl. 60. An easement running with a house is not extinguished. Vin. Ab. Ext. (D.)

FALSE PRETENCES.

It is necessary to prove (y), 1st, The pretence as laid in the indictment (z); 2dly, Its falsity; 3dly, The obtaining the goods or money as alleged; 4thly, By means of the false pretence; 5thly, With the intent specified.

(r) Hart v. Minors, 2 Cr. & M.

(s) Williams v. Lee, 3 Atk. 223. An assent to a life interest in a chattel enures as an assent to a bequest in remainder, but if in such case the life interest be given to the executor, he shall be presumed to take possession as executor and not as legatee, where the assent would amount to a devastavit. Richards v. Brown,[1] 3 Bing. N. C. 493.

(t) Supra, 409.

(u) Executors have a joint and several interest, which cannot be divided. Each may dispose of the goods, surrender or release, and the power survives. Com. Dig. Administration [B.] 12. It is, therefore, unnecessary for co-executors to join in a receipt, each has a power over the whole funds; secus as to co-trustees. Chambers v. Minchin, 7 Ves. 9, 186. Bull v. Stokes, 11 Ves. J. 323, 324. An executrix who has treated the testator's goods as her husband's cannot object to their being taken in execution for the husband's debt. Quick v. Staines, 1 B. & P. 293. An executor may dispose of the assets of the testator, so that the testator's creditors cannot follow them in the hands of a bona fide purchaser. Whale v. Booth, 4 T. R. 625, n. (a). The sale or disposition of the testator's or intestate's goods by one of two executors or administrators, binds the other. Pannell v. Fenn, 1 Rol. Ab. 924; 1 Gouls. 185; Dyer, 23, b. So either an executor, 2 Ves. 267; or an administrator, Willand v. Fenn, 11 Geo. 2, Sel. N. P. 761, note (8); may bind another by releasing a debt to the testator or intestate. But a fraudulent receipt given by one executor is not binding on the rest. Vide infra, tit. Receipt.—Release.

(x) Alban v. Pritchett, 6 T. R. 680; and see Winsmore v. Greenbanke, Willes, 597, and tit. Husband and Wife.

(y) See Crim. Pleadings, tit. False Pretences. And the st. 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 53.

(z) It is essential that such pretence should consist in some false and fraudulent representation as to the existence or non-existence of some specific fact, by the credit given to which, either wholly or in part, the property is obtained. 4th Report of Crim. L. Commissioners, p. 72. The obtaining a cheque for 1,000*l.* for money to take up a bill of representation by the defendant, that he had money enough in his pocket to meet the bill all but 200*l.*, when in fact he had not more than 300*l.* in his pocket, was held to be within the statute. Crossley's Case, 2 Lewin's C. C. 164. A pretence that the party would do an act which he never intended to do, as that he would pay for goods, is not within the statute. R. v. Goodhall, Russ. & Ry. C. C. L. 461. So a false excuse made by a pauper, that he had not clothes made, with intent to excuse himself from working, is not within the Act, though the fact induce an overseer to furnish him with clothes. R. v. Wakeling, Russ. & Ry. C. C. L. 504; and see R. v. Codrington,[2] 1 C. & P. 661.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxxii. 219. [2]Id. xi. 518.

Proof of the false pretence.

It is not essential to prove that the prisoner used the very words which constitute the false pretence, as alleged in the indictment; it is sufficient to prove acts and conduct which virtually amount to the false pretence laid. (A). Thus, where the pretence alleged was that the prisoner pretended that a paper produced to the prosecutor was a true paper, and that it had been signed by W. S. It appeared that in fact the prisoner, when he offered the paper (which was in the form of a promissory note for ten shillings and sixpence, and resembling those which were generally circulated in the neighbourhood on the credit of W. S.), made no representation whatsoever; but the learned Judge (a) was of opinion that the offering the note as genuine *was equivalent to a representation that it was so, and the twelve Judges all held afterwards that the conviction was right (b). *456

The proof of the pretence must correspond with the allegations in the indictment. An allegation that the defendant pretended that he had paid a sum of money into the Bank of England is not supported by proof that he said that the money had been paid into the Bank (c). Where several act in concert, the pretence conveyed by the words of one, in the presence of the rest, will support an allegation of a false pretence by all (d).

2dly. The proof of the falsity of the pretence must of course correspond with the allegations.

It is not necessary to prove that the whole pretence as set out on the indictment is false; for part may be true, and part false, even although the whole be alleged to be false (e).

Proof of obtaining, &c.

3dly. The obtaining the money or goods.—This offence borders frequently very closely upon felony; for if the property be obtained with intent to defraud the owner, the only criterion for judging of the nature of the offence is this, whether the owner divested himself wholly of the property by the delivery, or merely parted with it for a temporary purpose. If A. animo furandi pretend to B., the owner of a horse, that he has been sent for it by C., who requested to borrow it, and A. by this pretence obtain the horse, and sell it, he is guilty of larceny; but if A. in such case, and with the like intention, were to obtain from B. a sum of money on pretence that C wanted to borrow it, and would repay it another time, the offence would not amount to felony (f): the distinction is, that in the one case the owner meant to part entirely with the whole property; in the other, with the temporary possession only (B).

(a) Graham, B.

(b) Freeth's Case, Stafford Lent Ass. 1807. Russ. & Ry. C. C. L. 127. See also Story's Case, Russ. & Ry. C. C. L. 81. Where the pretence alleged was a representation that a cheque was a good and genuine order for the payment of money, it was held to be proved by evidence of a false representation by the prisoner, that he had an account with the bankers on whom it was drawn, and that it would be paid. R. v. Parker, 2 Mood. C. C. 1.

(c) Rex v. Plestow, 1 Camp. 494, cor. Lord Ellenborough.

(d) Rex v. Young, 3 T. R. 98.

(e) See the observations of the Judges in R. v. Perrott, 2 M. & S. 379, where the false pretence was alleged to be, that the clerks expected fees, that a pound note must be sent as a fee to the head clerk, and that nothing could be done without it. It was held to be unnecessary to prove the parts in italics; and per Abbot, L. C. J. Mich. 1826, the constant practice on the circuit is to rule that it is sufficient to prove part of the pretences. Where, however, the pretence as laid consists of two parts, which are jointly laid as the means of defrauding, one of which turns out on the evidence to be insufficient, the prisoner cannot be convicted. R. v. Wickham, 2 P. & D. 333; 10 Ad. & Ell. 34.

(f) Coleman's Case, 1 Leach, 303, n. (a). Atkinson's Case, East's P. C. 673.

(A) (To authorize conviction on an indictment for false pretences, it is not necessary to prove all the pretences laid in the indictment to be false, unless all are material to constitute the offence charged. People v. Haynes, 11 Wend. 557. See also People v. Gates, 13 Wend. 311.)

(B) (But where a person got possession of a promissory note, by pretending that he wished to look at it, and then carried it away, and refused to deliver it to the holder, it was held that this was merely a private fraud and not punishable criminally. The People v. Miller, 14 John. R. 371. See also note to The People v. Babcock, 7 John. R. 201.)

Ownership. An allegation that the prisoner obtained from A., the servant of B., three shillings of the monies of B., by falsely pretending that nine shillings were due for the carriage of a parcel, whereas six shillings only were due, is not supported by proof that A. paid the three shillings out of his own money, having no money of B.'s in his hands at the time (g), for it would be merely optional in B. to reimburse A.; but it seems that if in such case A. had had three shillings of the money of B. in his possession, the evidence would support the allegation (h).

Where the prisoner was charged with obtaining money by false tokens, and it appeared that in fact he had obtained a bank-note, it was held that it
*457 might *(upon the evidence) be presumed that he had received the money at the Bank (i). The late statute specifies chattel money or valuable security, as the subject of the offence, and the allegations ought to correspond with the fact (k).

By means of the false pretence. 4thly. By means of the false pretence.—It is sufficient to show that the money was obtained immediately by the means and instrumentality of the false pretence, although a previous confidence subsisted which rendered that pretence effectual; as where an agent, employed by the prosecutor to pay wages to his servants every week, delivered in a false account of payments, by means of which he obtained a larger sum than was due (l) (A).

5thly. The intention to defraud. See tit. FORGERY.

It is no ground of acquittal that it appears on the trial that the obtaining amounted to larceny (m).

FALSE RETURN, see SHERIFF.

FEOFFMENT.

Effect of. IF the issue be feoffavit vel non (n), and a deed of feoffment and livery (o) be proved, the defendant cannot adduce evidence to prove that it was made by covin to defraud creditors, for it is a feoffment, and the covin ought to have been specially pleaded; but if the issue had been seised or not seised, the covin would have been evidence, for he remains seised as to creditors, notwithstanding the feoffment (p). Though a deed be proved, and possession for forty years can be proved, it is but evidence of a feoffment, and

(g) Rex v. Douglas, 1 Camp. 212, cor. Lord Ellenborough.
(h) Ibid.
(i) Hale's Case, 9 St. Tr. 94.
(k) 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 29, s. 53.
(l) Witchell's Case, East's P. C. 830.
(m) 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 29, s. 53.
(n) A feoffment might be by livery without deed. Gil. L. E. 85, and may be so pleaded. But if a man plead a feoffment, per fait, quære whether he can give a parol feoffment in evidence. Ib. and 2 Roll. Abr. 672. Semble, if a demise be pleaded by deed, evidence of a parol demise is not admissible. Gilb. L. Ev. 86. Vide supra, tit. CORPORATION.
(o) In making livery of seisin no particular form of words is necessary, nor is even the word seisin necessary, but it is a question for the jury, under the circumstances, whether the feoffor intended to give possession of the premises to the feoffee in order to confirm his title under the deed of feoffment. Doe v. Stock, 1 Gow, C. 178. And see Shep. Touch. 209. Where there was no other evidence of livery of seisin than the memorandum indorsed on the feoffment, it was held that the possession for less than twenty years was insufficient to found a presumption of it, and that the feoffment being produced out of the possession of the adverse party, did not dispense with the necessity of proving it, where the party producing it took no interest under it, and had never acknowledged it as a valid instrument, but the contrary. Doe v. Marquis Cleveland,[1] 9 B. & C. 864.
(p) B. N. P. 257; Hob. 72.

(A) (An indictment will not lie for obtaining money by false pretences, where the money is parted with as a charitable donation, although the pretences moving to the gift are false and fraudulent. The People v. Clough, 17 Wend. 351.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xvii. 512.

cannot be pleaded as such (q). If the land be in lease, the assent or ouster of the tenant must be proved (r), unless the lessee, his wife, family and servants, be absent (s), and then it is sufficient although his cattle be on the land.

FINE (t).

Proof of. THE chirograph of a fine is evidence of it, because the chirographer is appointed by the law to give out copies of the agreements between the *parties that are lodged of record. But where the fine is to be proved with proclamations (u), as it must be, to bar a stranger, they must be proved by an examined copy of the roll, for the chirographer is not authorized to make out copies of the proclamations, and therefore his indorsement on the back of the fine is not evidence of them (x). *458

A fine does not operate until it has been executed (y).

Both parties and privies to a fine are absolutely barred by it (z); and so are strangers, who have at the time of levying the fine a present interest, unless they interpose their claim within five years after proclamations made (a), provided they do not labour under some legal impediment (b); such persons have five years allowed in which to prosecute their claims after such impediments are removed (c). Those whose rights accrue after the levying the fine and proclamations made, originating in some cause anterior to the fine, must prosecute their rights within five years after the time when such rights accrue (d). But as against one who has no seisin of the estate, even although he has a chattel interest in it, as a term for years (e), the levying a fine operates nothing, but may be defeated under the plea that partes finis nihil habuerunt (f). The payment of rent by (q) 1 H. 8, 28 H. 8; Dyer, fol. 22, pl. 135, in Core's Case, and per Coke, C. J. in Isaac v. Clarke, 2 Bulstr. 306.

(r) Com. Dig. Feoffment, B. 7.

(s) Ibid.; and supra, Vol. I. Ind. tit. FINE.

(t) As to the operation of fine levied on a contingent estate by way of estoppel during the contingency, see Doe v. Oliver,[1] 10 B. & C. 186. By the stat. 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 74, s. 2, after the 31st of December 1833, no fine shall be levied or common recovery suffered.

(u) A fine without proclamations makes a discontinuance, but does not bar the estate-tail. Com. Dig. tit. Fine, G. 1; and see 27 Edw. 1; the stat. 4 Hen. 7, c. 24; 31 Eliz. 2; 2 And. 109.

(x) Chettle v. Pound, B. N. P. 229; Allen's Case, 13 Car. 1, Clayt. 51. Hatch v. Bluck,[2] 6 Taunt. 486.

(y) Pl. Comm. 357, b. It may be executed either by entry or by writ (West. Symb. 85. Com. Dig. Execution, A. 6); by writ of habere facias seisinam within the year, or scire facias afterwards. Ibid. and Com. Dig. Fine, E. 15.

(z) 2 Inst. 516; Com. Dig. Fine, I.

(a) See the stat. 4 Hen. 7, c. 24. A fine operates as a conveyance of an interest by way of estoppel, Watk. Prin. Conv. 252; and if the party levying the fine have no interest, none can pass. Parties and privies in blood and estate are estopped. Hob. 33; Watk. Prin. Conv. 255; Grant's Case, 10 Co. 50; Johnson v. Bellamy, 2 Leon. 36; 3 Co. 87. But they are not bound unless they be privies in estate as well as in blood. Ib. But although a fine works nothing, twenty years' wrongful possession after fine will bar an ejectment. Doe v. Gregory,[3] 2 Ad. & Ell. 14. As to the effect of a fine by tenant in tail to give a tortious fee, see Doe v. Finch,[4] 4 B. & Ad. 283.

(b) Coverture, infancy, imprisonment, insanity, and absence beyond sea.

(c) Stat. 4 Hen. 7, c. 24.

(d) 4 Hen. 7, c. 24. When once the five years have begun to run, they go on, notwithstanding any subsequent disability. Doe v. Jones, 4 T. R. 300. But if a person labour under several impediments, he shall have five years after the last impediment removed. 1 Lev. 215; Bl. Comm. 375, a. [Ballentine, Chap. III.]

(e) 5 Rep. 123; Hardr. 401.

(f) Hob. 334. Except as against parties or privies. See Doe d. Cooper v. Runcorn,[5] 5 B. & C. 696. But a freehold may be aequired by disseisin. Watk. Prin. Conv. 254. But if the feoffment be fraudulent, the fine may be reversed. Fermor's Case, 3 Co. 78; Cowp. 694; 1 Burr. 117.—Fine. A fine levied by a mortgagor in fee, who remains in possession after the day of payment, is a nullity, for he has no freehold. In order to constitute a title by disseisin there must be a wrongful entry. Hall v. Doe d. Surteis,[6] 5 B. & A. 687; and see Doe v. Perkins, 3 M. & S. 271; Smartle v. Williams, 1 Salk. 245; Rowe v. Power, 2 N. R. 1; 1 East, 575.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxi. 50. [2]Id. i. 460. [3]Id. xxix. 14. [4]Id. xxiv. 56. [5]Id. xii. 359. [6]Id. vii. 232.

the tenant in possession to the conusor of the fine is primâ facie evidence of the seisin of the latter (g); but the mere receipt of rent by a stranger to the legal title is not sufficient (h). Proof that a writ of possession, after a recovery in ejectment, was executed on the evening of the 6th of November, the first day of term, by the entry of the officer on the land, and his claiming it for the cognizor, although the possession of the tenant who afterwards paid rent to the cognizor was not actually changed, was held to be evidence of a seisin to support a fine levied on the 8th of November, but relating to *459 *the 6th (i); and it seems that the receipt of rent after a fine has been levied for a period antecedent to the fine, is primâ facie evidence of the cognizor's possession of the premises during the time for which rent was received (k).

FORCIBLE ENTRY.

One who has a right of possession cannot legally take it by force, and is liable to a criminal prosecution if he use violence and commit a breach of the public peace (l). But he may assert his right, and take possession if he can do it peaceably, without incurring any penalty; and being in possession, may retain it, and plead that it is his soil and freehold, or otherwise, according to his interest. And though the violent and forcible assertion of a right may subject the party to criminal animadversion, yet it does not render him liable to a civil suit for merely taking that which was his own. The taking possession with such a number of persons as is calculated to deter the rightful owner from sending them away and resuming possession, constitutes a forcible entry (m). A judge of assize may refuse to award restitution after a true bill found by the grand jury for a forcible entry and detainer, and the Court has not jurisdiction to interfere (n).

FOREIGN LAW.

Proof of. The existence of a foreign law or custom is to be proved as a matter of fact, by evidence to show what the law or custom is: and the Court will not presume that the law, even of Scotland, agrees with that of England upon any particular point (o); and it is clear, that the written law of a foreign country must be proved by documents properly authenticated, and not by parol (p) (a). And in one instance it has been held (q) that the unwritten (g) Doe d. Foster v. Williams, Cowp. 621; 11 East, 495. (h) B. N. P. 104; supra, tit. Ejectment.

(i) Doe d. Osborne v. Spencer, 11 East, 495. (k) Ibid. per Ld. Ellenborough.
(l) See Lord Kenyon's observations in Taylor v. Cole, 3 T. R. 295.
(m) Milner v. Maclean,[1] 2 C. & P. 17. (n) R. v. Harland, 1 P. & D. 93.
(o) And therefore, where the plaintiff's cause of action in assumpsit arose in Scotland, Ld. Eldon held that the defendant was bound to prove that the defence of infancy was available by the law of Scotland. Male v. Roberts, 3 Esp. C. 163. And in general, if an action be brought on a contract, made in a country where the liability of the defendant differs from his liability in this country, it lies on the defendant to show it. Brown v. Gracey,[2] 1 D. & R. 41. If a defendant justify an arrest in a foreign country, qu. whether it be not incumbent on him to prove that it was justifiable according to the law of that country. Mure v. Kay, 4 Taunt. 43. See Mostyn v. Fabrigas, Cowp. 174
(p) Clegg v. Levy, 3 Camp. 166. As to impeach the validity of an agreement. Ibid. and Millar v. Heinrick, 4 Camp. 155. In order to prove the written law of a foreign country, it seems that an examined copy of the original law ought to be produced. In Picton's Case, 24 Howell's St. Tr. 494, Lord Ellenborough said, "in order to prove the written law of any nation, a copy of that law should be produced. If I were sitting at Guildhall, and proof of foreign regulations were necessary, I should require an authenticated copy of those regulations." On a question as to the law of Jewish marriages, Lord Stowell directed questions to be addressed to the tribunal of the Bethdin, and the answers were received and acted upon, in analogy to the practice of the Court of Chancery, where the law of a foreign country is received, not on oath, but on a reliance on the honour and integrity of the professors of that law; and further information was received on the depositions of persons conversant in that case. Lindo v. Belisario, 1 Haggard, 216. [Talbot v. Seeman, 1 Cranch, 38; Church v. Hubbar, 2 Cranch, 187.]
(q) In the case of Bohtlinch v. Inglis, 3 East, 380, evidence was admitted of one of the mercantile navi-

[a] Packard v. Hill, 2 Wendell, 411.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xii. 5. [2] Id. xvi. 426.

law of a foreign country must also be proved (r) (1). Before an instrument *made in a foreign country, which derives a legal effect and operation from the law of that country, can be admitted in evidence, the existence of the law itself must be proved by witnesses (s) (2). An instrument purporting to be a divorce under the seal of the Synagogue at Leghorn is not admissible to prove such divorce, unless the law of the country be previously established (t). *460

Although by the municipal laws of a foreign country, certain formal proceedings are required to enable parties to sue as partners, this will not prevent their suing as such in this country (u).

gation laws of Russia, and also of a documentary opinion of the Judges of the Custom-house court of St. Petersburgh, on the effect and operation of that law, signed by the presiding Judges of that Court; and a question on a special case was reserved for the opinion of the Court of K. B. upon the admissibility of the latter document; but the Court gave no opinion.

(r) Boehtlinck v. Schneider, 3 Esp. C. 58, per Ld. Kenyon, C. J.

(s) Ganer v. Lady Lanesborough, Peake's C. 17, cor. Ld. Kenyon. [See Le Ray v. Crowninshield, 2 Mason's R. 151.]

(t) Ibid.; and see Mure v. Kay, 4 Taunt. 43; Burrows v. Jemino, 2 Str. 733; Fremoult v. Dedire, 1 P. Wms. 429; Feaubert v. Turst, 1 Brown's P. C. 38. As to proof of an Irish stat. vide Vol. I. and Index, tit. STATUTE.

(u) Shaw v. Harvey,[1] 1 M. & M. 528. A plea of discharge in Scotland upon a cessio bonorum does not preclude an English creditor from afterwards suing his debtor in England upon the contract (made in England), although he had opposed such discharge in Scotland, as he might have appeared to object to the jurisdiction. If the plea had alleged that the plaintiff had or ought to have availed himself of the benefit of the Scotch law, by receiving a distributive share of the defendant's estate, it might have made a difference. Phillips v. Allan,[2] 8 B. & C. 477. See Smith v. Buchanan, 1 East, 6. Where a female domestic slave by birth accompanied her mistress to England and returned back voluntarily with her to A., the place of birth and servitude, held, that although not subject to control or coercion whilst in England, yet that on her return to such place of birth and servitude without manumission, the dominion and property of her master revived. Slave Grace, 2 Hagg. 94; and see Sommersett's Case, 22 How. St. Tr. 1. A foreign contract must be construed according to the law of the country where made, but the remedy must be according to law of England. De la Lega v. Vianna,[3] 1 B. & Ad. 284. As to the effect of a foreign bankruptcy in passing bankrupt's property in this country, see Sill v. Worswick, 1 H. B. 655. A plea of judgment recovered for the same cause of action in the Vice-Admiralty Court of Sierra Leone, not being a court of record, and the judgment being only evidence of the cause of action, and not shown to be binding and conclusive on the defendant, is not a bar to a count on the original ground of action, Smith v. Nicholls,[4] 5 Bing. N. C. 208; and 7 Dowl. P. C. 283.

---

(1) [If foreign laws respecting trade be not positively shown to have been in writing as public edicts or statutes, they may be proved by parol testimony. Livingston v. Maryland Insurance Co. 6 Cranch, 274. {The statutes of another state, or their repeal, cannot be proved by parol evidence. Raynham v. Canton, 3 Pick. Rep. 293.}]

(2) [The public laws of a foreign nation, on a subject of common concern to all nations, promulgated in the United States, by the national executive, may be read in evidence in the courts of the U. States, without further authentication or proof. Talbot v. Seeman, 1 Cranch, 38.

It is said by Washington, J. that the written or statute laws of foreign countries must be proved by the laws themselves, if they can be procured; if not, inferior evidence of them may be received: Unwritten laws or usages may be proved by parol evidence, and when proved, it is for the court to construe them, and decide upon their effect. Consequa v. Willings & al. 1 Peters' Rep. 229. See also Seton v. Delaware Ins. Co. Circuit Court, April 1808, and Robinson v. Clifford, Circuit Court, April 1807. Wharton's Digest, 229. {Reported, 2 Wash. C. C. Rep. page 175, and page 1. In Connecticut it has been decided with respect to this subject, that the several States of the Union are to be considered in relation to each other as foreign nations. Brackett v. Norton, 4 Conn. Rep. 517.[a]}

In Kenny v. Clarkson, 1 Johns. 385, it was held that foreign statutes cannot be proved by parol; but that the common law of a foreign country may be shown by the testimony of intelligent witnesses of that country. See also Woodbridge v. Austin, 2 Tyler's Rep. 367. Frith v. Sprague, 14 Mass. Rep. 455. In Smith v. Elder, 3 Johns. 105, the confession of the defendant that he had carried goods contraband by the laws of Great Britain, was held to be sufficient evidence of the law of that country, in an action for putting prohibited goods on board a vessel bound thither, in consequence of which the vessel was seized, and the owner (the plaintiff) put to expense in procuring her release.[b]]

[a] Acc. Hempstead v. Reed, 6 Conn. Rep. 480.

[b] Denison v. Hyde, 6 Conn. Rep. 508. Middlebury College v. Cheney, 1 Vermont Rep. 336.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxii. 374. [2] Id. xv. 269. [3] Id. xx. 387. [4] Id. xxxv. 88.

FORGERY (x).

Proof of forgery.

It is necessary to prove :—1st, A making within the county;—2ndly, That it was a false making in law and in fact;—3dly, Of the particular instrument set forth;—4thly, With intent to defraud, &c.

A making within the county.

It is essential in the first place to connect the prisoner with the instrument alleged to be forged, as by evidence of his having uttered or published it, or of its being found in his possession.

It is seldom that direct evidence can be given of the fact of forgery. In the case of negotiable securities the evidence is usually applied to the uttering rather than to the forging, although both are usually charged. Where the instrument is not of a negotiable nature, as in the case of a bond or will, after proof that the instrument has been forged by some one, a strong presumption necessarily arises against the party in whose favour the forgery *461 is *made, or who has the possession of it, and seeks to derive benefit from it. Evidence that the instrument so proved to have been forged is in the hand-writing of the prisoner, must, if unexplained, necessarily be strong evidence of guilt (y).

The prosecutor cannot give secondary evidence of the forged deed, unless he has given the prisoner notice to produce it, and notice at the assizes is insufficient; but if the prisoner has declared it to be destroyed, no notice is necessary (z).

Comparison of hands is not evidence to prove the forgery, but, as will be seen, persons of skill may be admitted to give their opinion, whether the particular hand-writing on the forged instrument is natural and genuine, or feigned and imitated; because, as it is said, a judgment may be formed upon such points by habit and experience (a). So where the question is, whether a seal has been forged, engravers of seals may testify as to the difference between a genuine impression and the one alleged to be false (b).

A making within the county.*

Proof must also be given that the offence was committed within the county. The bare fact of finding the forged instrument in the county where the party who forged it was at the time, is not primâ facie evidence that he forged it in that county (A). Brown being an accomplice of Parkes, who had forged a note, uttered it in Middlesex, in the absence of Parkes, (x) The characteristic of the crime of forgery is the false making of some written or other instrument for the purpose of gaining credit by deception, 5th Rep. of Crim. L. Commiss. 65. With respect to the false making, the offence extends to every instance where the instrument is, under the circumstances, so constructed that it may induce a party to give credit to it as genuine and authentic in a point where it is false and deceptive; and in this respect a forged instrument differs from one which is merely false, in stating facts which are false, Ib.

The offence may be defined to consist in the false and fraudulent making of an instrument with intent to prejudice any public or private right, ib. And see 4 Comm. 247. R. v. Coogan, Leach's C. C. L. 448. R. v. Taylor, 2 East, P. C. c. 19, s. 47. Parkes & Brown's Case, 2 Leach's C. C. L. 275. Jones & Palmer's Case, 1 Leach's C. C. L. 366. 3 Jus. 169.

(y) See R. v. Parkes & Brown, East's P. C. 964. (z) R. v. Haworth,[1] 4 C. & P. 255.

(a) See tit. HAND-WRITING. Cary v. Pitt, Peake's Ev. Appen. lxxxv; R. v. Cator, 4 Esp. C. 117.

(b) By Lord Mansfield, C. J. in Foulkes v. Chad, cited Russel, 1509; and Phill. on Ev. 227.

* By the stat. 1 W. 4, c. 66, the venue may be laid in county where the prisoner is apprehended, or where he is in custody.

(A) (Upon trial of an indictment for forging bank notes, the fact, if proved of the forged notes mentioned in the indictment, and other forged notes of like kind, and the plates, implements, and materials for forging such notes being found in the prisoner's possession, is prima facie circumstantial evidence that the prisoner was the forger, and such forged notes being found in the possession of the prisoner in the county of B. is likewise prima facie evidence proper to be given to the jury of the fact that he committed the forgery there. Spencer v. Commonwealth, 2 Leigh, 751.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 370.

who was apprehended in the same county, with forty similar notes in his possession, dated Ringhton, Salop, and a majority of the Judges held, that there was no evidence of the commission of the forgery in Middlesex (c). In Crocker's case, the prisoner being indicted in the county of Wilts, it appeared that whilst he was in London his lodgings in Wiltshire were searched in the presence of his wife, and in a pocket-book (in which his name had been written by himself) the note in question was found, bearing date more than two months before, at which time he was in another county; the prisoner was convicted, but afterwards received a pardon, on the ground (as has been stated) that a majority of the Judges were of opinion that there was not sufficient evidence of the commission of the offence within the county (d) (1.)

2dly. Such a false making as in point of law amounts to a forgery, consists in the false and fraudulent making of an instrument with intent to prejudice any public or private right. It is falsely made if it be falsely made in any material part (e). Any fraudulent alteration of a written instrument in any material part (f), whether it be by addition, diminution, erasure, transposition, or any combination of these acts, or by any other device or means whatsoever (g), seem to be sufficient in law to constitute a false making of the instrument so altered (h) (A). The false making may consist in *the alteration of a genuine instrument, by expunging an indorsement (i); *462 inserting a legacy in a will, afterwards executed by another, who is ignorant of the alteration (k); applying a genuine signature and seal to a false writing, such as a release (l); inserting the name of a person in an indictment against whom the bill was not found (m): or fabricating a document, which is not a copy of a genuine instrument, in order to offer it in evidence as a true copy (n); the altering a deed in a material part (o): altering the name of a banker at whose house a provincial bank-note is made payable (p); or altering the date of a bill of exchange, in order to accelerate the time of payment (q); for in each case a new and false instrument is created, and as much mischief, indeed frequently more, is likely to arise than would have arisen if the whole instrument had been fabricated; in such cases it is a general rule, that the alteration of part is a forgery of the whole (r). So the offence may consist in the making a false instrument in a man's own name, as if, after executing a genuine deed of feoffment, he make a subsequent one, for purposes of fraud, of a date prior to the former False making in law.

(c) R. v. Parkes & Brown, 2 East, P. C. 992. (d) Russel, 1500.
(e) 2 East, P. C. 855; 3 Ins. 171.
(f) See 5th Rep. of the Crim. L. Com. 70; and Teague's C. 2 East, P. C. 979; R. v. Elsworth, ib. 986; R. v. Treble, 2 Taunt. 328; 2 East's P. C. 583; R. v. Beckett, Russ. & Ry. C. C. 251. Per Lord Ellenborough, 5 Esp. C. 100; R. v. Marsh, 3 Mod. 56.
(g) R. v. Bigg, 3 P. Wms. 419.
(h) Supra note (x), and Criminal Pleadings, tit. FORGERY.
(i) R. v. Bigg, 3 P. Wms. 419. (k) 1 Haw. c. 70, s. 2, 6; Moor, 760; Noy, 101.
(l) 2 Ins. 171; 1 Haw. c. 70, s. 2. (m) R. v. Marsh, 3 Mod. 66; 1 Haw. c. 70, s. 2.
(n) Upfold v. Leit, 5 Esp. C. 100, by Lord Ellenborough.
(o) Moor, 619; 2 East's P. C. 986. (p) R. v. Treble, 2 Taunt. 328; 2 Leach, 1040.
(q) East's P. C. 853. Master v. Miller, 4 T. R. 320.
(r) East's P. C. 855; Crim. Pl. 478; 1 Haw. c. 70, s. 2, 4, 5; 3 Inst. 169, 170. R. v. Dawson, East's P. C. 885, 978.

(1) [In the case of the United States v. Britton, 2 Mason's Rep. 464, where a check was drawn in Philadelphia on Boston in favour of the prisoner, who was then in Philadelphia, and who produced the check altered in Boston—there being no evidence that it was altered elsewhere—it was held that it was prima facie evidence that it was altered in Massachusetts, that being the first state where it was known to be altered.[a]]

(A) (Commonwealth v. Ladd, 15 Mass. R. 524.)

[a] But see Commonwealth v. Barmenter, 5 Pick. Rep. 279.

(s); or if a person indorse a name as the indorsement of another person of the same name (t) with that of the payee of the note.

If any person, being deceived as to the contents of any written instrument, be, by means of such deception, fraudulently induced to sign or otherwise execute such instrument, it is in law a false making by the party so fraudulently inducing him to sign or execute such instrument (u). If several persons make distinct parts of or otherwise jointly contribute to the making of a false instrument, it is a false making by each (x).

But a false making is essential. The mere false representation by the prisoner that he is the person whose name is on the note, is no forgery, for there is no false making (y); but it has been held, it seems, that the making a note by the prisoner in his own name, and dating it as of a place with which he has no connection, with intent afterwards to pass it off as the note of another, is a forgery (z).

*463 *It seems to be perfectly settled, that the making a false instrument in the name of another, whether the prisoner does or does not assume to be that other, being a real person, is a forgery (a). And also, that the making an instrument in the name of a non-existing person is forgery (b), although the name be assumed by the party at the time for the purpose of fraud, and to avoid detection, and the credit be given to the person and not to the instrument (c), and although no additional credit be obtained by the false name (d).

(s) 1 Haw. c. 70, s. 2; 3 Inst. 169; Fost. 117; 1 Hale, 683; Pult. 47, b.; 27 Hen. III.; Moor, 655.

(t) Mead v. Young, 4 T. R. 28; R. v. Brown, East's P. C. 963.

(u) 1 Haw. P. C. c. 70, s. 2; 2 East's P. C. 856; Moor, 760; Noy, 101.

(x) R. v. Kirkwood and others, 1 Moody's C. C. 304; R. v. Dade, ib. 307.

(y) Hevey's Case, East's P. C. 856; Leach, 268. The indictment in such case should be for obtaining money under false pretences, if money has been obtained.

(z) See the case of Parkes & Brown, East's P. C. 963. According to the finding of the jury, the case stood thus:—Parkes signed a promissory note in the name of Thomas Brown, with the consent of the other prisoner, whose name was Thomas Brown, dated Ringhton, Salop, and Brown afterwards uttered it, with a false representation that the note was his brother's; there was no evidence that the prisoner Brown had any residence in or connection with Ringhton. The Judges were of opinion that the prisoners were properly convicted, on the ground that it had not been signed by the Thomas Brown, whose name it purported to be; for the note imported that he resided at Ringhton, and was a correspondent of Down & Co. (the bankers where the money was payable according to the terms of the note). In this case, the date "Ringhton, Salop," on the note, and the place of payment, were particularly specified by Grose J., who delivered the opinion of the Judges, as constituting a false making. The false representation by Brown, that it was the note of his brother, was also mentioned as a circumstance of importance; but as this was no part of the instrument itself, being a mere false statement made subsequent to the fabrication of the note, it could be no ingredient in the false making, although it was evidence of the fraudulent intention on uttering the note, and also of the intention of the parties when the note was made. In the abstract, it amounts to this, that a man who signs his own name to a note, dated at a place where he does not reside, and payable at a banker's where he has no money, is a forgery. It is remarkable, that in the above case the jury did not expressly find an intention on the part of the prisoners, at the time of the making, to utter it as the note of a third person. If the note contained a mere promise to pay, (without place of date or payment,) signed by the prisoner, and was afterwards uttered by him in the name of another, the case would be more doubtful. See also R. v. Webb,[1] 3 B. & B. 228.

(a) Dunn's Case, East's P. C. 966; where the prisoner assumed the character of Mary Wallace, a real person, and signed a note in the name of the latter, in the presence of the prosecutor. Hadfield's Case, Russel, 1425. Ev. Col. St. vol. 6, p. 580; where the prisoner pretended to be the Hon. Augustus Hope, and drew the bill in question in his name. And see R. v. Lewis, Fost. 116; R. v. Wilks, 2 East, P. C. 958; R. v. Ballard, 1 Leach, 83; R. v. Lockett, ib. 94; R. v. Abraham, 2 East's P. C. 940.

(b) Lewis's Case, Fost. 166; where the prisoner forged a power of attorney in the name of Elizabeth Tingle (a non-existing person), administratrix of her father, R. Tingle, a seaman. Bolland's Case, East's P. C. 958; Leach, 83, where the prisoner indorsed the name of Banks (a non-existing person) on a genuine bill. Lockett's Case, East's P. C. 490; where the prisoner made an order on a banker in the name of a fictitious person, purporting to be made by one who kept cash there.

(c) Sheppard's Case, East's P. C. 967; 1 Leach, 226; where the prisoner obtained goods at a silversmith's in the name of Turner, and gave a draft in that name; and where the prosecutor swore that he gave credit to the prisoner and not to the draft.

(d) Toft's Case, East's P. C. 959. The bill, with a general indorsement upon it, had been stolen, and on

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 423.

In Aicles's Case, where the prisoner drew a bill in the name of John Mason, No. 4, Argyle-street, Oxford-road, and it appeared that the prisoner had assumed the name (the residence being correct) a month before, considerable doubt seems to have been entertained by the Judges on the question, whether this amounted to forgery, although the Jury found that the name had been assumed for the purpose of that very fraud (e). This finding seems, however, to decide the point; if the lodging had been taken, and the name assumed but one hour before the making of the instrument, there would have been no room for doubt, and the lapse of a month can make no difference, for it is still one act of contrivance for the purpose of fraud. The continued residence and use of the name might indeed be evidence to a jury that the prisoner was, for legal purposes, the person he assumed to be in making the instrument, but its effect is defeated by their finding that this was for the purpose of committing the fraud; in other words, it is a finding that he was not the person in whose name the note was drawn.

Where the prisoner has signed a bill of exchange, or other instrument, in *a name which he has assumed, and which he alleges to be his own name, it *464 is a question of fact for the consideration of the Jury whether (although the name be not strictly his own) he has habitually used it, and become known by it, or whether he has assumed it for the purpose of committing the particular fraud. If he has acquired the name which he has used, by habit and reputation, so that he is known and recognized by it, he is not guilty of a false making in the use of it; but if he has adopted and assumed it for the very purpose of committing the fraud, it is but part of the contrivance itself, and therefore can afford no defence to the charge of forgery; it can make no difference in such case, whether the name was assumed immediately before and preparatory to the perpetration of the crime, or some length of time before (f).

It is essential to prove the falsity of the instrument, either by showing that the writing is not that of the person by whom it purports to have been made (A), or by showing that no such person exists; in the former instance, it is necessary, in the first place, to identify the person whose hand-writing offering it to be discounted at a banker's, being required to indorse it, the prisoner, Edward Taft, wrote upon it the name of John Williams. Taylor's Case, East's P. C. 960; where the prisoner having unduly obtained a bill of exchange, obtained payment from the drawee, and indorsed a receipt on the bill in the name of William Wilson (a fictitious person), held to be forgery; Buller, J. dubitante.

False making in fact.

(e) East's P. C. 969, 970; 6 Ev. St. 580; Russel, 1436.

(f) Where the prisoner, Samuel Whiley, drew a bill in the name of Samuel Milward, to pay for goods ordered by him of the prosecutor at Bath, seven or eight days before, in the same name, and it appeared that on the day before he ordered the goods he put a brass plate with the name of Milward on his door at Bath (where he had lived for about a month previous to the transaction), the prosecutor stated that he took the draft on the credit of the prisoner, whom he did not know. The learned Judge left it to the jury to say whether the prisoner had not assumed the name of Milward in the purchase of the goods and delivery of the draft, in order to defraud the prosecutor, and they found in the affirmative; and the Judges afterwards held, that fraud having been found by the jury, the conviction was right. (Whiley's Case, Cor. Thompson, B. Somersetshire Spr. Ass. 1805; and afterwards by the Judges, Russel, 1439). So where the prisoner Francis made an order on a banker for the payment of money in the name of Cooke, it was proved that the prisoner's real name was Francis, although he had occasionally assumed other names; it was left to the jury whether, in the particular instance, the prisoner had assumed the name for the purpose of fraud, and the jury finding the fact, the Judges held that the conviction was right. (R. v. Francis, Russel, 1440); four of the Judges were absent.

(A) (So where certain coal consigned to P. of New York, was claimed by another of the same name who resided there, but was not the true consignee, and he knowing this obtained an advance of money on endorsing the permit for the delivery of the coal, it was held to be forgery, and not the merely obtaining money under false pretences. People v. Peacock, 6 Cow. 72. But if a merchant write his name on blank pieces of paper, and intrust them with his clerk for the purpose of having notes written upon them, and one by false pretences obtain them of the clerk, and make upon them notes other than those for which they were intended, the fraudulent use of them is not forgery. Putnam v. Sullivan, 4 Mass. R. 45.)

is afterwards to be negatived, with the person whose instrument the prisoner meant to imitate.

In Sponsonby's Case, (g), the prosecution for forging an indorsement by William Pearce, the payee of a genuine bill, failed, because Davis the drawer was not called to prove that the William Pearce, whose signature was negatived, was the real payee of the bill.

If the description on the face of the bill apply to several persons, the signatures of all must be negatived.

It may be proved by circumstances, that the prisoner meant to simulate the writing of a particular person.

Where the prisoner, being himself the payee of the note uttered, stated that W. H. of B. was the maker, it was held that it was sufficient for the prosecutor to show that it was not the note of that person, and that it lay on the prisoner to prove it to be the genuine note of another W. H., if it were so (h).

*465 *Where the bill purported to have been drawn by Andrew Holme, payable to John Sowerby, and the prisoner, on negotiating the bill, stated that John Sowerby, the indorsee, was the son of John Sowerby, of Liverpool, a cheese-monger, the father was examined as a witness, and proved that there was no other person but his son in Liverpool to whom the description given by the prisoner applied, and also proved that the indorsement had not been written by his son. It was objected, that Andrew Holme, the drawer, ought to have been called in order to prove who the payee really was, but it was held to be a sufficient answer, that the prisoner had acknowledged that the signature of Andrew Holme (his uncle) was a forgery (i).

On an indictment for personating the proprietor of stock, and forging his signature, the latter was admitted to prove facts tending to show that he was the party personated (k).

Proof of descriptive averments.

3. Proof must be given of those averments which are necessarily introduced upon the record, to show that the forged instrument was of the description of those the forgery of which is prohibited by the statute; as that it was a bond, will, or receipt. Thus where the indictment is for forging a receipt for money on a navy-bill, evidence is requisite to show, as averred, that the signature of the party upon the bill operates as a receipt (l).

(g) Leach, 374, cor. Adair, Serj. Some evidence of identity was certainly requisite, but it seems to be very doubtful whether it would, as laid down in the above case, be essential to call the drawer as the best witness of the fact. It was there held that the fact, that the William Pearce produced as a witness, was intimate with the drawer, and had received a letter from him, signifying that such a bill had been remitted to him, and directing the application, was not sufficient evidence of identity.

(h) Hampton's Case, 1 Ry. & M. C. C. 255. The giving a forged note to an agent or accomplice, that he may pass it, is a disposing thereof to him within the stat. Giles's Case, 1 Ry. & M. C. C. 166. Upon a charge of uttering forged notes, in order to show the guilty knowledge, evidence of uttering (subsequently to the act under inquiry) of bills precisely similar as to the names of drawers and acceptors, which were also forgeries, is admissible. R. v. Smith,[1] 4 C. & P. 411.

(i) Downes's Case, East's P. C. 977. On an indictment for uttering a forged acceptance, purporting to be the acceptance of W. & Co. No. 3, Birchin-lane, it is not sufficient to prove that it is not the acceptance of W. & Co. No. 20, Birchin-lane. R. v. Watts,[2] 3 B. & B. 197.

(k) Parr's Case, East's P. C. 997.

(l) R. v. Hunter, Leach, 711. It is sufficient, if from its terms, the instrument operate as a receipt as averred, although the word receipt be not used, Boardman's Case, 2 Lewin's C. 181. Where a paper was in reality a certificate of work done, but which, if genuine, it was proved by parol evidence would have been an authority for payment of the sum mentioned in it; it was held to be sufficient to sustain an allegation in the indictment for forging a warrant for payment of money; and that it is not necessary to show by averments that the instrument is within the meaning of the statute. Reg v. Rogers, 9 C. & P. 41. An indictment for uttering a forged order for goods, the letter purporting only to be a request, and the person whose name

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 448. [2]Id. vii. 408.

In Wall's Case (m), on an indictment for forging a will of lands, where the will set forth purported to have been attested by two witnesses only, the Judges held that the prisoner had been improperly convicted for want of *evidence at the trial to show what estate the supposed testator had in *466 the lands so devised, since in the absence of such proof it was to be presumed that the estate was freehold.

Where the indictment alleged that a bill of exchange had been signed by H. Hutchinson, and it appeared that the signature was a forgery, it was held that the variance was fatal (n).

It seems to be a general rule, that if the forged instrument appear on the face of it to be valid as the instrument which it is alleged to be, an indictment lies for forging it, although from some collateral fact the instrument, if genuine, would not have been available; but that it is otherwise where the defect appears on the face of the instrument itself (o). Thus an indictment is maintainable for forging a conveyance, although the estate may be described by a wrong name (p); for forging a will, although the supposed testator be still living (q), or be described in the forged will by a wrong christian name (r); or for forging a bill of exchange, or other instrument, on paper not stamped (s), although no stamp could legally be impressed upon the instrument after it was made; consequently such an instrument is admissible in evidence on an indictment for forgery, although unstamped (t). And in general no evidence of collateral facts is available in defence for the purpose of showing that the instrument could not, if genuine, have been legally enforced.

Purport variance.

The purport of a writing is that which appears on the face of it, and if the writing when produced does not appear to be that which according to the allegation it purports to be, the variance will be fatal (u); as, where the indictment stated that the bill purported to be a bank-note, and the instrument produced in evidence was in the form of a promissory note, "I promise to pay, &c. for Self and Company of my bank in England" (x) (A).

was forged having no authority to order, was held to be wrong, as he might have been indicted for uttering a forged request. Reg v. Newton, 2 Moody, 59. The prisoner was charged with uttering a forged bill; it appeared that the bill was not addressed to a drawee by name, but at a house of business; and having an acceptance forged on it, it was held to be properly described as a bill of exchange. Reg v. Hawkes, 2 Moody, 60. Where a forged letter containing the request to let the prisoner have goods, added also a promise to answer for the amount; it was held to be not less a forged request within the Act. Reg v. White, 9 C. & P. 282. A paper simply stating the goods, and signed in the name of a customer, the prosecutor being in the habit of delivering goods on such papers, was held to amount to a request for the delivery of goods within the statute. Reg v. Pulbrook, 9 C. & P. 37.

(m) East's P. C. 953. Tamen qu.; for how could it make any difference, whether the supposed testator had or had not lands upon which the will, if genuine, could operate? Qu. what were the averments in the indictment? Where the prisoner, having obtained an order for payment, signed in the names of the chairman and one guardian, added the name of another; held, that by uttering the instrument, he put forth as true whatever was stated on it, and that its appearing from the minutes that another person was chairman on the day of the date was immaterial. Reg v. Pike, 2 Moody, 70. The forgery of a power of attorney for any pension due or supposed to be so, is within the 7 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 38, although it may be that no such pension exists to which such document professes to relate. Reg v. Pringle, 2 Moody, 127.

(n) Carter's Case, East's P. C. 985.

(o) Forging an acceptance of an incomplete instrument, as where at the time no drawer's name was inserted, is not a forgery of an acceptance of a bill of exchange within 1 Will. 4, c. 66, s. 64. R. v. Butterwick, 2 Mood. & R. 196.

(p) Japhet Crook's Case, Str. 901. For other instances, see Crim. Pleadings, 110, 2d edit.

(q) R. v. Murphy, 10 St. Tr. 183. R. v. Sterling, Leach, 117. Coogan's Case, 2 Leach, 503.

(r) Coogan's Case, East's P. C. 948.

(s) R. v. Hawkeswood, Leach, 295; East's P. C. 955. R. v. Morton, Ibid. R. v. Reculist, Ibid. 956. R. v. Davis, Ibid.

(t) Ibid.

(u) See East's P. C. 883; Doug. 302. R. v. Reading, Leach, 672.

(x) R. v. Jones, cor. Lord Mansfield, Doug. 302; 2 East's P. C. 882.

(A) (In an indictment for forgery, though there be a variance of a letter in any word between the paper alleged to be forged and the indictment, the paper will be received in evidence if the variance does not make

If the instrument given in evidence correspond with the description in the indictment, but is defectively executed in any respect, it is a question for the jury whether it is a counterfeit of the kind of instrument the forgery of which is charged; and if the resemblance be sufficient to impose upon persons of ordinary observation, although persons of experience could not have been deceived, it will be sufficient to support the allegation of forging the particular description of instrument, or a paper writing purporting to be that instrument; as where, on an indictment for forging a bank-note, it appeared that the word pounds was omitted in the body of the bill (y), and there was no water mark on the paper; so where the notes were so ill executed that the difference between the false and genuine notes was very *467 *apparent in several particulars, some persons having in fact been deceived by them (z).

An allegation that the whole of an instrument was forged, is proved by evidence of an alteration of a genuine instrument for the purposes of fraud (a).

Intent. 4thly. The intention to defraud must be proved as averred (b) (A). Such an intention is usually evidenced principally by the act itself, which, from its nature, in general leaves no room for doubt upon the point. The inference is frequently confirmed by the conduct and behaviour of a guilty party, in the artifices and falsehoods which he employs for the purpose of effecting his object, or of avoiding detection. The subsequent uttering or publication of the forged instrument is admissible and strong evidence to prove the original design in forging the instrument; and whether the making or uttering of a forged instrument be done with intent to injure a particular person as alleged, is matter of evidence to the jury (c).

A party is guilty of uttering a forged bill within the statute, where he utters it in payment of a debt and knowing that the names of the parties on the bill are fictitious, although he intend at the time to take up the bill, the party to whom he utters it not knowing that the names on the bill are of merely fictitious persons (d).

Where the intent as laid was to defraud A., B., &c. the stewards of the feast of the Sons of the Clergy, and it appeared that the individuals specified were trustees of a charitable fund, and that the money which had been obtained by means of the forgery was trust money, it was held to be sufficient, since the money was theirs as against all the world but subscribers (e).

(y) R. v. Elliott, 2 East's P. C. 951; 2 N. R. 93. By the stat. 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 123, s. 3, it is sufficient to describe the instrument as in an indictment for stealing the same. See 11 Geo. 4, & 1 Will 4, c. 66, s. 10.

(z) Hoost's Case, cor. Le Blanc, J., 2 East's P. C. 950.

(a) Supra; and Dawson's Case, East's P. C. 978. 1 Stra. 19; Crim. Pl. 91, 92. Teague's Case, East's P. C. 172. See further as to variance, tit. VARIANCE.—PERJURY; and Crim. Pleadings, 2d edit. 101, 253. [The State v. Waters, 2 Const. R. 669.]

(b) East's P. C. 854, 988; 1 Leach, 215.

(c) Barrow's Case, East's P. C. 989. 1 Leach, 77. Elsworth's Case, East's P. C. 989.

(d) R. v. Hill, 2 Moody's C. C. 30. (e) R. v. Jones & Palmer, East's P. C. 991. 1 Leach, 366.

another word or one differing in sense and grammar. If it is doubtful the meaning will be left to the jury. United States v. Hinman, 1 Baldwin's C. C. R. 292.)

[An indictment for forging a note of a bank incorporated by the name of "The President and Directors of the Bank of South Carolina," is not supported by the production of a note of a bank incorporated by the name of "The Bank of South Carolina." The State v. Waters, 2 Const. Rep. 669. See Commonwealth v. Boynton, 3 Mass. Rep. 77. See also United States v. Cantril, 4 Cranch, 167.]

(A) (Passing a counterfeit note in the name of a fictitious person, an assumed name, or on a bank which never existed, is within the law. It is not necessary that the note if genuine would be valid, if on its face it purports to be good; the want of validity must appear on its face. United States v. Mitchell, 1 Baldwin, C. C. R. 367. The scienter may be proved by the fact of similar forged orders found in the possession of the defendant; or of an accomplice in passing them. U. S. v. Hinman, 1 Baldwin, C. C. R. 292.)

If a banker having authority to pay money to A., B. and C., and to them only, pay it to A. and to two strangers who personate B. and C., the instrument is properly alleged to have been made with intent to defraud those bankers, for they remain liable for the amount (f).

It is sufficient to show that concealment was the object of the forgery (g); and the assumption of a name which the party writes as his own, is evidence of an intention to evade responsibility under a feigned name, and so to defraud (h).

If the intent to defraud a corporation be alleged, an intent must be proved to defraud them in their corporate capacity; and if an intent to defraud several in their individual capacities be alleged, and it should appear that the real intention was to defraud them in their corporate character, it seems that the variance would be fatal (i).

Principals and accessories, &c.

Where a wife, in pursuance of directions given by her husband, utters a forged instrument in his absence, they may be tried together, and the wife may be convicted as a principal in the felony, and the husband as an accessory *before the fact (k). Where the witness, in consequence of a communication with the husband, went to his house, and there saw the wife, where the communication between the husband and the witness was mentioned, and the wife sold to the witness several forged notes and delivered them to him, and after delivery, but before change had been received by the witness out of the money given to the wife, the husband put his head into the room and said "Get on," but did not otherwise interfere, it was held that the wife might properly be convicted; for although the law, out of tenderness to the wife, when a felony (l) is committed in the presence of the husband, raises a primâ facie presumption in her favour of coercion by the husband, yet it is necessary that the husband should be actually present and taking part in the transaction (m).

*468

Proof of uttering with a guilty knowledge. (A).

Proof that the prisoner exhibited a forged instrument as a true and genuine instrument, is evidence that he pronounced or published it (n). With respect to the proofs on this subject, see tit. Coin (o).

(f) Dixon's Case, 2 Lewin's C. 178.

(g) R. v. Aickles, East's P. C. 968. Shepherd's Case, East's P. C. 967. But where the immediate effect of the act is to defraud, the jury ought to find the intention. Shepherd's Case, Russ. & Ry. C. C. L. 169.

(h) Ibid.

(i) See R. v. Jones & Palmer.

(k) R. v. Morris, Leach, 1096.

(l) But the rule does not extend to cases of murder.

(m) 1 Hale, 46. Kel. 37. 2 East's P. C. 559. Hughes's Case, cor. Thompson, B. Lancaster Lent Ass. 1813, MS.

(n) East's P. C. 972. 3 Ins. 172. The uttering a forged order, under a false representation, is evidence of the scienter. R. v. Shepherd, Leach, C. C. L. 265. Evidence of a delivery of a forged bank-note by A. to B. in order that B. may put it off, is a disposing and putting away by A. within the statute 15 G. 2, c. 13. R. v. Palmer, 1 N. R. 96. Where the prisoner, on quitting the office of assistiant overseer, delivered over to his successor, amongst other vouchers, a paper in the usual form, "£. for the high constable," signed J. H., which had been altered to a larger sum, it was held to amount to an uttering a forged receipt with intent to defraud the high constable. Reg. v. Boardman, 2 Mo. & R. 147.

(o) Supra, tit. Coin. See also R. v. Ball, 1 Camp. 324. Russ. & Ry. C. C. L. 132. The prisoner uttered a forged bank note on the 17th of June, and evidence was admitted that on the 20th of March preceding he had uttered a 10*l.* note of the same manufacture, and that there had been paid into the bank of England various forged notes, dated between the preceding months of December and March, all of them of the same manufacture, and having different endorsements upon them of the hand-writing of the prisoner. It was also proved, that when apprehended, he had in his possession paper and implements fit for making notes of

(A) Passing a paper is putting it off in payment or exchange; uttering it is a declaration that it is good, with an intention to pass or an offer to pass it. United States v. Mitchell, 1 Baldwin, C. C. R. 317. Uttering a fictitious bank bill, not purporting to be countersigned by a cashier of the bank by which the note was supposed to be issued, is not a crime within the statute of 1800, c. 64. Commonwealth v. Boynton, 2 Mass. R. 77. Nor is the possession of fictitious bills, purporting to be bills of a bank not in existence, with intent to pass them as genuine bills, an offence within that statute. Commonwealth v. Morse, 2 Id. 138. But uttering such fictitious bank bills with intent to injure and deceive, is a fraud at common law, punishable by indictment. Commonwealth v. Boynton. Supra.)

Defence. On an indictment for forging a will, it is no defence to show that probate of the will has been granted by the Ecclesiastical Court (p).

Competency. Formerly, upon a conviction for forgery, the forged instrument was condemned, and ordered to be destroyed. Hence a party who would, if the instrument had been genuine, have had an interest in its destruction, either because he would have been liable upon it, or because it would have barred his claim against another, was regarded as an incompetent witness, since, at all events, the proof against him was rendered much more difficult by a *469 *conviction. The objection to competency survived the practice on which it was founded, and hence the rejection of witnesses on this ground has been considered to be an anomaly (q), for it was certainly irreconcilable with the general principles now established on the subject of interest (r). It was said, that where the prisoner, if the instrument were genuine, might sue the witness upon it, the latter had a direct interest in the conviction, because it was not to be presumed that the Crown would, after conviction, attempt to establish a claim upon that instrument against the witness (s); and that although the instrument were made for the benefit, not of the prisoner but of a third person, and although the conviction would not be evidence against that person being in inter alios, yet that an impediment would be thrown in the way of his recovery, since the Court would impound the forged instrument; and the party convicted could no longer be a witness (t).

The general rule therefore was, that a party who had an interest in setting aside the instrument, supposing it to be genuine, was an incompetent witness for the Crown, on a prosecution for forgery (u).

Thus it was held in Treble's Case, that the supposed maker of a note, purporting to be made payable on demand, at his own house, or at his banker's in London, was competent to prove that he had not made it payable at the banker's where it purported to be payable (x); yet here the evidence seems to have tended to the very fact of forgery itself (A).

the same kind with those produced. All the judges were of opinion that the evidence was admissible to prove the prisoner's intention. Where the prisoner was charged with having feloniously uttered a 5*l*. bank of England note, on the 27th of November, and evidence was given of his having uttered a forged 2*l*. note of the bank of England on the 4th of July preceding, and that he had also uttered a provincial note of the Leicester bank about six weeks before the uttering in question, and that he had uttered a 5*l*. bank of England note about the end of November, which was returned to him as bad; it was held that the conviction was improper, no evidence having been given, as to two of the notes, that they had been actually forged. And some of the Judges were of opinion, that even in case evidence had been given that the second and third notes were forged, yet that, being notes of a different description and denomination, the evidence as to uttering them ought not to have been received. R. v. Millard, 1 Russ. & Ry. C. C. L. 245. On an indictment for uttering a forged bill of exchange, other forged bills on the same house, found on the prisoner at the time of his apprehension, are evidence against him. R. v. Houghton, Russ. & Ry. 130. R. v. Wylie, 1 N. R. 92. R. v. Roberts, 1 Camp. 339.

(p) R. v. Buttery & Macnamara, cor. Garrow, B., O. B. 1817; and afterwards by the Judges.

(q) See Ld. Ellenborough's observations, R. v. Boston, 4 East, 572. And see 2 East, 993.

(r) See tit. INTEREST. (s) Co. Lit. 352. 2 Ins. 39.

(t) R. v. Whiting, 1 Salk. 283. 1 Lord Raym. 396. 2 Haw. c. 46, 424. East's P. C. 994; but see R. v. Bray, R. T. Hardw. 358. Smith v. Prager, 7 T. R. 63.

(u) Russell's Case, Leach, 8. Reeve's Case, Ibid. 812. Caffey's Case, East's P. C. 995. [See 2 Evans' Pothier, 315.] R. v. Rhodes, 2 Str. 728. Thornton's Case, 2 Leach, 634. See also Crocker's Case, 2 N. R. 87; 2 Leach, 987. R. v. Bunting, East's P. C. 996. R. v. Rhodes, Leach, 31. But see B. N. P. 284. An executor is a bare trustee claiming no interest under the will.

(x) Treble's Case, 2 Taunt. 328; 2 Leach, 1040.

(A) (On an indictment for forging a check on a bank, in the name of B. which had been passed to C. and having been paid by the bank, which afterwards got possession of the money and retained it, B. having been released by the bank, was held a competent witness to prove the forgery. The People v. Howell, 4 John. R. 296. Per Kent, Ch. J. "the rule in almost all criminal cases, except in the case of a forged instrument is, that the witness is to be received, if he be not interested in the event of the suit, so that the verdict could be given in evidence in the action in which he was a party." Ib. Respublica v. Keating, 1 Dall. 110. United States v. Johns, 4 Dall. 412. Commonwealth v. Snell, 3 Mass. R. 82. Com-

So upon an indictment for personating the proprietor of stock, and forging his signature, the latter was admitted to prove the amount of the stock which he had at the Bank (although not to prove the false signature), for the purpose of showing the intention to defraud him, as alleged in the indictment (y). On an indictment for forging a promissory note which bore an indorsement by the prisoner, of the receipt of a year's interest, it was held that the supposed maker was not competent to negative the fact of payment, because it tended to prove the forgery; but all the Judges agreed that such a witness was competent to prove all the facts perfectly collateral (z). The objection to competency in such cases no longer rests upon any principle, although the practice has become too inveterate to be wholly rejected; yet it is obvious that it ought to be strictly restrained within its ancient limits; and upon this ground, perhaps, the distinction between evidence of the very fact of forging, and collateral facts, may have proceeded.

The objection to competency ceased where the witness had no interest in the destruction of the instrument. Thus, where A. drew a bill on B. payable at the banking house of C., B.'s acceptance having been forged, but C. having given him credit to the amount, although he had paid the bill; B. *was held to be competent to prove the forgery (a). So where the party whose receipt has been forged, had recovered the amount from the prisoner (b). So the supposed testator might prove the forgery of his will (c). So a witness might be rendered competent by a release (d) (a), as from the holder to the drawer, there being no other name on the note. *470

So one who signed an instrument as the mere agent of another, as a cashier at the Bank, who gives security for the faithful discharge of his duty, was held to be competent to prove the forgery of his name, for he is not responsible on the instrument, and it is not to be presumed that he acted criminally and fraudulently in breach of his duty (e). Of an agent.

And now by the stat. 9 Geo. 4, c. 32, s. 3, on prosecutions for forging or uttering any deed, &c., or for being accessary before or after the fact to any such offence, if the same be a felony, or for aiding, abetting, or counselling the commission of such offence, if the same be a misdemeanor, no person shall be deemed to be an incompetent witness by reason of any interest which such person may have or be supposed to have in respect of such deed, &c.

Another question arises, whether, when the person whose writing is forged may be called, he must be called; it seems now to be settled that he need not, although the point has been much discussed, and even decided differently (f). But upon indictments for the forging of bank-notes, it has been held that the supposed signature of the bank clerk may be disproved by any person acquainted with his hand-writing, without calling him (g). Agent need not be called.

(y) R. v. Parr, East's P. C. 997.

(z) Crocker's Case, 2 N. R. 87; 2 Leach, 987. It is said that Lord Ellenborough, C. J., Macdonald, C. B., and Lawrence and Le Blanc, Js., were of opinion that the witness was competent on all points, except the fact of forgery.

(a) Usher's Case, East's P. C. 999. Testick's Case, Ibid. 1000; 12 Mod. 338.

(b) R. v. Wells, B. N. P. 289. Dean's Case, 12 Vin. Ab. 23.

(c) Coogan's Case, 2 Leach, 503. R. v. Sterling, East's P. C. 1003. R. v. Murphy.

(d) R. v. Akehurst, Leach, 178. Dr. Dodd's Case.

(e) R. v. Abraham Newland, East's P. C. 1001. (f) Captain Smith's Case, East's P. C. 1000.

(g) Hughes's Case, cor. Le Blanc, East's P. C. 1000. M'Guire's Case, Ibid.

monwealth v. Waite, 5 Mass. R. 261. Territory v. Barran, 1 Martin, 208. Furber v. Hilliard, 2 N. Hamp. R. 481. Noble v. The People, 1 Breese, 29. State v. Coulter, 1 Hay, 3. Contra, State v. Brunson, 1 Root, 307. State v. A. W. 1 Tyler, 260. If an instrument supposed to be forged, is destroyed or suppressed by the prisoner, the tenor may be proved by parol evidence. United States v. Britton, 2 Mason's C.C. R. 464.)

a Rex v. Pigeon, Eng. Com. Law Reps. xi. 328. Rex v. Bayley, Id. 442.

The objection that secondary evidence is substituted for the best does not apply in this case, since there is not such a distinction between one man's knowledge of his own hand-writing, and the knowledge of another on the same subject, as constitutes (h) the former evidence of a superior degree to the latter.

This rule, as to the incompetency of a witness, did not extend to civil proceedings, for there the result did not occasion the destruction of the instrument, as in prosecutions for forgery (i). In a late case, upon the trial of an action against an agent for negligence in transacting the purchase of an annuity, the supposed surety was admitted to prove that the deed which purported to have been executed by him was a forgery (k).

FORMER CONVICTION.

By the stat. 6 & 7 W. 4, c. 111, which recites that doubts had been entertained whether the practice under the stat. 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 28, s. 11, as to charging the jury at the same time to inquire of the principal offence and previous conviction, was consistent with a fair and impartial inquiry, it is enacted that on the trial of a prisoner for any subsequent felony, it shall *471 *not be lawful to charge the jury to inquire concerning such previous conviction, until they shall have inquired concerning such subsequent felony, and shall have found such person guilty of the same; and that the sending of such statement to the jury, as part of the indictment, shall be deferred until after such finding. Provided nevertheless, that if, upon the trial of any person for any such subsequent felony, such person shall give evidence of his good character, it shall be lawful for the prosecutor, in answer thereto, to give evidence of the former indictment and conviction of such person for the previous felony before such (any) verdict shall have been returned; and the jury shall inquire concerning such previous conviction for felony at the same time that they inquire concerning such subsequent felony (l).

FRAUD (A).

Effect of fraud. Fraud is an extrinsic collateral act which vitiates all transactions, even the most solemn proceedings of courts of justice. Lord Coke says it avoids all judicial acts, ecclesiastical or temporal (m).

As to civil suits. In civil suits all strangers may falsify for covin, either fines, or real or feigned recoveries, and even a recovery by a just title, if collusion was prac-

(h) Vide Vol. I. tit. Best Evidence.

(i) But yet the Court, it seems, have the power of impounding forged deeds proved to be forged in civil cases.

(k) Hunter v. King, cor. Holroyd, J. Guildhall Sitt. after Mich. Term, 1 Geo. 4, and afterwards by the Court of K. B.;[1] 4 B. & A. 209.

(l) It appears that this amendment in the criminal law, evidently so essential a one to the fair administration of justice, was occasioned by the remarks of Parke, B. in summing up to the jury in Jefferson's Case, 2 Lewin's C. 187. In some of the earlier cases under the stat. 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 18, s. 11, the reading and proof of the charge of the previous felony were deferred till after the verdict on the principal charge.

(m) A fraudulent representation will avoid a bond founded on that representation; secus, of a representation merely erroneous. Nash v. Palmer, 5 M. & S. 374. But strong evidence is necessary in order to avoid an instrument, (e. g.) a lease, after long lapse of time. Chandos v. Brownlow, 2 Ridg. P. C. 317.

(A) (Fraud may be committed by the artful and purposed concealments of facts exclusively within the knowledge of one party and known by him to be material, and where the other party had not equal means of information. Prentiss v. Russ, 4 Shepley, 30. In general where a party is charged with a specific fraud in a civil action, his character is not in issue. The evidence of fraud cannot be repelled, therefore, by proving his general good character for integrity. Fowler v. The Ætna Fire Insurance Company, 6 Cow. 673.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 403.

tised to prevent a fair defence; and this, whether the covin is apparent upon the record, as not essoining, or not demanding the view, or by suffering judgment by confession or default; or extrinsic, as not pleading a release. collateral warranty, or other advantageous pleas (n).

In criminal proceedings, if an offender be convicted of felony on confession, or be outlawed, not only the time of the felony, but the felony itself, may be traversed by a purchaser whose conveyance would be affected as it stands; and even after a conviction by verdict he may traverse the time (o).

In the proceedings of the Ecclesiastical Court the same rule holds. In Dyer there is an instance of a second administration, fraudulently obtained, to defeat an execution against the first; and the fact being admitted by demurrer, the Court pronounced against the fraudulent administration. In another instance, an administration had been fraudulently revoked, and the fact being denied, issue was joined upon it; and the collusion being found by a jury, the Court gave judgment against it.

In the more modern cases, the question seems to have been, whether the parties should be admitted to prove collusion, not seeming to doubt but that strangers might (p).

*So that collusion, being a matter extrinsic of the case, may be imputed by a stranger, and tried by a jury, and determined in the courts of temporal jurisdiction. *472

And as fraud will vitiate the judicial acts of the temporal courts, there seems as much reason to prevent the mischiefs arising from collusion in the Ecclesiastical Courts, which, from the nature of their proceedings, are at least as much exposed, and which have been in fact as much exposed, to be practised upon for sinister purposes, as the Courts of Westminster-hall (q).

Where fraud depends upon the intention of a party, the existence of that intention is usually a matter of fact, which must be found by a jury (r), who are to decide on questions of mala fides. In some instances it results by inference of law, from the particular circumstances of the case, as found by the jury (s) (A).

(n) See tit. FINE; and supra, Vol. I.

(o) Vol. I. tit. JUDGMENTS.

(p) Vide supra, Vol. I. tit. JUDGMENTS. A party cannot rescind his own act on the ground of fraud. Jones v. Yates,[1] 9 B. & C. 512. Nor avail himself of his own wrong. Williams v. Gardiner, 11 Moore, 142. Where a party had been elected into a corporate office, and a rule nisi for a mandamus had been obtained, calling upon him to take upon himself the office; held, that he could not allege, as a ground of excuse, his own disability in not having received the sacrament within a year before his election. R. v. Walker, 6 M. & S. 277. Where the defendant had proposed a person to be accepted as tenant in his stead, who proved to be insolvent, and whom the defendant knew had compounded with his creditors; held to be such a fraud that he still remained liable for the rent. Bruce v. Ruler, 2 M. & Ry. 3. A party to the suit in the Ecclesiastical Court cannot be admitted to show that the sentence has been fraudulently obtained. See Prudham v. Phillips, Ambl. 763. So one who has conveyed an estate in order to confer a colourable qualification to kill game cannot be admitted to allege his own fraud to defeat the conveyance. Doe d. Roberts v. Roberts, 2 B. & A. 367.[a] See Hawe v. Leader, Cro. J. 270; Doe v. Banks,[2] 4 B. & A. 401, supra.

(q) The above is part of the judgment of L. C. J. De Grey, in the Duchess of Kingston's Case, St. Tr., in which the Judges came to the following resolutions:—First, that a sentence in a spiritual court against a marriage, in a suit of jactitation of marriage, is not conclusive evidence, so as to stop the counsel for the Crown from proving the marriage in an indictment for polygamy; but, secondly, admitting such sentence to be conclusive upon such indictment, the counsel for the Crown may be admitted to avoid the effect of such sentence, by proving the same to have been obtained by fraud or collusion.

(r) See tit. BANKRUPT.—COIN.—DECEIT.—FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCE.—FORGERY.—INTENTION. As to fraud on the insolvent law, see[3] 4 B. & Ad. 555.

(s) See tit. BANKRUPTCY, 154; and see the observations of Buller, J., Estwick v. Caillaud, 5 T. R. 420.

(A) (A secret conveyance of her property, by a woman immediately before her marriage, is a fraud upon

(a) A party to a fraud is competent to prove it. Lawyer v. Seltons, 1 Rawle, 141.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xvii. 436. [2]Id. vi. 462. [3]Id. xxiv. 115.

A secret trust to evade the statute of mortmain may be proved by extrinsic evidence (t).

Fraud is never to be presumed where not expressly found (u) (A).

Proof that a deed was prepared in the office of a respectable solicitor is not evidence to show the fairness of the transaction, where fraud is alleged.

FRAUDS, STATUTE OF; 29 Car. II. c. 3.

The provisions of this celebrated statute seem to operate principally as rules of evidence, calculated for the exclusion of perjury, by requiring, in particular cases, some more satisfactory and convincing evidence than mere oral testimony affords; they dispense with no evidence of consideration which was requisite previous to the statute (x); they give no efficacy to written contracts which they did not possess before.

It would be inconsistent with the object of the present treatise to enter *473 *into a discussion of the different clauses of this statute; little more is proposed than to refer briefly to the decisions upon the subject.

Sec. 1. Creation of estates, &c.

By sec. 1. "It is enacted, that all leases, estates, interests of freehold, or terms of years, or any uncertain interest of, in, to, or out, of any messuages, manors, lands, tenements or hereditaments, made or created by livery and seisin only, or by parol, and not put in writing, and signed by the parties so making or creating the same, or their agents, thereunto lawfully authorized by writing, shall have the force and effect of leases or estates at will only."

Sec. 2. Exception as to leases.

Sec. 2. "Except all leases not exceeding the term of three years from the making thereof, whereupon the rent reserved to the landlord during such term shall amount unto two third parts at the least of the full improved value of the thing demised."

It has been held, that the purchase of a standing crop of mowing grass is not within the first section (y), and that it does not apply to a parol agreement for an easement for seven years in the lands of another, such as a right of way or privilege of stacking coals (z).

But in the late case of Hewlins v. Shippam (a), it was held that a free-

(t) See the authorities, 2 Powell on Devises, by Jarman, 29.

(u) Hawkins, P. C. b. 2, c. 49, s. 11.

(x) Rann v. Hughes, 7 T. R. 350; 4 Bro. P. C. 27. Barrel v. Trussel, 4 Taunt. 121. Neither do they make it necessary to allege in a declaration that the promise is evidenced as the statute requires; but in a plea it is otherwise, if the agreement pleaded can have no effect unless it be in writing. Com. Dig. Action on the Case, F. 3. Case v. Barber, Ray. 450. [S. C. T. John. 158.] The defence, no contract in writing, need not, it seems, be specially pleaded. Buttermere v. Hayes, 5 M. & W. 456; 7 Dowl. 489. Jones v. Flint, 2 P. & D. 594. See Eastwood v. Kenyon, 3 P. & D. 376.

(y) Crosby v. Wadsworth, 6 East, 610. But it is within the 4th section.

(z) Wood v. Lake, Say. 3. Webb v. Paternoster, Palm. 71. [See[1] 7 Taunt. 384, S. C.; 2 Marsh, 560.] Note, in the former case the party, in addition to the liberty of stacking hay, was also to have the use of the close, which distinguishes it from the latter case; and see note (a).

(a)[2] 5 B. & C. 221. And although a freehold right was claimed in that case, the reasons given by the Court, and the authorities cited, seem to extend equally to licenses for a mere definite term. See Monk v. Baxter, Cro. J. 574; Rumsey v. Rawsun, 1 Vent. 18; Hoskins v. Robins, 2 Vent. 123; Harrison v. Parker, 6 East, 754; Fentiman v. Smith, 4 East, 107. And the Court observed, that the objection that the right lay in grant, and therefore could not pass without deed, was not taken in the cases of Webb v. Paternoster, Palm. 71; Wood v. Lake, Sayer, 3, or Taylor v. Waters,[1] 7 Taunt. 374. It is indeed to be observed that the first of these cases was decided before the Statute of Frauds was passed, and that the interest in the the marital rights of the husband, and will be set aside. Linker v. Smith, 4 Wash. C. C. R. 224. Waller v. Armistead's Ex'rs, 2 Leigh. 11.)

(A) (Fraud it is said will never be presumed, though it may be proved by circumstances. Therefore where an act does not necessarily import fraud, where it has more likely been done through a good than bad motive, fraud should never be presumed. Gregg v. The Lessee of Sayre and Wife, 8 Peters, 244.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 140. [2]Id. xi. 207.

hold easement in the land of another cannot be created without deed; and that although a parol demise might be an excuse for a trespass, until it was countermanded, yet that a right and title to such an easement, as to have passage for water, could not be created without deed.

"Shall have the force and effect of leases or estates at will only."—Notwithstanding these words, where a tenant has held for two or three years under a parol demise for twenty-one years, he is to be considered a tenant from year to year (b), the year's tenancy commencing on the same day of the *year with the parol lease. (1). Where there was a parol agreement for a *474 lease for seven years, the tenant to enter at Lady-day, and quit at Candlemas, it was held that the landlord could not put an end to the tenancy except at Candlemas, for the tenants in such cases are considered to be tenants from year to year; and although by the Statute of Frauds, the agreement be void as to the duration of the lease, it governs the terms on which the tenancy subsists in other respects (c). A parol lease for three years, to commence in futuro, is not good (d) (A).

Where a party enters under a mere agreement for a future lease, he is a tenant at will only; if he pay a yearly rent he becomes a tenant from year to year, such tenancy being determinable on the execution of the lease according to the agreement. And though no rent be paid, the relation of landlord and tenant subsists, the party having entered with a view to a lease, and not with a view to a purchase.

Sec. 3. enacts, "That no leases, estates or interests, either of freehold or terms of years, or any uncertain interest, not being copyhold or customary interest of, in, to, or out of any messuages, manors, lands, tenements or hereditaments, shall be assigned, granted or surrendered, unless it be by deed or note in writing, signed by the party so assigning, granting or surrendering the same, or their agents thereunto lawfully authorized by writing, or by act and operation of law."

Sec. 3. Assignments, surrenders of existing estates, and interests.

case of Wood v. Lake amounted to a lease, inasmuch as the party was to have the sole use of that part of the land on which he was to stack his coals. In the case of Winter v. Brockwell, 8 East, 308, the defendant put up the sky-light on his own land, and all that the court decided was, that as the plaintiff had consented to the obstruction, he could not afterwards revoke it without reimbursing the defendant's expenses. In Fentiman v. Smith, 4 East, 107, where the plaintiff claimed to have passage for water by a tunnel over the plaintiff's land, Lord Ellenborough held distinctly that "the title to have the water flowing in the tunnel could not pass by parol license without deed." A parol license to use an easement must at all events be express. Bridges v. Blanchard,[1] 1 Ad. & Ell. 536. Qu. whether an easement to admit light without interruption from the owner of land adjoining the house of another may be without deed. Ib. And if so, whether it is countermandable. Ib. The taking tolls of a market without deed does not confer a settlement. R. v. Chipping Norton, 5 East, 239. Per Ld. Ellenborough, no interest passes by the parol demise.

(b) Clayton v. Blakey, 8 T. R. 3. But note, that he had held for several years, and been treated as a yearly tenant. See Watkins's Principles of Conveyancing, 4th ed. 6, and his observations on the marginal note in the case of Clayton v. Blakey, 8 T. R. 3. See Richardson v. Gifford,[2] 1 Ad. & Ell. 52; infra, tit. WASTE. Semble, that under an agreement for a tenancy exceeding three years, void for want of signature, the tenant is for the first year tenant at will, and afterwards from year to year subject to stipulations.

(c) Doe d. Rigge v. Bell, 5 T. R. 471. See Watkins's Elements of Conveyancing, 4; Hargrave's Notes to Co. Litt. 55; 4 Taunt. 128; where it was held that a letter without restriction as to time, creates a tenancy at will. See also Evans's Stat. vol. 1, p. 234.

(d) Rawlins v. Turner, 1 Ld. Raym. 736.

(1) [In Massachusetts, tenants under parol lease for a year are mere tenants at will, by force of st. 1783, c. 37. Rising & al. v. Stannard, 17 Mass. Rep. 285. Ellis v. Paige & al. 1 Pick. 45.]

(A) (In Pennsylvania various things take a parol contract for the conveyance of lands out of the Statute of Frauds. Thus a parol conveyance of land will be taken out of the Statute of Frauds by a particular equity arising from the payment of purchase money, or what is much the same, expenditure in improvements made with the money of the donee, of which it would be a fraud in the donor to deprive him: but such an equity cannot be pretended by a volunteer. A parol gift to a son which has induced no such expenditure, is as much within the statute as if it were to a stranger. Per Rogers, J. in Eckert v. Mace, 3 Penn. R. 364, in note. S. P. Stewart v. Stewart, 3 Watts, 253.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxviii. 143. [2]Id. xxviii. 35.

Assignments.

The statute has been held to extend to a parol assignment of a lease from year to year (e), (1) and to surrenders of tenancies from year to year (f); and therefore a mere parol agreement between a landlord and tenant to determine the tenancy in the middle of a quarter is not binding (g).

The mere cancelling of a lease is not a sufficient surrender within this clause (h), but a surrender of a lease by deed may be effected in writing without deed, as where a mortgagee wrote upon the mortgage deed a receipt for principal and interest, adding, "I do release and discharge the within premises from the term of 500 years." (i).

Surrender by operation of law.

Or by act and operation of law.—The taking a new lease by parol is by operation of law a surrender of the old one (k), although it be by deed (l), provided it be a good one, and pass an interest according to the contract and intention of the parties, for otherwise the acceptance of it is no implied surrender of the old one (m). Where A. by parol, let a house to B. who

*475 underlet it to C., and then A., with B.'s assent, accepted C. as his tenant and received rent from him, it was held that the substitution involved a surrender; for it was made with the assent of B., which could not be without a surrender of the former lease (n). So where it was agreed between the landlord and tenant, that another tenant should be substituted for him, which was done, it was held that the first tenancy was thereby determined (o). Where the landlord having had a dispute with his tenant, told him that he might quit when he pleased, and the tenant accordingly quitted in the middle of the quarter, it was held that the landlord was entitled to recover in an action for use and occupation for the whole quarter (p). But

(e) Botting v. Martin, 1 Camp. 317, cor. Sir A. M'Donald, C. B.

(f) 2 Camp. 103; 1 Starkie's C. 379.[1] And see Magennis v. M'Cullough, Gilb. Eq. C. 236.

(g) Thomson v. Wilson,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 379. Mollett v. Brayne, 2 Camp. C. 103; Johnstone v. Huddlestone,[2] 4 B. & C. 922; where an occupation took place under a new lease, under the mistaken idea that it was a good and valid lease.

(h) Roe v. The Archbishop of York, 6 East, 86. (i) Farmer v. Rogers, 2 Wilson, 26.

(k) See 1 Will. Saund. 236, b. The principle on which the taking a new lease amounts to a surrender of the old one, is this, that without it the intention of the parties cannot be effectuated. See Shepherd's Touchstone, tit. Surrender. If a sole tenant assent to occupy and does occupy jointly with another, that puts an end to the former tenancy. Hamerton v. Stead,[3] 3 B. & C. 478; and see Mellow v. May, Moore, 636.

(l) Ibid.; and see Thomas v. Cooke,[4] 2 Starkie's C. 410.

(m) Wilson v. Sewell, 4 Burr. 1980; Davison v. Stanley, Ibid. 2210; 1 Will. Saund. 236, b. and the cases there cited.

(n) Thomas v. Cooke,[4] 2 Starkie's C. 408, cor. Abbott. J. and afterwards by the Court of K. B. 2 B. & A. 119. So where the tenant took lodgings for a year, paid for one quarter, and for the interval between that time and the time of re-letting by the lessor; for the letting to another dispenses with the necessity for a surrender. Walls v. Atcheson,[5] 3 Bing. 462. In the case of Lloyd v. Crispie, cited ib. by Parke, J., it was held, that where the lessor had consented to the introduction of another occupier he had no claim on the lessee, who was under covenant not to assign without license.

(o) Stone v. Whiting,[6] 2 Starkie's C. 235, cor. Holroyd, J. And see Whitehead v. Clifton,[7] 5 Taunt. 518; Hurding v. Crathorn, 1 Esp. C. 57; infra, Use and Occupation.

(p) Mollett v. Brayne, 2 Camp. 103, cor. Ld. Ellenborough, and afterwards by the court of K. B. A lessee grants a lease for eleven years, covenanting to pay for tillages, &c. at the end of the term; a quarrel taking place during the term, the tenant says that he will go; the landlord says, "You may;" the tenant replies, "I shall expect to be paid for what I have laid out;" the landlord says nothing; the tenant quits: held that the landlord was entitled to a verdict, on a plea of set-off of the rent, to an action for work and labour; the tenancy not having, under the circumstances, been determined. Whitaker v. Barker, York Sum. Ass. 1832, cor. Parke, J. Held also, that the tenant, deserting the premises, was not entitled to the compensation for

(1) [If a person affix his signature and seal to the back of a lease, it is not an assignment of the lease. Jackson v. Titus, 2 Johns. 430. And if it be agreed between him and the person to whom it is intended to be assigned, that a third person should write an assignment over the signature and seal, which he does, and delivers the deed to the assignee, the assignment is a nullity. Ibid. But an assignment of a deed by writing not under a seal is good. Holliday v. Marshall, 7 Johns. 211. A parol agreement by a joint lessee of a salt-well for seven years, to transfer his interest to the other lessee, is void by the statute. M'Dowell v. Delap, 2 Marsh. 33.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 391. [2]Id. x. 471. [3]Id. x. 159. [4]Id. iii. 405. [5]Id. xiii. 52. [6]Id. iii. 331. [7]Id. i. 173.

where the landlord accepted from his tenant the key of the demised house in the middle of the quarter, it was held that the former could not recover in respect of any subsequent rent (q). The mere fact of a lease being found in a cancelled state, in the possession of the lessor, does not show a surrender in law, or conclusively show a determination of the lease (r).

Sec. 4. Executory promises and agreements.

Sec. 4.—No action shall be brought whereby to charge any executor or administrator upon any special promise to answer damages out of his own estate (s), or whereby to charge the defendant upon any special promise to answer for the debt, default, or miscarriage of another person, or to charge any person upon any agreement made upon consideration of marriage, or *upon any contract or sale of lands, tenements or hereditaments, or any interest in or concerning them, or upon any agreement that is not to be performed within the space of one year from the making thereof, unless the agreement upon which such action shall be brought, or some memorandum or note thereof, shall be in writing, and signed by the party to be charged therewith, or some other person thereunto by him lawfully authorized."

*476

Money paid on an executed consideration.

No action shall be brought.—The statute does not apply where an action is brought to recover money paid on an executed consideration for the use of the plaintiff, although by the operation of the statute the money could not have been recovered from the party who paid it. A. being the tenant of B. and restrained from assigning without the consent of B., agreed to pay to B. 40*l.* out of 100*l.* to be paid to him by another tenant for the goodwill, if B.'s consent to the substitution could be obtained. The new tenant was cognizant of the agreement, took possession, and paid the money to A. who promised to pay the 40*l.* to B.; it was held that B. might recover the 40*l.* from A. as money had and received to the use of B. (t), for the consideration was past, and the statute out of the question, but it would have been otherwise if the new tenant had not paid the money, and the action had been brought against him (u)

Admission.

If the party admit that he has made an agreement which is binding under the statute, the admission renders the proofs prescribed by the statute unnecessary; as where he has paid money into court upon a count charging him with an agreement which could not have been proved, except through the medium of written evidence (x).

But if the party merely admit the fact that an agreement was made, but do not admit that an agreement was made in a manner which would be tillages, &c. stipulated for in the lease. Held also, that if the tenant had been entitled to a compensation on quitting, he might deduct it from the claim for rent set off, though not mentioned in his particulars. But note that Parke, J. intimated doubts whether such reduction was in strictness allowable.

(q) Whitehead v. Clifford,[1] 5 Taunt. 518.

(r) A lease had been duly executed, and once in the lessee's possession, and the lease began to operate, but was afterwards found in the lessor's possession in a cancelled state; held, that as there was no surrender by operation of law, nor any ground for presuming that there had been any note in writing within the statute of frauds, the lease was to be considered as still in operation. Doe v. Thomas,[2] 9 B. & C. 299. The plaintiff in trespass for seizing goods was the assignee of an under-lease granted by G., one of the defendants, and no rent had been paid; the original lease to G. had also come by assignment to the other defendant, who had obtained a new lease from the lessors, and cancelled the old one; held that upon the general issue pleaded under the 11 G. 2, c. 19, s. 19, the defendant might justify as for a distress for the rent due in G.'s right, without showing any express recognition of the act by him, and that the notice having been given in the name of the other defendant, did not preclude the defendants from availing themselves of the title under G. in their defence to the action. Upon the construction of the stat. of frauds, the cancellation of the original lease was not of itself a surrender of such lease. Wootley v. Gregory, 2 Y. & J. 536.

(s) See Rann v. Hughes, 7 T. R. 350. A mere promise in writing without consideration will not bind the executor.

(t) Griffith v. Young, 12 East, 513.

(u) Per Le Blanc, J., 12 East, 513.

(x) Middleton v. Brewer, Peake's C. 15.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. i. 173. [2]Id. xvii. 380.

binding under the statute, the admission will not dispense with the statutory proof. If a party, in his answer in Chancery, admit the agreement generally, without insisting upon the statute, the Court will hold it to be good (y); but if the defendant merely admit an agreement in fact, and insist that it is void under the statute, the Court will not enforce it (z). So if a parol agreement be stated in a court of law, a demurrer would admit the agreement, and yet still advantage might be taken of the statute (a).

Debt of another.

Or to charge the defendant upon any special promise to answer for the debt, default (b), or miscarriage of any other person.

Where, therefore, there is no debt or default of another, the case is not within the statute. Where one brings an action against another for an assault, and the defendant, in consideration that the plaintiff will withdraw the record, undertakes to pay a sum of money and costs, he is liable (c), for *477 *this is an original promise, and it does not appear that there has been any default or miscarriage of any other person. So where the plaintiff, at the request of the defendant, advanced a sum of money to pay workmen in the garden of the defendant's infant grandson, the case was held to be without the statute, the money having been advanced on the defendant's credit, for the infant was not liable (d); so where the defendant buys goods at an auction without naming his principal (e); so where the plaintiff, at the request of the defendant, discharged his debtor out of custody, charged in execution on a ca. sa. (f).

Question to whom the credit was given.

It is a question for the jury, whether the credit, before the debt was incurred, was given to the defendant, or to another as the principal, taking into their consideration the amount of this debt, the situation of the parties, and all the other circumstances of the case (g); if upon notice given by the defendant to the plaintiff to produce his books, it appear that the credit was not originally given to the defendant, but to another, it is strong but not conclusive (h) evidence against the plaintiff (i), that the defendant was but a surety. Where the vendor refuses to deliver goods on the credit of A. B. and the defendant undertakes absolutely to pay the amount, the promise need not be in writing, for this is in effect a sale to the defendant as principal, not to A. B., to whom no credit was given.

(y) Prec. in Chanc. 208, 374, 353; 2 H. Bl. 66. (z) Rondeau v. Wyatt, 2 H. Bl. 66.

(a) 2 H. B. 68. By Ld. Loughborough, in delivering the judgment of the Court. This is to be understood of a demurrer to a plea which ought to show that the agreement was valid under the statute. An agreement void as to part, by the Statute of Frauds, from being verbal, is void in toto. Chater v. Beckett, 7 T. R. 201. Hence, an agreement for the sale of lands and chattels, if void as to the land by the Statute of Frauds, is void in toto. Cork v. Tombs, 2 Anst. 420. Lea v. Barber, Id. 425, n. And per Abbott, C. J., in Mayfield v. Wadsley,[1] 3 B. & C. 361.

(b) Where the plaintiff, on a verbal promise of indemnity, consented to become bail, it was held to be a promise to answer for the debt or default of another within the Statute of Frauds. Green v. Creswell, 2 P. & D. 430.

(c) Reed v. Nash, 1 Wils. 305. This was on demurrer to the declaration, which did not allege that any assault had been committed. And see Burr. 1890, where Wilmot, J. observed, that it was not a promise to pay the debt of another person; the defendant was himself originally liable. See also Stephens v. Squire, 5 Mod. 205. [Allaire v. Ouland, 2 Johns. Cas. 52. Slingerland v. Morse, 7 John. R. 463. Leonard v. Vredenburgh, 8 John. R. 29.]

(d) Harris v. Huntbach, 1 Burr. 373. (e) Simon v. Motivos, 3 Burr. 1921.

(f) Goodman v. Chase, 1 B. & A. 297; for as between the plaintiff and his former debtor, the debt was satisfied.

(g) 1 B. & P. 158. Where a boy was placed in a school by his mother, and application was made to his uncle, who said it was quite right that the application should be made to him, for that he was answerable, that he could not conveniently pay then, but that when the next schooling became due he would pay altogether: it was held that it was properly left to the jury whether the original credit was not given to him. Darnall v. Trott,[2] 2 C. & P. 82.

(h) Keate v. Temple, 1 B. & P. 158.

(i) Croft v. Smallwood, 1 Esp. C. 121, [and Mr. Day's note]. See Legge v. Gibson, Selw. 828, n.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. x. 110. [2] Id. xii. 36.

So where the defendant is under a legal obligation to pay for a benefit received by another, the promise need not be in writing, as where an overseer promises to pay an apothecary for the cure of a pauper (k); but where it appears that another than the defendant is liable as the principal, the case is within the statute, unless the defendant bind himself upon an express promise, founded upon a new consideration to pay the debt.

Where the person to whom the goods are furnished is liable, credit having been originally given to him (l), another is not liable without a note in writing. As where the promise is to see another paid for goods, or for labour supplied to a third person; as, to see a surgeon paid if he would cure J. S. of a wound (m). A promise to see the plaintiff paid amounts to a promise to pay (n); as where the defendant said, "You must supply my mother-in-law with bread, and I will see you paid" (o) (A). In such cases the very form of the promise seems to imply the intention of the defendant to render himself liable as surety only, and points out the principal. So an undertaking by the defendant, that if the plaintiff would lend his gelding to J. S. the latter would re-deliver it, is within the statute (p). And so it was held where the defendant said, "I will pay you if J. S. will not;" and the *goods were afterwards delivered (q). Where A., falsely pretending that he *478 was authorized by B. to order goods on his credit to be delivered to C., promised to see the vendor paid, it was held that he was not liable, either on his promise, or for goods sold, but that he would be liable in an action on the case for the deceit (r). An undertaking to guarantee the payment of a note is within the statute (s).

A promise to pay the debt of another, is not within the statute unless the promise be made to the party to whom the other is answerable (t). New consideration.

But next, any person may bind himself by an express parol promise, founded upon a new consideration, to pay the amount of another person's debt. (1). As where A. having a lien upon policies of insurance in his hands, (k) B. N. P. 281. And see 3 B. & P. 250; 4 M. & S. 275; 1 B. & A. 404.

(l) Matson v. Wharam, 2 T. R. 80. Anderson v. Hayman, 1 H. B. 120. Lexington v. Clarke, 2 Vent. 223.
(m) Watkins v. Perkins, Ld. Raym. 224. Robinson v. Pulsford, 1 Vent. 23; 2 Keb. 563.
(n) Robinson v. Pulsford, 1 Vent. 23; 2 Keb. 563.
(o) 2 T. R. 80; Cowp. 227. [Erwin v. Wagoman, Cooke's R. 402.]
(p) Buckmyre v. Darnall, Ld. Raym. 1085; Salk. 27; 6 Mod. 248.
(q) Jones v. Cooper, Cowp. 227. But see Mawbray v. Cunningham, Cowp. 228.
(r) Thomas v. Bond, 1 Camp. 4. (s) Ex parte Adney, Cowp. 460.
(t) Eastwood v. Kenyon, 3 P. & D. 276. Such a defence need not be specially pleaded, Ibid.

(A) (A promise to pay the debt of a third person, in consideration of the promisee surrendering property levied upon by execution, is an original undertaking, and need not be in writing to render it valid. Mercein v. Andrews, 10 Wend. 461. And where the defendant inquired of the plaintiff the terms on which he would furnish newspapers to the defendant's nephew to sell and distribute, and said, "If my nephew should call for papers, I will be responsible for the papers that he should take," it was held that this was an original undertaking, and not within the statute. Chase v. Davy, 17 John. R. 114. But a promise in writing to pay the debt of another, acknowledging a past consideration, viz. land conveyed to that other, but not at the promisor's request, is nudum pactum and void. Chaffe v. Thomas, 7 Cow. 358. The mischief produced in Pennsylvania, by the want of a provision in their Act of Assembly, similar to that in the Statute of Frauds, by which a parol promise to pay the debt of another is void, has induced the Courts to lean against a recovery wherever the precise terms of the promise are not explicitly shown by clear and satisfactory proof. Per Gibson, C. J., in Sidwell v. Evans, 1 Penn. R. 385.)

(1) [If a promise to pay the debt of another be found on a new and distinct consideration, independent of the debt, and one moving between the parties to the new promise, it is not within the statute, but is an original promise. Per Kent, C. J. Leonard v. Vredenburgh, 8 Johns. 29. Jones v. Ballard, 2 Rep. Con. Ct. 113. Aliter, if the whole credit is not given to the person who comes in to answer for another. Per Kent, C. J. ubi sup. See also, Leland v. Creyon, 1 M'Cord, 100. S. P. If A. in consideration that B. will deliver him goods, and that C. will discharge A. from execution, promise to pay C. the amount of the execution; this is an original undertaking, and not within the statute. Skelton v. Brewster, 8 Johns. 376. So if A. being bound to indemnify B. in a suit in which he is arrested, request C. to become special bail for B. and promise to indemnify him. Harrison v. Sawtel, 10 Johns. 242. S. P. Perley v. Spring, 12 Mass. Rep. 297. See also 11 Johns. 221, Bailey v. Freeman. So if A. in consideration of a sale of land to him by B. promise C. to be delivers them up to an agent of the owner, on an agreement that the defendant, the agent, will pay the amount of a bill drawn by his principal, and accepted by A. for the accommodation of the principal (u). The principal of this and similar cases seems to be very clear. A. had a right to retain the policies, and if the defendant had personally undertaken to pay him a sum of money in consideration of his giving up the policies, the doing so being a relinquishment of an advantage by the plaintiff, would have been a good consideration to enforce the payment of the money; but if the relinquishment would have been a good consideration to support a promise to pay money, why should it not be equally sufficient to support any other promise? If a promise by the defendant to pay 20*l.* (the amount of the bill) would have been binding, why should not the promise to pay the amount of the bill specifically, be also binding? So where the plaintiff had a lien on goods for a debt due from A. B., and the defendant, in consideration that the plaintiff would relinquish his lien, promised to pay the debt, it was held that the case was not within the statute (x). So where the plaintiff distrained for rent, and the defendant, an auctioneer, being in possession of the goods, and about to sell them for the benefit of the creditors, by virtue of a bill of sale made by the tenant, promised to pay the debt (y). So a promise to execute a bail-bond is not within the statute (z). So if A. be

(u) Castling v. Aubert, 2 East, 325. And see Houlditch v. Milne, 3 Esp. C. 87. Barrell v. Trussell, 4 Taunt. 117. [Sian v. Pigott, 1 Nott & M'Cord, 124.]

The plaintiff, an occupier of lands, at the request of the defendant, resisted a suit by the vicar for tithes, upon a promise to pay him all costs which might be paid by him, held not to be within the statute; and to be available for the costs antecedently incurred. A payment of the costs by the plaintiff's attorney to the vicar is a payment by his agent, and it is immaterial in what way the latter settled this account with his principal; it is no objection, therefore, that the plaintiff had only paid him by giving a promissory note for the amount. Adams v. Dansey,[1] 6 Bing. 506. See ASSUMPSIT. Money paid.

So where the plaintiff, at the request of the defendant, became a co-surety with him in an indemnity-bond to a third person, the defendant undertaking to save the plaintiff harmless. Thomas v. Cook,[2] 8 B. and C. 728. An auctioneer employed to sell goods on premises in respect of which rent is in arrear, the landlord applies for rent, saying, "It is better so to apply than to distrain," the auctioneer says, "You shall be paid, my clerk shall bring you the money," an action lies. Bampton v. Paulin,[3] 4 Bing. 264. See Thomas v. Williams,[4] 10 B. & C. 664.

(x) Houlditch v. Milne, 3 Esp. C. 86. Williams v. Leiper, 2 Wils. 308. See Keate v. Temple, 1 B. & P. 158.

(y) Williams v. Lepee, 3 Burr. 1886; 2 Wils. 308. Castling v. Aubert, 2 East, 325, 330. Bampton v. Paulin,[3] 4 Bing. 264. [S. P. Atkinson v. Barfield, 1 M'Cord, 575.]

(z) Jarmain v. Algar, 1 R. & M. 348.

---

accountable to him for debts due to him from B. Gold v. Phillips, 10 Johns. 412. So where A. promised B. not to require payment from him of a certain note, in consideration of which B. promised to indemnify A. from one-third of all loss in consequence of his indorsing certain notes for C. Myers v. Morse, 15 Johns. 425. So where A. subscribed to pay the trustees of a religious society a certain sum annually towards the support of a clergyman, and B., in consideration of a certain sum, agreed to indemnify A. against all claims arising from his subscription. Conkey v. Hopkins, 17 Johns. 113. So where A. deposited a certain sum of money and goods in B.'s hands, on an agreement that B. should pay a certain note indorsed by C. for A.'s accommodation, and should indemnify C. against the note. Olmstead v. Greenly, 18 Johns. 12. See also Underhill & al. v. Gibson & al. 2 N. Hamp. Rep. 352.

Where a husband and wife were about separating, and a friend of the wife promised the husband to pay for the board of the children, if he would sign the articles of separation—the promise was held not to be within the statute. Hughes v. Creyon, 2 Rep. Con. Ct. 257.

If a person promise to pay the amount of a debt which he owes to a creditor of him to whom it is due, and to save him harmless from the demand of his creditor—such promise is not within the statute. Colt v. Root, 17 Mass. Rep. 229. {Nor is a promise to pay a debt of a testator by an executor, who has given bond to the Judge of Probate to pay the testator's debts and legacies, within the statute, for the bond is an admission of assets. Stebbins v. Smith, 4 Pick. Rep. 97.} Sed vide Waggoner v. Grey's adm'rs, 2 Hen. & Mun. 603. A defendant having funds in his hands, and making an express parol promise to pay the debt of another, is liable notwithstanding the statute. Raymer v. Sim, 3 Har. & M'Hen. 541. The undertaking of assignees, to whom property has been delivered for the purpose of paying creditors, is not within the statute. Drakeley v. Deforest, 3 Conn. Rep. 272.

The statute does not apply to promises raised by implication of law. Allen v. Pryor, 3 Marsh. 306. Goodwin et al v. Gilbert, 9 Mass. Rep. 510.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 149. [2] Id. xv. 333. [3] Id. xiii. 425. [4] Id. xxi. 143.

*indebted to B., assigns a debt due from C., which the latter promises to pay to B. (a).

Where an accommodation acceptor defends an action at the request of the drawer, the case is not within the statute, and he may recover the costs as money paid to the use of the defendant (b). So if J. S. agree, in consideration of the assignment of a debt due to the plaintiff, to pay him 10*s.* in the pound, the case is not within the statute (c).

But a promise to pay the debt of another, in consideration of forbearance to sue that other, has been held to be within the statute (d) (1).

Where A. had wrongfully occasioned the death of B.'s horse, and C. promised to pay the damages, in consideration that B. would not sue A., it was held, that the case was within both the intention of the statute, which was to prevent the commission of fraudulent practices by the means of perjury, and also within the words of the statute, inasmuch as the terms miscarriage and default applied to tortious acts, from which duties resulted independent of any contract (e), and the case was distinguished from that of Read v. Nash (f), because it did not appear that the defendant in the former action had ever been guilty of an assault, or been liable in damages (2).

A parol promise to pay the debt of another, and also to do some other thing, is void altogether, since the plaintiff cannot separate the two parts of the contract (g).

On any agreement made in consideration of marriage.—It seems to be fully settled that mutual promises to marry are not within the statute (h). Where a father promised his daughter 3,000*l.* and died before her marriage, leaving her 2,000*l.* only, and afterwards the husband hearing of the letter filed his bill to obtain the other 1,000*l.*, it was dismissed, because the marriage was not contracted in expectation of 3,000*l.* (i). Promise to marry.

(a) Where a debtor of the plaintiffs, being arrested by them, executed an assignment of monies due to him from the defendants, who were partners in three several firms in London, Buenos Ayres, and Chili, a written notice of which assignment was sent to the partners carrying on the business in London, who promised that they would pay when they received the money, after a prior claim had been paid, and said that a notice to Chili would have made no difference: held, that such promise was not within the Statute of Frauds, as an undertaking to pay the debt of another; and that the admission by one partner was competent evidence to charge the others, and his promise binding upon them. Lacy v. M'Neile,[1] 4 D. & R. 7.

(b) Howes v. Martin, 1 Esp. 162. But it has been held that a promise by the indorser of a dishonoured note to indemnify the holder, if he will sue the drawer, is within the statute. Winckworth v. Mills, 2 Esp. 484, tam. qu.; and see Reade v. Nash, 1 Wils. 305.

(c) Anstey v. Marden, 1 N. R. 124.

(d) Rothery v. Curry, B. N. P. 281. Fish v. Hutchinson, 2 Wils. 94; Ld. Raym. 1087; but see above, 477.

(e) Kirkham v. Marter, 2 B. & A. 613. (f) 1 Wils. 305.

(g) Chater v. Beckett, 7 T. R. 201. [See also Crawford et al. v. Morrell, 8 Johns. 253.] Thomas v. Williams,[2] 10 B. & C. 664. A promise by an auctioneer, about to sell the tenant's goods, made to a landlord to pay rent not then due, is void by the statute, Ibid.

(h) B. N. P. 280. Harrison v. Cage, Ld. Raym. 386; 1 Salk. 24. Cocke v. Baker, Str. 34, contra. Philpot v. Wallett, Skinn. 24; 3 Lev. 65.

(i) Ayliff v. Tracy, 2 P. Wms. 45.

(1) [A parol promise by a garnishee to the plaintiff in an attachment, that if he would discontinue the attachment and wait for some months, he (the garnishee) would pay the debt for the defendant in the attachment, was held to be void under the statute. Boyce v. Owens, 2 M'Cord, 208.]

(2) [A parol promise by a stockholder in a bank, who, on a division of the stock, has received his share thereof, to pay the holder of an outstanding note of the bank, is void by the statute. Per Parker, C. J. Spear v. Grant, 16 Mass. Rep. 13. Where goods were delivered to A. to be transported on freight, and A. converted them to his own use, and B. requested the owner, who was about to institute a writ against A. to forbear, and to sue C. for the damages, and promised by parol to pay the amount of damages if the plaintiff should fail to recover them from C., the promise was held to be within the statute, and void. Turner v. Hubbell, 2 Day, 457. So where A. gave a promissory note to B., and C. told B. that he had taken an assignment of A.'s property, and would pay the debt due to him from A. Jackson v. Rayner, 12 Johns. 291. So where one partner promised to pay a note given in the partnership name by another partner for his private debt. Wagnor v. Clay, 1 Marsh. 257.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xvi. 185. [2] Id. xxi. 143.

For the sale of lands.

Contract for sale of lands, &c.—The main distinction between this branch of the 4th section and the 1st section, is, that the 1st section relates to the actual creation of interests in lands, the fourth to executory contracts for the creation of such interests. A sale by auction is within this clause (k) (A).

Interest in lands.

Lands, tenements or hereditaments, or any interest in or concerning them.—It has been held that a contract for the purchase of a growing crop

*480 of grass, *to be mown and made into hay by the vendor (l), and conferring a right to make a profit of the surface of the land, or for the sale of growing turnips, their maturity not being stated (m), or of growing trees for hop-poles, (n), or for the abatement of the tenant's rent (o), for the grant of a rent-charge, or of a right of common, or to take lodgings (p), is within the statute.

But that a sale of mature potatoes, to be got immediately (q) (the contract merely conferring an easement, or right to come upon the land to carry away the potatoes); a contract for all the potatoes growing on certain land, to be dug and carried away by the purchaser, the potatoes alone being the subject-matter of the sale (r): a sale of timber growing (s); an agreement by A., the owner of land, that B. should cultivate it, yielding to A. a moiety of (k) Walker v. Constable, 2 Esp. C. 659; 1 B. & P. 306. Stansfield v. Johnson, 1 Esp. C. 102.

(l) Crosby v. Wadsworth, 6 East, 602. Where a corporation were empowered to sell the aftermath of premises by writing; held, that their agent writing down the name of the highest bidder as purchaser, and his giving a promissory note for the price, could not be considered a sale in writing. Symonds v. Ball, 8 T. R. 151.

(m) Emmerson v. Heelis, 2 Taunt. 38. But qu. and see Warwick v. Bruce, 2 M. & S. 205. And see also Waddington v. Bristow, and 2 B. & P. 99.

(n) Teal v. Auty,[1] 2 B. & B. 99.

(o) O'Connor v. Spaight, 1 Scho. & Lef. 306.

(p) Where upon an agreement by parol to take lodgings "for two or three years," to enter on a future day, before which the defendant upon inspecting declined taking them, and never entered; it was held, first, that it was an agreement for an interest in land within the statute, and, secondly, that use and occupation could not be maintained. The declaration contained two special counts, besides the counts for use and occupation; the first, upon an executory consideration, stating the demise to have been for two years, which could not therefore be supported, as being an untrue averment; the second stated, that in consideration that the plaintiff had demised, the defendant promised to enter and become tenant upon terms stated, but there was no promise to pay the rent; and held, that as the plaintiff could only recover damages for the refusal to enter and become tenant, the relation of landlord and tenant never having been created, the plaintiff was precluded by the statute from recovering damages for breach of the agreement, there being no memorandum in writing. The effect of the statute upon parol leases is, that where valid as leases, the party may have a remedy upon them quoad leases, but not to sue for damages for not taking possession. Edge v. Strafford, 1 C. & J. 391.

(q) Parker v. Staniland, 11 East, 362.

(r) Warwick v. Bruce, 2 M. & S. 205. So where the contract was for a field of potatoes growing, the seller being to raise them from the ground at the request of the purchaser; for they are within the description of emblements, and are to be deemed chattels. Evans v. Roberts,[2] 5 B. & C. 829; 8 D. & R. 611. A bargain between an occupier of a farm and one who succeeds him, for growing crops of wheat for a specific sum, the former telling the latter that if he does not take the wheat he shall not have the farm, is not a contract for land within the statute; per Bayley and Holroyd, Js. But per Littledale, J. if the giving up of the land was part of the consideration, it is a contract within the statute. Mayfield v. Wadsley,[3] 3 B. & C. 357. Where there is a contract for land, and distinct contracts at specific sums for the dead stock, and the purchaser takes possession, an action lies for goods sold and delivered. Ibid. And crops agreed to be taken by an incoming of an outgoing tenant may be recovered under a count for goods bargained and sold; per Bayley and Holroyd, Js. Ibid. A contract by parol to purchase, at 2*s.* per sack, potatoes, growing (June), to have them at digging-time (October), and to find diggers, is not a contract for an interest in land within the statute. Sainsbury v. Matthews, 4 M. & W. 343. Where the defendant agreed by parol in August for a crop of growing corn, and the profit of the stubble afterwards, some potatoes growing, and whatever lay grass was in the fields, but the plaintiff was to have liberty for his cattle to run with the defendant's; the latter was to harvest the corn, and dig the potatoes, but the plaintiff to pay the tithes; held, that the introduction of the lay grass into the contract, as a matter of purchase and sale, although per se it might be taken to be an interest in land, yet it being consistent with an agisting by the owner of the vendor's cattle, and of the possession of the land still remaining with the former, the objection founded on the statute ought not to prevail. Jones v. Flint, 2 P. & D. 594.

(s) Per Treby, J., 1 Ld. Raym. 182.

(A) (An agreement for the exchange of lands is within the statute of frauds. Rice v. Peet, 15 John. R. 503.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 32. [2]Id. xii. 377. [3]Id. x. 110.

the crops (t); a parol contract for an easement, such as a liberty to nail *the framework of a sky-light against a wall (u), or to stack coals in a yard, or use a way over the land of another (x) (A), is not within the statute. (1).

(t) Poulter v. Killingbeck, 1 B. & P. 397. And an appraisement of the value having been made for both parties, it was held that A. might recover for goods sold and delivered.

(u) Winter v. Brockwell, 8 East, 310, n.; 11 East, 366.

(x) Wood v. Lake, Say, 3. Webb v. Paternoster. But as to these cases, see Hewlins v. Shippam, supra, 473.

(A) (In Pennsylvania a right of way can be passed by deed only, and not by parol. Collam v. Hocker, 1 Rawle, 108. But where there is evidence of an uninterrupted use of an alley for a passage and water-course, for a period less than twenty years, evidence of contribution by the persons so using it, to the expenses of laying and repairing the pavement, and of laying water-pipes under the surface, is proper to be submitted to the jury, as bearing upon the fact of the presumption of a grant. Lewis v. Carstairs, 6 Whart. 193. A party who might otherwise be entitled to the exclusive enjoyment of an easement, may be equitably estopped from contesting the right of others to use it, if by allowing a common enjoyment of it for a period less than twenty years, and by positive acts of acquiescence on his part, he encourages an innocent purchaser to pay his money for the purchase of property to which such easement appears to be appurtenant. Ibid. So a parol promise to pay the owner of land a specific sum on his consenting to have a public road or highway laid through his lands, is not within the statute of frauds, and may be enforced by action, if such road be laid out and occupied as such. Noyes v. Chapin, 6 Wend. 46.)

(1) [A contract for the sale of things annexed to the freehold, but which are capable of separation without violence, and by the terms of the contract are to be separated, is held, in Connecticut, not to be within the statute. Bostwick v. Leach, 3 Day, 476. Nor is an agreement not to exercise a right regarding the freehold,—as not to use a mill, or not to carry on a trade within a particular shop. Ibid. In New York, the sale of a growing crop of wheat, by parol, is held not to be within the statute. Newcomb & al. v. Ramer, 4 Johns. 421, note.

A parol promise by the owner of lands, to a person who had entered into possession without title and made improvements, to sell them to him, is void. Freer v. Hardenburg, 5 Johns. 272. But a promise to pay for the improvements made on one's land is not within the statute. Ibid. Benedict v. Beebe, 11 Johns. 145. {Lower v. Winters, 7 Cow. Rep. 263.} Possession is an interest in land, within the meaning of the statute. Howard v. Easton, 7 Johns. 205. See also Fox v. Longley, 1 Marsh. 388. So is a right in equity of redeeming mortgaged lands. Scott & al. v. M'Furland, 13 Mass. Rep. 309: And a contract to release a covenant of warranty annexed to land. Bliss & al. v. Thompson, 4 Mass. Rep. 488: And a promise by the grantee to execute a deed of defeasance, so that the conveyance shall operate as a mortgage. Boyd v. Stone, 11 Mass. Rep. 342: And a promise by the grantee to return the deed unrecorded, if the contract is rescinded, or if certain conditions are performed by the grantor. Sherburne v. Fuller, 5 Mass. Rep. 133. Any permanent right to hold another's lands for a particular purpose, and to enter on them at all times without his consent, is an interest within the statute. Cook v. Stearns, 11 Mass. Rep. 533. Thus an easement in the lands of another, or a right to enter on them for the purpose of erecting and keeping in repair a dam, embankment or canal, in order to raise water to work a mill cannot be acquired by parol. Ibid. See also Phillips v. Thompson, 1 Johns. Chan. Rep. 131. S. P. But where there is a parol agreement for a right of way, or other interest to land, and any acts are done in pursuance thereof, which are prejudicial to the party performing them, and are in part execution of the contract, the agreement is valid notwithstanding the statute. Ricker & al. v. Kelley & al. 1 Greenleaf, 117. An agreement after the execution of a lease, that the lessee shall not use the pasture land without paying for it, is within the statute. Tryon v. Mooney, 9 Johns. 583. So is an agreement between A. and B., that B. shall purchase C.'s lands for the benefit of both; though B. makes the purchase, and thereupon it is further agreed that A. shall advance half the purchase money and be equally interested in the purchase. Parker v. Bodley, 4 Bibb, 102, S. P. Henderson v. Hudson, 1 Munf. 510. {But where A. and B. entered into a parol agreement, by virtue of which they were to be jointly interested in the profits arising from the purchase and sale of certain tracts of land, and A. was to make the bargain for the purchase, and render all necessary services for that purpose, and B. was to furnish the purchase money, and take and execute deeds in his own name, it was held in an action brought by A. against B. for a moiety of the profits so made, that the case was not within the statute of frauds. Bunnel v. Tainter's Adm. 4 Conn. 568.}

A parol agreement between owners of adjoining lands, that a surveyor should run a dividing line between them, and that it should thus be ascertained and settled—which was executed, and the line run accordingly, and marked on a plat by a surveyor in their presence, as the boundary—was held to be conclusive, and not within the statute. Boyd's Lessee v. Graves & al., 4 Wheat. 513. {Ebert v. Wood, 1 Binney, 216.} See Jackson v. Dysling, 2 Caines' Rep. 198. Stuyvesant v. Dunham & al., 9 Johns. 61. Whitney v. Holmes, 15 Mass. Rep. 151.

An agreement to remove a fence and open a road, is not an agreement concerning an interest in lands. Storms v. Snyder, 10 Johns. 109. Assumpsit may be maintained by grantor against grantee for the consideration of a conveyance, if not in fact paid, although payment is acknowledged in the deed—it not being a contract within the statute. Bower v. Bell, 20 Johns. 338. Wilkinson v. Scott, 17 Mass. Rep. 249. An agreement to abate in the price what the land is deficient in the quantity expressed in the deed, is not within the statute. Mott v. Hurd, 1 Root, 73. Sed vide Bradley v. Blodget, Kirby, 23. The terms "lands, tenements and hereditaments," in the statute of frauds, in Tennessee, do not comprehend an equitable estate: Sales of occupant claims are therefore not within the statute. Danforth v. Lowry, 1 Hayw. Tenn. Rep. 61.

Under an act of Pennsylvania "for the prevention of frauds, &c." an action for damages may be maintained on a parol agreement for the sale of land. Ewing v. Tees, 1 Binney, 450. The act, though it does

A parol agreement that an arbitrator shall determine between the parties whether a lease shall be granted, is within the statute (y). It seems to be now settled that an equitable mortgage, by the deposit of title deeds, is not within the statute (z). Neither is a collateral agreement by a lessee to pay a per centage on money laid out by the landlord on the premises (a) (A).

It has frequently been held in equity, that a part performance takes the case out of the statute (b). Where the tenant agreed to pay the landlord 40*l.* out of 100*l.* for the good-will of the farm if he would receive another tenant, it was held that the defendant having received the 100*l.* was liable at law (c); so where the plaintiff let land in consideration of receiving half the crop, and the crop was appraised by mutual consent, it was held (d) that the statute was out of the question; so in equity, where the party has been put into possession (e), especially if he has incurred expense (f) (B); or a man, upon promise of a lease, has laid out money in improvements (g), (y) Walters v. Morgan, 2 Cox's Chan. Ca. 369.

(z) Russel v. Russel, 1 Bro. Ch. 269. This is a matter of daily occurrence. 11 Ves. 403, 404, n.; 12 Ves. 197; 1 Evans's St. 235.

(a) Hoby v. Roebuck,[1] 7 Taunt. 157. A. in 1792, grants a lease of a theatre to B.—B. covenanting not to grant rights of admission, except two hundred and fifty free admissions, without the consent of A.; and in case of any of the covenants being broken, the lease to be void. B. then assigns his interest to trustees, to receive the profits and pay the debts, &c. who leave B. in the management and direction of the concern; in the course of which, in 1799, B. grants a ticket of admission to C. for twenty-one years. In 1800, the trustees take possession of the theatre, but suffer C. to exercise his privilege of admission till 1814, when the ticket is stopped, on the ground that B. had no right to make such a grant: held that this was not an interest in land, but a license to C. to enjoy the privilege of admission; and therefore that it was not necessary that it should pass by deed, or that B. should have been authorized by the trustees, in writing to make such a grant. Taylor v. Waters,[2] 2 Marshall, 551; 7 Taunt. 374.

(b) Griffith v. Young, 12 East, 513. Crosby v. Wadsworth, 6 East, 602. Ld. Aylesford's Case, Str. 783. And this, it has been said, is on the ground of fraud. 1 Bro. C. C. 413, 417; 1 Ves. 221; Buller, J. (in Brodie v. Paul, 1 Ves. jun. 133), intimated an opinion that the same rule prevailed at law as in equity on this subject; but a contrary opinion was expressed by Ld. Eldon, in Cooth v. Jackson, 6 Ves. 29. See Teal v. Auty,[3] 2 B. & B. 99, where the contract was for growing trees, which the defendant (the vendee) cut down and took away; and held that he might recover, the agreement being executed. See also above, 99.

(c) Griffith v. Young, 12 East, 513. (d) Poulter v. Killingbeck, 1 B. & P. 397. And see 6 East, 612.

(e) Pyke v. Williams, 2 Vern. 445.

(f) 9 Mod. 37; Freem. 281. Foxcroft v. Lister, 2 Vern. 456. Hoyd v. Buckland, 2 Freem. 269.

(g) 1 Vern. 151; Prec. Ch. 561.

---

not make such parol agreement void, restricts its operations as to the acquisition of an interest in the land, and no title in fee simple can be derived under it. Bell v. Andrews, 4 Dallas, 152. Where such parol agreement has been executed by payment of a valuable consideration, and delivery of possession, it is binding between the parties. Billington v. Welsh, 5 Binney, 131. But to bind a subsequent bona fide purchaser, notice either in fact or law must be clearly sworn. Ibid. There is nothing in the act to prevent a declaration of trust by parol. German v. Gabbald, 3 Binney, 302. In Kentucky, the statute of frauds is held to be imperative against all parol contracts for lands where the trust is direct, but not to extend to resulting trusts, which will be decreed, though proved by parol alone. Fischli v. Dumaresly, 3 Marsh. 23. The statute withholds the remedy for enforcing a parol contract for lands, but does not destroy its obligation—and it is a good defence to a bill for specific performance of a written contract, that it has been rescinded, or its terms abated by a subsequent parol agreement. Lucas v. Mitchell, 3 Marsh. 245. In New York and Pennsylvania, if a person purchase land with another's money and take a deed of it in his own name, there is a resulting trust in favour of him to whom the money belonged—and such trust may be proved by parol. Jackson v. Sternbergh, 1 Johns. Cas. 153, S. C.; 1 John. 45, n. Foote v. Colvin, 3 Johns. 215. Jackson v. Matsdorf, 11 Johns. 91. Wharton's Digest, 580, cites manuscript cases in the Circuit Court of the U. States. Secus, in Massachusetts. Goodwin v. Hubbard & al. 15 Mass. Rep. 218. Runey & al. v. Edmands, ibid. 294. Storer v. Batson, 8 Mass. Rep. 431. Jenny v. Alden, 12 Mass. Rep. 375.]

(A) (A parol agreement of an individual with a number of his neighbours, that he would contribute a lot of ground in consideration that they would erect a school-house upon it for their common benefit, when accompanied by proof of the execution of the agreement is not affected by the statute of frauds, but passes a good title to the persons subscribing and building the house as trustees for the neighbourhood. Martin v. M'Cord, 5 Watts, 493.)

(B) (To take a parol gift of land out of the statute of frauds, it is necessary to show that the donee has made improvements which add to its permanent value, and that by reason of his expenditure, he would be prejudiced by a rescision of the contract. Where the benefit to the donee by the possession of the land has exceeded his expenditure upon it, the statute will be enforced. Wack v. Sorber, 2 Whart. 387.

Assumpsit will lie to recover the money agreed to be paid for owelty on a parol partition of lands; or a lessee enters and builds (h), but the permitting one already in possession to continue in possession is no part-performance of an agreement for a further lease (i). Where the bill stated it to be a part of the agreement that the contract should be reduced into writing, and in consequence of the agreement the party was put to expense, it was held that the bill would lie for the sum laid out, and an action at law was directed, and also that the agreement should be admitted (k). Where the act would not prejudice the party in case the agreement were not to be enforced, it is not to be considered as a part-performance (l) (1). So where the act has been done with another view, and not with an intention to carry the agreement into effect (m); or where it is merely ancillary to the contract (n). An estate was sold at twenty-five years, *purchase, the tithes and timber to be taken *482 at a valuation: it was held that the making the valuation and sending the abstract, did not amount to a part-performance (o). The receipt of earnest will not take the case out of the statute (p). Where A. articled for an estate in his own name, and B. alleged that the estate had been bought for him, but there was no written agreement or part-payment between them, it was held, that B. could not prove the fact by parol evidence (q) (A).

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 57. [2] Id. ii. 140. [3] Id. vi. 32.

Upon any agreement that is not to be performed within the space of one year, &c.—It has been held, that cases depending upon contingencies, Within one year.

(h) 9 Mod. 37.
(i) Smith v. Turner, Prec. in Ch. 561.
(k) 1 Vern. 159.
(l) Gunter v. Holme, Amb. 586.
(m) Ibid.
(n) Whitchurch v. Bevis, 2 Bro. C. C. 559.
(o) Whitbread v. Brookhurst, 1 Bro. C. C. 404.
(p) Prec. in Chan. 560.
(q) Bartlett v. Pickersgill, 32 & 33 Geo. 2, in Chan. cited R. v. Boston, 4 East, 577.

though there must be an averment of circumstances to take the contract out of the statute of frauds. Walter v. Walter, 1 Whart. 292. Gratz v. Gratz, 4 Rawle, 411. But in Pennsylvania damages may be recovered for the non-performance of mere parol contracts for the sale of lands. Ewing v. Tees, 1 Binn. 450. Bell v. Andrews, 4 Dall. 152.)

(1) [Davenport v. Mason, 15 Mass. Rep. 85, S. P.—Where possession of land has been taken, and improvements made under an agreement, the terms of which do not distinctly appear, though the court will not grant relief on the ground of part performance, yet the bill will be retained for the purpose of affording the party a reasonable compensation for beneficial and lasting improvements. Parkhurst v. Van Cortlandt, 1 Johns. Ch. Rep. 273. Consideration-money paid, possession taken, and valuable improvements made, under a parol contract for the conveyance of lands, will, in equity, take the case out of the statute, and entitle the complainant to a decree, for a specific performance. Downey v. Hotchkiss, 2 Day, 225. Smith v. Lessee of Puton, 1 Serg. & Rawle, 80. Whetmore v. White, 2 Caines' Cas. in Er. 87. But, at law, part performance will not take a parol agreement out of the statute. Per Kent, C. J. Jackson v. Pierce, 2 Johns. 221. Kidder v. Hunt, 1 Pick. 328. Expenses incurred in faith of a parol agreement, which is violated, may, however, be recovered in an action of indebitatus assumpsit. 1 Pick. ubi sup. And in equity, a part performance, which will take a case out of the statute, must be made under such circumstances as amount to fraud. Meach v. Stone & al. 1 Chipman's Rep. 182. Payment of the purchase money, it seems, is not sufficient part performance to take a case out of the statute. Jackson's Assignees v. Cartright et al. 5 Munf. 308.

The part performance, which will, in equity, take a case out of the statute, must be of the identical agreement set up by the bill. Phillips v. Thompson, 1 Johns. Ch. Rep. 131. And it must be such as usually or necessarily follow such an agreement. Townsend v. Sharp, 2 Overton's Rep. 192.

A parol promise to convey lands to a son, in consideration of natural affection merely, will not be specifically enforced in equity against the father, even in favour of a purchaser from the son. Hickman v. Grimes, 1 Marsh. 86. Nor will a parol promise, alleged to have been made by an ancestor, be enforced against an infant heir, although his guardian does not insist on the statute. Grant v. Craigmiles, 1 Bibb, 203.

A court of equity will not compel specific performance of a parol agreement to convey lands, in a case where the party who asks its assistance is chargeable with unfair conduct in relation to the contract which he seeks to enforce—but will leave him to his legal remedy. Per Washington, J. Thompson v. Tod, 1 Peters' Rep. 385. If part of the purchase money be paid, and possession be delivered in pursuance of and with a view to the performance of a parol agreement, it is held in Pennsylvania, that the case is taken out of the statute. Bassler v. Niesly, 2 Serg. & Rawle, 355. S. P. Jones v. Peterman, 3 ib. 546. But where the lessee, in a parol lease for seven years, had possession before the agreement, and continued in possession afterwards, and had made no improvements, nor incurred expenses on the faith of the agreement, it was held that possession could not be regarded as a part performance. Jones v. Peterman, ubi sub. The cases in England, on the subject of the specific performance of agreements for the sale of lands, are not strictly applicable in this country, on account of the rapid change of the value of lands here. Todd v. Pfoutz, 3 Yeates, 177.]

(A) (See Parker v. Wells, 6 Whart. 153.)

which may or may not happen within the year, as upon the return of a ship, marriage, or death, the case is not within the statute (r), although the event does not in fact happen within the year (s). But where it appears to be the intention of the parties, that the agreement shall not be performed within the year, the case is within the statute (t), although part be performed within the year (u).

Agreement (A). Unless the agreement, &c.—The term agreement comprehends contracting parties, a consideration, and a promise. Hence it is necessary that the names of the contracting parties should be stated (x) (1).

Consideration. The consideration.—A promise in writing to pay the debt of another, without specifying the consideration for the promise, has been held to be insufficient (y) (2).

(r) Salk. 289. Per Wilmot, J. 3 Burr. 1281. Peter v. Compton, Skinn. 353. Lord Raym. 317. [Moore v. Fox, 10 Johns. 244.] Fenton v. Emblers, 3 Burr. 1278; where, in consideration that the plaintiff would become housekeeper to the defendant's testator, and take upon himself the care and management of his family, the testator undertook to pay her certain wages, and leave her an annuity. So where, in consideration that the plaintiff would not sue his debtor in his lifetime, the latter promised that his executor should pay him a stipulated sum. Wells v. Horton,[1] 4 Bing. 40.

(s) Ibid. Lord Holt was of opinion that the contract could not be refused after the expiration of the year. Lord Raym. 317.

(t) According to the resolution of the Judges, in Peter v. Compton, Skinn. 353. A contract for the hire of a carriage for five years at so much per annum, is a contract not to be performed within a year, though by the custom the hirer was entitled to annul at any time upon the terms of paying a year's hire. Birch v. E. of Liverpool,[2] 9 B. & C. 392; and see R. v. Hurstmonceaux,[3] 7 B. & C. 551.

(u) Boydell v. Drummond, 11 East, 142. Bracegirdle v. Heald, 1 B. & A. 722. Where the contract was for a year's service, to commence on a future day; part-performance in such case does not take it out of the statute. Ib.

(x) See the cases below, under the 17th section, and Champion v. Plummer, 1 N. R. 252; and the cases infra, note (y), and 483, note (e).

(y) Wain v. Warlters, 5 East, 10. The promise in that case was thus: "I will engage to pay you (the plaintiff), by half-past four this day, fifty-six pounds and expenses, or bill to that amount on Hall. J. W." The consideration was the forbearance to sue Hall. See Egerton v. Mathews, 6 East, 307. Stadt v. Lill, 9 East, 348. As to the case of Wain v. Warlters, which has excited so much legal discussion, see Lord Eldon's observations, Ex parte Minet, 14 Ves. 159. Ex parte Gordon, 15 Ves. 286. "To the amount of 100*l.* consider me as security on J. C.'s account" (signed and dated.) Held not a sufficient memorandum of an agreement to pay for the default of J. C. Jenkins v. Reynolds,[4] 3 B. & B. 14. An engagement, in consideration of staying proceedings on a bill of exchange against W. B., in these terms, "Mr. W. will engage to pay the bill drawn by W. P. in favour of S. S. is insufficient. Saunders v. Wakefield,[5] 4 B. & A. 595; see also Goodman v. Chase, 1 B. & A. 297; Jenkins v. Reynolds,[4] 3 B. & B. 14. An engagement "to pay you

(A) (In cases not absolutely closed by authority, the Supreme Court has always expressed a strong inclination not to extend the operation of the statute of frauds so as to embrace original and distinct promises, made by different persons at the same time upon the same general consideration. Townley v. Sumratt, 2 Peters, 182. If the thing promised may be performed within a year, the contract is not within the provision of the statute in relation to the time of performance. Sinscott v. M'Intire, 3 Shepley, 201. See also Plimpton v. Curtis, 15 Wend. 336. Russell v. Slade, 12 Day, 455.)

(1) [An agreement to marry at the end of five years is within the statute. Derby v. Phelps, 2 N. Hamp. Rep. 515.

A paper purporting to state the "articles of sale of the estate of J. W. deceased," containing terms of payment, and a schedule of the property as divided, with no other description of it than "mansion-house in D. street—lot No. 1—No. 2," &c. and the names of the purchasers, and the sums stipulated to be given, carried out against each lot, &c. and the signature of the auctioner affixed, and a memorandum beneath it, signed by the bidder, in which he engaged to take the property bidden off by him at the prices and credits mentioned—was held not to be a sufficient memorandum within the statute, as it did not show who were the two parties to the contract. Sherburne et ul. v. Shaw, 1 N. Hamp. Rep. 157.]

(2) [Under the statute of Virginia which provides that "the promise or agreement shall be in writing," the consideration need not be in writing. Violet v. Patton, 5 Cranch, 142. In New York and South Carolina, the English doctrine is adopted. Sears v. Brink et al. 3 Johns. 210. Leonard v. Vredenburgh, 8 ib. 20. Stephens v. Winn, 2 Nott & M'Cord, 372, n. It is expressly recognized, though not directly adjudicated, in New Hampshire. Neelson v. Sanborne, 2 N. Hamp. Rep. 414. But in Massachusetts, {and New Jersey,} it is rejected. Packard v. Richardson et al. 17 Mass. Rep. 122. {Buckley v. Beardsley, 2 South. Rep. 570.} Where the agreement is by covenant or writing under seal, no consideration need be expressed, for the seal itself imports a consideration; and the statute has not altered the common law in this respect. Livingston v. Tremper, 4 Johns. 416. See also Aiken v. Duren, 2 Nott & M'Cord, 370. In Adams v. Bean, 12 Mass. Rep. 137, it was held that a written engagement, on the back of a lease, that the lessee should pay the rent, sufficiently imports a consideration, though it is not expressed.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiii. 332. [2] Id. xvii. 404. [3] Id. xiv. 99. [4] Id. vii. 328. [5] Id. vi. 531.

*Where the defendant wrote a letter to the mortgagee of premises, stating that he had agreed to dispose of them, it was held to be insufficient, since it did not specify the terms of sale, or the sums, or number of houses (z). So an agreement for a lease at a certain rent, which did not specify the term (a), was held to be insufficient. But it is sufficient if the consideration appear by necessary inference and implication (b), or by reference to an agreement between the principal and the plaintiff indorsed on the other side of the paper (c). A letter written by the defendant to the plaintiff's attorney, requesting the plaintiff to give indulgence to a third person till a future day, when he (the defendant) would see the plaintiff paid, was held to be sufficient, although it did not specify the sum, which was allowed to be proved by parol evidence (d).

A guarantee in writing, to pay for goods to be delivered by the vendor to a third person, sufficiently expresses the consideration (e) (1).

on T. L.'s account, 50*l.* at the expiration of the usual credit, on the event of any deficiency on his part so to do," is insufficient. Atkinson v. Carter, 2 Ch. 403. Pace v. Marsh,[1] 1 Bing. 216. Boehm v. Campbell,[2] 3 Moore, 15. Stead v. Liddiard,[3] 1 Bing. 196; infra, 483. A promise by a third person to pay, if the creditor would not (as he was about to do) sell goods transferred by the debtor for the demand, and which was not shown to have been merely a mortgage, is not within the statute. Barrell v. Trussell, 4 Taunt. 117. {And by the King's bench of Ireland, in Joint v. Mostyn, 2 Fox & Smith's Rep. 4.} "I hereby guarantee the present account of Miss H. M., due to S. & Co., of 112*l.*, and what she may contract from this date," is sufficient under the statute of frauds. Russell v. Moseley,[4] 3 B. & B. 211. So where the terms were, "I agree to be security to you for J. C., late in the employ of J. P., for whatever you may entrust him with while in your employ, to the amount of 50*l.*" Newbury v. Armstrong,[5] 6 Bing. 201. See further Cole v. Deyer, 9 Law Journal; Ryder v. Curtis,[6] 8 D. & R. 62. Shortrede v. Cheek,[7] 1 Ad. & Ell. 57.

(z) Seagood v. Meale, Pr. Ch. 560; 9 Ves. 250, 252; 11 Ves. 555.

(a) Clinan v. Cooke, 1 Scho. & Lef. 22. (b) Per Lawrence, J. 6 East, 308.

(c) Stead v. Liddiard,[3] 1 Bing. 196.

(d) Bateman v. Phillips, 15 East, 270. The letter was addressed to the plaintiff's attorney, and ran thus: "The bearer D. W. has a sum of money to receive from a client of mine, some day this next week; I trust that you will give him indulgence till that day, when I undertake to see you paid."

(e) Stadt v. Lill, 9 East, 348; 6 Esp. 89. In the following case the guarantee was held to be sufficient:—A letter stating that J. S. having accepted a bill drawn on him by the plaintiff for 1,026*l.* he gave his guarantee for the due payment of the same in case it should be dishonoured by the acceptor. Bochm v. Campbell,[2] 3 Moore, 15. "I hand you drafts drawn by W. and accepted by B. and indorsed by C.; should the bills not be honoured when due, I promise to see that they do so." Morris v. Stacy,[8] Holt's C. 153. "L. having given his acceptance for freight (stating the particulars), I engage to be accountable to you should it not be paid when due." Pace v. Marsh, 1 Bing. 216. A consideration is sufficiently expressed in a guarantee in this form:—"I guarantee the payment of any goods which A. delivers to B." Stadt v. Lill, 9 East, 348. "I hereby guarantee the present account of Miss H. Moseley, due to Shortridge & Co. South Shields, and what she may contract from this date." Russell v. Moseley,[4] 3 B. & B. 211.

(1) [A memorandum of the sale of lands must, besides being signed by the party, contain the essential terms of the contract, expressed with such clearness and certainty that they may be understood from the writing itself, or some other paper to which it refers, without the necessity of resorting to parol proof. Parkhurst v. Van Courtlandt, 1 Johns. Ch. Rep. 273. A receipt for money, stating that it was the cash part of the purchase of a lot bought of the person subscribing the receipt, is not sufficient to take a case out of the statute. Ellis v. Deadman, 4 Bibb, 466. A receipt in these words—"Received of A. $20, on account of a plantation on the Cypress, sold to him this day for $2,200, payable in different instalments, as per agreement. Charleston, Aug. 1, 1816," and signed by the vendor, was held sufficient to take the case out of the statute. Cosack v. Descoudres, 1 M'Cord, 425. Where a contract for the purchase of land is executory, the price must be stated in the written memorandum. Secus, where the contract is executed by the payment of the purchase money, and the payment is admitted in the memorandum. Fugate v. Honsford, 3 Littell's Rep. 262.

Where the bill charged that the defendant agreed by parol to bid in land for the complainant, at a sheriff's sale, though he took the title in his own name, and the defendant pleaded the statute in bar; it was held that an account signed and delivered by the defendant, in which he charged the complainant with the consideration money for the purchase of the land, was a sufficient memorandum or note in writing to take the case out of the statute. Denton v. M'Kensie, 1 Desauss. 289.

A written agreement in these words, "I promise to pay the amount aforesaid, if C. S. should not pay it in six months," is a sufficient promise within the statute. Buckley v. Beardsley, 2 Southard's Rep. 570. So is the following, written by C. on a note given by A. to B—"I guarantee the payment of the within note to B., one half in six months, the other half within twelve months." Neelson v. Sanborne, 2 N. Hamp. Rep. 413.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. viii. 302. [2]Id. iv. 245. [3]Id. viii. 294. [4]Id. vii. 414. [5]Id. xix. 55. [6]Id. xvi. 335. [7]Id. xxviii. 37. [8]Id. iii. 58.

So a memorandum, signed by the defendant, by which he agrees to give so much for goods, is sufficient; for the consideration is to be inferred from the agreement, viz. the sale and delivery of goods (f).

Note or memorandum.

Or some memorandum or note thereof.—Under this section, as well as the 17th, the terms of the contract may be collected from several distinct papers, provided they be connected by reference from one to another; but it is not sufficient to connect them by mere extrinsic oral testimony (g). Thus, an agreement for a lease which does not specify any definite term, and which has no reference to an advertisement which does express the term, cannot be connected with it by oral evidence (h); and a letter, referring to some agreement generally, but without specifying the terms of it, is not sufficient (i). *Thus a reference in an agreement to such parts of another paper as have been read to the party, is insufficient (k) (1).

*484

And it is not essential that a note or memorandum of the agreement should have been delivered to the other party. A letter written by a man to his own agent, setting forth the terms of the agreement, has been held to be sufficient (l). So where the father wrote a letter to a friend of the plaintiff's, agreeing to give 500*l.* to his daughter on her marriage, to be charged upon his land (m); but where the father wrote a letter to the daughter, after an agreement with the intended husband, in which he stated his agreement to leave her 3,000*l.*, and that the matter was to be fully concluded the next day, was held to be a mere communication, and not binding, the husband having married the daughter in ignorance of the letter (n) (2).

A proposal, by letter when acceded to by parol, is sufficient (o), although it be afterwards retracted and again agreed to by parol (p).

(f) Egerton v. Mathews, 6 East, 307. Note, this was on the construction of the 17th sec.

(g) Tawney v. Crowther, 1 Bro. Ch. C. 161, 318. [Lent et al. v. Padeford, 10 Mass. R. 249.]

(h) Clinan v. Cooke, Sch. & Lef. 22. Evans on the Stat. vol. 1, p. 237. Seagood v. Meale, Prec. in Chan. 560. Clerk v. Wright, 1 Atk. 12. Whaley v. Bagenal, 1 Bro. P. C. 345.

(i) Ibid. 1 Ves. Jun. 326.

(k) Brodie v. St. Paul, 1 Ves. Jun.; and Evans on the Stat. vol. 1, p. 237, where the cases on this subject are collected. And see Kain v. Old,[1] 2 B. & C. 627.

(l) Per Lord Hardwicke, 3 Atk. 503; 2 Ch. Rep. 147; 1 Vern. 110.

(m) Moore v. Hart, 2 Ch. R. 284; 1 Vern. 210.

(n) Aylyffe v. Tracey, 2 P. Wms. 65.

(o) Coleman v. Upcot, 5 Vin. 527.

(p) Bird v. Blosse, 2 Vent. 361. It has been said, that a proposal by letter at first refused, but afterwards assented to, is binding. Hodgson v. Hutchinson, 5 Vin. 522; but see observations, 1 Evans's Stat. p. 236, n. 13. The defendant by letter agreed to take fixtures at an appraisement, and named S. as his appraiser; the plaintiff's appraiser and S. having met, but disagreeing, appointed an umpire, who completed the valuation, but the defendant, under pretext that he had not authorized such umpirage, refused to take the goods until after they had been removed, when he gave notice that he was ready to pay the amount as settled by the appraisers: held, that taking the correspondence and inventory and appraisement together, it amounted to a sufficient agreement within the statute; and that, considering the whole correspondence as taken together to form the contract, the whole was admissible, a stamp being affixed to the original letter. Hemming v. Perry, 2 M. & P. 374. It is sufficient to satisfy the statute if the agreement be in the form of a letter, signed by the party sought to be charged with it, though not signed by the plaintiffs seeking to enforce it; but where it does not contain the statement of all the terms, so as to require something more than a

(1) [See Parkhurst v. Van Courtlandt, cited in the preceding note. In order to make a letter evidence of an agreement for the sale of lands, so as to take it out of the statute, it ought distinctly to set forth the terms of the agreement, or at least refer to some written instrument, in which the terms are set forth, and that the party accepted such terms. Therefore a letter from the vendor to the vendee, informing him that the writings for the land were ready, and adding, that "the sooner he came and settled the business, the better"—was held not to be sufficient. Givins v. Calder, 2 Desauss. 188. It has, however, been decided in Virginia, that a letter promising to make a deed of land, "according to contract," is a sufficient memorandum or note in writing, within the statute, though the terms of such contract are not mentioned. Johnson v. Ronald's Adm'r, 4 Munf. 77.]

(2) [See Barrell et al. v. Jay, 16 Mass. R. 221; and Steere v. Steere, 5 John. Ch. Rep. 11, as to proving a trust by letters not directed to the party, but third persons.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. ix. 205.

Where the defendant had written letters to different people, in which he stated that he had agreed to sell an estate to the plaintiff at twenty-one years' purchase, upon a bill filed for a specific performance, the plea of the statute was allowed (q); and, in general, a mere written statement of the party to be bound, of the terms of an agreement, will not be sufficient, unless it be either regularly signed as an agreement, or unless it appear that the party considered the agreement as complete. Thus, the writing instructions for a deed, unless the party subscribe or insert his name, so as to give authenticity to the document, is not binding (r). So where the counsel for a lady took down in writing a minute of the father's and intended husband's proposals for a settlement, and gave them to a clerk to prepare the deeds, and before they were drawn the father died, a bill for specific performance was dismissed, since there was no act of the party to indicate that he considered the agreement to be complete, and the neglect to sign it *formally was evidence to show that it was left open to further consideration (s). *485

So general instructions for an agreement to be afterwards executed are not binding (t).

Signed by the party.—A signature by the party as a witness to a deed which contains the agreement, or which refers to it, is a sufficient signature within the statute (u); but it is essential to prove that the witness knew that the instrument contained the agreement, or referred to it (x). An agreement for the sale of a house, beginning, "I, A. B.," &c. in the handwriting of the vendor, but signed by the vendee only, is sufficient to bind the vendor (y). It is immaterial in what part of the instrument the signature is contained (z), whether at the beginning or end. The perusing and altering the draft of an intended lease is not a sufficient signature (a) (1). Signature.

simple assent of the other party, it is not an agreement in writing within the statute. Where the proposed time of payment was to depend upon an act to be done by the other, at a time which he was to fix; held, that as it required him to supply a further term of the agreement, viz. that time which had not been supplied in writing, the entire agreement was not in writing, and therefore no agreement within the statute. Boys v. Ayherst, 6 Mad. 316.

(q) Whaley v. Baganal, 6 Bro. C. C. 45. Qu. on what ground?

(r) Stokes v. Moore, 1 Cox's P. Wils. 771, n.

(s) Bawdes v. Amherst, Prac. Ch. 402. But see 3 Atk. 503.

(t) 2 Bro. C. C. 569. (u) 1 Wils. 118; 1 Ves. 6; 3 Atk. 502.

(x) Ibid. Per Lord Hardwicke; and see the observations of Sir D. Evans, Evans on the Stat. Vol. 1, p. 236.

(y) Knight v. Crockford, 1 Esp. C. 190. Lemayne v. Stanley, 3 Lev. 1. Allen v. Bennett, 3 Taunt. 169. Welford v. Bezeley, 1 Wils. 118.

(z) Ogilvie v. Foljambe, 3 Merivale, 62. Selby v. Selby, Ibid. 6. Knight v. Crockford, 1 Esp. C. 189. Right d. Cater v. Price, 1 Dougl. 241. Johnson v. Dodgson, 2 M. & W. 653. But qu. whether the mere mention of the name of the defendant in the body of the testament, although it be drawn by himself, be sufficient. See Stokes v. Moore, 1 P. Wms. 790; 1 Cox's Cases, 222. Sugd. V. & P. 89. The signing by a party as a witness is sufficient, if he be cognizant of the contents. Welford v. Beazley, 3 Atk. 503. Harding v. Crethron, 1 Esp. C. 58. But qu. and see the doubt expressed in Gosbell v. Archer,[1] 4 N. & M. 485. Where the auctioneer's clerk signed the contract, "Witness, T. N." it was held not to be a signing by the agent of the party. But where a principal or party to be bound signs as a witness, which he cannot be, he cannot be understood to sign otherwise than as a principal. Per Lord Eldon in Coles v. Trecothick, 9 Ves. 234.

(a) Hawkins v. Holmes, 1 P. Wms. 770.

(1) [Where A. wrote his name upon the back of a note made by B. payable to C., and authorized by D. to write over the name a stipulation to guarantee the payment of the note; it was held that the signature, and the stipulation written pursuant to the authority, were a memorandum signed by the party, within the statute, and that this authority might be proved by parol. Ulen v. Kittredge, 7 Mass. Rep. 233. But a contrary decision was made where A. gave a note to B., and afterwards, in order to obtain further time, agreed to procure C. to guarantee the payment of it, and C. put his name on the note, in blank, and said he was held, and B. afterwards wrote a guarantee over C.'s name, with an express authority. Hodgkins v. Bond, 1

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxx. 390.

It is not essential that the signature should be upon the agreement itself; it is sufficient if it be indorsed on the draft of a lease, as a notification of the assent of the party to the terms of the lease, or if it be written in a letter or a memorandum which refers to the agreement (b).

By part to be charged.

Signed by the party to be charged (A).—It is sufficient if the agreement be signed by the party charged by it in the particular action, although it has not been signed by the other contracting party (c) (1); for the writing is not the contract, but merely the evidence of it (d). The decisions on the corresponding clause in the 17th section are applicable to this clause (e).

Or other person lawfully authorized.

Or some other person thereunto by him lawfully authorized (B).—Proof of an oral authority is sufficient (f). So it is sufficient if the authority of the agent has been subsequently recognized (g). An auctioneer is the agent of the vendor under this section, as he is under the 17th; and his receipt for the deposit will be a sufficient memorandum of the contract, provided that it sufficiently express the terms, or virtually include them, by reference to other documents (h). It has been held that he is not an agent *486 whose signature *will bind the vendee (i), but this opinion seems to have been completely overruled in the subsequent cases of Emmerson v. Heelis (k), and White v. Proctor (l), which are consistent with the decisions upon the corresponding clause in the 17th section (2).

By agent.

Where, upon an agreement to sell a house for an annuity, both parties instructed one attorney, who made minutes of his instructions, as follows, "Mr. B. agrees to convey the house in consideration of a rent of 40*l.* per annum; Mr. W. to take the stock at a fair appraisement;" a bill filed by W. for a specific performance was dismissed (m).

The clerk of an agent has not, in general, an authority to sign for the (b) Shippey v. Derrison, 5 Esp. C. 191. [And Mr. Day's note.] Blagden v. Bradbear, 12 Ves. 466.

(c) 3 Bro. C. C. 161, 318; Str. 236; 1 P. Wms. 618. Hutton v. Gray, 2 Ch. C. 64. Seton v. Slade, 7 Ves. 265; vide etiam, Martin v. Mitchell, 2 J. & W. 426; see 12 Ves. 107; Westam v. Russell, 3 V. & B. 192. Semble, contra, Lawrenceson v. Butler, 1 Sch. & Lef. 20. And see Wheeler v. Collier,[1] M. & M. 125. Laythorp v. Bryant,[2] 2 Bing. N. C. 735.

(d) See Evans on the Stat. vol. 1, p. 236. (e) Infra, 492.

(f) Coles v. Trecothick, 9 Ves. 234, 250. [Talbot v. Bower, Marsh. 436.] Clinan v. Cooke, 1 Sch. & Lef. 22. Aliter, under the 1st and 2d sections.

(g) Maclean v. Dunn,[3] 4 Bing. 722. Gosbell v. Archer, 4 N. & M. 492.

(h) 7 East, 569. Blagden v. Bradbear, 12 Ves. 471.

(i) Stanfield v. Johnson, 1 Esp. C. 102. See Lord Eldon's observations in Coles v. Trecothick, 9 Ves. 234; those of Sir W. Grant, Buckmaster v. Harrop, 7 Ves. 341; and Higginson v. Clowes, 15 Ves. 516; and of Lord Erskine, 13 Ves. 456.

(k) 2 Taunt. 38. See the observations of Mansfield, C. J. in this case.

(l) 4 Taunt. 209. {M'Comb v. Wright, 4 John. Ch. Rep. 659.} [Davis v. Robertson, 1 Rep. Con. Ct. 71.]

(m) Whitchurch v. Bevis, 2 Bro. C. C. 559.

N. Hamp. Rep. 284. This last decision, however, was not made on a distinction between an express and implied authority to write a guaranty over the defendant's name.

See Joselyn v. Ames, 3 Mass. Rep. 274. Hunt v. Adams, 5 ib. 358. 6 ib. 519. White v. Howland, 9 ib. 314. Moies v. Bird, 11 ib. 436.]

(A) (It cannot be doubted that reducing an agreement to writing is, in most cases, an argument against fraud; but it is very far from a conclusive argument. The doctrine will not be contended for, that a written agreement cannot be relieved against on the ground of false suggestions. Boyce's Executors v. Grundy, 3 Peters, 219. In a contract for the purchase and sale of lands, the statute of frauds is satisfied if the party to be charged therewith sign the contract: it is not necessary to the validity of the contract that it should be signed by both parties. M'Crea v. Purmort, 16 Wend. 460. See also Lowry v. Mehaffy, 10 Watts, 387.)

(B) (Oliver v. Dix, 1 Dev. & Bat. Eq. 158.)

(1) [Ballard v. Walker, 3 Johns. Cas. 60, acc.]

(2) {At a sale of land under an order of a court of equity, the commissioner is the agent of both parties, and his entry in the sale book is a sufficient memorandum within the statute. Jenkins v. Hogg, 2 Const. Rep. 821. An entry in the books of trustees of a town, of a sale of lots by auction, does not take the case out of the statute unless signed by the trustees or some person for them. Thomas v. Trustees &c. 3 Marsh. 299. See Sherburne & al. v. Shaw, 1 N. Hamp. Rep. 157, cited, ante, p. 602, note.}

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxii. 266. [2]Id. xxix. 469. [3]Id. xv. 129.

principal, although it may be sufficient in particular cases where the principal has assented (n). Where trustees were authorized to sell at the request of A. B., it was held that their general consent did not constitute A. B. their agent, so as to enable him to make a contract (o). One of the parties cannot be agent for the other (p).

Sec. 17. Sec. 17 (q).—No contract for the sale of any goods, wares, and merchandizes, for the price of 10*l.*, or upwards, shall be allowed to be good, except the buyer shall accept part of the goods so sold, and actually receive the same, or give something in earnest to bind the bargain, or in part of payment, or that some note or memorandum in writing of the said bargain be made and signed by the parties to be charged by such contract, or their agents thereunto lawfully authorized (1).

Goods, wares, &c. For the sale of any goods, wares, and merchandizes (r).—It seems that a *sale of stock is within the statute, although this has been doubted; since there can be no actual delivery or acceptance of the goods; and in one instance all the Judges were divided in opinion upon this point (s); but in two subsequent cases in equity the Court expressed an opinion such a sale was within the statute, and said that it had been so determined in other cases (t). In the case of Simon v. Motivos, Lord Mansfield, and Wilmot and Yates, Justices, expressed a doubt whether sales by auction were within the statute, on account of the great publicity with which such sales are attended (u). The words of the statute, however, are so plain and so general that it may be worthy of great consideration, whether the Courts would be warranted in overruling its application to sales by auction, on the ground, not that there is no danger of perjury, but because there may (and that is contingent) be less in such cases than in most others (A).

*487

Sales by auction.

(n) Coles v. Trecothick, 9 Ves. 234, 250. Where an agent is authorized to sell at a particular price, a sale by his clerk in his absence without special authority is not binding. Coles v. Trecothick, 9 Ves. 234. Henderson v. Barnewall, 1 Y. & J. 389.

(o) Mortlock v. Buller, 10 Ves. 292.

(p) Wright v. Dannah, 2 Camp. 203. Farebrother v. Simmons,[1] 5 B. & A. 333, which was decided on the 17th section; and therefore where the action is brought by an auctioneer, his signature is not sufficient. Ibid.

(q) For the decisions under the 5th section as to wills, see the title WILL.

(r) Upon a parol agreement that the plaintiff should furnish seed to the defendant, which he was to sow and harvest, and sell the crop at so much per bushel, Winchester measure; held, that it was to be deemed a contract for the sale of goods, and as it exceeded 10*l.* was not binding, for want of a memorandum in writing. And it seems that since the 5 Geo. 4, c. 74, a contract for sale by Winchester measure is not valid. Watts v. Friend,[2] 10 B. & C. 440. The defendant agreed by parol to purchase ash trees, which the plaintiff was felling, at 1*s.* 6*d.* per foot, but did not take them away, objecting that they were faulty and unsound; the plaintiff's attorney required him to pay for the timber he had purchased at that price, to which the defendant replied, by letter, that he bought the timber to be sound and good, that the plaintiff "promised to make it so, and now denies it, and which I have some doubts whether it is so or not; he told me I should not have any without all, so we agreed on these terms, and I expected him to sell to somebody else:" held, first that it was not a contract for the sale of any interest in lands, but for the sale of goods, wares, and merchandize, within the 17th section of the statute; second, that as the defendant's letter did not recognize the absolute contract stated in the plaintiff's attorney's letter, but a conditional one, and which might be denied by the plaintiff, there was not a sufficient note in writing to satisfy the stat.; and, lastly, that there being nothing to show that the defendant had divested himself of his right to object to the quality of the goods, or the seller to have lost his lien for the price, there was not a part acceptance or receipt of the goods into the defendant's possession to satisfy the statute and bind him. Smith v. Surman,[3] 9 B. & C. 561. The words do not extend to shares in a banking company. Humble v. Mitchell, 3 P. & D. 141.

(s) Pickering v. Appleby, 2 P. Wms. 307.

(t) Prec. Chan. 533; and see Ca. T. King, 41.

(u) In Simon v. Motivos, 1 Bl. 599. But the case was not decided upon that ground.

(1) {See 4 Wheat. 89, note, where the decisions on this section are collected.}

(A) (Where a purchase is made at an auction sale, at one time and from the same vendor, although the articles purchased are numerous, and struck off separately at separate and distinct prices, the whole constitutes but one entire contract, and a delivery of part of the goods sold, renders the sale valid for the whole, within the statute of frauds. Mills v. Hunt, 17 Wend. 333. S. C. 20 Wend. 431. [Davis v. Rowell, 2 Pick. Rep. 64, is an express decision that the sale of chattel by auction is within st. 1788, c. 16, § 2, (copied from 29 Car. 2 c. 3. § 17,) of frauds].)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. vii. 120. [2]Id. xxi. 106. [3]Id. xvii. 443.

The same reasons would apply with equal force to many other cases, such as sales in markets and fairs. It is also to be observed, that sales by auction of lands have been held to be within the 4th section of the same Act (x) (1). Where the thing contracted for did not exist at the time of the contract, but was to be so constituted by the application of subsequent labour, and was consequently incapable of delivery or acceptance at the time of agreement, the contract was held not to be within this section of the statute, although the materials to be employed did exist at the time of contract. Thus a contract for a chariot to be made (y), or for the purchase of a quantity of oak pins, to be cut out of slabs and delivered to the buyer (z); or for a quantity of corn to be thrashed out (a), was not within the statute. But now, by the st. 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 7, the former enactments are to take effect, "notwithstanding the goods may be intended to be delivered at some future time, or may not at the time of such contract be actually made, procured or provided, or fit or ready for delivery, or some act may be requisite for the making or completing thereof, or rendering the same fit for delivery." The former statute was held to extend to the sale of things which exist in solido at the time of the sale, although the contract were but executory (b), and although the goods were to be subsequently delivered at a different place (c).

Where there was a verbal contract by the plaintiffs, who were millers, for the sale of a quantity of flour, which at the time was not prepared and in a state capable of immediate delivery; held, that this was a contract for the sale of goods within the statute (d).

A contract to procure goods and carry them is not within the statute, for it is not a contract of sale (e).

A contract for the sale of shares in a canal navigation, or other public *488 *undertaking, need not be in writing, not being within the statute of frauds (f).

In order to constitute an acceptance within this clause, there must be such an actual parting with the possession as devests the vendor of his lien.

Where a party purchased several articles in a shop at separate prices, and some were severed from the bulk and marked by him; it was held, that the whole purchase was an entire contract, and being above 10*l.* was within the statute, and no sufficient transfer and acceptance to bring it within the exception in the 17th clause, and that to satisfy the exception there must be an actual transfer and acceptance of the goods, or part thereof (g).

(x) See Lord Ellenborough's observations upon this point, in Hinde v. Whitehouse; and see Heyman v. Neal, 2 Camp. 337; 12 Ves. jun. 466. This is now so settled; Kenworthy v. Scholefield,[1] 2 B. & C. 945.

(y) Towers v. Osborne, Str. 506. (z) Groves v. Buck, 3 M. & S. 178.

(a) Clayton v. Andrews, 4 Bur. 2101.

(b) Alexander v. Comber, 1 H. B. 20. Rondeau v. Wyatt, 2 H. B. 63. [Bennett v. Hull, 10 Johns. 304.] Cooper v. Elston, 7 T. R. 14. Although the principle has in previous cases been laid down to that extent. See Str. 406; 2 Bur. 2101.

(c) Cooper v. Elson, 7 T. R. 14. [Newman v. Morris, 4 Har. & M'Hen. 421.]

(d) Garbutt v. Watson,[2] 5 B. & A. 613. So an agreement to furnish chimney-pieces at certain prices, and "to finish them in a tradesmanlike manner," was held to be a contract for the sale of goods requiring no stamp, and something remaining to be done before delivery made no difference. Hughes v. Breeds,[3] 2 C. & P. 159.

(e) Cobbold v. Caston,[4] 1 Bing. 399. (f) Latham v. Barber, 6 T. R. 67.

(g) Baldney v. Parker, id. ix. 16; 3 B. & C. 37; 3 D. & R. 220. Where goods were made to defendant's order, and he took away some part; held that it was not a sufficient acceptance of the goods within the statute, and that the plaintiff could not recover on the count for goods sold and delivered. Thompson v. Maceroni,[5] 3 B. & Cr. 1; 4 D. and R. 619. The traveller of A. & Co. in London, having called upon B.

(1) [Simonds v. Catlin, 2 Caines' Rep. 64. Jackson v. Catlin, 2 Johns. Rep. 248. 8 Johns. Rep. 520.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ix. 286. [2]Id. vii. 249. [3]Id. xii. 71. [4]Id. vii. 358. [5]Id. x. 3.

Shall accept part of the goods so sold, and actually receive the same.— The sale of a mare for 20*l.* to be returned if in foal, and part of the price to be paid back, is an entire and conditional contract, and the acceptance in the first instance takes the case out of the statute (h). Where the goods are ponderous, a constructive delivery is sufficient; as where the vendor delivers to the vendee the key of the place where the goods are deposited (i); or the muniments of a ship (k); or the vendee comes the next day and sees the goods weighed off (l); or sells part of the commodity sold to another, who removes it (m). Part for acceptance.

But an actual delivery and acceptance of part of the goods takes the case out of the statute; as where the vendee, having purchased a quantity of balsam of Peru for 200*l.*, sent an agent with baskets for part of it, which was delivered (n). And if the purchaser take a sample, which is to be considered as part of the commodity contracted for, and not as a mere specimen, it is a part-acceptance within the statute (o).

Where goods were ordered by parol at 11*s.* per pound, and were sent to the vendee, who opened the bale, but sent them back with a letter, alleging that they were not worth 6*s.* per pound, it was held to be no acceptance (p) (1). *Whether there has been an acceptance or not by the vendee, is in many instances a question of fact for the jury; the sale by the vendee of part of the commodity sold, is evidence of an acceptance for their consideration (q). *489

A delivery to an agent (r) appointed by the vendee, as, for instance, a carrier, has been held to be an acceptance within the statute (A); although in the country for orders, B. gave an absolute order for a quantity of cream of tartar, and offered to take a quantity of lac dye, at a certain price; the traveller said the price was too low, but that he would write to his principals, and if B. did not hear from them in one or two days, he might consider that his offer was accepted. A. & Co. never wrote to B. but sent all the goods; held, that this was not a joint order for them all, so as to make the acceptance of the cream of tartar the acceptance of the lac dye also, within 29 Car. 2, c. 3, s. 17. Price v. Lea,[1] 1 B. & C. 156. See Hodgson v. Le Bret, 1 Camp. 233. Anderson v. Scott, n. Ibid. In the latter case, the plaintiff having selected several pipes of wine in the defendant's cellar, and agreed for the purchase, cut off the spills or pegs by which the wine is tasted, and the defendant's clerk marked the plaintiff's initials on the casks; held to be a sufficient delivery. Where a joint order is given for several classes of goods, the acceptance of one class is a part-acceptance of the whole. Elliott v. Thomas, 3 M. & W. 170.

(h) Williams v. Burgess, 2 P. & D. 422.

(i) Searle v. Keeves, 2 Esp. C. 598. Peckerley v. Appleby, Com. 354. Colt v. Nethersoll, 2 P. Wms. 308. [Wilkes v. Ferris, 5 Johns. 335. Hunn v. Browne, 2 Caines' Rep. 44. Leedon v. Phillips, 1 Yeates, 529].

(k) 1 Atk. 171.

(l) Simon v. Motivos, 3 Burr. 1921; 1 Bl. 598.

(m) Chaplin v. Rogers, 1 East, 192.

(n) Descard v. Bond, cor. Lord Hardwicke, 7 Geo. 2. But where goods of the value of 144*l.* are made to order, and remain in the possession of the vendor at the request of the vendee, with the exception of a small part which the latter takes away, this is no acceptance of the residue. Thompson v. Maceroni,[2] 3 B. & C. 1.

(o) Hinde v. Whitehouse, 7 East, 558. Klinitz v. Surrey, 5 Esp. C. 267. Talver v. West,[3] Holt's C. 178. Cooper v. Elston, 7 T. R. 14.

(p) Kent v. Huskisson, 3 B. & P. 233.

(q) Chaplin v. Rogers, 1 East, 192.

(r) Where the purchaser of two horses desired the vendor to keep them in his possession at livery, and the vendee in consequence removed them from one stable into another; it was held that the vendor himself might be considered as the agent of the vendee. Elmore v. Stone, 1 Taunt. 458. Where, upon the sale of a hogshead of wine in the London dock warehouses, a delivery order only was given, but no contract in writing; held, that although the London Dock Company might be bound, when required, to hold the goods on account of the vendee, yet having originally held it as the agents of the vendors, there could be no acceptance by the vendee until the company accepted the order for delivery, and thereby assented to hold the wine as agents of the vendee. Bentall v. Burn,[4] 3 B. & Cr. 423; 5 D. & R. 284; [and remarks of Bayley, J., 3 B. & A. 324.[5]]

A. agreed to purchase a horse from B. for ready money, and to take him within a time agreed upon. About the expiration of that time A. rode the horse, and gave directions as to its treatment, &c.; but by requiring an acceptance of the goods, as well as an actual receipt of them, the Legislature seems to have intended some actual assent by the principal beyond that constructive assent which may be inferred from mere delivery to an agent (s). But in later cases this doctrine has been overruled; and the rule is, that so long as the buyer continues to have a right to object either to the quantity or quality of the goods, there can be no acceptance of the goods (t); and that so long as the seller retains a lien on the goods, there can be no receiving of them within the statute by the vendee (u). A dealer in London, in the habit of delivering goods at a wharf in London, delivered a parcel at the wharf on a parol order, and the goods having been lost, it was held that the vendee could not recover (x). Again, where a verbal order was given to the agent of the vendor for goods, which were to remain in the possession of the vendor till called for, and the agent measured the goods, and set them apart, it was held that there was no acceptance within the statute (y).

(1) (Outwater v. Dodge and Green, 7 Cow. 85.)
(A) (See Outwater v. Dodge, 6 Wend. 397.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. viii. 48. [2]Id. x. 3. [3]Id. iii. 66. [4]Id. x. 138. [5]Id. v. 305.

*490 *In order to satisfy the statute there must be a delivery of the goods with intent to vest the right of possession in the vendee, and there must be an actual acceptance by the latter with intent to take possession as owner (z).

Where the law can pronounce on the facts of the case, whether they constitute an acceptance within the statute, the question is of course a question of law (a); but in other cases the question of law may depend upon the requested that it might remain in B.'s possession for a further time, at the expiration of which he promised to fetch it away, and pay the price; to this B. assented. The horse died before A. paid the price or took it away; held, that there was no acceptance of the horse within the meaning of the Statute of Frauds. Tempest v. Fitzgerald,[1] 3 B. & A. 680. A horse was sold by verbal contract, but no time was fixed for the payment of the price. The horse was to remain with the vendors for twenty days, without any charge to the vendee; at that time the horse was sent to grass by the direction of vendee, and, by his desire, entered as the horse of one of the vendors. Held, that there was no acceptance of the horse by the vendee. Carter v. Toussaint,[2] 5 B. & A. 855. Where a vendee verbally agreed at a public market with the agent of the vendor to purchase twelve bushels of tares (then in vendor's possession, constituting part of a larger quantity in bulk), to remain in vendor's possession till called for, and the agent on his return home measured the twelve bushels, and set them apart for the vendor; held, that this did not amount to an acceptance by the latter, so as to take the case out of the statute. Howe v. Palmer,[3] 3 B. & A. 321.

(s) Hart v. Sattley, 3 Camp. 528, where it was held at Nisi Prius, that a delivery on a parol order to a carrier who had been in the habit of carrying goods from the vendor to the vendee, was a delivery to the vendee. See also Dutton v. Solomonson, 3 B. & P. 583; Dawes v. Peck, 8 T. R. 330; [and Mr. Howe's note to Hart v. Sattley.]

(t) Howe v. Palmer, 3 B. & A. 321; infra, note (y); Hanson v. Armitage,[4] 5 B. & A. 557.

(u) Baldney v. Parker,[5] 3 B. & C. 37; supra, 488. Carter v. Toussaint, 5 B. & A. 855; supra, note (r). And see Tempest v. Fitzgerald,[1] 3 B & A. 680; supra, note (r).

(x) Hanson v. Armitage,[4] 5 B. & A. 557.

(y) Howe v. Palmer,[3] 3 B. & A. 321. And see Astey v. Emery, 4 M. & S. 262. Anderson v. Hodgson, 5 Price, 630. Where goods bought abroad were delivered at a foreign port on board a ship chartered by the purchaser, it was held to be no acceptance. Acebal v. Levy,[6] 20 Bing. 376; 4 M. & S. 217.

(z) Phillips v. Bistolli,[7] 2 B. & C. 513. Bulk samples were sent by coach pursuant to contract, the defendant returned them as not answering the samples by which he bought; the jury found that they did answer the samples, but the Court held that there was no acceptance. Johnson v. Dodgson, 2 M. & W. 663. The use of more than was necessary for ascertaining the quality of goods does not amount to an acceptance. Elliott v. Thomas, 3 M. & W. 170.

Where the defendant ordered a machine to be made without stipulation as to price, and paid money on account when he saw it finished, admitted that it was made to order, requested the plaintiff to send it home, and afterwards (the maker having refused to deliver the machine without receiving the full amount, and having directed his attorney to proceed) said that he would endeavour to arrange if they would give him time, it was held to be a sufficient acceptance to enable the plaintiffs to recover for goods bargained and sold. Elliot v. Pybus,[8] 10 Bing. 512; 4 M. & S. 389.

A. employed B. to make a wagon, and before it was finished employed a workman to fix upon it some iron-work and a tilt, and it was held that this did not amount to an acceptance. Maberly v. Skeppard,[9] 10 Bing. 99. But per Tindal, C. J., it might have been otherwise if, at the time, the wagon had been finished.

(a) Vide Vol. I. tit. Law and Fact.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. v. 419. [2] Id. vii. 280. [3] Id. v. 303. [4] Id. vii. 191. [5] Id. ix. 16. [6] Id. xxv. 170. [7] Id. ix. 162. [8] Id. xxv. 222. [9] Id. xxv. 43.

conclusion of the jury, whether there has or not been a delivery and acceptance in point of fact (b) (1).

The detaining goods sent for approval, beyond a reasonabte time, affords a p resumption of acceptance (c).

Or giving something in earnest to bind the bargain, or in part payment.—The putting a shilling into the hand of the servant of the vendor, which is immediately returned, is not sufficient (d). Earnest.

Some note or memorandum.—It is sufficient if a contract can be collected from several different and separate documents, if they can be sufficiently connected (e). A bill of parcels, in which the vendor's name is printed, may be connected with a subsequent letter written by the vendor to the vendee (f). So an order for goods, written and signed by the vendor in a *book of the vendee's, but not naming the latter, may be connected with a letter written by the vendor to his agent, mentioning the name of the vendee (g); but where the letter, subsequently written by the vendee, recognized Note or memorandum. *491

(b) Blenkinsop v. Clayton,[1] 7 Taunt. 597. Where an article was sold at an auction, by the conditions of which the purchaser was to pay 30 per cent. on the price, on being declared the highest bidder, and the residue before the goods were removed, and an article was knocked down to A. as the highest bidder, and delivered to him immediately, and after it had remained in his hands for a few minutes, he said he had mistaken the price, and refused to keep it, it was held to be a question of fact for the jury whether there had been a delivery by the seller, and an acceptance by the buyer, with intent to transfer the right of possession. Phillips v. Bistolli,[2] 2 B. & C. 511. Chaplin v. Rogers, 1 East, 194. On an action for goods sold and delivered, the defendant, after a parol purchase of a stack of hay, sold part of it to a third person, by whom it was taken away without the vendor's approbation; it was left by Hotham, B. to the jury, to say whether there had been an acceptance by the defendant. After a verdict for the plaintiff, on a motion for a new trial, one ground of which was that the judge had left matter of law as a fact for the jury, a new trial was refused; and Lord Kenyon and the rest of the Court held that the specific finding by the jury, that there was an acceptance, put an end to the question of law. But what constitutes an acceptance is frequently a question of law. Thus in Hinde v. Whitehouse (7 East, 558) it was held, that the accepting of samples of sugar delivered as part of the property purchased at an auction, was a sufficient acceptance in point of law.

(c) Coleman v. Gibson, 1 Mo. & R. 168. (d) Blenkinsop v. Clayton,[1] 7 Taunt. 597.

(e) Infra, 493.

(f) Saunderson v. Jackson, 2 B. & P. 238; supra, 483. The purchaser of a hundred sacks of good English seconds flour, at 45*s.* a sack, wrote to the vendors as follows: "I hereby give you notice, that the corn you delivered to me in part performance of my contract with you for 100 sacks of good English seconds flour, at 45*s.* per sack, is of so bad a quality that I cannot sell it, or make it into saleable bread; the sacks of flour are at my shop, and you will send for them, otherwise I shall commence an action." To which the vendors answered by their attorney, "Messrs. L. and L. consider they have performed their contract with you as far as it has gone, and are ready to complete the remainder; and unless the flour is paid for at the expiration of one month, proceedings will be taken for the amount;" held, that a jury was warranted in concluding that the contract mentioned in the vendor's answer was the same as that particularized in the purchaser's letter, and that therefore the two writings constituted a sufficient memorandum of the contract, under the 17th sect. of the statute. Cobbold v. Caston,[3] 1 Bing. 399. And see Jackson v. Lowe, infra,[4] note (m). (g) Allen v. Bennett, 3 Taunt. 169.

(1) [Though a virtual or constructive delivery may be tantamount to an actual one, yet the circumstances, which are to be held tantamount, must be so strong and unequivocal as to leave no doubt of the intent of the parties.

An agreement with the vendor about the storage of goods, and the delivery by him of the export entry to the agent of the vendee, were held not to be sufficiently certain to amount to a constructive delivery or to afford an in licium of ownership. Bailey et al. v. Ogden, 3 Johns. 399. Where the defendant agreed to purchase of the plaintiff a quantity of bagging, after which he was told that it remained in the plaintiff's store, at his risk, whereupon he ordered and had some of it turned out, which he afterwards returned, and then refused to take any part of it—it was held that this was not a sufficient delivery within the statute. Jackson v. Watts, 1 M'Cord, 288. If a contract for the sale of goods, to be delivered within a certain time, be within the statute,—a delivery and acceptance of a part of the goods, after the expiration of the stipulated time, will not take the contract out of the statute as to the remainder. Semb. Damon v. Osborn, 1 Pick. 480.

If the vendor give the vendee an order on a third person, who has possession of the goods, for their delivery, it is sufficient to take the case out of the statute. Hollingsworth v. Napier, 3 Caines' Rep. 185. See also Wilkes v. Ferris, 5 Johns. 335.

Where, on a sale of cattle no earnest money was paid, nor any memorandum in writing made, and the cattle were to remain in the vendor's possession, at the vendee's risk, until he called for them, and the vendee afterwards came and took away the cattle, without saying anything to the vendor—it was held that there was a sufficient delivery within the statute. Vincent v. Germond, 11 Johns. 283.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 230. [2]Id. ix. 162. [3]Id. viii. 358. [4]Id. viii. 222.

the order, but at the same time insisted that the terms of it had not been performed, inasmuch as the goods had not been delivered in time, it was held that it could not establish a previous defective memorandum (h). And it was held that parol evidence was inadmissible to show that there had been no stipulation as to time (i) (A) (1).

A material alteration of a written agreement by an oral one, substituting another day as the last of a period within which goods were to be delivered, is not binding (k).

Bargain. If the said bargain be made or signed.—It has been held, that the word bargain, as used in this clause, does not render so strict a statement of the constituent and essential members of the contract necessary, as the word agreement does under the fourth section: a memorandum is sufficient to bind the defendant as the vendee, although it does not express the consideration for the promise (l), except by implication from the promise itself: but the note must express the names of both the contracting parties, and the price (m); and therefore a note signed by the vendor of goods, but not mentioning the buyer's name, is insufficient (n).

*492

Signed by the parties. Made or signed (o) by the parties.*—A bill of parcels, in which the vendor's name is printed, is, it seems, a sufficient making or signing to bind

(h) Cooper v. Smith, 15 East, 103. So where the letter stated the goods had not arrived, and that if they did not arrive in a few days, the defendant (the alleged vendee) must get some elsewhere. Richards v. Porter,[1] 6 B. & C. 437. See Jackson v. Lowe,[2] 1 Bing. 9.

(i) Cooper v. Smith, 15 East, 103.

(k) Stead v. Dawber, 2 P. & D. 447. Where the written contract stated a time and place for the delivery of goods, held that an alteration as to the time, to be binding, must be in writing. Marshall v. Lynn, 6 M. & W. 109; overruling Cuff v. Penn, 1 M. & Selw. 21.

(l) Egerton v. Matthews, 6 East, 307, and Mr. Day's note. But there the consideration did appear by necessary inference. Vide supra, 483.

(m) A memorandum given by the buyer assenting to take a horse if it turned out to be of the age represented, but which was silent as to price; held insufficient. Elmore v. Kingscote,[3] 5 B. & C. 583. In the case of Kain v. Old,[4] 2 B. & C. 627, which was one of contract for the sale of a ship, the Court seem to have been of opinion that the contract was imperfect, because it did not mention the price, and that the defect was not supplied by any extrinsic proof; for though the bill of sale mentioned the price, it did not mention any previous contract or agreement. In an action by the vendee of goods against the vendor, for breach of contract, a letter written by the plaintiff stating the terms of contract, coupled with an answer written by the defendant's attorney, insisting that the contract has been performed pro tanto, is sufficient evidence of the contract. Jackson v. Lowe,[2] 1 Bing. 9.

It seems, however, that the rule as to price is subject to this distinction and question, viz.: whether the omission be according to the intention of the parties to stipulate for a reasonable price, or be an imperfection in the statement of the contract, which in the latter case would be insufficient, whilst in the former, an intention to contract for a reasonable price may be presumed. Hoadley v. M'Laine,[5] 10 Bing. 482; 4 M. & S. 340. In Acebel v. Levy,[6] 10 Bing. 382, a further distinction was made in the latter case, between an executed and an executory contract; this, however, does not seem to be warranted by Hoadley v. M'Laine.

(n) Champion v. Plummer, 1 N. R. 252; vide supra, 483.

(o) A signature in pencil is, it seems, sufficient. Geary v. Physic,[7] 5 B. & C. 234. Note, that that was the case of an indorsement of a bill of exchange.

(A) (A note or memorandum of sale within the Statute of Frauds and Perjuries, must state expressly, or by reference, the subject of sale, the terms and the parties with such certainty as to furnish evidence of a complete agreement. Nichols v. Johnson, 10 Day, 192.)

(1) [A memorandum of a contract for the sale of a certain number of bales of cotton, at a certain price per pound, was held to be sufficient, though it did not specify the weight of the bales, nor refer to any invoice by which the weight might be ascertained. Penniman v. Hartshorn & al. 13 Mass. Rep. 87. Where a common bill of parcels is given, at or after the purchase of goods, it does not preclude either party from resorting to other evidence to prove the contract. Bradford v. Manly, 13 Mass. Rep. 133. If after a parol contract for the sale of goods, the vendor deliver to the vendee a bill of parcels, it will be a sufficient memorandum in writing to take the case out of the statute—and if the contract originally made differ from that proved by the bill of parcels, it will be of no effect. Whitwell & al. v. Wyer & al. 11 Mass. Rep. 6. The form of the memorandum is not material; but it must state the contract with reasonable certainty, so that the substance of it can be understood from the writing itself, without recourse to parol proof. Bailey & al. v. Ogden, 3 Johns. 399.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiii. 229. [2] Id. viii. 222. [3] Id. xii. 327. [4] Id. ix. 205. [5] Id. xxv. 208. [6] Id. xxv. 170. [7] Id. xi. 213.

the vendor (p), as a signing by him. But at all events a letter subsequently written to the vendee, admitting a contract, may be connected with the bill of parcels, to take the case out of the statute (q). So in Schneider v. Norris, (r), where the name of the vendor (the defendant) in the bill of parcels was printed, but the defendant had written the vendee's name upon it, it was held to be a sufficient signature. An agreement, beginning "I, A. B. agree to sell," although not otherwise signed by the party, is sufficient to bind the vendor (s) (1) (A).

By the parties to be charged.—It is sufficient if the memorandum be signed by the defendant, the vendor; though it was not signed by the plaintiff, the vendee; and although it could not have been enforced against the latter (t) (2). Signature.

A memorandum signed only with the initials of the vendor, the name of the vendor nowhere appearing, is not sufficient (u).

Or their agents thereunto lawfully authorized.—A broker is an agent for both parties, and they are bound by the contract which he makes, of which the bought-and-sold notes and his book are evidence (v) (B). The authority of an agent who makes a contract in writing may be conferred (x) or ratified (y) orally. By agent.

In the case of sales by auction, it seems to be now settled that the auctioneer is an agent lawfully authorized by the buyer to sign a contract for him (z), though it is otherwise where the auctioneer himself brings the action (a). The authority in such case is given by bidding aloud; and (p) Saunderson v. Jackson, 2 B. & P. 238. Note, in this case a letter referring to the contract was afterwards written by the vendor to the vendee; and note also, that the vendee's name appeared in the bill of parcels. See 1 N. R. 154.

(q) Ibid. In Schneider v. Norris, 2 M. & S. 286, Dampier, J. intimated that in the case of Saunderson v. Jackson, the case was taken out of the operation of the statute by the subsequent letter only.

(r) 2 M. & S. 286. (s) Knight v. Crockford, 1 Esp. C. 190.

(t) Allen v. Bennett, 3 Taunt. 169; supra, 485.

(u) Jacob v. Kirk, 2 M. & R. 221.

(v) Heyman v. Neale, 2 Camp. 337; Rucker v. Cammeyer, 1 Esp. C. 105; [Merrill v. Mason, 12 Johns. 102. 14 ib. 484.] Copies of an unsigned entry in the broker's book delivered to each party, held sufficient. Goom v. Aflalo,[1] 6 B. & Cr. 117. Vide infra, 493, and tit. VENDOR AND VENDEE.

(x) Acabel v. Levy,[2] 10 Bing. 378. (y) Maclean v. Dunn,[3] 4 Bing. 722.

(z) Emmerson v. Heelis, 2 Taunt. 38; Hinde v. Whitehouse, 7 East, 558; Simon v. Motivos, 1 Bl. 599; Kenworthy v. Schofield,[4] 2 B. & C. 945; Phillimore v. Barry, 1 Camp. 513. But where it was agreed between the owner of goods and his creditor that the price of goods bought by the latter should be set against the debt, it was held that the creditor was not bound by the printed conditions of sale, that purchasers should pay part of the price at the sale, and the rest on delivery. Bartlett v. Purnell,[5] 4 Ad. & Ell. 792. It is sufficient if the agent's name appear in the contract; as where the auctioneer signs the name of an agent employed to purchase lands. Kemesy v. Proctor, 1 J. & W. 350; White v. Proctor, 4 Taunt. 209.

(a) Where an auctioneer wrote down the defendant's name, by his authority, opposite to the lot purchased; held, that in an action brought in the name of the auctioneer, the entry in such book was not sufficient to take the case out of the statute. Farebrother v. Simmons,[6] 5 B. & A. 333. {Davis v. Robertson, 1 Rep. Com. Ct. 71. M'Comb v. Wright, 4 Johns. Ch. Rep. 659.}

(1) [An entry made by the vendor, in a memorandum book, of the name of the vendee, and of the terms of the contract, which was read to the vendee's agent who made purchase, and assented to by him as correct, was held to be insufficient—not being signed by the party to be charged, or by his agent. Bailey et al. v. Ogden, 3 Johns. 399. Query, whether the vendor is bound by such memorandum so that the vendee could enforce the contract? Ibid. It is not a valid objection that the name of the party to be charged is written above the body of the memorandum. Penniman v. Hartshorn et al. 13 Mass. Rep. 87. A memorandum of a contract written by the broker employed to make the purchase, with a lead pencil, in his memorandum book, in the presence of the vendor—the names of the vendor and vendee, and the terms of the purchase, being in the body of the memorandum, but not subscribed by the parties—was held to be sufficient. Merrit & al. v. Clason, 12 Johns. 102—affirmed on error, 14 Johns. 484.]

(A) (See Sewall v. Fitch, 8 Cow. 215.)

(2) [Penniman v. Hartshorn & al. per Parker, C. J. 13 Mass. Rep. 62. Merritt & al. v. Clason, 12 Johns. 102. 14 ib. 484. Douglas v. Spears, 2 Nott & M'Cord, 207, acc. See Weightman v. Caldwell, 4 Wheat. 85.]

(B) (Russell v. Nicoll, 3 Wend. 112.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiii. 116. [2]Id. xxv. 170. [3]Id. xv. 129. [4]Id. ix. 286. [5]Id. xxxi. 180. [6]Id. vii. 120.

where the name of the purchaser of different lots is written by the auctioneer opposite to the different articles for which the purchaser is the highest bidder, on the sale-bill, the memorandum is sufficient to satisfy the *493 *statute (b) (1). So where the auctioneer wrote the initials of the agent of the buyer's name, together with the prices, opposite to the lots purchased, in the printed catalogue, and the principal afterwards, in a letter to the agent, recognized the purchase (c). But where the auctioneer signs the name of a buyer on a mere catalogue of the goods, which is neither connected with nor refers to the conditions of sale, which are read at the time of sale, it seems that this is not a memorandum of a contract of sale according to those conditions (d). A broker is the agent of both parties. Where regular bought-and-sold notes have been made out, they are the proper evidence of the contract (e). And the bought note alone is evidence of the contract for the purchaser (f). If the bought-and-sold notes materially differ (g), there is no contract (h). If no bought-and-sold notes have been made out, the broker's book signed by him will be evidence of the contract (i).

Where both the parties had agreed that A. B., a broker, should manage a sale between them, for which they were in treaty, and the vendee some days afterwards informed A. B. that he had made the bargain, and desired him to put down the terms, which A. B. accordingly did, and then sent a sale-note to the vendor, and the vendee did not return the note, but in a conversation with A. B. some days afterwards regretted that she had sold the goods, it was held to be evidence to the jury of authority from the vendor to A. B. (k). But although the owner has authorized a broker to sell, and the latter has made a verbal contract with the vendee, the owner may revoke his authority to the broker at any time before the sale-note is made out (l).

Where the agent of the vendor wrote the note in the vendor's order-book, in the presence of the vendee, although he afterwards, at the desire of the vendee, the defendant, read it over to him, it was held that the signature was not sufficient (m) (A); and it has been held, that one of the contracting parties could not be considered as the agent of the other, although the other overlooked him, and gave him directions as to the terms (n). Where the traveller of the vendor having, at a customer's request, signed his own name to the memorandum of the items ordered in his own book, it was

(b) Emmerson v. Heelis, 2 Taunt. 38; Hinde v. Whitehouse, 7 East, 558; Simon v. Motivos, 1 Bl. 599.
(c) Phillimore v. Barry, 1 Camp. 513.
(d) Hinde v. Whitehouse, 7 East, 558; Kenworthy v. Schofield,[1] 2 B. & C. 945. And see Utterton v. Robbins,[2] 1 A & E. 423.
(e) Thornton v. Meux,[3] M. & M. 43; Goom v. Aflalo,[4] 6 B. & C. 117.
(f) Hawes v. Forster, 1 M. & R. 368. If the vendor insists on a variance he must produce the sold note. But see Smith v. Sparrow,[5] 2 C. & P. 544.
(g) Where the broker in the bought-and-sold notes described the sellers' firm as A., B. and C., but the firm had in fact unknown to the broker been changed to A., D. and E., it was held that the latter might sue, the defendant suffering no prejudice by the mistake, and there being some evidence to show that the defendant recognized the subsistence of the contract. Michael v. Lapage,[6] Holt's C. 253.
(h) Grant v. Fletcher, 5 B. & C. 436; Thornton v. Meux, M. & M. 43; Bold v. Rayner, 1 M. & W. 343.
(i) Grant v. Fletcher,[7] 5 B. & C. 436; Henderson v. Barnwall, 1 Y. & J. 387.
(k) Chapman v. Partridge, 5 Esp. C. 256. Cor. Mansfield, C. J.
(l) Farmer v. Robinson, 2 Camp. 339, n. (m) Cooper v. Smith, 15 East, 103.
(n) Wright v. Dannah, 2 Camp. 303.

(1) {The original memorandum made by the auctioneer must be produced, if in existence: A copy of it is not evidence. Davis v. Robertson, 1 Rep. Con. Ct. 71.}
(A) (A memorandum kept by a clerk of a vendor, who sells goods at auction, of the articles sold, and the prices bid for them, is a sufficient note in writing to bind the vendee. Frost v. Hill, 3 Wend. 386.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ix. 286. [2]Id. xxviii. 111. [3]Id. xxii. 243. [4]Id. xiii. 116. [5]Id. xii. 253. [6]Id. iii. 91. [7]Id. ii. 265.

held that, in the absence of any evidence of his being the agent of the vendor, it was not sufficient to bind him (o).

Where the defendant, a foreigner, carried on business in this country by an agent, who transacted the business in his own name, it was held, that the defendant having authorized the agent to deal for him in that name, it did not lie in his mouth to deny that the agent's name inserted by the *broker in the sold-note was his own name of business, and that the statute, *494 therefore, was sufficiently complied with; and that he remained liable on the agent's contracts until notice given to the world of his revocation of the authority (p).

It was held also, that it was not competent to him to show that in the particular trade, by custom, a party may reject the undisclosed principal, and look to the agent for the completion of the contract (q).

FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCE.

According to the general rule of law, a man may not only dispose of his own property as he chooses, where there are no claims which ought in justice to be satisfied out of it, but even where such claims exist he may still elect which of his creditors he will satisfy in preference to others, who have not by any legal process acquired any lien (r) upon such property, or he may dispose of it by way of exchange or sale.

Thus far the law permits; but it would be contrary to the first principles of natural justice and considerations of policy and convenience to allow a debtor to defeat just claims, either by any voluntary transfer of his property by way of gift, or on a secret trust for his own use. And therefore the question between an execution creditor and one who claims as assignee from the debtor, usually is, whether the transfer was fraudulent as against creditors or purchasers. Fraud in such cases may be either an inference of law from the facts, or it may be a conclusion of fact for the jury.

Where the fraud can be collected from the instrument itself, or from the deed coupled with extrinsic circumstances, without any finding by the jury as to the intention of the party transferring, it is a question of law arising upon the facts; but when it depends on the real intention of the parties, that intention is a question of fact for the jury (A). Question of law, when.

A voluntary conveyance of land without valuable consideration is fraudulent and void, as against a subsequent purchaser, under the stat. 27 Eliz. c. 4, without any finding of a fraudulent intention (s), and though he had notice of the prior conveyance (B).

(o) Graham v. Musson,[1] 5 Bing. N. C. 603.

(p) Trueman v. Loder, 3 P. & D. 267. (q) Ibid.

(r) See Holbird v. Anderson, 5 T. B. 236; Estwicke v. Caillaud, 5 T. R. 240; Nunn v. Wilsmore, 8 T. R. 521; Pickstock v. Lyster, 3 M. & S. 371; Meux v. Howell, 4 East, 1. [See Sturtevant v. Ballard, 9 Johns. 337. Smith v. Niel, 1 Hawks, 341.]

(s) Doe d. Otley v. Manning, 9 East, 59, where the authorities on this subject are collected; and see House v. Bullock, 5 Co. 60. But although a purchaser for value may defeat a mere voluntary settlement, even where the purchaser had notice; yet it may be a question whether, considering the inadequacy of the price paid, the second conveyance was not in effect also a voluntary settlement contrived for the purpose of getting rid of the first. Doe d. Parry v. James, 16 East, 212. In 1772, a fourth part of an advowson was conveyed in consideration of 20*s.*; held, that it was not to be deemed a mere formal sum, but that, coupled with "faithful service," might have been at the time an adequate consideration, and must prevail against a

(A) (Where it was attempted to impeach a conveyance on the ground of fraud, evidence that the grantor made other conveyances about the same time, which were fraudulent, was held to be admissible to prove his fraudulent design in the case on trial. But it would not affect the grantee, unless followed up by evidence of his participation in some way in the fraud. Howe v. Read, 3 Fairfield, 515. See also Jackson v. Zimmerman, 12 Wend. 299.)

(B) (A voluntary conveyance, not actually fraudulent as relates to the grantee, may become valid by

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxxv. 243.

But the question under the stat. 13 Eliz. c. 5 (t), is usually one of fact for *495 *the jury, who are to decide on the question of intention, whether the act was a bonâ fide transaction, or was a trick and contrivance to defraud creditors (A).

Proof of fraud, continuing possession.

It has been held, that the absolute transfer of personal chattels without a delivery of possession, is not merely evidence of fraud, but is actually void for fraud (u) (B); and therefore where a creditor took an absolute bill subsequent purchaser. Gully v. Bp. of Exeter,[1] 5 Bing. 171; and 2 M. & P. 266. A party tenant for life, with power of jointuring, executed a settlement to trustees, vesting in them a term for securing pin-money to the wife for his life, and a jointure after his death, and by a separate deed covenanted not to sell or encumber the premises, or that if he should, or attempted to do so, that then the trustees might receive the rents, &c., and apply them for the maintenance of the wife and children, as they should think fit; the tenant for life afterwards granted certain redeemable annuities for valuable consideration, charged upon the same premises; held, that as against such incumbrances, the covenant was fraudulent and void. Phipps v. Ld. Ennismore, 4 Russ. 131.

(t) This stat. recites, that feoffments, gifts, grants, alienations, conveyances, bonds, suits, judgments and executions, have been contrived of malice, fraud, covin, collusion, &c. to delay, hinder or defraud, creditors and others of their just and lawful actions, suits, debts, accounts, damages, &c. enacts that every feoffment, &c. of lands, tenements, hereditaments, goods and chattels, or any of them, by writing or otherwise, and all and every bond, suit, judgment and execution made for any intent or purpose before declared and expressed, shall be, as against that person, his heirs, successors, executors, &c. whose actions, suits, &c. are or might be in any wise disturbed, hindered, delayed or defrauded, utterly void. By sec. 6, the Act is not to extend to any estate or interest in lands, &c. on good consideration, and bona fide lawfully conveyed to any person, &c. not having notice of such covin, &c. A conveyance not fraudulent within this statute, may yet be void in case of bankruptcy. Semble, that a fraudulent assignment within the meaning of the statute 13 Eliz. c. 5, in reality is none at all; a mere formal transfer, executed not to give the alienee the property, but only to induce a belief that it is vested in him, that he may hold it in trust for the debtor. Pickstock v. Lyster, 3 M. & S. 371. In all cases, however, the question of fraud must be decided by reference to the motives of the party making the deed of assignment. Nunn v. Wilsmore, 8 T. R. 521. A secret transfer is always a badge of fraud. Mace v. Cammel, Lofft, 782. A conveyance by a bill of sale is good against the party executing it, and against his assignees, although it be void as to third persons. Robinson v. M'Donnell, 2 B. & A. 134.

(u) Edwards v. Harben, 2 T. R. 587. Bamford v. Baron, cited in the note. Reid v. Blades,[2] 5 Taunt. 212; where it was held that a conveyance of chattels, unaccompanied by possession, was void, although the same instrument contained a valid mortgage of leasehold buildings in which the chattels were situated.

---

matter ex post facto, as by a purchase for valuable consideration, or by the marriage of the grantee, if a feme: marriage, if the conveyance forms an inducement thereto, renders the conveyance valid not only as against a subsequent purchaser, but against the creditors of the grantor. Wood v. Jackson, 8 Wend. 9. If in the purchase of land, the consideration money be advanced by the husband and a deed taken in the name of the wife, the transaction will in the first instance be deemed an advancement to the wife; but it is open to explanation, and if it be shown that the object of the husband was to defraud creditors, he will be deemed to have a resulting interest in the premises, which may be sold by execution. Guthrie v. Gardner, 19 Wend. 414. A voluntary conveyance is a deed without any valuable consideration. If anything valuable passes between the parties, it is a purchase; and it was accordingly holden that a bond executed by a son to his parent for $500, with interest annually, if demanded, was a valuable consideration, and would sustain a conveyance of land as a purchase; the securing to the grantor an annuity or rent equal to the legal interest of the bond being deemed sufficient, even though it had been the intention or expectation of the parties that the principal of the bond should not be exacted. Jackson v. Peck, 4 Wend. 300. Want of possession of real estate is not, as it is of personal estate, a presumption of fraud. Pettiplace v. Sayles, 4 Mason's C. C. R. 312.)

(A) (See Vernon v. Morton, 8 Dana, 263. Where a sale of property under an execution is brought about by the defendant, in concert with others, with the avowed object of defeating the interest of a third person in such property, such sale will be deemed fraudulent and void, although the execution be issued on a valid and unsatisfied judgment. Crury v. Sprague, 12 Wend. 41.)

(B) (Every conveyance of personal chattels in the possession, or under the control of the vendor, whether absolute or conditional, is presumed to be fraudulent and void against creditors and subsequent purchasers, unless the conveyance is accompanied by an immediate delivery of the goods, and followed by an actual and continued change of possession. Randall v. Cook, 17 Wend. 53. But possession by a vendor of personal property after a transfer by bill of sale or assignment, though the conveyance be absolute in its terms, or possession by a mortgagor after forfeiture, is only prima facie evidence of fraud, and not conclusive; the possession may be explained, and if the transaction be shown to have been upon sufficient consideration, and bona fide, that is, without any intent to delay, hinder or defraud creditors or others, the conveyance is valid. Hall v. Tuttle, 8 Wend. 375. Barrow v. Paxton, 5 John. R. 258. Beals v. Guernsey, 8 John. R. 446. Butts v. Smartwood, 2 Cow. 431. Merely leaving property levied upon in the possession of the defendant in the execution, though with the plaintiff's consent, is not per se fraudulent, either as against subsequent creditors or purchasers. Rew v. Barber, 3 Cow. 272. Actual possession is not necessary to a transfer of personal property, nor is the want of it even an indicium of fraud, where, from circumstances, it cannot be of sale of the debtor's goods, but left the debtor in possession, and after his death took possession of his goods, it was held that he was liable as executor de son tort (x). So if the possession taken be merely colourable, as where a creditor took possession on the 4th of April of the goods of a publican under a bill of sale, and the person in possession allowed the publican to serve out liquors and receive money as usual till the next day, when the goods were seized under an execution (y). So where the vendor remains jointly in possession with the servant of the vendee, the assignment is fraudulent and void against creditors (z). This however is a legal presumption, which is not absolutely conclusive as to fraud. The law is exceedingly jealous in cases where, notwithstanding an absolute sale, the former owner is permitted to retain the possession, especially where the transaction is of a secret nature. And justly so; for as, in the ordinary course of such dealings, a change of possession accompanies the transfer, the deviation naturally induces a suspicion of some improper practice or contrivance. And in the next place, such secret dealings are eminently calculated to deceive creditors, who are induced to give credit or to sue by the visible possession of property. Still the law does not prohibit a purchaser from permitting the owner from retaining possession; and in strictness it seems that such a transaction, though it may furnish strong evidence, yet still is not conclusive as to fraud. In the case of Latimer v. Batson (a),

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xv. 408. [2] Id. i. 81.

(x) Edwards v. Harben, 2 T. R. 587.

(y) Paget v. Perchard, 1 Esp. C. 205. [And Mr. Day's note.]

(z) Wordall v. Smith, 1 Camp. 333, per Lord Ellenborough. To defeat the execution by a bill of sale, there must appear to have been a bona fide substantial change of possession. It is a mere mockery to put in another person to take possession conjointly with the former owner of the goods; there must be an exclusive possession under the assignment, or it is fraudulent and void as against creditors. And see Cadogan v. Kennett, Cowp. 432. Jarman v. Woollaton, 3 T. R. 618. Darley v. Smith, 8 T. R. 82.

(a) 4 B. & C. 652.[1] So in the case of Eastwood v. Brown,[2] 1 Ry. & M. 312, where there was an assignment of property without any change of possession, Abbott, L. C. J. left it to the jury to say whether it was done with intent to defeat or delay creditors.

---

obtained. Possession of goods at sea by the master, is the possession of whosoever is, or may become the owner of them. United States v. The Delaware Ins. Co. 4 Wash. C. C. R. 418. And where the parties do not stand in the relation of debtor and creditor, and the object is not to defeat creditors, goods may be left in the hands of the original owner, without its being considered fraudulent. M'Instry v. Tanner, 9 John. R. 135. [The doctrine that the vendor's remaining in possession, after an absolute immediate conveyance of chattels, is conclusive evidence of fraud, or fraud per se, has been adopted, or strongly countenanced by the Supreme Court of the United States, and the courts of Virginia, Kentucky, and Pennsylvania. Hamilton v. Russell, 1 Cranch, 309. Alexander v. Deneale, 2 Munf. 341. Thomas v. Soper, 5 Munf. 28. Fitzhugh v. Anderson & al. 2 Hen. & Mun. 289. Baylor v. Smithers, 1 Littell's Rep. 112. Clow v. Woods, 5 Serg. & R. 278. Dawes v. Cope, 4 Binney, 258. {Babb v. Clemson, 10 Serg. & R. 419. Martin v. Mathiot, 14 Serg. & R. 214.} See also Croft v. Arthur, 4 Desauss. 229, in the Court of Chancery in South Carolina.] See also Brummel v. Scockton, 3 Dana, 134; Williamson v. Furley, Gilm. 15. And where a wife is living separately from her husband, property lent or intrusted to her by a friend or stranger, is not in his possession within the statute. Chiles v. Bernard's Ex'rs, 3 Dana, 95. [But possession by the vendor is held, in Massachusetts, New Hampshire, North Carolina, {Connecticut,} to be only strong prima facie evidence of fraud, and legally susceptible of an explanation consistent with good faith. Brooks v. Powers, 15 Mass. Rep. 247. Bartlett v. Williams, 1 Pick. 295. Badlam v. Tucker & al. 1 Pick. 399. New England Marine Ins. Co. v. Chandler & Trustee, 16 Mass. Rep. 279. {Wheeler v. Train, 3 Pick. Rep. 255.} Haven v. Low, 2 N. Hamp. Rep. 13; Trotter v. Howard, 1 Hawkes, 320. Cox v. Jackson, 1 Hayw. 423. {Burrows v. Stoddard, 3 Con. Rep. 160}.] See also Callen v. Thompson, 3 Yerger, 475. Young v. Pate, 4 Yerger, 164. Howell v. Elliott, 1 Dev. 76. Hornbeck v. Vannetre, 9 Ohio R. 153. Talcott v. Wilcox, 9 Day, 134. But the fact that a tenant is in open possession of stock and farming utensils belonging to his landlord, is not a badge of fraud, the possession of the tenant being the possession of the landlord, furnishes no evidence that the former is the owner of the property. Ibid. [In case of a mortgage of chattels, the mortgagor's remaining in possession is held not to be necessarily fraudulent. Haven v. Low, and Barrow v. Paxton, ubi sup. Cortelyou v. Lansing, 2 Caines' Cas. in Error, 206. Bissell v. Hopkins, 3 Cow. 166. Waybornes v. Hill, 1 Wash. 177. Holmes & al. v. Crane, 2 Pick. 607. {Catten v. Smith, 4 Conn. Rep. 450.} Sed Vide Clow v. Woods, ubi sup. contra.

Where a deed, absolute on its face, is made of chattels, a defeasance made at the same time, but separate from it, shall not operate as a mortgage to the prejudice of third persons. Gaither v. Mumford, 2 Taylor, 167. See also Gorham v. Herrick, 2 Greenleaf, 87].)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. x. 432. [2]Id. xxi. 446.

the goods of the Duke *of Marlborough were sold by the sheriff under an execution to the judgment creditor, who sold the goods to the plaintiff, who put a man into possession; the goods remained in the Duke's mansion, and were used by him as before the execution, but the circumstance of the execution was notorious in the neighbourhood; the sheriff again seized the goods under an execution against the goods of the Duke at the suit of another creditor. On an action brought against the sheriff, it was left by the learned Judge to the jury to say whether the sale to B. was a bonâ fide sale, for money paid by the plaintiff, and that if it was, he was entitled to the verdict, but that if the money was in reality paid by the Duke, and the sale to the plaintiff was colourable, they should find for the defendant. The jury found for the plaintiff; and the Court afterwards held that the jury were properly directed to give their verdict for the plaintiff, or the defendant, as they should find that the transaction was fair or fraudulent.

In Twyne's case (b) the continuance of the vendor's possession was considered to be merely evidence of fraud. There, A. being indebted to B. and also to C. who brought his action, made a secret conveyance of his goods to B., but continued in possession, and the conveyance was held to be fraudulent within the Act (c): 1st, because the gift was general; 2dly, because the donor continued in possession of the goods and used them as his own; and 3dly, because it was made pending the writ (d): and in the law of Nisi Prius (e) it is laid down that the donor's continuance in possession is not always a mark of fraud, as where a donee lends his donor money to buy goods, and at the same time takes the bill of sale of them for securing the money (f). Great stress is always laid on the notoriety of the circumstances under which the party retains the possession: where it is known that he is not the real owner, his possession cannot mislead (g).

In the case of Kidd v. Rawlinson (h), K., the plaintiff, bought the *497 goods *of A. from the sheriff, who sold publicly under an execution against A. (K. not being a creditor), and afterwards allowed A. (being a publican),

(b) 3 Rep. 80. (c) 13 Eliz. c. 5.

(d) B. N. P. 258. And it was said that it was not within the proviso of the Act; for although made on good consideration, it was not made bona fide.

(e) B. N. P. 258, cites Ca. R. B. 287.

(f) Meggot v. Mills, 1 Ld. Raym. 286; where Lord Holt said, that if the goods had been assigned to any other creditor, the keeping possession of them would have made the bill of sale fraudulent as to other creditors; but that since the agreement was originally made for securing the money lent, it was good and honest.

(g) Latimer v. Batson,[1] 4 B. & C. 652; Leonard v. Baker, 1 M. & S. 251. Watkins v. Birch, 4 Taunt. 823. In the case of Jezeph v. Ingram,[2] 8 Taunt. 838, the sheriff having seized the property of Newman, a farmer, under a fi. fa., Dunk, a creditor of Newman's, advanced upwards of 400*l.* for Newman, to liberate the goods, and took an assignment from Newman of the lease and stock, to enable him to take possession of the farm and discharge the sum advanced. Newman continued to reside on the premises, but Dunk managed the farm, and it was notorious in the neighbourhood that he had the management, though Newman continued to do some joint acts of ownership. In an action against the sheriff for a false return at the suit of a subsequent judgment creditor after a verdict for the plaintiff, Gibbs, C. J., on a motion for a new trial, admitted the general principle contended for by the plaintiff, that if a man sell goods and continue in possession, the sale was void, but thought the present case was distinguishable. A new trial was granted, and evidence was given that Dunk had paid all rates and taxes for the farm; had purchased stock; that Newman, as well as Dunk, had attended the markets; given orders respecting the cultivation of the farm; paid rents and taxes, and managed the business, but that Dunk had received all the proceeds, though he had not made all the payments; the jury, with the approbation of Dallas, J., found a verdict for the defendant, against which the plaintiff did not move.

(h) 1 B. & P. 59, cor. Lord Eldon. So if the goods of A. be sold under a fi. fa. to B. bona fide on a valuable consideration, and B. permit A. to remain in possession, on condition that he shall deliver over to B. the product from the sale of goods, the possession will not render the execution fraudulent; and on a subsequent bankruptcy the goods will not pass to the assignees of A. (Cole v. Davies, 1 Ld. Raym. 724.) So where a creditor took the goods of the debtor, who had confessed a judgment, in execution, and bought them at a public auction, and then let them to the debtor for rent actually paid. Watkins v. Birch, 4 Taunt. 823. And a bill of sale, although unaccompanied by possession, is valid against a creditor with whose knowledge and assent it was given. Brown v. Parry, 1 Taunt. 381.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. x. 432. [2]Id. iv. 303.

to remain in possession, and afterwards A. made a bill of sale of the goods to R. the defendant, who took possession; the jury negatived any intention on the part of the plaintiff to defeat any execution by any creditor of A., and the Court afterwards held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. The case was distinguished from Twyne's by two circumstances, the notoriety and publicity of the sale, and the fact that K. the purchaser was not a creditor; and it was assimilated to the case in Buller's Nisi Prius, above referred to, and said that K. might be considered to have lent the money to A. and to have taken the bill of sale as a security.

It is to be observed, also, that there is another circumstance in the above case (which does not appear to have been adverted to) which very materially distinguishes it from Twyne's, viz. that the sale was not made by the party himself, but by the sheriff. The object of the statute was to prevent covinous and fraudulent sales by the owner to the prejudice of creditors, and not, as it seems, to sales made by a third person, as a sheriff under an execution, or a landlord under a distress, without proof of some fraud or collusion on the part of the owner, which in effect makes such a sale his own act. Where the sale is made bonâ fide by a third person, the subsequent possession by the debtor will not render it fraudulent, for the Act was not intended to prevent the legal owner of goods from allowing another person to keep possession of them.

Where a trustee, under an assignment by a tenant, for the benefit of creditors, bought the goods of the tenant out of the trust funds, under a sale by the landlord on a distress for rent, and afterwards allowed the tenant to continue in possession, it was held, in the absence of any evidence that the sale was colourable and fraudulent, that the goods were protected from an execution by a judgment creditor; and Lord Ellenborough said that the doctrine of possession did not apply to a case of conveyance, not by the party himself, but by a third person (i).

But a possession by the vendor, which follows and accompanies the deed, where the sale is not to take place immediately, but at a future specified time, or on a particular condition, does not avoid the transfer (k). But in *such cases, although the want of possession may cease to be a badge and *498 evidence of fraud, yet the transaction is still liable to be impeached by other evidence of fraud, and it is particularly open to the inquiry, whether the interposing a delay between the execution of the transfer, and the time of taking possession, may not be part of the fraudulent contrivance (A).

(i) Guthrie v. Wood,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 367. So, where the goods of a debtor were sold publicly by trustees under an assignment for the benefit of creditors, and the son of the wife of the debtor purchased the goods, and removed part, but left the rest in the possession of his mother, and for her accommodation, it was held that these were protected against an execution by a judgment-creditor, who had notice of the assignment. Leonard v. Baker, 1 M. & S. 251 (1).

(k) Per Curiam, Edwards v. Harben, 2 T. R. 587; where the distinction between possession on an absolute sale, and possession under a conditional sale, was considered as having been long and decidedly established. And Stone v. Grubham, 2 Bulstrode, 218, was referred to, and Bucknal v. Roiston, Pr. in Ch. 287; and also the following cases, Ld. Cadogan v. Kennett, Cowp. 432, Haslington v. Gill, Trin. 24 Geo. 3, B. R., were cited to show that the bill of sale is not fraudulent for want of possession, where possession has followed the deed, although there was no immediate possession by the assignee. See also Estwick v. Caillaud, 5 T. R. 420; Manton v. Moor, 7 T. R. 67; and supra, tit. BANKRUPTCY.

(1) {Latimer v. Batson,[2] 7 Dowl. & Ryl. 106. See Jezeph v. Ingram,[3] 8 Taunt. 838. 1 J. B. Moore, 189. Armstrong v. Baldock, Esq. Gow's N. P. Rep. 33, and the Reporter's note.}

(A) (A voluntary conveyance is not void as against creditors, on the ground that the grantor at the time of conveyance was indebted, if it be shown that the residue of the real estate of the grantor was amply sufficient to pay his debts. Jackson v. Post, 15 Wend. 588. And a post nuptial voluntary settlement made by a man, who is not indebted at the time upon his wife, is valid against subsequent creditors. Sexton v. Wheaton, 8 Wheat. 229. See also Doyle v. Sleeper, 1 Dana, 531. Magniac v. Thompson, 1 Baldwin, 357. O'Brien v.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 430. [2]Id. x. 432. [3]Id. iv. 303.

It has been said that no conveyance shallbe deemed to be fraudulent under the above statute, unless it can be proved that the party conveying the goods was indebted at the time of the conveyance, or nearly so (l), although there have been decisions to the contrary (m); for there would be a difficulty in showing that the object of the conveyance was to delay the creditor. Still it seems, that if a conveyance could be proved to have been made with a view to defraud a future creditor, it would be void under the statute (n).

An assignment by a defendant, pending the plaintiff's suit, of all his effects, for the benefit of his creditors, under which possession is immediately taken, is not fraudulent (o), although made to delay the plaintiff's execution: neither is it fraudulent to confess a judgment to one creditor in order to defeat the pending execution of another creditor (p), for a debtor, as well as an executor, may give preference to a particular creditor (q) (A).

A conveyance is binding as to a party, though cancelled for fraud on one not a party (r) (B).

(l) B. N. P. 257. Waller v. Burrows, in Canc. 1745. Taylor v. Jones, 1743, Ibid. And see Lush v. Wilkinson, 5 Ves. 384; where, on a bill against the widow, by one who became a creditor subsequent to the settlement, Ld. Alvanley intimated that the proof of a single anteeedent debt would not do, and that it must depend upon this, whether the husband was in insolvent eireumstanees at the time. And see Russell v. Hammond, 1 Atk. 15. Middlecome v. Marlow, 2 Atk. 220. Ld. Townsend v. Wyndham, 2 Ves. J. 10. In Hungerford v. Earle, 2 Vern. 216, the question as to the validity of a settlement against subsequent creditors was ordered to be tried at law. But see White v. Hussey, Pree. in Chan. 14.

(m) Both by Sir J. Jekyl and Forteseue, M. R., B. N. P. 257.

(n) See Estwick v. Caillaud, 5 T. R. 420. As to conveyances made to defraud a purchaser, see the stat. 37 Eliz. c. 4, and the notes, Evans's St. Vol. I. p. 382. & sequent. [Aston v. Wells, 4 Wheat. 466; Bean v. Smith, 2 Mason, 252; Anderson v. Roberts, 18 John. R. 515.]

(o) Pickstock v. Lyster, 3 M. & S. 371. See also Meux v. Howell, 4 East, 1.

(p) Holbird v. Anderson, 5 T. R. 424.

(q) Ibid. and see Tolputt v. Wells, 1 M. & S. 395. Estwick v. Caillaud, 5 T. R. 424. Stilman v. Ashdown, 2 Atk. 477.

(r) 1 Madd. Ch. 345.

Coulter, 2 Blaekf. 421. A wife has her lawful elaim upon her husband for her maintainanee, and if during the pendeney of her petition for a divorce and alimony, a conveyance of his land be exeeuted by the husband in order to defraud his wife of her right to a support, and be received by the grantee with the same fraudulent design, the conveyence as to her is void. Frakes v. Brown, 2 Blaekf. 295. A subsequent sale, without notice, by a person who has made a settlement not on a valuable consideration, is presumptive evidence of fraud, whieh throws on those claiming under suehsettlement the burthen of proving that it was made bona fide. Cathcart v. Robinson, 5 Peters, 264. Where the question of faet to be determined by a committee in chancery, on a bill to redeem mortgaged premises, was whether a deed from A. to B. was fraudulent, the plaintiff in support of the deed, attempted to prove that it was exeeuted in consideration of more than 700 dollars in money, loaned and paid by B. to and for A., and to contradiet this evidenee the defendant offered testimony to prove that at the time of the loan and payment elaimed, B. was a man of little or no property, that he did not possess estate real or personal unincumbered of the value of 300 dollars, and that suehestate as he had purchased was mortgaged for the whole amount of the purchase money, it was held that such testimony was admissible. Olmsted v. Hoyt and others, 11 Conn. R. 376.

Levy v. Wallis, 4 Dall. 167, and n. (a) to last ed. Water's executors v. M'Clellan et al., 4 Dall. 208, and n. (a) to last ed.)

(A) (If there are no bankrupt laws, a debtor may make a voluntary assignment containing a preferenee to some creditors, and a stipulation for a release. Burd v. Smith, 4 Dall. 76; Mather v. Pratt, Id. 224; Lippincott et al. v. Barker, 2 Binn. 174; M'Alister v. Marshall, 6 Binn. 338; Passmore v. Eldridge, 12 Serg. & R. 201; Hower v. Geesumen, 17 Id. 251; Harman's Lessee v. Reese, 1 Browne, 11; Pearpoint v. Graham, 4 Wash. C. C. R. 232; Marbury v. Brooks, 7 Wheat. 556. But any reservation for the advantage of the debtor or his family is fraudulent, and it would seem totally invalidates the deed. Austin v. Bell, 20 John. R. 442; Passmore v. Eldridge, supra; M'Clurg et al. v. Lecky, 3 Penns. R. 73; Hyslop et al. v. Clarke et al. 14 John. R. 458; Tacker v. Welsh, 17 Mass. R. 164; Harris et al. v. Summer, 2 Pick. R. 129; but see Murray v. Riggs et al. 15 John. R. 571; Prince v. Shepard, 9 Priee, 176; Winn et al. v. Patterson, 9 Peters, 679. And where the property reserved was a house and lot, the title to which was encumbered beyond its fee simple value, its reservation will not vitiate the assignment. Fassit v. Phillips, 4 Whart. 399.)

(B) (Where a contract is entered into for fraudulent or illegal purposes, the law refuses its aid to enable either to disturb such parts of it as have been executed or carried into effect; and as to such parts as remain executory, it will not compel the contractor to perform his engagements or pay damages for non-performance; thus, in both cases, leaving the parties where it finds them. Nellis v Clark, 20 Wend. 24.)

FRIENDLY SOCIETY (s).

Friendly society, proof of Rules.

By the stat. 33 G. 3, c. 54, s. 13, all the rules, orders and regulations from time to time made by any such society in the manner directed by the Act, shall be forthwith entered into a book or books to be kept by one or more of the members of such society, to be appointed for that purpose, and shall be signed by the said members, and that such rules, orders and regulations, so entered and signed, shall be deemed original orders, and shall be received in evidence as such.

It seems that upon an indictment for not obeying an order of two justices *under 33 Geo. 3, c. 54, s. 15, commanding the defendants, as stewards and principal officers of a friendly society, to restore A. B. as a member, it must be shown, that by the constitution of the society, the defendants have the power to restore him (t). *499

Upon an indictment for disobedience of an order of justice, to re-admit a party into a friendly society, reciting that it had appeared to the said justices that the rules had been enrolled; it was held, that as the justices would have had no authority, under the 33 Geo. 3, c. 54, s. 52, to make the order, unless the rules had been enrolled at the sessions, it was necessary to substantiate that fact by legal proof, and that the recital in the order was not, as against the defendants, legal evidence of that fact (u).

A bond given to the treasurer of a friendly society is good as at common law, though the rules have not been confirmed at the sessions, as required by the stat. 33 G. 3, c. 54 (v).

But plaintiffs cannot sue as stewards or trustees where they have been appointed under new rules, which have not been confirmed at the sessions (x).

By the rules, a medical attendant was to be entitled to a certain allowance for each member, and there was a clause that all disputes, &c. were to be settled by a committee, subject to an appeal to two justices; the plaintiff, the medical attendant, having been dismissed by the committee, another was appointed against his consent, and without any meeting of the members at large, but the majority of the members approved of him and still were attended by him: disputes having arisen as to the payment of the plaintiff's successor, upon reference to the justices they recommended a general meeting which was accordingly held, at which the plaintiff was by a large majority declared to be the surgeon; held, that the dismissal having

(s) See the st. 32 Geo. 3, c. 54, s. 13; 49 Geo. 3, c. 125; 59 Geo. 3, c. 128; 10 Geo. 4, c. 56; 3 & 4 Vict. c. 73. Those societies alone are contemplated by the Friendly Society Act, 33 Geo. 3, c. 54, whose objects are confined to the charitable relief and maintenance of their old, sick, and infirm members. Rex v. Justices of Staffordshire, 12 East, 280. Where the members have long ceased to act under their rules, held that they become dissolved, and the Court no longer has jurisdiction under the 33 Geo. 3, c. 54. Norrish, Ex parte, 1 Jac. (CH.) 162. As to actions on bonds given to such societies by innkeepers, and the construction of such bonds, see Wyberg v. Ainsley, 1 M. & Y. 669. An advance by the society of money to the highest bidder was held not to be usurious, although the interest exceeded the legal rate. Silver v. Barnes, 6 Bing. N. C. 180.

(t) R. v. Inge, 2 Smith, 56; but see R. v. Gash,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 441. The jurisdiction of the justices, under 33 Geo. 3, c. 54, s. 15, is confined strictly to the subject-matter of the complaint by the party aggrieved: where, therefore, the complaint against the stewards stated only the refusing relief to which the complainant was entitled, and the justices had awarded that the stewards should pay the sum due, with costs; and further that the party should be continued a member of the society: held, that the latter part of such order was illegal and void; and that an indictment, alleging that he had been expelled the society as well as deprived of relief, and that being aggrieved thereby he made complaint thereof, &c. was not supported in evidence by production of the order reciting the complaint and summons to answer one ground of complaint only; and the defendants entitled to an acquittal on this ground. R. v. Soper,[2] 3 B. & C. 857; 5 D. & R. 669.

(u) R. v. Gilkes,[3] 8 B. & C. 439; and now see 10 Geo. 4, c. 56.

(v) Jones v. Wollam,[4] 5 B. & A. 769. See Cartridge v. Griffiths, 1 B. & A. 37; infra, tit. VARIANCE.

(x) Batty v. Townrow, 4 Camp. 5.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 462. [2]Id. x. 253. [3]Id. xv. 261. [4]Id. vii. 254.

been without authority, and the proceeding of the committee not bona fide for the investigation of any grievance, the plaintiff was entitled to recover from the treasurer the allowance received from the members for his services, notwithstanding he had paid it over to the wrong person (y).

GAME.

Information for using, &c. *500

Upon an information under the stat. 1 & 2 W. 4, c. 32, s. 23 (z), for using *any dog (a), gun or other engine or instrument (b), for the purpose of searching for or killing or taking of game without a certificate, the proofs relate, 1st, to the keeping or using of the dog or instrument as alleged;

Proof of keeping a dog, &c., to kill game.

2ndly, within the county, &c.; 3dly, by an uncertificated person (c); and, 4thly, the commencement of the proceedings within due time (d).—1st, Whether the defendant used a dog or instrument for the destruction of game, it is a question of fact depending on the acts done, and the intention (e) of the agent as collected from his declarations and conduct.

It is not necessary to prove an using in the very act of destroying game; the walking about with a gun, with the intent to kill game, is an using of it for the purpose (f). The intent, of which the magistrate ought to be satisfied in order to convict, is a fact to be presumed and inferred from the conduct of the defendant, and all the circumstances of the particular case. It is enough, if, upon the face of the conviction, such reasonable and primâ facie evidence of the intent appear as would have been sufficient in an action to have been left to a jury (g). This is sufficient to support the conviction; but to warrant the magistrate in convicting, the evidence ought to be such as to satisfy his conscience of the intent of the party to pursue game (h).

Evidence that the defendant, being an unqualified person, went out to course hares with one who was qualified, and that he took an active part in the sport, beating the bushes to find a hare, and in afterwards securing a hare which had been killed, was held to be insufficient evidence of an using by the defendant, under the stat. 5 Anne, c. 14; for he did not use dogs

(y) Garner v. Shelly,[1] 5 Bing. 477.

(z) The stat. 1 & 2 W. 4, c. 32, s. 23, enacts that if any person shall kill or take any game*, or use any dog, gun, net, or other engine or instrument for the killing or taking of game, such person not being authorized so to do for want of a game certificate, he shall, on conviction before two justices, forfeit for every offence such sum of money not exceeding 5*l.* as to the said justices shall seem meet, together with the costs of the conviction.

(a) It was held that a hound was not within the stat. 5 Ann. c. 14; Hooker v. Wilks, 2 Str. 1126; nor within the stat. 22 and 23 C. 2, c. 25, s. 3; and therefore that a gamekeeper could not seize a hound within the manor. Grant v. Hulton, 1 B. & A. 134.

(b) The word engine applies to any instrument by which game may be destroyed. R. v. Filer, Str. 496. Reason v. Lisle, 2 Com. 576. Where an engine may be kept for either of two purposes, the one lawful, the other unlawful, the presumption will be in favour of the legal purpose. Wingfield v. Stentford, 1 Wils. 315.

(c) See the st. 28 G. 3, c. 50, s. 2; 52 G. 3, c. 93, s. 1, 10, 12, 13.

(d) By sec. 41, the prosecution for every offence punishable upon a summary conviction, shall be commenced within three calendar months after the commission of the offence.

(e) An accidental killing of game is not penal: Molton v. Cheesely, 1 Esp. C. 123; but it was penal to take away the game so killed. Ibid. The mere keeping of a dog or instrument, though with intent to use it for the destruction of game, is not penal under the late Act.

(f) R. v. King, Sess. C. 88, per Parker, C. J. See also Hebden v. Hentey, 1 Ch. 607.

(g) R. v. Davis, 6 T. R. 177.

(h) See Mr. Christian's observations, in his Game Laws, 157, 158.

* If several join in the act of killing a hare, but one penalty can be recovered (R. v. Bleasdale, 4 T. R. 809; Hardyman v. Whitacre, B. N. P. 189; 2 East, 573, in note); but if the acts be several and distinct, as if each use a gun, or set a snare, each is subject to a distinct penalty (Christian's G. L. 161). It has even been held, that if a person kill several hares in the same day, he forfeits but one penalty (R. v. Matthews, 10 Mod. 26; and per Ld. Kenyon, in R. v. Lovet, 7 T. R. 153; Marriott v. Shaw, Com. 274; R. v. Blaney, And. 240); but he may be convicted at the same time in several penalties, in respect of so many offences committed on several days. R. v. Swallow, 8 T. R. 284. See below, tit. JUSTICES.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xv. 510.

himself (i), they were not under his control. But it seems that if an unqualified* person had used his own greyhound for the purpose of sporting, *501 although in company with a qualified person, the case would have admitted of a different consideration (k). If an unqualified person sought to protect himself by the qualification of another, it was incumbent upon him to give strict proof of the qualification (l). The same principles would probably be applied to the case of an uncertificated person under the late Act (m.)

The plaintiff may rely on any offence committed by the defendant within three months before the commencement of the action, although the fact was not then known to the plaintiff (n).

2dly, Within the county, &c.—If a man, standing in one parish or county, shoot at game in another, he uses the gun in the district in which he stands (o). County, parish, &c.

The late Act, s. 37, enacts, that every penalty and forfeiture for any offence against that Act, the application of which has not otherwise been provided for, shall be paid to some one of the overseers of the poor, or to some other officer, as the convicting justice or justices may direct, of the parish, township or place in which such offence shall have been committed, to be by such overseer or officer paid over to the use of the general rate, of the county, riding or division, in which such parish, township or place shall be situate, whether the same shall or shall not contribute to such general rate. But that no inhabitant of such county, riding or division, shall be deemed an incompetent witness in any proceeding under the Act, by reason of the application of such penalty or forfeiture to the use of the said general rate.

3dly, The want of a certificate.—After proof has been given of the keeping or using, &c. it lies on the defendant to prove his certificate. The late stat. s. 42, expressly provides, that it shall not be necessary, in any proceeding against any person under that Act, to negative by evidence any certificate, license, consent, authority, or other matter of exception or defence, but that the party seeking to avail himself of any such certificate shall be bound to prove the same (p). Want of certificate.

If the defendant justify killing game as a gamekeeper, he must produce and prove his deputation from the lord of the manor (q), and show that he As gamekeeper.

(i) Lewis v. Taylor, 16 East, 49, overruling a case said to have been ruled by Lawrence, J., Stafford. Lent Ass. 1804. And see R. v. Taylor 15 East, 462; where it was held that a groom attending his qualified master whilst he used dogs for killing game, and pursuing it by his master's command, was not liable to the penalties of the stat. And see R. v. Newman and others, Loft's R. 178, and Molton v. Rogers, 4 Esp. C. 217; where Lord Ellenborough gave his opinion that an unqualified person joining in the sport with the owner of the dogs who was qualified, was not liable to the penalty.

(k) Per Ld. Ellenborough, Lewis v. Taylor, 16 East, 49. But though an unqualified person bring his own dogs into the field, the penalty does not attach if he brought them as a loan to the qualified person. Ibid. Where the defendant, alleged to have been acting ast he steward of a qualified person sporting himself, used the gun and killed game, held, that such could not be deemed the act of the master, and that he was properly convicted. Ex parte Sylvester,[1] 9 B. & C. 61.

(l) Clarke v. Broughton, 3 Camp. C. 328.

(m) By the stat. 54 G. 3, c. 141, such of the duties in the schedule of the Act 52 G. 3, c. 93, as relate to persons assisting or intending to aid and assist in taking or killing of any game, woodcock, snipe, quail, landrail, or coney, shall cease and determine, provided the assistance is given to another who has obtained his certificate, and then use his own dog, gun, or other engine, and who shall act by virtue of any deputation or appointment.

(n) Rushworth v. Craven, 1 M. & Y. 417.

(o) R. v. Alsop, 1 Show. 339. See tit. Penal Action.

(p) So in actions, and even informations before justices, under the stat. of Anne, for using a gun, &c. without qualifications, it was held to be unnecessary to negative the qualifications by evidence.

(q) See the stat. 22 & 23 C. 2, s. 25, 9 Anne, c. 25, s. 1, and 48 G. 3, c. 93, repealed by the stat. 1 & 2 W. 4, c. 32; and the provision of the latter statute as to gamekeepers, infra, 505. Although the gamekeeper be appointed by one who is not in fact lord of the manor, yet if he be considered such, the gamekeeper will not be personally liable to penalties. Smyth v. Jefferies, 9 Price, 257. Hunt v. Andrews,[2] 3 B. & A. 341.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xvii. 331. [2]Id. v. 312.

is the lord of such manor (r). Where the defendant proved a deputation to *502 *kill game for the use of the lord of the manor, it was held that it might be presumed that the game which he killed was intended for the use of the lord, there being no evidence to the contrary (s).

Title to the manor. The courts will not allow the title to a manor to be tried in an action for penalties, although the parties consent to do so (t). It is sufficient, therefore, to show a colourable title as lord of a manor, as by proof of seisin in fact, and the exercise of manorial rights (u), the appointment of gamekeepers from time to time, the enrolment of their deputations with the clerk of the peace, and the grant of certificates to such gamekeepers. And for this purpose the enrolment books of deputations kept in the office of the clerk of the peace are admissible in evidence, without the production and proof of the deputations themselves (x). So the holding of manor courts (y), and acts of cutting down timber on the wastes (z), are admissible in evidence for the purpose of establishing the title to the manor. But it is no defence that the defendant acted as gamekeeper under a bonâ fide belief that his principal was really entitled to the manor, there being no ground for the claim (a). And evidence of the real title to the manor is admissible, in order to negative the evidence of a colourable title (b), and, as is said, to show that the claimant knew that he had no real title (c); and for this purpose it is competent to the plaintiff to show, by the enrolment book of the deputations, kept in the office of the deputy clerk of the peace, that manorial rights had been long exercised by the party, and his ancestors, who were legally entitled to the manor.

The boundaries of a manor cannot be tried in an action for penalties (d).

Within due time. 4thly, Within due time.—That is, within three calendar months, by sec. 41 of the late Act. In the case of an information under the stat. 5 Anne, c. 14, it was necessary that the conviction should be within three months. As to proof of the commencement of a prosecution for penalties, see tit. TIME.

*503 *The stat. 1 & 2 W. 4, c. 32, s. 4, enacts, that if any person (though

(r) Calcraft v. Gibbs, 4 T. R. 681. Hawkins v. Bailey; Blunt v. Grimes, cited ibid. A college may appoint a gamekeeper under their seal. Spurrier v. Vale, 10 East, 413.

(s) Spurrier v. Vale, 10 East, 413; i. e. in an action for sporting without a qualification. The defendant had a deputation under New College, Oxford, was a gardener, and lived in the house of a stranger to the manor.

(t) Blunt v. Grimes, 4 T. R. 682. Calcraft v. Gibbs, Ibid. 681.

(u) Ibid. Evidence of reputation alone is not sufficient. Rushworth v. Craven, 1 M. & Y. 417. Neither is the mere production of a deed, not enrolled (though in a register county), a sufficient foundation for such evidence. Ib.

(x) Hunt v. Andrews,[1] 3 B. & A. 341. For the Act of Parliament directs a certificate to be made upon a stamp, and it is the duty of the officer to keep a list of the certificates granted; and as it is his duty to register deputations, the register is a public document made by an authorized officer. Ibid. And it seems that they are not evidence merely to show that such enrolments were made, but also to show that those who caused them to be made exercised rights as lords of the manor. Ibid. per Bayley, J. See Kinnersley v. Orpe, Doug. 56.

(y) But a court is a matter of distinct grant, and does not necessarily belong to a lord of a manor. [1]3 B. & A. 348.

(z) But the felling of timber is a right belonging to the owner of the soil, and not to the lord of the manor. Per Abbott, C. J. [1]3 B. & A. 347.

(a) Calcraft v. Gibbs, 4 T. R. 681; 5 T. R. 19. Mr. Roebuck had purchased from the plaintiff (lord of the manor of Northfleet) an estate called Ingress, lying within the manor, and it had been agreed that Mr. Roebuck should have the deputation, and two certificates had been granted to the defendant as the gamekeeper of Mr. Roebuck.

(b) Hunt v. Andrews,[1] 3 B. & A. 341.

(c) Ibid.

(d) It appeared that the defendant, as gamekeeper to Sir H. Hoare, of his manor of Brixton, had constantly shot over the place where the pheasant was killed. No evidence having been given to show that the place was out of the manor, Buller, J. nonsuited the plaintiff, saying, that he would not in such an action try the boundaries of the manor. Hawkins v. Bailey, 4 T. R. 681, in the note.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. v. 312.

licensed to deal in game as the Act directs) shall buy or sell, or knowingly (f) have in his house, shop, stall, possession or control, any bird of game after the expiration of ten days, one inclusive and the other exclusive, from the respective days in each year on which it shall become unlawful to kill or take such birds of game respectively; or if any person, not being licensed to deal in game by virtue of that Act, shall buy or sell any kind of game after the expiration of ten days, one inclusive, the other exclusive, from the respective days in each year on which it shall become unlawful to kill or take such birds of game respectively, or shall knowingly have in his house, possession or control, any bird of game (except birds of game kept in a mew or breeding place), after the expiration of forty days, one exclusive, the other inclusive, from the respective days in each year on which it shall become unlawful to kill or take such birds of game as aforesaid, he shall forfeit for every head of game, &c. such sum not exceeding 1*l.* as to the convicting justices shall seem meet, together with the costs of conviction. Information for buying or selling, &c.

It was held under the stat. 9 Anne, c. 25, s. 2 (now repealed), that a mere possession of game by an unqualified person might be explained by evidence to be a lawful possession, for otherwise no case could be stated in which an unqualified person could innocently come in contact with game. And therefore, where the defendant, being a carpenter, employed by the lord of a manor, and having directions from him to detect poachers, took a hare from the dog, which the plaintiff had killed in coursing on the master's manor, and carried it to his master's steward, according to his directions, notwithstanding the claim made by the plaintiff, it was held that this was not an unlawful possession within the statute, being rather for the protection of game than a breach of the laws for preserving it (g). "It might as well be said (observed Lord Ellenborough), that if a qualfied person, returning home with a bag of game, were to fall from his horse, another could not lawfully take up the bag in order to assist the owner; or, that if a person seized an offender, who had naval stores unlawfully in his possession, and took them away in order to bring them before a magistrate, that would be an unlawful possession against the Acts of Parliament made for protecting the King's stores."

With a view to costs (h) it is frequently necessary to prove, as alleged, that *the trespass was wilful and malicious, or that the defendant is an *504 Proof as to costs.

(f) Under the former statute, knowledge of the fact of possession was held to be immaterial. R. v. Marsh,[1] 3 B. & C. 719. Possession by the servant of a carrier was deemed to be a possession by the carrier, in the absence of proof of fraud on the part of the servant. Ib. In R. v. Turner, 2 M. & S. 206, possession by a carrier was held to be presumptive evidence that he knew the game to be there.

(g) Warneford v. Kendall, 10 East, 18. In the case of Molton v. Cheeseley, 1 Esp. C. 124, where, according to the report, the defendant's dog killed a pheasant by accident, and the defendant took it away, Mr. J. Buller held that the taking away the pheasant constituted an unlawful possession, so as to subject the defendant to a penalty. The report of the case is very short, and the decision itself does not appear to be inconsistent with the principles laid down in the case of Warneford v. Kendall; for although the accidental killing of the bird by the defendant's dog was no offence in the defendant, yet his subsequent possession of the game might either be lawful, as for the purpose of conveying it to the lord of the manor on whose land it was killed, or unlawful, as if he took it for the purpose of sale; and (semble) it was incumbent on the defendant to explain his subsequent possession of the game.

Where the servant of a qualified person set a trap for killing hares, in the presence and by the orders of his master, and was seen in the possession of a hare, which he was conveying to his master, the Court held that the action was improperly brought against the servant, the taking and possession being that of the master. Walker v. Mills,[2] 2 B. & B. 1.

(h) Under the stat. 4 & 5 Will. 3, c. 23, s. 10, which, in case of a wilful trespass, by such person coming on the land to hunt hares, &c. gives the plaintiff full costs of suit. The stat. 1 & 2 W. 4, c. 32, s. 46, declares it shall not preclude actions of trespass for damages under former Acts.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. ix. 232. [2] Id. vi. 1.

inferior tradesman (i), apprentice (not being in company with his master, duly qualified), or dissolute person (k).

Trespass. Trespass lies for breaking in the plaintiff's close, and taking his game there (l). The right of property in game is in the owner of the land, so long as the game abides there (m). So, though the defendant does not enter on the plaintiff's land, but knowingly and maliciously fires a gun on his own land with intent to prevent ducks from coming to the plaintiff's decoy, an action on the case lies (n).

Although the general rule be that the owner of a dog is not liable for any mischief which the animal commits, unless he be aware of his mischievous propensities, yet if the owner be a trespasser, he is responsible for such mischief independently of the fact of knowledge (o). As where the defendants, trespassing on the plaintiff's field, with dogs and guns, their dogs, contrary to their will, killed a deer of the plaintiff's (p).

Free warren. A right of free warren is an exclusive privilege to the owner of the soil to take beasts and fowls of warren (q) within the privileged place created by the King's grant or prescription (r). The right may be created and exist

505 alieno solo (s). The evidence relating to proof of such a right is seldom direct by the production of the grant itself, but is usually established by evidence of enjoyment and usage (t). And it seems that a non-user of

(i) It would not be easy to frame terms more ambiguous and indefinite than those which are used in the making of this statute. In the case of Buxton v. Mingay, 2 Wils. 70, the Judges were divided upon the question, whether a surgeon and apothecary, not being qualified to kill game, came within these words. See Com. 26.

(k) In Pallant v. Roll, 2 Bl. R. 900, it was held, that a huntsman going out with the hounds of his master (a qualified person) by his order, was not a dissolute person. In Mr. Christian's G. L., Lord Ellenborough is reported to have said that he should direct the jury to find that the defendant was a dissolute person, if he came to kill game for the purpose of selling it; or if he was drunk or abusive; or if, being questioned where he lived, or what was his name, he gave a false account of himself.

(l) Sutton v. Moody, 1 Ld. Ray. 250. In an action of trespass against the huntsman of the Berkeley Hunt, it was held that the jury were to give damages, not only in respect of his own individual trespass, but for the whole damage done by the concourse of people who attended him. Hume v. Oldacre,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 351.

(m) If A. start a hare in the land of B. and hunt it and kill it there, the property continues all the while in B.; but if A. start a hare in the ground of B. and hunt it into the ground of C. and kill it there, the property is in A. the hunter; but A. is liable in an action of trespass for hunting in the grounds of B. as well as of C. But if A. start a hare in a forest or warren of B. and hunt it into the ground of C., and there kills it, the property remains all the while in B., the proprietor of the warren, because the privilege continues. Per Holt, C. J., in Sutton v. Moody, 1 Ld. Ray. 258, upon the authority of 12 H. 8, 9; and in the case of Sutton v. Moody, judgment was given for the plaintiff, in an action for breaking and entering his close and taking his conies, because he had a property by the possession; and see Pollexfen v. Ashford, 1 Vent. 122, cited by Holt, C. J., as in point. But qu. as to the second position of the learned Judge, for this would be to allow A., a mere trespasser, to profit by his own wrong; see Keble v. Hickringill, 11 Mod. 74, and Christian on the Game Laws, 104. By the stat. 1 & 2 W. 4, c. 32, s. 7, the landlord under existing leases (with certain exceptions) is entitled to the game. By s. 36, provision is made for the seizure of game in possession of any person found on any land, &c. in search or pursuit of game, and having in his possession game which shall appear to have been recently killed, after demand made by the party entitled to kill the game on such land.

(n) Keble v. Hickringill, 11 Mod. 74; and see Carrington v. Taylor, 11 East, 571.

(o) Beckwith v. Shoredike, 4 Burr. 2092. (p) Ibid.

(q) i. e. the hare, pheasant, coney and partridge. 1 Inst. 233. Manwood, 362.

(r) See 1 Inst. 233. A grant is made of a crown manor and hundred, with all its rights and other things to the said manor and hundred belonging, and also to have free-warren in all their demesne lands in the manor, hundred, &c., although within the King's forest; held, that the term demesne lands applied only to the lands of the manor which the lord either actually or potentially might have in propriis manibus, and that such grant conferred the right of free-warren in such demesne lands and other tenemental lands held in fee of the King or other lord, within the limits mentioned in the grant, but not in any lands of the Crown, whilst in the occupation of the Crown. Attorney-General v. Parsons, 2 C. & J. 279.

(s) Year Books, 3 H. 6, f. 28. 34 H. 6, f. 34. 5 H. 7, f. 10. Bur. Ab. tit. Warr. pl. 9. Lord Dacre v. Tebb, 2 Bl. R. 1151.

(t) See tit. Prescription. Or in the King's lands. Morris v. Dimes,[2] 1 Ad. & Ell. 654. Qu. whether it passes as appurtenant to a manor. Ib.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 422. [2] Id. xxviii. 178.

the right for twenty years would afford primâ facie evidence of an extinguishment of the right, especially where it was claimed in the land of another.

An exception in a conveyance of free liberty of hawking and hunting upon the premises, to a party (not the party conveying) and the heirs of his body, and his and their friends, servants and followers, though it may not be good as a reservation, yet being sealed with the seals of the parties, operates as a grant to the party and his heirs (u). But such a grant of the liberty to hawk and hunt does not give liberty to shoot feathered game (x).

Justification, killing dogs, &c.

A defendant cannot justify the killing a dog in pursuit of game on his the defendant's premises, unless he can show that the hare was put in such peril as to render the destruction of the dog necessary for the preservation of the hare (y). But it seems to be one of the privileges of a free warren and a park, that the owners or their servants may kill dogs which enter the warren or park and chase the game (z).

Trespass.

A man cannot justify the digging in another's land in order to destroy a badger (a); and though it has been held that a man might justify the riding over another man's land in following a fox which could not otherwise be killed (b), yet in a later case (c) Lord Ellenborough, C. J. is said to have ruled, that if the jury thought, from the evidence, that the defendant pursued the fox for his own pleasure and amusement, and that the good of the public was not his sole and governing motive, they ought to find for the plaintiff.

By the stat. 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 32, s. 13, any lord of a manor (d), lordship or royalty, or any steward of the Crown of any manor, lordship or royalty (e) appertaining to his Majesty, by writing under hand and seal, or in the case of a body corporate, under the seal of such body corporate, may appoint one or more gamekeepers to preserve or kill game (f) for the use of such lord *or steward; and to authorize such gamekeepers, within the said limits, *506 to seize and take (g), for the use (h) of such lord or steward, all such dogs (i), nets, and other engines and instruments for the killing of game (k), as shall

(u) Moore v. Lord Plymouth,[1] 7 Taunt. 614; S. C. not S. P. 3 B. & A. 16. See 3 Buls. 66.

(x) Ibid. and see Manw. c. 18, s. 10.

(y) Vere v. Lord Cawdor, 11 East, 568. Janson v. Brown, 1 Camp. 41; and see Wright v. Ramscott, 1 Saund. 84. Athil v. Corbet, Cro. J. 463.

(z) Wadhurst v. Dumure, Cro. J. 45. Christian on the Game Laws, 265.

(a) Gedge v. Mine, 2 Buls. 60. (b) Gundry v. Feltham, 1 T. R. 334.

(c) Earl of Essex v. Capel, Hertford Summ. Ass. 1809. Christian on the Game Laws, 114.

(d) The lord of a manor cannot depute to another the power of appointing a gamekeeper. Calcraft v. Gibbs, 4 T. R. 631; 5 T. R. 19. Such a power is a mere emanation from the manor, and inseparable from it. Per Lord Kenyon, 5 T. R. 20.

(e) Other royalty means such as is ejusdem generis with a manor; and therefore it seems that the lord of a hundred or wapentake cannot, as such, appoint a gamekeeper. Lord Aylesbury v. Pattison, Doug. 28. Bowkey v. Williams, Lutw. 484.

(f) Where a gamekeeper kills game within a manor, it will be presumed that the act was done for the use of his principal. Sparrow v. Vale, 10 East, 413. A deputation granted and enrolled prior to the Act's taking effect, does not entitle a defendant to the privileges conferred with notice of action and giving evidence under the general issue. Bush v. Green,[2] 4 Bing. N. C. 41.

(g) Such seizure is a ministerial act, and need not be done by the gamekeeper himself, but may be done by another under his immediate direction. Bird v. Dale,[3] 7 Taunt. 570. But not under a general authority. Ib.

(h) The dog or engine seized becomes the property of the person having authority to seize it, and may be destroyed. Kingsnorth v. Bretton,[4] 5 Taunt. 416.

(i) The former statute, which authorized the seizure of dogs, &c. kept for the destruction of game, did not authorize the seizure of any dog such as was not prohibited from being kept, e. g. a hound. Grant v. Hulton, 1 B. & A. 134; and see Hooker v. Wilkes, Bl. 1126, where it was held that a hound was not within the statute 5 Anne, c. 14, because it was not mentioned there.

(k) The repealed statute 5 Anne, c. 14, authorized the lord of a manor to take game from unqualified persons, which he could not do before. Bird v. Dale,[3] 7 Taunt. 560; 1 Moore, 290. The present statute does not extend to game, except in cases within sec. 36.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 238. [2]Id. xxxiii. 276. [3]Id. ii. 220. [4]Id. ii. 139.

be used within the said limits, by any person not authorized to kill game for want of a certificate (l).

Indictment. Under an indictment on the stat. 57 Geo. 3, c. 90 (m), against several, for being found armed at night in a wood, which they had entered with intent (n) to kill game, it appeared that the prisoners were shooting in the wood at night, and the flash of one of their guns was seen by a keeper who was on the watch for them, but before they were seen they had abandoned their guns in the wood, and were creeping away on their knees; and it was held by the Judges, on a case reserved, that the statute applied, although they had not then arms in their possession, or within their reach when they were discovered (o). So it is sufficient if the prisoner be discovered in the wood, *507 *plantation or close, &c. although he be not apprehended until he has regained the highway.

If any one be armed with the knowledge of the rest, they are all within the statute (p); but it is otherwise where some are armed without the knowledge of the rest, for then those only who are armed are within the statute (q).

Competency. An informer is not a competent witness (r) where he is to have any part of the penalty. Although the statute speaks of a conviction on the oath of one or more credible witnesses, a conviction on confession before a justice (s), or even upon a confession made to a third person, when proved before the justice, has been held to be a sufficient ground for conviction (t).

(l) The lord of a manor cannot seize the gun of a gamekeeper of another lord, although he be upon the manor of the first without authority. Rogers v. Carter, 2 Wils. 387. Where a lord of a manor is also a justice of the peace, he is entitled to a month's notice of an action brought against him for taking away a gun from the house of an unqualified person, for it will be presumed that he acted as a justice. Briggs v. Evelyn, 2 H. B. 114. Under the stat. 5 Anne, c. 14, before seizure of game on the land of an unqualified person, the justice, &c. was bound to exercise his judgment, whether the person possessing the game be qualified or not; afterwards he may seize by the hands of another. See Bird v. Dale,[1] 7 Taunt. 566. Where a magistrate convicts an unqualified person for killing game under the stat., and causes his dog to be brought for the purpose of seizing it, he may order the dog to be killed without any formal adjudication of seizure. Kingsnorth v. Bretton,[2] 5 Taunt. 416. The demand by a gamekeeper of the certificate need not be made on the land, but it must be made immediately after the party has left it, so as to make it one transaction; and it is not necessary the party demanding should produce his own; and if the other refuses he does so at his peril, if the party demanding it be duly authorized; and if the party refuses to give his name, it is unnecessary to go on, and ask in what place, if any, he is assessed: held also, that the conviction reciting it was sufficient evidence of the information. Scarth v. Gardener,[3] 3 C. & P. 438: cor. Tenterden, L. C. J.

(m) This statute is repealed by the stat. 9 Geo. 4, c. 60, which (sec. 6) makes an unlawful entry by three or more armed persons into any land, &c., for the purpose of taking or destroying game or rabbits, a transportable misdemeanor. By sec. 1 of the same Act, the unlawful taking or destruction of game or rabbits by night is also a misdemeanor punishable by imprisonment; and in case of conviction for a third offence, by transportation. By stat. 1 & 2 W. 4, c. 32, s. 30, trespass on another's land in search of game or woodcocks, &c., subjects to a fine of not exceeding 5*l*. As to apprehension of poachers by gamekeepers, see 9 Geo. 4, c. 69, s. 1. Under the stat. 9 Geo. 4, c. 69, s. 2, a keeper may apprehend poachers, though there be three or more armed. R. v. Ball, 1 Moody's C. C. L. 330; ib. 333. He may arrest without giving notice. R. v. Payne, ib. 378.

(n) It was necessary to prove the intent as to that particular close. Barham's Case, 1 Ry. & M. (c. c.) 150. Where the indictment charged the prisoner with being in a certain wood called Old Walk, belonging to and then in the occupation of W.; held, that although, if the name of the occupier were stated, it was unnecessary to give the place and name, yet that having done so, a variance in the name was fatal. Owen & Prickett's Case, 1 Ry. & M. (c. c.) 118.

(o) R v. Nash & Weller, cor. Bayley, J. Maidstone Spring Ass. 1819. So where there was evidence to show that the defendant had been armed in the place, although he had not actually been seen there. Worker's Case, 1 Rv. and M. C. C. 105.

(p) R. v. Smith & Others, Burn's J., tit. GAME, Append. 225.

(q) R. v. Johnson & Coulburne, 1b. 226.

(r) R. v. Stone, Ld. Raym. 1545. R. v. Blaney, 2 Andr. 240. See the provisions of the late statute as to competency, supra, 501.

(s) 1 T. R. 320. R. v. Gage, 1 Str. 546. Saund. 262.

(t) Ibid.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 220. [2]Id. ii. 139. [3]Id. xxiv. 201.

GAMING (u).

Upon a conviction for keeping a gaming-table (x), the evidence was, that the defendant was the master of the house, and acting as master of a hazard-table there on the 25th of August, but no mention was made of any dice being then used; but on the 26th of August one witness saw a dice-box and dice on the table, round which many persons were assembled, the play having been discontinued on the witness's entering the room. It was held by the Court that this was evidence to warrant the convicting justices in their conclusion that the game of hazard had been played there on the latter day. Under the statute 9 Ann. c. 14, s. 5, the defendant may be convicted of winning at one sitting a less sum than that which is alleged in the indictment (y), and although it appear in evidence that he was paid in bills of exchange, and not in money (z). To lose 10*l.* at one time is to lose it by a single stake or bet; to lose it at one sitting is to lose it in a course of play, where the company never part, though the person may not be actually gaming the whole time (a). Where two persons played from Monday *evening to Tuesday evening, without any interruption, except for an hour or two at dinner, it was held to be at one sitting within the statute (b). *508

Proof of keeping a gaming-table.

Winning more than 10*l.* at one sitting.

Under the statute 18 Geo. 2, c. 34, s. 1, against keeping gaming-houses, persons may be witnesses although they have played, betted or staked at any of the prohibited games (c).

The statute 9 Ann. c. 14, s. 2 (d), does not absolutely void the contract where money is won at play (e); and therefore where the plaintiff lost a mare of the value of 25*l.* by tossing up, and did not bring his action until the three months were expired, it was held that he could not recover (f).

(u) See Wager.—Assault.

(x) Under the stat. 12 G. 2, c. 28. The charge in the information was for setting up, maintaining, and keeping a certain game, to be determined by the chance of dice, called hazard. R. v. Liston, 5 T. R. 338.

(y) R. v. Hill, Darley & Others, 1 Starkie's C. 359. And see R. v. Gilham, 6 T. R. 265; 1 Ld. Raym. 149. R. v. Baynes, Ld. Raym. 1265. A horse-race is within this stat. Goodburn v. Marley, 2 Str. 1159. Although for a legal plate. Blaxton v. Pye, 2 Wils. 309. So is a foot-race. 2 Wils. 36. So also, semble, is a wager on the game of cricket. 1 Wils. 220. A foot-race being within the 9 Anne, c. 14, where it appeared that monies were advanced by the defendant for the purpose of making good losses by betting on such a race in pursuance of previous engagements, although not paid until after the event, for securing which a mortgage was given, and subsequently the estate was valued and conveyed to a trustee for the defendant, subject to the previous mortgage; it was held, that the statute applies both to the mortgage and conveyance, and that the heir at law was entitled under the statute, and a demurrer for want of equity overruled. Parker v. Alcock, 1 Younge, 361. The 13 Geo. 2, as relates to horse-racing, is repealed by 3 & 4 Viet. c. 5. Hazard, by the 12 Geo. 2, c. 28, s. 2 & 3, and 18 Geo. 2, c. 34, s. 2, is illegal, even though it be played in private, and the players are liable to a penalty of 50*l.* See M'Kinnel v. Robinson, 3 M. & W. 434.

(z) [1] Starkie's C. 359; and see above, 456.

(a) Per Blackstone, J., Bones v. Booth, 2 Black. R. 1226.

(b) 2 Bl. 1226.

(c) By sec. 5. See tit. Infamy and Witness.

(d) Which enacts, that if a person, by playing at cards, or any other game, shall lose to any one person the sum or value of 10*l*, he shall be at liberty within three months to sue for and recover the same.

(e) By sec. 5, persons who have lost their money at play are the only persons entitled, under the stat. 9 Ann. c. 14, s. 3, to file a bill for a discovery, and not a mere common informer in aid of a qui tam action. Orme v. Crockford, 13 Pri 376; 1 M. & Y. 185.

(f) Vaughan v. Whitcomb, 2 N. R. 411. Nor does the statute wholly avoid a security given in respect of money won at play. Where Reilly procured a bill drawn by Duckworth, payable to the order of Duckworth, and afterwards generally indorsed by Duckworth, to be accepted by Benson, the defendant, for a gaming debt due from the defendant to Reilly, it was held that the plaintiff, a subsequent bona fide holder for value, could not recover. Henderson v. Benson, 8 Price, 283. But the statute does not preclude such bona fide holder from recovering against the drawer of a bill accepted for a gaming debt won by him. The proper effect to be given to the Act is to prevent the winner, or any one who derives title from him, from making the loser pay. Edwards v. Dick, [2] 4 B. & A. 212.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 426. [2] Id. vi. 405.

GENERAL ISSUE.

As to Evidence under, see The New Rules.

The general issue shall not be taken to be a plea under statute, unless By Statute be noted in the margin. 4 Bing. N. C. 816.

GOODS SOLD AND DELIVERED.

See Vendor and Vendee.

GRANT. See tit. Deed.—Presumption.

GUARANTY.

Proof of guaranty.

A guaranty in writing (g) must be produced, properly stamped, and proved as in other cases (h) according to the averments (i).

(g) See Frauds, Statute of. The plaintiff distrained goods for rent, which he was about to sell; the defendants gave an undertaking, that if he would give up the distress, and allow them to sell them for the tenant, they would pay the rent legally due; held, that it was not a promise to answer the debt of another within the statute of frauds. Edwards v. Kelly, 6 M. & S. 204. And see Williams v. Leper, 3 Burr. 1886; Houlditch v. Milne, 3 Esp. 59; Castling v. Aubert, 2 East, 325.

(h) See Assumpsit.—Stamp.—Written Instrument, Proof of. A sufficient consideration must appear on the face of the instrument, or by internal reference. See Pace v. Marsh,[1] 1 Bing. 216; Boehm v. Campbell,[2] 3 Moore, 15; and Frauds, Statute of, supra. The guaranty may be connected by reference in the indorsement containing the guaranty to an agreement written on the other side of the same paper. Stead v. Liddiard,[3] 1 Bing. 196. And where the guaranty itself does not state the consideration, it may be collected from a previous correspondence to which the guaranty refers. Coe v. Duffield,[4] 7 Moore, 254. On a note in these terms,—"Messrs. M. and Co (plaintiffs), we hereby promise that your draft on C. and Co. due at M.'s at six months on, &c. shall be paid out of the money to be received from P.; say —l" signed "C. and B." (defendants); held, that no sufficient consideration appearing on the face of the instrument for the promise of C. and B., it was as against them, void. Morley v. Boothby, 3 B. 107.

A guaranty in the terms, "I engage to pay A. B. for all the gas supplied at M, during the time it is occupied by N.; and I do also engage to pay for all arrears which may be now due;" held, that no sufficient consideration appearing for the latter part of the engagement, it could not be sustained, but that it might as to the former. Wood v. Benson, 2 C. & J. 94. Where an action pending between A. and B. the defendant joined with the latter in a memorandum, which, after stating the parties to the action, and the amount of the debt and costs, was in the terms, "we jointly and severally undertake and agree to pay G. C. (the attorney of the plaintiff in the action) the debt and full costs in this action, provided, on or before the —— day of ——, the sum of —— be not paid to the said G. C., at his office, as the attorney for the said plaintiff," held that the consideration for which the guaranty was given being uncertain, whether for staying the action or giving time of payment, was not sufficiently expressed to take it out of the Statute of Frauds. Cole v. Dyer, 1 C. & J. 461.

The plaintiff having given to the defendants two notes and a cognovit, the defendants by a guarantee in consideration of the money so secured to be paid to them, undertook to indemnify the plaintiff against a certain bill; held that the plaintiff might sue on the guarantee, although the notes had not been paid, the security, and not the payment, being the consideration of the guarantee. Ikin v. Brook,[5] 1 B. & Ad. 124.

"I agree to bind myself to be security to you for J. C., late in the employ of J. P., for whatever you may entrust him with whilst in your employ;" held that the consideration sufficiently appeared, viz. to give credit for J. C. prospectively, and in consideration of his being employed and entrusted. Newbury v. Armstrong,[6] 6 Bing. 201; 1 M. & M. 389.

A letter of guarantee was given by the defendant to the plaintiff in the terms, "that P. C. shall faithfully and honestly discharge any duty assigned to, or trust reposed in him;" the plaintiff received him into his employ; it was held that a sufficient consideration appeared on the face of the guarantee. The plaintiff employed the party first at B. and afterwards at Z., and upon his removal from B. he was indebted to the plaintiff in a large sum, and from his accounts it appeared that sums remitted whilst employed at Z., were remitted as the proceeds of sales there; held that the Judge was not bound to direct the jury as matter of law, that such remittances were to be considered as in discharge of the former balance, but that he was right in leaving it to the jury under all circumstances to what account they were to be applied. Lysaght v.

(i) See tit. Variance. Where the consideration was alleged to be the advance of money to T. G. by the plaintiff, and it appeared on the trial that the money had not been advanced by the plaintiff, but by him and his partners, who were bankers, by debiting T. G., who was also their customer, with it in their books; held, that the declaration was not sustained by the proof, and a non-suit therefore right. Garrett v. Handley,[7] 3 B. & C. 462; 5 D. & R. 319.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. viii. 302. [2] Id. iv. 245. [3] Id. viii. 294. [4] Id. xvii. 72. [5] Id. xx. 357. [6] Id. xix. 55. [7] Id. x. 152.

*In an action brought upon a guaranty, unless the instrument given in evidence as such, purport to be an absolute and conclusive engagement, the *plaintiff must show that he gave notice to the defendant, that he accepted *510 it as such (n) (A). Proof of a mere offer or proposal to guarantee is not

Walker, 1 Dow's C. 211. A guarantee in the terms, "I hereby undertake to secure you the payment of any sums of money you have or may hereafter advance to D. and C., on their account with you;" held, 1st, that it not appearing from the terms of the instrument that the future advances were the consideration for guaranteeing the past advances, the actual consideration was left too uncertain to render the guaranty sufficient within the Statute of Frauds; 2dly, that under the general issue, the defendant might show that the consideration alleged in the declaration was not the actual one, without pleading it specially; and, lastly, that the creditor having proved against the estate of the principal to a larger amount than that covered by the guarantee, the defendant had a right to deduct the dividends from the amount claimed under the guarantee. Raikes v. Todd, 1 P. & D. 138. The defendant being attorney for a debtor to the plaintiff, remits an acceptance of his client in a letter, stating that his client had been disappointed in receiving his remittances, which the plaintiff refused to take unless the defendant would put his name to it, and he accordingly wrote on the back of the letter, "I will see the bill paid for W.;" the consideration sufficiently appears. Emmott v. Kearns,[1] 5 Bing. N. C. 559; 7 Sc. 687; and 7 Dowl. 630. So where the defendant signed a memorandum in the terms, "I hereby guarantee the payment of all goods consigned to T., in consideration of 2*s.* 6*d.* paid me." Dutchman v. Tooth,[2] 5 Bing. N. C. 577. "I hereby guarantee you, Messrs. K. & Co., the sum of 250*l.* in case P. of, &c. should make default in his capacity of agent and traveller to you," sufficiently shows the consideration of a future agency, and default. Kennaway v. Treleaven, 5 M. & W. 498. The defendant being surety by deed for his brother for goods supplied by M., whom the plaintiff succeeded in his business, by letter acknowledged his readiness to become also a like surety to the plaintiff, upon being satisfied of the solvent state of his brother; adding, "In the meantime I will hold myself responsible to you for 200*l.*, in the event of his inability to meet it; to be void when the full statement of his affairs being laid before me, and such proving satisfactory, I then enter into the security you require;" held, the letter was void as a guarantee. Bentham v. Cooper, 5 M. & W. 621. A guaranty of payment of the debt of B. is conditioned to be void, if the party do not avail himself to the utmost of a bill held by him as a deposit; and also in case anything should prevent the defendant from receiving and retaining the proceeds of an execution he has levied on the goods of B.; it is not avoided by the plaintiff not putting the bill in suit against the acceptor, who was an insolvent and in prison; nor by part of the goods being withdrawn, which, being the goods of other parties, had been improperly taken in execution. Musket v. Rogers,[3] 5 Bing. N. C. 728; and 8 Sc. 51. Where M. had agreed to supply timber to W. to complete a contract with H., on H. signing the following undertaking, "I agree to pay M. for timber to house in A. C. out of the money that I have to pay W., provided W.'s work is completed;" held, that it was not a collateral, but a direct undertaking to pay on the completion of the work, which being proved, the plaintiff was entitled to recover. Dixon v. Hatfield,[4] 2 Bing. 439.

(n) Mac Iver v. Richardson, 1 M. & S. 557; where the defendant wrote to the plaintiff thus: "I understand that A. has given you an order for rigging; I can assure you that you will be safe in crediting him; indeed, I have no objection to guarantee you against any loss from giving him this credit." Held, that without notice, &c. this did not amount to a guaranty. See also Symmons v. Want,[5] 2 Starkie's C. 371. Gaunt v. Hill,[6] 1 Starkie's C. 10. The construction of a guaranty is of course a question of law; but it may be observed that the rule is, that the words are to be taken as strongly against the party giving the guaranty as their sense will admit. Mason v. Pritchard, 12 East, 227. A guaranty in the terms, "if you give him credit he will be responsible that his payments shall be regularly made to the extent of ——l.;" held that it was to be constructed as such reasonable credit as the principals might agree upon, and not according to the terms of the trade. Simpson v. Manley, 2 C. & J. 12. A guaranty for any goods which the plaintiff "hath or may supply to W. P. to the amount of 100*l.*" is a continuing guaranty, and extends to any goods supplied till the credit be recalled, although goods exceeding 100*l.* in value have been supplied. A bond for advances to be made to a specified amount is not a continuing guaranty. Kirby v. The Duke of Marlborough, 2 M. & S. 18. Secus, where a warrant of attorney is given to secure 4,000*l.*, and there is nothing to manifest an intention that it was given to secure an existing balance at the time. And see Williams v. Rawlinson, 1 R. & M. 233. "I agree to guarantee the payment of goods to be delivered to J. & A. S. at, &c., according to the custom of their trading with you;" the custom having been shown to be a monthly accounting, held that it was to be construed to be a continuing guaranty. Hargreave v. Smee, 6 Bing. 244. A guaranty given to a firm is determined by a change of the firm, unless the change is expressly provided for. Dry v. Davy, 2 Perr. & D. 249; and 10 Ad. & Ell. 30. "I hereby agree to be answerable to K. for the amount of five sacks of flour, to be delivered to T., payable in one month; Nov. 18." The plaintiff accordingly, on the 19th, delivered five sacks to T., and made a like delivery on the 21st; on the 24th T. returned part of the first delivery as of bad quality; held, that it was properly left to the jury to say whether the second delivery was under a new contract or not, and whether the whole quantity guaranteed had been furnished on the 19th; the defendant's liability began to run on the 19th, and could not be prolonged by a subsequent delivery, without evidence of express assent on his part. Kay v. Groves,[7] 6 Bing. 276. Debt on an indemnity bond to bankers, to secure advances; the condition was, that the obligors should pay the

(A) (A guaranty is a mercantile instrument, and to be construed according to what is fairly to be pre-

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxxv. 227. [2]Id. xxxv. 236. [3]Id. xxxv. 289. [4]Id. ix. 471. [5]Id. iii. 388. [6]Id. ii. 272. [7]Id. xix. 82.

sufficient; the plaintiff must also show that he has complied with the condition of the guaranty, if it be conditional, for such a claim being against 511 a surety, is strictissimi juris (o) (A). If the guaranty import that eighteen months' credit was to be given to the vendee, it is not sufficient to show that twelve months' credit was given, although six more have balance already due, and such further advances as the bankers should make "not exceeding ——l.;" the restrictive words in the condition do not avoid the bond, though the obligees advance beyond the sum stated. Parker v. Wise, 6 M. & S. 239. A continuing guaranty is countermandable by parol. Brocklebank v. Moore, cor. Abbott, C. J., Guild. Sitt. after Trin. 1823. See, as to guaranty of bills drawn on the credit of shipments by an agent, Ogden v. Aspinall,[1] 7 D. & R. 637. With respect to the construction of guaranties, and conditions as to their extent in point of time and amount, see Liverpool Water Works Company v. Atkinson, 6 East, 507. Wardens of St. Saviour, Southwark, v. Bostock, 2 N. R. 175. Hassell v. Long, 2 M. & S. 363. [Sturges & al. v. Robbins, 7 Mass. Rep. 301. Duval v. Trask, 12 ib. 154. Clark's Ex'ors v. Carrington, 7 Cranch, 300. Lanusse v. Barker, 3 Wheat. 101. Grant v. Naylor, 4 Cranch, 224. Lawrason v. Mason, 3 Cranch, 492. Rogers v. Wurner, 8 Johns. 119. Meade v. M'Dowell, 5 Binney, 195. Clarke v. Russel, 3 Dallas, 415. Mr. Wheaton's note to Lanusse v. Barker, ubi sup.] sumed to have been the understanding of the parties, without any strict technical nicety. Lee v. Dick, 10 Peters, 482. In an action founded upon a letter containing this clause, "the object of the present letter is to request you, if convenient, to furnish them, (S. and H.) with any sum they may want, as far as fifty thousand dollars, say fifty thousand dollars. They will reimburse you the amount, together with interest, as soon as arrangements can be made to do it; and as our embargo cannot be continued much longer, we apprehend there will be no difficulty in this. We shall hold ourselves answerable to you for the amount." Held, this was not an original, absolute undertaking, but a guaranty, that it covered advances only to S. and H. (who were then partners) on partnership account, and not advancess to either of the parties separately, on his separate account, that the authority thus given by the guarantor was revoked by a dissolution of the partnership; and no advances made after a full notice of such dissolution, were within the guaranty, that the letter did not amount to a continuing guaranty, for money advanced toties quoties, from time to time, to the amount of fifty thousand dollars; but for a single advance of money to that amount; that when once advances were made, to the amount of fifty thousand dollars, no subsequent advances were within the guaranty, although at the time of such further advances, the sum actually advanced, had been reduced below fifty thousand dollars, by the reimbursement of the debtors. Cremer v. Higginson, 1 Mason's C. C. R. 323. Where an individual introduced a friend to a merchant and directed him, the merchant, to let his friend have what goods he should at any time want, and charge them to him, and he would see him paid; and goods were delivered from time to time, and charged to him, although his friend kept up a long running account and made various payments which were credited, he is liable to pay a balance which has accrued. Graham v. O'Neil, 2 Hall. 474. See also Aldricks v. Higgins, 16 Serg. & R. 212. In an action upon the following letter of guaranty, written by the defendants and delivered to the plaintiffs: "Our friend, Mr. Chester Haring, to assist him in business, may require your aid from time to time, either by acceptance or endorsement of his paper, or advances in cash; in order to save you from harm in so doing, we do hereby bind ourselves, severally and jointly, to be responsible to you at any time for a sum not exceeding eight thousand dollars, should the said C. H. fail to do so." One count in the declaration was for money lent, and money had and received. Held, that upon a collateral undertaking of this sort, no such suit is maintainable. Douglas v. Reynolds, 7 Peters, 113.)

(o) Per Ld. Ellenborough, C. J., Bacon v. Chesney,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 192.

(A) (Upon a letter of guaranty, addressed to a particular person, or to persons generally, for a future credit to be given to a party in whose favour the guaranty is drawn; to charge the guarantor, notice is necessary to be given to him, that the person giving the credit has accepted or acted upon the guaranty, and has given credit on the faith of it. This is not an open question in the Supreme Court, after the decisions which have been made in Russell v. Clarke, 7 Cranch, 69. Edmondson v. Drake, 5 Peters, 624; Douglas v. Reynolds, 7 Peters, 113; and Lee v. Dick, 10 Peters, 482; Adams, Cunninghum & Co. v. Jones, 12 Peters, 207; Cremer v. Higginson, 1 Mason, C. C. R. 323. A promise to pay a debt by the guarantor qualified with a condition which was rejected, is not a waver by the guarantor of his right to notice of the acceptance of the guaranty. Reynolds v. Douglas, 2 Peters, 497. [And if notice be not given within a reasonable time, he is discharged from all liability. Cremer v. Higginson & al. 1 Mason, C. C. R. 323. Russell v. Perkins, ibid. 371. See also Stafford v. Low, 16 John. R. 67. Where A. wrote thus to B. "Should you be disposed to furnish my brother with such goods as he may call for, from 300 to 500 dollars worth, I will hold myself accountable for the payment, should he not pay you as he shall agree;" it was held, that B could not recover without proving notice to A. of the acceptance of the proposition, the amount of credit given under it, the time and term of payment, &c. Rapelye v. Bailey, 3 Com. R. 438.

A guaranty of the notes of A. cannot be applied as a guaranty of the notes of A. & B. Russell v. Perkins, ubi sup. S. P. Penoyer v. Watson, 16 John. R. 100. A letter of credit addressed by mistake to John & Joseph A. and delivered to John & Jeremiah A. will not support an action by the latter for goods furnished by them to the bearer on the faith of the letter of credit. Grant v. Naylor, 4 Cranch, 224. If A. address a letter of credit to B. in favour of C., and B. deliver part of the goods himself, and procure other persons to deliver the residue, A. is responsible only for the goods delivered by B., the interest in such letter not being assignable. Robbins v. Bingham, 4 John. R. 476. S. P. Walsh v. Bailie, 10 ib. 180].)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xvi. 306. [2]Id. ii. 352.

since elapsed (p). Where the defendant had guaranteed the plaintiff against loss, in case his, the defendant's, son became bankrupt, in order to prove the allegation that he had become bankrupt, it was held that the plaintiff was bound to prove that a commission had been actually sued out against him (q). Upon a contract to guarantee a bill of exchange for a given sum, the guarantee is not liable even to that amount, if a bill be given for a larger sum (r) (A).

Proof of notice.

In an action upon a guaranty of the price of goods to be paid by a bill, the notice of the non-payment of the bill must be given both to the drawer and guarantee, unless both drawer and acceptor are bankrupts when the bill becomes due (s) (B); but where A. became bound to B. for the honesty of C., who embezzled money, it was held that B. might maintain an action on the guaranty, although three years had elapsed without any notice having been given by B. to A. (t), and although B. had given credit to C. for the amount, the jury finding that B. had not waived the guaranty (u). It is to be observed, that this case differs from that where a bill of exchange is given, the defendant being bound not merely to pay the money, in case C. did not pay it, but being bound absolutely to pay the deficiency (x). It has been held in equity, that if an obligee enlarge the time of payment to a principal, he thereby discharges the surety (y); but this is no defence at law (z).

Fraud.

A contract to guarantee will be defeated not only by proof of any unfair and dishonest practice between the other parties, but by concealing from him any part of the contract which he ought to have known; as where the vendor and vendee secretly agree that 10*s.* per ton beyond the market price should be paid for the goods in respect of which the guaranty is given (a).

(p) Ibid.
(q) Bulkeley v. Lord,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 400.
(r) Philips v. Astling, 2 Taunt. 206.
(s) Ibid.
(t) Peel v. Tatlock, 1 B. & P. 419. But note, that A. was acquainted with the fact from another source. The jury found that B. had not waived the guaranty.
(u) Ibid.
(x) Ibid. per Heath, J.
(y) Rees v. Berrington, 2 Ves. jun. 544; 10 East, 40.
(z) Trent Navigation Company v. Harley, 10 East, 34. Where the bond was conditioned that the principal obligor should account and pay over from time to time all such tolls as he should collect for the obligees; the obligees had been guilty of laches in not examining their accounts for eight or nine years, and in not calling on the principal so soon as they might have done. See also Nares v. Rowles, 14 East, 510; where it was held that a bond for the collection and payment over of public duties might be put in force against one of the sureties, although he was not apprised of the default of the principal collector in not paying over the duties, nor called on to indemnify until after the dismissal of the principal from his office. And see Oxley v. Young, 2 H. B. 613; and vid. infra, tit. SURETY.
(a) Pidcock v. Bishop,[2] 3 B. & C. 605.

(A) (A guaranty in these words, "I warrant this note good," endorsed by a payee upon a note, is a guaranty that the note is collectable, and not that it will be paid on demand, and to charge the guarantor it is necessary to show that payment cannot be enforced against the maker. Curtis v. Smallman, 14 Wend. 231. The legal liability of the assignor of a note, as regards a guaranty, may be established partly by parol, and partly by the written assignment, whenever the parol evidence is in accordance with, and not contradictory to it. Hinchley v. Walters, 9 Watts, 179. A guaranty of a debt in the form of an endorsement of a promissory note, is obligatory upon the guarantor, and in case of non-payment by the debtor the guarantor is liable for the whole amount of the debt, and not merely for the sum received by him with the interest thereof. Oakley v. Boorman, 21 Wend. 588. A party who has engaged to guarantee the payment of the paper of another, made payable at a particular bank, is not liable upon a note drawn by such party, although it be deposited for collection in the bank specified in the guarantee previous to its maturity, and notice given thereof to the guarantor; the claim against a surety is strictissimi juris. Dobbin v. Bradley, 17 Wend. 422.)

(B) (The rule is well settled, that the guarantor of a promissory note, whose name does not appear on the note, is bound without notice, where the maker of the note was insolvent at its maturity; unless he can show he has sustained some prejudice by want of notice of a demand on the maker of the note, and notice of non-payment. Reynolds v. Douglas, 12 Peters, 497.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 404. [2] Id. x. 197.

Discharge.

An executor, it seems, is not liable in respect of advances made after notice of the testator's death, for the death is a revocation (b).

A guarantee on the sale of goods, who has paid the amount after the bankruptcy of the vendee, who had accepted a bill for the amount, need not prove any demand on the vendee as acceptor of the bill previous to the payment by him as guarantee, for the action is not on the bill itself, *512 and *the insolvency of the vendee is a primâ facie warrant to the guarantee to pay the money previous to a demand by the vendor, who held the bill (c).

A guarantee will be discharged by any unauthorized extension of the credit given to the party guaranteed (d). Mere laches does not operate to discharge (e). The assignment of a chose in action cannot discharge an obligation to guarantee (f). A party, under a guaranty of indemnity, has no right to defend an action, and put the party guaranteeing him to useless expense, unless authorized by him; held, therefore, that he could only recover the costs of the writ (g).

HABEAS CORPUS. See SHERIFF.

HAND-WRITING.

Proof of hand-writing.

THE rules which relate to the proof of hand-writing are now so well settled in practice, upon grounds, as it seems, of general convenience, notwithstanding the doubts which formerly prevailed upon this subject, and (b) Potts v. Ward,[1] 1 Marsh. 366; and see Cooper v. Johnson, 2 B. & A. 394. Where the obligation was, that J. Knapman shall perform an award, and the award was to pay 20*l.* at Easter, and 10*l.* at Michaelmas, and J. K. died before Michaelmas, it was held that the obligation was forfeited by non-payment of the 10*l.*; Kinguel v. Knapman, Cro. Eliz. 10; for the sum awarded was become a duty; secus, when no duty, as to make a feoffment. Joyner v. Vyner, T. Raymond, 415.

(c) Warrington v. Furbor, 8 East, 242.

(d) The defendant guaranteed to see the plaintiff paid "for any porter you may send to A., until you receive notice to the contrary from me;" and it appeared from the invoices that the course of the plaintiff's business was to give six month's credit, and then sometimes a bill at two months; the plaintiff having, without the knowledge of the defendant, allowed three months to elapse beyond the six, and then accepted a bill at two, virtually extending the credit to eleven months; held, that the surety was exonerated. Coombe v. Woolf,[2] 8 Bing. 156. Promise to guarantee in consideration of goods being furnished to a third person on credit, in the event of his failure; the renewal by the plaintiff of a bill which had not been paid when due, is not such a failure as was contemplated by the guarantee as to discharge the surety by not having given him notice of such renewal. Carr v. Browne,[3] 12 Moore, 62. Guaranty for the payment of coals to be delivered to N. H. at a credit of two months from the delivery; a dealing by delivery from day to day, and payment on the last day of the month by bill at two months, is not a dealing within the terms of the guaranty, although according to the custom of the trade, the agreement being silent as to that. Holl v. Hadley,[4] 5 Bing. 54; and 2 M. & P. 136. The defendant guaranteed the plaintiff to the extent of ——l. for gold he might supply to E. a goldsmith, and the plaintiff discounted bills for E., but not indorsed by him, supplying part of the amount in gold, which was used by E. in his trade; such a transaction is not within the meaning of the guaranty; it is a purchase of the bills at his own risk, and the defendant is not liable on his guaranty for the value of such gold. Evans v. Whyle,[5] 5 Bing. 485.

(e) Upon an agreement in April 1825, for the purchase of timber, the defendant subscribed a guaranty for the payment according to the conditions, in the event of the principal not doing so; and after payment of part by bills, and repeated applications, a bill was given by him for the residue, which was eventually dishonoured, and he became bankrupt in December, 1827, but the defendant was never informed of such application, nor of the bill being given; it was held, that mere laches in the party secured did not operate as a discharge to the surety unless it amounted to fraud; secondly, that the Judge correctly informed the jury that, in order to discharge the debt, time must have been given under such circumstances that the plaintiff could no longer sue the original debtor. Goring v. Edwards,[6] 6 Bing. 95.

(f) Parker v. Wise, 6 M. & S. 239. As to the admissibility of a declaration by the party guaranteed against the party who guarantees, see tit. SURETY.

(g) Gillett v. Rippen,[7] 1 M. & M. 406. The defendant as landlord, in an authority to the plaintiff to distrain certain goods, added an indemnity against all costs and charges that might arise; such indemnity only applies to cases where the distress is illegal, and which the landlord had no right to put in, and not to protect the plaintiff against the consequences of the acts of his own servants. Draper v. Thompson,[8] 4 C. & P. 84.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iv. 340. [2]Id. xxi. 253. [3]Id. xxii. 437. [4]Id. xv. 367. [5]Id. xv. 514. [6]Id. xix. 14. [7]Id. xxii. 342. [8]Id. xix. 286.

which are still entertained as a matter of theory and speculation, as to render very few observations necessary in this place. The best evidence to prove the hand-writing in question is that of a witness who actually saw the party write it; such direct evidence can, however, seldom be procured. *And, in general, to prove the hand-writing of a person, any wit- *513 ness may be called who has, by sufficient means, acquired such a knowledge of the general character of the hand-writing of the party as will enable him to swear, to his belief, that the hand-writing in question is the Belief.
hand-writing of that person (h) (A).

This knowledge of the general character of the party's hand-writing may Grounds have been acquired from having seen him write, although but once (i); or of belief.
if the witness has never seen him write, it is sufficient if he has obtained a knowledge of the character of the hand-writing from a correspondence with the party upon matters of business, or from any other transactions (k) between them, as from having paid bills of exchange according to his written directions, and for which he afterwards accounted. And when letters are sent, directed to a particular person on particular business, and an answer is received in due course, a fair inference arises that the answer was sent by the person whose hand-writing it purports to be (l); for when letters are so written in the usual and ordinary course of business, it is reasonable to presume *that they were really written by the person by whom they purport *514 to have been written, and that they have not been fabricated to answer a

(h) B. N. P. 236. Lord Ferrers v. Shirley, Fitzg. 195. See the observations made on the above passage in the case of Doe v. Suckermore,[1] 5 Ad. & Ell. 703. The defendant in ejectment produced a will, and on one day of the trial (which lasted several days) called an attesting witness, who swore that the attestation was his. On his cross-examination two signatures to depositions respecting the same will in an ecclesiastical court, and several other signatures, were shown to him (none of these being in evidence for any other purpose of the cause), and he stated that he believed them to be his. On the following day the plaintiff tendered a witness to prove the attestation not to be genuine. The witness was an inspector of the Bank of England, and had no knowledge of the hand-writing of the supposed attesting witness, except from having previously to the trial, and again between the two days, examined the signatures admitted by the attesting witness, which admission he had heard made in Court. Lord Denman, C. J., and Williams, J., were of opinion that such evidence was receivable. Per Patterson and Coleridge, Js., that it was not. It is impossible by means of any abstract, to do justice to the very able reasoning of the learned Judges in the above interesting and important case, in which all the material cases bearing on the subject were cited and remarked upon. The question was simply whether the witness had had sufficient means of acquiring such a knowledge of the general character of the hand-writing of the party whose signature was disputed, to sanction his testimony. In the course of the discussion, a case was alluded to in illustration of the uncertainty as to testimony of hand-writing, which had been mentioned by Lord Eldon, in the case of Eagleton v. Kingston, 8 Ves. 473, regarding himself. A deed was produced at a trial, on which much doubt was thrown as a discreditable transaction. The solicitor was a very respectable man, and was confident in the character of his attesting witnesses. One of them purported to be Lord Eldon himself, and the solicitor, who had referred to his signature to pleadings, had no doubt of its authenticity, yet Lord Eldon had never attested a deed in his life.

(i) Garrells v. Alexander, 4 Esp. 37. A witness who has seen a party write, but has forgotten the character of the hand-writing, may refresh his memory by referring to the instrument which he saw the party write. Burr v. Harper,[2] Holt's C. 420. Where the signature to be proved was by a mark, it was held that it might be proved by inspection by a witness who spoke to having seen the party make her mark, and to some peculiarity in it. George v. Surrey,[3] 1 M. & M. 516. If, however, his opinion, rests upon a comparison of hands, it is inadmissible. Garrells v. Alexander, 4 Esp. C. 37. As where he has merely seen the party subscribe his name to another instrument to which he is the attesting witness, and is unable to form an opinion respecting the hand-writing of the party without examining such other instrument. Filliter v. Minchin, cor. Holroyd, J., Winchester Spring Assizes, 1819.

(k) The plaintiff used an affidavit signed by a party, and the defendant's attorney swore that he had observed it, and formed an opinion which enabled him to state his belief as to the signature to an agreement attested by the party; held that it was evidence of hand-writing, as the plaintiff was precluded from questioning the genuineness of the former signature. (Cor. Park, J.) Smith v. Sainsbury,[4] 5 C. & P. 196.

(l) Per Lord Kenyon, Cary v. Pitt, Peake's L. E. 105. If a party has received letters, and acted upon them, it is a sufficient ground for belief. Thorpe v. Gisburn,[5] 2 C. & P. 21.

(A) (See Whittier v. Gould, 8 Watts, 485.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxxi. 406. [2] Id. iii. 147. [3] Id. xxii. 371. [4] Id. xxiv. 275. [5] Id. xii. 8.

particular purpose. In such case it is obviously essential that the identity of the correspondent whose letters have been received, with the party whose hand-writing is to be proved, should be established, either by the witness who received the letters, or by other reasonable evidence (m) (1).

In the case of Lord Ferrers v. Shirley (n), where the issue was upon the execution of a deed by Lord Ferrers, a witness was called to prove the hand-writing of Cottington, a subscribing witness, who was dead: he stated that his master had held an estate under the late Lord Ferrers, and that he had seen several letters appearing to have been written by Cottington, for the rent of the estate; and that his master had told him that they were the letters of Cottington, Earl Ferrers's steward. The Court, in this instance, rejected the witness, because he could not prove the identity of Cottington (o); but Lord Raymond said that it was not necessary in all cases that the witness should have seen the party write to whose hand he swears; for where there has been a fixed correspondence by letters, and it can be made out that the party writing such letters is the same man that attested the deed, it will enable the witness to swear to that person's hand-writing, although he never saw him write (A). And Page, J., said, if a subscribing witness to a deed live in the West-Indies, whose hand-writing is to be proved in England, a witness here may swear to his hand by having seen the letter of such person written by him to his correspondent in England, because, under the special circumstances of that case, there is no other way, or at least the difficulty will be great of proving the hand-writing of such subscribing witness. The Court, in this case, rejected the testimony, not

(m) Where it was proposed to prove the hand-writing of the defendant (Samuel Fry), a witness was produced who stated that he had never seen the defendant, but that he had corresponded with a Samuel Fry, of Plymouth Dock, that he had so addressed his letters, and received answers from him, and had from such correspondence acquired such a knowledge of his hand-writing as enabled him to say that the letter produced was in the same hand-writing; and evidence was given aliunde that the defendant lived at Plymouth Dock, and that no other person of the same name resided there; it was held that the evidence was sufficient. Harrington v. Fry,[1] 1 Ry. & M. 90. Hand-writing is well proved by a witness who has received letters from the party in answer to letters written to him by the witness, although the witness has never done any act in consequence of the receipt of such letters. Doe v. Wallinger, cor. Holroyd, J., Dorchester Spring Assizes, 1819. And see Gould v. Jones, 1 Blacks. 384.

(n) Fitzg. 195. (o) Ibid.

(1) [The hand-writing of a party to a receipt may be proved by a witness who has never seen him write, but who, in a course of dealings with him, has received his notes which he has paid; {or letters from him upon which he has acted;} if the witness swears affirmatively, from his own knowledge derived from these facts, that he believes the signature produced to be the proper hand-writing of the party. Johnson v. Daverne, 19 Johns. 134.

A notary public, who has seen much of the party's acknowledged writing, though he has never seen him write, was held competent to prove his signature as an attesting witness to a will. Duncan v. Beard, 2 Nott & M'Cord. 400.

The hand-writing of a surveyor to an ancient survey may be proved by a witness who has become acquainted with his hand-writing by inspecting ancient surveys avowedly made by him. Jackson v. Murray, Anthon's N. P. 77. See also Taylor v. Cooke, post, p. 657, note (m).

In the case of the State v. Allen, 1 Ruffin's Rep. 6, it was held that a witness, who has never seen a person write, nor received letters from him, and who has no knowledge of his hand-writing, but what he has derived from receiving bank-notes, in the course of business, purporting to be signed by the person, as the president of a bank, and reputed to be genuine, is incompetent to prove his hand-writing, or to prove that a bank-note purporting to be signed by him is counterfeit, at least unless the ordinary occupation of the witness renders it probable that he has received and paid large sums, so as to be a skilful judge.] {See also, Greaves v. Hunter, 2 Car. & Payne, 477.}

(A) (One of two witnesses to a deed deposed that he did not recollect witnessing it, but knew the attestation to be in his hand-writing, and that the other subscribing witness had a short time previously, but long after the commencement of the suit in which the deposition was taken, left the commonwealth, after advertising his intention so to do, and that though the deponent did not recollect having seen him write his name, he had often received letters from him, and thought the signature in question was his hand-writing. Held, that this was sufficient proof of the execution of the deed for the purpose of reading it in evidence. Russell v. Coffin, 8 Pick. 143.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxi. 388.

on account of the insufficiency of the evidence to prove the hand-writing to be that of the person who had written the letters demanding rent, but because the identity of that person with Cottington, the attesting witness, had not been made out.

The mere seeing the superscription of letters at the post-office, purporting to have been franked by the party, is not a sufficient foundation for this kind of evidence (p), for the superscription may have been forged. A witness who swears to his belief of hand-writing must form his judgment from his recollection of the general character of the hand-writing of the party, and not from any extrinsic or collateral circumstances. Mr. Caldecot was allowed to state his belief that the hand-writing was not that of Mr. Mickle, *the author of the Lusiad, because he was a very correct man in making capital and small letters where such were required; and in the writing produced that correctness was not observed; for the observation arose from the character of the hand-writing itself (q) (1). But in the later case of Dacosta v. Pym (r), the witness saying that the hand-writing was like the plaintiff's, but that he did not think it was his, because the plaintiff was too much a man of the world to sign such an account, Lord Kenyon held that the answer was improper, and that the witness ought to found his opinion upon the character of the hand-writing only. *515

Where the witness had never seen the defendant (who was sued as the acceptor of a bill of exchange) write his name till after the commencement of the action, and then only for the purpose of showing him the difference between his hand-writing and that of the acceptance on the bill, his testimony was held to be inadmissible (s).

Comparison of hands.

It is also a rule that evidence by comparison of hands is not admissible. By comparison, is now meant an actual comparison of two writings with each other, in order to ascertain whether both were written by the same person (t) (A). Here it may be observed, that such evidence is now

(p) Cary v. Pitt, Peake's Ev. 105. And see Ld. Ferrers v. Shirley, Fitz. 195. And it has been held that the full signature of an acceptor is not sufficiently proved by a witness who has seen the party sign his name but once before, when he used only the initial of his Christian name. Powell v. Ford,[1] 2 Stark. 64, Ellenborough, C. J., 1817. But this case was overruled by Lord Tenterden, C. J., in the case of Lewis v. Sapio,[2] 1 M. & M. C. 39.

(q) See Decosta v. Pym, Peake's L. E. 99, 101. (r) Ibid.

(s) Stranger v. Searle, 1 Esp. C. 14, 15. Vide 4 Esp. C. 27.

(t) Brookhard v. Woodley, Peake's C. 21. Macpherson v. Thoytes, Peake's C. 20. Stranger v. Searle, 1 Esp. C. 14. Doe v. Braham, 4 T. R. 497. Clermont v. Tullidge,[3] 4 C. & P. 1. In Brookhard v. Woodley, a paper was produced, said to be in the hand-writing of a deceased rector; in order to prove the fact, the plaintiff's counsel offered in evidence many of the returns to the Spiritual Court, of the births and burials, made in the time of the rector, and purporting to be signed by him; but Yates, J. said, "I have no doubt to reject their evidence as not admissible. I do not know of any case where comparison of hands has been allowed to be evidence at all." Sed. vid. infra, note (c); See the observations on the text, in Doe v. Suckermore,[4] 5 Ad. & Ell. 745.

(1) [In Smith v. Fenner, 1 Gallison, 175, upon a question whether an altered word in a will was in the hand-writing of the scribe who drafted it—after witnesses, who were acquainted with his hand-writing, had testified that in their opinion the altered word was not written by him, and grounded their opinion mainly on the manner of forming a particular letter, and the use of double hyphens—other witnesses, who were also acquainted with his hand-writing, were allowed to state, that certain deeds, which they produced to the jury, were the hand-writing of the scribe, and contained the peculiarity as to the particular letter and the hyphens observable in the will, and that they had frequently known him to write in this manner. "This," said the Court, "is not a mere comparison of hands. The witnesses swear as to facts and peculiarities of hand-writing, and produce the best possible proof of their own accuracy."]

(A) (In Massachusetts and [Maine.] A comparison of the signature to a written contract with other writings of the party, proved to be genuine, is proper and legal evidence to prove the signature. Hall et al. v. Huse, 10 Mass. R. 39. The Salem Bank v. The Gloucester Bank, 17 Mass. R. 1. [Homer v. Wallis, 11 Mass. Rep. 309. Hammond's Case, 2 Greenleaf, 33.

Whether, in New York, papers admitted to be genuine can be delivered to the jury, to determine by comparison, the genuineness of the paper in question—Quære. Titford v. Knox, 2 Johns. Cas. 211: But if a wit- deemed to be receivable and legal evidence of hand-writing, as distinct from evidence by comparison of hands, seems formerly to have been considered as evidence by comparison of hands, and as inadmissible, at least in criminal cases. In the case of Algernon Sydney (u), two of the witnesses who swore to their belief of his hand-writing had seen him write, and the third had paid bills purporting to have been indorsed by the defendant. Yet the prisoner in his defence insisted that nothing but comparison of hand-writing had been offered in evidence against him. And the statute reversing his attainder (x), recites that there had not been sufficient legal evidence of any treasons committed by him, there being produced a paper found in his closet, supposed to be his hand-writing, but which was not proved by any one witness to have been written by him, but that the jury were directed to believe it by comparing it with other writings of his. And in the case of the seven Bishops (y), evidence by the witnesses, who swore to their belief of the defendants' hand-writing from having seen other letters which had been written by them, was also termed evidence by comparison of hands, and the Court was divided upon the question whether the evidence was sufficient. It appears, however, that at that time it was the common practice to receive such evidence in civil cases. Powell, J., in the same case observes, "In civil actions, a slender proof is sufficient to make out a man's hand, as by a letter to a tradesman, or a correspondent, *516 or the like, but in criminal matters *such as this, if such a proof is allowed, where is the safety of your life, or of any man's life?" (z).

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 296. [2] Id. xxii. 242. [3] Id. xix. 247. [4] Id. xxxi. 406.

As to the reason of the rule which excludes evidence by actual comparison, it has been said jurors may not be able to read, and are therefore incompetent to make the comparison (a). This does not appear to be satisfactory; for if the jurors cannot read, they may nevertheless receive the evidence of witnesses who are able to make the comparison. It has

(u) 3 St. Tr. 802, 35 Car. 2.
(x) 1 W. & M. c. 7 (private).
(y) 4 Jac. 2, 4 St. Tr. 338.
(z) 4 St. Tr. 338.
(a) Macpherson v. Thoytes, Peake's C. 20. Brookhard v. Woodley, 1b. in note.

ness have no previous knowledge of the hand, he cannot be permitted to decide on it in court, from a comparison of hands. Ibid.[a] {Goldsmith v. Bane, 3 Halst. Rep. 87.}

In one case (1 Esp. 351) Lord Kenyon allowed the jury to examine papers admitted to be of the party's hand-writing, and to compare them with the writing in question. The same was allowed in one reported case in Connecticut. The State v. Brunson, 1 Root, 307. Sed vide The State v. King, stated by Mr. Day in a note to Macpherson v. Thoytes, Peake's C. 21, where two justices of the Sup. Court (a third dissenting) rejected evidence of this kind. See also Swift's Ev. 29, 30. And at Nisi Prius, in New York, it has been ruled, that after the hand-writing of a party is in evidence, his hand-writing to another instrument may be proved by calling a witness to compare it with that to be proved, and to state his inference to the jury. Roger's Adm'r v. Shaler, Anthon's N. P. 79.

The Circuit Court of the United States, sitting in Pennsylvania, have decided that hand-writing cannot be proved by comparison of hands. Martin v. Taylor, April 1803. {Reported, 1 Wash. C. C. Rep, 1.} U. States v. Johns, April 1806. Wharton's Digest, 245.[b] But in the State Court, after evidence has been given in support of a writing, it may be corroborated by comparison with an acknowledged writing of the party. M'Corkle v. Binns, 5 Binney, 349. {Farmer's Bank, &c v. Whitehill, 10 Serg. & Rawle, 110.} [Baker v. Haines, 6 Whart. 284.] And on an indictment for forgery—especially where the writing is found in the prisoner's possession—comparison of hands may be permitted. Pennsylvania v. M'Kee, Addison's Rep. 33. {But comparison of hands alone is not evidence, except in the case of public officers, who have been so long dead that better proof could not be expected. Vickroy v. Skelley, 14 Serg. & Rawle, 372.}

In South Carolina, comparison of hands is admissible as a circumstance in aid of doubtful proof; but per se, and without other proof, it is inadmissible. Bowman v. Plunkett, 2 M'Cord, 518.

In Vermont, comparison of hands is not admitted, if there be a subscribing witness to the instrument who can be produced. Pearl v. Allen, 1 Tyler, 4.

{In New Hampshire the doctrine of the State Courts of Pennsylvania has been established. Myers v. Toscan, 3 New Hamp. Rep. 47.}

See note to R. v. Cator, at the end of the fourth volume of Mr. Day's Edition of Espinasse's Reports, where this subject is elaborately treated.]

[a] Acc. Jackson v. Phillips, 9 Cowen, 94.
[b] In a criminal case. . U. States v. Craig, 4 Wash. C. C. Rep. 729.

also been suggested, that if such a comparison were to be allowed, an unfair selection of specimens might be made for the purpose of comparison. This, however, would be open to inquiry and observation, and scarcely seems to be a ground for the total exclusion of such evidence; and, perhaps, after all, the most satisfactory reason is, that if such comparisons were to be allowed it would open the door to the admission of a great deal of collateral evidence, which might branch out into a very inconvenient length. For in every case it would be necessary to go into distinct evidence, to prove each specimen produced to be genuine; and even in support of a particular specimen (if the present rule were to be broken through) evidence of comparison would be receivable in order to establish the specimen, and so the evidence might branch out to an indefinite extent (b). The ordinary practice is seldom attended with inconvenience; for if the hand-writing be not that of the party, it is more easy for him to disprove it than it would be for his adversary to prove it in case it were genuine; for it must be within his own peculiar knowledge what witnesses have so intimate an acquaintance with his hand-writing as to be able to prove the forgery; but where it is genuine his adversary has the witnesses to seek for. It cannot, however, be denied, that abstractedly, a witness is more likely to form a correct judgment as to the identity of hand-writing, by comparing it critically and minutely with a fair and genuine specimen of the party's hand-writing, than he would be able to make by comparing what he sees with the faint impression made by having seen the party write but once, and then perhaps, under circumstances which did not awaken his attention.

Notwithstanding the general rule against evidence by comparison of hands, the jury are not prohibited from comparing with the disputed signature writing in evidence before them for other purposes, and proved to be in the hand-writing of the party whose hand-writing is disputed (c), and which are not selected by the party for the purpose of comparison (d) (A).

In some instances, where the antiquity of the writing makes it impossible *for any living witness to swear that he ever saw the party write, compa- *517

(b) See the observations on this passage in Doe v. Suckermore,[1] 5 Ad. & Ell. 703.

(c) Where there was contradictory evidence respecting the defendant's hand-writing, the jury were allowed to compare letters admitted to have been written by him, with the disputed signature. Allesbrook v. Roach, 1 Esp. C. 351. Cor. Kenyon, C. J. Goodtitle v. Braham, 4 T. R. 497; and see Co. Litt. 6, b. Where in an action on a breach of promise of marriage after the hand-writing of the defendant had been proved to certain letters, another was offered which was also proved to be so, but was contradicted by the defendant's witness, and the Judge submitted it with the others to the jury to compare; held that it was competent for the jury so to do. Griffiths v. Williams, 1 J. & C. 47; R. v. Morgan, 2 M. & M. 133.

(d) Doe v. Newton,[2] 5 A. & E. 514. So in Solita v. Yarrow, 2 M. & M. 33, a bill drawn and indorsed by the defendant having been read in evidence, the jury were directed by Lord Tenterden to compare with it a letter purporting to have been written by the defendant, but as to which the evidence of hand-writing was contradictory. On an issue that the acceptance was not that of the defendant, held, that letters written by him relating to the transaction, and which had been read in evidence, might be handed to the jury. Eaton v. Jervis,[3] 8 C. & P. 273. The only exceptions to the rule that evidence of hand-writing by comparison is inadmissible, are cases of necessity; as where genuine documents are already in evidence in the cause, or are ancient, and can be proved in no other way. Doe v. Newton,[2] 1 Nev. & P.; and 5 Ad. & Ell. 351; questioning Allesbrook v. Roach, 1 Esp. 351. Upon an issue whether an indorsement was the defendant's, held that the jury could not be allowed to compare other writings with that in dispute; they can only do so with documents which are otherwise in the cause. Bromage v. Rice,[4] 7 C. & P. 548. But on the trial of an issue out of the chancery of the county palatine of Lancaster, to try whether a document purporting to have been signed by a party deceased was his genuine signature, different documents proved to be in his hand-writing, and in which he spelt his name in a different manner, were submitted to the jury for the purpose of comparison, by Gurney, B. after consultation with Alderson, J Lancaster Spring Assizes, 1833.

(A) (Upon the question as to the genuineness of a signature, the genuine signature of the same person to a paper not otherwise competent evidence in the case is admissible to enable the court and jury, by a comparison of the hands, to determine the question. Moody v. Rowell, 17 Pick. R. 490.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxxi. 406. [2]Id. xxxi. 382. [3]Id. xxxiv. 387. [4]Id. xxxii. 625.

rison of hand-writing with documents known to be in his hand-writing has been admitted (e) (A).

When admissible.

In the case of Goodtitle d. Revett v. Braham (f), a clerk from the post-office who had been employed to inspect franks and detect forgeries, was admitted on a trial at bar to give his opinion, as a matter of skill and judgment whether a will was written in a natural or imitative character (B). He admitted in his examination that he had never detected an imitation of the hand-writing of an old person who wrote with difficulty, and who might be supposed frequently to stop; and that he judged principally by seeing whether the letters were what is called painted, or passed over by the pen a second time, which might happen to any person from a failure of ink. After giving it as his opinion that the will was not genuine, a paper was produced, admitted to have been written by the person suspected of having forged the will, and he was asked his opinion whether that paper and the will had been written by the same person, and the question was objected to, but admitted by the Court (1). But in the case *518 of Cary v. Pitt (g), *Lord Kenyon refused to admit the testimony of an inspector of franks at the post-office, to prove that the hand-writing of the acceptance of a bill of exchange purporting to be the defendant's, was genuine; saying, that although such evidence had been received in the case of Revett v. Braham (h), yet, that in his charge to the jury he had laid no stress upon it. And in the case of the King v. Cator (i), an in-

(e) By Le Blanc, J., Row v. Rawlings, 7 East, 282. [Anthon's N. P. 98, note (a).] In Buller's N. P. 136, it is stated, that where a parson's book was produced to prove a modus, the parson having been long dead, a witness who had examined the parish books in which was the same parson's name, was permitted to swear to the similitude of the hand-writing, for it was the best evidence in the nature of the thing, for the parish books were not in the plaintiff's power to produce. In Taylor v. Cooke, 8 Price, 653, it was held that in order to authenticate the hand-writings of former rectors, writings alleged to be theirs might be compared with entries in the parish registers, purporting to be their signatures; for as it was their duty to sign them, it was to be presumed that the signatures are in their hand-writing. It has been said that in order to make ancient signatures available for this purpose, a witness should be produced who is able to swear, from his having examined several of such signatures, that he has acquired a sufficient knowledge of the hand-writing, as to be able, without an actual comparison, to state his belief on the subject. Per Holroyd, J., in Sparrow v. Farrant, Devon. Sp. Ass. 1819. But in Doe d. Tilman v. Turver,[1] 1 Ry. & M. 141, in order to prove that an account produced was in the hand-writing of Edward Haylis, steward of the manor of Areton, in the year 1727, which account had been transmitted to the present steward amongst other papers and books relating to the manor, by the representative of the late steward; Abbott, L. C. J., directed the person producing the paper to compare it with the hand-writing of Edward Haylis in other papers belonging to the manor, and said that he recollected Mr. J. Lawrence, on a trial at Worcester, directing a Mr. Benjamin Price, then accidentally in court, to compare an ancient writing with other papers purporting to be written by the same person; and to give his opinion on the identity of the writings. See also Morewood v. Wood, 14 East, 328; and see the observations on the above cases of Sparrow v. Farrant, and Doe v. Turver, in that of Doe v. Suckermore,[2] 5 B. & Ad. 703.

(f) 4 T. R. 497. Lord Kenyon mentioned a case where a decypherer had given evidence of the meaning of letters, without explaining the grounds of his art, and where the prisoner was convicted and executed. And Buller, J., said it was like the case of Wells Harbour, where persons of skill were allowed to give evidence of opinion.

(g) Peake's L. E. Append. After it has been sworn that an acceptance is in the hand-writing of the defendant, the latter must produce another paper copied and drawn by him, and call a clerk from the post-office to state, that from comparing the two instruments, he is of opinion that the acceptance is an imitation. Stranger v. Searle, 1 Esp. 14. Kenyon, C. J. 1793.

(h) 4 T. R. 497.

(i) 4 Esp. C. 177.

(A) (Strother v. Lucas, 6 Peters, 763.)

(B) (The judgment of persons well acquainted with bank-notes, is sufficient evidence to determine whether a note is genuine or forged; the signatures of the president and cashier of a bank may be proved by persons who never saw them write, but whose business makes them conversant with bank bills. U. S. v. Holtsclan, 2 Hayw. 379. State v. Candle, 3 Hawks. 393. See also Moody v. Rowell, 17 Pick. R. 490.)

(1) [In Abbee v. Daniels, Worcester County [Mass.] Sept. Term, 1811, Parson's, C. J. admitted skilful witnesses, who had never seen the defendant write, to swear that the signature in dispute was not, in their opinion, a natural one, nor written by the same person who made other signatures which were produced and acknowledged to be the defendant's.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxi. 399. [2]Id. xxxi. 406.

spector was admitted to swear that the libel was written in a disguised hand, but he was not allowed to give his opinion, upon a comparison of the libel with another writing, whether they had been written by the same person (A).

In order to test the veracity of a witness speaking to the hand-writing of the defendant, another paper purporting to be his writing, and not relative to the issue, cannot be put into the witness's hand, to speak to its being in the defendant's hand-writing or not (j).

In the case of Gurney v. Langlands (k), the Court held that the opinion of inspectors of franks at the post-office, whether a writing is written in a natural or imitated character, is of little weight; and refused a new trial, which was moved for on the ground that such evidence had been rejected.

An acknowledgement by a party of his hand-writing, though made pending a treaty for a compromise, is evidence against him (l).

To prove an acceptance to have been forged by J. S., the drawee cannot give evidence of similar forgeries committed by J. S. (m).

The same rules which apply to the proof of hand-writing in civil, apply also to the case of criminal proceedings (n), although, formerly, the rule in criminal cases was more rigid than in civil actions (o).

HEIR.

Proof of heirship.

Although an heir against whom a will is set up is entitled to an issue, a party setting it up against him is not (p).

When A. claims to be the heir of B., the fact of heirship is established by proof of the relationship, and of the failure of issue from such branches as would otherwise impede the descent (q). And the law not only notices the general rules of descent, but also the particular course of descent according to the custom of gavelkind and borough English (r). But where the course *of descent is peculiar to a particular manor, the local custom must be proved (s). And although the law of England adopts the laws of all Christian countries as to marriage, it does not adopt all the consequences of such marriages; the right of inheritance to lands is governed by the lex loci, and by that alone. By the general law of inheritance to socage lands, it is essential not only that the claimant should be legitimate, but

*519

(j) Griffiths v. Ivory, 3 P. & D. 179. And see Doe v. Newton,[1] 4 Ad. & Ell. 514.

(k)[2] 5 B. & A. 930. To prove the hand-writing of a member of parliament, the opinion of a clerk employed to inspect franks, who has never had occasion to apply to the member to verify his hand-writing, is insufficient. Batchelor v. Sir John Honeywood, 2 Esp. C. 714. Dissimilitude of hand-writing is evidence of little weight, and of none whatever when opposed by positive depositions to signature in the actual presence of witnesses. Young v. Brown, 1 Hagg. 570.

(l) Waldridge v. Kennison, 1 Esp. C. 143.

(m) Balcetti v. Serani, Peake's C. 142; Viney v. Barss, 1 Esp. C. 293; Graft v. Bertie, Peake's Ev. 103.

(n) Francia's Case, 6 St. Tr. 79. Layer's Case, Ibid. 275. R. v. Hensey, 1 Burr. 644. Ld. Preston's Case, 4 St. Tr. 446. De la Motte's Case, Howell's St. Tr. vol. 21, p. 810. The Attorney-General v. Le Merchant, 2 T. R. 201, n. R. v. Cater, 4 Esp. C. 117.

(o) Per Kelynge, C. J. Carr's Case; and 4 St. Tr. 338.

(p) Lorton v. Ld. Kingston, 4 Cl. & Fi. 269. (q) See Pedigree.

(r) Supra, tit. Custom. The Crown granted the dignity of an Earl to C., "et heredibus suis masculis in perpetuum," and the grantee died without issue; it was held that the dignity descended to the male heir of a collateral branch; the rules of construction applicable to grants of lands by the Crown, are not applicable to grants of honours. Earl of Devon's Case, 1 Dow. & C. 200.

(s) See tit. Custom.

(A) (In an action on the case for a libel contained in an anonymous letter sent through the post-office, comparison of hand-writing is admissible in corroboration of other evidence tending to prove the writing to have been published by the defendant. Callen v. Gaylord, 3 Watts, 321.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxxi. 382. [2] Id. vii. 118.

that he be born during marriage (t). And therefore, though a child born in Scotland of unmarried parents, domiciled there, and who afterwards intermarry there, is legitimate, yet he is incapable of inheriting lands in England (u).

In an action of covenant (v) for quiet enjoyment under a lease by the defendant's ancestor, the declaration alleged that the reversion came to and vested in the defendant by assignment thereof; the defendant pleaded by his guardian, that the reversion did not come to and vest in him modo et formâ, &c. The plaintiff proved that the estate descended to the defendant, an infant, as heir at law to the lessor; and that a person had been employed by the defendant's mother to receive the rents, and given receipts for the same to the plaintiffs as tenants of her son, and the Court of King's Bench held that the issue was sufficiently proved (x) (1).

Riens per discent.

In an action against the heir, on the bond of the ancestor (y), the plea of riens per discent admits the obligation, but it is incumbent on the plaintiff to prove assets (2). The substance of the issue is, whether the defendant had assets and a variance as to the county is not material (z); and the plaintiff may show that the land was devised to the defendant, provided the devise does not alter the limitation, for then, according to the general rule, the heir takes by descent (a); and the charging the estate with debts and legacies makes no difference, if the tenure and quality of the estate be not altered (b).

Assets.

*520

The plaintiff must prove assets according to the averment in the declaration *(c); if he declare against the defendant as heir of the obligor, he must prove assets as the heir of the obligor; for if it appear that the assets have descended immediately from an intermediate person, the variance will be fatal, the descent ought to have been specially stated (d); as where the (t) Co. Litt. 7, b. Hæres, in the legal understanding of the common law, implieth, that he is ex justis nuptiis procreatus; and again, heræs legitimus est quem nuptiæ demonstrant. See Goodwin's Case, 7 Co. 1.

(u) Doe d. Birthwhistle v. Vardill, 5 B. & C. 438. In Gordon v. Gordon, 3 Swans. 400, and in the Strathmore Peerage Case, it was held that the subsequent marriage of Scotch parents in England, did not entitle their previous issue to Scotch titles or estates.

(v) Debt on the specialty of the ancestor lies at common law against the heir. Co. Litt. 209. The remedy was extended to devisees by the 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 14; to covenant by the 11 G. 4, 1 W. 4, c. 47.

(x) Ibid. And it was held that the defendant's infaney was not available in that stage of the proceeding.

(y) This will not lie unless the heir be expressly mentioned; aliter, of an executor. Co. Litt. 209, a. 2 Will. Saund. 137, b.

(z) B. N. P. 175; 6 Co. 47.

(a) 1 Ld. Raym. 728. Reading v. Royston, 1 Salk. 242. There H. having two daughters, one of them had a son, and died, and H. devised to the son in fee: and the Court agreed to the rule, that where a devise to an heir gives the same estate which would descend, the devise is unnecessary, and nihil operatur; but they held that in the present case the heir must take by devise, for there was not a devise to the heir, since both coparceners made but one heir. See 2 Will. Saund. 7, note (4). Where the heir takes a different estate from that which he would have taken by descent, the disposition by the will must prevail; as where the estate is devised to the heir in tail (Plow. 545), or a man devises to his two daughters (Cro. Eliz. 431); but under the stat. 3 Will. & Mary, c. 14, the devise would be fraudulent against creditors, and an action might be brought against the devisee as heir and devisee. 2 Will. Saund. 7, note (4).

(b) Allam v. Heber, Str. 1270. B. N. P. 175. Clerk v. Smith, 1 Salk. 241.

(c) An allegation of assets in the county A. is satisfied by proof of assets in the county B. Dowdale's Case, 6 Rep. 47, a.

(d) Jenk's Case, Cro. Car. 151; Lill. Ent. 147; 2 Will. Saund. 7, note. A reversion expectant on an estate-tail is not assets to charge the heir upon the general issue riens per discent; but a reversion expectant on an estate for life must be pleaded specially (B. N. P. 176. Kellow v. Roden, Carth. 126). It seems that a reversion expectant on a term, or lease for years, cannot be pleaded in delay of execution (2 Will. Saund. 7, note (4). Buckly v. Nightingale, 1 Str. 665; 1 Lutw. 442; Herne, 307). Where there is a mortgage for years, the reversion in fee is legal assets, and the creditor may have judgment with a cesset executio until the defendant is the heir of the heir of the obligor, but is charged as his heir (e). So where the defendant being charged as the heir of B., it appeared that B. died seised, leaving the defendant his daughter, and that his wife was with child of a son, who was born alive, and lived for an hour; for the lands came to the defendant as heir to her brother, who was last seised (f). It is otherwise where the intermediate heirs were not actually seised, for there the defendant takes as heir of the person named (g). The defendant under this issue may give in evidence an extent against him, on a debt owing by his father on a bond to the King, but he must prove the bond, or an examined copy of it (h).

(1) [Equity will give relief against the assets in the hands of the heir, where a cause of action arose, on a covenant of the ancestor, after the settlement of his estate in the probate office, and payment of the surplus to the heir by the administrator. Booth v. Starr, 5 Day, 519.]

(2) [See Jackson v. Rosevelt, 13 Johns. 97. Labagh v. Cantine, ibid. 272. Fisher v. Kay, 2 Bibb. 434. Pea v. Waggoner, 2 Hayw. Tenn. Rep. 3. Baird & Co. v. Mattox, 1 Call, 257.]

On issue joined on the plea of riens per discent al temps del original, the defendant at common law might show that he had aliened the lands bonâ fide before the commencement of the action; but the plaintiff might, under that issue, show that the lands had been aliened by covin (i). But under the stat. 3 & 4 Will. & Mary, c. 5, s. 6, the plaintiff to such plea may reply that the defendant had lands, &c. from his ancestor before the original writ brought, or bill filed; and if upon issue joined thereon, it be found for the *plaintiff, the jury shall inquire of the value of the lands, &c. so descended (k) (1); and they must, under this statute, find the gross, and not the annual value (l). Riens per discent. *521

And by the 11 G. 4 & 1 W. 4, c. 47, s. 7 (m), where an action of debt or covenant upon any specialty is brought against any heir, he may plead riens per discent at the time of the writ brought, and the plaintiff may reply that he had lands, tenements, or hereditaments from his ancestor before the writ reversion comes into possession. Where it is a mortgage in fee, the equity of redemption is not legal assets, and the heir may plead riens per discent. Plunkett v. Penson, 2 Atk. 294. Where in debt against the heir, on the bond of the ancestor, the defendant pleaded non est factum and riens per discent, to which the plaintiff replied, lands descended, &c.; held, that being strictly a replication within the 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 14, s. 6, the jury ought to have inquired the value of the lands found to have descended, and the verdict therefore being imperfect, a venire de novo was awarded. Brown v. Shuker, 1 Cr. & J. 583. As to what shall be considered as assets by the heir, see 2 Will. Saund. 7, note (4); Co. Litt. 374, b.; 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 106. In the case of a mortgage of a copyhold in fee, the equity of redemption is not legal assets, 4 Rep. 22, a. An estate per autre vie of which the heir is a special occupant is made assets by the stat. 29 C. 2, c. 3, s. 12.

(e) Ibid. It is sufficient to charge him generally as heir, without showing how. Denham v. Stephenson, 1 Salk. 355.

(f) 2 Roll. Ab. 709, pl. 62. Kellow v. Roden, 3 Mod. 256; Dy. 68, a.; 2 Will. Saund. 7, note (4).

(g) Thus, A. being seised in fee, bound himself and his heirs, and having two sons, B. and C., limited the estate to himself for life, remainder to B. his eldest son in tail, reversion to his own right heirs. B. entered and died, leaving D., a son, who died without issue, on whose death the estate-tail became extinct, and the reversion coming into possession, descended on C., A.'s youngest son, who was the heir as well of D. as of A. Held, that B. and D. were seised of the estate-tail only, and that C. was properly charged as heir to his father, and that it was, according to the well-known rule of law, sufficient to charge the defendant as heir to him. See Co. Litt. 11, b. 15, a.; Carth. 126. Kellow v. Roden, 3 Mod. 253; 1 Show. 244; 3 Lev. 286; Bro. Disc. 14–30.

(h) Lord Raym. 734; B. N. P. 175. Horne v. Adderley, 1 Lord Raym. 734. B. N. P. 175. Payment of another bond to the amount of assets, must be pleaded. Buckly v. Nightingale, 1 Str. 665.

(i) Even before the stat. 13 Eliz. c. 5, which, in this instance, is declaratory of the common law. 1 Roll. Ab. 269; Dyer, 149; 2 Will. Saund. 7, note (4). See also Gooch's Case, 5 Co. 60. [See Hammond v. Gaither, 3 Har. & M'Hen. 218. Tremble v. Jones, 2 Murphy, 579. Spaight v. Wade, 1 Car. Law Repos. 284. Hamilton v. Haynes, Cam. & Nor. 413. Graff v. Smith's Adm'rs, 1 Dallas, 481. Morris's Lessee v. Smith, 4 ib. 119. S. C. 1 Yeates, 238.]

(k) When the plaintiff replies according to this statute, he is not entitled to a general judgment, as he was at common law, but can recover only to the value of the land sold as found by the jury. Redshaw v. Hester, Carth. 354; Comb. 344; 5 Mod. 119, 122. If the jury neglect to find the value, the Court will award a venire de novo. Jeffrey v. Barrow, 10 Mod. 18, 19. So under the late stat. 11 G. 4 & 1 W. 4, c. 17, s. 7. Brown v. Shuker, 1 C. & J. 583. [S. C. Gilb. Cas. 141, 279.]

(l) Carth. 354.

(m) This sec. corresponds with sec. 5 of the stat. 3 & 4 W. & M. This may be pleaded although the heir had not aliened the lands.

(1) [Sed vide Cohoons v. Purdie, 3 Call. 431, where a general verdict for the plaintiff (without finding the value of the land) was sustained.]

brought; and if upon the issue joined thereon, it be found for the plaintiff, the jury shall inquire of the value of the lands so descended, and thereupon judgment shall be given. If the jury, on issue joined on the plea of riens per discent, find that he has something, however small, the plaintiff is entitled to a verdict and general judgment; it is therefore in such case unnecessary to prove the amount of assets (n) descended.

By the stat. 11 G. 4 & 1 W. 4, ss. 2 & 3, an action of covenant lies against a devisee (o).

HIGHWAY (p).

An indictment for the non-repair of a highway, is, I. either against the inhabitants of a parish; or, II. against the inhabitants of some other district; or, III. against an individual.

Proof against a parish.

I. As against a parish, upon the plea of not guilty, it is necessary to prove, 1st, that the road in question is a highway, as alleged, within the parish; 2dly, that it is a public highway; 3dly, that it is out of repair. For, 1st, the liability of the parish to repair all public highways situate within it, is a matter of common-law obligation (q), from which the parish cannot in general discharge itself, except by a special plea, which shows that some other district, or some individual, is liable (r), or under some special act of parliament.

Variance.

If the road be improperly described in an indictment or plea, the variance will be fatal; as where a highway leading from A. to B. and communicating with C. by means of a cross road, was described as a road leading from A. to B. and from thence to C. (s). But it has been held to be unnecessary to state the termini of the highway; and therefore a plea of justification in *522 *trespass, stating that a public highway leading from a public highway from A. to B., in, through, over and along the locus in quo, to a certain other highway (leading from C. to D.), was held to be supported by proof that it led from the road from A. to B. over the locus in quo into another road, E., and along that road into the road from C. to D. (t).

Where the terminus ad quem was laid to be a public highway, and it appeared in proof that it was a public footway, it was held that the description was sufficient (u). The objection, that the description of the road in the indictment is too general, and is applicable to several other roads, cannot be taken upon the trial under the plea of not guilty, but ought to be taken by a plea in abatement (x).

Where a highway was alleged to be a highway for all the liege subjects, (n) 2 Will. Saund. 7, a. (n) B. N. P. 176.

(o) At common law a devisee was not liable either in debt or covenant to any specialty creditor. See Wilson v. Kemble, 7 East, 128. This was partially remedied by the stat. 3 & 4 W. 3, c. 14, s. 2, which did not, however, extend to an action of covenants. It has been held that this Act does not extend to any disposition made by the obligor by deed in his lifetime. Parslow v. Weedon, 1 Eq. C. Ab. 149; 2 Saund. 8, (e).

(p) See the stat. 55 G. 3, c. 68; 3 G. 4, c. 126; 4 G. 4, c. 95; 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 24. As to evidence of appointing a trustee of a turnpike road, 3 G. 4, c. 126, s. 134. Notice before commencing actions or informations, Ib. s. 103; and see 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 50.

(q) This common-law obligation does not extend to an extra-parochial district. R. v. Kingsmoor,[1] 2 B. & C. 190.

(r) 1 Vent. 90, 183, 189; 2 T. R. 106. No agreement with others will discharge the parish (3 East, 86). Where the inhabitants of a township, bound by prescription to repair all the roads within it, were expressly exempted by an act of Parliament from the repairing of a new road, it was held that the burthen devolved upon the parish at large. 2 T. R. 106.

(s) R. v. Great Canfield, 6 Esp. 136.

(t) Rouse v. Bardin, 1 H. B. 351, Loughborough dissent.

(u) Allen v. Ormond, 8 East, 4. But it was said that the description might have been held to be insufficient on special demurrer.

(x) R. v. Inhab. of Hammersmith,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 357.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ix. 60. [2]Id. ii. 425.

with horses, carriages, &c., it was held to be sufficient, although the way passed under an arch, and could not be used by carriages unless laden in a particular way (y).

2dly. That it is a public highway.—The proof is either direct or presumptive; direct, as by showing that the highway has been constituted a public one by competent authority, or presumptive, by evidence of the use of a road which is of public convenience, by the public, which affords a presumption of their right so to use it, as against a private claimant. Proof that it is a public highway.

The proof is direct where the road is proved to have been made under some statute or proceeding by writ of ad quod damnum (1).

By the stat. 13 Geo. 3, c. 78, s. 19 (z), where any highway has been diverted or turned above twelve months, either from necessary or other causes, and new highways, &c. have been made for the benefit of the public, and no suit or prosecution has been commenced for the diverting or turning the same, the new highway shall from thenceforth be the public highway to all intents, and persons liable to the repair of the old highway shall also be liable to the repair of the new in the same manner as of the old. This clause, it has been held, is retrospective only (a).

By another clause of the same section (b), provisions are made for future Direct evidence.

(y) R. v. Lyon,[1] 5 D. & R. 497.

(z) This clause is not repealed by the stat. 55 Geo. 3, c. 68.

(a) Waite v. Smith, 8 T. R. 133.

(b) This has been repealed by the stat. 55 Geo. 3, c. 68, which requires more public notices in such cases, gives greater facility of appeal to the sessions, and gives power to the justices, under certain regulations, to stop up unnecessary highways, &c. See as to the proceedings under this stat. R. v. Sheppard,[2] 3 B. & A. 414. The stat. 55 G. 3, c. 68, does not repeal the stat. 13 G. 3, c. 78, s. 62; and therefore notice to the justices of holding a special session, at which an order is made, is necessary; R. v. Justices of Worcestershire, 2 B. & A. 228. Where the order for stopping up an useless old road referred to a plan annexed, but the notice affixed merely described the number of yards of such road to be stopped, without stating the termini, or referring to any plan; held that the former was sufficient, but not the latter. R. v. Horner, 2 B. & Ad. 150. Where the trustees upon a new road being made over the plaintiff's land, for which he was to be compensated by receiving the old road in exchange, by one and the same order for stopping up, directed the soil to be given up to the plaintiff, held, that as in the case of a party, sui juris, agreeing for the sale of the lands, no conveyance was necessary under sec. 84 of 3 Geo. 4, c. 126, so in the case of an exchange by the permission of such a party to the making of a new road over his soil, it became effectually dedicated to the public without an actual conveyance, and that he might maintain an action of trespass in respect of the old road. Allnutt v. Pott,[3] 1 B. & Ad. 302, and 3 M. & Ry. 439, n. Where an order for diverting a highway substituted a line of road, part newly made under the order, and part along a new turnpike road, held, that it not appearing on the face of the order that the public would have secured to them as permanent a right on such new turnpike road as they had before, the order was bad. The Court could not intend that the new turnpike was a public highway; if the Act made it a turnpike road for a limited period only, it would subsist as a public road for that period only. And quære, whether an old road can be diverted for carriages and continued for foot passengers. R. v. Winter,[4] 8 B. & C. 785. Under the 55 Geo. 3, c. 68, an order may be made by justices for stopping up an unnecessary footway, without ordering a sale; the words of the latter branch of sec. 2 are to be taken distributively, and the effect is, that justices may stop up in all cases, but must direct a sale in those cases only where a highway or bridleway has been stopped up. R. v. Glover, 1 B. & Ad. 483; overruling the construction put on that section in R. v. Kenyon, 6 B. & C. 640. Where the order for stopping up a highway stated that the justices "having upon view found, or, it having appeared to us," &c. that the highway was an useless and unnecessary one; held bad under 55 Geo. 3, c. 68, s. 2, which makes it necessary that it should appear upon view to the justices. R. v. Justices of Worcestershire,[5] 8 B. & C. 254; S. C. R. v. Rogers,[6] 2 M. & Ry. 289. An order for diverting a highway, containing also an order for stopping up the old highway, and not any statement that the justices have viewed the course proposed for the new one; held invalid. R. v. Kent Justices,[7] 10 B. & C. 477. As to the surveyor's authority. Bouverie v. Miles,[8] 1 B. & Ad. 48. Witham Navigation Co. v. Padley,[9] 4 B. & Ad. 69. Lowen v. Kaye,[10] 4 B. & C. 3. Alston v. Scales,[11] 9 Bing. 3. As to the form of the order, R. v. Glover,[12] 1 B. & Ad. 483. R. v. Kenyon,[13] 6 B. & C. 640. R. v. Justices of Worcestershire,[5] 8 B. & C. 624.

(1) {See Colden v. Thurber, 2 Johns. 424. Stiles et al. v. Curtis, 4 Day, 328. Canaan v. Greenwoods Turnpike Company, 1 Conn. Rep. 1. The People v. Lawson, 17 Johns. 277. Commonwealth v. Inhabitants of Charleston, 1 Pick. 180.}

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xvi. 243. [2] Id. v. 330. [3] Id. xx. 393. [4] Id. xv. 338. [5] Id. xv. 210. [6] Id. xvii. 303. [7] Id. xxi. 119. [8] Id. xx. 340. [9] Id. xxiv. 26. [10] Id. x. 260. [11] Id. xxiii. 242. [12] Id. xx. 432. [13] Id. xiii. 290.

*diversions of highways, by two justices at special sessions, by the consent of the owner of lands.

It has been held, that in an action of trespass, on issue taken on a plea that the locus in quo was a public highway, the legality of an order of justices in ordering the old highway to be stopped up before a new one has been made and put into a proper state, might be questioned, although the order of justices for stopping up the old road had been appealed against and confirmed at the sessions (c); and that evidence was admissible to show that a new road, such as the Act requires, had not been made previously to the order for stopping up the old road (d).

Where a highway lies in an open field, and the passengers are accustomed to turn out of the principal track when it is founderous, these outlets are part of the highway (e).

Where a man assigns a road out of his own land, because the highway is founderous, it does not become a highway till it be so found by writ of ad quod damnum (f).

Where trustees are authorized to make a road from one point to another, the making the old road is a condition precedent to any part becoming a highway repairable by the public (g).

Presumptive evidence.

Or next, the evidence is presumptive, and presumptions are to be derived from the termini and other circumstances of the road itself, and from the use and enjoyment of it by the public.

Termini.

It is not essential that the termini of the road should be either market-towns or public roads, provided it be proved that the public are entitled to use it, and that it has been of public convenience. The public may have a *right to a road as a common street, although there be no thoroughfare (h), or to a road terminating in a common (i).

*524

So it may be a highway, although it is circuitous (k), and although it is used by the public but occasionally, and although it does not terminate in any town, or in any other public road (l); and on the contrary, it is not necessarily a public highway, although it does lead from one market-town to another, or connect any two points by a line which might be advantageously used by the public, or is used by them under certain restrictions (m).

Enjoyment.

Evidence to prove a public highway consists usually in showing that the public have used and enjoyed the road; and their actual occupation of it without interruption for a considerable space of time affords a strong presumption of a right to use it; and, as will afterwards appear, a much shorter

(c) Welsh v. Nash, 8 East, 394. As to the form of the order, see Davidson v. Gill, 1 East, 64. The stat. as to the residence of the justice within the hundred is merely directory. 8 East, 399.

(d) The notice of appeal against an order should state that the appellant is aggrieved. R. v. Justices of Essex,[1] 5 B. & C. 431. Notices to the justices of the district, signed by the chief constables and by their authority served on the justices, are notices on the justices within the statute 13 G. 3, c. 78, s. 62. R. v. Justices of Suffolk.[2] 6 B. & C. 110.

(e) 1 Roll. 390, l. 10. (f) Cro. Car. 267.

(g) R. v. Cumberworth,[3] 3 B. & Ad. 108. R. v. Hepworth, cor. Hullock, B., York Lent Assizes, 1829. (Addition in Appendix). R. v. Inhabitants of Mellor, Lancaster Assizes.

(h) Rugby Charity v. Merryweather, 11 East, 375. But see Woodyer v. Haddon,[4] 5 Taunt. 125. The plaintiff erected a street leading out of a highway across his own close, and terminating at the edge of the defendant's adjoing close, which was separated from the end of the street for twenty-one years (during nineteen of which the houses had been completed, and the street watched, cleansed and lighted, and both the footways, and half the causeway, paved at the expense of the inhabitants) by the defendant's fence. The defendant then pulled down his wall; but it was held that he could not use the highway as a public highway from his own close.

(i) R. v. Wandsworth, 1 B. & A. 63. [See 7 Johns. 106.]

(k) R. v. Lloyd, 1 Camp. 261; 3 T. R. 265. (l) R. v. Inhab. of Wandsworth, 1 B. & A. 63.

(m) See 11 East, 376, note (a).

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xi. 264. [2]Id. xiii. 113. [3]Id. xxiii. 38. [4]Id. i. 34.

period of possession will suffice to indicate a right in the public, than to show that a private person has a title to the estate of which he is possessed (1). The particular manner in which it has been used, as where it has been used for some public purpose, as for conveying materials for the repairs of other highways (n), or upon any occasion likely to attract notice, is very material; for such instances of user would naturally awaken the jealousy and opposition of any private owner who was interested in preventing the acquisition of any right by the public, and consequently acquiescence affords a stronger presumption of right than that which results from possession and user in ordinary cases. Although the termini of a road afford no conclusive evidence as to its being a highway (o), yet the circumstances of its leading from one market-town to another, or from one public road to another, coupled with user by the public, and without decisive evidence of interruption and permission by a private owner, are conclusive as to the right of the public (p).

Repairs.

Proof of the repair of the road by a parish is strong evidence to show that it is a public highway (q); and evidence of repairs done by a parishioner, *under an agreement with the parish that he shall therefore be excused his statute-duty, is virtually evidence of repairs by the parish (r). *525

Length of time.

The enjoyment and user of a road by the public is frequently evidence of a right in the public, although the user is of modern date, provided that user has been attended with circumstances of publicity, from which an acquiescence on the part of the original owner, and a dedication by him of the road to the public, may be inferred. Thus it has been held, that a permission to the public for the space of eight, or even of six years, to use a street in London, without bar or impediment, is evidence from which a dedication to the public may be inferred (s) (2). So where a court situated on one side of a public street in London was left open to the public, and occasionally used as a communication from one part of the street to another, (n) R. v. Wandsworth, 1 B. & A. 63.

(o) 2 East, 375; 1 Camp. 262. The Strand and Covent Garden are connected by a road which, in point of law, is a private road, although constantly used by the public.

(p) 1 Vent. 189.

(q) R. v. Wandsworth, 1 B. & A. 63. But where a local Turnpike Act required the inhabitants to do statute duty upon the new roads set out and made by the trustees under the Act, the powers of which were limited to twenty-one years, and the Act expired, the common-law obligation to repair only attaches in respect of such roads as have been made by the trustees and adopted by the public; and the fact of having done statute duty, as required by the Act, during its continuance, does not furnish a ground for presuming an adoption to render them liable. R. v. Mellor,[1] 1 B. & Ad. 32. Where private roads, set out under an Inclosure Act, were improperly directed by the commissioners to be repaired by the inhabitants and occupiers in the same manner as public highways, it appeared that a road, set out as a private road, had been used by the public and repaired by the parish above twenty years; held, first, that the commissioners had no power to make such order, nor were the inhabitants bound to obey; and secondly, that if the inhabitants had repaired under a mistaken notion of their liability, and not on a voluntary disposition to repair the road, as one useful and convenient for the public, the defendants were entitled to be acquitted. (Tenterden, L. C. J.) R. v. Edmonton, 2 M. & M. 24.

(r) Ibid.

(s) Trustees of Rugby Charity v. Merryweather, cited 11 East, 376. But see Woodyer v. Haddon,[2] 5 Taunt. 125; supra, 524, note (s); and see Jarvis v. Dean, 3 Bingh. 447.

(1) [A road used as such for forty years, and repaired, is to be considered as regularly laid out, though no record can be found. Ward v. Folly, 2 Southard's Rep. 582. See also Galatian v. Gardner, 7 Johns. 106. Todd v. Inhab'ts of Rome, 2 Greenleaf, 55. {But in Massachusetts it has been held, that a public town way can only be established in the mode prescribed by St. 1786, c. 67; and the record of the establishment of such a way cannot, it seems, be presumed from a user for any length of time. Comm. v. Low, 3 Pick. Rep. 408}.]

(2) {The principle of dedication of a way has not been adopted in Massachusetts. Hinckley v. Hastings, 2 Pick. Rep. 162.}

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xx. 337. [2] Id. i. 34.

a dedication to the public was presumed (t). Where a lease was granted of certain ground to be a passage for fifty-six years, evidence of an user of the road by the public three or four years after the expiration of the lease, was held to be evidence of a gift to the public (u). Presumptions thus derived may be rebutted by proof that the owner did not acquiesce in the use by the public. The acquiescence of a lessee will not bind the reversioner, without such evidence of acquiescence on his part as will afford a presumption of a grant by him (x). So the erection of a bar upon the road is evidence to rebut the presumption of a dedication to the public (y), although the bar has been long broken down (z). And although the bar does not exclude foot-passengers, no right to a public footway can be presumed, since there cannot, it is said, be a partial abandonment to the public (a).

But where land is vested in trustees for public purposes, they may dedicate the use of the surface to the public as a highway, provided such use be not inconsistent with the purpose for which the land is vested in them (b).

Where a road has been set out under a local Act, by commissioners, for the use of particular persons, but in fact has been used by the public for many years, this is not, it seems, sufficient evidence of a dedication, without evidence of acquiescence on the part of the parish (c).

And it has been held, that in order to charge a parish with the repairs of *526 *a road as a public highway, it was necessary to show that the parish had adopted the highway by proof of repairs done (d): the contrary, however, had since been decided; the adoption of a parish is no more than the use of the road by the public, the parish being part of the public (e).

Reputation. Evidence of reputation is admissible to prove that the way is public (f); but evidence of this nature arising post litem motam, is not admissible (g). So a verdict upon issue taken on a public right of way, and finding it to be (t) R. v. Lloyd, 1 Camp. 261; 3 T. R. 265. (u) R. v. Hudson, Str. 909.

(x) 11 East, 376. And see tit. PRESUMPTION. Where a way, situate in Westminster, which was not a thoroughfare, had been treated as a highway for a century, and been enumerated in a public Act as a public road, but had during the whole period been let on lease, it was held that the jury were right in deciding that it was not a public way, inasmuch as there could be no dedication to the public by the tenants for ninety-nine years. Wood v. Veal,[1] 5 B. & A. 454, and qu. whether that could be public highway which is not a thoroughfare. Ibid. Where the road adjoining to houses had been used by the public for four or five years, leading from White Conduit-street, and communicating with a public highway, it was left to the jury to say whether there had been a dedication to the public, and on the jury finding that there had, the Court refused to disturb the verdict. Jarvis v. Dean,[2] 3 Bing. 447.

(y) Roberts v. Karr, 1 Camp. 262; 11 East, 375. Lethbridge v. Winter, 1 Camp. 263. And it has been held that the owner of the soil may replace the bar after it has been broken down twelve years.

(z) Ibid.

(a) 1 Camp. 263, n. Barraclough v. Johnson, 3 N. & P. 233.

(b) R v. Inh. of Leake,[3] 5 B. & Ad. 469. Jarvis v. Dean,[2] 3 Bing. 447.

(c) R. v. St. Benedict,[4] 4 B. & A. 447; see Campbell v. Wilson, 3 East, 294. But where a public Act recognizes a public highway, no adoption of it by the parish is necessary. R. v. Lyon,[5] 5 D. & R. 497.

(d) R. v. St. Benedict[4] 4 B. & A. 450; and see R. v. Cumberworth,[6] 3 B. & Ad. 312.

(e) R. v. Leake,[3] 5 B. & Ad. 469.

(f) Vent. 189. But an award made under a submission by a tenant for years, as to his liability to repair ratione tenuræ, is not evidence against another, for it was made pos litem motam. R. v. Cotton, 3 Camp. 444. But on an issue as to a right of way, where the road had been used by the public for thirty years, the defendants having put in a document forty years old, drawn up at a parish meeting called to resist the repairs then attempted to be thrown on them, stating the lane to be private property, subject to a foot and bridleway, and signed by thirteen inhabitants, twelve of whom were dead, and the other was called as a witness; it was held to be admissible evidence, although slight, of reputation; it appearing also that twenty-two years before the action an agreement had been made between the owner of the soil and a colliery company, to allow them the use of the road, paying 5*s.* a year, and supplying cinders for the repair, which the parish were to spread; held, that although the acts of user, taken alone, might be evidence from which to infer a dedication, yet, being all referable to the agreement, it amounted only to a license, upon compliance with the terms imposed. Barraclough v. Johnson, 3 Nev. & P. 233.

(g) Ibid.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. vii. 158. [2]Id. xiii. 45. [3]Id. xxvii. 107. [4]Id. vi. 482. [5]Id. xvi. 243. [6]Id. xxiii. 38.

such, is afterwards evidence (h), although such issue be taken in an action of trespass between private parties, and be offered in evidence to prove the fact between other parties in a civil action, (i), and the rule applies to all cases of public prescription (k).

By the stat. 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 50, s. 23, no road to be thereafter made by and at the expense of any individual or private person, body politic or corporate, nor any roads already set out or to be thereafter set out as a private drift-way or horse-path, in any award of commisioners under an Inclosure Act, shall be deemed or taken to be a highway (repairable by the parish), without three calendar months' notice of the proposal to dedicate such highway, nor unless the same shall have been made in a substantial manner, and of the width required by the Act, to the satisfaction of two justices of the peace of the division, who are required to view the same, and certify, &c., such certificate to be enrolled at the sessions; and after twelve months' use of such road by the public, being kept in repair in the meantime by the party dedicating it, is to become a highway repairable by the parish.

Against some other district.

II. Upon an indictment against the inhabitants of some other district than a parish, or against an individual, the prosecutor, on the plea of "Not guilty," must prove, in addition, the obligation upon the defendants to repair the road, as alleged in the indictment, since it is not founded on a presumption of law (l). The obligation in such a case arising from inhabitancy must be prescriptive (m), and must be proved as in other cases of prescription, to have existed time out of mind. The evidence in such case will depend, in some measure, upon the way in which the prescription is alleged. If a prescriptive obligation to repair the particular road be alleged, *the evidence will be confined to proof of the repairing of that particular road (n). If a prescriptive obligation to repair all public roads within the district be alleged, proof must be given of such repairs within the division, and in such case it is unnecessary to prove that the road in question is an ancient road (o); but if it should appear that there is any road within the township or other division, which is not repaired by the township or division, but by the parish at large, the variance would be fatal, unless the exception were specially alleged (p). Again, if the indictment alleged a division of the parish into particular districts, and averred a custom for each district to repair its own roads, independent of the rest, evidence of such a general custom would be admissible; but in such case, if it appeared that any one road in the parish was repaired by the parish at large, the variance would be fatal (q). It is not necessary to aver, in a special plea by a parish, which alleges that a sub-division is liable by prescription to repair the roads within it, and it is also unnecessary to prove, under such a plea, or in an indictment, any consideration for the liability (r).

Proof of a prescriptive obligation.

*527

(h) Reed v. Jackson, 2 East, 355; vide supra, Vol. I. tit. REPUTATION. (i) Ibid.

(k) Per Ld. Kenyon, 2 East, 357. See Vol. I. p. 30.

(l) R. v. Martin, Andr. 226. The inhabitants of a town, &c. cannot be liable to the repair of a bridge, &c. ratione tenuræ, for they cannot hold lands. R. v. Inhabitants of Pennegoes,[1] 2 B. &. C. 166.

(m) Doug. 421.

(n) As to the nature and extent of such proof, see tit. PRESCRIPTION.

(o) R. v. Netherthong, 2 B. & A. 179; 2 T. R. 106.

(p) R. v. Ecclesfield,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 393. The allegation of an obligation to repair all roads within the township, which, but for the said custom, would be repairable by the inhabitants of the parish at large, was introduced in order to prevent surprise from proof of the existence of roads repairable ratione tenuræ. P. C. in R. v. Fylingdales,[3] 7 B. & C. 438.

(q) Ibid.

(r) R. v. Inhabitants of Ecclesfield, 1 B. & A. 348. R. v. Inhabitants of St. Giles, Cambridge, cited Ibid. Gateward's Case, 6 Co. 810; vide etiam, R. v. Inhabitants of W. R. of Yorkshire,[4] 4 B. & A. 623. Secus,

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ix. 52. [2]Id. ii. 442. [3]Id. xiv. 476. [4]Id. vi. 543.

A county liable to the repairs of a public bridge, is liable to the repairs of the road for 300 feet at each end of the bridge (s).

Of liability ratione tenuræ.

III. Upon an indictment against an individual, in addition to the proof that the road is a public highway, and that it is out of repair, the prosecutor must prove the obligation to repair as alleged in the indictment. To show a liability ratione tenuræ, the defendant must be proved to be the occupier of the lands in respect of which the obligation arises, since the law looks to the visible occupier, and not to the owner (t), whom it may be difficult to ascertain, for the performance of the duty. But since the obligation to repair ratione tenuræ implies a prescription (u), the prosecutor must prove the prescription by showing acts of repair by the defendant, or by former occupiers; and according to the number of instances in which repairs have been made by the occupiers for the time being, a stronger or weaker degree of presumption arises as to the obligation, as in other cases of prescription. Where the defendant, being charged ratione tenuræ, pleaded that his liability arose from an encroachment which had been removed, it was held that evidence of repairs done by the defendant for twenty-five years after the removal of the encroachment was presumptive evidence that the defendant repaired ratione tenuræ (x).

*528 *Where an entire estate is liable to the repair of a road, and the estate is divided into several parts, the occupier of each part is liable to the whole duty (y).

Obligation by reason of inclosure.

By reason of inclosure or encroachment.—The prosecutor must prove the fact of inclosure on one or both sides of the highway; and since the public had before the inclosure a right to use the field for passage, when the highway was out of repair, the law, after the defendant has by inclosure deprived the public of that right, imposes upon him the burden of repairing it (z). If he inclose on both sides, he will be liable to the repair of the whole of the road; if he incloses on one side only, leaving the other side open, he is bound to repair one moiety only (a); but although he inclose on one side only, yet if there be an ancient inclosure on the other, he will be bound to repair the whole (b). This obligation remains no longer than the inclosure or encroachment; and therefore the defendant may show in defence, that before the alleged offence he had thrown down the inclosure, and restored the road to its former state (c).

Defence by a parish, not guilty.

A parish cannot, under the plea of "not guilty," enter upon any defence which does not negative one of the allegations in the indictment, viz. that the road is a public road, is situated within the parish, and is out of repair. In order to discharge themselves from the obligation to repair, the inhabitants must plead specially that some other persons are liable, and upon where the road is not within the parish, R. v. St. Giles's, Cambridge, and P. C. B. R. Sittings after T. T. 1823.

(s) R. v. W. R. of Yorkshire, 7 East, 588, 22 H. 8, c. 5; semble, that in general the party liable to repair the bridge is also liable to repair the adjoining highway. Ibid.

(t) 1 Roll. 390, l. 60; and see R. v. Watts, 1 Salk. 357. As to the liability to repair ratione tenuræ where a road has been diverted or widened, see R. v. Balme, Cowp. 648; 13 G. 3, c. 84, s. 62, 63; 4 G. 4, c. 95.

(u) Upon an issue of liability to repair ratione naturæ of an ancient mill, which was shown not to exist before the time of Hen. 8, held, that it could not be supported; it is essential to prove the liability from time out of memory. R. v. Hayman,[1] 1 M. & M. 401.

(x) R. v. Skinner, 5 Esp. C. 219. R. v. Stoughton, 2 Saund. 157, 12. 2 Keb. 625. Amb. 295. The defendant may be bound by prescription to repair the road before his own house. Mar. pl. 71.

(y) R. v. Duchess of Buccleugh, 1 Salk. 357. 3 Salk. 77. Supra, 440.

(z) Cro. Car. 366; 1 Roll. 390; Jon. 296.

(a) 1 Sid. 464. 2 Starkie's C. per Abbott, C. J.

(b) Ibid.

(c) Per Keeling, 2 Saund. 160. R. v. Skinner, 5 Esp. C. 219.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxii. 341.

issue joined upon such an alleged obligation, are bound to prove it (d). Where, however, the parish is relieved from its obligation by a public Act of Parliament, it seems that they may take advantage of the statute, upon the plea of "not guilty" (e); but unless the Act expressly discharge the parish from the burden of repairs, it will still remain liable, although the Act directs that trustees shall take tolls, and apply the money to the repair of the road (f). So where the trustees of a turnpike road had repaired the road under the authority of the Act for twenty years, it was held that they were not liable to the repair of the road, there being no clause in the Act obliging them to repair the road (g). So where a township is bound by prescription to repair all the highways within it, it cannot be discharged without showing by evidence some persons certain who are bound to repair the road (h). But where a township is charged with a prescriptive obligation to repair a particular road, or an individual is charged ratione tenuræ, or ratione clausuræ, it is sufficient to negative the special charge by proof that some others are liable, without fixing upon whom in certain (i).

Upon an indictment for obstructing a public road (k) or navigable river, *the defendant may prove, in answer to the charge, that the obstruction was by accident, and did not arise from intention, or through negligence. Where a barge was sunk by misfortune in a navigable river, it was held that no indictment could be supported for not removing it (l); so it may be proved that the obstruction arose from the exercise of a right by the defendant, as by the holding of a fair there, after an user of twenty years (m). Indictment for obstruction. *529

It has already been seen, that an acquittal upon a former indictment for not repairing a highway, is not conclusive evidence, if it be evidence at all, to discharge the defendant (n); but that a conviction is usually conclusive as to the obligation to repair, unless fraud be shown (o). Upon an indictment for the non-repair of a road ratione tenuræ, it was held that an award made under a submission by a former tenant of the premises, could neither be received as an adjudication, the tenant having no authority to bind the (d) Plea, that M. M. is bound to repair, absque hoc, that the defendants are liable, the defendants are to begin notwithstanding the traverse. R. v. Inhabitants of Southampton; cor. Holroyd, J., Summer Lent Ass. 1818. Manning's Index, 215, 2d edit. P. 672, note (t). Vide etiam, R. v. Bourbon, 5 M. & S. 392.

(e) R. v. St. George's, Hanover-square, 3 Camp. 222.

(f) R. v. Netherthong, 2 B. & A. 179.

(g) R. v. The Commissioners of Landilo District, Carmarthenshire, 2 T. R. 232. An agreement with another that he shall repair a road, does not exempt the parish. 1 Vent. 189. Neither does the King's grant. 3 Mod. 69.

(h) R. v. Inhabitants of Hatfield,[1] 4 B. & A. 75. (i) Ibid.

(k) Under the 57 Geo. 3, c. 29, s. 72 (Metropolis Paving Act), the authority given to the surveyor to remove such things as impede the public passage, is to be confined to such things as project upon the public ways, and cannot be extended to rails, &c. standing on a line and enclosing a space over which the public never have had a right of passage. Bouverie v. Miles,[2] 1 B. & Ad. 38.

(l) R. v. Watts, 2 Esp. C. 675.

(m) R. v. Smith, 4 Esp. C. 109. 2 Saund. 175, n. 2.

(n) Vol. I. tit. JUDGMENT. But yet it has been considered to be such evidence, that upon the acquittal of the inhabitants of a parish the Court has suspended the judgment, in order that the case might again be tried without any prejudice from the former verdict. R. v. The Inhabitants of Wandsworth, 1 B. & A. 63. And Lord Ellenborough said, that to maintain the verdict would be to send the parties to a second trial with a mill-stone about their neck, the weight of which it would be impossible to resist. See also R. v. Burbon, 5 M. & S. 322.

(o) Ibid. and see R. v. Wandsworth, 1 B. & A. 63. R. v. Andrews, Peake's C. 219. If judgment be given against a parish, whether it be after verdict or by default, the judgment will afterwards be conclusive evidence of liability, unless fraud be shown, and fraud is put by way of example: if other districts can show that they had no notice of the indictment, the defence having been made and conducted entirely by the district in which the highway indicted lay, without their knowledge and privity, the Court will consider it as being substantially an indictment against that district, and give the other districts liberty to plead the prescription, to a subsequent indictment for not repairing the highways in that parish. R. v. Townsend, Doug. 421. R. v. Lancaster, Hil. 40 G. 3, 2 Saund. 159, a. note (10).

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 355. [2]Id. xx. 340.

rights of his landlord, nor as evidence of reputation, having been made post litem motam (p).

Competency. Where upon an indictment for the non-repair of a road, which lay in two parishes, the obligation was laid to be ratione tenuræ, it was held that the inhabitants within the parishes were not competent witnesses on the part of the prosecution (q). It has also been held, that inhabitants of a parish are not competent to give evidence for the parish, although they are so poor as to be excused from the payment of taxes, because, as it is said, although at present they are poor, they may become rich (r). It may, however, well be doubted whether any inhabitant would not be competent unless he were liable to some duty in respect of the highway in question (s). It has been held, upon an indictment against a parish, that a rated inhabitant of another parish, in which the defendants insisted that the highway was situated, was not competent to prove the contrary (t). It seems that the prosecutor is a competent witness, although the Court may award costs against him, if the proceeding shall appear to have been vexatious (u).

*530 *A witness is competent to prove a road to be a highway, although he has agreed to let, at an annual rent, a way across his own land, which cannot be used unless the disputed road be established (x).

Upon an indictment against the township of Pilling, in the parish of Garstang, charging the inhabitants with the obligation to repair all roads within the township, held that an inhabitant of the adjoining township of Nateby, in the same parish, was competent to prove that the road in question, which extended through Nateby, was a public highway. For although a conviction would discharge the parish, yet it would afford evidence to show that the road was a public one, and so to charge Nateby (y).

The statute 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, s. 100, provides that no person shall be deemed incompetent to give evidence or be disqualified from giving testimony or evidence, in any action, suit, prosecution, or other legal proceeding, to be brought or had in any court of law or equity, or before any justice of the peace under or by virtue of this Act, by reason of being an inhabitant of the parish in which any offence shall be committed, or of being a treasurer, clerk, surveyor, district surveyor, assistant surveyor, collector, or other officer, appointed by virtue of that Act.

By the stat. 3 Geo. 4, c. 126, s 137, inhabitants of parishes, &c. are competent witnesses on proceedings for the conviction of offenders, for offences against the Act.

A party rated to the highway rates is not rendered a competent witness on an indictment for not repairing a highway, such not being "a matter relating to the rates or cesses," within the 54 Geo. 3, c. 170 (z).

But by the late stat. 3 & 4 Vict. c. 26, no person shall be disabled from

(p) R. v. Cotton, 3 Camp. 444. (q) R. v. Buckeridge, 4 Mod. 48.

(r) R. v. Inhabitants of Hornsey, 10 Mod. 150.

(s) See the stat. 34 Geo. 3, c. 74, s. 6. R. v. Inhabitants of Terrington, 15 East, 471. R. v. Kirdford, 2 East, 559. And tit. INTEREST—INHABITANTS. See also Vin. Ab. Evidence, 17, the Peterborough Bridge Case.

(t) By Bayley, J. at Nottingham, cited 15 East, 474.

(u) See R. v. Inhabitants of Hammersmith,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 357; for semble it will not be presumed that the proceeding is frivolous, especially after a bill has been found by a grand jury. So if the indictment has been removed by certiorari. See tit. INTEREST.

(x) Pollard v. Scott, Peake's C. 18.

(y) R. v. Inhabitants of Pilling, Lancaster Summer Ass. 1823, cor. Holroyd, J.

(z) R. v. Bishop's Auckland, 2 Mo. & R. 286. But in R. v. Hayman,[2] M. & M. 401, Tindal, C. J., is reported to have held that rated parishioners were admissible to prove a liability ratione tenuræ, and see Heudebourck v. Langstone, M. & M. 402 (n). But see Vol. I. p. 159; R. v. The Recorder of Bath,[3] 9 Ad. & Ell. 714.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 425. [2]Id. xxii. 341. [3]Id. xxxvi. 249.

giving evidence by reason only of such person being, as the inhabitant of any parish or township, rated or assessed or liable to be rated or assessed to the relief of the poor, or for or towards the maintenance of churches, chapels, or highways, or for any other purpose whatsoever.

Commissioners of a highway cannot maintain ejectment for strips of land by the side of the highway (a).

HUNDRED.

Under the late Act 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 31 (b), which repeals former statutes giving a remedy against the hundred in the case of robbery, &c. except as to offences before then committed, it is essential to prove:—

*That the conditions specified in the 3d sect. of the Act have been complied with, which prescribe that the person or persons damnified, or such of them as shall have knowledge of the circumstances of the offence (c), or the servant or servants who have the care (d) of the property damaged, shall within seven days (e) after the commission of the offence, go before some justice of the peace residing near (f) and having jurisdiction over the place where the offence shall have been committed, and shall state upon oath *531

(a) Doe v. Roe, 8 Sc. 146. Upon the question as to slips of land between a highway and private inclosures belonging to the lord of the manor, the Court, upon a bill of exceptions, held, that grants of similar slips, at a distance from the spot claimed, were to be confined to such as were situated by the side of the highway which passed by the plaintiff's inclosures. Doe d. Barrett v. Kemp,[1] 2 Bing. N. C. (c. p.) 102. S. C. 7 Bing. 332; and 5 M. & P. 173.

(b) The remedy against the hundred under this st. extends to houses, &c., buildings used in carrying on trade, &c., machinery employed in any manufacture, &c., engines for working mines, &c., bridges, waggonways to mines, &c. feloniously demolished, pulled down or destroyed, wholly or in part, by any persons riotously and tumultuously assembled together. The remedy is extended by the st. 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 72, to threshing machines or to any erection or fixture belonging to such machines.

(c) It is therefore unnecessary to examine all the owners or all the servants, and this seems to have been the rule under the st. 9 G. 1, c. 22; so that the alteration does not seem to have substantially altered the law in this respect. See the cases, note (d).

(d) Where the examination, taken before the justices according to the 9 Geo. 1, c. 22, s. 8, was only of the steward of the landlord having the superintendence of the farm on which the fire occurred, it appearing that there were several other servants of the landlord in possession of, and using parts of the premises; held, that the latter were also to be deemed "persons having the care," &c. within the words "servant or servants," of the Act, and ought to have been examined, or shown that they had no means of knowledge, and consequently that the Act had not been complied with to entitle the party to his remedy against the hundred. Duke of Somerset v. Mere,[2] 4 B. & C. 167. But that where the principal, having knowledge, &c., has been examined, it is not necessary that the servants should also be examined. Under the 9 Geo. 1, c. 22, it was held, that where no servant was in the care of the premises at the time, the examination of the party himself was sufficient; and although the justice may inquire as to his suspicions of the offender, there was nothing in the Act requiring suspicions to be stated. Pellew v. Inhabitants of Wonford,[3] 9 B. & C. 134. Where premises are under the care of several servants all ought to be examined. Duke of Somerset v. Mere,[1] 4 B. & C. 167. But where one servant has the general care of the property, he is the proper person to be examined, although other servants may have the special care of particular parts. Lowe v. Broxtowe,[4] 3 B. & Ad. 550. Where the owner of the premises maliciously set on fire, gave in his own examination, held that it was sufficient, without that of his servants; the statute requiring only the evidence of servants "having the care" of the premises, which is to be understood as referring to cases where the master is absent, and the primises are left in the charge of servants. Rolf v. Inhab. of Elthorne,[5] 1 M. & M. 185. And see Nesham v. Armstrong, 1 B. & A. 146; infra, note (g). In the case of a reversioner, his own oath is sufficient, without examining the tenant or his servants. Pellew v. Inhabitants of Wonford, supra.

(e) The days within which the notice is to be given from the act done, are to be reckoned exclusive of the day on which it is done. Pellew v. Inhabitants of Wonford, 9 B. & C. 134. See below, 534, note (b). And see Lester v. Gurland, 15 Ves. 247. Where a computation is to be made from an act done by the party, the day of doing the act shall be included, but not otherwise. Ib.

(f) Under the st. 27 Eliz. c. 11, s. 11, it was held that the justice need not be within the county at the time of administering the oath, for the act is merely ministerial. B. N. P. 186; 1 Jones, 239; Cro. Car. 211; 1 Leon. 323; 2 Will. Saund. 376, b. Where the robbery was committed twenty miles from the residence of the justice, and although many justices lived nearer, Abney, J., on a case reserved, held it to be sufficient, considering the statute to be directly on that point. Lake v. Hundred of Croydon, Lent, 1744, B. N. P. 186. And it has been held to be no objection that the examination was taken out of the jurisdiction, it being taken by a justice who usually resided with his family within the jurisdiction. Helier v. Benhurst, Cro. Car. 211.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxix. 271. [2]Id. x. 303. [3]Id. xvii. 343. [4]Id. xxiii. 145. [5]Id. xxii. 286.

before such justice the names of the offenders, if known (g), and shall *532 *submit to the examination (h) of such justice touching the circumstances of the offence, and become bound by recognizance before him to prosecute the offenders when apprehended; provided also, that no person shall be enabled to bring any such action, unless he shall commence the same within three calendar months after the commission of the offence.

The plaintiff under this section should be prepared to prove the examination by its production if taken in writing (i), and the due taking by some witness who was present at the time (k). If the plaintiff himself was not examined, it should be shown that those who were examined were his servants having the care of the property (l): the recognizances should also be produced and proved.

It is sufficient to show that the party presented himself to be examined in case the justice should think proper (m).

2dly. The plaintiff must prove a felonious (n) demolition and destruction of the property by persons riotously and tumultuously assembled, as alleged (o), within the hundred (p).

It seems to be necessary, under the present statute, as well as under the statute 1 Geo. 1, s. 2, c. 5, to prove either that the mob did demolish, pull (g) In an action under the st. 52 Geo. 3, c. 130, the 4th sect. of which requires that the person or persons seeking to recover damages shall within four days after notice, &c. give in his or their examination on oath, or the examinations on oath of his or their servant or servants that had the care of his or their erections, buildings, &c. before a justice of peace, &c. whether he or they know the person or persons who committed the fact, it was held that the oath of one of several partners, negativing his own knowledge of the offender, but without stating that to the best of his belief the other partners had no knowledge, was insufficient. Nesham and others v. Armstrong, 1 B. & A. 146. Under the stat. of Eliz. it was, it seems, insufficient for the plaintiff to swear that he did not know the robbers, without adding "or any of them." Noy. 21; Com. Dig. Hundred, C. 4; Trimmer v. Inhab. of Mutford,[1] 6 D. & R. 10. In King v. Inhab. of Bishops Sutton, 2 Str. 1247, it was held to be insufficient for the plaintiff to state that he had good reason to suspect that the fact was done by R. G. and W. L.; for there is a great difference between knowing and suspecting.

(h) The examination ought, it seems, to be taken in writing: qu. and vide B. N. P. 186, which cites Graham v. Hund. of Becontree, cor. Wythers, J., to show that such an examination, under the former statutes, need not be in writing; the plaintiff, however, would comply with the condition of the statute in submitting himself to examination.

(i) It is unnecessary that the justice should take the examination in writing; it is sufficient if he appear upon the trial, and prove the substance of the matter sworn. Graham v. Becontree Hundred, B. N. P. 186, (under the stat. 27 Eliz). If the affidavit has been taken in writing, no other evidence but that is admissible; but that may be read, it is said, on proof that it was delivered to the person producing it, by the justice's clerk, without proving his hand-writing.

(k) See, however, Graham v. Becontree, B. N. P. 186, and note (i).

(l) supra, note (d).

(m) Lowe v. Broxtowe,[2] 3 B. & Ad. 550, per Ld. Tenterden.

(n) See the stat. 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 8.

(o) By the sec. 2, if any church or chapel, or any chapel for the religious worship of persons dissenting from the United Church of England and Ireland, duly registered or recorded, or any house, stable, coach-house, outhouse, warehouse, office, shop, mill, malthouse, hop oast, barn or granary, or any building or erection used in carrying on any trade or manufacture or branch thereof, or any machinery, whether fixed or moveable, prepared for or employed in any manufacture or in any branch thereof, or any steam engine or other engine for sinking, draining or working any mine, or any staith, building or erection used in conducting the business of any mine, or any bridge, waggon-way or trunk for conveying minerals from any mine, shall be feloniously demolished, pulled down or destroyed, wholly or in part, by any persons riotously and tumultuously assembled together, in every such case the inhabitants of the hundred, wapentake, ward or other district in the nature of a hundred, by whatever name it shall be denominated, in which any of the said offences shall be committed, shall be liable to yield full compensation to the person or persons damnified by the offence, not only for the damage so done to any of the subjects hereinbefore enumerated, but also for any damage which may at the same time be done by any such offenders to any fixture, furniture or goods whatever, in any such church, chapel, house or other of the buildings or erections aforesaid. It is not necessary to aver a felonious demolition in express terms provided it appear that a felony has been committed. Beatson v. Rudiforth, 4 Marsh. 362; 7 Taunt. 45; 3 Price 48.

(p) See Constable's Case, Hob. 246. 2 Will. Saund. 375, N. Where a distinct hundred is called the half-hundred or upper hundred, and the action is brought against the hundred of A., the plaintiff is liable to a nonsuit. Constable's Case, supra. But if the half hundred of A. be in fact part of the hundred of A., the defendants, it is said (2 Will. Saund, 375 b., note (3),) ought to plead in abatement.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xvi. 251. [2]Id. xxiii. 145.

down and destroy the dwelling-house, &c., or that they began to do so; for here, as under the former Act, the right is given to recover against the *hundred, which otherwise would have merged in the felony (q). The breaking windows, window-frames and shutters, is a sufficient beginning to demolish, if the criminal agents intended to demolish; that intent may be confirmed, or rebutted, by circumstances. If, whilst they are occupied in the work of destruction, they are suddenly interrupted by a civil or military force, the presumption is that they would have proceeded to demolition if they had not been so interrupted (r); for what they intended to do must be inferred from what they were doing. But if the mob retire without actual interruption, and without demolishing, it is for the jury to say whether they intend to demolish, or merely to effect mischief short of demolition (s). Where they do not demolish, although they have it in their power to do so, it may be presumed that they did not intend to demolish (t). *533 Intention.

It was held under the stat. 9 G. 1, c. 22, that the term dwelling-house was used in that statute as descriptive of the species of property intended to be protected, and therefore that the owner of a dwelling-house might recover in respect of such an injury done to it, although no part of it was occupied by him or his family as a dwelling-house (u). The plaintiff is entitled to recover not only for the damage done to the subjects enumerated in the statute, but also for the damage at the same time done by any such offenders to any fixture, furniture or goods whatever in any such church, chapel, house, or other building (x). Dwelling-house.

It should appear that the plaintiff was the owner of the property; of this, possession is primâ facie evidence. The trustee even of a satisfied term, in whom the legal estate is vested, is entitled to recover (y).

(q) See Lord Ellenborough's observations in Lord King v. Chambers & another,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 195. [S. C. 4 Camp. 377.;] and in Beckwith v. Wood,[2] 2 Starkie's C. 263; 2 Will. Saund. 377. Burrows v. Wright, 1 East, 615. Greasely v. Higginbotham, Ibid. 636. Under the stat. 57 G. 3, c. 13, it was held to be necessary to prove to the reasonable satisfaction of the jury that the fire was wilfully and maliciously occasioned. R. v. Gainsbury,[3] 4 D. & R. 250. Holt's C. 603.

(r) See Lord Ellenborough's observations, Lord King v. Chambers,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 195. Sompson v. Chambers, 4 Camp. 221. The defendants having broken the windows, sashes, and destroyed furniture, departed, having manifestly completed their purpose; held, that it did not amount to a "beginning to demolish," within the 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 8. R. v. Thomas,[4] 4 C. & P. 237.

(s) See Ld. Ellenborough's observations, Lord King v. Chambers,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 195; and Reid v. Clarke, 7 T. R. 496. In the case of Lord King v. Chambers, Ibid., the mob retired after breaking the windows, window-frames, &c. and in about five minutes afterwards the street was occupied by the military. The jury found for the defendant. In the case of Beckwith v. Wood,[2] (2 Starkie's C. 263), the mob attacked the house to effect the liberation of a person confined there, and they announced their intention to pull down the house if he was not delivered up. And see R. v. Thomas,[4] 4 C. & P. 237; Price's Case, 5 C. & P. 510; R. v. Batt,[5] 6 C. & P. 329.

(t) Reid v. Clarke, 7 T. R. 496; 2 Starkie's C. 265.

(u) Rea v. Wood, 2 Starkie's C. 269. But a building intended for a dwelling-house, but not completed, is not a house, outhouse or barn, within the 9 Geo. 1, c. 23, s. 7, so as to enable the owner to recover against the hundred. Elmore v. Hundred of St. Briavells,[6] 8 B. & C. 461. By the late stat. 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 72, the provisions of the 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 31, are extended to threshing machines. The words house, shop, or other buildings, under the stat. 57 G. 3, c. 19, were held not to include hustings erected to take elections. Allen v. Ayre,[7] 3 D. & R. 96.

(x) 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30, s. 2; before this statute, where the demolition and injury was part of the same riotous transaction, the plaintiff was entitled to recover in respect of such contemporaneous damage. Greaseley v. Higginbotham, 1 East, 636. Hyde v. Cogan, Doug. 699. Wilmot v. Horton, ib. 701, n. Secus, in the case of a distinct substantive offence. Beckwith v. Wood, 1 B. & A. 487, where arms were stolen from a gunmaker's shop; and see Smith v. Bolton,[8] Holt's C. 201; and in this respect the law seems to remain as it was.

(y) Pritchett v. Waldron & another, 5 T. R. 14. Parties jointly interested may join. Winterstoke Hundred's Case, Dyer, 370. One of two lessees may recover, according to his share. Lowe v. Broxtowe,[9] 3 B. & Ad. 558. As to the case of a church, chapel or corporation property, see sec. 11. A reversioner may sue. Pellew v. Inh. of Wonford,[10] 9 B. & C. 134.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 353. [2]Id. iii. 342. [3]Id. xvi. 202. [4]Id. xix. 363. [5]Id. xxv. 423. [6]Id. xv. 266. [7]Id. xvi. 240. [8]Id. iii. 72. [9]Id. xxiii. 145. [10]Id. xvii. 343.

*3dly. The sum requisite to restore the premises to the state in which they were before is the proper quantum of damages (z).

4thly. The plaintiff must prove by the production of the writ, or otherwise (a), that the action was commenced within three months after the offence committed (b).

By sec. 5, no inhabitant shall by reason of any interest arising from such inhabitancy be exempted or precluded from giving evidence.

HUSBAND AND WIFE.

I. Evidence in actions by the husband and wife, or one of them, p. 534.
II. In actions against the husband and wife, &c. p. 538.
III. Indictments against them, p. 548.
IV. Competency, p. 549.

Action by husband and wife.

I. Joint action by the husband and wife.—In general, when the husband and wife join, the interest of the wife must be alleged in the declaration (c); and consequently, if she has been improperly joined, the defect appears upon the record, and is not matter of proof in defence upon the trial (A).

(z) Duke of Newcastle v. Hundred of Broxtowe,[1] 4 B. & Ad. 273.

(a) See TIME. The commencement of the action would now appear on the record.

(b) See the st. sec. 3. According to the decisions under the stat. 27 Eliz. c. 13, s. 9, the day of committing the offence is to be included. It was held under that statute, that if a robbery be committed on the 9th of October, the action must at the latest be commenced on the 8th of October next. Norris v. Hundred of Gawtrey, Hob. 139; 2 Roll. Ab. 520; 1 Brownl. 156; Doug. 465. And see Price v. Hundred of Chewton, 1 P. Wms. 437. But now see Pellew v. Wonford,[2] 9 B. & C. 134, and tit. TIME.

(c) 2 Bl. Rep. 1236. Com. Dig. Pleader, 2 A. 1. [Staley v. Barhite, 2 Caines R. 221.] [And where a bond and warrant of attorney were given to a feme dum sola, who afterwards married, the Court, upon affidavit of facts, allowed judgment to be entered in favour of baron and feme. Sheble v. Cummin, 4 Browne's Rep. 253.] She must join in respect of all causes of action which are complete before the marriage (3 Lev. 493; Co. Lit. 351; 7 T. R. 340; Com. Dig. Baron and Feme, V.;) {Donaldson v. Maginnes, 4 Yeates, 127}; so in real actions, and actions of waste (1 Bulst. 21; 7 Hen. 4, 15 a.; 3 Hen. 6, 53); or personal injury to the wife, by slander or battery, during coverture (Yelv. 89; 1 Brownl. 205; 2 Cro. 501, 538; Com. Dig. Baron and Feme, V.) She may join wherever there was an inception of the cause of action in her before coverture, although it become complete afterwards (2 Saund. 47, g.; Salk. 114; 2 Lev. 107; Cro. Eliz. 459; Com. Dig. Baron and Feme, X.) (1); yet in detinue, except for the charters of the wife's inheritance, it is said that the husband must sue alone (B. N. P. 50; 1 Salk. 114; Bac. Ab. tit. Detinue, A. But see R. tem. Hardw. 120); or where she is the meritorious cause of action; as, where a bond or promissory note is made payable to her (Phillis-kirk v. Pluckwell, 2 M. & S. 393. Day v. Pasgrave, cited Ibid. from Mr. Ford's note, 3 Lev. 403; 2 Mod. 217; Salk. 114; 4 Mod. 156; Peat v. Taylor, Cro. Eliz. 61). [Banks v. Marksberry, 3 Littell's R. 281.] In an action for use and occupation, the wife may join with her joint-tenant and her husband. P. C. B. R. Smith v. ——, Mich. 2 G. 4. Or where an express promise is made to pay money to her for her service, as by the cure of a wound (Brashford v. Buckingham, Cro. Jac. 77, 205. Rose v. Bowler, 1 H. B. 106. Waller v. Baker, 2 Wils. 414); or the husband alone may sue (2). So the husband may sue alone on a covenant to husband and wife in respect of the wife's land. Arnold v. Revoult,[3] 1 B. & B. 443. See Beaver v. Lane, 2 Mod. 217. So where she was joint plaintiff in a former action, and a cognovit was given. Wills v. Nurse,[4] 1 Ad. & Ell. 65. Where the action would not survive to the wife, she must not be joined (Com. Dig. Baron and Feme, W.); as, where words not actionable are spoken of the wife, and occasion special damage to the husband. 1 Salk. 206; 1 Lev. 140; 1 Sid. 246. The husband and wife cannot sue as partners in this country, although they are foreigners, and may be partners by the law of their own country, where they resided when the cause of action, a balance of account, was contracted. Cosio & others v. De Bernales,[5] 1 Ry. & M. 102. A note given to the wife dum sola, for money lent and not reduced into possession by the husband, does not survive to him. Galers v. Maderley, 6 M. & W. 423.

(A) (The husband may join the wife where there is a promise to her or to him and her in writing, as by bond or note; or where there is an express verbal promise to her or to him or her, in consideration of her services, or her property, and in actions to recover the rents of her lands. In these cases she is considered as the meritorious cause of the action. Lewis v. Martin, 1 Day, 263; 2 Conn. R. 565.)

[Husband and wife cannot join in detinue for a chattel of the wife, if the husband had actual or constructive possession after the marriage. Spiers v. Alexander, 1 Ruffin's Rep. 67. But they must join in detinue to recover the wife's chattels, of which she had lost possession dum sola. Crozier v. Gano, 1 Bibb, 257.]

(1) [As in an action of account for the rents and profits of the wife's land during coverture. Lewis v. Martin, 1 Day, 263; though the husband may sue alone. Chauncey v. Strong, 2 Root. 369.]

(2) [Where a bond is given to a feme executrix or administratrix during coverture, styling her executrix, &c., the husband may sue on it alone. Stewart v. Chance, 2 Penn. Rep. 827.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxiv. 55. [2]Id. v. 141. [3]Id. xxviii. 40. [4]Id. xi. 421. [5]Id. xi. 421.

It is unnecessary, unless the defendant deny the marriage by a plea in abatement, to give any evidence of the marriage (d); it is sufficient to *identify the parties; the defendant cannot impeach the marriage by evi- *535 dence under the general issue.

Where the action is brought in respect of an injury done to the wife, as by slander or imprisonment, and consequential damages to the husband are also laid, for which he ought to have sued alone, no evidence ought to be given of such special damage, and the defect will be aided by a special verdict, confining the damages to the detriment to the wife (e). As if the declaration allege a battery of both (f), or a battery of the wife, and the taking the goods of the husband (g), or the imprisonment of the wife, per quod the affairs of the husband remained undone (h) (1).

By the husband alone.—If the husband alone bring an action where his wife ought to have joined, as in debt on a bond, or for a chose in action, due to the wife before coverture (i), or for a personal wrong done to the wife, either before or during coverture, as by slander or battery of the wife, where the action is not founded on special and consequential damage to the husband (k) the declaration will be bad; but the objection usually appears on the record, and does not arise upon the evidence (l). By the husband alone.

Where the husband sues in respect of special damage to himself, in con-

(d) Dickenson & Ux. v. Davis, 1 Str. 480; B. N. P. 20; Cro. Jac. 655. [Coombs v. Williams, 15 Mass. R. 243.]

(e) 2 Mod. 66; 2 Lev. 101; 1 Lev. 3; Com. Dig. Pleader, C. 87. In Russell v. Corne (1 Salk. 119), where in an action by the husband and wife for the imprisonment of the wife, the declaration alleged, per quod, the affairs of the husband remained undone, it was held, according to the report in Salkeld, that the per quod was well laid in aggravation; but in Str. 1094, Lee, C. J. said that he had seen a manuscript note of the case in Salkeld, and that Holt, C. J. said that he would not intend that the Judge suffered the husband to give the special damage in evidence. In Todd v. Redford (11 Mod. 264), which was an action by the husband and wife for an assault on the wife, per quod the husband expended money in her cure, and entire damages were given, it seems to have been held that the verdict might be supported. It seems, however, to be clear in principle, that where a special damage results to the husband from an injury to the wife, for which an appropriate action lies for the husband, he cannot recover jointly with the wife. See Dix v. Brooks, Str. 60. [See Yelv. 90, note 1.] In trespass on the lands of the wife, they may recover in respect of the grass cut and carried away. Cro. Eliz. 96. Willy v. Hawksmore, cited in Weller v. Baker, 2 Wils. 424. In case by husband and wife for slander of the latter, held that special damage for loss of the wife's service could not be recovered, which would accrue to the husband alone. Dengate v. Gardiner, 4 M. & W. 5.

(f) 2 Mod. 66. Com. Dig. Pleader, C. 87. Per Powell, J., Todd v. Redford, 11 Mod. 264. If husband and wife join for the battery of both, it is wrong; but it may be helped by a verdict separating the damages, and judgment may be given for the damages to the wife, and the writ will abate for the residue. B. N. P. 21; 9 Edw. 4, 51; Cro. Jac. 655. [See March, 47. Style, 429. 6 Mod. 149. Ebersol v. Krug & ux. 3 Binney, 555.]

(g) Com. Dig. Pleader, C. 87. Dub. 1 Lev. 3, if the defendant be found not guilty as to the goods.

(h) Str. 1094. Russell v. Corne, 1 Salk. 119. Newman v. Smith, Salk. 642. Dix v. Brookes, Str. 60. But see Todd v. Redford, 11 Mod. 264; supra, note (e).

(i) 1 Rol. 347. Milnes v. Milnes, 3 T. R. 627; 1 Sid. 24.

(k) Yel. 89; 1 Brownl. 205; 1 Roll. 360; Cro. Car. 90; Com. Dig. Baron and Feme, V.

(l) See the different cases, Com. Dig. Baron and Feme, T. W. X. It seems to be an invariable rule, that the wife must be joined in respect of all causes of action which are complete in the wife before coverture, and which of course will survive to her; but there are several instances in which a cause of action accrues during marriage, and which would survive to the wife, and where the husband may sue alone, as in the case of a bond or promissory note given the wife during coverture. Supra, 534. Howell v. Main, 3 Lev. 403. See also Saville v. Sweeney,[1] 4 B. & Ad. 514. Words are spoken of the wife in a separate business, per quod, &c. the wife must not be joined.

(1) [In an action by husband and wife against A. for driving his horse and chaise against the plaintiff's chaise, judgment was arrested, because the declaration charged injuries to the damage of the husband only, as the loss of the wife's labour, &c. Barnes & ux. v. Hurd, 11 Mass. Rep. 59. But in Lewis v. Babcock, 18 Johns. 443, the Sup. Court of New York held, that though such a declaration was bad on demurrer, it was good after verdict.

In ejectment by husband and wife, in right of the wife, advantage may be taken on the general issue of the wife's being the wife of another man and not of the plaintiff. Les. of Lopez v. Mayer & al. 1 Yeates, 551.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxiv. 108.

sequence of a personal injury to the wife, or lays the assault upon the wife, or other personal injury to her, in aggravation, he is entitled to recover in respect of the damage to himself only, and not for the injury to the wife; for the action for the latter damage would survive to the wife (m); but he *536 *may allege and prove that in aggravation, in respect of which he cannot maintain another and more appropriate action. Thus, in trespass, for breaking and entering his house, he may allege the assaulting and menacing his wife, servants, and children, in aggravation (n), in order to show the enormity of the trespass (o). So it seems, although the contrary has been held (p), he may, in an action of trespass for breaking and entering his house, give in evidence loss of service, or other consequential damage which has accrued from a trespass on his wife or daughter (q).

In an action by the husband alone, in respect of consequential damage from a trespass against the wife, it is incumbent on the plaintiff to give primâ facie evidence of marriage, and that the defendant may negative the fact of marriage by a plea in bar or by evidence under the general issue.

The husband may maintain an action in his own name for the service or labour of his wife (r); and if he bring such an action in respect of earnings during cohabitation, it is no answer to show that she was previously married to another who is still living, for she may be considered as servant to the plaintiff (s). In such an action, it seems that an admission by the wife, such as a receipt given by her, is not evidence (t), unless, perhaps, there be some evidence to show that the husband had constituted her his agent for that purpose (u).

In an action by the husband for harbouring his wife, per quod, &c., the defendant may, under the general issue, show that he did not wrongfully detain her, by showing violent conduct on part of husband during derangement from habits of intoxication (x).

By the wife alone.

Action by the wife.—The wife cannot sue without the husband (y) (1), (m) Dix v. Brooks, Str. 60, where the plaintiff declared for breaking and entering his house, and assaulting his wife, and the Court, on motion in arrest of judgment, said that the plaintiff might join that in his declaration to aggravate damages for which he could not singly recover, and for which the party injured might have a separate action; as in the common case of beating a servant, per quod servitium amisit (2). In Newman v. Smith (Salk. 642), it was held that the plaintiff might allege the beating of his daughter (in an action of trespass, q. c. f.) in aggravation of damages, although the loss of service could not be given in evidence, because for that he had an appropriate action; and that he might in such an action recover also for a personal injury to himself. But see Bennett v. Alcott, 2 T. R. 166.

(n) Newman v. Smith, Salk. 642. Dix v. Brooks, Str. 60.

(o) Ibid. (p) Ibid.

(q) Bennett v. Alcott, 2 T. R. 166.

(r) Salk. 114; B. N. P. 136; Cro. Jac. 77. For the promise in law is made to him; but on an express promise to the wife they may join. Ibid.

(s) Per Parker, C. J., Str. 80. (t) Per Lec, C. J., B. N. P. 136.

(u) Supra, tit. AGENT.

(x) Per Alderson, B., Braithwaite v. Jackson, Lanc. Lent Assizes, 1835. The pleas were, 1, not guilty; 2, that the husband conducted himself with cruelty and violent threats, which produced reasonable fear, in consequence of which she left the house. Per Alderson, J., if the defendant knew that the detention was against the plaintiff's will, then the question is, did the defendant act on the bona fide belief that the husband misconducted himself; if so, the jury should find for the defendant under the general issue.

(y) Marshal v. Rutton, 8 T. R. 545; although she lives separately from her husband, and has a separate maintenance secured by deed. Neither can she be sued alone. Ibid. A feme sole trader, by the custom of London, may be sued, but the husband must be joined for conformity, although execution may be joined against her alone. See Beard v. Webb, 2 B. & P. 98. Langham v. Bewett, Cro. Car. 68. A married woman being administratrix, received a sum of money in that character, and lent the same to her husband, and took in return for it the joint and several promissory note of her husband, and two other persons, payable to her with lawful interest; held, that although she could not have maintained any action on the note but if *she alone bring an action, where she has a right of action, the defendant cannot take advantage of her coverture by evidence under the general issue; it is a personal disability, and must, according to the general rule (z), be pleaded in abatement (a) (1), although the husband may reverse the judgment by writ of error (b). But if the wife alone bring an action where she has no legal cause of action, it will be a ground of nonsuit at the trial (c). But mere declarations by her that she was married when the cause of action accrued, without without proof of either an actual marriage or cohabitation, are not sufficient (d). If, however, upon the trial, evidence be given of coverture, which would, being unanswered, show that the wife herself had no cause of action, she may rebut that evidence by proof of the husband's civil death, by exile and abjuration of the realm (e), or transportation for felony for a term of years (2).

(1) [The husband of a woman who is guardian in socage must join in actions by her. Byrne v. Van Hoesen, 5 Johns. 66.]

(2) [In North Carolina, a married woman may file a bill in her own name for a separate maintenance. Knight v. Knight, 2 Hayw. 101.]

Where a married woman brought an action for goods sold and delivered, and the defendant proved the plaintiff's coverture, and the plaintiff then gave in evidence the record of the husband's conviction for felony, and sentence of transportation for seven years, which term was then expired, it was held at Nisi Prius that this was evidence of the husband's abjuration of the realm; and that, if in fact he had returned, the onus of proving the contrary lying on the defendant, the right of action remained (f).

during the lifetime of her husband, yet he having died and it having been given for a good consideration, it was a chose in action, and survived to the wife, and she might maintain an action upon it against either of the other parties to it, at any time within six years of the death of her husband, and recover interest from the date of the note. Richards v. Richards,[1] 2 B. & Ad. 447.

(z) 3 T. R. 631.

(a) Coverture in a woman, whether plaintiff or defendant, must be pleaded in abatement (Com. Dig. tit. Pleader, 2 A. 1. Milnes v. Milnes, 3 T. R. 827.) See Westbrooke v. Strutville (Str. 79), where in an action for an assault, the defendant proved his marriage with the plaintiff, and she proved in answer her previous marriage to one Westbrooke, who was living at the time of the second marriage: it was insisted that she ought not to give felony in evidence to support her action; but Ld. King admitted it. See B. N. P. 20.

(b) 2 Bl. R. 1236. If she marry during the suit, the coverture must be pleaded by plea puis darrein continuance. Bac. Ab. Abatement, C. Morgan v. Painter, 6 T. R. 265.

(c) Caddell v. Shaw, 4 T. R. 361; where a widow, a feme sole trader in London, brought an action in the Court of K. B. for goods sold and delivered by her whilst she was covert. Mere evidence of an acknowledgement that she was covert has been said to be insufficient. Wilson v. Mitchell, 3 Camp. 393.

(d) Wilson v. Mitchell, 3 Camp. 393.

(e) Belknap's Case, 2 Hen. 4. 7, a. 1 Hen. 4. 1, a.; where the husband was banished to Gascony, there to remain till he attained the King's favour (Co. Litt. 132, b. 133, a.; Mod. 851; Com. Dig. Abatement, E. 6); and where the husband ought to join, and the coverture is pleaded in abatement, this is a good replication. In Marsh v. Hutchinson, (2 Bos. & Pul. 231), Ld. Eldon observed, "The husband being civilly dead, the wife was entitled to dower of his land in the same manner as if he were actually dead; so she became entitled to the enjoyment and profits of her own land, though if he had not been civilly dead, he would have been seised of the lands in her right; and indeed she might have sued for an assault in her own name, and might have been made a defendant without her husband in all cases in which the husband must otherwise have joined."

(f) Carroll v. Blencow, 4 Esp. C. 27. But see Lord Eldon's observations in Marsh v. Hutchinson, 2 B. & P. 233. In Sparrow v. Carruthers, (cited in Corbett v. Poelnitz, 1 T. R. 7, and 2 Bl. R. 297), the action was on a note given by a woman who kept a public-house, for malt supplied to the public-house; plea the general

(1) [Newton v. Robison, 1 Taylor, 72, 2 Hayw. 121, acc. Gatewood v. Turk, 3 Bibb, 246, contra.]

(2) [Where a feme covert was deserted by her husband in a foreign country, and afterwards maintained herself as a feme sole, and came to this country and resided here five years—the husband being a foreigner and never having been in the United States—she was allowed to sue as a feme sole. Gregory v. Paul, 15 Mass. Rep. 31.

Where the husband is banished, the wife is to be considered as a feme sole to all purposes of acquiring property. Troughton v. Hill, 2 Hayw. 406. Wright v. Wright, 2 Desauss. 244.]

{The law seems to be settled, that when the wife is left by the husband, without maintenance and support, has traded as a feme sole, and obtained credit as such, she ought to be liable for her debts; and the law is the same, whether the husband is banished for his crime, or has voluntarily abandoned his wife. Rhea et al. v. Rhenner, 1 Peters's Sup. Court Reports, 105}.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxii. 119.

*538 After a solemn admission by a woman that she is married to a man, and *that the goods in his possession are his goods by the marriage, she will be precluded afterwards, as against creditors, from denying the marriage (g) (1).

In an action by a trustee for the wife, it is usually necessary to prove his interest in the chattel or other property in respect of which he sues, by means of the settlement deed (h).

Where, in trespass for seizing under a distress against the husband, it appeared that on the marriage the wife's stock in trade and other articles belonging to her in and about her said business were assigned to trustees, and she being lame, the jury had found that a horse and gig, which before and after the marriage she had always used in going about to her customers, was kept for the purpose of the trade, and not for pleasure, and there being no other property to satisfy the words "and other articles," the Court discharged a rule for entering a nonsuit (i).

Actions against the husband and wife.

II.—Actions against husband and wife.—In an action against husband and wife it is sufficient to prove the marriage de facto, by evidence of cohabitation, acknowledgement, and reputation; for a man who has allowed a woman to pass in the world as his wife, shall not afterwards be permitted to say that she is not so (k). And they cannot prove in defence that they were not legally married (l) (A).

But in an action against the husband and wife, in respect of the contract of the wife previous to the marriage (m), the husband may prove under issue; the defence was coverture; the replication in evidence was, that the husband had been transported, and the time not yet expired; and Yates, J., thought that the Court must consider the transportation as suspending her disability. See Lord Eldon's observations on this case, 2 B. & P. 233; where he says, "A difficulty of equal importance occurs where a wife has contracted debts after the period of her husband's transportation has elapsed, but before his actual return to this country. As far as his (Mr. J. Yates's) opinion can be collected, he seems to have treated it as a material circumstance in evidence, that the time of the transportation was not out."

(g) Mace v. Cadell, Cowp. 323.

(h) Horwood v. Hepper, 3 Taunt. 421. Liddlow v. Wilmot,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 86. Upon the trial of an indictment against the husband for cruelty to the wife, an agreement of compromise was entered into between the husband and the brother and father of the wife (the prosecutors), for separation and maintenance, with covenants on the part of the latter to indemnify the husband, and a nominal fine was imposed in consequence: the Court, on demurrer to a bill for specific performance, held that such a stipulation could be enforced; a compromise of a misdemeanor being by the policy of the law permitted, though not of a felony, and overruled the demurrer. Elworthy v. Bird, 2 Sim. & St. 372. It is not, however, a general rule that the law allows of compromises in cases of misdemeanor. Supra, 248.

(i) Dean v. Brown,[2] 5 B. & C. 336. Trover for goods secured to the wife before marriage to enable her to carry on separate business, against the assignees of the bankrupt husband. The goods are not liable for the husband's debts, unless he intermeddle in the business, and that is a question of fact for the jury. Jarman v. Woolloton, 3 T. R. 618. If the wife treat the goods which she has as executrix as the goods of her husband, they are liable to be taken in execution for his debt. Quick et Ux. v. Staines, 1 B. & P. 293.

(k) Norwood v. Stevenson, Andr. 137. Peake's Ev. 351.

(l) Or even plead in bar ne unques accouple: for the legality of the marriage is not triable in personal actions, because a husband de facto is liable to his wife's debts. Norwood v. Stevenson, Andr. 237.

(m) [Dorill v. Leadbeater, 4 Pick. R. 220.] The ground of the husband's liability in respect of the contracts of the wife before marriage, and of her acts both before and after marriage, is this, that the law having conveyed to him all marital rights in respect of the wife's property, he ought also to be liable to the burthen of claims upon that property. And conversely, as he is liable to the burthen, he is also entitled to the consideration, and therefore a secret settlement by the wife before marriage is a fraud on his marital rights, and cannot be supported. See Goddard v. Snow, 1 Russ. 485, which questions the dicta in Strathmore v. Bowes, 2 Cox, 28; 1 Ves. J. 28.

(A) (Hammick v. Brown, 5 Day, 290. M'Gahay v. Williams, 12 John. R. 293.)

(1) [A feme covert, suing as sole, cannot, after judgment for the defendant, assign her coverture for error. Dixon v. Dye, 1 Coxe's Rep. 217.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xvii. 258. [2]Id. xi. 248.

the general issue that she was, at the time of the supposed contract, the wife of another man (n) (1) (A).

Against the husband alone (o).—Although the wife cannot bind the husband *by any act or contract of her own, yet he may be affected by them after proof that he gave her authority to act as his agent (p) (B); or by evidence, from which a previous authority by him, or his subsequent assent, can be implied (C). Against the husband. *539

Where the wife, without any authority from the husband, contracted with a servant by deed, it was held, that the servant, after the services were performed, might maintain an action of assumpsit against the husband according to the terms of the deed (q). And if the husband, although not liable in point of law, promise to pay the debt of the wife, he will be bound by it, although it was made under a mistake of the law (r).

Where the husband covenanted in a deed of separation (reciting his agreement to allow her 100*l.* out of his salary, as &c.) to pay the same during her life, held, that the covenant was controlled by the recital, and that upon his dismissal from the office not by any act of his own, he was not liable to the covenant (s).

Where the action is brought in respect of goods supplied to the wife: 1st. They either cohabit, or 2dly, live apart; and if they live apart, they do so either by mutual consent, or by the default of one without the consent of the other, or by act of law. A presumption arises from cohabitation, that the wife has authority from the husband to purchase such articles as are necessary for herself and the family (t), unless the contrary appear, and that, having been supplied to her, they came to his use (u). Against the husband for goods supplied to the wife. During cohabitation.

(n) Cowley v. Robertson and his Wife, 3 Camp. 438. Action for goods sold to defendant's wife, at his request; a plea that she was not the wife of the defendant was held to be bad on demurrer, as being immaterial, and amounting to the general issue. Sinclair v. Hervey, 2 Ch. C. T. M. 642.

(o) The husband and wife must be sued jointly in respect of the debt or contract of the wife before marriage, although the husband state an account, and expressly promises to pay the debt (Mitchinson v. Hewson, 7 T. R. 348. Alleyn, 72). The husband may be sued alone for rent due during the coverture, on a lease which the wife has as executrix. Com. Dig. Baron and Feme, V.; Thom. En. 117.

(p) Supra, tit. AGENT. [See Wallingham's Ex'r v. Simm's Ex'r, 1 Desauss. 273.]

(q) White v. Cuyler, 6 T. R. 176.

(r) Hornbuckle v. Hornbury,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 177, cor. Lord Ellenborough, C. J. Harrison v. Hall, 1 Mo. & R. 185.

(s) Hesse v. Albert, 3 M. & Ry. 406.

(t) Bac. Ab. Baron and Feme, H.; 2 Str. 1122; and per Holt, Etherington v. Parrott, Salk. 118. Longfoot v. Tiler, 1 Salk. 113. Where the wife of the defendant took her niece to the plaintiff's school, and there was slight evidence of her agency in ordinary household expenses, which was objected to as inadmissible, the Court considering it some, although slight, evidence to go to the jury, refused to disturb the verdict. M'George v. Egan,[2] 5 Bing. N. C. 196.

(u) Where the wife took up goods, but pawned them before they had been made into clothes, it was held that the husband was not liable, for they never came to his use (Salk. 118, pl. 10); but it would have been otherwise if they had been first made up and worn, and then pawned. Ibid. So if the wife pawn her clothes, and afterwards borrow money to redeem them, the husband is not liable. 2 Show. 283. And where the wife living with the husband carries on trade, his authority is, it seems, to be presumed. Where the wife carries on business on her own account, during the imprisonment of her husband, and after his return to live with her, articles were furnished in the business with his knowledge; it was held that he was liable

(1) [The husband cannot be sued alone for a debt contracted by the wife dum sola. Angel v. Felton, 8 Johns. 149. Nor as administrator to his wife. Moore v. Suttril, 1 Hayw. 16.]

(A) (But he cannot plead infancy. Roach v. Quick, 9 Wend. 238.)

(B) (Hopkins v. Mollinieux, 4 Wend. 465. Dacy v. The Chemical Bank, 2 Hall, 550. Church v. Landers, 10 Wend. 79. Torrence v. Graham, 1 Dev. & Bat. 284. Fermer v. Lewis, 10 John. R. 33. Rotch v. Miles, 2 Conn. R. 638.)

(C) (Webster v. M'Ginnis, 5 Binney, 236. But where the wife of an innkeeper was entrusted by him with the ordinary business of the tavern in his absence, it was held, that she had no authority to bind the husband by a special contract, to board stage drivers, and find hay and oats for their horses, at less than the usual rates. Ibid.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 302. [2]Id. xxxv. 83.

A husband, however, is liable only for debts contracted by his wife, on the assumption that she acts as his agent; if he supplies her with necessaries, she is not to be deemed his agent beyond that, unless he sees her wear articles purchased by her without disapprobation. Where it was proved that he furnished her with necessary apparel, and was ignorant of her dealing with the plaintiff, it was held that he was not liable (x) (A).

The presumption which is one of fact for the jury, is liable to be rebutted by evidence negativing the husband's assent to the contract; as by proof of express notice to the plaintiff, or to his servant, that the husband would not *540 *be responsible (y). Proof by the plaintiff that the articles were consumed in the defendant's family is but presumptive evidence of his assent, and a special verdict for the plaintiff, which does not find the assent of the defendant, is insufficient (z). It is a defence for the husband to show that the credit was given not to himself but to the wife, although they lived together, and although the husband saw the wife in possession of the clothes for the value of which the action is brought (a). As where the plaintiff, without the privity of the husband, supplied the wife of an apothecary in a small town with dress to the amount of 200*l.*, after the father of the wife had paid a similar bill, and had admonished the plaintiff not to supply her with other goods without the knowledge of the husband (b.) If the husband rely on notice to the plaintiff not to trust the wife during cohabitation, he must, it seems, prove express notice; it is insufficient to prove a general notice in the Gazette or other newspaper (c), without further showing that the plaintiff read the paper.

Where the husband has turned the wife out of doors.

Where the husband and wife do not cohabit, the liability of the husband is much varied by circumstances. If he go abroad, or simply live apart from his wife, his implied liability seems to remain as it was before (d).

If the husband turn away the wife, he sends credit with her for reasonable expenses (e), or, in other words, he lies under a legal obligation to for them, though the invoices and receipts were in the name of the wife, and though she was rated, and paid the house and paving rates. The learned Judge left it to the jury to say, whether the wife was not the agent of the husband, and advised them to find for the plaintiff; and the Court afterwards held that the direction was right. Petty v. Anderson,[1] 3 Bing. 170.

(x) Seaton v. Benedict,[2] 5 Bing. 31; and the jury having found a verdict for the plaintiff, damages 10*s.*, the Judge certified to deprive him of costs. Ib. 187.

(y) B. N. P. 134, 135; Str. 113; Salk. 118. Ozard v. Darnford, cor. Lord Mansfield, Midd. Sitt. after Mich. T., Sel. N. P. 260, 7th ed.; and per Lord Eldon, in Rawlins v. Vandyke, 3 Esp. C. 250.

(z) B. N. P. 136. The case is there assimilated (B. N. P. 134) to that of credit given to a servant; but a servant has no authority till the master has recognized him as agent by his mode of dealing; a wife, on the other hand, derives her credit from the very nature of the relation, accompanied by cohabitation.

(a) Metcalf v. Shaw, 3 Camp. 22. Bentley v. Griffin,[3] 5 Taunt. 356. In the former case Lord Ellenborough nonsuited the plaintiff; in the latter it was left as a question of fact for the jury to say to whom the credit had been given. See Leggatt v. Reid,[4] 1 Car. & P. 16.

(b) Metcalf v. Shaw, 3 Camp. 22.

(c) Bac. Ab. Baron and Feme, H. Harris v. Morris, 4 Esp. C. 40.

(d) Where the husband and wife live apart, the person who gives credit to the wife stands in her place, inasmuch as the husband is bound to maintain her, and the Spiritual Court, or a Court of Equity, will compel him to allow her an adequate alimony; but if she elope from her husband, or live in adultery, or if upon separation the husband agree to make her a sufficient allowance, and pay it, he is not liable; in the former case she forfeits her title to alimony, and in the latter has no further demands on her husband. Ozard v. Darnford, cor. Lord Mansfield, Midd. Sitt. after Mich. 20 G. 3, Selw. N. P. 261.

(e) B. N. P. 135. Where a party, after cohabiting with the woman as his wife, went abroad and died, held, that in the absence of any contract, all that could be implied was, that he gave her an implied authority to bind him as a wife might have done; but that her contract could not bind his estate, if made after his death. Blades v. Free,[5] 9 B. & C. 167; 4 M. & Ry. 282. Where the plaintiff has supplied goods to a feme

(A) (And where a feme covert has a separate estate vested in a trustee, and services are rendered on account of the estate, and the credit for such services is given to her, the husband is not liable for them. Stammers v. Macomb, 2 Wend. 454.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xi. 84. [2]Id. xv. 354. [3]Id. i. 131. [4]Id. xi. 301. [5]Id. xvii. 351.

pay the debts which she necessarily incurs (1), and therefore he cannot, in such a case, discharge himself either by a general or particular notice not to trust her.

The case of Bolton v. Prentice (2) affords a strong illustration of the distinction. The defendant there, had, during the cohabitation, given to the plaintiff (a milliner) express notice not to trust the wife; twelve months afterwards the defendant turned his wife out of doors, and she was furnished by the plaintiff with apparel suitable to her degree; and the Court, on a motion by the defendant for a new trial, denied it, saying, that when a man turned *away his wife, he gave her general credit, and the prohibition was gone and superseded (f). *541

If the husband by ill usage and harsh treatment compel the wife to leave him, the case is the same as if he had actually turned her out of doors (g) (3).

And it is not necessary that the wife should have suffered actual violence before she leave the house; it is enough that she had reasonable ground for apprehension (h), or that the husband, by the indecency of his conduct, precluded her from living with him.

Where they part by consent, and no allowance is made by the husband, the legal obligation on the husband to provide her with necessaries still remains (A). If in such case an allowance be made, it is to be presumed that she is trusted on her own credit, provided the fact be known that such allowance is made (i). And then it is not incumbent on the husband to prove personal notice to the plaintiff; it is sufficient if the fact has been covert in the absence of the husband abroad, it lies upon him to show that the wife was in such a state as to render the supply necessary; and although a subsequent promise may render the husband liable, it is for the jury to say if such promise has been in fact made. Bird v. Jones, 3 M. & Ry. 121.

Where they part by mutual consent.

(f) B. N. P. 135. Where the husband having struck his wife and turned her out of doors, she had subsequently obtained a divorce a mensa et thoro, and alimony had been decreed, but which had not been duly paid, it was held that neither a deed of separation nor decree for alimony would discharge the husband from his liability. Hunt v. De Blaquiere,[1] 5 Bing. 590. And he is liable for necessaries supplied during a suit for alimony, although a decree is afterwards obtained for alimony previous to the time when such necessaries were supplied. Keegan v. Smith, 3 B. & C. 375.

(g) Per Lord Kenyon, Hodges v. Hodges, 1 Esp. C. 441.

(h) Liddlow v. Wilmot,[2] 2 Starkie's C. 86; Houliston v. Smith,[3] 3 Bing. 127. In Horwood v. Hepper, 3 Taunt. 421, (4) Sir J. Mansfield is reported to have said, that nothing short of actual terror and violence will support this action; and Lawrence, J. is stated to have said that the circumstance of a prostitute being placed at the husband's table was not sufficient to justify the wife's departure, so long as she could obtain support in the house. It is but justice to the memories of those learned Judges to doubt whether they ever sanctioned such a doctrine—a doctrine which was justly reprobated by the Court in the case of Houliston v. Smith, 3 Bing. 127. In that case Gaselee, J. said, "I have always considered the law on this subject to be as laid down by Lord Kenyon, that if a man renders his house unfit for a modest woman to continue in it, she is authorized in going away."

(i) If a husband, during temporary absences, supplies the wife with an allowance for necessaries, the tradesman who knows this, but credits the wife with goods, cannot recover. Holt v. Brien,[4] 4 B. & A. 252. It is not necessary that the allowance should be secured by deed. Holt v. Brien,[4] 4 B. & A. 252.

(1) [Where a husband deserted his wife and children, and left her keeping a boarding-house, without furnishing means for her support, and did not return nor make any provision for them; it was held that he was liable for her contracts made in the course of such business—including the rent for such house. Rotch v. Miles, 2 Conn. Rep. 638.]

(2) [2 Stra. 1214—and see Mr. Nolan's note to that case.] {Barnes v. Winkler, 2 Car. & Payne, 346.}

(3) {Houliston v. Smith, 2 Carr. & Payne, 23. Emery v. Emery, 1 Rus. & Jerv. Rep. 501.}

(4) {Horwood v. Heffer, was expressly overruled by Lord Ellenborough in Aldis v. Chapman, Selwyn's L. N. P. 281, and the Judges of the King's Bench in Houliston v. Smith, said they were surprised at the language and doctrine of the case (2 Carr. & Payne, 29, 30, 31). It was held in Aldis v. Chapman, that where a husband by bringing another woman under his roof, renders his home unfit for the residence of his wife, who thereupon removes and lives apart from him, the husband is bound to provide the wife with necessaries.}

(A) (Lockwood v. Thomas, 12 John. R. 248. Simpson v. Simpson, 4 Dana, 140.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xv. 535. [2]Id. iii. 258. [3]Id. xi. 64. [4]Id. vi. 418.

notified where the parties lived (j). This it seems furnishes a reasonable presumption that the plaintiff either did know the fact, or that he might have known it had he made proper inquiries (k).

*542 *And it seems to be now settled that where the husband allows his wife a sufficient maintenance, it is immaterial whether the tradespeople had notice of such allowance or not (l) (A).

Without consent. Where the wife leaves the house of her husband without his consent and against his will, no action is maintainable against the husband for necessaries supplied to her during such absence (m). In such case it seems to make no difference whether the husband makes an allowance under a settlement or otherwise, for the husband is guilty of no default in neglecting a duty the performance of which by another raises an implied promise to repay. He is not liable in such case, although he has executed a deed, which is invalid, because it stipulates prospectively for the separation of the parties (n). If he has made a legal provision on separation for the maintenance of the wife, the remedy is against the fund, and the trustees must obtain payment from the husband (o).

Against the husband for goods supplied to the wife.

From what has been said, it follows that the plaintiff, in an action against the husband for necessaries supplied to the wife, must prove the marriage, either by direct proof, or by evidence of cohabitation and repute, or admissions by the husband; and where they lived separate, the plaintiff

(j) Todd v. Stokes, 1 Lord Raym. 444. 8 Will. 3, by Lord Hale, B. N. P. 135. [Baker v. Barney, 8 Johns. 72; Fenner v. Lewis, 10 Johns. 38.] The husband lived at Winchester, and on separation by consent, articled to allow the wife 20*l.* per annum, and she, five years afterwards, contracted the debt with the plaintiff, an apothecary in London; the husband, it was held, was not liable.

(k) It has been said (B. N. P. 135; and by Holt, C. J. in Todd v. Stokes, 1 Ld. Ray. 444), that if the debt be contracted by the wife at a distance from the husband's residence, and so soon after the separation that it could not be known at the place where the debt was incurred, the husband will still be liable. The principle on which the necessity for such notice rests is not very evident. If the liability of the husband for goods supplied to the wife during separation, rested upon a mere legal obligation, independently of any assent or notice of dissent, on the part of the husband (supra, 69, infra, 544), even express notice would not obstruct the liability, which would depend wholly on the question whether the husband had or had not supplied the wife with necessaries; if, on the other hand, the liability depended on a presumed authority from the husband, and a contract by him, and it were necessary to prove a previous knowledge of the circumstance of an allowance on the part of the plaintiff, in order to rebut the presumption of such a contract, the reason would equally apply to cases of elopement and of adultery, where such a notice is unnecessary. See p. 445. Quære, therefore, whether, where the wife removes to a distance from the husband, who makes her a suitable allowance, it is not incumbent on one who trusts her to make inquiry as to her situation; it is not in the power of the husband to give immediate and effectual notice of the allowance in every place to which the wife may remove immediately after separation, but every one who trusts her may make previous inquiries. The affirmative has since been decided. See note (l).

(l) In the case of Clifford v. Laton, 1 M. & M. 101, it was held (by Lord Tenterden), that the plaintiff could not recover, she having a sufficient separate maintenance, although not from the husband. And per Lord Tenterden, C. J., where a wife lives with her husband he may generally be taken to be cognisant of her contracts; but where they are living separate, it is for the party seeking to charge the husband to make out by proof that he is liable. The plaintiff in that case did not know the party to be a married woman. And see Mainwaring v. Leslie,[1] 1 M. & M. 18. His lordship added, if a shop-keeper will sell goods to every one who comes into his shop, without inquiring into their circumstances, he takes his chance of getting paid, and it lies on him to make out by full proof his claim against any other person. And in Mizen v. Pick, 3 M. & W. 481, Alderson, B. intimated his doubts whether Lord Eldon expressed himself to the extent of what is stated in Rawlins v. Vandyke; and in giving judgment says, "I do not see how notice to the tradesmen can be material. The question in all these cases is one of authority. If a wife, living separate from her husband, is supplied by him with sufficient funds to support herself with everything proper for her maintenance and support, then she is not his agent to pledge his credit, and he is not liable."

(m) Hindley v. Marquis of Westmeath,[2] 6 B. & C. 200.

(n) Ibid. (o) Ibid.

(A) (Where a husband professes to provide for his wife who lives apart from him, it is incumbent on a party who has been expressly forbidden to give credit to her, in order to render the husband liable for subsequent supplies, to show affirmatively and clearly, that the husband did not supply her with necessaries suitable to her condition. Mott v. Comstock, 8 Wend. 544.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxii. 236. [2] Id. xiii. 141.

must prove the circumstances under which they parted (p), either that they live so through the husband's default, or with his consent (q). Although they part by mutual consent, the husband lies under a legal obligation to support the wife, unless she has forfeited her right to maintenance by misconduct (r); and consequently he is liable for necessaries supplied to her, unless he can show that he himself maintains her, or that she has an adequate provision from some other source (s).

*Whether the wife live with or apart from her husband, evidence is *543 essential to show that the goods supplied were necessary and convenient, Necessaaccording to the husband's degree and estate in life (t); for it is not to be ries.
presumed that he made the wife his agent (u) beyond that extent where he cohabits with her, nor will the law impose a larger obligation upon him where they live apart. And regard is to be had to the estate of the husband, and not merely to his degree, for one of high degree may be a man of low estate (v). And in the ascertainment of what is suitable to his circumstances (which is usually a question of fact for the jury) (x), they are not to be guided by the fortune brought by the wife, but to regulate their verdict according to the real circumstances of the husband (y). Where the conduct of the husband renders it necessary that she should exhibit articles of the peace against him, his allowing a separate maintenance does not exempt him from liability to the costs of those articles (z).

(p) Mainwaring v. Leslie, 1 M. & M. 18.

(q) For if the plaintiff rely on an implied contract, he must show that circumstances exist which raise that implied contract; supra 58. And as where they live apart it may be without default on the part of the husband, this is a fact essential to his liability, and the onus of proof lies on the plaintiff. See Hindley v. Marquis of Westmeath, 6 B. & C. 200. Contra, Coe v. King, 12 Mod. 372; where it was held that mere proof of prior cohabitation was prima facie sufficient evidence to charge the husband. In Longfoot v. Tiler, Salk. 160, Holt, C. J. ruled that the husband was liable on the wife's contract for tea, in which she dealt, on mere evidence of cohabitation.

(r) Nurse v. Craig, 2 N. R. 152. Harris v. Morris, 4 Esp. C. 41.

(s) Vide infra, 545; and Liddlow v. Wilmot,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 86.

(t) B. N. P. 136. Manby v. Scott, 1 Lev. 4, 5; 1 Sid. 109. In an action against the husband for supplies to the wife, living separate, and only a payment of a sum into court pleaded, held, that the defendant thereby admitting the authority to contract, it was a question only of amount, but that she could not pledge his credit beyond what would be reasonable and necessary for her subsistence; the bill, 140*l.*, being for horses and carriages let on hire for ten months, and 73*l.* paid into court, the jury found for the defendant. Emmett v. Norton,[2] 8 C. & P. 506.

(u) Where there is no express promise on the part of the husband, and it cannot be inferred from his acts and conduct that he authorized the wife to act, the question is whether the law will under the circumstances raise an implied assumpsit; this the law will not do unless the articles supplied be necessaries. See Montague v. Benedict,[3] 3 B. & C. 631, and infra, note (x).

(v) Per Ld. Hale, in Manby v. Scott, Bac. Ab. Baron and Feme, H.

(x) Bac. Ab. Baron and Feme, H. It has been held that a husband, who has turned his wife out of doors, is liable for the costs of articles of the peace which are necessary for her safety. (Shepherd v. Mackoul, 3 Camp. 326.) A tradesman who sold lace and silver fringes for a petticoat and side-saddle, which amounted to 94*l.*, and all within four months, to the wife of a serjeant at law, afterwards a judge, recovered against him. Skinn. 349. But in the case of Montague v. Benedict,[3] 3 B. & C. 631, which was an action for jewels supplied to the wife of a special pleader, to the amount of upwards of 100*l.*, part of which the wife herself had paid, and it appeared that the wife brought a fortune under 4,000*l.*, that she received by virtue of her marriage settlement the sum of 60*l.* annually, and that before the supply of the jewels by the plaintiff, she had jewelry suitable to her condition; that they lived in a ready-furnished house, at the rent of 200*l.* a year, and there was no evidence to show his privity, and that no application was made to the husband for many months after, but that the plaintiff always called when he knew the husband was from home; it was held that there was no question for the jury; the articles not being necessary, the plaintiff was bound to prove either an express or implied contract on the part of the husband, and that here the circumstances did not raise an implied contract.

(y) Per Lord Eldon, C. J., Ewers v. Hutton, 3 Esp. C. 255.

(z) Turner v. Rookes, 2 P. & D. 294; 10 Ad. & Ell. 47. Where a husband is indicted for assaulting his wife, one who advances money to the attorney for carrying on the prosecution, and without which he could not have gone on, cannot recover from the husband such money as supplied for necessaries. Grindell v. Godman,[4] 5 Ad. & Ell. 755. Otherwise (semble) according to the above case where she exhibits articles of the peace against her husband.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 258. [2]Id. xxxiv. 503. [3]Id. x. 205. [4]Id. xxxi. 431.

Where the husband was a common labourer, and after separation the wife worked for her livelihood, Lord Holt held that the money she earned should go to keep her (a). There seems to be no satisfactory reason why one who has lent money to the wife (who has been turned out of doors by her husband) in order to provide her with necessaries, should not be entitled to recover it from the husband, for it may happen that she may not be able to procure credit (b).

*544

Assent by the husband.

*Where, however, the husband allows a wife to assume the appearance which he is unable to support, he is answerable for the consequences of the deception, and is liable to pay for articles supplied to the wife corresponding with that appearance, however inconsistent it may be with his circumstances (c). And although where they do not cohabit, the husband is liable for necessaries only according to his estate, yet if he, after separation, be privy to and sanction her appearance in a pretended state of affluence inconsistent with his real circumstances, he would, it seems, be liable just as if the appearances had been real (d); and so he is, if knowing that his wife has ordered goods which are inconsistent with his fortune, and having the power of returning or countermanding them, he does neither, for then he adopts her act (e).

Separation by act of law.

But although in general a husband is not liable where the wife through her own default lives apart from him, yet it is otherwise, in some instances, where the separation is by operation of law; for in such case the wife has not the power to return (1). And therefore, if the wife be imprisoned for felony, the husband is liable for necessaries (f); but it is otherwise if she be kept in an improper place by the covin of the gaoler (g). So if the husband be imprisoned for any offence, it should seem that he would be liable as if he had deserted his wife, for the separation is a consequence of his own fault. Where they are separated a mensâ et thoro by sentence of the Ecclesiastical Court, she is allowed alimony at the discretion of the Judge, except in case of adultery (h) (2).

A declaration for provisions supplied to the husband will be supported by evidence of provisions supplied to the wife at his request during his absence (i).

The defendant may prove in answer that the wife eloped from him (k), or

(a) 1 Salk. 118.

(b) See Harris v. Lee, 1 P. Wms. 482. The husband gave his wife the foul distemper; she came up to town to be cured, and borrowed money from A. to pay the surgeon, and for necessaries; the husband having died, charging his land with debts, it was decreed that A. should stand in the place of those who had supplied the necessaries.

(c) Waithman v. Wakefield, 1 Camp. 120. Atkins v. Curwood,[1] 7 C. & P. 756.

(d) Ibid.

(e) Ibid.

(f) Scott v. Manby, 1 Sid. 118.

(g) Fowles v. Dineley, Str. 1122.

(h) 1 Bl. Comm. 429. See 5 T. R. 679.

(i) B. N. P. 136, as decided in Ross v. Noel, 31 Geo. 2, C. B., on a case reserved. It is added, that it was also said that it would be wrong in the case of a third person; but it seems that there is no difference between the two cases, if the delivery be on the request of the defendant. But see Ramsden v. Ambrase, Str. 127; B. N. P. 136; Harris v. Collins, Ibid.; 1 Sid. 145; Com. Dig. Action on the Case on Assumpsit.

(k) B. N. P. 135. Morris v. Martin, Str. 647. Child v. Hardyman, 2 Str. 875. Todd v. Stokes, 1 Ld. Raym. 444. 12 Mod. 244. 1 Salk. 116. Car v. King, 12 Mod. 372. In the case of Manby v. Scott, 1

(1) {And if a tradesman bring an action against a husband for goods furnished to his wife while she was living apart from her husband, it is for him, the tradesman, to show that her so living proceeded from some cause, which would justify it. Mainwaring v. Leslie, 2 Carr. & Payne, 507.}

(2) [In Massachusetts, since st. 1805, c. 57, a wife divorced a mensa et thoro, may maintain an action against the husband for alimony decreed to her. Howard v. Howard, 15 Mass. Rep. 196. And in South Carolina, she may, by prochein ami, maintain an action in her own name, against a sheriff, for an escape of her husband, committed by attachment for not performing a decree for alimony. Prather v. Clarke, 1 Const. Rep. 453.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxxii. 721.

that since the separation she has lived in a state of adultery, although she did not elope with the adulterer (l) (A). And in such cases, notice to the tradesman *of the fact of elopement, or of the adultery, is immaterial (m); for the legal obligation to maintain the wife, which alone in this case raises the implied promise, ceases. But although the wife elope, yet, if she afterwards solicit to be received, and the husband refuse, the legal obligation revives (n) (B). So the husband may show in defence that he allowed a separate and adequate (o) maintenance to the wife: but in this case, it has been held to be

Defence by the husband. *545

Lev. 4, the tradesman trusted the wife after she had gone away, without her husband's consent, and after an express prohibition on his part; and it was held that the husband was not liable (1 Lev. 4; 1 Sid. 109). The Judges of the Court of K. B. were divided upon the question; but in the Exchequer it was decided in favour of the husband, by eight Judges (one of whom was L. C. B. Hale) against three; but Atkyns, J. one of the eight, differed from the three on the ground of the special prohibition. Proof of prohibition by the husband will not alone be sufficient to discharge him.

(l) Mainwaring v. Sands, Str. 706. Govier v. Hancock, 6 T. R. 603. Although, when he turned her out of doors, there was no imputation upon her conduct, (Ibid.) But where, after the defendant's wife had committed adultery, he left her in the house with two children bearing his name, and without making any provision for her, and she continued to live in a state of adultery, the Court of C. P. held that he was liable for necessaries, in the absence of proof that the plaintiff knew or ought to have known the circumstances. Norton v. Fazan, 1 B. & P. 226. Where the husband is not civilly liable for necessaries to the wife, on account of her having quitted him and lived in adultery, he cannot be charged criminally under the Vagrant Act for neglecting and refusing to maintain her. Rex v. Flinton,[1] 1 B. & Ad. 226. Ewers v. Hutton, 3 Esp. C. 255. The proper construction of the statute 13 Ed. I, is, that if a woman leaves her husband with her own free will, and afterwards lives in adultery, the dower is forfeited. Hethrington v. Graham,[2] 6 Bing. 135, and 3 M. & P. 300.

(m) Per Raymond, C. J. Str. 706; and Ld. Holt always ruled it so. Per Raymond, C. J. Morris v. Martin, Str. 647; and Child v. Hardyman, Str. 875. The previous adultery of the wife, or the fact that she was then living in adultery, is no defence for a trustee in an action on a bond for securing an annuity to the wife. Field v. Serres, 1 N. R. 121; and see Moore, 683.

(n) Where the wife had left the husband in consequence of some violence, and resided, with his knowledge, at the plaintiff's house, and he refused to receive her back unless she would give up certain property; held, that being bound to maintain her without any such condition, and having never offered to take her back, he was liable for necessaries. (Cor. Parke, J.) Reed v. Moore,[3] 5 C. & P. 200. But he will not be liable to any extent if she be living apart in adultery; the verdict, however, in an action for crim. con. being inter alios partes, is not evidence in the action for such supplies; and if the husband inform the tradesman that she is living in adultery, he will not be liable beyond necessaries, although he does not prove the adultery. Hardie v. Grant,[4] 8 C. & P. 512.

(o) Ewers v. Hutton, 3 Esp. C. 255; Hodgkinson v. Fletcher, 4 Camp. 70. In an action for coals supplied to the wife, living separate, held that he was liable, unless the wife be shown to have a competent provison, and it lies on him to show that, and a mere notice that he will not pay is not sufficient to relieve him from the liability: where the tradesman served both, and agreed with the husband not to charge him with the goods supplied to the wife, he cannot recover from the husband. Dixon v. Hurrell,[5] 8 C. & P. 717. A bond by the husband reciting an instrument for separation, and covenanting for payment of an annuity, is valid. Jee v. Thurlow,[6] 2 B. & C. 547. And a plea of adultery committed by the wife is no bar. Ibid. And see St. John v. St. John, 11 Ves. 537. Seagrove v. Seagrove, 13 Ves. 439. Worral v. Jacob, 3 Mer. 456. In Durant v. Titley, 7 Price, 577, the deed of a husband covenanting with a trustee for the payment of an annuity to the wife in case they should live separate, was held to be void, as being contrary to the policy of marriage. Secus, where the deed is not prospective, but where the husband covenants, on an agreement to separate, to pay an annuity. Jee v. Thurlow,[6] 2 B. & C. 547. Where it was found that during their cohabitation a deed was executed not intended to be accompanied with immediate separation, held that it was void. Hindley v. Lord Westmeath,[7] 6 B. & C. 200. Courts of equity will enforce deeds of separation, and the performance of covenants for payments to a trustee, except as against creditors of the husband; and the want of an indemnity by the trustee to the husband held not to affect the right. Ross v. Willoughby, 10

(A) (Hunter v. Boucher, 3 Pick. R. 289.)

(B) (In an action against a husband for necessaries furnished to his wife, after evidence of the marriage, of their living apart without suspicion that they were man and wife, and of a libel by the wife for a divorce, evidence is admissible on behalf of the plaintiff to show that the wife had solicited the husband to receive her again as his wife, and had offered to return and live with him as such, and he refused to receive her. Cunningham v. Irwin, 7 Serg. & R. 247. [M'Cutcher v. M'Gahay, 11 Johns. 281. And where a third person went to the husband repeatedly, and requested him to let his wife return, which he refused, without questioning the authority by which the request was made, it was held to be tantamount to a personal application by the wife, and that the husband thereafter became liable for necessaries furnished to her. M'Gahay v. Williams, 12 Johns. 293].)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xx. 380. [2] Id. xix. 31. [3] Id. xxiv. 277. [4] Id. xxxiv. 506. [5] Id. xxxiv. 599. [6] Id. ix. 174. [7] Id. xiii. 141.

necessary to show that the tradesman had notice of the separate maintenance (p). But it was held by Lord Holt to be sufficient to show that the fact was notorious in the place where the husband resided (q). And it
*546 has *since been held that such notice is unnecessary (r). It is not necessary for the husband to prove that he executed a deed, or even a written instrument, to secure the maintenance to the wife (s). But the formal execution of such a deed by the husband and trustee of the wife will be no defence, unless the husband prove that he actually paid the allowance (t). He is liable for necessaries supplied to her previous to a decree for alimony in the Ecclesiastical Court, although alimony is decreed from a time previous to the supply (u).

The husband may also show that his wife has separate funds of her own, adequate to her maintenance according to his situation in life; for although she does not derive that provision from him, he is not liable unless her funds be inadequate (v). The adequacy of the allowance, and of the separate funds of the wife, is a question of fact for the jury (x). The receipts of the wife are not evidence to prove that the maintenance has been paid (y). It is no defence to show that the defendant was not really married to the woman with whom he cohabits as his wife, even although he can prove that the plaintiff knew the fact; for the implied promise results from the presumption of authority given by the defendant to the wife; and if the defendant treat a woman as his wife in the face of society, the presumption of authority arises independently of the fact of marriage (z). But although the parties have long cohabited as husband and wife, it is, it seems, a good defence, where goods are supplied to the supposed wife after separation, to show that she is not in fact the wife of the defendant (a). For in case of separation, the implied promise rests, it seems, upon the legal

Price, 1. The adequacy of the maintenance is a question of fact for the jury. Hodgkinson v. Fletcher, 4 Camp. 70. If, in consideration of the wife proceeding no further in the prosecution of an indictment for an assault, the husband agree to secure her an annuity, it is an illegal contract, and, in a creditor's suit, she is not entitled to come in as a creditor. Garth v. Earnshaw, 3 Y. & C. 584.

(p) Rawlins v. Vandyke, 3 Esp. C. 250, cor. Ld. Eldon. In the case of Turner v. Winter, cited Sel. N. P. 262, Ld. Mansfield, C. J. is said to have nonsuited the plaintiff, because, on separation, the defendant had agreed to make the wife an allowance, and had regularly paid it.

(q) Supra, 541. If the liability of the husband in such case depended on a presumption of authority delegated by him to the wife, such notice would obviously be material for the purpose of negativing the presumed authority. But qu. whether the liability of the husband, where the wife lives apart, depends upon that principle; if it did, the husband might discharge himself by giving express notice not to trust her, which he cannot do; and it would be no defence to show that the wife had eloped, or lived in adultery, without notice of the fact to the plaintiff. As the liability of the husband in case of separation seems to rest on the legal obligation to maintain the wife, must not (in principle) the implied assumpsit cease when the obligation is at an end?

(r) Supra, 542 (l).

(s) Hodgkinson v. Fletcher, 4 Camp. 70. But see Ewers v. Hutton, 3 Esp. 255; where Lord Eldon held that a deed of separate maintenance, executed by the husband and wife only, was a nullity; but in that case, it is to be observed, there was no evidence of any actual payment of the maintenance.

(t) Nurse v. Craig, 2 N. R. 148, by three of the Judges of C. B., Sir J. Mansfield, C. J. dissent. This was a strong case: the wife's trustee under the deed, with whom the husband had covenanted to allow her maintenance, brought assumpsit for necessaries supplied to the wife; and it was held that the action lay, the husband not having paid the stipulated maintenance. [See Lockwood v. Thomas, 12 Johns. 248.]

(u) Houliston v. Smith,[1] 3 Bing. 127.

(v) Liddlow v. Wilmot,[2] 2 Starkie's C. 86, cor. Ld. Ellenborough; and by Lord Tenterden in Clifford v. Laton,[3] 1 M. & M. C. 101. The plaintiff knew that she had resources of her own independent of her husband. So in the Ecclesiastical Court the wife is at all times entitled to have her costs taxed, since the marriage gives all the property to the husband; but where she has separate property the privilege does not apply. Beevor v. Beevor,[4] 3 Phill. 461. Thomson v. Harvey, 4 Burr. 2177.

(x) 4 Camp. 70; [2] 2 Starkie's C. 86. (y) 4 Camp. 70.

(z) Norwood v. Stevenson, Andr. 237. Watson v. Threlkeld, 2 Esp. C. 637. Munro v. De Chemant, 4 Camp. 215; but see Robinson v. Nahon, 1 Camp. 245.

(a) Munro v. De Chemant, 4 Camp. 215, cor. Ld. Ellenborough.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xi. 64. [2] Id. iii. 258. [3] Id. xiv. 188. [4] Id. i. 403.

obligation to maintain the wife, and that obligation must be founded on a legal marriage. The husband is not liable, as upon an implied assumpsit, to maintain his wife's children by a former husband (b). But an implied promise may arise from his conduct, as where he adopts the children, receives them into his family, and treats them as part of it, and stands in loco parentis (c); even although the contract for necessaries be made by the wife during his absence from home (d).

*The husband may, it seems, in answer to an action of assumpsit, on an agreement to allow the plaintiff 12*s*. a week for the use of the wife, prove her adultery under the general issue, without a special plea (e). But the declarations of the wife are not, it seems, admissible to prove the fact of adultery (f). *547

Against the wife alone.

Where there is a cause of action against the wife, as upon her contract before marriage or a tort committed by her during marriage (g), and she is sued alone, the coverture is no defence on the evidence, unless it be pleaded in abatement (h).

Where there is no cause of action against the wife by reason of the coverture, she cannot now give the coverture in evidence under the plea of non est factum, or of the general issue (i) (1). And she is not estopped from setting up such a defence by proof that she had declared herself to be a widow, and that she had executed deeds and carried on lawsuits under that description (k). If she make a demise of her land jointly with her husband, her agreement to the deed after his death will affirm it (l), although there be no re-execution (m), and although the demise be not warranted by the stat. 32 H. 8, c. 28 (n). And such agreement may be proved by circumstances, as by a re-delivery of the deed (o).

Upon the principle of common law, the wife of one who has abjured the (b) Tubb v. Harrison, 4 T. R. 118. Cooper v. Martin, 4 East, 76. And the husband may maintain an action for the amount of necessaries on an express assumpsit by such child, made after he has attained his age.

(c) Stone v. Carr, 3 Esp. C. 1.

(d) Ibid. and per Lord Ellenborough, Cooper v. Martin, 4 East, 76.

(e) Scholey v. Goodman,[1] 1 Bing. 349. (f) Ibid.

(g) Com. Dig. Baron and Feme, Y.; & supra, 534.

(h) Com. Dig. Pleader, 2 A. 1. Ibid. Abatement, F. 2, 3 T. R. 631. And in that case the civil death of the husband by abjuration, transportation, &c. may be replied (vide infra, 547, note (q),) or that he is an alien enemy and out of the realm (1 Salk. 118). It is now perfectly settled, that in other cases the husband must be joined, although she is separated from her husband, and has a separate maintenance by deed (Marshall v. Rutton, 8 T. R. 545), or live in adultery, and separate from her husband (Gilchrist v. Brown, 4 T. R. 766), or be divorced a mensa et thoro for adultery. Lewis v. Lea,[2] 3 B. & C. 291; and see Hatchett v. Baddeley, 2 Bl. 1082. Hyde v. Price, 3 Ves. 443. A warrant of attorney executed by a feme covert, held invalid, although at the time divorced a mensa et thoro. Faithorne v. Blaquire, 6 M. & S. 73.

(i) Under the new rules, Hil. T. 4 W. 4. It was formerly otherwise. B. N. P. 172; supra, tit. Deed; Com. Dig. Baron and Feme, Q.; 12 Mod. 101; 1 Salk. 7; 3 Keb. 228; 2 Str. 1104.

(k) Davenport v. Nelson, 4 Camp. 26.

(l) 1 Roll. 149, l. 10, 11; Com. Dig. Baron and Feme, s. 1.

(m) Cowp. 201.

(n) Which authorizes leases by one of full age seised in right of his wife, or jointly with his wife, of any estate of inheritance made before coverture, or after, by writing indented under seal.

(o) Goodright v. Straphan, Cowp. 201.

(1) [A wife cannot in any case be sued upon a mere personal contract made during the coverture, whether joined with her husband or not, unless he be civiliter mortuus, or banished, or transported. Edwards v. Davis, 16 Johns. 281. Thus where husband and wife execute a conveyance in which they both covenanted with the grantee, the wife cannot be joined with the husband in an action for breach of the covenant. Whitbeck v. Cook, 15 Johns. 483. Colcord et al. v. Swan & ux. 7 Mass. Rep. 291. Parsons v. Plaisted & al. 13 Mass. Rep. 189. Pell & ux. v. Pell & ux. 20 Johns. 126. See Ela v. Card & al. 2 N. Hamp. Rep. 176.

It seems that judgment cannot be entered against the husband and wife on a warrant given by the wife dum sola. Anon. 2 Penn. Rep. 973. See also Ivins v. French, 2 Halstead's Rep. 27.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. viii. 432. [2] Id. x. 84.

realm (p) is liable in respect of a cause of action subsequent to such abjuration. There seems to be no instance in which it has been held that the wife of an Englishman who resides abroad is liable (q).

*548 *The defendant may prove her coverture by the usual presumptive evidence of marriage, as well as by direct proof (r). Proof that the husband was alive within seven years of the time when the debt was contracted will be sufficient (s). Mere acknowledgements of the marriage by the defendant and her alleged husband are insufficient (t).

Indictment against husband and wife.

III.—In general, it seems that a wife may be indicted, even for felony, jointly with the husband (u); but if it appear on the evidence upon an indictment for any felony, except murder or homicide (x), that the husband was present when the offence was committed, and acted in the commission of it, the wife, it seems, ought to be acquitted, on the presumption that she acted under the coercion of her husband (y) (1). This practice, however, of acquitting the wife in cases of all felonies except murder, seems to have been encouraged out of tenderness to her sex, and in order to obviate the unjustifiable rigour of the law, which would, for the same felony, have saved the husband by admitting him to the benefit of the clergy, whilst the

(p) Lean v. Schutz, 2 Bl. 1199; 4 B. & C. 297. So of one transported for a term. Carrol v. Blencowe, 4 Esp. C. 27. Walford v. Duchesse de la Pienne, 2 Esp. C. 554. Lord Kenyon in that case held, that if an emigrant left his wife in this country and resided abroad, it was tantamount to an abjuration by a native, and that the wife might be sued as a feme sole. And see Franks v. Duchesse de la Pienne. But in a later and similar case Lord Ellenborough held that the wife was not so liable, and his ruling was confirmed by the Court in the case of Kay v. The Duchesse de la Pienne, 3 Camp. 123. A temporary absence from this country is not sufficient to render the wife liable, even although the husband be a foreigner. Walford v. The Duchesse de la Pienne, 2 Esp. C. 554. Franks v. Same, Ib. 587. [See Commonwealth v. Cullins, 1 Mass. R. 116.]

(q) Per Heath, J. in Marsh v. Hutchinson, 2 B. & P. 226. An Englishman may be compelled to return at any time by the King's privy seal (Ibid.) See Marsh v. Hutchinson, 2 B. & P. 226. In that case the husband, an Englishman, had resided in Holland for ten years, and had become possessed of Madder-grounds there, from the cultivation of which he derived considerable profit; three or four years before the action was brought, he sent the defendant and his family to England, where his wife resided as a married woman; the husband remained in Holland to look after his madder-grounds, and also in order to recover a situation which he had held as agent for the English packets at the Brill, in case the intercourse between the two countries should be re-established. It was held that the wife was not liable in an action for coals supplied to her under those circumstances. In the case of De Gaillon v. Victoire Harel L'Aigle (1 B. & P. 357), where the replication stated that the husband resided abroad, and that the defendant lived separate from him, and traded in this country as a feme sole, and that the plaintiff traded with and gave credit to her as a feme sole, the defendant was held to be liable; but Heath, J. afterwards (1 N. R. 80) said that the decision proceeded much upon the ground that the husband was a foreigner. [See Gregory v. Paul, 15 Mass. R. 31.] In the case of Farrer v. The Countess of Granard (1 N. R. 80), a replication, alleging that the husband resided in Ireland, and that the defendant lived in this country separate from him as a single woman, and as such promised, &c., was held to be bad on demurrer. And see Stretton v. Bushach,[1] 1 Bing. N. C. 139; Bogget v. Frier, 12 East, 301; Marshall v. Rutton, 8 T. R. 545. A divorce a mensa et thoro does not render the wife liable as a feme sole. Lewis v. Lee,[2] 3 B. & C. 291. But a divorce ab initio renders her a single woman by operation of law, as if she had always been single. Ansley v. Manners,[3] Gow. 11.

(r) Kay v. Duchesse de la Pienne, 3 Camp. 123. Leader v. Barry, 1 Esp. C. 353. Bick v. Barlow, 1 Doug. 171.

(s) Hopewall v. De Pinne, 2 Camp. 113. (t) Wilson v. Mitchell, 3 Camp. 394.

(u) 1 Hale, 46, 516; Dalt. 104; 22 Edw. 4, 7. But not, it seems, as an accessory in receiving felons.

(x) The same rule applies in the case of an indictment for a misdemeanor, except in such cases as are afterwards mentioned. As in the case of an indictment for uttering counterfeit coin. Infra, 549.

(y) 1 Hale, 44, 5, 6, 7; 1 Bl. Comm. 28. It seems that the allegation in the indictment, that she is the wife, sufficiently shows the fact. R. v. Knight,[4] 1 Carr. & P. 116. Central Court, March, 1837; the husband and wife were indicted for a misdemeanor in uttering counterfeit coin, and held that the wife was entitled to be acquitted on the presumption of coercion. Cor. Mirehouse, C. S., after consultation with Bosanquet and Coltman, Js. Where a prisoner was described in the indictment as a single woman, but had been described by all the witnesses as the wife of the other prisoner, and passed and appeared as such, it was held that if the jury were satisfied that she was so in fact, they ought to acquit, notwithstanding she had pleaded to the indictment. R. v. Woodward and another,[5] 8 C. & P. 561.

(1) [Commonwealth v. Trimmer & al. 1 Mass. Rep. 476, in case of larceny. Martin v. Commonwealth & al. Ibid. 391.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxvii. 335. [2]Id. x. 84. [3]Id. v. 441. [4]Id. xi. 335. [5]Id. xxxiv. 524.

wife must have suffered death (z). But, on account of the heinousness of the offence, this doctrine does not extend to cases of murder (a), or manslaughter, nor to that of treason (b); neither does it extend to assaults and batteries (1), or, as it seems, *to any other forcible and violent misdemeanors committed jointly by the husband and wife. So she may be convicted jointly with him upon an indictment for keeping a bawdy-house, such offences being, it is said, usually carried on by the intrigues of her sex (c). And it seems that the presumption does not arise in any case unless the husband be actually present when the felony is committed (d); for then only is she supposed to act under such coercion as will absolve her from the consequence of her act (e). And formerly, it seems, that even in cases of larceny and burglary both might be convicted of the joint offence (f). But in the time of Ld. Hale, it had become the settled practice in such cases to acquit the wife peremptorily (g). But Ld. Hale, although he admitted that the practice had prevailed, and approved of it, because it operated in favorem vitæ, was yet very strongly of opinion that it was a mere primâ facie presumption (h). A wife cannot be convicted of setting fire to her husband's house, with intent to injure him; to constitute the offence the intent must be to injure or defraud some third person, not one identified with herself (i). Where a wife commits a felony or other crime in the absence of her husband, although by his command, she is liable to be convicted (k). And she may be convicted as a principal in the felony, and the husband as an accessory before the fact (l). *549

Presumption as to coercion.

If the husband commit felony or treason, the wife is not guilty of either in receiving him, for she is sub potestate viri, and bound to receive him (m); but it is otherwise if the husband in such cases knowingly receive the wife (n). And it has been held that an indictment charging her jointly with the husband as an accessory after the fact, in receiving felons, is vitious (o); for the act is adjudged in law to be entirely the act of the husband (p).

Competency.

IV. The husband and wife cannot be witnesses for each other, for their interests are identical; nor against each other, on grounds of public policy, for fear of creating distrust and sowing dissensions between them, and (z) Hale, 46.

(a) Where the husband and wife were indicted for the murder of an apprentice to the husband, and it was proved that the deceased died from want of proper necessaries, and not from wounds, Lawrence, J. directed the wife to be acquitted, because it was the duty of the husband to provide food; although if he had provided food, and she had withheld it, she would have been guilty. R. v. Squires, Stafford Lent Assizes, 1792; Russel, 25. The Earl and Countess of Somerset were jointly convicted as accessories before the fact to the murder of Sir Thomas Overbury. 1 St. Tr. 351; 1 Hale's P. C. 45.

(b) Arden & Somerville's Cases, 1 And. 104.

(c) Haw. B. 1, c. 1, s. 12; 3 Salk. 384. (d) Hale's P. C. 45; Kel. 31.

(e) Hughes's Case, cor. Thompson, B., Lanc. Lent Ass. 1813; supra, tit. Forgery; 1 Hale, 46; Kel. 37; 2 East's P. C. 559. But see 27 Ass. 40.

(f) Bract. l. 3, c. 32, s. 10; Dalt. c. 104.

(g) 1 Hale, 45; and see 2 Edw. 3, Corone, 160, accord.

(h) 1 Hale, 45 & 516. (i) March's Case, 1 Ry. & M. C. C. 183.

(k) 1 Hale, 45.

(l) R. v. Morris, 2 Leach, 696; supra, tit. Accessory.

(m) 1 Hale, 47. (n) Co. P. C. 108; 1 Hale, 47.

(o) R. v. Dey & ux., M. 37, E. 3; 1 Hale, 47.

(p) 1 Hale, 48. Where the charge of receiving stolen goods was joint against husband and wife, and it had not been left to the jury to say whether she received them in the absence of the husband, it was held, that she could not be properly convicted, although she had taken a more active part than he had done. Archer's Case, 1 Ry. & M. C. C. 146.

(1) [In Commonwealth v. Neal et ux. 10 Mass. Rep. 152, it was held that a feme covert is not indictable for an assault and battery committed in the company and by the command of her husband.]

occasioning perjury (q). So important is this rule, that the law will not allow it to be violated, even by agreement; the wife cannot be examined against her husband, although he consent (r); and the principle is further preserved by adhering to the rule even after the marriage tie has been dissolved by the death of one of the parties, or by a divorce for adultery (s). The application of these principles will be considered as they relate to the following classes of cases:

*550 *1. Where the husband or wife is a party.
2. Where one of them, not being a party, is interested in the result of a proceeding between others.
3. Where neither of them is a party to the suit, or interested in the event.

Where one of them is a party.

1. Where either of them is a party the rule seems to be universal, that the other is altogether incompetent in either civil or criminal proceedings (A) (1). In an action by the plaintiff, as a feme sole, for goods sold and delivered, the husband is not competent to defeat the action by proof of the marriage (t).

Upon an indictment for bigamy, the real wife is incompetent; and the second wife is also incompetent until the first marriage has been established (u); so in a criminal case the wife is not a competent witness against any co-defendant tried with her husband, if the testimony concern the husband, although it be not given directly against the husband (x); nor for a co-defendant if the evidence tend to the husband's acquittal, as in the case of conspiracy, where the acquittal of the co-defendant would enure to the acquittal of the husband (y); or of an assault, where the cases of the co-defendants cannot be separated (z) (2); and where the wife would be incompetent as a witness, on such grounds, her examination (a) or admission cannot be read (b), or given in evidence, except in cases where she is proved to have been constituted the agent of her husband, and then her acknowledgement or admission stands upon the same ground with that of

(q) 2 Haw. c. 46; 2 Hale, 279; 2 Str. 1095; Co. Litt. 6, 112, 187. Supra, Vol. I.
(r) Barker v. Dixie, R. tem. Hardw. by Ld. Hardwicke, 264.
(s) See Aveson v. Lord Kinnaird, 6 East, 192.
(t) Bentley v. Cooke, Brownl. 47. The defendant's wife cannot be examined for the plaintiff without the defendant's consent, although the marriage has taken place since she was subpœnaed. Pedley v. Wellesley,[1] 3 C. & P. 558.
(u) R. v. Griggs, 1 Raym. 1; 1 Inst. 6. b.; Gilb. Ev. 252. R. v. Cliviger, 2 T. R. 265.
(x) 1 Hale, 301; 2 Hale, 201; Dalt. c. 111; 2 T. R. 268; 4 T. R. 678. [Comm. v. Easland, 1 Mass. R. 15.]
(y) Per Ld. Ellenborough, R. v. Locker & others, 5 Esp. C. 107. R. v. Frederick, Str. 1095.
(z) R. v. Frederick, Str. 1095.
(a) Hutt. 16; B. N. P. 287; 1 T. R. 69; 1 Burr. 635; Brownl. 47.
(b) 2 Ch. C. 39; B. N. P. 286.

(A) (Snyder v. Synder, 6 Binn. 488; Griffin v. Brown, 2 Pick. R. 304; Fitch v. Hill, 11 Mass. R. 286. Comm. v. Easland, 1 Mass. R. 15; Daniel v. Proctor, 1 Dev. 428. But in some cases, the wife may be a witness, under peculiar circumstances, where the husband may be interested in the question, and, to some extent, in the event of the cause. Stein v. Bowman et al. 13 Peters, 209.)

(1) [In the case of Stanton v. Wilson & al. 3 Day, 37, a widow, administratrix of her last husband, sued the executors of her first husband (from whom she was divorced,) in an action of book debt, and was held to be a competent witness in support of the charges on book—they having accrued after her divorce, and the last husband being himself, while alive, a competent witness in that form of action—by a statute of Connecticut.]

(2) [Where two are jointly indicted, but are separately tried, the wife of the defendant not on trial may be a witness on the trial of the other. The State v. Anthony, stated ante, p. 412, note (2).]

[a] In ejectment, tenant's wife not competent for him. Pipher v. Lodge, 16 Serg. & Rawle, 214.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiv. 448.

any other agent (c). An admission by the wife, even of a trespass committed by herself, is not evidence to affect the husband (d) (1).

2. Where one of them, not being a party, is interested in the result.— Here there is a distinction between the giving evidence for, and giving it against, the other. It is an invariable rule that neither of them is a witness for the other who is interested in the result, and that where the husband is disqualified by his interest, the wife is also incompetent (e). Thus the wife of a bankrupt cannot be examined as to the bankruptcy of her husband (f). The husband is an incompetent witness for the wife, where her separate estate is concerned (g). In an action by a trustee for the wife against the sheriff, for taking goods the separate property of the wife, under an execution against the husband, the latter was held to be an incompetent witness for the plaintiff, on the ground of the wife's interest, although he had an interest on the other side, in having the debt satisfied by the execution (h). Where a carrier brought an action to recover the value of a box belonging to the husband which had been delivered by a mistake to a wrong person, the wife of the owner of the box was held to be incompetent (i). The interest of the *husband must, in order to disqualify the wife, be vested and certain; the mere expectation and hope on her part of benefiting her husband, when she gives evidence against an accomplice of the husband (the latter having been convicted), will not destroy her competency (j).

Where one not being a party is interested in the result.

Nature of the interest.

*551

On the other hand, where the interest of the husband, consisting in a civil liability, would not have protected him from examination, it seems that the wife must also answer, although the effect may be to subject the husband to an action (A). This case differs very materially from those where the husband himself could not have been examined, either because he was a party, or because he would criminate himself. The party to whom the testimony of the wife is essential has a legal interest in her evidence; and as he might insist on examining the husband, it would, it seems, be straining the rule of policy too far to deprive him of the benefit of the wife's testimony. In an action for goods sold and delivered, it has been held that the wife of a third person is competent to prove that credit was given to her husband (k) (2).

(c) See tit. AGENT.

(d) Denn v. White, 7 T. R. 112. [Hawkins v. Hatton, 2 Nott & M'Cord, 374.]

(e) Ld. Raym. 744; Str. 1095.

(f) 1 P. Wms. 610, 611; 12 Vin. Ab. pl. 28; 1 Brownl. 47.

(g) 1 Burr. 424.

(h) Davis v. Dinwoody, 4 T. R. 678. The wife was, in fact, the real plaintiff in the action. See Bland v. Ansley, 2 N. R. 331.

(i) This may be used as an illustration of the rule, although there may be a doubt whether the husband himself would have been incompetent; for in an action against the carrier the record would not have been evidence further than to show that such a trial was had, and such a sum recovered, and the husband must have proved his case aliunde. Ld. Raym. 344.

(j) R. v. Rudd, Leach, C. C. L. 133.

(k) B. N. P. 287. Williams v. Johnson, cor. King, C. J.; 1 Str. 504.

(A) (See Fitch v. Hill, 11 Mass. R. 286.)

(1) [An acknowledgement by the wife is not sufficient to establish an account against her husband, though it be for articles furnished her before the marriage. Sheppard's Ex'ors v. Starke & ux., 3 Munf. 29. Declarations of a wife, made in the absence of the husband, and affecting his interests, are not evidence, though the wife is party to the suit which is brought to recover land, in which she is jointly interested in her own right. Lessee of Moody v. Fulmer, Sup. Ct. of Pennsylvania, June, 1814. Wharton's Digest. 249.] {Turner et ux. v. Coe et al. 5 Conn. Rep. 93.}

(2) {See the reasons stated for the doctrine, 2 Pick. Rep. 308.} [In suits in which the husband is not immediately and certainly interested, but may be so eventually, the wife is a competent witness. Baring v.

In an action by a trustee under a separation agreement, against a husband, for the arrear of a weekly sum he had agreed to allow his wife; the declarations of the wife are not evidence to show that during the time in respect of which the demand was made she was living in adultery (l).

Where neither is a party, or interested in the result.

3. Where neither of them is either a party to the suit, or interested in the general result, the husband or wife is, it seems, competent to prove any fact, provided the evidence does not directly criminate the other, or, as it seems, involve the disclosure of some communication made by the other. It has, indeed, been said, that the rule applies to all evidence which tends collaterally, and by its connection with some other circumstances, to criminate the husband or wife of the witness, although the fact itself, abstractedly considered, involves no criminality, because it may lead to a criminal charge, and to the apprehension of the other (m): and therefore, that if the evidence tend to criminate the other, it is not admissible (1). Accordingly, it was held, in a settlement case, that a witness was not competent to prove her previous marriage with a man who had been removed as the husband of another woman, along with the latter. Here the rule seems to have been carried further than the principle will warrant: such evidence induces no breach of that confidence between married persons which ought to be held sacred; and neither that evidence, nor any decision founded upon it, can be afterwards used against the other party as proof of the fact.

The position laid down in the case of The King v. Cliviger, and which certainly seems to be too extensive and too indefinite, has been materially contradicted in the later case of The King v. The Inhabitants of All Saints, Worcester (n). The respondents removed a pauper to the place of her maiden settlement, and produced Ann Willis to prove her own marriage with G. Willis. The appellants objected, on the ground that they intended to prove the subsequent marriage of G. Willis with the pauper. The sessions received the evidence of Ann Willis, who proved the mar-
*552 riage. The *respondents then proved the maiden settlement of the pauper in the appellant parish, and her marriage with G. Willis subsequently to the first marriage (o); the appellants then objected, that the testimony of

(l) Schooley v. Goodman,[1] 1 Bing. 349.
(m) By Ashurst and Buller, Justices, in R. v. Cliviger, 2 T. R. 263.
(n) K. B. Easter Term, 1817; Phil. on Ev. 82.
(o) This proof, it seems, ought properly to have come from the appellants.

Reader, 1 Hen. & Mun. 154. Thus in trover by A. against B. for goods which had been lent by B. to the wife of C., and conveyed by C. to A., the wife of C. is a competent witness. Ibid. So in an action on a note given to the wife dum sola, and indorsed by her husband, she may be a witness to prove payment of the note before the indorsement. Fitch v. Hull & ux. 11 Mass. Rep. 286.

A second husband, surviving his wife who was administratrix of her first husband, is a competent witness for her surety, in an action on the administration bond. Wallis v. Britton, 1 Har. & J. 478. So the husband of the widow of the ancestor of the plaintiff's lessor is a competent witness for the plaintiff in ejectment. Beatty v. ——, 1 Taylor, 9. In ejectment, the wife of A., the plaintiff's father, was held to be a competent witness to prove the destruction by A. of the will of the plaintiff's grandfather, although she had released her dower in the premises to the defendant who was her husband's grantee. Wilmot v. Talbot, 3 Har. & M'Hen. 2. But in ejectment by the children of A. to recover land which had been sold under the order of Orphans' Court, alleged to be void; one who had married the widow of A. was held not to be a competent witness for the plaintiffs, though he had executed a release of all interest of dower or otherwise. Lessee of Snyder & al. v. Snyder, 6 Binn. 488. See Boltz & al. v. Ballman, 1 Yeates, 534. Lessee of Gallaher v. Rogers, 1 Yeates, 390.]

(1) [In an indictment for a forcible entry, the wife of the prosecutor was allowed by M'Kean, C. J. as a witness to prove the force: but only the force. Respublica v. Shryber & al. 1 Dallas, 68. On an indictment for adultery, the husband of the woman, with whom the crime is alleged to have been committed, cannot be a witness for the prosecution. The State v. Gardiner, 1 Root, 485. S. P. Commonwealth v. Shriver, Quarter Sessions, Philadelphia, 1820. Wharton's Digest, 265.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. viii. 432.

Ann Willis ought to be struck out. The Court of King's Bench held that the evidence was unobjectionable when received, and could not subsequently be expunged. That the evidence was admissible, since it did not directly criminate the husband, and could not afterwards be used against him, or made the ground-work of any future prosecution. The Court further intimated, contrary to the case of The King v. Cliviger, that the former wife would have been competent to prove the marriage, even although the subsequent marriage had been previously proved (p).

It follows from the above decision, that the rule laid down by the Court in the case of The King v. Cliviger, where it was said that the husband or wife could not be admitted to give any evidence which tended to the crimination of the other in collateral cases, was too general.

Even after a divorce a vinculo matrimonii, the woman cannot prove any contract or other matter which arose during the coverture (q) (1).

Wife de facto.

The general rule does not extend to a wife de facto but not de jure; and this is not an exception, but a case which does not fall within the general rule.

Upon an indictment for forcible abduction and marriage, the woman is a competent witness for the Crown. For the marriage being obtained by force, has no obligation in law (r), and the prisoner cannot take advantage of his own wrong (s) (2). So in such case it is said that she is a competent witness for the prisoner (t). It has, however, been said, that if the marriage *has been ratified by subsequent voluntary cohabitation, she is not *553

(p) In the case of R. v. The Inhabitants of Bathwick,[1] 2 B. & Ad. 639, it was held, upon a question of settlement, that the wife was a competent witness to prove her first marriage with her husband, although he had been first examined and had proved a second marriage.

(q) Munroe v. Twisleton, Peake's Ev. App. lxxxvii.

(r) Gilb. Ev. 251; R. v. Fulwood, Cro. Car. 482, 488, 489. R. v. Brown, 1 Hale, 301; 1 Vent. 243; 3 Keb. 193; 5 St. Tr. 6; Ann. 83.

(s) 1 Comm. 444. In Fulwood's Case, 1 Hale's P. C. 302, upon an indictment for a forcible abduction and marriage, it was held, that the evidence of the woman was admissible if the force be continuing upon her till the marriage; and in Brown's Case, Ib. and 1 East, 243, 3 Keb. 193, the evidence of the child was admitted: 1. because otherwise the stat. would be vain and useless, for possibly all that were present were of the offender's confederacy; 2. that the marriage was but de facto, and not de jure; but 3dly, principally because it was flagrante crimine, the child having been taken on the Thursday, married on the Friday, and seized the next day, before they had lain together, and whilst the force was continuing. There were other witnesses who proved the forcible taking, but none to prove the marriage against her will but herself. In the case of The King v. Wakefield & others, Lancaster Spring Assizes, 1827, for a conspiracy unlawfully to take Ellen Turner and procure her to be married to E. G. Wakefield, one of the defendants, proof was given that Ellen Turner, a young lady about the age of fifteen, had, under an artful contrivance and pretence, been removed by the defendants from a school in Lancashire, and taken to Scotland, where she was induced, by the pretext that it would rescue her father from ruin, to marry E. G. Wakefield. And her testimony was held by Hullock, Baron, to be admissible, even supposing the marriage to have been valid, on the principle of necessity, and also on the ground that the defendant could not by his own criminal act exclude such evidence against him; and the learned Judge referred to the cases of R. v. Jagger, cor. Lawrence, J. at York, which was the case of an attempt by the husband to poison his wife; also the case of R. v. Bowes & others, for a conspiracy to carry away Lady Strathmore, and of Lord Audley, and several instances in which a wife had been allowed to exhibit articles of the peace against her husband. The defendants were convicted, and two of them sentenced to three years imprisonment.

(t) R. v. Perry, Bristol, 1794, 1 Haw. P. C. c. 46, s. 79. There the testimony of the wife was admitted to show that the marriage was not forced.

(1) [In Vermont a woman divorced a vinculo was held (in the case of The State v. J. N. B., 1 Tyler, 36,) to be a competent witness against her former husband, on an indictment against him for an offence committed during the coverture. But in a subsequent case she was held to be incompetent. The State v. Phelps, 2 Tyler, 374. See Supra, 707, note (1).]

(2) [On an indictment for a conspiracy in inveigling a girl, in a state of intoxication, from her mother's house, and procuring the marriage ceremony to be recited between her and one of the defendants, the girl is a competent witness to prove the facts. Respublica v. Hevice & al. 2 Yeates, 114.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxii. 152.

competent either for or against the prisoner (u); neither would she be competent, unless the force was continuing at the time of the marriage (x).

Competency of wife de facto.

Where a woman was called as a witness for a man with whom she had cohabited for several years as his wife, it is said to have been doubted whether she was a competent witness for him, and the Court came to no decision upon the point (y). In such a case, the fact of marriage seems to be the most simple and convenient, and, indeed, the legal test of competency. It appears to be clear, that the woman would be a competent witness against the man, notwithstanding the cohabitation; and the parties living in a state of illicit intercourse could not avail themselves of the benefits and protection which result from a lawful marriage (z); but if she would be a competent witness against him, it would certainly be going a great length to hold that she was not also competent for him, and to say, that because he had cohabited with her as his wife, he was to be estopped from disputing the fact where his life was at stake, and debarred from making use of her testimony when it was essential to his defence. Besides, there would be great uncertainty and difficulty in deciding upon the length of cohabitation, the nature and number of the representations made by the party, which should thus estop him. And in conformity with these principles, the case of Batthews v. Galindo was decided (a). It seems, however, that in one instance (b), Lord Kenyon refused to admit a woman to be examined as a witness for a prisoner charged with forgery, who had himself in court represented her to be his wife, but denied the marriage on hearing the objection taken to her competency.

Declarations in nature of facts.

Neither does the rule extend to declarations of the parties, which are in the nature of facts; for in such cases the presumptions which are made are not founded on the credit of the party but of the fact (c), and the objection on the score of policy is out of the question (A). Thus, the declaration of the wife at the time of effecting a policy on her life, of the bad state of her health, is evidence against her husband (d). So a declaration by the wife at the time of leaving her husband's house, that she fled through fear of violence, is evidence against the husband (e) (B).

Declarations of the wife.

Declarations made by the wife as the agent of the husband, are, as has been seen, admissible, after proof of her authority to act for her husband, just as those of any other agent are (f).

(u) R. v. Brown, Hale, 301; 1 Vent. 243; 3 Keb. 193.

(x) Cro. Car. 488; Vent. 243; 4 Mod. 3; Str. 633; 2 Haw. c. 46.

(y) Campbell v. Twemlow, 1 Price, 81. The case arose upon an arbitration, and the arbitrator had rejected the witness; but as all matters of law, as well as of fact, had been submitted to the arbitrator, his decision was considered to be final.

(z) See Adey's Case, Leach, C. C. L. 245.

(a)[1] 4 Bing. 610. It was there held that the mere circumstance of a woman cohabiting with a party, though it goes to her credit, is no ground for rejecting her testimony in an action to which he is party, and that it is immaterial as to the character in which she stands when the declarations are made; the true principle is, that she shall not be excluded unless de jure the wife of the party.

(b) Chester Circuit, 1782, cited by Richards, C. B. in Campbell v. Twemlow, 1 Price, 81. But in the case of Batthews v. Galindo, the doctrine laid down by Lord Kenyon was repudiated.

(c) Supra, Vol. I. tit. Hearsay. (d) Aveson v. Lord Kinnaird, 6 East, 188.

(e) Per Lord Ellenborough, in Aveson v. Lord Kinnaird, 6 East, 188.

(f) Supra, tit. Agent.—Bills of Exchange. Gilb. L. E. 183. [Hughes v. Stokes, 1 Hayw. 372.] {Webster v. M Ginnis, 5 Binn. 235; 5 Conn. R. 95.} Also White v. Cuyler, 6 T. R. 176; where, in an action of assump-

(A) (See Tucket v. May, 3 Dana, 79. In a suit brought by husband and wife jointly jure uxoris, declarations made by her not in his presence, are not evidence. Turner v. Coe, 5 Conn. R. 93.)

(B) (In an action on the case for enticing away the plaintiff's wife, the declarations of the wife, made immediately before, and at the time she left her husband, of his cruel treatment of her, are competent evidence for the defendant. Gilchrist v. Bale, 8 Watts, 355.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xv. 58.

*The wife of a paper-maker having done an illegal act in delivering out paper before it could legally be removed according to law, stating at the time that her object was to raise money to pay duties with, former acts done by her in illegally removing paper, and depositing it for the alleged purpose of raising money to pay duties, which were in fact afterwards paid by her, are admissible in evidence to prove the authority of the husband to do the illegal act charged (g).

Some exceptions to the general rule are founded on evident necessity (h), where the fact is presumed to be exclusively within the knowledge of the wife (i). The wife is a witness ex necessitate, on a charge against her husband of violence committed on her person (k) (A); so the dying declarations of the wife against her husband are admissible in the case of murder (l) (B). Necessity. Husband and wife—Competency.

On the same ground, the wife, on an appeal of bastardy, is competent to prove the adulterous intercourse, although the effect may be to relieve the husband from the charge of maintaining the child; but she is not competent to prove non-access (m), or any fact which may be proved by other testimony. It has been said that, on grounds of state policy, the wife is a competent witness against her husband in case of treason (n). The husband and wife are competent, as has been seen (o), to prove the legitimacy or illegitimacy of their children, and to prove the fact of adultery, but not to prove non-access (p) (C); so they are competent to prove the marriage, or the contrary (q).

Where a husband and wife perished at sea, the husband at the time the sit by a servant for wages, the plaintiff was allowed to give in evidence a deed executed by the wife at the time of hiring, in order to show the terms of hiring. In an action by husband and wife, the declarations of the wife (executrix) are inadmissible for the defendant. Alban v. Pritchet, 6 T. R. 680. But in an action against the husband, as administrator of his wife, for a debt due from her dum sola, held that her admissions during the coverture were admissible, the defendant's character of husband having nothing to do with the action against the representative of the wife whom she might bind, (Tenterden, L. C. J.) Humphries v. Boyce, 2 M. & M. 140. Where a feme covert has for many years been separated from her husband, and during that time has received to her separate use the rents of her own property, which accrued to her by devise, after the separation, she is presumed to receive the rents and acknowledge the tenure by the husband's authority. Doe v. Biggs, 1 Taunt. 367. Where a testator gave a power to his daughter, describing her as a feme covert, to appoint by deed; held that she might well execute it by deed. Downes v. Timperon, 4 Russ. 334.

(g) Attorney-general v. Riddell, 2 Tyr. 523. See also Attorney general v. Siddon, 1 Tyr. 41; R. v. Gutch,[1] 1 M. & M. 437.

(h) 1 Sid. 431. By the express provision of the stat. 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 5 & 6, commissioners of a bankrupt may examine the wife of the bankrupt for the finding out of the estate, goods and chattels of the bankrupt, concealed, &c. by the wife or other person.

(i) 1 Ford's MS. 416; An. 82; Andr. 161; Say. 62.

(k) As in case of rape (R. v. Ld. Audley, 1 St. Tr. 387; Ann. 83; Hale, 301; Hutt. 46); and although the contrary has been laid down (T. Raym. 1 Gilb. Ev. 253; 2 Keb. 403), yet the affirmative seems to be now settled (R. v. Aryre, 1 Str. 633. Lady Lawley's Case, B. N. P. 287. R. v. Mead, Burr. 542. R. v. Bowes, 1 T. R. 698. Jagger's Case, East's P. C. 454). So the affidavit of the wife has been allowed to be read in court to ground a criminal information against the husband (Lady Lawley's Case, B. N. P. 287. Mary Mead's Case, 1 Burr. 542). So she may exhibit articles of the peace against her husband. R. v. Doherty, 13 East, 171; B. N. P. 287. Vide R. v. Wakefield, supra, 552.

(l) R. v. Woodcock, Leach, C. C. L. 463, 2d ed.

(m) Supra, BASTARDY. R. v. Rooke, 1 Wils. 340. R. v. Kea, 11 East, 132.

(n) B. N. P. 289; T. Ray. 1 tam. qu. & vid. Brownl. 47; Bac. Ab. Ev. A. 1. For the wife is not bound to discover the treason of the husband. T. Ray. 1 Brownl. 47.

(o) Supra, 313.

(p) Supra, tit. BASTARDY. 2 Str. 925; 2 P. Wms. 276; B. N. P. 283. R. v. Cliviger, 2 T. R. 263.

(q) R. v. Bramley, 6 T. R. 330; where a pauper, removed as a widow, was held to be competent to disprove the marriage.

(A) (Stein v. Bowman, 13 Peters, 209.)
(B) (Pennsylvania v. Stoops, Addis. 332.)
(C) (Cross v. Cross, 3 Paige, 139.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxii. 352.

vessel struck being on deck, and the wife and child below, there being no *555 *evidence of the latter having survived, administration with the will annexed granted to the next of kin of the husband as a widower (r).

INFANT.

Trial of non-age.

The trial of the non-age of a party is either by inspection, or in the ordinary way by a jury (s). In a suit to reverse a fine for the non-age of the cognizor, or to set aside a statute or recognizance, and similar cases, a writ issues to the sheriff, commanding him that he constrain the party to appear, that it may be ascertained by the view of his body by the King's Justices, whether he be of full age or not, ut per aspectum corporis sui constare poterit Justiciariis nostris si prædictus A. B. sit plenæ ætatis necne (t). Where the Court entertains doubts of the fact upon inspection, it may proceed to take proofs of the fact by the examination of the infant himself, and other witnesses, if necessary (u).

General presumption.

The general presumption of law is, that an infant does not know his own rights (x).

Although the promise of an infant will not bind him, except for necessaries, yet he may take advantage of any promise made to him, although the consideration were merely the infant's promise, as in an action on mutual promises to marry (y) (A).

Where evidence in bar.

In an action on bond, or other specialty, infancy is not a defence under the plea of non est factum, for the deed of an infant is not void, but merely voidable (z); and now, in general, under the new rules of H. T. 4 W. 4, (r) In the Goods of Murray, 1 Curt. Prer. 696.

(s) As to the proof of non-age, see tit. PEDIGREE.

(t) 9 Rep. 31 According to Glanvil, l. 13, c. 15, non-age was formerly tried by a jury of eight men. 3 Bl. Comm. 332. [See Sliver v. Shelback, 1 Dallas, 166, that the fact of infancy must in this country be tried per pais and not by inspection.]

(u) 2 Roll. Ab. 373; 3 Bl. Comm. 332. (x) 1 Inst. 246; Show. 83.

(y) Holt v. Ward, B. N. P. 155; Str. 937. [Cannon v. Alsbury, 1 Marsh. 76. Willard v. Stone, 7 Com. 224] So he may sue on a contract for a purchase of potatoes (Warwick v. Bruce, 2 M. & S. 205), or submit to a reference (Knight v. Stone, Sir W. Jones, 164; S. C. Noy, 93). So the infant may recover on a contract by the defendant for cutting and taking away the grass of the infant. Gilb. L. E. 187, 2d edit.; Vent. 51; Mad. 25; 2 Sid. 41, 446; 2 Str. 939; 2 Keb. 581. In an action on an agreement for a Scotch tack made with the tutors of a minor, but the action was brought in his own name; held, that it being made for his benefit, it was competent for him to sue in his own name upon the contract, and that it lay upon the defendant to show that the plaintiff was a minor at the time of action brought. Fitzmaurice v. Waugh,[1] 3 D. & R. 273. An infant may make a valid contract of hiring and service with a father. R. v. Chillesford,[2] 4 B. & C. 94; R. v. Stevenson,[3] 2 B. & C. 34. In an action for wages, whilst the servant was an infant, the master cannot set off sums which he had advanced for silk dresses, &c. not being necessaries, nor does the statement of an account bind her, but payments to an infant on account of wages for necessaries are valid payments. Hedgley v. Holt,[4] 4 C. & P. 104. By the stat. 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 4, no action shall be maintained whereby to charge any person upon any promise after full age to pay any debt contracted during infancy, or upon any ratification after full age to pay any promise or simple contract made during infancy, unless such promise or ratification shall be made by some writing signed by the party to be charged therewith.

(z) B. N. P. 172. Tam. qu. if the deed be obviously to the prejudice of the infant; and see the observations of L. C. J. Eyre, in the case of Keane v. Boycott, 2 H. B. 515. [Conroe v. Birdsall, 1 Johns. Cas. 127. White v. Flora, 2 Overton, 431. Roberts v. Wiggin, 1 N. Hamp. R. 73.] {It has been decided by the King's Bench in Ireland, that a bond with a penalty entered into by an infant is void, not voidable merely. Hunter v. Smith, 1 Fox & Smith's Rep. 15.} A single bond, i. e. a bond without a penalty, given by an infant for necessaries, is good. Hargr. Co. Litt. 172, and the cases there cited; and therefore it extinguishes an antecedent debt for necessaries. The general rule as to deeds by infants is, that if the agreement be for the benefit of the infant at the time, it shall bind him. Per Ld. Mansfield, C. J. in Drury v. Drury, Dom. Pro. 26th May, 1762, 5 Bro. Ap. 570; and by Buller, J. Maddon v. White, 2 T. R. 161, where he says that notwithstanding the doctrine, Co. Litt. 380, b, also laid down in Brownlow, all the modern cases have expressly *infancy, to be available as a defence, must be specially pleaded; but in an action of simple contract, the infancy of the defendant at the time of the contract is primâ facie a defence, even although he has paid money into court (a), unless the action be for necessaries; he is not liable on an account stated (b).

(A) (An infant is not liable for a breach of promise of marriage. Hunt v. Peake, 5 Cow. 475. See also Eubanks v. Peak, 2 Bailey, 497.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xvi. 169. [2]Id. x. 279. [3]Id. ix. 16. [4]Id. xix. 297.

In an action against an infant, to recover money advanced for him in Scotland, to prevent his arrest, it was held that proof was necessary to show that by the law of Scotland such a defence was available (c).

But an infant is liable in respect of all torts committed by him, as for slander or battery (d) (1); and in detinue for goods delivered to him for a particular purpose, and which he has failed to return (e); and in assumpsit for money embezzled (f) (A). But if an action against an infant be founded in a contract, the plaintiff cannot, by changing the form of his action in respect of a breach, convert it into a tort (2), as by charging him in tort for the negligent or immoderate use of a horse which he has hired (g).

If the defendant prove his infancy, the plaintiff may reply by evidence that he ratified the promise upon attaining his age (h) (B). His continu- Proof in reply to infancy.

held that an infant cannot avoid a lease which is made for his own benefit; and he cited Mr. Dunning's argument in Zouch v. Parsons (3 Burr. 1806), who says, "as to the infant's lease, the benefit of the infant is to considered; his leases are good if rent is reserved for them; this exception arises from necessity, therefore it is necessary to validate his leases reserving rent." If an infant bargain and sell lands by deed indented and inrolled, he may avoid it at any time. 2 Ins. 673. A feoffment by an infant with livery is not void but voidable only. Covenant does not lie against an infant apprentice. Gilbert v. Fletcher, Cro. Car. 179. Lilley's Case, 7 Mod. 16. He may avoid his apprenticeship on coming of age, but his father, &c. will still be liable on the covenant. 1 Saund. 312, note (b). But an apprentice cannot avoid his indentures by a tortious act, as by absconding. Gray v. Cookson, 16 East, 13. On an indictment for conspiring to procure a marriage with a minor, the latter cannot be a witness against the wife. There is no distinction in principle between admitting a wife or husband for or against each other. R. v. Sergeant,[1] 1 Ry. & M. C. 352.

(a) Per Buller, J., Hitchcock v. Tyson, 2 Esp. C. 481. For the money may have been paid in on account of necessaries.

(b) Although it be on account of necessaries supplied to him. Ingledew v. Douglas,[2] 2 Starkie's C. 36. Such an account is not evidence even to show the fact that the necessaries were supplied. Ibid.

(c) Male v. Roberts, 3 Esp. C. 163. And see Mure v. Kaye, 4 Taunt. 54. It seems that money advanced to release an infant taken on mesne process for necessaries, may be recovered here. Clarke v. Leslie, 5 Esp. C. 28; so to release an infant when in execution. Ibid. And see Finly v. Jowle, 13 East, 6.

(d) 8 T. R. 336, 7. Bac. Ab. Infancy, H. [Sikes v. Johnson, 16 Mass. R. 389.]

(e) 1 N. R. 140. (f) Bristow v. Eastman, 1 Esp. C. 172.

(g) Jennings v. Rundall, 8 T. R. 335. The objection was there taken by plea of infancy, to which the plaintiff demurred. [S. P. Schenck v. Strong, 1 Southard's R. 87. Green v. Greenbank, 2 Marsh. 485. 11 Serg. & R. 210.]

(h) If to a plea of infancy the plaintiff reply a promise after he attained his age, it is sufficient for the plaintiff to prove the promise, and it lies on the defendant to prove that he was not of age at the time. Borthwick v. Caruthers, 1 T. R. 648. And per Holroyd, J. in Bates v. Wells, Lanc. Sp. Ass. 1822.

(1) [An infant is liable to an action of deceit on the warranty of a horse. Word v. Vance, 1 Nott & M'Cord, 197. And to an action for malicious prosecution. Semb. Sterling v. Adams & ux. 3 Day, 411. So infants, who prosecute an unjust claim at law, and thus compel the defendant to resort to equity for an injunction and relief, and who there sets up an equitable defence, must pay costs. Price v. Sykes, 1 Ruffin's Rep. 87.]

(2) [In Vasse v. Smith, 6 Cranch, 226, it was held that an infant may be liable in trover, although the goods were delivered to him under a contract, and that infancy may be given in evidence under the general issue; and it may have some influence in determining whether the act complained of be really a conversion or not.]

(A) (Bullock v. Babcock, 3 Wend. 391. Sikes v. Johnson, 16 Mass. R. 389. And even though he acts by the command of his father. Humphrey v. Douglass, 10 Ves. R. 71. See Campbell v. Stokes, 2 Wend. 137. Homer v. Thwing, 3 Pick. R. 492. Where an infant hired a horse and gig to go to G., but instead of going there went to another place in an opposite direction and by severe usage the horse was killed, his infancy was held a bar to the action. Penrose v. Curren, 3 Rawle, 351; but if the hiring came within the exception of necessaries, as it might be where a horse was hired to visit a sick parent, then the infant would be liable for the consequences, per Rogers, J. Ibid.)

(B) (A confirmation by an infant, who was merely a security for another, must be made with the intent of confirming, and with the knowledge that the act would be void unless he confirmed it, and there should be

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxi. 453. [2]Id. iii. 233.

ance in possession after his full age of lands demised to him during his minority, is an affirmance of the lease (i), and he will be liable to previous arrears of rent (k) (1). The plaintiff must prove a ratification of the agreement, a promise to pay the debt; a mere acknowledgement of the debt is insufficient (l), for the law will imply no promise in the case of an infant, but for necessaries (m); and therefore part payment, or an express promise *557 to pay part, *will bind him to that extent, but no further (n) (2). And

(i) 1 Rol. 831, l. 37; Com. Dig. Infant, C. 6. But if the estate to the infant was void, it cannot be affirmed by his agreement at full age; as, if an infant lessee take a new lease, to commence on a future day, it will not be a surrender, although it commenced at full age, and he then entered and claimed by the new lease. 1 Rol. 728, l. 40.

(k) Ibid. and 2 Cro. 320; 2 Bul. 69; Godb. 365. So during his infancy, if he occupy by virtue of the lease. 2 Buls. 69.

(l) Lara v. Bird, H. T. 31 Geo. 3; Peake's L. E. 297. The promise must be voluntary. Harmer v. Killing, 5 Esp. C. 102.

(m) Thrupp v. Fielder, 1 Esp. C. 628. Peake's L. E. 297.

(n) Green v. Parker, cor. Forster, J., Peake's L. E. 297. And per Holt, C. J. in Hyling v. Hastings, 1 Ld. Raym. 389.

---

evidence of a distinct act of confirmation. Curtin v. Patton, 11 Serg. & R. 305; and in an action against a minor as security for another in articles of agreement on the plea of infancy, the plaintiff cannot give evidence to show that the defendant, while a minor, entered into a number of contracts, received conveyances of land, and transacted business as an adult. Ibid. See also Smith v. Mayo, 9 Mass. R. 62. Alexander v. Hutcheson, 2 Hawks, 535; Houser v. Reynolds, 1 Hayw. 143; Tucker v. Moreland, 10 Peters, 58; Wilcox v. Roath, 12 Conn. R. 550; Deason v. Boyd, 1 Dana. 45; Benham v. Bishop, 9 Conn. R. 330; Phillips v. Green, 5 Munr. 350; Caplinger v. Stokes, Meigs' R. 175; Alexander v. Hutchinson, 1 Dev. Law R. 13; Richardson v. Boright, 9 Ver. 368; Thring v. Libbey, 16 Shepley, 55; Martin v. Byrom, Dudley's R. 203; Ordinary v. Wherry, 1 Bailey, 25. But where an infant, who had made a note, on payment being demanded after he became of age, said, "I will pay it as soon as I can make it, but I cannot do it this year; I understand that the holder is about to sue it, but she had better not," it was held that it was an affirmation of the contract. Bobo v. Hansell, 2 Bailey, 114.)

(1) [If an infant grantee of land continue in possession after he is of full age, it is an affirmance of the contract. Hubbard & al. v. Cummings, 1 Greenleaf, 11. And if an infant mortgagor, after coming of age, convey the same land to another, subject to the mortgage, which he recognizes in the deed, he therefore confirms the mortgage. Boston Bank v. Chamberlain, 15 Mass. Rep. 220. So where an award, made under a submission by an infant's guardian, directed that the infant should pay to his mother an annuity in lieu of dower, and that she should release to him her right of dower—his acceptance of the estate free of dower, and entering upon and enjoying it, after he came of age, according to the award, were held to be a sufficient ratification. Barnaby v. Barnaby, 1 Pick. 223. So, although a lease of an infant's lands by his guardian is voidable, yet it is confirmed by any act of the ward expressive of his assent after he arrives at full age. Van Dorens v. Everett, 2 Southard's Rep. 460.]

(2) [A bare acknowledgement of the debt or an admission of the consideration upon which the promise was made during infancy, is not sufficient to make the party liable as upon a promise made when of full age. Martin v. Mayo & al. 10 Mass. Rep. 137. Whitney & al. v. Dutch & al. 14 Mass. Rep. 457. But the terms of ratification need not be such as import a direct promise to pay—all that is necessary is that there be an express agreement to ratify the contract, by words, oral or in writing, which import a recognition and confirmation of the promise, 14 Mass. Rep. ubi sup. Thus where one who made a note during his minority, acknowledged after he came of age that the money was due, and promised that on his return home he would endeavour to procure it and send it to the creditor—it was held to be a sufficient ratification. Ibid. So where the party said, after he came of age, "when I return from this voyage I will pay you"—and "I have not the money now, but when I return from this voyage I will settle with" the holder of the note. 10 Mass. Rep. ubi sup. See also Jackson v. Mayo & al. 11 Mass. Rep. 147. So in the case of the award, mentioned in the preceding note, the defendant, after he was of age, enclosed money in a letter to his mother, saying—"you will find enclosed the sum of ——— in part towards your right of dower: the remainder I shall forward in a few days," &c. Barnaby v. Barnaby, 1 Pick. 223. See also Thompson v. Linscott, 2 Greenleaf, 186.

But where a defendant in conversation concerning a note made by him during his infancy, said he owed the plaintiff, but was unable to pay, and that he would endeavour to procure his brother to be bound with him—it was held not to be a renewal of the promise. Ford v. Phillips, 1 Pick. 203. {Thompson v. Lay & ux. 4 Pick. Rep. 48.} And where an infant had given a promissory note for a valuable consideration, though not for necessaries, and after coming of age made his will, in which he directed all his "just debts" to be paid—it was held that his executors were not liable. Smith v. Mayo & al. 9 Mass. Rep. 62. Sed vide Wright v. Steele, 2 N. Hamp. 51. A promise, made after the arrival at full age, must, in order to ratify one made during minority, and to be binding, be made deliberately, and with a knowledge that the party is not liable by law. Ibid. Hussey & al. v. Jewett, 9 Mass. Rep. 100. Ford v. Phillips, ubi sup. And the same evidence ought to be required of the confirmation of a voidable contract, after full age, as of the execution of a new one. Rogers & ux. v. Hurd, 4 Day, 57.] {Where however the contract is absolutely void, as being against the interest of the infant, it is incapable of confirmation, and a promissory note executed by an infant as the surety of another has been held to be such a contract. Maples v. Wightman, 4 Conn. Rep. 376.}

the promise must, in order to support the action, be made before action brought (o).

If the plaintiff reply that the articles supplied were necessaries, he must prove the defendant's rank and condition in life, and show that the things furnished were suitable to and consistent with that situation. The question of necessaries is a relative fact, to be governed by the fortune and circumstances of the infant, the proof of which lies on the plaintiff (p). Whether they were necessaries or not is usually a question of fact for the jury (q) (A). An infant is liable for necessary victuals (r), apparel (s), physic, and surgical attendance (t), schooling, and instruction (u), for a fine assessed on him on his admission to a copyhold estate (x). So he is liable for necessaries supplied to his wife (y), or child (z). But he is not liable as for necessaries in respect of goods bought to sell again, although he keeps an *open public shop, for he has not discretion to carry on business (a); or *558

Necessaries.

(o) Thornton v. Illingworth,[1] 2 B. & B. 824 (1). Secus, it has been held, under the stat. of limitations Yea v. Fouraker, 2 Burr. 1099.

(p) Per Lord Kenyon, Ford v. Fothergill, 1 Esp. C. 211; and see Maddox v. Miller, 1 M. & S. 738. Where the debt was for grocery goods to stock his shop, but out of which his family were supplied; held, that pro tanto as necessaries, he was liable to be sued. Turberville v. Whitehouse, 12 Price, 692. Where a father sufficiently supplied the defendant, his son, a minor, with clothes, the question is, whether the articles of clothing supplied by the plaintiff were necessaries; if a tradesman trusts an infant, he does it at his peril, if it turns out that he has been properly supplied. Story v. Pery,[2] 4 C. & P. 526.

(q) The question generally depends upon the collateral circumstances of the case, such as the rank and situation of the party, and the suitableness of the articles. The finding of the jury is of course subject to the control of the Court in point of law. See Cro. Eliz. 587. Com. Dig. Enfant, B. 5. An infant is not liable on a bill of exchange, though given for necessaries. Williamson v. Watts, 1 Camp. 552. But he is liable on a bill of exchange accepted after twenty-one, though drawn before. Stevens v. Jackson, 1 Camp. 164. He is not liable on contracts made by a firm in which he is partner during minority, but he will be liable to such as are made after twenty-one, unless he disaffirm the partnership. Goode v. Harrison, 1 B. & A. 147. He is not liable in respect of goods which do not reach him till he has attained his age, if the property vested in him previously, by delivery to the carrier. Griffin v. Langfield, 3 Camp. 254. A tailor cannot recover for more clothes than are necessary, according to the actual state of his wardrobe, taking into consideration clothes ordered from other tailors. Burghart v. Angerstein, Mo. & R. 458. An infant, being a lieutenant in the navy, is not liable for the price of a chronometer supplied to him when out of employment. Berolles v. Ramsay,[3] Holt's C. 77. He is not liable on the warranty of a horse. Howlett v. Haswell, 4 Camp. 118. In Chartress v. Bayntun,[4] 7 C. & P. 62), it was held that a stanhope was not necessary for a minor, being the son of a beneficed clergyman, and holding a commission in the army.

(r) Co. Litt. 172, a.; Jon. 182. And if he be a housekeeper, for victuals supplied to his family. 1 Sid. 112.

(s) Co. Litt. 172, a.; 1 Rol. 179, l. 5. Or for making clothes; and if he brings the cloth to the tailor, the latter need not show that it was suitable to his quality (Latch. 157). An infant captain in the army has been held to be liable for a livery provided by his orders for his servant, being necessary for the credit of his station (Hands v. Slaney, 8 T. R. 578); but it was held that he was not liable for cockades supplied to the soldiers by his orders, for these were not necessaries incident to his station. So regimentals supplied to an infant member of a volunteer corps were held to be necessaries. Coates v. Wilson, 5 Esp. C. 152.

(t) Palm. 528.

(u) Co. Litt. 172, a.; 1 Sid. 112; Mar. 40.

(x) Evelyn v. Chichester, Burr. 1717; B. N. P. 154. Per Yates, J. Note, he enjoyed the estate when he came of age; but debt, it seems, would not lie in such a case, because an infant cannot wage his law; but if an infant take a lease for years and hold when of age, he may be charged in debt for the rent. Supra, 556.

(y) Turner v. Trisby, Str. 168; B. N. P. 155. So for money advanced to liberate him when taken in execution for necessaries. Clarke v. Leslie, 5 Esp. 28.

(z) B. N. P. 155. For persona conjuncta æquiparatur interesse proprio. Barnes, 184.

(a) Cro. Jac. 494; B. N. P. 154; Peake's L. E. 281, and Green v. Parker, there cited. Whittingham v. Hill, Cro. Jac. 494. Wywall v. Champion, 2 Str. 1083. Aliter, by Clarke, Baron, B. N. P. 154. [Van Winkle v. Ketcham, 3 Caines R. 323.]

(A) (Bent v. Manning, 10 Ver. 225.)

(1) [Ford v. Phillips, 1 Pick. 202, and Tappan v. Abbot & al., there cited, acc. Wright v. Steele, 2 N. Hamp. Rep. 51, contra.]

(2) [Whether articles furnished for an infant are of the classes for which he is liable, is matter of law; whether they were actually necessary and of reasonable prices, is matter of fact for the jury. Beeler v. Young, 1 Bibb, 519. Stanton v. Wilson & al. 3 Day, 37.

A horse is not within the denomination of necessaries for which an infant is liable. Rainwater v. Durham, 2 Nott & M'Cord, 524.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. ix. 256. [2] Id. xix. 508. [3] Id. iii. 32. [4] Id. xxxii. 433.

for money supplied to buy necessaries with, unless it be actually expended (b).

The plaintiff cannot show, in reply to the defence of infancy, that the infant stated an account with him even for necessaries (c). Where it appears that the things themselves were necessary, abstractedly considered, it is still a good defence to prove that the defendant was supplied with necessaries by his parents or friends, although no proof be given that this was known to the plaintiff (d).

Action by infant.

An infant who has paid money with his own hand, though without a valuable consideration, cannot, it seems, recover it back. Where an infant paid money as a premium for a lease, and enjoyed it for a short time during infancy, but avoided it on attaining his age, it was held that he could not recover the money (e). An infant heir-at-law cannot eject his ancestor's tenant from year to year, without giving the ordinary notice to quit (f). After the death of the master of an apprentice, his assets are liable to the maintenance of the apprentice (g).

Criminal liability.

An infant under the age of twenty-one is privileged as to some misdemeanors, particularly in cases of omission, unless he be bound in respect of tenure, &c., as not repairing a bridge or highway (h); for not having the command of his fortune till twenty-one, he wants the capacity to do that which the law requires. Yet, with regard to other offences, even those of a capital nature, an infant is equally liable to suffer with a person of full age

Capacity, or matter of proof.

(i) (1). By the law, as it now stands, and has stood at least ever since the time of Edward 3, the capacity of doing ill and contracting guilt is not so much measured by years and days as by the strength of the delinquent's understanding and judgment. For one lad of eleven years old may have as much cunning as another of fourteen, and in these cases the maxim of the law is, that malitia supplet ætatem. Under seven years of age, indeed, an infant cannot be guilty of felony, for then a felonious discretion is almost an impossibility in nature; but at eight years old, he may be guilty

*559 of felony (k) (A). *Also under fourteen, though an infant shall be prima facie adjudged to be doli incapax, yet, if it appear to the Court and jury that he was doli capax, and could discern between good and evil, he may

(b) Semble, B. N. P. 154; Ca. K. B. 157. Darby v. Boucher, 1 Salk. 279. Probart v. Knouth, 2 Esp. C. 472 (n).

(c) Truman v. Hirst, 1 T. R. 40. Bartlet v. Emery, ibid. 42 (n). Peake's L. E. 280. Ingledew v. Douglas,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 36. Hedgley v. Holt,[2] 4 C. & P. 104.

(d) Ford v. Fothergill, Peake's C. 229; 1 Esp. C. 211. [Wailing v. Toll, 9 Johns. 141. Angel v. M'Lellan, 16 Mass. Rep. 31.] It is the duty of a tradesman to make inquiries from the parents; if the infant be supplied with necessaries by them, the tradesman cannot recover for those which he has supplied. Cooke v. Deaton,[3] 3 C. & P. 114. The infant, if not left destitute of necessaries, but provided with such as his friends think it proper to supply, cannot bind himself to a stranger, even for such things as might otherwise be deemed to be necessaries. Bainbridge v. Pickering, 2 Bl. 1325.

(e) Holmes v. Blogg,[4] 1 Moore, 466; 2 Moore, 552; 8 Taunt. 508; Wilmot's Notes, 226, n.; and per Ld. Mansfield, in the Earl of Buckinghamshire v. Drury, ibid. and 3 Brown's P. C. 492: 2 Eden's C. 1.

(f) Madden v. White, 2 T. R. 159.

(g) Wadsworth v. Gye, 1 Sid. 216; Cro. Eliz. 553; Str. 1267; 1 Salk. 66.

(h) 1 Hale's P. C. 20. Secus where the guardian in socage is in possession. R. v. Sutton, 5 N. & M. 353.

(i) In the Comm. vol. iv. p. 22, it is stated, that for a breach of the peace, riot, battery, or the like, an infant of the age of fourteen is answerable; but as an infant under the age of fourteen is liable to suffer death in respect of a capital offence, can there be any doubt as to his liability to suffer imprisonment for a less offence?

(k) Dalt, J., c. 147. A child under ten years was charged with stealing a small quantity of coals: the Judge directed the jury that they must be satisfied that the party, at the time of the offence, had a guilty knowledge that he or she was doing wrong; the jury acquitted the prisoner. R. v. Owen,[5] 4 C. & P. 236.

(A) (See State v. Mary Doherty, 2 Tenn. R. 88.)

(1) [An infant may commit treason, and thus subject his estate to forfeiture. Denn v. Banta, 1 Coxe's Rep. 226.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 233. [2]Id. xix. 297. [3]Id. xiv. 232. [4]Id. iv. 189. [5]Id. xix. 362.

be convicted and suffer death (l) (A). But in all cases the evidence of malice which is to supply age, ought to be strong and clear beyond all doubt and contradiction (m).

The competency of an infant has already been considered (n). It is observed by Sir W. Blackstone (o), that where the evidence of children is admitted, it is much to be wished, in order to render their evidence credible, that there should be some concurrent testimony of time, place, and circumstances. Such evidence is always desirable in criminal cases, to confirm the testimony of an adult witness, as well as that of an infant. It is, in many instances, even more desirable in the former than in the latter case, where the inexperience and simplicity of the witness render subornation very difficult. By the stat. 9 G. 4, c. 14, s. 5, no action shall be maintained on a promise or ratification after full age, unless it be in writing, signed by the party to be charged. Competency. St. 9 G. 4, c. 14.

INFERIOR COURT.

A RESTRICTION that no action shall be brought (otherwise than in the inferior jurisdiction), in respect of any debt under 40*s.*, does not apply where the plaintiff declares on a special contract for the selling of a chattel of the plaintiff by the defendant, the claim not being colourably inserted (p).

INNKEEPER.

THE general rule of law is, that an innkeeper is bound to keep the goods of his guest, who resorts to his house animo hospitandi, so that no loss happen pro defectu hospitatoris (q) (B). And, therefore, in such cases two questions *usually arise: 1. Whether the guest came to the inn animo hospitandi; 2dly. As to the fact that the goods were lost. *560

(l) Thus a girl of thirteen has been burnt for killing her mistress; and one boy of ten, and another of nine years old, who had killed their companions, have been sentenced to death, and he of ten years actually hanged, because it appeared, upon their trials, that one hid himself, and the other hid the body he had killed, which hiding manifested a consciousness of guilt, and a discretion to discern between good and evil (1 Hale's P. C. 26, 27; 4 Comm. 24). And there was an instance in the last century but one, where a boy of eight years old was tried at Abingdon for firing two barns; and it appearing that he had malice, revenge and cunning, he was found guilty, condemned, and hanged accordingly (Emlyn on Hale's P. C. 25; 4 Comm. 24). Thus also, in modern times, a boy of ten years old was convicted, on his own confession, of murdering his bedfellow, there appearing in his whole behaviour plain tokens of a mischievous discretion; and as the sparing this boy merely on account of his tender years might be of dangerous consequence to the public, by propagating a notion that children might commit such atrocious crimes with impunity, it was unanimously agreed by all the Judges that he was a proper subject of capital punishment. Fost. 72.

(m) 4 Comm. 23, 24.

(n) See Index, tit. WITNESS.—COMPETENCY.

(o) 4 Comm. 214.

(p) Mansfield v. Brearey,[1] 1 Ad. & Ell. 347. As to the mode of procuring return of the actual proceedings, see Salter v. Slade,[2] 1 Ad. & Ell. 608. And see as to a plea of Court of Requests Act, France v. Parry,[3] 1 Ad. & Ell. 615.

(q) Per Ld. Ellenborough in Farnworth v. Packwood,[4] 1 Starkie's C. 251. An innkeeper shall be charged if there be a default in him or his servants in the well and safe keeping of his guest's goods and chattels within his common inn, for the innkeeper is bound in law to keep them safe without any stealing, and it is not any excuse for him to say that he delivered to the guest the key of the chamber in which he is lodged, and that he left the chamber-door open. And although the guest doth not deliver his goods to the innkeeper to keep, nor acquaints him with them, yet if they be carried away or stolen, the innkeeper shall be charged; and so, although they who stole the goods shall be unknown. But if the guest's servants, or he who comes, or he whom he desires to be lodged with him, steals or carries away his goods, the innkeeper shall not be charged, for here the fault is in the guest to have such companions or servants. Calye's Case, 8 Rep. 33, a.; and see Moore, 78, pl. 207; 22 H. 6, 21, b.; 11 H. 4, 45, a. b.; 42 Ed. 3, 11, a.; 5 Mod. 543; 1 Roll. Ab. 4; 10 H. 7, 26. Spencer v. Spencer, Dyer, 266. East India Company v. Pullen, 2 Str. 690. Com. Dig. Action against a common Carrier, C. 1; Cro. Eliz. 285; Salk. 18.

(A) (An infant under the age of fourteen may be convicted and punished for an assault with an intent to commit a rape, although the law presumes him incapable of executing such intent. Commonwealth v. Green, 2 Pick. 380.)

(B) (But an innkeeper is not bound to entertain the agent of a rival inn who seeks to decoy away his customers. Jencks v. Colman, 2 Sumner, C. C. R. 321.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxviii. 105. [2]Id. xxviii. 162. [3]Id. xxiii. 165. [4]Id. ii. 377.

The plaintiff must prove, in the first place, that he was received as a guest at the inn (r). Although the innkeeper refuse to take charge of the plaintiff's goods till a future day, on request to do so, still if the plaintiff remain as a guest, and the goods are stolen, the innkeeper is liable (s).

A house of entertainment in London, where beds and provisions are furnished, though not frequented by coaches, and destitute of stables, is an inn, the keeper of which is subject to the common-law liability (t).

The plaintiff may sue if his goods were lost, although his servant (u) or his friend having the custody of his goods was the guest (x).

In the next place, he must prove the loss and value of the goods (A).

Defence. The defendant may show in defence that he never received the plaintiff as a guest, but refused (y).

In the next place, although the plaintiff prove a primâ facie case, yet the defendant may show that the plaintiff himself conduced to the loss.

If a guest contract for the exclusive use of a room, to be used as a shop, and take the key, he discharges the landlord (z). If, indeed, the landlord himself afterwards take the key, the onus of safe custody again devolves

(r) Bennett v. Meller, 5 T. R. 273; Bird v. Bird, 1 And. 29.

(s) Bennett v. Meller, 5 T. R. 273. So if on a fair day he place the gig of plaintiff with others as usual in a public street. Jones v. Tyler,[1] 1 Ad. & Ell. 522.

(t) Thompson v. Lacy,[2] 3 B. & A. 283.

(u) Beedle v. Morris, innkeeper of Dunchurch, Cro. J. 224, Coke's Ent. 347. So under the St. of Winton, where the servant was robbed, either the master or servant might have maintained the action against the hundred.

(x) Yel. 162. He is responsible for money belonging to his guest. Kent v. Shuckhard,[3] 2 B. & Ad. 803. Dorman v. Jenkins, 4 N. & M. 170. A traveller desired part of his luggage to be taken into the commercial room of the inn, which but for such order would, by the usage of the house, have been carried with the rest into his bed-room; the innkeeper is nevertheless answerable for the loss of it. Richmond v. Smith,[4] 8 B. & C. 9; and 2 M. & Ry. 235. A tavern-keeper had a room for a public entertainment of music, to which persons were admitted at 2*d.* a head, without a license under 25 Geo. 2, c. 36; he is liable to the penalty, whether he received it for his own benefit or for others, and however respectable the persons frequenting it might be; the 13th sect. applies to common informers. Green v. Botheroyde,[5] 3 C. & P. 471.

(y) White v. ———, Dyer, 158. The Court held that if one come to an inn, and the host say that his house is full of guests, and does not admit him, and the traveller says that he will make shift among the other guests, the landlord shall not be charged, because he refused cover, although the cause of refusal was false, for the plaintiff may have his action for so refusing; and it was held that these facts were good evidence, on issue joined on a plea by the landlord that the goods were taken without his default.

(z) Farnworth v. Packwood,[6] 1 Starkie's C. 249. Burgess v. Clements, 1b. 251, in the note. The plaintiff, in the case of Burgess v. Clements,[7] 1 Starkie's C. 251, requested to have a private room to exhibit his goods, and receive his customers. The landlady showed him into a private room, gave him the key, and advised him to lock the door. The loss happened at night; the plaintiff had a candle in the room, but the curtains of the widows were down. When the defendant's son left him he was packing up the goods, and had been out two hours before the loss was discovered. When he went out he was not sure that he had even shut the door after him; the key was found in it. The defendant went into the room after the plaintiff went out, and found the candle burning. The learned Judge left it to the jury to say, whether the plaintiff had not, by his careless and negligent conduct, discharged the defendant from his common-law responsibility. The jury found for the defendant, and the Court of K. B. affirmed the verdict; 4 M. & S. 306.

(A) (An innkeeper is liable for whatever is deposited in his house, but if the trust of the depositor is reposed in another person living in the house, the case is taken out of the general rule. Sneider v. Geiss, 1 Yeates, 34. Quinton v. Courtney, 1 Hayw. 40. But he is not liable in trover for property intrusted to him, unless an actual conversion be shown; a demand and refusal is not sufficient evidence of a conversion, unless at the time of the demand the goods were in his possession or under his control. Hallenbake v. Fish, 8 Wend. 547. Pool v. Adkisson, 1 Dana, 120. So he may show that the guest was admitted upon terms, the inn being full. Quinton v. Courtney, supra.) An innkeeper is responsible for the safe keeping of a load of goods belonging to a traveller who stops at his inn for the night, if the carriage containing the goods be deposited in a place designated by the servant of the innkeper, although such place be an open unenclosed space near the public highway. Piper v. Manny, 21 Wend. 282. Where a sleigh loaded with wheat, &c. was put by the guest into an outhouse appurtenant to the inn, where loads of that description were usually received, and the grain, was stolen during the night the innkeeper was held responsible for the loss. Chute v. Wiggins, 14 John. R. 175. See also Platt v. Hibbard, 7 Cow. 497.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxviii. 138. [2] Id. v. 285. [3] Id. xxii. 186. [4] Id. xv. 144. [5] Id. xiv. 395. [6] Id. ii. 377. [7] Id. ii. 378.

*upon the landlord (a). Such a case differs materially from Caley's Case (b,)where the landlord gave the guest the key of the room; but it was to be occupied merely as a lodging-room, and not for any aliene purpose (c).

Where it appeared that the plaintiff, being a guest at an inn, had deposited his pocket-book, containing bills of exchange and bank-notes, on the chimney-piece of his bed-room, and had left the book there so exposed, the learned Judge directed the plaintiff to be nonsuited, on the ground that he had been guilty of gross negligence in leaving valuable property so exposed (d).

In an action of trover for goods, the defendant may justify in evidence, as an innkeeper having a lien on them for the payment of the bill of the guest (e.) But it is otherwise if the innkeeper receive a horse under a special agreement at so much per week, so long as he continues at pasture (f).

A landlord cannot insist on a lien on the horse of A. which has been left at the inn by B. who has wrongfully seized it, if the landlord knew, at the time of receiving the horse, that A. was a wrong-doer, for by so doing he made himself a party to the wrongful act of A. (g) (A).

INSOLVENT.

Title of assignee.

By the stat. 7 G. 4, c. 57, s. 16, the provisional assignee appointed under the Act may sue in his own name, if the Court shall so order (h), for the recovering, obtaining and enforcing of any estates, debts, effects or rights of any such prisoner; and in the case of the resignation or removal from office of such assignee, or of his death, all the real and personal estate, &c. vested in or possessed by such provisional assignee, shall vest in his successor in office to be appointed by the Court. And by sec. 38, upon the appointment of a new assignee by the Court, all the estates, effects, rights and powers of such prisoner, vested in any such former assignee,

(a) Ibid. (b) 8 Co. 65.

(c) See the observations of Le Blanc, J., in Farnworth v. Packwood,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 253.

(d) Cor. Hullock, B., Lancaster Lent Assizes, 1827.

(e) Thompson v. Lacy,[2] 3 B. & A 283; Supra, 560; 2 Show. 161. It has even been said that an innkeeper may sell a horse brought to the inn, and left there without any special agreement, when his keep amounts to his value, upon a reasonable appraisement. Per Popham, C. J., Yelv. 67. But in Jones v. Pearle, Str. 556, it was held that an innkeeper could not in such case sell the horse except in the city of London.

(f) Chapman v. Allen, Cro. Car. 271.

(g) Johnson v. Hill,[3] 3 Starkie's C. 172.

(h) The Court refused after verdict to stay proceedings in an action by the provisional assignee, on the ground that the plaintiff had not proved that he was authorized by the major part of the creditors to bring the action, and that he brought it with the approbation of the Insolvent Court, pursuant to 1 G. 4. c. 119, and 3 G. 4, c. 123. The proper course, if the action were improper, was by application to that Court, which might restrain the plaintiff from proceeding any further. Doe d. Spencer v. Clark,[4] 3 Bing. 370. But in the case of Allison v. Rayner,[5] 7 B. & C. 441, in an action brought by an attorney against the assignee of an insolvent's estate, for the costs of an action prosecuted by the attorney on the retainer of the assignee, it was held to be incumbent on the plaintiff to prove that the consent of the creditors, and the approbation of one of the commissioners of the Insolvent Court had been obtained, or at least that he had informed his client that such consent was necessary.

(A) (The law makes it the duty of innkeepers to receive and feed the horses of travellers, and gives them liens, by virtue of which a landlord may refuse to redeliver a guest's horse, till his reasonable charge for keeping him is paid; and though a guest departs and leaves his horse, the lien and right of detainer, for past and accruing expenses, continues and this lien will prevail (unless there was some ground for suspicion, that would justify a refusal to receive the horse) against all claimants—even against the true owner, when the horse had been stolen and brought to the inn by the thief. Black v. Brennan, 5 Dana, 311. But this privilege of detainer is confined to regular innkeepers, who are bound to receive guests. Carlisle v. Quattlebaum, 2 Bailey, 452.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 377. [2]Id. v. 285. [3]Id. xiv. 176. [4]Id. xiii. 12. [5]Id. xiv. 76. [6]Id. xxvii. 559.

shall be vested in such new assignee; and proof of such removal and appointment, entered of record, shall be received by such certified copy thereof as is thereinbefore directed to be received as proof of assignments under the Act (i).

By the same statute, s. 19, it is enacted, that every conveyance and *562 *assigument (by the petitioning insolvent) to the provisional assignee, and a counterpart of every such conveyance and assignment, by such provisional assignee to such other assignee or assignees, shall be filed of record in the said Court; and a copy of any such record made upon parchment, and purporting to have the certificate of the provisional assignee of the said Court, or his deputy appointed for that purpose, endorsed thereon, and to be sealed with the seal of the said Court, shall be recognized and received as sufficient evidence of such conveyance and assignment, and of the title of the provisional and other assignee or assignees under the same, in all courts, and before commissioners of bankrupt and justices of the peace, to all intents and purposes, without any proof whatever given of the same, or of any other proceedings in the said Court in the matter of the said prisoner's petition (j).

Proof of proceedings.

By the stat. 7 G. 4, c. 57, s. 76, a copy of the petition, schedule, order and other orders (k) and proceedings, purporting to be signed by the officer in whose custody the same shall be, or his deputy, certifying the same to be a true copy of such petition, &c. and sealed with the seal of the said Court, shall be at all times admitted in all Courts whatever, and before commissioners of bankrupt and justices of the peace, as sufficient evidence of the same, without any proof whatever given of the same, further than that the same is sealed with the seal of the Court as aforesaid (l).

Under sec. 19 of the 7 Geo. 4, an assignee, in order to prove his title, is not bound to show the petition, but the order of discharge and certified copies of the assignment to the provisional assignee and to himself, are sufficient (m).

The assignees of an insolvent cannot recover by action property which (i) Under sec. 11, the copyhold vests without any entry on the roll. Doe v. Glenfield, 1 Bing. N. C. 729.

(j) See Doe v. Land,[1] 4 D. & R. 509.

(k) It has been said that a parol admission of the fact of discharge of an insolvent, made by the opposite party, is not evidence of the fact without proof of the order. Scott v. Clare, 3 Camp. 236.

(l) Certified copies, although made evidence for the insolvent or his creditors, (semble) are, it has been held, not so for other persons, nor against him; but if the original schedule and his handwriting thereto be proved, it would be evidence against him. Nicholls v. Downes,[2] 4 C. & P. 330. The stat. 7 Geo. 4, c. 57, s. 76, does not preclude a party from giving the original document in evidence. Northam v. Latouche,[3] 4 C. & P. 145. The Insolvent Act requiring that the petition shall be subscribed by the prisoner and filed, and a certified copy admitted as legal evidence, it must be presumed to have been regularly done, and such copy is therefore a sufficient proof of an allegation, in a declaration for a libel, that a petition subscribed by the plaintiff as such prisoner has been duly filed, &c. Gould v. Hulme,[4] 3 C. & P. 625. Where the copy of the provisional assignment, under 1 Geo. 4, c. 119, s. 7, was produced from the Insolvent Court, and offered in evidence under 7 Geo. 4, c. 57, s. 76; held admissible, and that it was not necessary to go on to show that the proceedings under the former Act were complete, and the prisoner discharged, Doe v. Hardy,[5] 6 Ad. & Ell. 335; Doe v. Evans, 1 C. & M. 450.

(m) Delafield v. Freeman,[6] 6 Bing. 294. The assignment to the provisional assignee gives him a right to sue, and the 7 Geo. 4, c. 57, s. 16, is only affirmative, and it is not essential that he should previously obtain the order of the Court for that purpose. Dance v. Wyatt,[7] 6 Bing. 486. And see Doe d. Clark v. Spencer,[8] 3 Bing. 203. The assignment by the provisional assignee of an insolvent, does not vest a lease absolutely, until the assignee has done some unequivocal act to signify his assent; where the jury negatived any such act, and also found that he had not retained the lease an unreasonable time in order to ascertain whether it would prove beneficial to the creditors to accept it, held that he was not liable to the covenants. In this respect, he stands in the same situation as the assignees of a bankrupt. Lindsay v. Limbert,[9] 12 Moore, 209. And see Turner v. Richardson, 7 East, 335. The 57th clause does not apply to the copy of an assignment where the insolvent and his effects have been assigned under the stat. 53 G. 2, c. 102. Doe v. Sellon,[10] 6 Ad. & Ell. 328.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xvi. 177. [2]Id. xix. 407. [3]Id. xix. 314. [4]Id. xiv. 491. [5]Id. xxxiii. 86. [6]Id. xix. 83. [7]Id. xix. 145. [8]Id. xiii. 12. [9]Id. xxxii. 448. [10]Id. xxxiii. 86.

accrues to the insolvent after his discharge, but must, under the statute, apply to the Insolvent Debtors Court to issue execution on the judgment *entered up in their names against the insolvent (n). But where money *563 was due to the insolvent previous to his discharge in respect of the sale by him of an equitable estate, and the money was, after the discharge, received by the insolvent's agent, it was held that the assignee was entitled to recover (o); subject, however, to a lien on the part of the defendant, created by the insolvent's contract with him when the insolvent was sui juris (p).

To constitute a voluntary payment under the 7 Geo. 4, c. 57, s. 32, it must be a payment with knowledge of the insolvency, and also made voluntarily: where the plaintiff, an attorney, defending actions for the insolvent, had refused to go on unless money were furnished to him, and 20*l.* had been paid him for the purpose, a sum exceeding the costs in the action, the Judge directed the jury that it was not a voluntary payment (q). Voluntary payment.

By sec. 46, the Court is authorized, on the prisoner's swearing to the truth of his petition and schedule, and executing a warrant of attorney as directed by the Act, to adjudge that the prisoner (r) shall be discharged (s) as to the several debts or sums of money due or claimed to be due at the time of filing such prisoner's petition, from such prisoner to the several persons named in his schedule as creditors, or claiming to be creditors, for the same respectively, or for which such persons shall have given credit to such prisoner before the time of filing such petition and which were not then payable, and as to the claims of all other persons not known to such prisoners at the time of adjudication, who may be indorsees or holders of any negotiable security set forth in such schedule (t). Proof of discharge.

The schedule (u) is the test of discharge from a particular debt; but a (n) Hepper v. Marshal,[1] 2 Bingh. 372; and per Best, C. J. in Twiss v. White,[2] 3 Bingh. 486, under the stat. 1 G. 4, c. 119. The assignment under the st. 7 G. 4, c. 57, s. 11, extends to all the estate, debts, &c. to which he shall be entitled previous to his final discharge. It was held under the stat. 41 G. 3, c. 70, that the title of the assignee had no relation to the time when the estate vested in the clerk of the peace. Doe v. Telling, 2 East, 257.

(o) Twiss v. White,[2] 3 Bing. 486. (p) Ibid.

(q) Troup v. Brooks,[3] 4 C. & P. 320. Under the stat. 7 Geo. 4, c. 57, s. 32, the payment of a debt to a creditor by an insolvent within three months before his imprisonment is included, and therefore void. Herbert v. Wilcox,[4] 6 Bing. 203.

(r) A party in custody under an attachment for contempt for non-payment of costs, and under the criminal jurisdiction, held, not "a person in execution under a judgment" within the provisions of 48 G. 3, c. 123. R. v. Clifford,[5] 8 D. & Ry. 58.

(s) Under the 7 G. 4, c. 57, s. 54, the Court is to issue a warrant to the gaoler for the insolvent's discharge. Under the stat. 53 G. 3, c. 102, s. 10, the order of Court delivered to the gaoler, was evidence of the discharge. Neall v. Isaacs,[6] 4 B. & C. 335.

(t) By sec. 53, such discharge extends to process for contempts in non-payment of costs and expenses, and also to costs of actions by creditors, incurred by the prisoner previous to the filing of his schedule. By sec. 52, such discharge extends to sums payable by way of annuity.

(u) An insolvent who inserts in the schedule the name of the holder of a bill of exchange on which he is liable, or gives such other description as the statute requires, is discharged as to all parties to the bill though not named in the schedule, and also as to the original debt. Boydell v. Champneys, 2 M. & W. 433. Where the defendant was sued as joint maker of a promissory note for 14*l.*, after being discharged under the Insolvent Act, having given no notice to the plaintiff, but in his schedule having stated that he had accepted several bills for M. the other joint maker, on which the plaintiff had a claim against him to the amount of 18*l.*; held that if the defendant knew that the note was payable to the plaintiff, notice should have been given to him, but if the jury thought he did not know it, the body of the note being in the hand-writing of M., it was not necessary. Sharpe v. Gye,[7] 4 C. & P. 311. Where the acceptor of a bill, an insolvent, described the bill in his schedule correctly as to parties, date and amount, but misdescribed the parties in whose hands it then was, there being some evidence to show that he knew the true holder, held that it was properly a question for the jury to say whether he did so or not. Levy v. Dolbell,[8] 1 M. & M. 202. Under the stat. 7 Geo. 4, c. 57, the defendant is discharged as to claims on bills if it appear that at the time of making out his schedule he did not know the holder; secus if he had been once informed, although he *misdescription of the debt in the schedule will not be material when it was not intended to mislead, and could not have misled the creditor (x); such discharge will not extend to the whole debt, if the whole be not specified in the schedule (y). In an action by an insolvent after his discharge, the creditor is entitled to set off the difference between the amount really due and that specified in the schedule (z).

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ix. 437. [2]Id. xiii. 61. [3]Id. xix. 404. [4]Id. xix. 56. [5]Id. xi. 457. [6]Id. x. 350. [7]Id. xix. 402. [8]Id. xxii. 292.

By sec. 61, no writ of fieri facias or elegit shall issue on any judgment obtained against such prisoner (after an adjudication of discharge) for any debt or sum of money with respect to which such person shall have so become entitled (a) to his discharge; nor in any action upon any new contract, or security for payment thereof, except upon the judgment entered up according to the Act; and that if any such suit or action, &c. be brought, he may plead generally that he was duly discharged according to the Act by an order of adjudication, and that such order remains in force; to which the plaintiff may apply either generally, and deny the matters so pleaded, or specially, as he might have replied had the discharge been pleaded specially (b).

Where in an action against an insolvent the question is, whether the debt in respect of which he claims to have been discharged has been stated in the schedule, the identity of the debt, where a doubt exists, is a question of fact for the jury (c).

*565 *An insolvent is liable to repay to a surety the arrears of an annuity which he had been called upon to pay after the discharge of the principal (d).

might have forgotten it. Lewis v. Mason,[1] 4 C. & P. 322. The insolvent after his discharge signs a bill for the old debt, which is indorsed to the plaintiff for full value; in order to entitle the plaintiff to recover, the jury must be satisfied he took it bona fide, and without being conscious of the latent defect and for his own purposes. Northam v. Latouche,[2] 4 C. & P. 140. On a general plea of discharge, under the Insolvent Act, and replication, denying the discharge, the filing of the petition not being in issue, need not be proved. Andrews v. Pledger,[3] 4 C. & P. 174.

(x) Wood v. Jowett,[4] 4 B. & C. 20.

(y) Taylor v. Buchanan,[5] 4 B. & C. 419. If, being indebted to a party in two sums, he insert one only in his schedule, he is not discharged as to the other. Tyers v. Stunt, 7 Sc. 349.

(z) Ibid.

(a) Where the surety to an annuity bond, become insolvent, inserted the bond in his schedule, held, that under 1 G. 4, c. 114, s. 10, he could not be arrested for subsequent arrears. Collins v. Lightfoot,[6] 5 B. & Cr. K. B. 581; and 8 D. & R. 339. Sec. 61 is confined to debts due from the insolvent at the time of his imprisonment; where, therefore, at that time, a liability only existed to a claim for unascertained damages, as upon a judgment by default in an action, although commenced prior to his imprisonment; held, that he might be taken in execution for the damages when assessed upon the writ of inquiry. Wilmer v. White,[7] 6 Bing. 291.

(b) As to proof of discharge under former Insolvent Acts, see Neale v. Isaacs, 4 B. & C. 335; 6 D. & R. 464.

(c) Where on a plea of discharge under an Insolvent Act, in an action on a bill of exchange, it appeared that there were no other outstanding bills of like date or amount, but the names of the drawer and acceptor in the schedule were transposed; the Judge left it to the jury to say if they thought the bill declared on, and that intended to be described in the schedule, were the same, and if so, whether the mis-description was intended to deceive or mislead the holder, and likely to produce that effect. Nias v. Nicholson,[8] 1 Ry. & M. C. 323. Where the insolvent stated in his schedule a debt to A. for goods sold, and for which he had accepted a bill drawn by A. for the amount; held a sufficient description within 1 G. 4, c. 119, s. 6, although the bill at the time had been indorsed to another, the insolvent being ignorant of that fact; the Act only requiring the statement of his debts to be made according to the party's "knowledge or belief." Reeves v. Lambert,[9] 4 B. & C. 214. Where the insolvent had ordered coals of A. B. residing at N., but the invoice made out in the name of the A. Coal Co., and in his schedule he had stated the debt as due to A. B. of N. for coals, and that the latter held notes in respect thereof, which were the subject of the subsequent action; held, that it was a sufficient description of the debt under the 1 G. 4, c. 119, s. 6, there being no evidence of any intention to mislead, and the mode of describing the debt being calculated to notify to the plaintiffs the particular debt in question. Forman v. Drew,[10] 4 B. & C. 15. A surety in an annuity bond was held to be protected by his discharge, under the stat. 1 G. 4, c. 119, from arrest for future arrears. Collins v. Lightfoot,[11] 4 B. & C. 581.

(d) Abbott v. Bruere, 5 Bing. 8.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 404. [2]Id. xix. 314. [3]Id. xix. 381. [4]Id. x. 268. [5]Id. x. 376. [6]Id. xii. 326. [7]Id. xix. 84. [8]Id. xii. 53. [9]Id. x. 311. [10]Id. x. 265. [11]Id. xii. 326.

A party, after his discharge under an Insolvent Act, will be liable on a new agreement to pay the same debt (e). Liability on new promise.

An Insolvent Court has no jurisdiction to inquire whether an acceptance, on which the party was charged in execution, was a forgery (f). His not putting a debt due to him in his schedule is, it is said, conclusive against him in an action to recover it (g). An insolvent cannot, after taking the benefit of the Act, carry on a suit commenced before he took the benefit of the Act for the benefit of his creditors (h). Action by.

An assignment by an insolvent is void if made with the intention of petitioning the Court for his discharge, although made three months before the imprisonment (i).

INSPECTION.

With respect to the granting an inspection or copy of an instrument, preparatory to the trial, the application is made either, 1st, against a party, or, 2dly, against a third person.

The general rule as to parties is, that a party shall not be compelled to produce evidence against himself (j). And, therefore, where a plaintiff *moved to be allowed to inspect and take a copy of a writ in the possession of the defendant, late sheriff of Chester, to enable him to frame his declaration, the Court refused the application (k). But if the plaintiff be either an actual party, or a party in interest to an instrument in the defendant's possession, the Court will, if it be necessary, compel the production of it in order to be stamped, or that a copy may be taken, although the interest of the party does not appear, except by his own declaration, by which he claims an interest. In order, however, to obtain this rule the applicant Rule as to parties. *566 Inspection, when allowed.

(e) Sweenie v. Sharpe,[1] 4 Bing. 37.

(f) Rice v. Lee,[2] 9 Moore, 593.

(g) Nicholls v. Downes,[3] 4 C. & P. 330.

(h) Swann v. Sutton, 2 P. & D. 535, and see Minchin v. Hart,[4] 1 Chitty's R. 215.

(i) Beckie v. Smith, 2 M. & W. 191, and see Atkinson v. Brindall,[5] 2 Bing. N. C. 225; Morgan v. Brundrett,[6] 5 B. & Ad. 297; Doe v. Gillett, 2 C. M. & R. 579. Where several executions being in at the same time on the insolvent's goods, which, with the landlord's claim, and for taxes, &c., would more than have absorbed the whole property, the insolvent consented to a proposal to assign over the whole of his property to the defendants, one the landlady, and the other one of the execution creditors, for the benefit of all his creditors, the defendants to pay off the execution creditors, and carry on the business to a certain time, whereby a surplus would be realized; held, that the assignment was not to be deemed voluntary and fraudulent within the Insolvent Acts, and that there was a sufficient consideration from the defendants. Knight v. Ferguson, 5 M. & W. 389.

(j) See the observations of Abbott, L. C. J., in The King v. Sheriff of Chester,[7] 1 Chitty's R. 476. In trover for goods detained (beyond the period allowed) for a distress for rent due from a third party, the Court refused to compel the defendant to produce an agreement in his possession entered into by such third party, authorizing the defendant to remain in possession of the distress, for the purpose of being inspected, and if necessary, stamped. Lawrence v. Hooker,[8] 5 Bing. 6. Action by a corporation against their clerk for making false entries, the Court refused to order the defendant to have inspection of the books, he not having sworn that it was essential to his defence, and the plaintiff having furnished him with the item of charge to be considered as a particular, and offered him inspection of a particular item. Imperial Gas Company v. Clarke,[9] 7 Bing. 95. In a suit by the vicar, and motion for the production of papers, admitted by the answer of one defendant to be in his possession, but which he contended related to the impropriate rectory and tithes, the Court, distinguishing between such deeds as related to the defendant's title, and those which were only collateral, refused the motion. Collins v. Gresley, 2 Y. & J. 491. Inspection was refused to a plaintiff in replevin of a deed to which he was no party, assigning the reversion of the demised premises to the avowant. Brown v. Rose,[10] 6 Taunt. 305. In general an adverse claimant having no interest in title-deeds, has no right to inspect them. Talbot v. Villebois, 3 T. R. 142. The defendant, after settling a draft of articles of partnership, engrossed and executed a deed differing from the draft. The plaintiff refused to execute the deed, but commenced an action for breach of agreement to take him into partnership. The Court refused a motion for leave to inspect and copy the deed. Ratcliff v. Bleasby,[11] 3 Bing. 48.

(k) The King v. Sheriff of Chester[7], Chitty's R. 476. Note, that the plaintiff had neglected to call the defendant to return the writ into the Court of General Session at Chester.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiii. 331. [2]Id. xvii. 129. [3]Id. xix. 407. [4]Id. xviii. 68. [5]Id. xxix. 316. [6]Id. xxvii. 79. [7]Id. xviii. 139. [8]Id. xv. 345. [9]Id. xx. 59. [10]Id. i. 334, 382. [11]Id. xi. 74.

must either be an actual party to the instrument, or a party in interest (l). Where one part only of an indenture was executed, the Court compelled the defendant, who had possession of it, to produce it for the inspection of the other party (m); for one part only having been executed, there was an implied agreement by the party who had the possession of it to produce it: and in such a case the Court will direct an inspection, although the plaintiff requires it for the purpose of discovering some defect in the deed (n).

So where an action is brought by a sailor for his wages, the Court will compel the master to produce the ship's articles, and give a copy (o).

And in general it seems that whenever the defendant holds a document as a trustee for the other, the Court will compel him to produce it for inspection, upon an action brought by the other party. Where the defendant was a stakeholder, the Court ordered him to produce a copy of a racing contract for the plaintiff (p).

Where a plaintiff declares on a specialty, the defendant is entitled, as of course, to oyer of the deed; and although the instrument be not declared upon, but is wanted for the purposes of evidence only, the Court will compel the production, for the purpose of inspection, stamping, or taking a copy, upon the application of the party who has an interest in the instrument (q), although the practice was formerly to the contrary (r). According to the present practice, a Judge will, upon summons, order a copy of the instrument on which the action is founded, to be delivered to the defendant or his attorney, whenever the action is founded on a written
*567 instrument, whether *it be a policy of insurance (s), bill of exchange, or special agreement or undertaking (t) in writing to pay the debt of another, if special ground be laid, as that the demand is of long standing, and the (l) Taylor v. Osborne, 4 Taunt. 159, n. As between two persons admitting themselves to be tenants in common, a court of equity will order the production of title-deeds, in the hands of either, for the inspection of the other; but where one had sold his share, and was in possession as mortgagee of the vendee only, the Court held that they could not compel it, the rule being, that a mortgagee has no right to show his mortgagor's title. (Lambert v. Rogers, 4 Merivale, 489.) An heir cannot support a bill for title-deeds, without showing that they are in some way necessary to enable him to recover at law; he must rely on his title as heir; and if he cannot set aside the will he has nothing to do with the deeds. Jones v. Jones, 3 Merivale, 172.

(m) Blakey v. Porter, 1 Taunt. 386.

(n) King v. King, 4 Taunt. 666. The Court refused to compel the defendant who was in possession of a lease, on which the plaintiff brought an action, to permit a copy to be taken, although it appeared that the plaintiff had no copy or counterpart, and although the attorney who drew the lease and counterpart had absconded. Lord Portmore v. Goring,[1] 4 Bing. 152. But note, it was not shown that no counterpart was in existence, and on that ground the Court decided. So where bought and sold notes are delivered by the broker, it seems that the vendor is entitled to an inspection of the note delivered to the vendee. Per Hullock, B., in Grant v. Fletcher, Lancaster Lent Assizes, 1826.

(o) 1 Taunt. 386; Abbott, O. S. 389.

(p) Barnes, 439.

(q) Tidd, 523.

(r) Ib. & Salk. 215, where the Court refused a copy of a note, in an action on a parol contract, of which the note was merely evidence.

(s) Tidd, 524, 3d ed. and see the st. 19 G. 2, c. 37, s. 6.

(t) Barry v. Alexander, 25 G. 2, Str. 1130. Where in an action on an agreement to take the plaintiff into the defendant's employment, the defendant pleaded, first, the general issue; second, that there was no memorandum in writing, &c.; to which the plaintiff replied that there was such a writing; held, that the defendant was entitled to an inspection of it, as in any other case where there is only one copy of the contract, and where the party holding is to be considered a trustee for the production of it for the other. Blogg v. Kent,[2] 6 Bing. 614. Where the plaintiff made affidavit that he sued the defendant to recover damages for a breach of agreement in not entering into partnership, pursuant to a partnership deed drawn up and signed by the plaintiff, but remaining in the custody of the defendant or his attorney, and that the plaintiff possessed neither copy nor counterpart of the deed; the Court granted a rule enabling the plaintiff to inspect the deed and take a copy, though the defendant swore he had not executed the deed. On a motion for leave to inspect a partnership deed, the affidavit should state that the party moving has neither copy nor counterpart. Morrow v. Saunders,[3] 1 B. & B. 318; Bateman v. Phillips, 4 Taunt. 157. Upon a plea of letters patent not enrolled, the Court will direct a copy to be given. R. v. Amery, 1 T. R. 149.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiii. 384. [2] Id. xix. 179. [3] Id. v. 94.

defendant has no copy of the instrument, or that there is reason to suspect its being forged (u); and it is not material whether the instrument be or be not stated in the declaration to be in writing. The rule laid down by Lord Mansfield on such occasions was, that wherever the defendant would be entitled to a discovery in equity, he should have it in a court of law (v). It has been stated that in an action between a Smithfield factor and a grazier, the Court ruled the plaintiff to show cause why he should not produce upon the trial his books of account of beasts sold, and of monies received on the defendant's account, and that no cause being shown, the rule was made absolute (x). On a new trial granted, the Court has allowed the inspection of a deed read on the former trial (y).

When a party is ordered to produce the documents which bear upon the issue, he is not bound to produce such parts of documents as do not relate to the issue; but if the applicant insist that anything material has been withheld, the other party must, in analogy to the practice in the Court of Chancery, deny by affidavit that what he withholds is relevant (z). Of what documents.

It seems to be a general rule, that a Court will not compel a party to discover his evidence before trial, by the production of his books or other private documents (a). And the Court refused the application where the *object was to enable the defendant to plead in abatement the non-joinder of parties (b). In another case the Court refused a motion for the inspection of the bill of exchange on which the action was brought, and for impounding it in the hands of the prothonotary, on the suggestion of its being a forgery; for this is matter of defence on the trial (c). *568

In actions on policies of insurance, the Court or a Judge at Chambers, at the instance of the underwriters, will order the assured to produce all papers relevant to the issue (d).

Where the applicant is neither an actual party to the instrument, nor a party in interest, the Court will not compel the production of an instrument to be stamped (e). Where an action was brought on a bond, and the defendant, on a suggestion of forgery, moved that it might be examined in the hands of the plaintiff, by an officer from the Stamp-office, the Court refused the application, since it might be the means of convicting the party of a capital felony (f). And where each party has his own part of the instrument, the Court will not compel the defendant to produce his part or copy. If the plaintiff lose the bond on which the action is brought, the Court will not compel the defendant to produce his copy (g). When refused.

(u) See Tidd's Prac. 610, 7th ed. Barry v. Alexander, 25 G. 3, K. B.

(v) Tidd, 524, cites Barry v. Alexander, Mich. 25, G. 3. On a bill filed for a discovery, it is not competent to the plaintiff to call for all the defendant's deeds indiscriminately; some specific deed or deeds should be pointed out, and the object of the party calling for them fully and clearly stated. Shaw v. Shaw, 12 Pri. 163. See Worthington v. Staffurd Canal Company, Ib. 166.

(x) 2 Str. 1130.

(y) Where on the trial the defendant produced two deeds, one only of which was read, but the execution of the other was admitted; held, that upon a new trial being granted, the opposite party was entitled to have inspection of that instrument only which had been read. Hewitt v. Piggott,[1] 7 Bing. 400. Where a party produces his title-deeds to defeat his adversary's claim, the Court will give the latter an opportunity of inspecting them. Willis v. Farrar, 2 Y. & J. 242.

(z) Clifford v. Taylor, 1 Taunt. 167; 1 Camp. 562.

(a) Infra, (h). In Price v. Tuvare, Bayley, J., refused an application made by the plaintiff to inspect and take a copy of an entry of a sale of peach-wood by the defendant to the plaintiff, supposed to have been made in the defendant's books; the plaintiff's affidavit did not state that such entry had been signed either by the parties, or by any agent; and he observed upon the hardness of the defendant's situation if he were compellable to produce an entry which might be used as evidence against him, but which would not be evidence for him.

(b) Beale v. Bird,[2] 2 D. & R. 419.

(c) Hildyard v. Smith,[3] 1 Bing. 451.

(d) 1 Camp. 562; 1 Taunt. 47, 167

(e) Taylor v. Osborne, 4 Taunt. 159, n.

(f) Chetwynd v. Marnell, 1 B. & P. 271.

(g) Street v. Browne,[4] 6 Taunt. 302.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xx. 179. [2] Id. xvi. 99. [3] Id. viii. 376. [4] Id. i. 391.

In general, the Court will not compel a party to discover the evidence before the trial, by the production of his books or other private instruments (h); nor will they grant a rule for the inspection of books or documents of a private nature in the hands of third persons (i).

Inspection of court-rolls and corporation books.

But though the law will not compel one who is not a party to the suit to permit the inspection of private books and documents, it is otherwise where the document can be considered to be of a public nature, in which the applicant has an interest in common with others, as in the case of court-rolls and corporation books (j). With respect to a tenant or member, the books are public books; they are common evidence, which must of necessity be kept in some one hand, and then each individual possessing a legal interest in them has a right to inspect, and to use them as evidence of his rights; but with respect to a mere stranger, unconnected in interest, such books are to be considered as the books of a private individual, and no inspection can be compelled. This was decided, after much consideration, in the case of The Mayor of Southampton v. Greaves (k), notwithsanding several modern cases, in which the granting such applications in the case of corporations seemed to have been considered as a matter of course (l). In that case the corporation brought an action against the defendant for tolls, and the Court denied the application to inspect. A similar application had been refused in an action of trespass, where the defendant justified *569 *under the corporation of Ipswich, for distraining for a toll for repairing the quay (m), and in many other instances.

The Court will not grant an application by members of a corporate body for a mandamus to inspect the documents of a corporation, unless it be shown that such inspection is necessary with reference to some specific dispute or question depending, in which the parties applying are interested; and the inspection will then only be granted to such extent as may be necessary for the particular occasion (n).

But in an action of debt for a penalty under a bye-law, the defendant was allowed an inspection of the bye-law and of the corporation books: for as the law was made for the public good of the residents, the defendant could not be regarded as a stranger (o).

In an action between the impropriator and the parishioners, as to the right to a house, the Court refused to the former the inspection of the parish books, and copies of so much as regarded his title, saying that the case differed from that of copyholders, because all the tenants of the manor have an interest in the court-rolls, but the impropriator had a distinct interest for the parishioners; it was not a parochial right, but a title, which was in question, and therefore it was not reasonable that the parish-books should be produced, which would be to show the defendant's evidence (p)[a].

(h) Tidd, 525; 6 Mod. 364; but see 2 Burr. 2489.

(i) Tidd, 524; Ld. Raym. 705, 927; 1 Barnard, 466; Barnes, 236; C. T. Hardw. 130; 2 Bl. R. 850. But it seems that a stakeholder was compelled by the Court to produce an entry of a racing contract, that a copy might be taken. Barnes, 439. In White v. Earl of Montgomery, 2 Str. 1198, a third person, having possession of the bond sued on, was compelled to produce it. A bankrupt is not entitled, previous to the trial of an action by which he disputes the bankruptcy, to inspect the proceedings. Lofft, 80.

(j) Per Buller, J., R. v. Holland, 2 Stra. 260.

(k) 8 T. R. 590. See the opinions of Ld. Hardwicke, and of C. J. De Grey, there cited.

(l) Mayor of Lynn v. Denton, 1 T. R. 689; 3 T. R. 303. Mayor of London v. Mayor of Lynn, 1 H. B. 211.

(m) Per Lawrence, J., 8 T. R. 595; Hodges v. Atkis, 3 Wils. 398.

(n) The King v. Masters and Wardens of the Merchant Tailors' Company,[1] 2 B. & Ad. 115.

(o) Harrison v. Williams,[2] 3 B. & C. 162.

(p) Cox v. Copping, 5 Mod. 395. Semble, S. C. with Anon. Ld. Raym. 337. See also R. v. Worsenham,

[a] See Rex v. The Justices of Buckingham, Eng. Com. Law Reps. vol. xv. 240.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxii. 40. [2] Id. x. 43.

On a question between two, as to the right to a manor, the Court refused to grant a rule for the production of the rolls at the trial, since it was out of the common case between two tenants (q).

In the case of The King v. Algood (r), in which most of the previous cases on the subject were referred to (s), it was held that a freehold tenant of a manor has no right to the inspection of the rolls, unless there be some cause depending. And where the question is between the lord and a stranger, inspection will not be granted (t); but a copyholder who claims an interest may have an inspection of so much of the rolls of a manor as concerns his own interest (u), although no cause be depending at the time. Upon a question between the parish of St. Margaret and The Dean and Chapter of Westminster, as to the right of nominating the parish clerk, *570 the Court refused an inspection of the parish-books to the dean and chapter (x).

So the Court has granted a mandamus for the inspection of county rates (y).

Upon the same principle, one who has an interest in any public books, whether Bank, East India, parish or custom-house books, has a right to inspect them when they are material, and to take copies of them (z). In Grey v. Hopkins (a), an order was made for the production of the books of the East India Company, in a cause between parties having stock there, since the books, the Court said, were the title of the buyers of stock; so the books of the commissioners of the lottery, and their numerical lists, are of a public nature, and ticket-holders may have an inspection of them by rule of court (b). But the East India Company, it was held, were not obliged to produce their private books or letters (c); nor any private books relating to the appointment of their servants (d); nor will the Court allow an inspection in such cases unless it be material (e); nor the inspection and copying of more than is material to the question (f); nor will the Court compel the production of public books upon a question between parties who have

Ld. Raym. 705; The Queen v. Mead, Ld. Raym. 927. And see the case of May v. Gwynne,[1] 4 B. & A. 301. The Court will not compel the vestry clerk of a parish to produce and permit copies to be taken of documents from the parish chest in his custody, for any other than parochial purposes. May v. Gwynne,[1] 4 B. & A. 301. In an action to try the validity of a church-rate, the Court granted an order for the plaintiff to inspect and copy the parish books, without any order as to the costs of a party attending to exhibit them. Newell v. Simpkin,[2] 6 Bing. 565. A rated parishioner is entitled, under 22 Geo. 3, c. 83, s. 7, to inspect the accounts kept by the guardians of the poor, although the time for appealing may be gone by, and a mandamus granted. R. v. Great Faringdon,[3] 9 B. & C. 541. On an indictment against the county for not repairing a bridge, it being a question whether the parish or county were liable, the Court refused to compel the former to produce books of certain trustees of lands and bridgewardens, elected by the inhabitants in vestry, and to whom the accounts were submitted, not being public but parochial books, and the application being, in fact, by one litigant party to compel the other to produce his own private books to make out a case against him. R. v. Buckingham Justices,[4] 8 B. & C. 375.

(q) Wood v. Whitcomb, 12 Vin. Ab. 146, pl. 9. (r) 7 T. R. 746.

(s) R. v. Shelley, 3 T. R. 141; Hodson v. Parker, 27 G. 2, C. B.; Barnes, 237; Talbot v. Villebois, Mich. 23 G. 3; Roe v. Aylmer, Barnes, 321; Baldwin v. Tudge, Ib.

(t) Talbot v. Villebois, 2 Str. 1223.

(u) R. v. Lucas, 10 East, 235; Bateman v. Phillips, 4 Taunt. 162.

(x) Turner v. Gethin, 12 Vin. Ab. 147, pl. 11.

(y) R. v. Justices of Leicestershire,[5] 4 B. & C. 891. But application must first be made to the justices at their quarter sessions, Ib. But the Court will not grant a mandamus for the inspection of churchwardens' accounts, under 17 G. 2, c. 38, without special cause. R. v. Clear, 4 B. & C. 899. For the clause is not general, but is for the remedy of particular evils. See further, note (i) supra.

(z) 7 Mod. 129; 2 Str. 304; Barnes, 236; 1 Barnard, 455; 2 Str. 954, 1005.

(a) 7 Mod. 129; S.C. 2 Ld. Raym. 851; 1 Salk. 281, 285; 2 Salk. 555, 1446.

(b) Scinotti v. Bumstead & others, Hil. 36 G. 3; Tidd. Pr. 531, 3d edit.

(c) Shelling v. Farmer, 1 Str. 645. (d) Murray v. Thornhill, 2 Str. 717.

(e) Benson v. Port, cited 1 Wils. 240; 1 Bl. R. 40; 1 Barnard, 455; 1 Str. 1223.

(f) Ib. and Slade v. Walter, 12 Vin. Ab. Ev. 146, pl. 8.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 418. [2]Id. xix. 167. [3]Id. xvii. 439. [4]Id. xv. 240. [5]Id. x. 466.

no interest in them. It was held that the officers served with a subpœnâ duces tecum, in order to decide a wager between two persons as to the amount of the revenue, was not bound to produce the books (g).

Records of courts.

A party to a proceeding has usually a right to an inspection of those proceedings where it is necessary for the purposes of a civil suit. Where the plaintiff had been sued in the Court of Conservancy, London, and taken in execution, for which he brought an action of trespass, the Court granted a rule that he should be at liberty to inspect the books of proceedings, so far as they related to the cause against himself (h). And in an action for a malicious prosecution, where it was necessary, in order to support the action, that the plaintiff should have copies of the examinations before the justices, and of the warrant on which he was apprehended, the Court granted a rule accordingly, and directed that the originals should be produced at the trial (i).

*571 In criminal cases.

*An inspection is never granted in a criminal case, because no one is bound to produce evidence against himself (k). Upon an information against one of nine trustees of a charity, incorporated by Act of Parliament, by the name of Surveyors of the Highways of Aylesbury, for executing his office without taking the oaths, the Court denied to the prosecutor (l) inspection and copies of their books of elections, and of their receipts and disbursements, because they were of a private nature, and it would be to make a man produce evidence against himself in a criminal case. Nor is it granted in criminal cases, at the instance of the defendant, in any case, with respect to any depositions or examinations of any kind which have taken place. And therefore where an information had been filed against Holland, upon the report of a board of inquiry in India, the Court refused the defendant's motion for an inspection, and said that they had no power to grant it (m).

It seems that a proceeding by quo warranto is not considered as a criminal one with the rule (n). The motion for leave to inspect books is made upon affidavit, stating the circumstances of the case, and that application has been made and refused (o). It seems that the Court will not grant the (g) Atherfold v. Beard, 2 T. R. 616. (h) Wilson v. Rogers, 2 Str. 1242.

(i) R. v. Smith, 1 Str. 126. See Welch v. Richards, Barnes, 268. In Herbert v. Ashburne, 1 Wils. 297, the court granted a rule for the inspection of the books of the books of the sessions of the corporation of Kendall, upon a question whether the park lands were within the town or corporation of Kendall, on the ground that they were public books, which every one had a right to see. But in the case of The King v. The Sheriff of Chester,[1] 1 Chitty's R. 479, Abbot, L. C. J. said, We grant mandamuses to inspect corporation books, as a matter of right to burgesses who have an interest in the corporation, but I know of no right that this Court has to authorize a person to inspect the books of quarter sessions. In the case of the King v. Purcell, Vice Chancellor of Oxford, 1 Wils. 239, that of R. v. Berking, 7 G. 1, was cited as a precedent of a rule granted by the Court of K. B. to inspect the books and records of the Court, where the indictment was found in a criminal case; but it appears from the statement of Lee, C. J. ib. that that was the case of an indictment for exercising a trade without having served an apprenticeship, and that applications being made that the name of the prosecutor should be disclosed, the Court refused the application, observing that the defendant might have a rule to take a copy of the record, when he might see on the back of the indictment who the prosecutor was. In Edwards v. Vesey, Cas. Temp. Hard. 128, in an action brought for taking a silver cup of the plaintiff's under a distress upon a fine imposed on the plaintiff, being an under officer to the commissioners of lieutenancy for the city of London, a rule was made for the plaintiff to inspect the books and papers of rates of assessments of the lieutenancy.

(k) R. v. Purnell, 1 Bl. 37; 1 Wils. 239; per Buller, J. 7 T. R. 142; 1 Barnard, 455; 2 Str. 1005, 1223; 3 T. R. 303; 2 Taunt. 115. The grand jury may receive secondary evidence of the contents of the forged instrument, where from its being in the hands of the prisoner, or any other cause, it cannot be produced; and where a witness objects to producing deeds, if they are part of the evidence of the title to his estate, he cannot be compelled to produce them; but if not he may. R. v. Hunter,[2] 3 C. & P. 592.

(l) The Queen v. Mead, Lord Raym. 927; 12 Vin. Ab. 146, pl. 6; R. v. Dr. Bridgman, 2 Str. 1203; 1 Lord Raym. 705; 2 Str. 1005, 1210; 1 Wils. 329; 4 Burr. 2489; 1 Bl. R. 37, 351.

(m) R. v. Holland, 4 T. R. 691. (n) See R. v. Babb, 3 T. R. 579.

(o) Tidd. Pr. 533, 3d edit.; 3 Wils. 399; Str. 1223.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xviii. 139. [2] Id. xiv. 469.

motion before issue joined, for till then it does not appear whether an inspection is necessary (p).

INTENTION.

Intention, when a conclusion of law.

WHERE an act has been done voluntarily, the particular intention with which it was done may either be material or immaterial to the legal charge or claim (q).

*572 *Where the intention is material, it is in some instances a conclusion of law which may be drawn by the Court either from intrinsic facts or extrinsic circumstances, but most usually it is a question of fact, under all circumstances, for the consideration of a jury.

The question of intention is a conclusion to be drawn by the Court from the circumstances, whenever, by virtue of any rule or principle of law, the conclusion is a necessary one from such circumstances. Thus in cases of homicide, the Courts frequently infer malice from the facts, without an express finding by the jury; in other words, malice arises by construction.

It is a rule of law (where a general felonious intention is sufficient to constitute the offence) that a man who commits one felony in attempting to commit another cannot excuse himself, on the ground that he did not intend to commit the particular felony (r). Thus, if A. intend to shoot B., miss him, but destroy C. against whom he had no malice, he is guilty of the murder of C.

But in such case the offence contemplated must be a felony; if a man intending to commit a bare trespass, were to shoot another, it would amount at most to the offence of manslaughter (s).

It seems that the rule is to be confined to cases where a general allegation of a malicious and felonious intention is sufficient, and that it does not extend to offences where a particular and specific intention is essential (t).

In the next place, although the fact itself or its circumstances may not supply any conclusive inference as to intention, independently of the finding of the jury, yet they may afford a primâ facie presumption, which

(p) 3 Wils. 398; 1 Ld. Raym. 253; Carth. 421.

(q) It has been said, in the case of an action for an alleged libel, that if the fact be justified, the motive and intention are immaterial. Declaration for a libel imputing perjury; plea, that it was contained in an affidavit in defence of a charge of refusing to grant a license; and held to be good, without any denial that it was done with intent to asperse the plaintiff, or that it was necessary for the defendant's defence, or that it was done with that intent. For P. C. if the matter of fact be justified, the manner is of no consequence. Astley v. Young, 2 Burr. 801. This is no doubt true, in all cases where by law the fact is by law constituted a peremptory bar; this is in effect but to say that the intention is immaterial where the law makes it immaterial; a simple truism: where however an act may be justifiable as of right, where done with one intention, but is wrongful and actionable if done with another intention, the real intention may be a question of fact, in other words the intention is traversable, although no doubt the maxim "finis imponit nomen imperi," is usually of great weight. In Paster v. The Bishop of Winchester, Ch. Ca. 96. Vin. Ab. (X. b.), issue was joined on the question whether the primary intention of the party was to commit waste; and see Doe v. Williams, 11 East, 56; supra, tit. COPYHOLD. And Lucas v. Nockells,[1] 10 Bing. 157. And see Governor of Poor of Bristol v. Waite, 2 A. & E. 264. It has, however, frequently been held that a man may distrein for one service, and avow for another. Infra, tit. TRESPASS. The latter cases stand on a somewhat different principle: if a man having a right of way for one specific purpose, use it intentionally for another purpose when he would not have used it for the legal purpose, an actual wrong is done to the owner of the land, which has been used for a purpose foreign to the grant; but where a party has a power to distrein for either of two causes, the party distreined upon suffers no wrong, whether the distreinor intend to proceed for the one cause or the other, or distrein without any actual determination on the subject.

(r) East's P. C. 514.

(s) R. v. Dobbs, East's P. C. 513.

(t) Thus, if A. were to cut B. in attempting to murder C., it seems, that A. would not be guilty within the stat. 7 W. 4, and 1 Vic. c. 85, for the indictment must allege a specific intention to murder or injure C., which would be negatived by the evidence. If in that case A. had actually killed B. he would have been guilty of murder; but in order to constitute murder, a general malicious and felonious intention is sufficient, and it is not necessary that it should be specifically pointed at the individual.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxv. 71.

on recognized legal principles ought to prevail, unless the presumption be rebutted by competent evidence.

The law constantly notices the universal principle of evidence, that a man shall be taken to intend that which he does, or which is the immediate and natural consequence of his act (u).

In many cases, therefore, the allegation of intention, though essential to sustain the charge or claim, requires no other proof than that of the fact itself; the intention being the result or inference which the law draws from the act itself, in the absence of a sufficient legal justification or excuse. Thus in the case of a libel, the publication and noxious application of which have been proved, in the absence of evidence to repel the presumption, a malicious intention (x) is to be inferred without further proof.

*573 Where, on the *contrary, the act itself is indifferent, and is innocent or criminal according to the intention of the agent, the intention, like any other matter of fact, requires extrinsic proof.

Where a party disposes of forged bank-notes, it is an inference of law that he intended to defraud the Bank (y); and yet, if the jury do not draw the conclusion, but merely find the facts, it seems that the Court cannot.

In the absence of any principle or rule of law, by virtue of which either a conclusive inference or any presumption as to intention ought to be drawn from the act or its circumstances, the specific intention of the agent is a matter of fact on which the jury are to exercise their discretion on the evidence before them, as in ordinary cases, civil as well as criminal (z). Thus on a charge of homicide, it may be for the jury to say whether the act was done with a malicious intent to destroy another, or merely to alarm and terrify him, or resulted from mere unavoidable accident, independently of any intention to injure another, or even of carelessness or negligence; and according to that determination, the offence may amount to murder, or merely to manslaughter, or chance-medley. In order, however, to arrive at a just conclusion upon such questions, the jury ought to act upon those presumptions which are recognized by the law, as far as they are applicable, and their own judgment and experience, as applied to all the circumstances in evidence.

Where the particular intention is essential, evidence of former attempts with that intention is admissible to prove the intent (a). It is a general rule, that whenever the fact of intention is required to be established by collateral evidence, it may be rebutted by contrary evidence (b).

Primary and collateral intention.

A doubt has existed whether a criminal agent who effects the particular mischief prohibited, but who has a different and primary object in view, can be guilty of an intention to effect the particular mischief, which is but ancillary to the principal purpose. This difficulty seems to have arisen from considering that as a question of law which is in strictness a mere (u) See Ld. Ellenborough's observations, 3 M. & S. 15.

(x) See Ld. Ellenborough's observations, R. v. Phillips, 6 East, 470. Where an act, in itself indifferent, becomes criminal if it be done with a particular intent, then the intention must be alleged and proved; but where the act is in itself unlawful, the proof of justification or excuse lies on the defendant, and on failure thereof, the law implies a criminal intention. Per Lord Mansfield, 5 Burr. 2661. Starkie on Libel, 2d edit.

(y) R. v. Mazagora, 2 B. & C. 261; S. P. R. v. Sheppard, Russ. & Ry. 169.

(z) Bac. Ab. Trial, G.; 1 Hale, 229.

(a) R. v. Voke, Russ. & Ry. C. C. 531. An indictment charging a joint administering of sulphuric acid to several horses, held to be supported by proof of mixing a quantity with corn, and dividing it amongst them; but to make such an act criminal, it must appear to have been done with the intent charged, and not under a mistaken notion of improving the appearance of their skins; and to show the intent, other acts of the party may be shown. R. v. Mogg,[1] 4 Carr. & P. C. 364. See Donolly's Case, and tit. Coin—Forgery.

(b) Per Ld. Ellenborough, R. v. Phillips, 6 East, 475.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 420.

question of fact. If the prisoner did in fact intend the particular mischief, it can be no better defence in point of law (c) than of morals that he also intended some other, and perhaps greater injury. Whether he intends the particular consequence, is a question of fact for the jury. A man, it seems, intends that consequence which he contemplates, and which he expects to result from his act, and he therefore must be taken to intend every consequence which is the natural and immediate result of any act which he voluntarily does; in this respect, the legal sense of the term intention does not differ from its usual and ordinary meaning. It is therefore a question for the jury, whether the agent did not, in attempting to attain his primary *object, also intend the collateral mischief which was the necessary or even *574 natural consequence of the means used (d).

In Williams's case, where the prisoner was indicted for cutting the clothes of the prosecutrix with intent to spoil them, it appeared that the principal object of the prisoner was to injure the person. But Mr. J. Buller left it as a question for the jury, whether the prisoner made the assault with intent to spoil the clothes; informing them that they might consider whether a person who intended the end, i. e. the injury to person, did not also intend the means by which it was to be attained (e).

In the case of Coke and Woodburne (f), who were indicted under the Coventry Act for wounding Mr. Crisp, with intent to maim him, it clearly appeared that the primary object was to murder him; but the jury finding that they contemplated the maiming as ancillary to the murder, the prisoners were convicted and executed. In a recent case (g), it appeared that the prisoner, in order to facilitate the commission of a rape, cut the private parts of the prosecutrix with a penknife; it was left by the learned Judge to the jury, whether the prisoner, although he probably meant to commit a rape, did not also intend to do the prosecutrix a grievous bodily harm, and that the intention might be inferred from the act itself. The Judges were unanimously of opinion that the conviction was right (h).

With a view to civil compensation for a loss which must fall on one or other of two (in a moral sense) innocent parties, it is just and politic that

(c) See Fost. 439.

(d) The intention in such cases seems, in the common use of the word, to depend not upon the necessity of the connection between the act and the consequence, but on the contemplation and expectation of the agent, that the consequence will result from the act. He may not intend the consequence, although it be the necessary and certain result of the act; as where one ignorantly administers to another deadly poison, supposing it to be a wholesome medicine, he does not intend the death, although it be the certain consequence of the act. So he may intend a consequence, although that consequence cannot result from the act; as where one supposing that which is in its nature perfectly harmless to be poison, administers it under the expectation that it will occasion death, there he intends death, although it cannot result from the act. It is obvious that in these cases the intention is identified with the expectation of the particular result which exists in the mind of the agent. Where the party in doing an act contemplates and expects any one consequence, or any number of consequences from his act, in common parlance as well as legal construction he intends them all. If a man, intending to get rid of a particular piece of evidence against him, were to burn the document, would it not be a manifest absurdity to say, that he did not intend to burn the paper or parchment on which the evidence was written, and that he merely intended to rid himself of the writing which it contained? Equally absurd would it be in point of law, were the publisher of libels on the characters of individuals to insist that his object was not to defame others, which was a mere collateral incident, but to profit by the sale of his libels.

(e) Leach, 597. The jury found the prisoner guilty, but the Judges are said to have held, that to bring the case within the stat. 6 G. 1, c. 23 (which was made to prevent a particular and mischievous practice by the weavers, of destroying foreign manufactures introduced into this country), it was necessary that the primary intention should be to destroy the clothes. There were, however, other objections which were fatal to the prosecution.

(f) 6 St. Tr. 212.

(g) R. v. Cox, cor. Graham, B., Chelmsford Assizes, 1818, and afterwards by all the Judges, under the stat. 43 Geo. 3, c. 58.

(h) The cutting off part of a living sheep, with intent to steal, supports an indictment for killing with intent, &c. if the cutting off must occasion the sheep's death. R. v. Clay, 1 Russ. & Ry. C. C. 387.

the loss should fall on him who voluntarily did the act, or who might and ought to have prevented the loss from happening (i);—to make a man criminal there must usually be either malice or some culpable want of reasonable care and caution.

*575 *INTEREST OF MONEY.

The stat. 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 42, s. 28, enacts, that upon all debts or sums certain, payable at a certain time or otherwise, the jury, on the trial of any issue, or on any inquisition of damages, may, if they shall think fit, allow interest to the creditor at a rate not exceeding the current rate of interest, from the time when such debts or sums certain were payable, if such debts or sums be payable by virtue of some written instrument at a certain time, or if payable otherwise, then from the time when demand of payment shall have been made in writing, so as such demand shall give notice to the debtor that interest will be claimed from the date of such demand until the term of payment; provided that interest shall be payable in all cases in which it is now payable by law. Section 29 enacts, that the jury, on the trial of any issue, or on any inquisition of damages, may, if they shall think fit, give damages in the nature of interest over and above the value of the goods at the time of the conversion or seizure in all actions of trover or trespass, de bonis esportatis, and over and above the money recoverable in all actions on policies of assurance made after the passing of the Act.

General rule. Interest, independently of the above Act, is in general recoverable, in addition to the principal sum, upon an express promise, or where a contract may be implied from circumstances, but not otherwise (j) (A).

Evidence of a contract. Interest is recoverable wherever the intention of the parties that it should be paid can be inferred from the circumstances, the particular mode of dealing adopted by the parties, or the usage of the trade (k) in which they

(i) Though a man do a lawful thing, yet if any damage do thereby fall on another he shall answer it, if he could have avoided it. As if a man lop a tree, and the boughs fall upon another ipso invito, yet an action lies. If a man shoot at birds and hurt another unawares, an action lies. If I have land through which a river runs to your mill, and I lop the sallows growing by the river side, which accidentally stop the water so as your mill is injured, an action lies. If I am building my own house, and a piece of timber falls upon my neighbour's house and breaks part of it, an action lies. If a man assault me, and I lift up my staff to defend myself, and in lifting it up hit another, an action lies by that person, and yet I did a lawful thing. And the reason of all these cases is, because he that is damaged ought to be recompensed. But otherwise it is in criminal cases, for there actus non facit reum nisi mens sit rea. P. C. Lambert v. Bessey, Ray. 421, and see Guilbert v. Stone, Style, 72. Weaver v. Ward, Hob. 134. But it is a rule that ignorance of the law is no excuse for a violation of the law, though no moral blame attach.

(j) In Arnott v. Redfern,[1] 3 Bing. 353, Best, C. J. said, "the rule (that is, the negative part of it) merely prevents acts of kindness from being converted into mercenary bargains, and makes it the interest of tradesmen to press their customers for payment of their debts, and thereby checks the extension of credit, which is often ruinous both to tradesmen and customers.

(k) Eddowes v. Hopkins, Doug. 375. Upon an undertaking to pay a sum on the arrival of money in this country from abroad, which was, in reference to certain instructions, to be in discharge of a bill in the hands of the plaintiff, and due from the party on whose account the remittance was to be made, held that the plaintiff could not recover interest on the amount, from the time of the money having come to the defendant's hands. Hare v. Rickards,[2] 7 Bing. 254, and 5 M. & P. 35; and see De Haviland v. Bowerbank, 1 Camp. 51. A contract to pay interest upon the balance at the end of each year, including interest, is unobjectionable. Newall v. Jones,[3] 1 M. & M. 449, and 4 C. & P. 124. The defendant, a prisoner in France, by a written instrument, promised in one month after his arrival in England to pay the plaintiff or order £. sterling, for value received. He arrived in England in 1814; a demand was made in 1818, and in 1819 an action was commenced, which was continued until 1828, when the cause was tried; held, that the same being payable upon a contingency, and the instrument, in its language, leading to the conclusion that the parties did not intend that interest should be payable up to the time of the principal becoming due, the Court refused to depart from the rule, that interest is not due on money secured by a written instrument, unless it appeared to be so intended on the face of it, or is implied from mercantile usage. Page v. Newman,[4] 9 B. & C. 378

(A) (See for a summary of cases on the subject of interest, Hoare v. Allen, (n.) 2 Dall. 104.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiii. 3. [2]Id. xx. 122. [3]Id. xix. 304. [4]Id. xvii. 399.

*dealt. As where interest has been allowed on former balances of account (l); and where it has been the custom, on advances by bankers to the defendant, to allow interest on the balances struck from time to time on the whole balance, such interest may be recovered (m). So, if the customer knew that such was the practice of the house (n), otherwise the Court will not allow the banker more than simple interest upon sums actually advanced (o). It is not recoverable from a mere stakeholder (p).

2dly, It is recoverable where a bond, bill of exchange, or promissory note, has been given (q), although no day of payment be specified, for then the money becomes due immediately (r), and although the money by the terms of the security be payable on demand, in which case interest runs from the day of the demand (s); and if no demand be proved, from the issuing of the writ (t). If the bill or note specifiy that interest is payable, it is payable from the date, but otherwise from the time only when it becomes due (u). Where the maker promised by the note to pay interest on demand, it was held that this meant from the date (v). Interest is recoverable from the drawer of a bill, from the time of notice of dishonour (x). So if a bill of exchange be given, although it turns out to be void (y); for the intention of the parties to *contract for interest may be inferred from that circumstance (z). So where goods sold and delivered were to be paid for by a *577

Written securities.

Where the defendants bound themselves by an instrument in the nature of a bond, but without penalty or any stipulation as to interest, to pay certain sums at certain periods, to be delivered to a third party, in goods, held that the instrument not being a mercantile contract, nor one on which there existed any usage as to interest, it did not carry interest. Foster v. Weston,[1] 6 Bing. 709.

(l) Nicholl v. Thomson, 1 Camp. 52. And see Chalie v. The Duke of York, 6 Esp. C. 45.

(m) Bruce v. Hunter, 3 Camp. 467. [See Eaton v. Bell, 5 B. & A. 347. Eng. Com. Law Reps. vii. 13.]

(n) Moore v. Voughton,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 487.

(o) Dawes v. Pinner, 2 Camp. 482, n; cor. Ld. Ellenborough.

(p) Where the defendant, an auctioneer, received a deposit on the sale of premises, and the title being disputed, received notice from the vendor to invest it in Government securities, but without procuring any authority or concurrence of the vendee; held, that being a mere stakeholder, and liable to be called on to pay it over at any time to the party entitled, he was not liable to pay interest, although it appeared that he had mixed it up with his own money at his banker's, of which, after leaving sufficient to answer calls, the residue, including 19-20ths of the deposit, was laid out in securities producing interest. Harrington v. Hoggart,[3] 1 B. & Ad. 577. Where the contract of sale expressly stated that the auctioneer was agent for the vendor, and there was no proof that he had due notice of the contract having been rescinded, the vendor having failed to make a good title, held that the auctioneer, in an action to recover back the deposit, was not liable for interest. Gaby v. Driver, 2 Y. & J. 549. And see Spittle v. Lavender,[4] 2 B. & B. 452; and Burrell v. Jones, 3 B. & B. 47.

(q) Vernon v. Cholmondely, Bunb. 119. Robinson v. Bland, 2 Burr. 1077, 1085. In an action of trover for a bill of exchange, the jury may give interest by way of damages, though no special damage be alleged in the declaration. Paine v. Pritchard,[5] 2 C. & P. 558. Bill payable six months after date, with lawful interest; interest payable from date. Doman v. Dibdin,[6] 1 Ry. & M. 381. Bond in penalty of 120*l.* conditioned for payment of 120*l.*; plaintiff entitled to recover interest as damages, beyond the amount of the penalty. Francis v. Wilson,[7] 1 Ry. & M. C. 105. See Ld. Lonsdale v. Church, 2 T. R. 388. M'Clure v. Dunkin, 1 East, 436. Hilhouse v. Davis, 1 M. & S. 169. Wilde v. Clark, 6 T. R. 603. Bayley, J., in the case of Cameron v. Smith, 2 B. & A. 308, said that in an action on a bill, interest being in the nature of damages; the jury might disallow it, in case they were of opinion that the delay in payment had been occasioned by the default of the holder. And by the late statute 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 42, the giving interest is discretionary with the jury.

(r) Farquhar v. Morris, 7 T. R. 124, and per Ld. Ellenborough, 15 East, 225. But in Hogan v. Page, 1 B. & P. 337, it was held that interest was not payable on a single bond.

(s) Parker v. Hutchinson, 3 Ves. 183. Upton v. Lord Ferrers, 5 Ves. 803. Blaney v. Hendrick, 2 W. B. 761.

(t) Pierce v. Fothergill,[8] 2 Bing. N. C. 167.

(u) Orr v. Churchill, 1 H. B. 227. Kennerly v. Nash,[9] 1 Starkie's C. 452. Doman v. Dibdin,[6] Ry. & Mo. 381.

(v) Hopper v. Richmond,[10] 1 Starkie's C. 508, cor. Ld. Ellenborough.

(x) Walker v. Barnes,[11] 5 Taunt. 240.

(y) Robinson v. Bland, 2 Burr. 1077.

(z) Ibid. And see Lord Ellenborough's observations, 15 East, 227.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 217. [2] Id. ii. 479. [3] Id. xx. 443. [4] Id. vi. 196. [5] Id. xii. 261. [6] Id. xxi. 465. [7] Id. xxi. 391. [8] Id. xxix. 296. [9] Id. ii. 466. [10] Id. ii. 488. [11] Id. i. 91.

bill at a certain date, on which interest would have run (a); and it was held that interest might be recovered as part of the estimated value of the goods, upon the common count for goods sold and delivered (b). But where there was an agreement in writing that the price of goods sold and delivered should be paid for at a price specified, it was held that interest was not recoverable after the expiration of the credit (c). So interest is recoverable in an action on a judgment, where the debt itself on which the action was founded bore interest (d).

Evidence of a contract to pay interest.

In a late case the Court held, that interest was not recoverable except upon an express contract or an implied one; as in the case of mercantile securities, or where a promise could be implied from the usage of trade, or from the particular circumstances of the case (e).

(a) Marshall v. Poole, 13 East, 98; note, the agreement for the sale was in writing; as also in Porter v. Palsgrave, 2 Camp. 472; Becher v. Jones, 2 Camp. 428; Boyce v. Warbarton, Ibid. 480. Furr v. Ward, 3 M. & W. 23.

(b) But in other cases interest seems to have been recovered as damages, in the case of money lent, Trelawney v. Colman, 1 B. & A. 90; or upon a promissory note. See Slack v. Lowell, 3 Taunt. 157, where the jury, in a similar case, gave the price and interest as damages, and the Court of C. P. would not set aside the verdict.

(c) Gordon v. Swan, 12 East, 419; the declaration was in assumpsit for goods sold and delivered. In Blaney v. Hendrick, 3 Wils. 205, it was held by Gould, Blackstone, and Nares, Js. (absente Eyre, C. J.) that interest might be recovered on an account stated from the day on which it was stated; but that no interest could be recovered in respect of money owing for goods sold and delivered. And in Mountford v. Willis, 2 B. & P. 337, it was held that interest was recoverable for goods bargained and sold, a time being limited by the agreement (which was in writing) for the payment.

(d) Arnott v. Redfern,[1] 3 Bing. 353. So in affirming a judgment on a writ of error in the Exchequer. Tidd, 1231, 2d edit.; 2 Camp. 428, n.; 13 East, 78; 3 Taunt. 157; 4 Taunt. 298. In an action of debt upon an Irish judgment, a jury ought to give interest or not, as they find that the plaintiff has or has not used proper diligence to obtain payment. Bann v. Dalzell,[2] M. & M. 228, and 3 C. & P. 376. So (semble), in general where the claim to interest does not rest on express contract. Ib. See Laing v. Stone, Ib. in the note; and Du Belloix v. Waterpark,[3] 1 D. & R. 16. Eatwisle v. Shepherd, 2 T. R. 78. On an indemnity given against charges on the sale of land with sureties, the purchaser having been called on to pay the arrears of an annuity, but in the absence of the principal residing abroad, the jury having found neglect in suing the sureties, it was held that interest was not recoverable on the sums paid. Anderson v. Arrowsmith, 2 P. & D. 403.

(e) Higgins v. Sargent,[4] 2 B. & C. 348. The question was whether in an action of covenant on a policy of insurance on a life, interest was due from the day when the sum insured for became payable; and the Court held that it was not. Abbott, C. J. said, "it is now established as a general principle that interest is allowed to lay only upon mercantile securities, or in those cases where there has been express promise to pay interest, or where such promise is to be implied from the usage of trade or other circumstances. It is of importance that this rule should be adhered to; and if we were to hold that interest was payable in this case, the application of the general rule might be brought into discussion in many others." He afterwards observed, "inasmuch as the money recovered in this cause was not due by virtue of a mercantile instrument, and as there was no contract, express or implied, to pay interest, I cannot say that the jury ought to have been told that they were bound to give interest." Bayley, J., held, that as interest was not due by law for money lent, to be repaid either on demand or at given time (Calton v. Bragg, 15 East, 224), it followed that interest was not due for money payable at a certain time after an event, and that the circumstance of its being due by virtue of a contract under seal, made no difference. Holroyd, J.: "It is clearly established by the later authorities, that unless interest be payable by the consent of the parties, express or implied, from the usage of trade (as in the case of bills of exchange), or other circumstances, it is not due at common law. In De Haviland v. Bowerbank, 1 Camp. 50, Lord Ellenborough was of opinion that where money of the plaintiff had come to the hands of the defendant, to establish a right of interest upon it, there should either be a specific agreement to that effect, or something should appear from which a promise to pay interest might be inferred, or proof should be given of the money being used; and in Gordon and Swan, 12 East, 410, the same noble and learned Judge said, that the giving of interest should be limited to bills of exchange and such like instruments, and agreements reserving interest. In the latter case, although the money was payable at a particular day, non-payment at that day was held not to give any right to interest. Independently of these authorities, I am of opinion, upon the principles of the common law, that interest is not payable upon a sum certain, payable at a given day. The action of debt was the specific remedy appropriated by the common law for the recovery of a sum certain. Now in that action the defendant was summoned to render the debt, or show cause why he should not do so. The payment of the debt satisfied the summons, and was an answer to the action. If this, therefore, had been an action of debt, the payment of the principal sum would have been a good defence, because the interest is no part of the debt, but is claimed only as damages resulting from the non-payment of the debt. Where, indeed, the interest becomes payable by virtue of a contract, express or implied, then it becomes part of the debt itself, and consequently it would

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiii. 3. [2] Id. xxii. 299. [3] Id. xvi. 12. [4] Id. ix. 101.

*So interest is recoverable if the money has been used; as where an agent pays the money of his principal into his banker's hands, and uses it as his own (f). Where it cannot be recovered.

It has been held, subject to the above exceptions, that interest is not recoverable upon a sale of goods (g), or upon money lent (h), or money paid, or money had and received (i); nor upon the balance of an account stated (k); nor upon a policy of insurance (l); nor upon an agreement for retaining tithes, no day having been fixed for the payment (m).

It has in some instances been held, that though interest be not recoverable eo nomine, it is recoverable as damages (n). If, however, on grounds *579 of general policy, which may not be unattended with inconvenience in particular cases, a general rule be laid down which excludes a direct then be no answer to an action of debt for the defendant to show that he had paid the principal sum advanced. Here there being no contract, either express or implied, to pay interest, it was no part of the debt, but could only be recovered by way of damages for detaining the debt. Inasmuch, therefore, as it appears that if the plaintiff had pursued that remedy which by the common law is specifically applicable to his case, he could not have recovered interest, I think that he ought not to be permitted to recover interest by way of damages in an action of covenant." In a very late case (Easter Term, 1829), the court of K. B. held, that interest was not recoverable on a written promise to pay money on a day certain, which had been made abroad, and which had been declared on as a promissory note, but which in point of law was not a promissory note, and where the plaintiff had recovered on the account stated. Contrary to the above rule, laid down in Higgins v. Sargent, interest has formerly been allowed on a sum awarded to be paid on a certain day. Pinhorn v. Tuckington, 3 Camp. 468; and see Chalie v. Duke of York, 6 Esp. C. 46; Swinford v. Burn,[1] Gow. 9.

(f) Rogers v. Boehm & others, 2 Esp. C. 702; cor. Ld. Kenyon. And see as to assignees, Travers v. Townsend, 1 Cro. C. C. 384; Executors of Franklin v. Frith, 3 Bro. C. C. 433; Partners, Pothier Traitè du Contrat. c. 7, n. 116; 2 Atk. 106. See also Willis v. Commissioners of Appeals, &c. 5 East, 22.

(g) Calton v. Bragg, 15 East, 223. Gordon v. Swan. 2 Camp. 429; 12 East, 419.

(h) Ibid. And 5 East, 22. De Haviland v. Bowerbank, 1 Camp. 50. But see Trelawney v. Thomas, 1 H. B 303, where it was allowed on money advanced for the use of another.

(i) Ibid. And De Bernales v. Fuller & others, 2 Camp. 427; 14 East, 490, n., where the money had been paid into the defendant's hands for the plaintiff's use, and applied by the former to another purpose; and see Crockford v. Winter, 1 Camp. 129, where the rule was held to extend to money obtained by fraud.

(k) 6 Esp. C. 45. Nichol v. Thompson, 1 Camp. 52. But see Bluney v. Hendrick, 2 Bl. 761; 3 Wils. 205; where the rule for allowing interest was extended to all liquidated sums, although the balance there arose on account stated for goods sold and delivered. And in Pinhorn v. Tuckington, 3 Camp. 468, Lord Ellenborough held, that where money due on balance of account was awarded to be paid on a particular time and place, interest ran after a demand duly made. See also Marquis of Anglesea v. Chafey, per Abbott, J., Dorchester Spring Ass. 1818. Manning's Index, 185. And see 1 East, 400; 1 M. & S. 173; Vin. Ab. tit. Arbitration, C. 2.

(l) Kingston v. Mackintosh, 1 Camp. 518. And per Le Blanc J. in De Bernales v. Fuller, 2 Camp. 427. And per Ld. Ellenborough in De Haviland v. Bowerbank, 1 Camp. 50, and supra.

(m) Shipley v. Hammond, 5 Esp. C. 114; but it was said that it would have been otherwise had a day been appointed for payment.

(n) De Bernales v. Wood, 3 Camp. 258; where in an action to recover a deposit on an agreement for the sale of an estate, it was alleged by way of special damage that the plaintiff had lost or been deprived of the sum deposited; and Ld. Ellenborough held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover interest as special damage. In Marshall v. Poole, 13 East, 98, the Court said that the interest subsequent to the day appointed for payment, might be considered as part of the stipulated price of the goods. In the case of Arnott v. Redfern,[2] 3 Bing. 353, which was an action on a Scotch judgment, on a claim for work and labour on a contract made in England, and where the Scotch Court had allowed interest; the Court sustained the verdict on the judgment, on the ground that even in England, where a debt is wrongfully withheld after the plaintiff has endeavoured to obtain judgment, the jury may give interest in the shape of damages. And the case of Lee v. Munn,[3] 8 Taunt. 45, was cited, where it was held, that an auctioneer who had had a deposit in his hands for four years could not be compelled to pay interest, because the plaintiff had made no demand on him for repayment of the deposit. And also the case of Eddowes v. Hopkins, Doug. 376, where Ld. Mansfield held, that in cases of long delay, and under vexatious and oppressive circumstances, juries in their discretion might allow interest. Also the cases of Blackmore v. Fleming, 7 T. R. 446; Craven v. Ticknell, 1 Ves. j. 60, and Hilhouse v. Davis, 1 M. & S. 169. But in Page v. Newman,[4] 9 B. & C. 381, the Court of King's Bench expressed an opinion that it would be more convenient to adhere to a general rule, than to leave it open to inquiry, in each particular case, whether the delay had been attended with vexatious and oppressive circumstances. Ld. Tenterden observed, that if the rule were to be adopted it might frequently be made a question at Nisi Prius, whether proper means had been used to obtain payment of the debt, and such as the party ought to have used, which would be productive of much inconvenience.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. v. 438. [2]Id. xiii. 3. [3]Id. iv. 14. [4]Id. xvii. 399.

claim to interest, it would be contrary to the same general principle of policy to allow interest to be recovered indirectly under another description (1).

A trader pledges goods on a promise to pay interest; the creditor is entitled to interest up to the date of the commission (o).

Where a defendant sued upon a security, carrying interest, pays money into Court sufficient to cover the principal, with interest down to the commencement of the action, but not to the time of paying in the money, the plaintiff may proceed, and a jury on trial is bound to give him damages for the interest accruing between the commencement of the action and the payment into Court (p).

INTERPLEADER ACT.

By the 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 58, s. 7, all rules, orders, matters, and decisions to be made and done in pursuance of the Act, except affidavits, may, together with the declaration in the cause, be entered of record.

JURISDICTION.

As to the jurisdiction of an inferior court, where the amount is reduced by a set-off; see Sir. 1191; 2 Wils. 68; 3 Wils. 48. By payment: 1 Taunt. 60; 7 Moore, 68; 1 B. & P. 223; 8 East, 28. A statute which enacts that if any difference shall arise, it shall be decided by commissioners, &c., does not, without express words, oust the jurisdiction of the superior courts. Lord Shaftesbury v. Russel, 1 B. & C. 666. See tit. AWARD.

*580 *JURY ACT.

6 GEO. 4, c. 50; motions to regulate the trial must be made at Nisi Prius. 7 Taunt. 390.

JUSTICES.

IN actions against justices of the peace and peace officers (q), may be considered,—

I. The proofs in an action against a justice of the peace, &c.
   1. Of notice of action, p. 580.
   2. Of the commencement of the action, p. 583.
   3. Of the cause of action, within the county, &c. p. 584.
   4. Where a conviction has been quashed, ibid.

II. Proofs in defence by justices, p. 585.

III. By constables, &c., acting under a warrant, p. 594.

IV. By constables, &c., acting without warrant, p. 600.

Proof of notice of action.

1. Notice of action.—By the stat. 24 Geo. 2, c. 44, s. 1, no writ shall be sued out against, nor any copy of any process at the suit of a subject shall

(o) Crosley's Case, 7 Vin. Ab. 110. But a mortgagee shall have his interest run upon a bankrupt's estate, because he hath a right in rem; but as to other interest, it ceaseth on the bankruptcy. Per King, Chanc., 7 Vin. Ab. 110.

(p) Kidd v. Walker,[1] 2 B. & A. 705. On an award directing payment of money interest may be recovered by action, but not by motion for attachment. Churcher, Gent. one, &c. v. Stringer, Gent. one, &c.[2] 2 B. & Ad. 777.

(q) For actions against officers of excise, &c. see the title.

(1) [On the subject of Interest, which seems hardly to relate to the doctrine of Evidence, see cases, English and American, collected and arranged in Mr. Day's notes to Atkins & al. v. Wheeler & al., 2 N. R. 205; Shipley v. Hammond, 5 Esp. C. 114; Gordon v. Swan, 12 East, 419; Mr. Howe's note to De Bernales v. Wood, 3 Camp. 258; Mr. Henning's appendix to his late valuable edition of Francis's Maxims of Equity—in which he makes very respectful reference on this subject, to Tate's Digest of the Laws of Virginia; titles, Interest—Executors and Administrators.] be served on, any justice of the peace for anything by him done in the execution of his office (r), until notice in writing of such intended writ or process (s) shall have been delivered (t) to him, or left at the usual place of his abode by the attorney (u) or agent for the party who intends to sue, or cause the same to be sued out or served, at least one calendar month (x) before the suing out or serving the same; in which notice shall be clearly and explicitly contained the cause of action (y) which such party hath or claimeth to have against such justice of the peace; on the back of which notice shall be indorsed the name of such attorney (z), or agent, together with the place of his abode.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxii. 174. [2]Id. xxii. 183.

Proof of notice, when necessary.

Done in the execution of his office.—The object of the Legislature was to enable the magistrate to tender amends for the wrong done; the statute therefore supposes a wrong to have been done in consequence of some excess, or want of authority; for where the justice has not exceeded his authority the enactment is useless. Hence, if the subject-matter be within the jurisdiction of the magistrate, and he intend bonâ fide (a) to act as a magistrate at the time, he is within the protection of this statute, although he acts erroneously (b). The statute applies, unless the act be wholly aliene to the jurisdiction, and done diverso intuitu (c).

*And where the subject-matter is within the jurisdiction of the magistrate, it will be presumed that he acted as a justice (d); and therefore, where *581

(r) Infra, 580. (s) Infra, 581. (t) Infra, ib.
(u) Infra, ib. (x) Infra, 583. (y) Infra, 581.
(z) Infra, 582.

(a) It seems that the question of bona fides is in all such cases one of fact for the jury. Wedge v. Berkeley,[1] 6 A. & E. 663.

(b) See Weller v. Toke, 9 East, 364; where one magistrate made an order in a case where the authority of two was necessary. So in Prestidge v. Woodman,[2] 1 B. & C. 12, where a magistrate acted on a subject-matter of complaint, the facts of which arose locally beyond the limits of his jurisdiction. And the distinction was taken between a magistrate and constable in that respect, for a constable is not protected unless he act in obedience to the warrant; Money v. Leach, 3 Burr. 1742; but a magistrate in all cases where he acts in execution of his office. And see Gaby v. The Wilts and Berks Canal Company, 3 M. & S. 580. And see Ld. Kenyon's observations, Greenway v. Hard, 4 T. R. 553; and Ld. Tenterden's, in Beechey v. Sides,[3] 9 B. & C. 809.

(c) Per Ld. Ellenborough, 9 East, 365, & P. C. Briggs v. Evelyn, 2 H. B. 115. And therefore, if a single magistrate commit the mother of a bastard for not filiating a child, although jurisdiction by the stat. 18 Eliz. c. 3, s. 2, is given to two magistrates, acting jointly, and not to a single one, he is within the protection of the statute. Weller v. Toke, 9 East, 364. [S. P. Jones v. Hughes, 5 Serg. & R. 302.] So where by a local Act of Parliament notice was required of any action for anything done in pursuance of the Act, it was held that a magistate was entitled to notice who had acted under colour of the Act, although he had exceeded his jurisdiction. Graves v. Arnold, 3 Camp. 242. [S. P. Butler v. Potter, 17 Johns. 145. Jones v. Hughes, 5 Serg. & R. 301.] And see Styles v. Cox, Vaugh. 111. So where a magistrate committed a man for being on the shafts of a cart standing still, the act authorizing a commitment in the case of riding on them only. Bird v. Gunston, cited in Cook v. Leonard,[4] 6 B. & C. 354. Where an Act requires notice before action brought, in respect of anything done in pursuance of or in execution of its provisions, those latter words are not confined to acts strictly in pursuance of the Act of Parliament, but extend to all acts done bona fide, which may reasonably be presumed to be done in pursuance of the Act; but not where there is no colour for supposing that the act done is authorized: where, therefore, the defendants, being officers acting under a local paving Act, had ordered the plaintiffs to remove a dromedary and monkeys, which were exhibited in the streets, out of the town, and they were removed into a stable, and had thereby ceased to be any nuisance, but the defendants afterwards had attempted forcibly to remove them thence; held, that there being no reasonable ground for supposing that the act authorized them in so doing, they were not entitled to notice of action. Cook v. Leonard,[4] 6 B. & C. 351. And see Lawton v. Miller, cited Ib. Morgan v. Palmer,[5] 2 B. & C. 729. And Irving v. Wilson, 4 T. R. 415. Charlesworth v. Rudgard, 1 C. M. & R. 505. So in an action for acting as a magistrate without qualification. Wright v. Horton,[6] Holt's C. 458. So where a disturbance having taken place on the discharge of a prisoner, the defendant, a magistrate, at a place out of sight of the disturbance, seized the plaintiff, who was wholly unconnected with the transaction. James v. Saunders,[7] 10 Bing. 429.

(d) 2 H. B. 114.

Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxxiii. 167. [2] Id. viii. 9. [3] Id. xvii. 502. [4] Id. xiii. 195. [5] Id. ix. 232. [6] Id. iii. 156. [7] Id. xxv. 184.

one who was lord of a manor, and also a justice of the peace, seized a gun in the house of an unqualified person, it was presumed that he acted as a justice, and notice was held to be necessary (e).

Where an action was brought to recover a penalty for acting as a magistrate without a qualification (f), it was held that the defendant was not entitled to notice, the question being whether he was a magistrate at all (g).

Proof of service. The plaintiff must prove that the notice was delivered to the defendant, or was left at his usual place of abode by the plaintiff's agent or attorney. The notice is usually proved by evidence of the service of a duplicate original (h); if a single original has been served, notice should be given to produce it.

Form of the notice. Of such intended writ or process.—As the notice was prescribed by the Act in order to introduce a strictness of proceeding in favour of magistrates (i), it must be precise according to the terms of the Act. The writ or process must be specified (k), as well as the cause of action.

Notice of an action on the case will not support an action of trespass (l);
*582 *but notice of a bill of Middlesex has been held to be sufficient, without specifying whether case or trespass (m) (A).

(e) Briggs v. Evelyn, 2 H. B. 114. The stat. 5 Ann. c. 14, empowers a justice to seize an engine for the destruction of game in the hands of an unqualified person.

(f) Under the stat. 18 G. 2, c. 20.

(g) Per Wood, B., Wright v. Horton, 1 Holt's C. 458.

(h) Vide supra, 110, and tit. NOTICE.

(i) Per Ld. Kenyon, 7 T. R. 835. Taylor v. Fenwick, 7 T. R. 635.

(k) Lovelace v. Curry, 7 T. R. 631. It is not necessary to name all the parties intended to be included in the action, or to state whether it will be joint or several. Box v. Jones, 5 Price, 178.

(l) Strickland v. Ward, 7 T. R. 631, in note. But in that case, it is to be observed, the notice did not state the process at all, and therefore was clearly defective on that ground, and qu. whether the description of the form of action might not be rejected as surplusage, the notice containing a true description of the process and cause of action. See the observations of Ld. Loughborough, C. J., and Gould, J. in Wood v. Folliott, cited 3 B. & P. 552, in the note, who seem to have been of that opinion. In Sabine v. De Burgh, 2 Camp. 198, Ld. Ellenborough, in allusion to the case of Lovelace v. Curry, said, "I do not disapprove of anything laid down in that case, but I am not disposed to carry it farther, lest actions of this kind should be entirely defeated."

(m) Sabine v. De Burgh, 2 Camp. 196. And notice stating arrest and imprisonment, and that plaintiff was compelled to pay a sum of money to obtain his discharge, and that a precept called a latitat would be issued against him for the said imprisonment, is sufficient. Robson v. Spearman,[1] 3 B. & A. 493.

(A) (The notice to a Justice in Pennsylvania, of an intended suit for the penalty for taking greater fees than the law allows, need not specify the amount of fees which the justice might legally have taken. Coats v. Wallace, 17 Serg. & Rawle, 75; and notice under the act of 1772, is necessary, before commencing an action of assumpsit against a justice of the peace, by the administrators of a constable, to recover back money alleged to have been received by him as a justice of the peace, through mistake and fraud. Wise v. Wills, 2 Rawle, 208, (Gibson, C. J. and Tod, J., dissenting.) A justice who becomes liable to the penalty imposed by statute for marrying a minor, without consent of parent or guardian, is entitled to notice. Ibid. So in an action before a justice, to recover the penalty imposed by statute for taking illegal fees, notice is necessary. Prior v. Craig, 5 Serg. & Rawle, 44.] Where the notice to the magistrate stated that the action would be brought in the Court of Common Pleas, of Allegheny County, whereas the action was in fact in the District Court of that county, it was held nevertheless to be good; both those Courts having jurisdiction of the subject-matter. Lowrie v. Verner, 3 Watts, 317. It seems that if the Court of Common Pleas had not jurisdiction of the case, it might be different. Lowrie v. Verner, 3 Watts, 317. In an action against a justice to recover the amount of fees taken by him beyond the legal charge, previous notice according to the act of 1772 must be shown, and therefore in such action, judgment may be given for the twenty shillings allowed by that act for preparing the notice. Collins v. Hunter, 1 Ashmead, 60. Where a notice to a justice of an intended suit against him, for granting a domestic attachment against the plaintiff contrary to the act of assembly, stated generally the cause of action to be, that the defendant had granted such attachment illegally and contrary to the acts of assembly, and then set forth the first section of the act of 1752, and the alteration in the amount of the penalty made by the act of 1807, and concluded my cause of action, therefore is, that the aforesaid attachment was issued by you contrary to the spirit and meaning of the said acts of assembly; without stating in what particulars the attachment had been illegally issued, it was held that the notice was defective and insufficient. Buley v. The Commonwealth, 5 Rawle, 59; [It is

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. v. 355.

Where a notice of the intended process and cause of action was duly served, and the plaintiff having issued a writ of quo minus against the justice only, which in a few days he abandoned, and issued a writ against the justice and the constable; held, that the notice was sufficient to warant the latter writ, and proceedings thereupon (n).

No evidence can be received of any cause of action which is not specified in the notice (o).

Indorsed with the name of such attorney (p) or agent, together with the place of his abode (q).—An indorsement of the initial letter of the christian name, together with the surname, is sufficient (r).

It is sufficient if the attorney describe himself of the town where he resides, as of Birmingham (s), provided the description purport to indicate the residence of the attorney; it is otherwise where the notice does not describe the residence; thus, the indorsement "given under my hand at Durham," without any other notification of residence or abode, was held to be insufficient (t), being a mere description, not of residence, but of the place of signature.

A notice, describing the plaintiff's attorney as of New-Inn, London, instead of New-Inn, Westminster, was held to be insufficient (u) (1).

(n) Jones v. Simpson, 1 Cr. & J. 174, and 1 Tyrw. 35. And see Agar v. Morgan, 2 Pri. 126; and Bax v. Jones, 5 Pri. 168.

(o) 24 Geo. 2, c. 44, s. 5. A notice to the magistrate mentions imprisonment only as the cause of action, the declaration being for a battery and imprisonment, the variance is not material, except that it precludes the plaintiff from giving evidence of a battery. Robson v. Spearman,[1] 3 B. & A. 493. Where the notice was of action for seizure of goods under a warrant directed to J. Birche, and it appeared that the goods were seized under a warrant directed to the constable of Halifax, and not to J. Birche; it was held, that the notice was insufficient. Aked v. Stocks and others,[2] 4 Bing. 509. It is sufficient to inform the defendant substantially of the cause of complaint. Jones v. Bird,[3] 5 B. & A. 844.

(p) In the case of Sabine v. De Burgh, 2 Camp. 196, the attorney who had indorsed and served the notice was asked, on cross-examination, whether he had at the time taken out his certificate, and he answered, that he had ordered his clerk to take it out, and had given him money for that purpose; and Lord Ellenborough held that this was sufficient evidence of his being qualified to act as an attorney. It does not appear whether, in that case, the witness had indorsed the notice as an attorney, specifically, or merely as agent; and qu. whether, as the words of the stat. are attorney or agent, it is essential that he should actually be an attorney.

(q) It is enough to indorse the attorney's place of business, though he do not reside there. Roberts v. Williams, 2 C. M. & R. 561. And it need not be the attorney on the record. Ib.

(r) Mayhew v. Locke,[4] 7 Taunt. 63. So, semble, is the surname without the christian name. James v. Swift,[5] 4 B. & C. 681; per Holroyd, J.

(s) Osborn v. Gough, 3 B. & P. 551. Wood v. Folliott, ibid. 552. In the latter case, which was under the stat. 23 G. 3, c. 70, s. 30, which requires that the notice shall contain the name and place of abode of the person who is to bring such action, and the action being brought by three owners of a ship, who were described as William Wood, of Rotherhithe, in the county of Surrey, merchant; Alexander Wood, late of the same place, mariner; and Osborn Deverson, late of the same place, mariner; it was held that the description was sufficient. But it seems that in the case of London, or a very large town, such as Manchester, the town generally would not be sufficient. Per Thompson, B. in Crooke v. Currie, Tidd, 28 (n).

(t) Taylor v. Fenwick, 7 T. R. 635; 6 Esp. C. 138.

(u) Stears v. Smith, 6 Esp. C. 138. But see Mills v. Collett,[6] 6 Bing. 90.

---

held that the statute in Pennsylvania, should be liberally construed, for the protection of justices. Mitchell v. Cowgill, 4 Binney, 24.] It is not necessary to specify the kind of writ or process intended to be sued out, or the kind of action intended to be brought: It is sufficient, if notice is given that an action will be brought, and if the cause of action is clearly described. Litle v. Toland, 6 Binney, 84. Mitchell v. Cowgill, supra. Contra, Kennedy v. Shoemaker, 1 Browne's Rep. 61].)

(1) [In Pennsylvania, the plaintiff may sue out the writ himself, in which case it is not necessary that the place of abode of an agent or attorney should be indorsed; but the plaintiff's place of abode must be specified. Lake v. Shaw, 5 Serg. & Rawle, 518.

It is a sufficient designation of the abode of the plaintiff's attorney, in a notice to a justice of Washington County, to describe him as A. B. of Washington—that being intended, in common parlance, the town of Washington. Litle v. Toland, 6 Binney, 83. A notice subscribed thus—"A. B. attorney for C. D. No. 79, So. 5th St." is not sufficient notice of the attorney's place of abode. Kennedy v. Shoemaker, 1 Browne's

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. v. 355. [2]Id. xv. 60. [3]Id. vii. 277. [4]Id. ii. 27. [5]Id. x. 441. [6]Id. xix. 11.

Time of the notice.

At least one calendar month before the suing out or serving the same.—For this purpose, and also to show that the action was commenced within six calendar months, the plaintiff must prove the commencement of the action (x); the day on which notice is served is to be included (y).

Commencement of the action.

2. The commencement of the action within six months.—By sec. 8 of the same stat. no action shall be brought against any justice of the peace for anything done in the execution of his office, or against any constable, headborough, or other officer or person acting as aforesaid (z), unless commenced within six calendar months after the act committed. This must be proved as usual by the production of the writ, or an examined copy of the return (a).

The suing out the common process of a bill of Middlesex, latitat, or capias quare clausum fregit, was considered to be the commencement of the action (b). But the true time of suing out the writ may be proved in opposition to the teste, as where it is sued out in vacation, and bears date as of the preceding term (c). The memorandum upon the record, where the proceeding was by bill, also showed the commencement of the action within time (d).

The plaintiff must not only show that he sued out a writ within the time, but also that he proceeded upon that writ.

In Weston v. Fournier, the notice of action was served on the 10th of March 1809, a writ of latitat was sued on the 20th of May following, an alias writ was sued out February 6th, 1810, and the memorandum of the record was of Hilary 1810. It was objected that the first writ had not been served, and that as it had not been returned, the alias writ, which was after the memorandum on the record, could not be connected with it in continuance; and the Court held that the plaintiff had been properly

(x) Infra, tit. TIME.

(y) Castle v. Burditt, 3 T. R. 623. See tit. HUNDRED and TIME.

(z) Infra, 600. This clause of the Act (observes Abbott, C. J., in Parton v. Williams,[1] 3 B. & A. 333,) was intended for the benefit of those who, intending to act right, by mistake act wrong. As where a constable, directed by a warrant to take the goods of A., by mistake takes those of B. Ib. So in case of a variance as to the description of goods taken. Smith v. Wiltshire,[2] 2 B. & B. 619. The true test in all such cases seems to be, that acted on in Parton v. Williams, viz., whether the party was actuated by an honest belief that he was discharging his duty. In the case of Alcock v. Andrews, 2 Esp. C. 542 (n), Ld. Kenyon lays down the distinction to be between cases where the constable acts virtute officii, and those where he acts colore officii; and that where the act is of such a nature that the office gives him no authority to do it, he is not to be regarded as an officer. See below, 600. A patrol employed to take up disorderly persons, who is not a constable, is not a peace officer. Cliffe v. Littlemore, 5 Esp. C. 39.

(a) Supra, tit. HUNDRED; infra, tit. TIME. By the stat. 2 W. 4, c. 39, s. 12, every writ bears date on the day when it was issued.

(b) Willes, 257; 2 Bl. 925; Burr. 964.

(c) Johnson v. Smith, Burr. 260; B. N. P. 195. And see tit. TIME.

(d) See tit. TIME, and supra, tit. HUNDRED. Although the commencement of an action cannot be legally proved except by the production of the writ, &c. (per Le Blanc, J. in Matthew v. Haigh, 4 Esp. C. 100); yet as against a plaintiff, proof of the delivery of a declaration by him, at a particular time, will be evidence that the action subsisted at that time. (Matthew v. Haigh, 4 Esp. C. 100, per Le Blanc, J.; and Harris v. Orme, 2 Camp. 497, in the note.) But semble, this would not be sufficient evidence in an action against a magistrate; for the delivery of a declaration is the plaintiff's own act; and although it might operate as an admission against himself, would scarcely be binding on a defendant; but see further tit. TIME.

Rep. 61. A notice was signed by the plaintiff's attorney, and dated at W.—but there was no indorsement of his name, nor was it said in any part of the notice, or on the back of it, that he resided at W.—and it was held not to be sufficient. Slocum v. Perkins, 3 Serg. & Rawle, 295. A notice directed to the defendant, and signed by the plaintiff, and indorsed thus—"Notice to J. S. Esq. Henry Read, living in Poplar lane, between 3d and 4th Streets"—was held to be defective, in not stating that Read was the plaintiff's agent, and in not containing anything from which it might be inferred that he was his agent with authority to receive a tender of amends. Luke v. Shaw, ubi sup.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. v. 307. [2] Id. vi. 285.

nonsuited upon this objection (e); for there was no service of the first writ, and it was not returned (f).

*Where several writs are sued out, it is necessary to show that the first has been returned (g); but where one only has been sued out, it is sufficient to prove it, without proving the return, provided the plaintiff has declared within a year afterwards (h). *584 Cause of action.

3. Where the cause of action is a continuing one, by imprisonment, it is sufficient to show that the action was commenced within six months of the end of such imprisonment (i) (A). But if the plaintiff gives notice pending the imprisonment, he is bound to proceed within six months of the notice; for as to any subsequent cause of action, there is no notice (k).

Trespass or trover for seizing goods must be brought within the time limited from the original seizure (l).

The cause of action must be proved to have arisen within the county (m). The trespass or other cause of action is to be established by proving the authority of the magistrate given to the bailiff or constable, either by evidence of an oral or written direction; by the production and proof of the warrant, if it be in the plaintiff's power, or if not, by serving the person in possession of it with a subpœnâ duces tecum, to produce it, or giving notice to the defendant to produce it, and by giving parol evidence of it after proof that it is in his possession, and his omission to produce it.

In actions against a constable who has acted in obedience to the warrant of a magistrate, if his neglect or refusal to produce the warrant, and grant a copy of it, be relied upon, the plaintiff must prove a demand of the warrant (n).

4. By the Stat. 43 Geo. 3, c. 141, in all actions brought against any justice of the peace on account of any conviction made by virtue of any Act of Parliament, or by reason of anything done or commanded to be done by such justice for the levying of any penalty, apprehending any party, or for or about the carrying such conviction into effect, in case such conviction shall have been quashed, the plaintiff in such action, besides the value and amount of the penalty which may have been levied upon the plaintiff, in case any levy thereof shall have been made, shall not be entitled to recover any greater damages than the sum of two-pence, nor any costs of suit, unless it shall be expressly alleged in the declaration in the action (which shall be in an action upon the case only), that such acts were done maliciously, and without any reasonable or probable cause. In case of conviction quashed.

(e) 14 East, 491. Note, the imprisonment continued till July; but it was held that the plaintiff was bound to proceed within six months after notice. See Harris v. Woolford, 6 T. R. 617; and Stanway v. Perry, 2 B. & P. 157; and tit. Time, and Limitations.

(f) Bayley, J. observed, that the suing out of the second writ was at least prima facie evidence to show that the first had not been served. 14 East, 493.

(g) Parsons v. King, 7 T. R. 6. Harris v. Woolford, 6 T. R. 617; Stanway v. Perry, 2 B. & P. 157; Smith v. Bower, 3 T R. 662. See tit. Limitations.—Time.

(h) Parsons v. King, 7 T. R. 6.

(i) Massey v. Johnson, 12 East, 67. Pickersgill v. Palmer, B. N. P. 24; for the whole is one entire trespass.

(k) Weston v. Fournier, 14 East, 491.

(l) Goddin v. Ferris, 2 H. B. 14. Saunders v. Saunders, 2 East, 254. P. C. Smith v. Wiltshire,[1] 2 B. & B. 619. So in the case of a custom-house officer, even although a suit for condemnation be pending in the Exchequer. Godin v. Ferris, 2 H. B. 14.

(m) 21 Jac. 1, c. 12, s. 5. (n) Vid. infra, 595.

(A) (See Wallace v. Commonwealth, 2 Virg. Cas. 130. Jacobs v. Com'th, 2 Leigh. 709. Muse v. Vidal, 6 Munf. 27. Rogers v. Mulliner, 6 Wend. 597. Adkins v. Brener, 3 Cow. 206. Hanlison v. Jordan, Conf. Res. 454. Flack v. Harrington, 1 Breese, 165.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 285.

This statute applies to those cases only where a conviction has been quashed (o). To entitle himself to greater damages than two-pence, the plaintiff must prove that the act of the magistrate was malicious, and without *reasonable or probable cause; and the question is not whether there was reasonable or probable cause in fact, but whether it appeared to the magistrate that there was such cause, for it does not follow that he acted maliciously, though there was no reasonable or probable cause in fact. For this purpose, what passed before the magistrate relating to the conviction is proper and necessary evidence (p).

*585

Proofs by justices in defence.

II. By the stat. 21 Jac. 1, c. 12, s. 5, if any action shall be brought against any justice of the peace, mayor or bailiff of a city or town corporate, head-borough, portreeve, constable, tithing-man, churchwarden, or overseer of the poor, and their deputies, or any other who by their aid, or by their commandment (q), shall do anything concerning their office (r), concerning anything by them done by virtue of their office, such action must be laid within the county where the trespass was committed. The defendant may plead the general issue, and give the special matter in evidence (s).

Venue. General issue.

It seems to be a settled rule, that a conviction still subsisting, and valid upon the face of it (t), on a subject within the jurisdiction of the defendant

(o) Massey v. Johnson, 12 East, 57. Where, in an action of trespass, it appeared to be doubtful whether there had been a conviction or not, the Court would not, on motion to set aside the nonsuit of the plaintiff (on the ground that the action ought to have been laid in case), listen to an affidavit that there had, in fact, been a conviction, but granted a new trial. See also Gray v. Cookson, 16 East, 15. Rogers v. Jones,[1] R. & M. C. 129. After the conviction has been quashed, the action must be in case, and not in trespass; but the general rule (which still governs cases which are not within the statute) is, that an action for a commitment under a warrant must be in trespass, and not in case. Morgan v. Hughes, 2 T. R. 225.

(p) Burley v. Bethune,[2] 5 Taunt. 583.

(q) A constable who aids a parish officer in levying a distress for poors-rates is not liable in trespass, although a demand of a warrant was duly made upon him, (but not on the overseer,) in pursuance of the statute. Clarke v. Davey,[3] 4 Moore, 465. Parish officers sued for goods sold and delivered to the poor, are not within the stat. Blanchard v. Bramble, 3 M. & C. 131.

(r) Acts done by unqualified justices, are not actually void. Margate Pier Comp. v. Harrison,[4] 3 B. & A. 266. And the justices are not trespassers. Ib.

(s) If the defendant obtain a verdict, or the plaintiff become nonsuited, or suffer any discontinuance, the defendant, by the same statute, is entitled to double costs, on a certificate from the Judge that he was such officer at the time of the trespass, and acting in the execution of his office. The certificate may be granted after the trial. Harper v. Carr, 7 T. R. 449. By the st. 43 G. 3, c. 85, s. 6, the Act is extended to all persons holding or exercising any public employment, or any office, station or capacity, civil or military, in or out of the kingdom, and who by virtue of any act or law within the kingdom, or any act, law, ordinance or lawful authority in any foreign possession of his Majesty, have or may hereafter have by virtue of such employment, office, station or capacity, authority to commit persons to safe custody. The local venue, as in case of other offences committed abroad, is dispensed with. Commissioners of Requests, with power to commit for contempt, are not within the statute. Mackey v. Gooden, 1 Dowl. P. C. 463.

(t) In Mann v. Davers,[5] 3 B. & A. 103, where the information, on a conviction charging the plaintiff with having unlawfully returned without a certificate from the parish to which he had been removed, followed the words of the stat. 17 G. 2, c. 5; it was held that the conviction was good, and supplied a defence to an action against the magistrate. Secus, where the conviction is apparently erroneous, though it has not been quashed. Thus it was held, that a magistrate could not defend himself on a conviction which alleged that the plaintiff drove to hire, instead of for hire, Cloud v. Turfery,[6] 2 Bing. 318. So if the conviction vary from the form prescribed by a statute; Goss v. Jackson, 3 Esp. C. 198; per Lord Kenyon. His Lordship referred to the case of Davidson v. Gill, 1 East's R. 64, where the Court held that an order for stopping up an old footway must pursue the form given by the statute, which directed that the form shall be used, &c. See also R. v. Taylor,[7] 7 D. & R. 623, where a conviction against an apprentice was held to be bad, both because the form given by the stat. 3 G. 4, c. 23, was not pursued, and because the conviction did not show that the party was an apprentice within the stat. 4 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 2. In general, where there is a defect in jurisdiction, no appeal is necessary. R. v. Chilvers Coton, 8 T. R. 178. Attorney-general v. Lord Hotham, 1 Turn. 219. A conviction not stating the offence to have been proved on oath, is bad. Ex parte v. Aldridge,[8] 2 B. & C. 600. So, if the adjudication exceed the cause of complaint. R. v. Soper,[9] 3 B. & C. 857. An order by justices for payment of double value of goods fraudulently removed to prevent a distress, must show on the face of it that the party removing the goods was tenant. R. v. Davies,[10] 5 B. & Ad. 551. See also R. v. Walsh,[11] 1 Ad. & Ell. 481; Fawcett v. Fowlis, 7 R. & C. 394.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxi. 397. [2] Id. i. 196. [3] Id. xvi. 380. [4] Id. v. 278. [5] Id. v. 238. [6] Id. ix. 419. [7] Id. xvi. 306. [8] Id. ix. 194. [9] Id. x. 253. [10] Id. xxvii. 125. [11] Id. xxviii. 125.

*as a magistrate, is a legal bar to an action for anything done under such a conviction (u). The principles on which this position rests have already been considered (v).

It is otherwise where the subject-matter is not within the jurisdiction of the magistrate (x) (A), or where it appears from the conviction itself that he has been guilty of an excess of jurisdiction (y) (1). As where the defendant *gave in evidence four separate convictions of the plaintiff for selling bread on the same Sunday (z). For the Court were of opinion that no

Defence by a justice under a conviction. *587

(u) Vide supra, Vol. I. tit. JUDGMENT. Strickland v. Ward, ibid. Gray v. Cookson, ibid.; and 16 East, 21.

(v) Supra, Vol. I. tit. JUDGMENT; 7 T. R. 361. Massey v. Johnson, 12 East, 81; 16 East, 21. What Judges of the particular matter have adjudged is not traversable, per Holt, C. J. Groenvelt v. Burwell, Salk. 396. And if a justice of the peace record that upon his view as a fact which is no fact, he cannot be drawn in question either by action or indictment. 12 Co. 23; 27 Ass. 19; Salk. 397. But if a constable commit a man for a breach of the peace in his presence, the fact is traversable, for he has no judicial authority; he does not commit for punishment, but for safe custody. So leather-searchers, under an Act of Parliament, authorizing them to seize leather insufficiently dried, are liable in trespass for seizing leather which turns out to be sufficiently dried. Warne v. Varley & others, 6 T. R. 443. The Court of K. B. has no power to review the reasons of justices of the peace, on which they form their judgments in granting licenses, &c.: but if it clearly appear that the justices have been partially, maliciously or corruptly influenced, and have abused the trust reposed in them, they are liable to a prosecution by information, or indictment, or even possibly by action, if the malice be very gross and injurious; per Lord Mansfield. Justices are not liable for what they do at sessions. Staunf. 173. Unless in case of manifest oppression and abuse of power. 2 Barnard, 249; Burn's J. tit. Sessions. See tit. TRESPASS.

(x) Terry v. Huntingdon, Hardr. 480. See the cases cited in the next note.

(y) Where justices decide on a matter not within their jurisdiction they are liable in an action. Per Hale, C. B. Terry v. Huntington, Hardr. 480. And special jurisdictions may be circumscribed, 1st, as to place; 2dly, persons; 3dly, subject-matter. Ibid. And if they give judgment on matters arising in another place, or in any matter beyond their jurisdiction, all is void, as coram non judice. Ibid. See Cowp. 640. 8 East, 404. Baldwin v. Blackmore, 1 Burr. 595; 2 Bl. R. 1146. So if justices of a county act in a franchise of exclusive jurisdiction. Talbot v. Hubble, Str. 1154; 2 Tau. 557. In order to justify magistrates in granting authority to collect a composition in lieu of stat. duty, it should be made to appear on oath before both magistrates that the road can be more effectually repaired, by such composition. Stanley v. Fielden,[1] 5 B. & A. 425. A magistrate is a trespasser who grants a warrant of distress upon documents laid before him, which are the acts of other magistrates, if the want of jurisdiction be manifest; Per Bayley, J. Ib. So if a magistrate levy under an order for payment of wages to one employed to keep possession of goods seized under a fi. fa.; for such a person is not a labourer within the stat. 22 G. 3, c. 19. Branwell v. Pennecke,[2] 7 B & C. 536; and per Holroyd, J. it should appear on the warrant that he is a labourer. So a conviction will be bad unless it appear on the face of the conviction that the fact was done within the local jurisdiction of the magistrate. R. v. Hazell, 13 East, 139; R. v. Chandler, 14 East, 274. So in the case of an order by justices; R. v. Hulcott, 6 T. R. 587; where an order for the discharge of a servant was held to be void for not stating that he was a servant in husbandry. A. contracted with B. to build a wall for a certain price within a certain time, but having performed part refused to go on; complaint being made before a magistrate under 4 Geo. 4, c. 34, the information stating the contract, the magistrate convicted B., and committed him. On trespass brought against the magistrate, the Court held that the conviction and commitment did not supply a defence, for the information showed that he had not jurisdiction. And per Bayley, J. if an information laid before a justice alleges that which is within his jurisdiction, he may act upon it, unless the party against whom the information is laid proves the real facts of the case, which take it out of the jurisdiction. Lancaster v. Greaves,[3] 9 B. & C. 626. Where a member applied against a friendly society under 49 Geo. 3, c. 125, for improperly refusing relief, it was held that upon the construction of the third section the justices before whom the proceedings are had must be both residing within the county, &c. within which the society is held, and that one only being so resident they had not jurisdiction. Sharp v. Aspinall,[4] 10 B. & C. 47. Note, that the defect of jurisdiction appeared on the face of the defendants' (the magistrates) pleas to an action of trespass. A conviction reciting an agreement to weave at certain prices, and alleging a neglect of the work, held not to be a contracting to serve within the 4 Geo. 4, c. 34; the conviction therefore was bad, as without jurisdiction. Hardy v. Ryle,[5] 9 B. & C. 603. A conviction of two persons jointly of an assault under the 9 G. 4, c 31, imposing a single joint fine on both, instead of a separate one on each, is bad. Morgan v. Brown,[6] 4 Ad. & Ell. 515. A conviction for having kept open a beer shop at times prohibited by the justices in session, which does not aver that the justices made such order, nor at what time the shop was kept open, is bad. Newman v. Hardwicke, 3 N. & P. 368. It seems that a conviction which is bad in form, though confirmed at the sessions on appeal, cannot be enforced. R. v. Boultbee,[7] 4 Ad. & Ell. 498. Justices at sessions cannot quash for a defect in a conviction not mentioned in the note of appeal. Ib.

(z) Under the stat. 29 C. 1, c. 27.

(A) (See Bore v. Bush, 6 Mart. N. S 2. Adkins v. Brener, 3 Cow. 206.)

(1) [See Vosburg v. Welsh, 11 Johns. 175.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. vii. 154. [2]Id. xiv. 97. [3]Id. xvii. 456. [4]Id. xxi. 265 [5]Id. xvii. 460. [6]Id. xxxi. 119. [7]Id. xxxi. 118.

more than one penalty could be incurred for selling bread on the same Sunday, and therefore that the levying under the last three convictions was illegal (a).

In such a case it is not essential for the plaintiff to prove that the conviction has been quashed, for it is wholly void (b). So where the defendant, being a justice of the peace, having convicted the plaintiff of destroying game, committed him to prison without first endeavouring to levy the penalty, the plaintiff having effects on which a distress might have been levied (c).

It seems to be perfectly well settled, that if the magistrate have general jurisdiction over the subject-matter, evidence is inadmissible to show that he came to an erroneous conclusion in the particular case (d) (A), for that is properly the subject of an appeal.

*588 *Upon a complaint or information before a magistrate of a matter over which he possesses jurisdiction, and consequently where he has a right to enter upon the inquiry, it is for him to decide upon the evidence adduced as to the truth of those facts; and when he has done so, it is, upon the

(a) Crepps v. Durden, Cowp. 640. There the want of jurisdiction appeared on the face of the conviction. See the observations of Lord Ellenborough, and of Bayley J. in Gray v. Cookson, 16 East, 21.

(b) Ibid. (c) Hill v. Bateman, 2 Str. 710. Robson v. Spearman,[1] 2 B. & A. 493.

(d) Gray v. Cookson, 16 East, 21; Strickland v. Ward, 7 T. R. 631. In Brittain v. Kinnaird,[2] 1 B. & B. 432, in trespass against a magistrate for taking and detaining a vessel, it was held that a conviction of the defendants under the Bumboat Act was conclusive evidence that the vessel in question was a boat within the meaning of the Act, and properly condemned. See R. v. Mitton, 3 Esp. C. 201; where Lord Mansfield observed, We cannot hear objections to the conviction which do not appear on the face of it, in a motion in arrest of judgment, for disobedience of an order made on it. In ex parte Gill, 7 East, 376, the Court held that they had no authority to discharge one who had been convicted by two magistrates for having absented himself as an apprentice from his master's service, the conviction being apparently regular, although he swore that on coming of age he had avoided the indentures before the offence alleged, and had insisted on that fact before the magistrates. Where a warrant was granted by a magistrate, on a conviction for not doing statute duty on a road in the township of Ingleby, in the parish of Arncliffe, it was held that it could not be objected on an action brought, that the plaintiff was not, as an occupier of lands in the township of Arncliffe, subject to the repair of roads in Ingleby, for that might have been objected on the hearing before the magistrate, or on an appeal. Fawcett v. Fowlis,[3] 7 B. & C. 394; and qu. whether it could be objected that the surveyor had been improperly appointed for the whole parish. The case is distinguishable from those where it has been held that one who is not an occupier of lands in or an inhabitant of a parish may maintain trespass for a distress for rates; in such cases there is an entire want of jurisdiction; here the plaintiff having lands within the parish was prima facie liable; there was a surveyor for the whole parish, and the plaintiff was prima facie liable. Had there been separate surveyors for the two townships, there would have been a total defect of jurisdiction. Per Holroyd, J. See also Lowther v. Lord Radnor, 8 East, 113. Where an order for wages alleges that it was made on a hearing, and upon examination on oath, a plaintiff in replevin cannot, in his plea to a cognizance founded on the order, aver that the servant did not duly make oath. Wilson v. Weller,[4] 1 B. & B. 57. And it seems that replevin does not lie in such a case. In trespass against two magistrates for giving the plaintiff's landlord possession of a farm under the stat. 11 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 16, a record of their proceedings under the Act, setting forth all that was necessary to give them jurisdiction, is a conclusive answer. Basten v. Carew,[5] 3 B. & C. 653. Where a justice committed a party charged, under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, with cutting down a tree growing on premises in his own occupation, belonging to another person, held that in the absence of all proof of malice, he could not be charged as having acted without jurisdiction, and liable in an action of trespass and false imprisonment; if the trees were excepted in the lease the tenant might be a trespasser, and if liable in trespass it is by no means clear that he might not be liable criminally. Mills v. Collett,[6] 6 Bing. 85, and 3 M. & P. 242. Where upon a conviction by justices under the stat. 9 Geo. 4, c. 3, s. 27, of a common assault, there was nothing on the face of it showing any attempt to commit felony, which it was in the discretion of the justices to find, the Court refused a certiorari. Anon.[7] 1 B. & Ad. 382. And see Brittain v. Kinnaird,[2] 1 B. & B. 482. In the case of Terry v. Huntington, Hard. 480, where the commissioners of excise had exceeded their authority, in adjudging low wines to be strong wines, it seems that evidence was admitted in proof of the fact, in order to negative the authority of the commissioners, in an action of trover brought to recover the value of goods levied under a warrant of the commissioners; vide infra. And see Fullers v. Fotch, Holt. R. 287; Carth. 346.

(A) (See Dressen v. Cox, 2 Martin, N. S. 631. Bugnet v. Watkins, 1 Dow. R. 136. Hurst v. Wickwire, 10 Wend. 102. Adkins v. Brewer, 3 Cow. 206. Flack v. Ankeny, 1 Breese, 144).

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. v. 355. [2] Id. v. 137. [3] Id. xiv. 59. [4] Id. v. 18. [5] Id. x. 211. [6] Id. xix. 11. [7] Id. xx. 405.

ordinary principle of jurisprudence, to be presumed that he has decided rightly in law and in fact. It is not to be supposed that he has decided contrary to his conscience and belief in matter of fact, for the purpose of extending his jurisdiction; and it would be contrary to the policy and principles of law, to allow him to be treated as a trespasser for an error in judgment (e) (1).

If a magistrate make an order corruptly, and against the evidence, but in a case where he has jurisdiction, a different remedy is open to the party injured (f), by appeal (where one is given), or by a criminal information or indictment against the magistrate, for the corrupt and malicious act (g). The whole difference seems to lie between a want of jurisdiction in the subject-matter, and an abuse of that jurisdiction. These principles seem to be now fully established by the case of Gray v. Cookson (h), where the magistrate *having made an order as against an apprentice, it was held *589 that the want of jurisdiction could not be established against him in an action of trespass, by evidence of the previous dissolution of the apprenticeship. But though evidence be not admissible to show that a magistrate came to a wrong conclusion as to the particular facts, where the subject-matter was generally within the scope of his jurisdiction; still it seems that evidence is admissible to show such a total defect of jurisdiction as excluded the power to inquire into the particular case: if the circumstances were

(e) See Sutton v. Johnston, 1 T. R. 493. 16 East, 21. It is an universal rule, that where a magistrate has jurisdiction he is not responsible in any form of action for mere mistake in matters of law. Mills v. Collett,[1] 6 Bing. 85.

(f) See the observations of Lawrence, J., 8 East, 119, Lowther v. Earl of Radnor and another. In that case the defendants having (as justices) made an order upon the plaintiff for the payment of wages to Sopp, alleged in the order to be due to him for work and labour in digging and steaning a well, the plaintiff having made default in appearing after summons, the order was confirmed on appeal by the plaintiff to the sessions. The defendants then issued a warrant of distress, on the execution of which the action was founded; a verdict was found for the plaintiff, subject to a case, in which were stated the terms of a special contract between the plaintiff and Sopp, as to the making the well. But the Court were clearly of opinion that the plaintiff could not make the defendants trespassers by showing that the real facts of the case would not support the complaint, without showing that such facts were proved before them at the time; and Grose, J. doubted whether the Court could look beyond the order itself. The case was ultimately decided on the ground that the defendants had jurisdiction under the stat. 20 Geo. 2, c. 49 (and see 31 Geo. 2, c. 11, s. 3), to make the order in question.

(g) Vide supra, note (v).

(h) 16 East, 13—23. But note, that in giving judgment, Lord Ellenborough delivered the opinion of the Court, that the apprenticeship, which was for a less term than seven years, and therefore voidable by the stat. 5 Eliz. c. 4, had not been actually avoided by an act of delinquency committed by the apprentice in running away from his master. See the cases cited by Mr. Buller, Cowp. 642, where Gould, J. is said to have ruled in two instances, one in Shropshire and one in Lancashire, that although a conviction under the game laws was good in point of form, yet, that as in truth the party was not subject to the game laws, the plaintiff was entitled to a verdict. These decisions, however, appear to be wholly inconsistent with the principles on which the authority of the res judicata depends. See Vol. I. tit. JUDGMENT, and see Brittain v. Kinnaird,[2] 1 B. & B. 432. Supra, 587, note (d).

(1) [Judicial officers are not liable to action or indictment for acts done by them in a judicial capacity within their jurisdiction, but only to impeachment, if they act corruptly. Yates v. Lansing, 5 Johns. 282. S. C. 9 Johns. 395. Moor v. Ames, 3 Caines's Rep. 170. Brodie v. Rutledge, 2 Bay, 69. An action does not lie against a justice for entering judgment and issuing execution against two defendants, upon the confession of one only. Little v. Moore, 1 Southard's Rep. 74. Nor, as it seems, for demanding excessive bail on a criminal charge. Evans v. Foster, 1 N. Hamp. Rep. 374. In North Carolina, however, a justice has been held liable to an action for maliciously and unjustly refusing to grant an appeal from his own judgment. Hardison v. Jordon, Cam. & Nor. 454. And in Kentucky, the doctrine is thus held—that an action will not lie against a justice for a judicial act within his jurisdiction, unless he has acted from impure and corrupt motives. Gregory v. Brown, 4 Bibb, 28. In South Carolina, it is held that a justice may be indicted for corrupt or oppressive conduct. The State v. Johnson, 2 Bay, 385. Lining v. Bentham, 2 Bay, 1. {And the law is the same in Pennsylvania, Boyer v. Potts, 14 Serg. & Rawle, 158.} In Vermont, it has been held that an indictment cannot be maintained against a justice for mal-administration, but that he is liable to a suit by the party grieved. The State v. Campbell, 2 Tyler, 177.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 11. [2]Id. v. 137.

such as wholly to exclude the power of inquiry in the particular case, the order or conviction will not operate as a defence; for a magistrate cannot give himself jurisdiction by finding that as a fact which is not a fact (i). Thus if one be rated to the poor who is neither an inhabitant nor occupier of land within the parish, and his goods be distrained for the rate, he may maintain an action against the person levying (j). But in general magistrates cannot be affected as trespassers, if the facts stated before them were such as they had jurisdiction to inquire into, and nothing appeared to contradict such statement. And therefore where magistrates levied money of a friendly society under warrants, after complaint made, and hearing, for the relief of one of the members, no defence being made; it was held, that they were not liable in trespass, although they had in truth no jurisdiction, the rules of the society containing an arbitration clause (k).

Proof of the conviction.

Before the stat. 21 Jac. 1, when a defence of this nature was specially pleaded the practice was, as appears from the entries, to set out the information, and all the proceedings before the justices (l). And that statute did not alter the nature of the defence, but merely took away the necessity of pleading it specially (m). It seems, however, that proof of the conviction, especially where it recites the previous proceedings and shows them to be regular, would be deemed sufficient (n). The warrant of commitment must

(i) Per Lawrence, J., Welsh v. Nash, 8 East, 403; and see the observations of the Court in Fawcett v. Fowlis,[1] 7 B. & C. 394.

(j) Lord Amherst v. Lord Somers, 2 T. R. 372. Nichols v. Walker, Cro. Car. 394; Milward v. Caffin, 2 Blacks. 1331; and per Lord Tenterden in Fawcett v. Fowlis,[1] 7 B. & C. 394; Weaver v. Price,[2] 3 B. & Ad. 409.

(k) Pike v. Carter,[3] 3 Bing. 78; and see Lowther v. Earl of Radnor, 8 East, 13.

(l) See Cowp. 647.

(m) Per Lord Mansfield, C. J., in Crepps v. Durden, 2 Cowp. 649.

(n) In the case of Hill v. Bateman, 2 Str. 710, supra, the Court held, that where such actions are brought against justices of the peace, they are obliged to show the regularity of their convictions; and the informations laid before them, on which their convictions are grounded, must be produced and proved in Court. But though the point does not appear to have been expressly decided, it is probable that where all the proceedings are stated on the face of the conviction, and appear to be regular, the recital itself would be deemed to be at least prima facie evidence of the facts recited. See Strickland v. Ward, 7 T. R. 631; Brittain v. Kinnaird,[4] 1 B. & B. 432; R. v. Picton, 2 East, 196. In Brucklesbank v. Smith, 2 Burr. 656, all the proceedings were regularly proved in evidence; and see Gray v. Cookson, 16 East, 21. But it seems that where no summary form is given by a particular statute, if the conviction did not show that the proceedings were regular, as if it did not show that the defendant was summoned or was present, the defect would be fatal, and could not, as it seems, be supplied by extrinsic evidence. On this ground convictions have been frequently quashed in the Court of K. B. In R. v. Dyer, 1 Salk. 181, Lord Holt says, "These summary jurisdictions ought to be held strictly to form, and everything ought to appear regular in them." And in several instances convictions have been quashed for not showing that the defendant was summoned, or had an opportunity of defending himself. R. v. Hawker, Cold. 391. R. v. Mallinson, 2 Burr. 681. Stanbury v. Bolt, cited Cowp. 642. R. v. Hall,[5] 6 D. & R. 84. R. v. Simpson. 10 Mod. 345. See also the cases of Buchanan v. Rucker, 9 East, 192; Cavan v. Stewart,[6] 1 Starkie's C. 525; where colonial judgments were held to be inoperative, for want of showing that the defendants against whom they had been obtained had been effectually summoned. In Stanbury v. Bolt, cor. Fortescue, J., Trin. 11 G. 1, cited Cowp. 642, upon trespass for taking a brass pan, and false imprisonment, it did not appear that the party had been summoned, and the conviction was adjudged void for that reason only. And though the proceedings should on the face of the conviction appear to be regular, yet it seems that the party convicted would be at liberty to show that there was in fact no information, summons, or appearance. Where a statute gives a summary form of conviction, which does not state the previous proceedings, it seems to me more doubtful whether extrinsic proof of an information and summons is not requisite to support the conviction and the proceedings under it. In the case of Doe d. Lord Thanet v. Gartham (which is shortly reported in [7]1 Bingh. 357), the plaintiff sought to recover a schoolhouse, &c. after a sentence of expulsion pronounced against the defendant by the visitors and feoffees of the school (the lessors of the plaintiff), but there was nothing to show that the defendant had been summoned to answer the charges made against him. Bayley, J., saved the point, and the Court of Common Pleas afterwards held that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover; and see R. v. Dr. Gaskin, 8 T. R. 209; and Lord Kenyon's observations in Harper v. Carr, 7 T. R. 275. In the late case of Dingsdale v. Clarke, the Court of K. B. held, that where the statute prescribed a summary form of conviction, reciting that the party had been duly convicted, it was sufficient for the magistrate to prove the recorded conviction, without proof of any previous steps.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiv. 59. [2]Id. xxiii. 107. [3]Id. xi. 37. [4]Id. v. 137. [5]Id. xvi. 255. [6]Id. ii. 496. [7]Id. viii. 347.

*also be produced and proved, and evidence given (if there be no internal reference) to connect it with the conviction (f).

*In general, an order or warrant of commitment by a magistrate must be *591

(f) Where T. O. laid an information against the plaintiff on a charge of vagrancy, the plaintiff was examined and heard upon the charge, and the magistrate made out a warrant of commitment which falsely recited that the plaintiff had been charged on the oath of T. S., and T. S. negatived the fact in evidence, and a conviction was drawn up a month afterwards, but dated on the day of commitment, it was held that the imprisonment was sufficiently connected with the conviction, however informally the conviction and warrant were drawn; and that the allegation in the warrant as to the oath of T. S. might be rejected as surplusage. Massey v. Johnson, 12 East, 67. A warrant of commitment is sufficient, if it substantially exhibit the corpus delicti, though it does not state the cause with the technical precision of an indictment. A commitment for treasonable practices is legal. R. v. Despard, 7 T. R. 736. And a commitment for embezzlement is sufficient, if it show in substance an offence which warrants a commitment, though it does not state the act to have been done feloniously. R. v. Croker,[1] 2 Chitty's R. 138. Where the prisoner was committed under a warrant of execution, which recited that he had been committed for two months, or until he paid a penalty of 5*l.*, for an offence under the st. 1 & 2 G. 4, c. 118, s. 33, without stating how the penalty was to be distributed, and to whom paid; the Court refused to discharge the defendant out of custody, saying, that the warrant did not require the same certainty as a conviction, and that they were bound to presume that there had been a legal conviction to support the warrant. R. v. Rogers,[2] 1 D. & R. 156; 5 D. & R. 260,[3] 1 R. & M. 129. And see R. v. Helps, 3 M. & S. 331. And the warrant need not state the circumstances on which the conviction or order is founded; that at least is not necessary where the warrant refers to the conviction or an order. Coster v. Wilson, 3 M. and W. 411. A warrant committing a collector of rates for a parish to gaol, there to remain until he should have made a true account, and until the amount should be paid over by him or his sureties, was held to be good, notwithstanding the conclusion directing the gaoler to detain him unless he should be discharged by due course of law. Goff's Case, 3 M. & S. 203. But a commitment ought to show the authority of the party committing. R. v. York, 5 Burr. 2684. The 5th exception was; that the warrant of commitment did not show that Sir J. Fielding, who made it, was a justice of the peace. And the commitment will be bad if it do not substantially show an offence charged, where the warrant is previous to conviction and an offence committed, and the legal duration of imprisonment, where the commitment is in execution. A commitment was held to be defective which stated that the defendant with force and arms made an assault on, &c. with intent feloniously to steal and carry away, for it did not charge any felony within the stat. 7 G. 2, c. 22; 5 T. R. 169; R. v. Remnant, Nolan, 205; and see Branwell v. Penneck,[4] 7 B. & C. 533; supra, 386, note (y). A commitment in execution of a rogue and vagabond under the stat. 23 G. 3, c. 88, is bad, unless it state that the defendant was apprehended with the implements of housebreaking upon him at the time of such apprehension. R. v. Brown, 8 T. R. 26. So a warrant setting out the grounds of commitment in the disjunctive is bad. R. v. Evered, Cald. 26. A commitment in execution must state that the party has been convicted; it is insufficient to state that he was charged on oath with the offence. R. v. Cooper, 6 T. R. 509. A commitment for punishment for a contempt is bad, which does not specify a time certain. R. v. James,[5] 5 B. & A. 894. And see Ex parte Page, 1 B. & A. 568. R. v. Payne,[6] 4 D. & R. 72. So where the commitment was until he shall pay a sum due for the maintenance of a bastard child and legal fees, or be otherwise delivered by due course of law, where the time ought to have been limited to three months. Robson v. Spearman,[7] 3 B. & A. 493. So of a general commitment until the putative father pay two several sums, one for maintenance, the other for costs. In Re Addis,[8] 1 B. & C. 87. So a commitment for maliciously carrying away a post from a fence is bad; for it is no offence under the stat. 1 G. 4, c. 56, unless the party charged has wilfully or maliciously committed the damage, injury or spoil alleged. R. v. Harpur,[9] 1 D. & R. 222. A conviction under the stat. 17 G. 2, c. 38, of a late overseer, for refusing and neglecting to deliver over a parish book, which adjudges that he be committed until he deliver up all and every the books concerning his said office of overseer, belonging to the parish, is void as to the excess, and a warrant of commitment is void in toto. Groome v. Forrester, 5 M. & S. 314. The conviction produced and proved will not justify the commitment, unless the offences stated be identical. Where the conviction stated an offence against the stat. 6 G. 3, c. 48, and the commitment was for an offence against the stat. 15 C. 2, c. 2, it was held to be insufficient. Rogers v. Jones,[3] 3 B. & C. 409; and it seems that the guilt of the plaintiff is not evidence in mitigation. S. C. 1 Ry. & M. 129. But in some cases, as under the stat. 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30, s. 39, it is expressly provided, that no warrant of commitment shall be held to be void by reason of any defect therein, provided it be alleged that the party has been convicted, and there be a good and valid conviction to sustain the same. See Daniel v. Phillips, 1 C. M. & R. 662. And where the commitment, after a regular conviction for destroying fish in the prosecutor's pond, stated merely a conviction for fishing, &c. without stating any offence in law, it was held that the conviction, though good, supplied no defence. Wickes v. Clutterbuck,[10] 2 Bingh. 483. In trespass and false imprisonment against a justice, held, that assuming that he had power to commit a person refusing to give evidence, where a specific charge is made, and before the party can be brought into contempt, he ought to be fully apprised that there is such charge under inquiry before the justice; where both the warrant and the evidence were silent upon that point, the Court refused to disturb the verdict which had been found for the plaintiff; and considering the facts not sufficient to raise the general question, abstained from giving any opinion on that point. Cropper v. Horton,[11] 8 D. & Ry. 166. See Bennett v. Watson, 3 M. & S. 1. A warrant issued at the right time is not avoided by too early a date. Newman v. Hardwicke, 3 N. & P. 368.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xviii. 279. [2]Id. xvi. 26. [3]Id. xxi. 397. [4]Id. xiv. 97. [5]Id. vii. 292. [6]Id. xvi. 189. [7]Id. v. 355. [8]Id. viii. 29. [9]Id. xvi. 36. [10]Id. ix. 490. [11]Id. xvi. 342.

in writing (g); but an order to detain in custody one convicted under the statute 13 G. 3, c. 80, of killing game on a Sunday, and detained by order of a magistrate until the return of a warrant of distress, may be by parol (h). So also an order of a magistrate for the detainer of a prisoner, in order to his further examination on a charge of felony, may be by parol, and without showing any particular cause for which he was to be examined (i). If the commitment was upon a warrant granted in defect of goods upon which a distress might be made, the defendant should prove the conviction or demand of the penalty, the warrant of distress and return to it, and the warrant of committal (j).

*592 *It is no objection to the conviction that it has been drawn up in regular form since the time of conviction, or even since the commencement of the action (k). But it is otherwise in case of an order of justices (l), or warrant of commitment, which cannot be made out so as to justify a preceding commitment (m). And it seems that mere want of form in the proceedings will be immaterial, provided they show that the plaintiff was convicted of the offence for which the warrant afterwards issued (n). Where the war-

(g) 2 Haw. c. 16, s. 13. Where a statute requires a warrant, a commitment without a written one is bad, unless it be for a temporary detention until the warrant is made out. Hutchinson v. Lowndes,[1] 4 B. & Ad. 118. So a commitment for contempt must be in writing. Mayhew v. Locke, 2 Marsh. 377.

(h) Still v. Walls, 7 East, 533.

(i) 1 Hale, P. C. 585; 2 Hale, P. C. 120. In Scavage v. Tatham, Cro. Eliz. 829; 2 Haw. c. 16, s. 12; it was held that the party could not be detained for sixteen days, and that the space of three days was a reasonable time. Yet it seems that detention for even a longer space of time might be justifiable under special circumstances. See also Kendall v. Roe, 12 Howell's St. Tr. 1376. The practice, it has been said, is to commit from three days to three days, by a written mittimus. 1 Chitty's C. L. 75: Burn's J., tit. Examination, 816. A warrant of commitment for re-examination, for an unreasonable length of time, is void. Davies v. Capper,[2] 10 B. & C. 28. A magistrate cannot justify a detention without conviction, to enable the party to settle with the complainant. Bridgett v. Coyney,[3] 1 M. & Ry. 211. The reasonableness is a question for the jury. Cave v. Mountain, 1 Scott, N. S. 132. Although, on a charge of feloniously cutting trees, they turn out to be under the value of 20*s*. Ibid.

(j) By the stat. 5 G. 4, c. 18, s. 1, where a penalty is payable on conviction, the magistrate is authorized to direct the defendant to be detained in custody until the return of the distress warrant, unless the offender shall give sufficient security to the satisfaction of the magistrates for his appearance on the return-day of the warrant, such day not being more than eight days from the taking such security. And if it shall appear by confession or otherwise, to the satisfaction of the justice, that the offender has not sufficient goods within his jurisdiction whereon to levy all such penalties, costs and charges, the justice may at his discretion, without issuing a distress warrant, commit, as on a return of nulla bona.

(k) Gray v. Cookson, 16 East, 21, where Ld. Ellenborough says, "I have always considered, that if a conviction were produced at the trial, which would justify the conviction, it would be sufficient." And see Massey v. Johnson, 12 East, 67.

(l) R. v. Justices of Cheshire,[4] 5 B. & Ad. 438.

(m) Hutchinson v. Lowndes,[5] 4 B. & Ad. 118. Qu. as to the suspension or revocation of an order or warrant. Barons v. Luscombe,[6] 3 Ad. & Ell. 589.

(n) Massey v. Johnson, 12 East, 67. But it must appear to the Court that the party has been legally convicted of the offence stated on the face of the conviction. In the case of Moult v. Jennings, cor. Eyre, C. J., cited Cowp. 642, upon trespass and false imprisonment against the defendant, and the general issue pleaded, it appeared that the plaintiff had been convicted of swearing, and Eyre, C. J. said, that if the nature of the oaths had not been specified in the conviction, so that they might appear to the Court, the conviction would have been void. And in Cole's Case (Sir W. Jones, 170), it was held by the whole Court, that if a justice does not pursue the form prescribed by the statute, the party need not bring error, but all is void as coram non judice. So in Goss v. Jackson, 3 Esp. C. 198, it was held by Ld. Kenyon, that a conviction under the stat. 33 G. 3, c. 84, which varied from the form given by the statute, was void; but note, that in that case the order had not been served on the party convicted, and no demand had been made of the penalty before distress made, as the statute requires. See also Davidson v. Gill, 1 East, 64, where it was held that an order of justices, under the stat. 13 G. 3, c. 78, s. 19, for stopping up an old footway, and setting out a new one, which did not follow the form prescribed in the schedule, and set forth the length and breadth of the new footway, was defective, and that the objection might be taken in a collateral proceeding; for the statute requires that the form set forth in the schedule shall be used on all occasions. But the general rule is, that a party shall not take advantage of a defect in a collateral proceeding, where he might have taken the objection by way of appeal. Supra, Vol. I. tit. JUDGMENT. R. v. Grandon, Cowp. 315. Upon an indictment for disobeying an order of sessions, the Court held that they could hear no objections to the order which did not appear on the face of it; and that where a Court, having competent jurisdiction has pronounced an order, as rant recited a charge on the oath of T. S., and the conviction purported to be founded on the oath of S. O., it was held that the recital in the warrant might be rejected as surplusage, and that it might be considered as a valid commitment under the conviction as to the remainder (o). It should appear on the face of the proceedings, not only that the party has been convicted of an offence within the jurisdiction of the magistrate, but also that the proceedings against him were regular; that there was an information against him (p) on oath, where such an information is required, and that he appeared *to answer the charge, or at least was summoned (q). And it seems that even supposing the proceedings to be apparently regular, evidence would be admissible to impeach the judgment in this respect (r). *593

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxiv. 36. [2] Id. xx. 20. [3] Id. xvii. 244. [4] Id. xxvii. 105. [5] Id. xxiv. 36. [6] Id. xxx. 168.

Evidence in answer to a conviction, &c.

Although a legal adjudication by a magistrate is, so long as it subsists, a bar to an action of trespass in respect of any act done by virtue of it, yet it seems to be clear, upon principles already adverted to (s), that the plaintiff may rebut the evidence of a conviction, or other judicial act, by evidence showing the total illegality of the proceedings, by proof that the act was not a judicial one, inter partes, but was wholly unwarranted, fraudulent and void. Thus he may prove that a warrant of commitment in case of felony was granted maliciously, and without any information to support it (t); or in case of a distress or commitment under a conviction, that he was never summoned, and therefore had no opportunity to make his defence (u).

Justification under a commitment.

If the defendant justify under a commitment by him as a justice of the peace, as in case of felony, he should be prepared to prove the information on oath, the proceedings upon it, and the warrant of commitment. If he has committed for a contempt committed against him in the execution of his office, he should be prepared to prove the circumstances of the contempt, and a committal by warrant, specifying the offence (x) (1). Under a commitment for refusing to be bound over as a witness at the assizes or sessions, the defendant should prove the informations, examinations, and depositions, the calling on the plaintiff to enter into the recognizance, his long as it remains in force, it must be obeyed. R. v Mitton, 3 Esp. C. 200. Otherwise, where the defect of jurisdiction appears on the face of the previous conviction or indictment. R. v. Hollis,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 536.

(o) Massey v. Johnson, 12 East, 67. But it was proved in fact, that S. O. had given information on oath; and Le Blanc, J. observed, that the case would have assumed a very different shape had there been no information on oath on which to found the proceedings.

(p) See Massey v. Johnson, 12 East, 67; and see Vol. I. tit. JUDGMENT. If a magistrate maliciously grant a warrant to apprehend and commit a party for felony, without any information against him, he is a trespasser, for there is a false imprisonment by some one, the party having been committed to prison without any charge having been made; and it is an imprisoment by the justice, and not by the constable, who was bound to obey the warrant. Morgan v. Hughes, 2 T. R. 225.

(q) 12 East, 82; 7 T. R. 275. In Stanbury v. Bolt, cor. Fortescue, J. Trin. 11 G. 1, cited Cowp. 642, upon trespass for taking a brass pan, and false imprisonment, it did not appear that the plaintiff had been summoned, and the conviction was adjudged void for that reason only.

(r) See the observations of Le Blanc, J., 12 East, 81, 2; and supra, Vol. I. tit. JUDGMENT. [See Vosburgh v. Welch, 11 Johns. 175.]

(s) Supra, Vol. I. tit. JUDGMENT; Vol. II. tit. FRAUD.

(t) Morgan v. Hughes, 2 T. R. 225.

(u) Harper v. Carr, 7 T. R. 275. And see the cases, Vol. I. tit. JUDGMENT; also Stanbury v. Bolt, supra, 589.

(x) Mayhew v. Locke,[2] 2 Marsh, 377.

(1) [It seems that a justice cannot commit for a contempt, only where the contempt has been committed in the face of the court. The State v. Applegate, 2 M'Cord, 110. Lining v. Benthan, 2 Bay, 1. The State v. Johnson, 3 Bay, 385. Richmond v. Dayton, 10 Johns. 393. See also Fitler v. Probasco, 2 Browne's Rep. 137. Moore v. Ames, 3 Caines's Rep. 170. For abusive words while out of court, relating to his judicial character, he may require the party to find security of the peace, and for good behaviour, and in default thereof commit. 10 Johns. ubi sup. Or he may proceed by indictment. 2 Bay, ubi sup.] refusal, and the warrant of committal (y). If the warrant direct an imprisonment not authorized by law, it will not be available in defence (z).

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 464. [2]Id. ii. 27.

Evidence in answer to a conviction.

In the case of Terry v. Huntington (a), the Court seem to have been of opinion, that in an action of trespass the plaintiff might show that the commissioners had exceeded their jurisdiction, in adjudging a subject-matter to be within their jurisdiction which was not within it, i. e. in adjudging low wines to be strong wines. This, however, seems to be inconsistent with later authorities, particularly that of Gray v. Cookson: in these cases, the question, whether the subject-matter was or was not within the jurisdiction, was the very point upon which the commissioners in the one case, and the magistrate in the other, had to adjudicate; and therefore the same principle which protects a party who acts judicially, and gives effect to his judgments, until they have been reversed by proper authority, although he may have acted erroneously, extends to such cases, and to all where the question of jurisdiction arises upon matter of fact in the course of a cause,

*594 *and therefore necessarily becomes the proper subject for adjudication in the cause. If in the case of Terry v. Huntington it had appeared on the face of the information that the subject-matter of the proceeding was low wines, whereas the statute gave jurisdiction in case of strong wines only, the commissioners would clearly have acted illegally in proceeding to adjudicate where they had no power by the statute to adjudicate at all. But if the information related to strong wines only, a subject-matter over which they had jurisdiction, they were bound to proceed; and then, whether the subject-matter of the complaint, upon the evidence, came within the meaning of the statute, they were bound judicially to decide.

Where justices were proceeding upon a summary conviction under the game laws, it was held that as exercising a judicial authority their proceedings ought not to be private, and that they were not warranted in removing the plaintiff, and were therefore liable to an action of trespass (y).

But no person has by law a right to act as an advocate on the trial of an information before justices of the peace, without their permission (z).

If an Act of Parliament give a justice of the peace jurisdiction over an offence, it impliedly authorizes him to grant a warrant to bring before him a person charged with that offence (a).

Tender of amends.

If amends have been tendered within a month after notice, and such tender has been pleaded, it is a question for the jury whether the amends so tendered were sufficient (b).

Where the defendant has paid money into Court (c), having neglected to tender amends, or having tendered insufficient amends, the proceedings are the same as in other cases where money is paid into Court.

III. Before the statute 24 Geo. 2, c. 44, an officer charged with the exe-

(y) See Bennett v. Watson, 3 M. & S. 1.

(z) A commitment of a putative father of a bastard, until he should pay a sum due for the maintenance of a bastard child, &c. or until he should be otherwise delivered by due course of law, is bad; the stat. 49 Geo. 3, c. 68, s. 3, merely authorizing a commitment for three months, unless, &c. Woburn v. Skearman,[1] 3 B. & A. 493, and vide supra.

(a) Hardr. 480. (y) Daubny v. Cooper,[2] 10 B. & C. 237.

(z) Collier, Gent. one, &c. v. Hicks,[3] 1 B. & Ad. 663.

(a) Bane v. Methuen,[4] 2 Bing. 63.

(b) 24 Geo. 2, c. 44, s. 2. The tender may be pleaded, with the plea of not guilty, or any other pleas, by leave of the Court. Ibid. If the jury find the amends to be sufficient, they are to find for the defendant in such case; or if the plaintiff be nonsuited, or discontinue, or judgment be given for the defendant on demurrer, he is entitled to like costs as if he had pleaded the general issue only. But where the tender of 40*s.* was admitted by the replication, and the notice of action was for taking goods of the value of 40*s.* only, the plaintiff was nonsuited. Stringer v. Martyr, 6 Esp. C. 134.

(c) 24 Geo. 2, c. 44, s. 4.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. v. 355. [2]Id. xxi. 64. [3]Id. xxii. 161. [4]Id. ix. 317.

cution of a magistrate's warrant was placed in a perilous situation; he was liable to an indictment if he refused to execute a warrant, and to a vexatious action if he did. In order to his relief the above statute was made, the object of which was to substitute the magistrate by whom the warrant was granted, and who was supposed to be cognizant of the legality of it, in lieu of the officer, who was merely the instrument to execute it, and probably ignorant of the grounds on which it issued (d). Defence by a constable, &c., under a warrant.

By the stat. 24 G. 2, c. 44, s. 6, no action (e) shall be brought against *any constable (f), headborough, or other officers (g), or against any person acting by his order and in his aid, for anything done in obedience to any warrant under the hand or seal of any justice of the peace (h), until demand has been made, or left at his usual place of abode, by the party intending to bring such action, or by his attorney, in writing, signed by the party demanding the same, of the perusal and copy of such warrant, and the same has been refused or neglected for six days after such demand; and in case, after such demand and compliance therewith, any action be brought against such constable, &c. for any such cause as aforesaid, without making the justice of the peace who signed or sealed the said warrant (i) defendant, on producing and proving such warrant at the trial, the jury shall give their verdict for the defendant, notwithstanding any defect of jurisdiction in such justice of the peace; and if such action be brought jointly against such justice of the peace, and such constable, &c.; then, on proof of such war- *595

(d) See the observations of Lawrence, J., 5 East, 477. Jones v. Vaughan.

(e) This clause embraces actions of tort only, and does not extend to an action brought against an officer for money had and received, which has been levied by him under a conviction which was afterwards quashed. Feltham v. Terry, East. T. 13 Geo. 3, K. B.; B. N. P. 24. See also Irving v. Wilson, 4 T. R. 485. Wallace v. Smith, 5 East, 122. It is now settled, although it had been doubted, (see Lord Kenyon's observations in Harper v Carr, 7 T. R. 270), that the statute does not extend to actions of replevin. Fletcher v. Wilkins, 6 East, 283; for there would be great inconvenience in depriving the subject of his remedy by replevin; it might happen that no damages could compensate for the loss of the particular chattel, of which the party might be for ever deprived, if he could not sue in replevin. Milward v. Caffin, 2 Bl. R. 1330. See also Waterhouse v. Keen,[1] 4 B. & C. 200.

(f) Evidence of parties acting as constables or watchmen, is prima facie evidence of their being such so as to entitle them to the benefit of any provision extended to them in that capacity. Bulter v. Ford, 1 C. & M. 662; 3 Tyr. 667, and supra, tit. Character.

(g) Churchwardens, and overseers of the poor, acting under a warrant of distress for a poor's-rate, are within these words, when sued in actions to which the statute extends. Harper v. Carr, 7 T. R. 271. So is a gaoler who detains a prisoner under a magistrate's warrant. Butt v. Newman, Gow. 97. Where by statute commissioners had authority to appoint constables, watchmen and other officers requiring a month's notice of the cause of action for anything done or to be done by virtue of the Act, to the clerk of the commissioners, before any action brought, it was held to extend to acts done by constables and watchmen. Bulter v. Ford, C. & M. 662. 3 Tyr. 677.

(h) The Act does not extend to a warrant granted by a Judge of the Court of K. B. Gladwell v. Blake, 1 C. M. & R. 636.

(i) The general requisites of a warrant are, 1st, That it be under the hand and seal of the justice. 2 Co. Ins. p. 52. 2 Hale, 111. 2dly. It must express the date in order to show that it was prior to the arrest. 2 Hale, 111; Dalt. c. 117–121. But the place, it seems, need not be stated, although it must be averred in pleading; the county, however, ought at all events to be set forth in the margin, if not in the body. 2 Haw. c. 13, s. 23; Dalt. c. 117. 3dly. Must state the offence, which may be done generally, in case of treason or felony; in other cases it seems that the special cause should be set forth, so far at least as to show the nature of the offence, and the jurisdiction of the magistrate; 2 Haw. c. 13, s. 25; 2 Hale, 111. It ought not to be general to answer such matters as shall be objected against him, for then it will not appear whether the offence be within the jurisdiction of the magistrate, or whether it be bailable or not. 2 Ins. 52, 591; 2 Hale, 111. Hence a general warrant to arrest all persons suspected of an offence (Swallowes's Case, 24, C. 1; 2 Hale, 112), or to search all suspected houses (2 Haw. c. 13, s. 17), or to seize persons guilty of a specified offence, is illegal. (Ibid. and see Money v. Leach, Burr. 1742. Entick v. Carrington, 2 Wils. 275; 11 St. Tr. 321). And 4thly, the warrant may be general, to bring the party before any justice of peace of the county, or special, to bring him before the justice who granted it; 2 Hale, 112, Foster's Case, 5 Co. 59, b. In the former case, it seems to be in the election of the officer to go before whom he pleases. Adjudged, 5 Co. 59, b. Foster's Case, against the opinion of Fineux, 21 H. 7, 21, a. 2 Hale, 112. [See Kerlin v. Heacock, 3 Binney, 215.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps, x. 310.

rant, the jury shall find for such constable, &c. notwithstanding such defect of jurisdiction (1).

The defendant in order to avail himself of this clause must produce and prove the warrant (k), by evidence of the justice's hand-writing, &c., and show that he acted in obedience to it (l). The principal test for ascertaining whether the defendant has acted in obedience to the warrant is to inquire whether the magistrate would be liable for the act of the defendant; for where he would not be liable, the officer is not within the protection of the statute (m) (2). As where a bailiff, on a warrant to take up a disorderly *596 person *under the Vagrant Act (l), takes up one who is not so (m), or being authorized to apprehend the author, printer or publisher of a libel, executes it on one who is neither the author, printer or publisher (n). So where bailiffs, in order to levy a poor's under a warrant of distress, break and enter a house, and break the windows (o); or where a bailiff executes a warrant in a place beyond the limits of its legal operation (p). Or in (k) As to the form of warrant, vide supra, note (i).

(l) See 3 Burr. 1767. [See Davis' Justice, Chap. III.]

(m) Per Ld. Mansfield, 3 Burr. 1768; B. N. P. 24; 1 Bl. 555; 2 M. & S. 260. The constable is not discharged, unless the party grieved has a remedy once against the magistrate. Sly v. Stevenson,[1] 2 C. & P. 464. Parton v. Williams,[2] 3 B. & A. 333. The clause was intended to protect the officer in those cases only where the justice remains liable; per Abbott, C. J. Ib. And see Cotton v. Kadwell,[3] 3 N. & M. 399. It does not apply where the officer being directed to seize specified things takes others. Crozier v. Cundy,[4] 6 B. & C. 232; or exceeds the local limits of jurisdiction. Mitton v. Green, 5 East, 233; or uses unnecessary violence. Bell v. Dockly, 2 M. & S. 259.

(l) 17 Geo. 2. (m) 3 Burr. 1767.

(n) Money v. Leach & others, Burr. 1742; note, the warrant under the hand and seal of Ld. Halifax, one of his Majesty's principal secretaries of state, directed the defendants to bring the author, &c. before him, but they discharged the plaintiff by the Earl's order, without carrying the defendant before him. In Entick v. Carrington, (2 Wils. 275), it was observed by the Court, that the defendants had not taken a constable with them, as directed by the warrant, and that they had not pursued the warrant in the execution thereof, inasmuch as they had carried the plaintiff and his books before Lord Stanhope, and not before Lord Halifax, as directed by the warrant, which was wrong, because a secretary of state cannot delegate his power, but ought to act in this part of his office personally, and therefore, and also because the Court held that a Secretary of State is not a justice of the peace, it was decided that neither a Secretary of State, nor the messengers, were within the stat. 24 Geo. 2, c. 44.

(o) Bell v. Oakley & others, 2 M. & S. 259.

(p) Dawson or Lawson v. Clarke, 3 Burr. 1761, 1767; Milton v. Green, 5 East, 233. A constable cannot justify the execution of a warrant except within the district or place for which he is appointed. Where a warrant to search for nets was directed "to the constable of Shipborne, to Samuel Carter, and to all other officers of the peace in the county of Kent," it was held that the defendant, who was borsholder of Little Peckham, which adjoined to Shipborne, could not justify the execution of the warrant in Shipborne, being neither constable of Shipborne, nor Samuel Carter; and the general description, it was held, was to be construed "reddendo singula singulis," as directed to each constable in his own district. Blatcher v. Kemp, 1 H. B. 15, in note, cor. Ld. Mansfield. And see 2 Ld. Raym. 1296; The Queen v. Tooley, 1 Salk. 175; Case of the village of Chorley, Fost. 312; 2 Bl. R. 1135, Hill v. Barnes. The reason is, that if the execution of warrants were granted to mere strangers, force would often be repelled with force, and infinite mischief would attend the departure from the ancient rules of local magistracy. But if a warrant be directed to a constable by name, he may execute it anywhere within the scope of the warrant and the jurisdiction of the justice (Ibid. and Bac. Ab. tit. Constable, D). In Westminster constables are to be appointed out of different parishes for the whole city and liberty, by 29 Geo. 2, c. 25; and in London, by ancient custom, the constables of the twenty-six wards have power to execute warrants throughout the city. Bac. Ab. Ed. 6, tit. Constable, D.) And now, by the stat. 5 G. 4, c. 18. s. 6, a constable or other peace officer may execute any

(1) [An action of trespass against a constable, who arrested a plaintiff on a warrant of a debt, and assaulted and beat him, was held to be within the statute of Pennsylvania, which requires a copy of the warrant to be demanded. Osborn v. Burkett, 1 Browne's Rep. 393.]

(2) [A warrant by a justice, not directed to any particular person in office, is bad. Hall v. Moor, Addison's Rep. 376. But a warrant, directed to —— constable, is good, if executed by the constable of the district. Paul v. Vankirk, 6 Binney, 124.

A constable, justifying under process from a justice, need not produce written evidence of the justice's appointment: Oral evidence that he has acted as such is sufficient. Noland v. Moore, 2 Littell's Rep. 367. A warrant issued by a justice may be good, although his name only is signed, without the addition of his official character. Siler v. Ward, 1 Car. Law Repos. 548.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xii. 217. [2]Id. v. 307. [3]Id. xxviii. 363. [4]Id. xiii. 154.

general where the officer exceeds his authority in the execution of the warrant, or executes it in an illegal manner (q).

warrant of any justice or magistrate within the jurisdiction for which such justice or magistrate shall have acted in granting or indorsing such warrant, as if such warrant had been addressed to such constable or other peace officer specially by his name, notwithstanding the parish or place in which such warrant shall be granted shall not be the parish, township, hamlet or place for which he shall be constable or peace officer, provided the same be within the jurisdiction of the justice or magistrate so granting or indorsing such warrant. The effect of this statute is, it has been held, to put warrants addressed to peace officers in their official character, on the same footing on which warrants specially directed to them formerly stood; it does not oblige, but authorizes officers to execute the power. Gimbert v. Coyney, 1 M'Clel. & Y. 469. A constable to whom a warrant is directed, may, for special cause only, as sickness, execute it by deputy. Ibid. Roll. Ab. 591; Moor, 845; Cromp. 222; 3 Bull. 77; 3 Burr. 1259.

(q) See 2 Hale, 115; 2 Haw. c. 13, s. 28. Bailiffs and constables sworn as, and commonly known to be, officers, are not bound to show their warrant to the party, but private persons to whom warrants are directed, and even sworn and known officers if they act beyond their own precincts, are bound to show their warrants if demanded. (2 Haw. c. 15, s. 28; 6 Co. 54; 9 Co 69; 1 Hale, 583; 2 Hale, 116.) So in executing a warrant of distress of a justice of the peace to levy a penalty, they must show the warrant if required, and suffer a copy to be taken by the stat. 27 Geo. 2, c. 28. It is enough for a sworn and known officer to say, "I arrest you for felony, &c. in the King's name." (2 Hale, 116, 8 Edw. 4, 14, a.; 14 Hen. 7, 9, b.; 9 Co. R. 69, Mackally's Case.) It may be executed in a franchise within the county, for it is the King's suit, in which a non omittas is virtually included. 2 Hale, 116. But before the late statute it could not be executed out of the officer's precinct, unless specially directed to him. 2 Haw. c. 13, s. 30; and supra, note (p). After the arrest he must bring the party to gaol, or to the magistrate, according to the import of the warrant. 2 Hale, 113, and supra, 595, note (i). But if the time be unseasonable, or if there be danger of rescue, or if the party be sick, and not able at the present to be brought before a justice, the constable may secure him till the next day, or till such time as may, under the circumstances, be seasonable. 2 Ed. 4, 9 & 10; and 2 Hale, 120. And after he has brought him before the justice, the party is still in his custody until the justice discharge or bail him, or till he be actually committed. 40 H. 4, 7, a.; and 2 Hale, 120.—Doors can in no case be broken, without previous notification of the cause, and request to admit. 2 Haw. c. 14, s. 1; 2 Hale, 116, 7; Fost. 320. A constable may justify the breaking of doors on a warrant to arrest for felony; and even on a warrant to arrest for breach of the peace, an officer may break open the doors of the party. Dalt. c. 78; 1 Hale, 582; 2 Hale, 117; 2 Haw. c. 14, s. 3. So he may, under a warrant of a justice to levy a forfeiture in execution, on any stat. which gives the whole or any part of the forfeiture to the King. 2 Haw. c. 14, s. 5. So under a warrant to arrest for felony, or breach of the peace, the officer may break the doors of another house. 2 Hale, 117; 5 Co. R. 93; Fost. 319. But if the felon be not there, he is a trespasser. Semaine's Case, ibid.—An officer may lawfully break open doors after proper notice, and refusal, under a warrant to search for stolen goods, and although no stolen goods be found there. 2 Hale, 157. But it is there said that the owner is justified, or otherwise, according to the event; and see Bostock v. Saunders, Bl. 912; S. C. 3 Wils. 434. This, however, seems to have been overruled in the case of Cooper v. Booth, 3 Esp. C. 135; and vide infra, 600. Where one known to have committed treason or felony, or to have given a grievous wound, is pursued, even by a private person, without warrant, he may break open doors to take the offender; but it seems that no one would be justified in doing this without a warrant, on mere suspicion. See 2 Haw. c. 17, s. 7, and the authorities there cited; Fost. 321; 1 Hale, 582. A demand of admission is necessary in execution of process for a misdemeanor. Launock v. Brown, 2 B. & A. 592. Doors may be broken after notification, in order to arrest on the Speaker's warrant, for a contempt of the House of Commons. Bardett v. Abbott, 5 Dow, 165; 14 East, 1; 4 Taunt. 401. A sheriff in executing civil process against the person of A. B. is justified or not in entering the house of a stranger to take A. B., according to the event. Johnson v. Leigh,[1] 6 Taunt. 246. It seems that in the execution of civil mesne process the officer is justified in breaking an inner door, though the defendant be not there at the time; but a previous demand of admittance is necessary. Ratcliffe v. Burton, 3 B. & P. 223. It is necessary to show that such a breaking was necessary before a resort is had to violence. Ibid.; and see White v. Wiltshire, Palmer, 54. So no demand of a warrant is necessary where overseers distraining under a poor's rate, sell within four days goods in possession of the bailiffs of a landlord under a distress for rent. Whitby v. Robert, M. & Y. 107; Kay v. Grover,[2] 7 Bing. 312. Or in case of an excessive distress for a poor's rate. Starch v. Clark,[3] 4 B. & Ad. 113. It is stated to have been held that a constable who acts without warrant, and not upon the view, is not within the statute. Ballinger v. Ferris, 1 M. & W. 630, cor. Lord Abinger, qu. It seems to be a general rule applicable to all such enactments, that they enure to the protection of a party who acted under an honest bona fide belief that he was acting in execution of powers conferred upon him, although he may have mistaken the extent of that power, or have exceeded it, or failed to comply with the directions of the statute. Smith v. Shaw,[4] 10 B. & C. 284, and see Daniel v. Wilson, 5 T. R. 1. Where a landlord apprehended his late tenant for lopping trees under a supposed custom, and gave him in custody for an alleged offence against the Malicious Trespass Act (7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30), it was held that a month's notice of action was necessary if he acted under the bona fide belief that he was acting under the statute. Beechy v. Sides,[5] 9 B. & C. 806; Reed v. Cowmeadow,[6] 6 A. & E. 661; see also Cooke v. Clarke,[7] 10 Bing. 19; Wells v. Ody, 2 C. M. & R. 128. Where the justices granting a warrant for a poor's rate, cautioned the officer not to take goods under a distress for rent, which notwithstanding was done by him; held, in an action for trespass by the landlord, that

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. i. 374. [2] Id. xx. 143. [3] Id. xxiv. 34. [4] Id. xxi. 75. [5] Id. xvii. 502. [6] Id. xxxiii. 165. [7] Id. xxv. 16.

*It is said that if the defendant act in obedience to the warrant he is under the protection of the statute, not only where the magistrate wants *598 jurisdiction *over the subject-matter, but also where the warrant itself is illegal (1). For the policy on which this clause of the Act was founded requires that an officer who really acts in obedience to the warrant of a magistrate, shall be protected (r), and he is not to judge of the legality of the warrant. A warrant recited a complaint upon oath, that a quantity of sugar had been stolen from a ship in the Thames, and that there was just cause to suspect that the same goods were knowingly concealed or deposited in the premises occupied by Price & Co. (the plaintiffs), and then directed the defendants to search for and secure the said goods. The defendants under this warrant seized a quantity of sugar which they found on the premises of the plaintiffs, but which turned out to be the property of the plaintiffs. The Court held that this seizure was made in obedience to the warrant, for the defendants had executed it in the only way in which it was capable of being executed, that is, by making it attach on all goods which fell within the description contained in it; they had acted with as much precision in the execution of the warrant as the magistrates had done in the granting of it (s).

Where the defendant has acted in obedience to such a warrant, it is incumbent on the plaintiff to prove (t) that a demand has been made, or left at the usual place of the defendant's abode, by himself or his attorney, in writing (u), signed by the party demanding the same, of the perusal and copy of such warrant (v). A written demand signed by the attorney is sufficient (x).

The defendant may answer such proof by evidence that he did grant the plaintiff a perusal and copy of the warrant within the six days prescribed by the statute, or even at a subsequent time, provided it were before the commencement of the action (y), and will then be entitled to a verdict, notwithstanding any defect of jurisdiction in the magistrate (z).

the justice having jurisdiction, and being compellable to issue the warrant, the officer was not within sec. 6 of the 24 Geo. 2, c. 44, although there had been no demand of perusal and copy of the warrant. This section was intended to protect officers, where the magistrate issuing the warrant, would have been liable in case the officer had acted strictly pursuant to it. Kay v. Grover,[1] 7 Bing. 312, and 5 M. & P. 140; and see Parton v. Williams,[2] 3 B. & A. 330, and Crozier v. Cundy,[3] 6 B. & C. 232.

(r) See the observations of the Court, 2 B. & P. 161, Price v. Messenger; but qu. whether the officer would be protected where he was directed by the warrant to do that which was manifestly illegal. See the observations of Eyre, C. J., 2 Wils. 291; and 4 Bl. Comm. 291. The words of the statute are, notwithstanding any defect in jurisdiction in any such justice. See Lord Eldon's observations, 2 B. & P. 161. If a magistrate by his warrant direct it to be executed in G., the constable is justified in executing it there, though the place be beyond the magistrate's jurisdiction; per Lord Ellenborough, 5 East, 237.

(s) Price v. Messenger & others, 2 B. & P. 158.

(t) Such proof is usually given as part of the plaintiff's original case; but it seems to be competent to him to rely on proof of the trespass in the first instance, and to prove the demand in reply. See Price v. Messenger, 3 Esp. C. 96. Where the defendant justified as under a distress for a poor's rate, and the question was merely in respect of parochiality; it was held that the defendant, admitting the demand of a copy of the warrant, was entitled to begin. Burrel v. Nicholson, 1 M. & R. 304.

(u) As to proof of the service of the notice, vide supra, 581.

(v) By the stat. 22 G. 2, c. 44, s. 5.

(x) Jory v. Orchard, 2 B. & P. 39.

(y) Jones v. Vaughan, 5 East, 448.

(z) If the magistrate be joined, and a verdict be given against him, then by the stat. 22 G. 2, c. 44, s. 6, the plaintiff shall recover his costs against him, to be taxed in such a manner as to include the costs which the plaintiff is liable to pay to the defendant, for whom the verdict is so found.

(1) [In Pennsylvania, if a constable has pursued his warrant, he can be affected by want of jurisdiction in the magistrate only when he is sued alone, having, after a proper demand, refused to furnish a copy of the warrant for six days: But when he is jointly sued with the magistrate, whether after demand and refusal or not, and has pursued his warrant, he is entitled to an acquittal. Jones v. Hughes, 5 Serg. & Rawle, 302.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xx. 143. [2]Id. v. 307. [3]Id. xiii. 154.

If the officer fail to bring himself within the protection of the statute, he stands in the same situation as at common law; and the rule seems to be that the officer is justified in executing a warrant, legal in itself, granted by one who had a general jurisdiction over the subject-matter, although it was erroneously or corruptly granted in the particular case (a). It would manifestly *be unjust, that a mere ministerial officer, who was bound at his peril *599 to execute the process, should suffer for doing what he supposed to be perfectly legal in the execution of a warrant apparently valid, and which was rendered illegal by facts not within his knowledge. But it is a general principle of law, that where courts of justice assume a jurisdiction which they do not possess, an action of trespass lies against the officer who executes process, because the whole proceeding was coram non judice; and where there is no jurisdiction there is no Judge, and the proceeding is as nothing (b) (1). And therefore where a justice on a conviction on the Game Laws issued a warrant of commitment to prison, without first endeavouring to levy the penalty on the goods of the party convicted, it was held that the constable who had executed the warrant was justified, although the justice was a trespasser (c). So if a justice were maliciously to grant a warrant of commitment for felony, without information on oath (d) (2). But it was held, that if a justice had no authority to apprehend a party in respect of the matter specified in the warrant, but only to issue a summons, then there being no pretence for the jurisdiction, the warrant would be no justification to the officer (e). So if it appear on the face of the warrant that the offence is one over which the justice of peace had no jurisdiction (f). So if he issue a warrant to bring the party before him, at a place out of the county for which he is a justice (g). So if the warrant on the face of it be void and illegal for uncertainty; as, if it be a general warrant to apprehend all persons suspected of a particular offence, without naming any; for it is the duty of a magistrate, and not of the officer, whose duty is ministerial, to judge of the grounds of suspicion; and whether a particular person be guilty or not, is a fact to be decided on a subsequent trial (h). So a churchwarden or overseer is a trespasser in executing a warrant of distress

(a) 2 Haw. c. 13, s. 11. Terry v. Huntington, Hardr. 484; Bac. Ab. tit. Constable, D. Hill v. Bateman, Str. 710. [Paul v. Vankirk, 6 Binney, 124; Warner v. Shed, 10 Johns. 138; Haskell v. Sumner, 1 Pick. 459; Yelv. 42 a. note.] The contrary has been asserted, and the case 10 H. 7, 17, has been much relied on as an authority for the assertion. There it was held that one who by the order of a bishop arrested another for saying that he was not bound to pay tithes, was a trespasser, as it could not be justified by the stat. 2 Hen. 4, c. 15, which authorizes bishops to arrest for heresy. The answer is, that there the order itself was manifestly illegal; besides, it was not in writing. See 2 Haw. c. 13, s. 11.

(b) P. C. in Perkin v. Proctor and another, 2 Wils. 384; case of the Marshalsea, 10 Rep. 76, a. b. As where a rate is unduly made, the warrant of justices will not excuse the churchwardens of the poor, who distrain for it. Nicholls v. Walker & Carter, Cro. Car. 395. See Brown v. Compton, 8 T. R. 422, in which the case of Orby v. Hales, 1 Ld. Ray. 3, was overruled. But see p. 598, note (r).

(c) Hill v. Bateman, Str. 710.

(d) Morgan v. Hughes, 2 T. R. 225. But a magistrate may grant a warrant on reasonable suspicion, although there be no direct charge on oath. Elsee v. Smith,[1] 1 D. & R. 202.

(e) Shergold v. Holloway, Str. 1002; 2 Sess. C. 100. So if a justice of the peace make a warrant to arrest for a debt. Moore v. James, Willes, 122.

(f) Bac. Ab. tit. Constable, D. 14. Hen. 8, 16. Cromp. 147, 8, 9.

(g) Ibid.

(h) 4 Bl. Comm. 291; 3 Burr. 1372; 1 Bl. R. 562; 11 St. Tr. 307, 321; Comm. Jour. 22 & 25; Ass. 1766; 2 Wils.

(1) [See Yelv. 42, a. note (1), and cases there collected. Keilw. 106. Sandford, v. Nichol & al., 13 Mass. Rep. 286. Pearce v. Atwood, ibid. 324. Hoit v. Hook, 14 Mass. Rep. 210. Cable v. Cooper, 15 Johns. 152. Butler v. Potter, 17 ib. 145. Conner v. Commonwealth, 1 Binney, 38.]

(2) [But the officer may justify under a warrant, which is regular on the face of it, without showing that it was founded on a complaint under oath. Sanford v. Nichols & al., 13 Mass. Rep. 286.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xvi. 19.

under a rate illegally made, as in an extra-parochial place, for there was no jurisdiction (i).

It has been laid down by Lord Hale (j), that although an officer who under the warrant of a justice of the peace breaks open doors to search for stolen goods, is justified, although none be eventually found, yet that the owner is justified or not, according to the event; and in Bostock v. Saunders, (k), on similar grounds, it was held that an excise officer was liable *600 in trespass for *breaking and entering the plaintiff's house under a warrant of commissioners, granted upon his own information, to search for tea suspected to have been concealed there (l), none having in fact been found. But in a subsequent and similar case (m) it was held that since the warrant was granted upon the judgment of the commissioners, warranted by oath, the action was not maintainable. The commissioners had authority to issue the warrant; it was legal when it was issued, and when it was executed; and (Ld. Mansfield observed) it would be a solecism to say that the legal execution of a legal warrant could be a trespass. It was also held, that it was not incumbent on the defendant to prove at the trial that he had reasonable or probable grounds for laying the information; for by the Act the oath of the officer is made evidence of the truth of the fact; and the probability of the suspicion is left to be judged of by the magistrate.

Where an officer has improperly allowed one committed in execution till payment of a fine to go at large, he may afterwards retake him (n).

A warrant to levy rent due to a gas-light company, without a previous summons and hearing by the magistrate, is illegal; although a summons and hearing are not in terms required by the Act; and the party suing out the warrant, cannot justify under it, although it would have protected the clerk to the company or an officer (o).

By a constable, &c., without a warrant.

IV. A constable who acts without a warrant, or who does not act in obedience to the warrant, is, it has been held, within the protection of the 8th sect. of the stat. 24 G. 2, c. 44 (p); and the words in the stat. 21 J. 1, c. 12, s. 5, by virtue of their office, apply to all cases where the party intends to act in the character of a constable, although he acts improperly, for where he really acts in the course of his office he wants no protection from the statute (q). And therefore, if a constable of his own authority, and

(i) Nicholls v. Walker, 2 Roll. Ab. 560; 2 Hale, 119; Cro. Car. 394. Vide supra, 598, note (r).

(j) 2 Hale, 150. (k) 2 Bl. R. 912, and 3 Wils. 434.

(l) Under the stat. 10 G. 1, c. 10, s. 13, which enacts, that in case any officer, &c. shall suspect any tea, &c. to be concealed, with intent to defraud, &c., on oath made to the commissioners, &c. setting forth the grounds of his suspicion, it shall be lawful for them to authorize the officer to enter such house, &c. See also as to warrants to search for stolen goods, the statute 22 G. 3, c. 58.

(m) Cooper v. Booth, 3 Esp. C. 135. (n) Butt v. Jones,[1] 1 Gow. 99, cor. Dallas, C. J.

(o) Painter v. Liv. Gas Light Comp., 3 Ad. & Ell. 433; and see Webb v. Batchelour, 1 Vent. 273; Freeman, 396, 407, 457, 488. R. v. Benn, Vent. 273. Harper v. Carr, 7 T. R. 275.

(p) As where a constable, acting under a warrant to seize the goods of A., seizes those of B., the action must be brought within six months. Parton v. Williams,[2] 3 B. & A. 330, overruling the case of Postlethwaite v. Gibson & another, 3 Esp. C. 226. And see Theobald v. Crichmore, 1 B. A. 227; infra, note (q). And Smith v. Wiltshire, 5 Moore, 322; where constables under a warrant to seize black, seized coloured kerseymere cloths.

(q) Per Abbott, L. C. J.[3] 2 Starkie's C. 445; and see Alcock v. Andrews, 2 Esp. C. 541; where Ld. Kenyon observed, that where a man doing an act within the limits of his official authority, exercises that authority improperly, or abuses the discretion placed in him, to such cases the statute extends. And see Theobald v. Crichmore, 1 B. & A. 227; where a constable, who had broke into a house to levy a church-rate, granted under the stat. 53 Geo. 3, c. 127, was held to be within the 12th section, which requires an action for anything done in pursuance of the Act to be brought within three months; and Ld. Ellenborough observed, that the object of the clause was clearly to protect persons acting illegally, but in supposed pursuance of the statute, with a bona fide intention of discharging their duty. Where watchmen having reasonable ground of suspicion that a felony had been committed by the plaintiff, went to his house to apprehend him, but beat him, and used more violence than was necessary, it was held that they were protected by a clause requiring notice pre-without *any warrant, and without any reasonable or probable cause, arrest a person on a charge of felony, and carry him before a magistrate, the venue must be laid in the proper county (r); and he cannot without a warrant justify an arrest for a breach of the peace which is not committed within his own view (s), unless a wound has been given which is likely to occasion death (t); but it is a justification to show that the plaintiff was committed to his custody on a legal charge, provided he acted bonâ fide and without collusion (u). If there be no evidence of collusion, in such a case he is in point of law entitled to a verdict (x). It seems, however, that a constable is not bound to act on a charge made by another, in respect of an offence committed in the absence of the constable (y). And if a reasonable charge be made, it is a good defence to him under the general issue, although he afterwards, and on further inquiry, discharges the accused without taking him before a magistrate (z), and although it afterwards turn out that the charge was wholly unfounded (a). So *although no specific *602 charge be made to the constable, yet if a felony has been committed, and viously to an action for anything done under the statute. Bulter v. Ford, 1 C. & M. 662; 3 Tyr. 677. Reasonableness of belief is a question for the jury. Wedge v. Berkeley,[1] 6 A. & E. 663. A constable who acts only under colour of his office, or to discharge an old grudge, is not entitled to notice. Wedge v. Berkeley,[1] 6 A. & E. 667.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. v. 473. [2]Id. v. 307. [3]Id. iii. 424.

(r) Under the stat. 21 Jac. 1, c. 12, s. 5. Straight v. Gee & Carver,[2] 2 Starkie's C. 445.

(s) Coupey v. Henley & others, 2 Esp. C. 540; 2 Haw. c. 13, s. 8. Where an affray takes place in the presence of a constable, he may either keep the parties in custody until the fray be over, or carry them immediately before a magistrate. Churchill v. Matthews, 2 Sel. N. P. 911. If any one stand in the way of a constable to hinder him from preventing a breach of the peace, the constable is justified in taking him into custody, but not in striking him. Levy v. Edwards,[3] 1 C. & P. 40. And see White v. Edmunds, Peake's C. 89, and infra. Where a party read a notice in church during an interval when no part of the church service was going on, it was held that though a constable was justified in removing or detaining him till the church service was over, he could not afterwards detain him to carry him before a magistrate. See 1 W. & M. c. 18, s. 18. Williams v. Glenister,[4] 2 B. & C. 699. Using loud words in the street, though disorderly, is not an offence which warrants a peace officer in taking a party into custody. Hardy v. Murphy, 2 Esp. C. 294; and see Booth v. Henley,[5] 2 C. & P. 288. A police officer is not justified under 10 Geo. 4, c. 44, s. 7 (Police Act), in laying hold of and removing a person in a crowd, merely because he was conversing with a known reputed thief. Stocker v. Carter,[6] 4 C. & P. 477. The London Police Act, which warrants the apprehension of suspected persons or reputed thieves, does not warrant an apprehension on mere suspicion of a particular felony. Cowles v. Dunbar,[7] 1 M. & M. 37. A watchman cannot justify collaring a person who was turning against the wall of a public street for a particular occasion, to prevent him from so doing. Booth v. Henley,[5] 2 C. & P. 288.

(t) Ibid.

(u) White v. Taylor and Simcoe, 4 Esp. C. 80. Hobbs v. Branscomb, 3 Camp. 420. Cowles v. Dunbar,[7] 1 M. & M. 37. In the former case the defendant Simcoe had made a malicious charge of felony against the plaintiff to the defendant Taylor, a constable at the watch-house, who committed him upon it to the Compter. On an action of trespass, Taylor was acquitted, and Simcoe found guilty. In Isaacs v. Brand,[8] 2 Starkie's C. 167, Lord Ellenborough intimated his opinion in point of law, that a charge made by a principal thief, on his apprehension, against a party for receiving the goods, did not authorize an arrest by the officer without a warrant; but it was left to the jury to say whether there was probable cause. In Hill v. Yates,[9] 2 Moore, 80, where a constable acted under the statute 15 C. 2, c. 2, s 2, which authorizes a constable to arrest persons whom he suspects to be conveying a burthen of young trees, it was said that the question of probable cause was for the Judges, and that it could not be left to the jury. To kill an officer who takes another into custody on a mere charge and without warrant, is murder, though the charge does not specify all the particulars necessary to constitute felony. R. v. Ford, Russ. & Ry. C C. L. 329.

(x) Per Le Blanc, J. in White v. Taylor and Simcoe, 4 Esp. C. 80. (y) Ibid.

(z) M'Cloughan v. Clayton and another, Lancaster Summer Assizes, 1816, cor. Bayley, J.,[10] 2 Starkie's C. 445; and 1 Holt, C. 478.

(a) White v. Taylor, 4 Esp. C. 80. M'Cloughan v. Clayton, 1 Holt. C. 478. In Samuel v. Payne, Doug. 345, Ld. Mansfield said, "If a man charge another with felony, and require an officer to take him into custody, it would be most mischievous if the officer were first bound to try, and at his peril exercise his judgment on the truth of the charge. He that makes the charge should alone be answerable." In that case, after a search warrant granted, no goods having been found, the defendant who first made the charge, and Payne a constable, and his assistant, arrested the plaintiff on a Saturday, he was detained till Monday, and then discharged, after an examination before a magistrate; there was a verdict against all three; but the Court afterwards held that the charge was a sufficient justification to the constable and his assistant, and cited Ward's Case, Clayton, 44, pl. 76; 2 Hale's P. C. 84, 89, 91; and Haw. b. 2, c. 12, s. 13.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxxiii. 167. [2]Id. iii. 424. [3]Id. xi. 306. [4]Id. ix. 227. [5]Id. xii. 130. [6]Id. xix. 482. [7]Id. xii. 265. [8]Id. iii. 297. [9]Id. iv. 62. [10]Id. iii. 161.

information of the felony, and its circumstances, has been communicated to the constable, but no specific charge is made against any one, he will be justified in arresting a party whom he suspects to have committed the felony, but who turns out to be innocent, provided he acted bonâ fide in pursuit of a supposed felon (b). And though no felony has in fact been committed, nor any charge made, yet if a constable has reasonable grouud for suspecting that another has committed a felony, or that he is about to commit one, he may detain that person for the purpose of investigation (c). But he is bound to carry such person before a justice to be examined as soon as he reasonably can (d).

*603 Venue. *Although one who acts in aid of a constable is within the protection of the stat. 21 J. 1, c. 12, s. 5, (e), as to the venue, and as to his defence under the general issue; yet one who is the prime mover, and who sets the constable in motion, by making a complaint and charge to him, is not within the statute (f); and where there is a doubt whether a private person acted

(b) Ledwith v. Catchpole, Cald. 281. Smith had lost linens; Stevens came with Smith to the defendant, a marshalman to the Lord Mayor, and Stevens informed the defendant that one Madox had put the linens into a hackney coach at a public house; that the plaintiff had put his head into the coach there; that afterwards the coach stopped at another house, and that the plaintiff met it there. Smith suspecting the plaintiff to have been concerned in the theft, took the defendant on a Sunday to the plaintiff in order to have him apprehended, but when they came, neither Smith nor any other person charged the plaintiff with felony; Smith said, "I have lost some cloth, but I do not say it was he who stole it; I know nothing of that; but stolen it was." The defendant then arrested the plaintiff, who was discharged the next day by the magistrate. The defendant pleaded the general issue, and the plaintiff had a verdict for 20*l.*; but the court granted a new trial. Lord Mansfield observed, "the first question is, whether a felony has been committed or not? And then the fundamental distinction is, that if a felony has been actually committed, a private person may, as well as a peace officer, arrest; if not, the question always turns upon this, was the arrest bona fide; was this act done fairly, and in pursuit of an offender, or by design, or malice and ill-will? Upon a highway robbery being committed, an alarm spread, and particulars circulated, and in the case of crimes still more serious, upon notice given to all the sea-ports, it would be a terrible thing, if, under probable cause, an arrest could not be made; and felons are usually taken up upon descriptions in advertisements. Many an innocent man has been and may be taken up upon such suspicion; but the mischief and inconvenience to the public in this point of view is comparatively nothing. It is of great consequence to the police of the country; I think there should be a new trial." Note, that Buller, J. doubted whether the constable was justifiable, since to hold that he was, would imply that he was to some purposes a judicial officer, which he said was going father than had yet been adjudged him: tamen qu. for to a certain extent, even a private person is justified, or not, in arresting, according to the particular circumstances of suspicion on which he must exercise his discretion. See Haw. b. 3, c. 12, s. 2; and 4 Taunt. 34. Secus, in case of misdemeanor. Fox v. Gaunt,[1] 3 B. & Ad. 798. A constable arrests B., a respectable person, on information by A. that B. had robbed him; in confirmation of which a supposed intercepted letter is shown him; held, that it was properly left to the jury to say whether the circumstances afforded reasonable ground for the arrest, and whether the jury in his situation would have so acted. Davis v. Russell,[2] 5 Bing. 354.

(c) Wright v. Court and others,[3] 4 B. & C. 596. Davis v. Russell,[2] 5 Bing. 354. A plea that the constable detained the plaintiff for three days, in order that the party whose goods had been stolen might have an opportunity of collecting his witnesses, and bringing them to prove the felony, was held to be bad on demurrer. And the Court seem to have been of opinion, that the handcuffing a party so arrested, could not be justified without showing an attempt to escape, or that it was otherwise necessary. [3]4 B. & C. 596.

(d) Beckwith v. Philby,[4] 6 B. & C. 635. Whether the constable had reasonable cause for suspicion was a question of fact for the jury; per Lord Tenterden, C. J. Ib. Watchmen and beadles may at common law arrest and detain for examination persons walking in the streets at night, whom there is reasonable ground to suspect of felony, although there be no proof of a felony having been committed. Lawrence v. Hedger, 3 Taunt. 14. Watchmen may imprison any person who encourages prisoners in their custody to resist. White v. Edmonds, Peake's C. 89. The London Police Act, 3 G. 4, c. 55, s. 21, which authorizes the apprehension of suspected persons, applies to reputed thieves only, and not to persons suspected of particular thefts. Cowles v. Dunbar, 1 M. & M. 37. Where, under the 21 J. 1, c. 12, s. 5, two of the defendants in an action of trespass and false imprisonment, being constables and acting in aid of the other defendant, were entitled to an acquittal; held, that the plea stating them to be acting in aid of the other defendant, and not he in aid of them, the protection did not extend to him. Bond v. Rust,[5] 2 C. & P. 342.

(e) Supra, 600.

(f) Mac Cloughan v. Clayton,[6] 1 Holt's C. 478; 2 Starkie's C. 445. Because, as is said, the person who puts the constable in motion, is prima facie a trespasser, and therefore ought to allege and prove the truth of the suggestions on which he induced the constable to act. And though two of the defendants, being constables, are within the statute, and entitled to an acquittal by reason of a wrong venue, another defendant, who pleads that the other defendants, as constables, acted in his aid, not being a constable, is not entitled to an acquittal, as the prime mover, or merely acted in aid of the constable who undertook to act as of his own authority, is a question of fact for the jury (g). A private person may, as well as a constable, justify the arrest of one actually guilty of treason or felony (h), or who has given a wound likely to prove mortal. A defendant cannot justify in aid of an officer who had himself no authority to do the act (i). Defence by a private person, without warrant.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxiii. 187. [2]Id. xv. 463. [3]Id. x. 412. [4]Id. xiii. 287. [5]Id. xii. 160. [6]Id. iii. 161.

If a felony has been committed, although not by the party arrested, a private person may justify the arrest, if he acted bonâ fide upon fair and sufficient grounds of suspicion (k); such a defence must, however, be specially pleaded (l). Where no treason or felony has been committed, or dangerous wound given by any one, it seems that a private person cannot at *common law justify an arrest upon suspicion (m); except, indeed, where the hue and cry has been raised, and there is no reason to suppose that it is groundless (n). A private person cannot arrest for any offence inferior to felony, not committed within his view (o); but if an affray be committed in his presence, he may stay the affrayers till the heat be over, and then deliver them to the constable (p), and also stop those who are going to join *604 as acting in their aid. Bond v. Rust,[1] 2 C. & P. 342. A. being robbed, suspects B. and delivers him in charge to a constable present; trespass is maintainable against A. Stonehouse v. Elliot, 6 T. R. 315. Where a stat. authorized a constable to arrest on the information of another, but the defendant, instead of merely giving information to the constable, directed him to arrest, it was held that he acted as principal, and was not entitled to notice, although he acted bona fide. Hopkins v. Crowe,[2] 4 A. & E. 774.

(g) Straight v. Gee and Carver,[3] 2 Starkie's C. 445; where it was so left to the jury by Abbot, L. C. J. Bond v. Rust, 2 C. & P. 342. Where a prosecutor having obtained a warrant points out the party to the constables, he acts in their aid. Nathan v. Cohen, 3 Camp. 257; per Ld. Ellenborough.

(h) Haw. b. 2, c. 12, s. 15. It is there said, that a private person who is not himself induced to believe that the party is guilty, would not be justified in arresting him by command of a constable. [See Wakely v. Hart, 6 Binney, 316.]

(i) A constable seizing a person by the direction of a custom-house officer, who had himself no power to seize, is not within the protection of the Custom-house Act. Norton v. Miller,[4] 2 Chitty, 140.

(k) See Haw. b. 2, c. 12, s. 8, 9, 10, &c. where a number of justifying causes of suspicion are enumerated, some of which are very large and indefinite, such as "Common fame,"—"Keeping company with persons of scandalous reputation,"—"Behaving in such a manner as to betray a consciousness of guilt." It is laid down as essential, that the party himself who arrests must be induced by the grounds of suspicion to believe the party arrested to be guilty. See Lord Mansfield's observations in Ledwith v. Catchpole, Cald. 291. Whether the grounds of suspicion are sufficient to justify the party so arresting seems to be a question of law. (Haw. b. 2, c. 12, s. 18; 2 Inst. 52; 2 Hale, 78; Finch, 340. Mure v. Kay, 4 Taunt. 34.) And the grounds must be set forth in pleading the justification, in order that the Court may judge whether the suspicion was reasonable (Ibid.); and unless the plea set forth the causes of suspicion with certainty, it will be bad on demurrer. Ibid. The plea will be bad, unless it show a felony committed. If a constable join in a plea with one who gave the defendant in charge, if it be bad for one, it will be bad for both; and per Best, C. J., there is no difference between seizing a man and ordering him to be seized. Hedges v. Chapman,[5] 2 Bing. 523.

(l) See the last note; and Mure v. Kay, 4 Taunt. 34.

(m) See Lord Mansfield's observations in Ledwith v. Catchpole, Cald. 291. Lord Tenterden's, in Beckwith v. Philby,[6] 6 B. & C. 635. A private person, without warrant, may arrest, 1st, If there be a felony done; 2dly, if the party arresting has probable cause, which is traversable; 3dly, the arrest must be by the party suspecting. Sir Anthony Ashley's Case, 12 Co. 92. In trespass and false imprisonment upon a charge of felony, held that evidence showing that the defendant had reasonable grounds of suspicion was admissible in reduction of damages. Chinn v. Morris,[7] 1 Ry. & M. 244.

(n) Haw. b. 2, c. 12, s. 16. The Hue and Cry is the pursuit of an offender from town to town till he be taken; which all who are present when a felony is committed, or dangerous wound given, are by the common as well as statute law bound to raise against the offenders who escape, on pain of fine and imprisonment. 3 Inst. 116, 7; 1 Hale, 588; 2 Hale, 99, 102; Haw. b. 2, c. 12, s. 5. As to the mode of raising the Hue and Cry, see Haw. b. 2, c. 12, s. 6. But in the case of Guppy v. Brittlebank, 5 Price, 525, where the defendant pleaded the general issue, and a justification that the plaintiff, at Ashborne fair, tendered a forged note to T. M., and that the plaintiff had probable cause to suspect, and did suspect, that the plaintiff had feloniously uttered the note, knowing it to be forged; wherefore the defendant, &c., and verdict thereon for the defendant, the Court held that the arrest, though without warrant, was justifiable. Suspicion that a party has on a former occasion committed a misdemeanor, will not justify a private person in apprehending him without a warrant. Fox v. Gaunt,[8] 3 B. & Ad. 798.

(o) But see Guppy v. Brittlebank, 5 Price, 525, supra.

(p) Haw. b. 2, c. 13, s. 8. [Phillips v. Trull, 11 Johns. 486.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xii. 160. [2] Id. xxxi. 177. [3] Id. iii. 424. [4] Id. xviii. 279. [5] Id. ix. 508. [6] Id. xiii. 237. [7] Id. xii. 170. [8] Id. xxiii. 187.

either party (q). So also a private person may at common law lawfully lay hold of one committing treason or felony, or doing any act which would manifestly endanger the life of another, and detain him till it may reasonably be supposed that he has changed his purpose (r); or may justify the breaking into the house of another for the purpose of preventing him from committing felony (s).

KNOWLEDGE.

See tit. Coin.—Forgery.—Negligence.—Notice.

LANDLORD AND TENANT.

See Ejectment.—Use and Occupation.—Waste.

LARCENY.

Particulars of proof.

Upon an indictment for larceny (t) it is necessary to prove, in ordinary cases, 1st. A caption and asportation; 2dly. With a felonious intention (A); 3d. Of the goods and chattels of another, as described in the indictment. And where there has been a bailment of the goods to the prisoner by the owner, it is further necessary to prove, either, 1st, a felonious intent on the part of the prisoner, in procuring the delivery to him, which defeats
*605 the bailment, *or that the delivery was procured by force or duress; or, 2dly, that before the asportation the bailment had been determined by the tortious act of the bailee; or, 3dly, that the bailment had been determined according to the intention of the parties.

Caption and asportation.

1st. A caption and asportation; the latter seems necessarily to include the former, although the converse is not true, for there may be a taking into the possession without an asportation or removal. To constitute a caption, the property must have been taken into the possession of the prisoner. Therefore, where the prisoner cut the girdle of another, and in consequence the purse fell to the ground, but was not otherwise taken possession of by the prisoner, it was held to be no felony (u), but a momentary possession is sufficient (v). It need not be by force (x); and it is not purged by a re-delivery (y); any the least removal is sufficient to constitute an asportation (z). As if plate be taken out of a trunk and laid beside it (a); or the goods be removed from one end of the waggon to the other (b); or an ear-ring be forced by violence from the ear, and fall upon the hair (c). or a bag be lifted from the bottom of the boot of a coach, though not taken out (d). Proof that the skins of sheep were taken, and the carcases left, is

(q) Ibid. b. 1, c. 63.
(r) Ibid. b. 2, c. 12, s. 19.
(s) Handcock v. Baker, 2 B. & P. 260. The defendant in that case had broken into the plaintiff's house, to prevent him from committing murder on his wife; Chambre, J. said, it is lawful for a private person to do anything to prevent the perpetration of a felony.
(t) See the different definitions of larceny, East's P. C. 533. The true meaning of larceny is, "the felonious taking the goods of another, without his consent and against his will, with intent to convert them to the use of the taker." Per Grose, J., in delivering the opinion of the Court. Hammon's Case, Leach, 1089. See 4th Report of the Criminal Law Commissioners.
(u) 1 Haw. c. 54; 1 Hale's P. C. 532; Dalt. 100; Cromp. 34.
(v) R. v. Peat, Leach, 367; Hale, 533; 3 Inst. 69.
(x) East's P. C. 687.
(y) 3 Inst. 69; Staun. 27; 1 Hale, P. C. 533.
(z) 1 Haw. c. 33.
(a) Kel. 31; 1 Hale, P. C. 508.
(b) R. v. Corslet, Leach, 272; S. C. East's P. C. 556.
(c) R. v. Lapier, Leach, 360; 1 Haw. c. 33; 3 Inst. 108, 109; 2 Vent. 215; 7 Ass. 39; 1 Hale's P. C. 508; Dalis. 21; Cromp. 30. R. v. Simpson, Kel. 31.
(d) R. v. Walsh, Moody's C. C. 14.

(A) (A person who is deaf and dumb is liable to a criminal prosecution for larceny, and he may be tried upon an indictment, as on a plea of not guilty, the purport being explained to him by signs, by some person sworn to interpret the indictment as it shall be read by the clerk. Commonwealth v. Hill, 14 Mass. R. 207.)

evidence of the stealing of the sheep (e). The pulling of wool from the back of a lamb is a sufficient asportation (f). There must, however, be an actual and complete removal of the thing from the place, after it has been taken into the possession of the prisoner. And, therefore, the setting a bale of goods on one end without removing it to a different place, is not an asportation (g); and where a purse taken by the prisoner from the pocket of another, remained still attached by a string to keys in the pocket, it was held that the asportation was not complete (h); and so it was held where goods remained attached by a string to part of the shop (i).

A caption and asportation by the hand of one, is that of all who are present aiding and abetting (k) (A); and it is not essential to prove that they were done immediately and directly by the prisoner; it is sufficient to show that he committed the act by means of an innocent instrument (l). After the goods have once been stolen the prisoner is guilty of a fresh felony wherever he carries the goods, for the property is not altered; and therefore, where *goods are stolen in one county and carried into another, the prisoner is guilty of a felony in the latter county (B). *606

Felonicè.

2dly, That the taking was felonious.—It is the peculiar province of the jury to decide upon the intention of the prisoner (m). The question, whether a particular taking was felonious, is a question of law arising principally upon the intention of the prisoner, as found by the jury. The felonious quality consists in the intention of the prisoner to defraud the owner, (e) R. v. Rawlins, East's P. C. 617. Upon an indictment on 14 Geo. 2, c. 6, charging the party in one count with stealing, and in a second with killing a sheep, with intent to steal the whole of the carcase, it appearing that the sheep had been killed with intent to steal the fat, held that the prisoner might be convicted on the second count; but that there being no evidence of any removal of the animal whilst living, the first count could not be supported. Williams's Case, 1 Ry. & M. C. 107, S. P. as to stealing lambs, Loom's Case, ib. 160.

(f) R. v. Martin, Leach, 205. (g) R. v. Cherry, East's P. C. 556.

(h) R. v. Wilkinson, 1 Hale's P. C. 508; East's P. C. 556.

(i) Cherry's Case, East's P. C. 556. Farrell's Case, Leach's C. C. L. 266; East's P. C. 557. Secus, where a mail-bag was lifted from the bottom of the boot of the coach, although not entirely removed from the boot. R. v. Walsh, 1 R. & M. (C. C. L.)

(k) See tit. Accessory.

(l) See tit. Accessory; East's P. C. 555; 1 Haw. c. 33, s. 8; 1 Hale's P. C. 507; 3 Ins. 108.

(m) East's P. C. 685; Summ. 61; 1 Hale's P. C. 504. Secreting a letter, containing bills, with the intention merely of cheating the revenue of the postage, is not within the 52 Geo. 3, c. 143, s. 2; Sharpe's Case, 1 Ry. & M. C. 125. Where the prisoner took by violence from a gamekeeper wires and a pheasant, which he had set, and which the latter had found and seized, and were claimed by the prisoner as his own, held that it was for the jury to say, whether he took them under a bona fide impression that he was only getting back his own property, however he might be liable to penalties for having them in his possession. R. v. Hall,[1] 3 C. & P. 409. Where the jury found that the prisoner's intention, ab initio, was to get goods out of the prosecutor's (a tradesman) possession, upon a pretended sale for cash, and then clandestinely to remove them, and convert them to his own use, it was held to be a felonious taking. Campbell's Case, 1 Ry. & M. 179. So where the jury found that the prisoner never intended to pay for oxen which he had bargained for for ready money, and the owner had not consented to their being taken away. Gilbert's Case, 1 Ry. & M. 185. Pratt's Case, ib. 250.

(A) (See State v. Hardin, 2 Dev. & But. 407. Morton v. The People, 8 Cow. 137.)

(B) (A foreigner committing larceny abroad, coming into the state of New York, and bringing the stolen property with him, may be indicted, convicted, and punished in the same manner as if the larceny had been originally committed there. People v. Burke, 11 Wend. 129. But see People v. Gardner, 2 John. R. 477. People v. Schenck, ibid. 494.)

(1) [If a person aid and abet in stealing goods in one county, and they be afterwards carried into another county without his assistance, where he is afterwards concerned in the possession and disposal of them, he is guilty of larceny in the latter county. Commonwealth v. Dewitt, 10 Mass. Rep. 154.

It is held in North Carolina and New York, that stealing property in another state, and bringing it there is not there punishable as larceny. The State v. Brown, 1 Hey. 160. Secus, in Connecticut and Massachusetts. The State v. Ellis, 3 Conn. Rep. 186. Commonwealth v. Cullens, 1 Mass. Rep. 116. And a person receiving in Massachusetts goods stolen in another state, knowing them to be stolen, may be there punished as an accessory after the fact. Commonwealth v. Andrews, 2 Mass. Rep. 14.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiv. 373.

and to apply the thing stolen to his own use (n) (A). It is sufficient if the prisoner intend to appropriate the value of the chattel, and not the chattel itself, to his own use; as where the owner of goods steals them from his own servant or bailee, in order to charge him with the amount (o). The intention must exist at the time of the taking, and no subsequent felonious intention will render the previous taking felonious; as where goods are removed by the prisoner during a fire, with intent to preserve them for the owner, and he afterwards determines to appropriate them to his own use (p); or where a bailment is procured without any felonious intent on the part of the bailee, and he afterwards, and before the determination of the bailment, converts the property (q). The usual indication of a felonious intent is the secrecy and privacy with which the act is done, and the asserting a dominion over the property by the prisoner, or the actual conversion of it, by sale or otherwise, to his own use (B). On the other hand, the inference of a felonious intent may be rebutted by evidence to prove, that the taking was in joke; was by mistake; was accidental; that the goods had been lost by the owner, and found by the prisoner (r) (1).

*607 *The notoriety and openness of the taking, where possession has not been gained by force or by stratagem (s), is a strong circumstance to rebut

(n) See the case of R. v. Morfit & Conway, cor. Abbott, J. Maidstone Lent Assizes, 1810, and afterwards by the Judges. It was there held that the taking of oats by a servant, with intent to give them to the master's horses, from the granary of the master, by means of a false key, was a felony. See Burn's J. by Chetw. vol. 3, p. 76. So it was decided by Thompson, C. B. that the taking a horse by stealth from the stable of a prosecutor, and destroying it by throwing it down into a coal-pit, in order to defeat a prosecution founded on a former larceny in stealing the same horse, amounted to a felony. But where the prisoner took the horses of the prosecutor with intent to ride them, and then to leave them without returning them, it was held to be trespass only. Dissentiente Grose, and dubitante Ld. Alvanley, R. v. Strong & Phillips, 3 Burn, 177, 23d edit. Miners employed to bring ore to the surface are paid according to the quantity raised; a miner removing a portion from another's heap to his own, is not guilty of stealing the goods of the owner of the mine. R. v. Webb, Moody's C. C. 431.

(o) 7 Hen. 6. f. 43.

(p) R. v. Leigh, East's P. C. 694. Mucklow's Case, 1 Ry. & M. 160.

(q) Infra. 609; East's P. C. 594, 837.

(r) But even in this case the taking must have been bona fide, and not under a mere pretence of finding, although the property has been deposited in an unusual place, as in a hay-mow (2 East's P. C. 664; 1 Hale, 506; 2 Hale, 507); or has been left in a hackney-coach by mistake (Lamb's Case, East's P. C. 664; Wynnes's Case, ibid.; Seares's Case, 1 Leach, 215, n.); or be found on the highway, if the prisoner knew the owner (R. v. Walters, 3 Burn's J. 180, 23d edit.); or be taken out of a bureau sent to be repaired. Cartwright v. Green, 8 Ves. 405; or be taken from a seat by the roadside. Milburne's Case, 1 Lewin's C. C. 251. Where the prisoner at first opened a letter, believing it intended for himself, and finding it to contain bills, appropriated them to his own use, held not to amount to larceny, the party not having any animus furandi at the time he received it. Mucklow's Case, 1 Ry. & M. 160.

(s) The mere doing it openly and by force does not excuse from felony. Kel. 82; 2 Ray. 276; 2 Vent. 94; Kel. 83. And in general, the taking with a felonious intention without lawful consent, by means of any trick or stratagem, amounts to felony. As where a tradesman is prevailed on to bring his goods to an appointed place, under pretence that the price shall be paid; and having been prevailed on to leave them there in the care of a third person, the prisoner fraudulently gets them from that person without paying the price. R. v. Campbell, Moody's C. C 179; and see R. v. Gilbert, ib. 185; R. v. Pratt, ib. 250.

(A) (To constitute larceny the possession must be acquired animo furandi. The People v. Anderson, 14 John. R. 294. Larceny may be committed by a man stealing his own property where the intent is to charge another with the value of it. The People v. Palmer, 10 Wend. 165. It is felony for a man who elopes with another's wife to take his goods, though with the consent and at the solicitation of the wife. People v. Schuyler, 6 Cow. 572.)

(B) (Where a shawl was dropped in an exhibition room, and picked up by the defendant, placed in a conspicuous situation, and afterwards appropriated to his own use clandestinely, it was held that he was not guilty of larceny. State v. Roper, 3 Dev. 473. So where the defendant found a pair of saddle-bags in the common highway, on which there were no marks by which the owner could be identified, it was held not to be larceny, the felonious intent being wanting. Tyler v. The People, 1 Breese, 277. See also Porter v. The State, Martin & Yerger, 526. Wright v. The State, 5 Yerger, 154. State v. Braden, 2 Penn. R. 68.)

(1) [The bona fide finder of lost goods cannot be held guilty of larceny by any subsequent act of his, in concealing or appropriating them to his own use. The People v. Anderson, 14 Johns. 294. Sed vide 2 Tyler, 379, The State v. Jenkins.]

the inference of a felonious intention (t); and it is a good defence to show that the taking was bonâ fide under process of law, or under a supposed claim of right, however unfounded such claim may be. The law has not deemed it to be so necessary to provide against an open and notorious invasion of property, for which the party may have his remedy against the known trespasser by a civil action, as against a taking accompanied with secrecy, or effected by force and terror, or by artifice. It is a question of fact, whether the goods were taken bonâ fide, under a claim of right, or with a roguish and felonious intent (u). Where the taking is obtained by fraud or stratagem, it may amount to felony, although the owner consented to the act in ignorance of the prisoner's real intention; and proof that the prisoner obtained possession of the property by means of stratagem and artifice is strong evidence of the felonious intent. It is, however, to be observed, that no intention will make the taking felonious where the owner intends to part with the property altogether to the prisoner; in such case the party is liable to an indictment for obtaining the property by false pretences; and this seems to be the strong test of distinction between a larceny, and an obtaining of money or goods by false pretence (v). If by means of a false pretence the prosecutor be induced to part with the temporary possession only, reserving a right of ownershsp, the prisoner, provided he intend to appropriate the property to his own use, is guilty of felony (A); but if the owner be induced by the artifice to part with his whole interest, without any reservation, the defendant is guilty of a misdemeanor only (w).

3. The proof of the chattels stolen must of course correspond with the description in the indictment (x) (B). In order to satisfy the allegation that *the property was of the goods and chattels of the person specified, it must be proved, either that that person was the owner (1), or that he

Ownership. Possession. *608

(t) [The State v. Smith, 2 Tyler, 272.] It may be that the taking is no more than a trespass, and the circumstances in such case must guide the judgment; as, where a man takes another's property openly before him or others, otherwise than by apparent robbery, or having possessed himself of them, avows the fact before he is questioned. 1 Hale, 507; East's P. C. 661. See R. v. Phillips & Strong, 2 East's P. C. 662.

(u) 1 Hale, 507; 1 Haw. c. 33, s. 8; Farr's Case, Kel. 43.

(v) And therefore where the servant of a pawnbroker, having general authority to act in his master's business, delivered up a pledge to the pawner on receiving a parcel from him, which he supposed to contain valuables which he had just before seen in the pawner's possession, it was held to be no larceny, for the party authorized intended to transfer the entire property. R. v. Jackson, Moody's C. C. 119. Secus, where a prisoner obtains from a servant a parcel, by falsely pretending to be the person to whom it is directed, for the servant has no authority to part with it but to the right person. R. v. Longstreeth, Moody's C. C. 137. And see R. v. Pratt, Moody's C. C. 250.

(w) Supra, 606, note (m); infra, 613.

(x) See tit. VARIANCE. If an animal, living or dead, have the same appellation, and it makes no difference in the charge whether it be living or dead, it may be described when dead by the appellation given it when living. R. v. Puckering, Moody's C. C. 242. Upon an indictment for receiving a lamb, knowing, &c., held that it was immaterial as to the prisoner's offence, whether the lamb was alive or dead at the time of receiving. Puckering's Case, 1 Moody's C. C. 242. The stealing parchment records of the Court of C. P. not relating to the realty, is the subject of larceny to the value of the parchment. Walker's Case, 1 Ry. & M. 155; secus, if they relate to the realty. See R. v. Westbeer, Leach, C. C. 12. Where the prisoner being sent to the post-office received a letter containing the halves of bank-notes, which he embezzled; held that they were "goods and chattels" of the master. R. v. Mead,[1] 4 C. & P. 535. On an indictment under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 26, for stealing one "sheep," it appearing to have been under a year old or a lambteg, the variance was held to be fatal, the Act having the word "lamb." R. v. Birkett,[2] 4 C. & P. 216. A set of new handkerchiefs, in a piece, may be described as so many handkerchiefs, though not separated from each other. R. v. Nibbs, Moody's C. C. 25. The goods of a ready-furnished lodging may be described as the lodger's. R. v. Brunswicke, 1b. 25.

(A) (See State v. Long, 1 Hayw. 154.)

(B) (See Hooker v. State of Ohio, 4 Ohio R. 350.)

(1) [Bees are feræ naturæ, and although confined in the top of a tree by the owner of the tree, yet while had the legal custody of the goods; for the offence of larceny includes a trespass, to which possession is essential (y) (1), and therefore unless the person whose property is alleged to have been stolen be either actually or constructively in possession, the taking cannot amount to a larceny. But it is a general maxim, that the ownership of goods draws after it the possession; and, therefore, it is sufficient to prove that the goods are the property of the party whose goods and chattels they are alleged to be in the indictment, although they were at the time in the actual possession of some other person, as a servant or agent; and so it is sufficient to prove that the goods were in the legal custody of the person alleged to be the owner in the indictment, who has the actual legal custody of the goods, as the agent or bailee of the actual owner. For such possesson and interest are sufficient against a wrong-doer (z) (2). Where, however, the prisoner himself had possession of the goods delivered to him with the consent of the owner, a different consideration, as will presently be seen, arises; and the question will be, whether the prisoner had a bare charge of the goods, the possession of which still remained in the owner, or he had acquired a legal possession of them distinct from that of the owner (a).

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 514. [2]Id. xix. 351.

On a charge of stealing bills of exchange, against one employed in the Post-office, it is not necessary to prove the execution or making of the bill (b) (A).

Of the party described (c).—In order to satisfy the allegation that the (y) 1 Haw. c. 33; Kel. 24; Dalt. 3, c. 101; East's P. C. 554.

(z) See Criminal Pleadings. A box belonging to a benefit club, which by the rules was to be deposited with one of the keys, with the landlord, was held to be properly laid as the property of the landlord, although he had no key at the time of its being stolen. R. v. Wymer,[1] 4 C. & P. 391; and see R. v. Willis, Moody's C. C. 375.

(a) Vide infra, 610, 613. And see Campbell's Case, Leach, 942, 3d edit., where a prisoner decamped with a bank-note delivered to him by his landlady that he might change it, and held to be larceny. R. v. Parker, East's P. C. 671. R. v. Nicholson & others, East's P. C. 699. Adams's Case, Russel, 1060. Walsh's Case, 4 Taunt. 258, 284.

(b) R. v. Ellis, Russ. & R. C. C. L. 188.

(c) As to variance in the description of the property or owner, see Crim. Plead. 2 ed. 193, 201–2. Where they remain there and are not secured in a hive, they are not the subject of larceny. Wallis v. Mease, 3 Binney, 546. A mere letter is not a subject of larceny. Payne v. The People, 6 Johns. 103. Nor anything which is destitute of both intrinsic and artificial value. The State v. Bryant, 2 Car. Law Repos. 269. Therefore an indictment was quashed, which charged the defendant with stealing "one half ten shilling bill, of the currency of the State." Ibid. And therefore, on an indictment for stealing a bank-note, it must be proved to have been genuine. The State v. Tillery, 1 Nott & M'Cord, 9. But a slave is the property of his master, and a subject of larceny. Bryce v. The State, 2 Overton's Rep. 254. Plumpton v. Cook, 2 Marsh. 45. The State v. Hall, 1 Taylor, 126.]

---

(1) [In Pennsylvania v. Becomb & al. Addison's Rep. 386, it is said that taking deer-skins, hung up in the woods at an Indian hunting camp, may be larceny, though the skins were not in the possession of any one at the time.]

(2) [The legal possession which a master has of his runaway slave is sufficient to warrant an indictment for stealing him from his master, after he has run away. The State v. Miles, 2 Nott & M'Cord, 1. The State v. Davis, 2 Car. Law Repos. 291.]

(A) (In an indictment for the larceny of bank-notes, it is not indispensably necessary to produce the notes upon the trial. Moore v. Commonwealth, 2 Leigh, 701. Nor is it necessary to prove that the note is a genuine one and of some value, by any positive evidence, if the jury shall be satisfied that the person stole the bank-note and afterwards passed it away as a genuine note. Cummings v. Commonwealth, 2 Virg. Cas. 128. But on the trial of an indictment for stealing foreign bank bills, it is incumbent upon the prosecutor to produce at least prima facie evidence of the existence of such banks and of the genuineness of the bills. The People v. Caryl, 12 Wend. 549. As to bills it is not necessary to prove by positive testimony that the names subscribed to them were in the hand-writing of the officers of the banks, but should at least be proved by a witness familiar with the bills that he believed them to be genuine; evidence of the same character and degree should be given which on indictments for forging foreign bills is usually resorted to, to prove them counterfeit. Ibid. When a note is given, payable in foreign coin, the value of each coin in current money must be averred in an indictment for larceny, and under such averment, evidence of the value may be received. United States v. Hardyman, 13 Peters, 176.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 436.

property stolen was of the goods and chattels of A. B. as alleged in the indictment, it is sufficient to show that A. B. had the legal custody of the property, although the ownership resided in another (d) (1); as where the goods are stolen from a servant in the absence of the master. For every larceny includes a *trespass, which is an injury to the possession; and there- *609 fore it seems that where property has been lost by the owner and found by the prisoner, the taking cannot be felonious, since no one was in possession (e).

In Phipoe's case (f) it was held that the taking was not felonious, since the note had never been for a moment in the peaceable possession of the prosecutor. But it is a general rule of law, that the right of property draws after it the possession (g); therefore it is sufficient to prove the ownership, according to the allegation in the indictment, although the alleged owner never had the actual possession; and in general the possession of an agent is the possession of the principal, with respect to third persons, even although the agent or bailee be not responsible to the principal for the loss of the goods (h). But as between the owner and a bailee, the possession of the latter is not necessarily the possession of the former, as will afterwards be seen. It is a consequence from the general principle, that a joint-tenant, or tenant in common, cannot be guilty of larceny in respect of the joint property, since he has a right to the possession (i). So where the wife delivers possession of the husband's goods, the person taking them upon such delivery is not guilty of larceny, since she has an interest in the goods (k); but it is otherwise where the goods are obtained by force or fraud from the wife (l). The property is not altered by a tort; and therefore if B. steal the goods of A., and C. steal the same from B., the property still remains in A., and may be so described (m). So if B. receive goods from the sheriff under a tortious replevin (n).

Every larceny includes a trespass, and is an injury against the possession of the owner; and therefore in general a bailee who has possession of the goods under a contract cannot be guilty of felony in stealing them, so long the owner might easily have been ascertained, an indictment for stealing the goods of a person unknown is not maintainable. R. v. Robinson, cor. Richards, C. B., Durham, 1817. Where the indictment alleged that certain persons unknown committed a burglary, and that the prisoner received the goods, &c. and it appeared that an indictment had been found the same assizes, charging A. B. as the principal, and the prisoner as accessory to the same robbery, ten of the Judges were of opinion that the prisoner was rightly convicted. R. v. Bush, Russ. & Ry. C. C L. 372.

Bailment, where existing.

(d) See the cases Crim. Pleadings, 2 ed. 201–2.

(e) 1 Haw. c. 33; 3 Ins. 102; 1 Hale, P. C. 504; East's P. C. 25, 554; but see above, 606, note (r). [See The State v. Brader, 2 Overton, 68.]

(f) Leach, C. C. L. 3d edit. 774. A banker's cheque is delivered to a servant in order to be delivered by him to G. M.; it is felony in the servant to appropriate the amount to his own use. R. v. Heath, 2 Moody's C. C. L. 33. And it may be described as a banker's cheque of the value specified, without stating the drawees to be bankers. Ib.

(g) See the dictum of Gould, J., East's P. C. 674.

(h) Crim. Pl. 2d ed. 203.

(i) 1 Hale's P. C. 513. East's P. C. 558.

(k) 1 Haw. c. 33, s. 19; Harrison's Case, Leach, 56; East's P. C. 559. R. v. Clarke, Moody's C. C. 375. Qu. For a stranger acting in conjunction with the wife (with whom he has committed adultery) may commit a felony in taking the husband's goods. R. v. Tolfree, Moody's C. C. 243. In R. v. Willis, Moody's C. C. 375, it was held that a wife could not be guilty of stealing the property of a friendly society deposited in her husband's custody.

(l) 1 Hale's P. C. 514; East's P. C. 558; St. West. 2, c. 34.

(m) 1 Haw. c. 33; 3 Ins. 102; 1 Hale's P. C. 504; 13 Ed. 4, 9, 10.

(n) 1 Hale's P. C. 507; 3 Ins. 108; Kel. 43; 1 Sid. 254; Raym. 276.

(1) [In Massachusetts, evidence that the person, whose the chattels described in an indictment for larceny are alleged to be, is mere bailee of an officer who had attached them—having engaged to redeliver them on demand—will not support the indictment; as he is a mere servant of the officer, and has no property in the chattels. Commonwealth v. Morse, 14 Mass. Rep. 217. Sed Vide 1 N. Hamp. Rep. 289, Poole v. Symonds.]

as the contract continues undetermined (A). As where a tailor is entrusted with cloth, or a carrier with goods, to be carried, or a goldsmith with plate (o), or a weaver delivers materials to workmen out of the house to be woven (p). In such and all other cases where the party has a legal possession of the property distinct from that of the owner, he is not guilty of felony in appropriating the goods, unless indeed, as will afterwards be seen, the possession be obtained by fraud, and with a felonious intent to steal the goods, for then the party acquires no legal possession as against the owner, for the law will not permit him to take advantage of his own wrong; and in point of law no contract exists (q).

*610 Proof to defeat a bailment.

*Where a person has a legal possession of the goods distinct from that of the owner, he cannot be guilty of felony so long as the legal possession subsists; and therefore, where such distinct possession has been given, further evidence is essential to answer or rebut the inference of a legal possession by the prisoner. But it is to be observed, that to render this necessary, the possession must be distinct from that of the owner, for if the party have but a bare charge of the goods under the immediate control and superintendence of the owner, without any possession distinct from that of the owner, he may be guilty of larceny in taking the goods, notwithstanding his manual tenure of them; and therefore a servant is guilty of felony in stealing his master's goods, although he has the custody of them for a particular purpose (r). As where a butler steals his master's plate (s) (B). Even though the servant has the goods for a specific purpose, as where money had been delivered to a servant to be delivered to a third person, and he spent part, and embezzled the rest (t).

Servant.

Where a servant received money from his master to buy licenses with, which he embezzled, it was held that he was not guilty of felony (u) at common law. But this was denied in Lavender's case (v).

There the money had been delivered by the master to the prisoner to be taken to one Flawn, as the consideration for bills to be given for the money in a few days (x), and the prisoner instead of delivering the money spent part, and embezzled the remainder, and it was held to be larceny.

(o) East's P. C. 693.

(p) But see 1 Haw. c. 33, s. 56.

(q) The taking in such case is not warranted by the contract; there was no assent to the taking for the fraudulent purpose intended. See tit. Intention. But if the owner intend to transfer his property, then, although the taker may have been guilty of fraud in obtaining goods which he never meant to pay for, yet the taking is with the assent of the owner, who means that the goods shall be the absolute property of another.

(r) E. P. C. 554. 1 Hale, 506. 1 Haw. c. 33. [State v. White, 2 Tyler, 252.] See the stat. 21 Hen. 8, c. 7, which makes it felony in servants, not being apprentices, to withdraw themselves, and go away with caskets, &c. delivered to them by their masters to keep, with intent to steal the same, or to embezzle the same, or convert the same to their own use with the like purpose, if the said caskets, &c. be of the value of 40*s*. To bring a case within this statute, it must appear that the servant was such both at the time of the delivery and of the stealing. 1 Haw. 33, s. 12. 2 East's P. C. 562; and it must be proved that the goods were kept for the purpose of being returned. Watson's Case, East's P. C. 562.

(s) East's P. C. 564.

(t) R. v. Lavender, East's P. C. 566.

(u) Watson's Case, East's P. C. 562.

(v) East's P. C. 566.

(x) A distinction was taken between the case where the prisoner receives money to be delivered specifically to another, and where it is not to be so delivered; but Buller, J. denied the distinction, which certainly appears to be a very subtle one, and adhered to the case of R. v. Paradice, cited R. v. Wilkins, 2 Leach, 591, as good law. In that case, the prisoner having received several bills from his master, by whom he was employed as book-keeper, to be transmitted from Devizes by the post, to the prosecutor's banker in London,

(A) (But where one got staves upon the land of another upon a contract to have half for getting them—it was held, that while they remained on the land undivided, the manufacturer was neither a tenant in common with the owner of the land nor a bailee of the staves, and therefore he or any other person with his consent or connivance would be guilty of larceny in taking them. State v. Ines, 2 Dev. & Bat. 544.)

(B) (The taking by the defendant of an article delivered to him as a servant, to remove from one room to another, and converting the same to his own use, is larceny and not embezzlement. United States v. Clew, 4 Wash. C. C. R. 700. [The State v. Self, 1 Bay. 242].)

So where a carter went away with his master's cart, it was held that he was guilty of felony (y).

Where a porter was sent by his master with goods to be delivered to a customer, and he broke open the parcel and sold them, it was held to be felony (z).

But although it be clear that in general a servant has nothing more than a bare charge of his master's goods, and that the possession of the servant is the possession of the master, it has been doubted whether, when a servant or clerk had received the possession of the goods by delivery to him for his *master, and the master never had any other possession than such possession by the servant or clerk, the latter was guilty of felony in stealing the goods (a). But the statute 39 Geo. 3, c. 85, which recited that doubts had been entertained on the subject, removed them (b.) *611

In Sheares's case (c), where a servant received oats into his master's barge, and afterwards separated five sacks from the rest, and carried them away, it was held to be as much a felony as if he had taken the oats from his master's granary. So in Abrahat's case (d), the prosecutor having purchased corn which was on board a vessel in the Thames, sent the prisoner, who was his servant, and who had for many years been employed by him in superintending the unloading of vessels in the Thames, to receive it into the prosecutor's barge; whilst the corn-meters were unloading the corn from the Dutch vessel where it lay, into the prosecutor's barge, the prisoner came alongside in a boat, and requested that two empty sacks, which he handed on board the Dutch vessel, might be filled with oats, and desired that these might be added to the score, and not placed to a separate account, and took away the sacks so filled and sold them, and the Judges held that he was guilty of larceny. Where the owner has never had any possession of the money or goods, except by an agent, who is not a clerk or servant, the appropriation by the agent is not a felony. Thus where the prisoner received a draft from his employer with a felonious intention to embezzle part of the proceeds, but applied the draft itself according to the intention of his principal, by receiving the amount from the banker of the principal, but afterwards, instead of applying the amount in the purchase of American stock, according to the direction of his principal, appropriated part of the proceeds (e), he was not (it was held) guilty of stealing the draft, because he had applied the draft itself according to the intention of the principal; nor of stealing the produce of the draft, since the principal never had any possession of that, as distinct from the possession of the agent.

In general, where the party has a bare charge of the goods, or the use of them, subject to the immediate control and dominion of the master, the possession still remains in the latter; as, where a guest uses plate in the owner's house (f), a weaver delivers goods to his journeymen to be worked went to Salisbury and endorsed one of the bills, and got cash for it; and all the Judges (except Lord Camden, who was absent) held it to be larceny; on the ground that the possession still continued in the master. East's P. C. 565.

(y) Robinson's Case, East's P. C. 565.

(z) R. v. Bass, Leach, 285. See Kel. 35. Vale v. Bayle, Cowp. 294.

(a) Lord Hale held, that if a servant went with a bond to receive money, which he embezzled, he was not guilty of felony at common law, because the bond was delivered to him by the master; nor under the statute, because the money was not delivered to him by the master. Hale, 668. See Waite's Case, East's P. C. 570; R. v. Bazeley, East's P. C. 571; R. v. Bull, cited Leach, 980. But see R. v. Sheares, East's P. C. 568.

(b) Vide infra, 615. (c) East's P. C. 568.

(d) East's P. C. 569. Leach, 960. See R. v. Meeres, Show. 50; Goulds. 186. Where a servant employed to sell goods for his master, received 160 guineas, and concealed some of them in his own chamber, and broke open the house at night to steal them, it was held to be no burglary, since he had possession of the money.

(e) R. v. Walsh, 4 Taunt. 258. (f) East's P. C. 554.

up in the house (g), or where a banker's clerk has access to the money-drawer for a special purpose (h). So goods, which remain in the presence of the owner, remain in his possession, although actually delivered to another (i), as to a servant, or to a porter to be carried. Where a banker's clerk took notes from the till, under colour of a cheque from a third person, which cheque he had obtained by having entered a fictitious balance in the books, in favour of that person, it was held that he was guilty of felony; the *612 *fraudulent obtaining of the cheque being nothing more than mere machinery to effect his purpose (k).

Bailment. Precedent. Felonious intent.

Where the defendant has primâ facie the legal custody of the goods, as distinct from that of the owner, with his consent, the evidence may be rebutted, 1st, By proof that the prisoner originally obtained that possession with a felonious intention, by fraud, threats, or duress; for the law will not permit him to avail himself of his own fraud, and to set up as a defence a delivery by contract or consent, which was procured by stratagem and deceit, in order to perpetrate the offence.

2dly, By proof that the privity of contract had been determined by the wrongful act of the bailee; or, 3dly, That it had been determined according to the original intent of the parties.

1st. By proof of a precedent felonious intention, or that the possession was obtained by fraud or duress. As where the prisoner hired a horse from the owner with intent to steal it (l) (1). So where the prisoner, intending to steal the mail-bags from a post office, procured them to be let down to him by a string from the window of the post-office, under pretence that he was the mail-guard (m). So, although the general rule of law be, that the taking must be invito domino, according to the maxim, "volenti non fit injuria," yet if the owner consent from fear, under a reasonable apprehension of violence, the taking will be felonious (n); as where a woman gives money to preserve her chastity (o); for in such cases, where the party is not a free agent, but parts with property from fear and terror, there is no consent. But if the taking be by procurement of the owner, the maxim applies, and it is no larceny (p). But it is otherwise where the owner merely facilitates the execution of a felonious intent, as by placing himself in the way of robbers (q); or by allowing his servant to act the part of an accomplice (r).

Determination by tort.

2dly. That the privity of contract had been determined by the precedent wrongful act of the bailee. After the determination of the special contract, by any plain and unequivocal wrongful act of the bailee, inconsistent with that contract, the property, as against the bailee, revests in the owner,

(g) Ibid.
(h) R. v. Murray, East's P. C. 683. Bazeley's Case, East's P. C. 571.
(i) East's P. C. 682, 684. Chisser's Case, East's P. C. 677, 683; Atkinson's Case, Leach, 339; 1 Hale, 585; Campbell's Case, Leach, 642.
(k) R. v. Hammon, 4 Taunt. 304.
(l) R. v. Munday, East's P. C. 594. Major Semple's Case, Leach, C. C. L. 469. So where the owner of cattle hired the prisoner to drive them to a fair. R. v. Stock, Moody's C. C. 87; and see Armstrong's Case, 1 Lewin's C. C. 245.
(m) R. v. Noah Pearce, East's P. C. 603. [See Dodd v. Hamilton, 2 Taylor, 31.]
(n) East's P. C. 74. Blackham's Case, East's P. C. 555. 1 Hale, 533. East's P. C. 665.
(o) Blackham's Case, East's P. C. 711, 555.
(p) R. v. Daniel & others, Fost. Dis. 121. 4 Bl. Comm. 230. East's P. C. 665. R. v. Eggington & others, East's P. C. 666.
(q) Nordon's Case, Fost. 129. East's P. C. 666.
(r) R. v. Eggington & others, East's P. C. 666. [See 2 Taylor, 44.]

(1) [S. P. The State v. Self, 1 Bay, 242. The State v. Gorman, 2 Nott & M'Cord, 90. The State v. Barna, 2 Taylor, 44.]

although the actual possession remain in the bailee (s). If a carrier break open a box delivered to him for the purpose of carriage, and steal part of the contents, he is guilty of felony, for the breaking open the box is clear and unequivocal evidence of his determination of the bailment; and the privity of contract being thus determined, it can no longer affect the question as to the commission of a felony in taking the goods (t); but if the carrier should, contrary to his duty, sell the whole package entrusted to him, without any previous breaking, or other act sufficient to determine the privity of contract, he would not be guilty of felony (u) (1).

*Where the prosecutor sent forty bags of wheat to the prisoner, a warehouseman and wharfinger, for safe custody, until they should be sold by the prosecutor, and the prisoner's servant, by the direction of the prisoner, emptied four of the bags, and mixed their contents with other inferior wheat, and part of the mixture was disposed of by the prisoner, and the remainder was placed in the prosecutor's bags which had thus been emptied, and there was no severing of any part of the wheat in any one bag with intent to embezzle that part only which was so severed, it was held that the prisoner was guilty of larceny in taking the wheat out of the bag (x) (2). *613

In many instances, however, where a party is regarded as having the custody only of goods and not a right to the possession, he may be guilty of larceny, notwithstanding the delivery to him. As in the case of a

(s) Per Gould, J. Charlwood's Case, East's P. C. 691. Townsend's Case, East's P. C. 627; 13 Ed. 4, 9.

(t) 1 Hale, 504; 1 Haw. c. 33, s. 5, 7; 3 Ins. 107; East's P. C. 695.

(u) Ibid. See the next note.

(x) R. v. Brazier, cor. Holroyd, J., Nottingham Summer Assizes 1811, and afterwards by eleven of the judges. The distinction, which has constantly been recognized, although its soundness has been doubted, seems to be a natural and necessary consequence of the simple principle upon which this branch of the law rests; and although it may at first sight appear somewhat paradoxical and unreasonable, that a man should be less guilty in stealing the whole than in stealing a part, yet such a distinction will appear to be less objectionable, when it is considered how necessary it is to preserve the limits which separate the offence of larceny from a mere breach of trust, as clear and definite as the near and proximate natures of these offences will permit; and that the distinction results from a strict application of the rules which distinguish those offences. If the carrier were guilty of felony in selling the whole package, who did the like act, so would every other bailee or trustee, and the offence of larceny would be confounded with that of a mere breach of trust, and indefinitely extended. On the other hand, in taking part of the goods after he has determined the privity of contract, the case comes within the simple definition of larceny, for there is a felonious caption and asportation of the goods of another, which stands totally clear of any bailment. It is true that the sale and delivery of the whole package by the carrier, being inconsistent with the object of the bailment, determines the privity of contract; but then the question arises, what caption and asportation constitute the larceny, for these are in all cases essential to the offence. A mere intention on the part of the carrier to convert the goods, unaccompanied by any overt act, whereby he disaffirms the contract, is insufficient; and the act of conversion itself, such as the delivery of the whole of the entire package to a purchaser, is insufficient, because it is merely contemporaneous with the extinction of the privity of contract, which is not determined, except by the conversion itself; but if the package be first broken, and by that overt act the contract be determined, a subsequent caption and asportation, either of part, or, as it seems, of the whole of the goods, is a complete larceny within the definition, unaffected by any bailment. This distinction is explained by Lord Hale upon the principle above stated. Hale, 504, 5; East's P. C. 697. Kelynge, C. J. explains it upon the ground of a presumed previous felonious intention on the part of a carrier when he first took the goods; but this is not satisfactory, since the same presumption would arise when the carrier disposed of the whole of the package. For further illustrations of this doctrine, see the Miller's Case, East's P. C. 698. The Porter's Case, East's P. C. 697. Wynne's Case, East's P. C. 664. Cases of Sears and Bass, East's P. C. 664; Leach, 285.

(1) [If a load of goods, consisting of several packages, be delivered to a carrier to be transported to a specified place, and he fraudulently take away one of the packages and convert it to his own use before they arrive at the place of destination, it is larceny. Commonwealth v. Brown, 4 Mass. Rep. 580. So if the servant, employed by a carrier to drive his team to a certain place, drive to another place, and fraudulently take and convert the load to his own use. Ibid. Dame v. Baldwin, 8 Mass. Rep. 518.]

(2) [If a miller, having received an article to grind, fraudulently separate a part of it from the rest, for his own use, the contract of bailment is thereby determined, and the conversion to his own use of the part so separated, animo furandi, is larceny. Commonwealth v. James, 1 Pick. 375.]

servant (y), carter (z), porter (a). So where a man not being a general drover, but hired by the day to drive cattle to a market, sold part of them, it was held that he was guilty of larceny (b). In a later case, where the prisoner agreed for 4*s*. to take a heifer from Y. to M., and instead of doing so, sold her and embezzled the proceeds, it was held that he was properly convicted (c).

*614 *3dly, or lastly, it may be shown that the bailment had been determined according to the intention of the parties; as, that a package delivered to a carrier had reached the place of destination, and was there delivered (d).

Variance. Upon an indictment for felony, the prosecutor cannot usually proceed on two distinct felonies committed at different times, but must make his election on which he will proceed (e).

Two cannot be convicted upon an indictment charging a joint larceny, unless there be evidence to satisfy the jury that they were concerned in a joint taking (f).

Presumptive evidence. As the caption and asportation can seldom be directly proved by an eye-witness, presumptive evidence must in general be resorted to. The most usual and cogent evidence of this nature consists in proof of the prisoner's possession of the stolen goods (1). The force of this presumption depends upon the consideration that the prisoner who can account for his possession of the goods, will, if that possession be an honest one, give a satisfactory account of it.

The effect of this evidence is to throw upon the prisoner the burthen of accounting for that possession, and in default to raise a presumption that he took the goods. Evidence of this nature is by no means conclusive, and it is stronger or weaker as the possession is more or less recent, for the (y) Supra, 611.

(z) Ibid.
(a) Ibid.
(b) R. v. Macnamee, Moody's C. C. 368.

(c) R. v. Jackson, 2 Moody's C. C. 32. This case, it will be observed, differed from that of Macnamee in two circumstances; the prisoner was not hired for the day but entered into a special agreement for the job, and as but one heifer was entrusted to him, which he sold, there was no separation of a part from the whole, as in Macnamee's case. In Smith's Case, Moody's C. C. 473, where the prisoner having received the prosecutor's horse to be agisted, sold it, he was held to have been properly convicted, the prosecutor having parted with the possession.

(d) 1 Hale, 504, 5; 21 H. 7, 14. But if a bailee receive goods for a special purpose, he is not guilty of felony in not returning, but disposing of the goods after the object of the bailment is answered. R. v. Banks, Russ. & Ry. C. C. L. 441; overruling the authorities, 2 East's P. C. 690, 694, and 2 Russ. 1089, 1090.

(e) Where two horses were stolen from different persons at different times, but were taken at the same time by the prisoner into a different county, it was held that the prosecutor was bound to elect. R. v. Smith,[1] 1 Ry. & M. 295. Where seventy sheep were put on Thornly Common on the 18th of June, and were not missed till November, and the prisoner was in possession of four of those sheep in October, and of nineteen other of them on the 23d of November, Bayley, J. allowed evidence of both to be given. R. v. Dewhirst, Lanc. Sp. Ass. Ap. 1825. Where numerous articles had been stolen, the Court held, that it was no ground for compelling the prosecutor to elect upon a suggestion that they were probably stolen at various times, if they might have been stolen at once; but with respect to the receiver, it appearing that they had been received at several times, the prosecutor was bound to elect; held also, that evidence of the other acts of receiving was properly admitted to show the guilty knowledge. Dunn's Case, 1 Ry. & M. 146.

(f) Hempstead and Hudson were indicted jointly for stealing cutlery to the amount of 40*s*. in a dwelling-house. The two prisoners were in the employment of the prosecutor, a cutler, as porters; cutlery was found on the person of Hempstead to the amount of 6*l*., and similar cutlery on the person of Hudson to the value of 6*s*. only; each confessed that the property in his possession belonged to his master; and the jury were of opinion, that although the prisoners were in the same room together (from which the property had been stolen), yet there was not sufficient evidence to prove that they had acted in conjunction. Both were found guilty; but the Judges were of opinion, that after Hudson had received a pardon, sentence might be passed upon Hempstead. O. B. Feb. Sessions, 1817. On a charge against two of jointly receiving, it is necessary to prove a joint receipt; and a receipt by one in the absence of the other, and subsequent delivery to the latter, is insufficient, successive receivers being separate receivers. Messingham's Case, 1 Ry. & M. 257.

(1) [Pennsylvania v. Myers, Addison's Rep. 320. The State v. Jenkins, 2 Tyler, 379.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxi. 443.

obvious reason, that the difficulty of accounting for the possession is increased by the length of time which has elapsed, during which the goods may have passed through many hands. The rule is, that recent possession raises a reasonable presumption against the prisoner (g). Where a letter *containing two bank-notes, was put into the post-office on the 17th of *615
April, proof that a person employed in the post-office had the notes in his possession on the 21st of April was held to be sufficient to warrant a conviction under the stat. 7 G. 3, c. 50, for secreting the letter (h). Unless the Possession.
possession be recent, it is necessary to give strict proof of the identity of the goods, which is not so requisite where the possession is very recent; as where a man comes out of a barn with corn concealed upon his person (i); or where he is in possession of sugar which he cannot account for, just after he has left the dock, where a quantity of similar sugar is deposited (k). The having property of this nature in possession, without being able to account for it, is in some instances made a substantive offence, by local Acts made for the protection of property much exposed, and which it is difficult to identify.

In other cases mere evidence of the possession of property by the prisoner, for which he cannot account, without evidence to identify it with that proved to have been stolen, is insufficient (l). And a prisoner ought not to be convicted of stealing the goods of a person unknown, upon such evidence, without proof that a felony has actually been committed (m). The fact of possession is capable of being confirmed or weakened by circumstances, particularly those of his concealment of the goods; the opportunity which the prisoner had to commit the crime; his vicinity to the place; his conduct when the charge was made; false or improbable representations to account for the possession; his readiness or unwillingness to meet the charge.

Under an indictment on the stat. 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 29, s. 47 (n), the prosecu- Embezzle-tor must prove (o), 1st, That the defendant was his servant or clerk (p); ment.

(g) East's P. C. 657. It is also to be carefully observed, that the mere finding of stolen goods in the house of the prisoner, where there are other inmates of the house capable of stealing the property, is insufficient evidence to prove a possession by the prisoner. Possession of stolen property three months after it had been lost, was held not such a recent possession as to put a prisoner upon showing how he came by it. R. v. C. Adams,[1] 3 C. & P. 600. In Cockin's Case, 2 Lewin's C. C. 235, in the case of a possession twenty days after the theft, the evidence was left to the jury. See the observations on such evidence by Sir G. Lewin, Ib.

(h) Ibid.
(i) Ibid.
(k) Ibid.
(l) East's P. C. 657; 2 Hale's P. C. 290.
(m) 2 Hale's P. C. 290; 4 Comm. 352.

(n) Which enacts, that if any clerk or servant, or any person employed for the purpose, or in the capacity of a clerk or servant, shall, by virtue of such employment, receive or take into his possession any chattel, money, or valuable security for or in the name, or on the account of his master, and shall fraudulently embezzle the same, or any part thereof, every such offender shall be deemed to have feloniously stolen the same, &c.

(o) See Ld. Ellenborough's observations, R. v. Johnson, 3 M. & S. 548.

(p) See R. v. Squire,[2] 2 Starkie's C. 349. The statute is not confined to clerks and servants in trade. A person employed as clerk by the overseers of Leeds was held to be within the statute. 2 Starkie's C. 349. The statute applies to female as well as to male servants. R. v. Smith, by the Judges, 3 Burn's J. by Chetw. 89. If a traveller be employed by different persons to receive money, he is the servant of each. R. v. Leach,[3] 3 Starkie's C. 70. And if a clerk be employed by A. and B., who are partners in trade, and he embezzles the money of A. he is within the statute. Ib. Note, that these cases were decided under the stat. 39 Geo. 3, c. 85. See the late stat. 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 20, s. 46. Where the prisoner was employed on the single occasion only, and requested to receive money, held that he was not to be considered as coming within the description of the 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 49, as a clerk or servant, or person employed for the purpose of, or in the capacity of a clerk or servant. Nettleton's Case, 1 Ry. & M. 259. The clerk of a chapelry, employed to collect sacrament money, feloniously abstracted part, and the indictment charged him in different counts as servant to the minister, churchwardens, and poor of the township; held that he could not be considered the servant of any of the persons so alleged. Burton's Case, 1 Ry. & M. 237.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiv. 474. [2]Id. iii. 378. [3]Id. xiv. 165.

2dly, That he received the goods or money specified; 3dly, On account of his master; 4thly, That he embezzled them.

The goods or money specified.—This proof requires, it seems, the same particularity as upon an indictment for larceny. Upon a charge of em-616 bezzling so many pounds, it is not sufficient to prove an embezzling of the same number of bank-notes to the same amount (q). Upon a charge of embezzling the sum of 1*l.* 11*s.* it was held to be insufficient to prove that so much was paid, the party who paid it being unable to state in what way it was paid (r).

3dly, On account of his master (s).—It is not sufficient under this statute to prove a delivery to the servant by the master himself (t); but it is sufficient if he receive the money from a customer, although it was given by the master to the customer in order to try the servant's honesty (u).

4thly, The embezzlement.—It is not sufficient, in support of a charge of this nature, to prove a general deficiency to the amount stated, upon a balance of account, without fixing upon some particular sum of money which has been received by the prisoner, and evidence to show that he has embezzled it. Evidence of this nature generally consists in showing that the prisoner omitted to make the usual entry of the receipt of the money in the book or account in which it ought to have been entered (x); in his using artifice and practices to prevent a discovery of the deficiency, or his denial of the receipt of the particular sum (y).

By the late st. 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 29, s. 48, three distinct acts of embezzlement (z), committed against the same master, may be included in the same indictment, provided they have been committed within the space of six calendar months from the first to the last of such acts. The embezzlement may be alleged to be of money, without specifying any particular species of coin or valuable security, and such allegation shall be sustained if the offender shall be proved to have embezzled any amount, although the particular species of coin or valuable security of which such amount was composed, shall not be proved; or if he shall be proved to have embezzled any piece of coin or valuable security, or any portion of the value thereof, although such piece of coin or valuable security may have been delivered to him in order that some part of the value thereof should be returned to the party delivering the same, and such part shall have been returned.

Where a prisoner, having received money in Surrey, denied the receipt of it the same day to his master in Middlesex, and there was no evidence (q) R. v. Lindsey, 3 Burn, by Chetw. 189. R. v. Furneaux, Ibid. But an indictment was held to be good, which alleged a receiving of 9*l.* 18*s.* 9*d.* without showing how the same was made up. R. v. Crighton, Summer Ass. 1803, by all the Judges. 3 Burn, by Chetw. 190. But see the provisions of the late stat. 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 29, s. 48.

(r) R. v. Furneaux, O. B. Sept. 1818, cor. the Recorder, and afterwards by the Judges. Russ. & Ry. C. C. L. 335.

(s) Where the servant of the owner of a stallion was instructed not to receive less than a certain sum for each mare; held, that his receiving less sums and converting them to his own use, was not an embezzlement, not being received by him by virtue of his employment. R. v. Snowley,[1] 4 C. & P. 300. Qu.

(t) Peck's Case, cor. Parke, J. Staffordshire Summer Ass. 1817.

(u) R. v. Whittingham, 2 Leach, 912, Headge's Case, Leach, 1033. See Bull's Case, cited in Bazeley's Case, 2 Leach, 841. R. v. Foot, Bridg. Summer Ass. 1818, cor. Graham, B. and afterwards by the Judges.

(x) See R. v. Squire,[2] 2 Starkie's C. 349. Where the party had charged himself with the receipt of the money in the books weekly, but had neglected to pay it over, it was held to be no felony. R. v. Hodgson,[3] 3 C. & P. 423.

(y) R. v. Hobson, East's P. C. Add. xxiv. 2 Russ. 1238. Taylor's Case, 3 B. & P. 596. 2 Leach, 974.

(z) Where the indictment contained three counts for acts of embezzlement within six months, the Court held, upon motion by the prisoner, that he ought to be furnished with a particular of the charges, but that the proper course was to apply to the prosecutor, and that if he refused, the Court, upon affidavits, would grant an order, and put off the trial. R. v. Hodgson,[3] 3 C. & P. 423.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 436. [2] Id. iii. 378. [3] Id. xiv. 377.

*to show an embezzlement in Surrey; the Judges held that the offence was committed in the county of Middlesex (a). Where the prisoner received money in the county of Salop, and denied the receipt in the county of Stafford, it was held to be evidence to show that the original receipt was with intent to embezzle, and that the prisoner was properly tried in the county of Salop (b). An indictment upon the st. 52 Geo. 3, c. 63, alleged that the defendant was directed to invest money absolutely and unconditionally, but it appeared that the direction was only to invest in case of any accident happening to the party; the variance was held to be fatal (c).

Where the indictment alleged against an accessory to a felony, that the principal felon was unknown, proof that the principal was known, and that he had given evidence before the grand jury, was held to defeat the indictment (d); and where the prisoner was indicted for a misdemeanor in receiving stolen goods, and it appeared that the principal had been convicted at the same assizes, the Court directed an acquittal (e). The buying goods at an undervalue affords some presumption that the buyer knew that they were stolen (f), and this is stronger or weaker in proportion to the inferiority of price (1). Accessories.

LEET.

A PRESENTMENT in a leet is not traversable, because all the suitors are presumed to be present and to concur. See Com. Dig. tit. Leet.

LIBEL AND SLANDER.

THE evidence is either, I. In a civil action; or, II. A criminal prosecution. In the case of a civil action are to be considered,

1*st*, The proof of publication, p. 617.
2*dly*, Of the prefatory averments and innuendos, p. 626.
3*dly*, Of malice, p. 629.
4*thly*, Of damage, p. 636.
5*thly*, Evidence in defence, p. 638.—Mitigation, &c. p. 641.—Justification, p. 643.

First, as to the fact of publication (A).—Where the action is for words spoken, evidence of the speaking before any third person will be sufficient, although the declaration allege them to have been spoken before A. B. and others (g). Proof of publication.

Where a witness having heard scandalous words spoken, has committed them immediately to writing, he may afterwards read the paper in evidence,

(a) Taylor's Case, 3 B. & P. 596. The prisoner in that case returned into the county of Middlesex soon after receiving the money, and probably had possession of the money in Middlesex, and qu. whether it is not necessary that the prisoner should have had possession of the money or goods in the county in which he is indicted, as in case of a common larceny.

(b) R. v. Hobson, East's P. C. Add. xxiv. [State v. Groff, 1 Murphey, 270.]

(c) R. v. White,[1] 4 C. & P. 46.

(d) R. v. Walker, cor. Le Blanc, Gloucester Summer Ass. 1812. 3 Camp. 264. But see the cases of Bush and of Robinson, Russ. & Ry. C. C. 272; and the stat. 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 29, s. 54, supra, 7. [State v. Goode, 1 Hawks. 463.]

(e) Lancaster Lent Assizes, 1813, cor. Thompson, B., Crim. Pl. Prec. 123.

(f) 1 Hale, 619.

(g) B. N. P. 5.

(1) [Where a person suffered a trunk containing stolen goods to be put on board a vessel in which he had taken his passage, as part of his baggage, it was held that he was well convicted of receiving stolen goods. The State v. Scovel, 1 Rep. Con. Ct. 274.]

(A) (See Gorden v. Spencer, 2 Blackf. 286. Faris v. Starke, 9 Dana, 128. If words which would otherwise be libellous are contained in a remonstrance which a citizen has a right to present to a public authority, malice must be proved by the plaintiff. Flitcraft v. Jenks, 3 Whart. 158.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 268.

if he swear that the words contained in it are the very words (h), and if the words have not been written immediately, the witness may refer to his minutes to refresh his memory (i). It is not sufficient for the witness to *618 *swear that the defendant uttered those words or words to the like effect, for the Court must know the very words, in order to judge of their effect (k).

If the words have been spoken, or libel has been published, in a foreign language, or in characters not understood by those who read or see them, there is no publication, since there is no communication prejudicial to the plaintiff (A); and if the words have been spoken, or the libel has been addressed to the plaintiff only, without further publication, no action is maintainable, since no temporal damage can have accrued from the defendant's act (l); but such a publication of a libel would be sufficient to sustain an indictment, on the ground of its tendency to produce a breach of the peace.

Variance. The general rule seems to be, that some of the words must be proved, as they are laid in the declaration (m). The rule as to the proof of words spoken is not so strict as in the case of libel, where the whole must be proved as laid, for it is considered to be one entire thing, and a variance as to any part destroys the identity of the whole (n). The same strictness (perhaps on the ground of convenience) does not apply in actions for words; for if some of those, being actionable, be proved, an omission to prove the remainder of the words laid in context with them, or a variance from the latter, will not be material, provided the words proved do not (o) differ in sense from those

(h) Ibid. supra, Vol. I., and Index, tit. WITNESS.

(i) Per Holt, C. J. Sandwell v. Sandwell, Holt, R. 295.

(k) Fost. 200. Hussey v. Cooke, Hob. 294; 1 Hale, 111, 115, 323; Kel. 14; 2 Haw. c. 46. R. v. Barmston, 2 C. & P. 414. Harrison v. Bevington,[1] 8 C. & P. 713.

(l) 1 Wil. Saun. 132, n. 2; 2 Esp. C. 226. [Lyle v. Clason, 1 Caines's R. 581.] And even in the case of an indictment for a libel confined to reflections upon the professional character of the prosecutor, there being no allegation of an intention to provoke him to commit a breach of the peace is insufficient, unless there be a publication to a third person. R. v. Wegener,[2] 2 Starkie's C. 245; vide infra, 629, note (e).

(m) 2 East, 434; 8 East, 150. (n) Infra, 626, and infra, tit. VARIANCE.

(o) The plaintiff declared that the defendant said of him, "He is a maintainer of thieves, and a strong thief." The jury found the whole to have been said, except the word strong, and it was adjudged for the plaintiff (Burgis's Case, Dyer, 75). In Sir J. Sydenham's Case, Cro. Jac. 407, an action was brought for the words, "If Sir John Sydenham might have his will, he would kill all the true subjects of England, and the King too; and he is a maintainer of papistry and rebellious persons." The jury found that he spoke the words, "I think in my conscience, if Sir John Sydenham might," &c. finding all the remaining words verbatim. This case underwent much discussion. Three of the Justices of the King's Bench held that the plaintiff was entitled to judgment, since the additional words proved were not words of extenuation, or alteration of the sense of the former words, but rather enforced them; and upon a writ of error brought, the judgment was affirmed by the opinion of Tanfield, C. B., Warburton, Bromley and Hulton, against that of Hobart, C. J. of C. B., Winch and Denman: and see 12 Vin. Ab. 68, and infra, note (s). Where the words laid in the declaration were, "I will do my best to transport him, as he has been working for me for some time, and has been robbing me all the while;" the proof being "he has worked for me some time, and has been continually robbing me;" held to be no variance; held, also, that the words being spoken to an officer who had a warrant to search the plaintiff's house for goods suspected to have been stolen from the defendant, was not a privileged communication. Doncaster v. Hewson,[3] 2 M. & R. 176. In an action for words spoken of the plaintiff, a fruit-broker, representing him, with a view to injure the sale of plaintiff's fruit, to have falsely represented that he (the plaintiff) then had three or four vessels in the river coming up with fruit; the evidence was that the defendant alleged the plaintiff to have given out that there were three or four vessels, &c.; held to be a fatal variance, it being very different whether the plaintiff were represented as having spoken of his own knowledge, or merely on report. Wood v. Adams,[4] 6 Bing. 481, and 4 C. & P. 268. If the words alleged were not proved to be actionable per se, whilst the others were not so, the plaintiff is still entitled to full costs, although the damages be under 40s. Kelly v. Partington,[5] 5 B. & Ad. 649.

(A) (In slander where the words are spoken in a foreign language, the proper mode of declaring is to state the words in the foreign language, and render the signification of them in English, although they were understood by those who heard them. Wormouth v. Cramer, 3 Wend. 394.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxxiv. 594. [2]Id. iii. 335. [3]Id. xvii. 297. [4]Id. xix. 143. [5]Id. xxvii. 144.

alleged, considering the whole context; and the rule is the same where the plaintiff declares of fewer words than were spoken (p). It is, however, a very *general rule that where the words constitute one entire charge, the whole must be proved (q). And provided the sense be kept entire, it seems that even partial grammatical variances in the construction of sentences will not be material (A) (1). But proof of words spoken interrogatively will not support an allegation of words spoken affirmatively (r). Evidence of the words "You are a broken-down justice" (2), does not support an indictment for speaking of a magistrate the words, "He is a broken-down justice (s)." Words alleged to have been spoken affirmatively are not proved by evidence of words spoken interrogatively (t). So words alleged as having *619

(p) See the preceding note (d). [Genet v. Mitchell, 7 Johns. 120.] Where the words were laid to be "'Ware hawk, you must take care of yourself there, mind what you are about;" and the words in italics were not proved, it was held to be no variance, the sense not being altered. Orpwood v. Barkes,[1] 4 Bing. 174. And see Doncaster v. Hewson,[2] 2 M. & R. 176.

(q) Flower v. Pedley, 2 Esp. C. 491. Cor. Eyre, C. J.; and see above, p. 618, note (o); and below, as to variance in case of libel, p. 626; and Vol. I. tit. VARIANCE.

(r) 2 East, 434; 8 T. R. 150; 4 T. R. App. 217.

(s) R. v. Berry, 4 T. R. 217. But see Blisset v. Johnson, Cro. Eliz. 503. In the former of these cases, Lord Kenyon held at Nisi Prius, that it was sufficient to prove the substance of the words stated, and the defendant was found guilty; but the point was reserved; and on a motion being made to enter an acquittal, Buller, J., said that there was a case in Strange in support of his Lordship's opinion, but that it had been overruled in Lord Mansfield's time, and that he himself had known a variety of nonsuits on the same objection; and judgment was given for the defendant. In the case of Lady Ratcliffe v. Shubly (Cro. Eliz. 224), the words laid in the declaration were, "She is as very a thief as any which robbeth by the highway side." The words proved were, "She is a worse thief," &c. Wray, C. J., was of opinion, that as very a thief, and a worse thief, were all one; but Gawdy and Fenner, justices, ruled, that the words did not agree with the declaration. Where these words were alleged to have been spoken by the defendant, "Harrison is a scoundrel; if I would have found him an oven for nothing, and given him after the rate of 20*l.* per cent. upon the amount of the charges for work and materials, he would have passed my account." The first witness proved the words, "Harrison is a scoundrel; and if I had allowed 20*l.* per cent. he would have passed my account." The second witness proved the words, "Harrison is a scoundrel; and if I had deducted 20*l.* per cent. he would have passed my account." Lord Ellenborough held that words to be actionable should be unequivocally so, and be proved as laid; and that the proof did not support the declaration. (Harrison v. Stratton, 4 Esp. C. 218). It was held that the words, as laid in the declaration, "this is my (the defendant's) umbrella, and he (the plaintiff) stole it from my back door," were not supported by evidence of the words, "it is my umbrella," &c. for the words alleged import a conversation concerning a thing present; those proved import a conversation concerning a thing absent. Walters v. Mace, 2 B. & A. 756. So if A. say to B. and C., you have committed a felony, although they have separate actions, each must allege the words to have been spoken of both.

(t) Barnes v. Holloway, 8 T. R. 150. So the words "This is my umbrella, he stole it from the back-door," are not proved by evidence of the words "It is my umbrella, &c." Walters v. Mace, 2 B. & A. 756. See further, Vol. I. tit. VARIANCE. M'Pherson v. Daniells,[3] 10 B. & C. 274. Bell v. Byrne, 13 East. 554.

(A) (Fox v. Vanderbeck, 5 Cow. 513. Freeland v. Lanfear, 2 Martin, U. S. 480. Trimble v. Moore, 2 Law. R. 597. Wheeler v. Robb, 1 Blackf. 330. Horton v. Reanis, 2 Mur. 380. Moore v. Bond, 4 Blackf. 458. Where the words laid are, "you have conspired with others to cheat," and the words proved are, "I believe you have conspired with others," the variance is not fatal. Beehler v. Steever, 2 Whart. 313.)

(1) [It is sufficient to prove the substance of the words—but the sense as well as the manner of speaking them must be the same as averred. Miller v. Miller, 3 Johns. 74. Kennedy v. Lowry, 1 Binney, 393. Brown v. Lamberton, 2 ib. 34. Hersh v. Ringwalt, 3 Yeates, 508. Grubbs v. Kyzer, 2 M'Cord, 305.

A declaration in slander, charging that the defendant spoke of the plaintiff, "in substance, the following false, scandalous and defamatory words"—is good. Kennedy v. Lowry, ubi sup. So a declaration, laying the charge in the alternative, viz. that the defendant spoke certain words (which are set forth) "or words of the same import," is good after verdict. Bell v. Bugg, 4 Munf. 260.

If the words laid are, that the plaintiff stole the goods of A, proof of the defendant's saying that the plaintiff stole the goods of B., will not support the declaration. Johnson v. Tait, 6 Binney, 121. A declaration alleging that the defendant said "there was a collusion between A., B., C., and D., to make E. swear a false oath," &c. is not supported by proof of his having said "there was a collusion between A., B., and C., to make E. swear, &c. ibid. Where the declaration alleged the words to have been spoken of and concerning the evidence given by the plaintiff on a complaint made by him before a justice of the peace, on the 20th of March, and the proof was that the complaint was made on the 8th of March, the variance was held to be immaterial. M'Kinly v. Rob, 20 Johns. 351. S. P. Chapman v. Smith, 10 Johns. 78.]

(2) [Wolfe v. Rodefer, 1 Har. & J. 409. Miller v. Miller, 8 Johns. 74 Acc. Huffman v. Shumate, 4 Bibb, 515. Tracy v. Harkins, Com. Pleas, 1 Binney, 395, n. Contra.] been spoken in English, are not proved by evidence of the speaking of words of the same meaning in another language (u).

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiii. 424. [2] Id. xvii. 297. [3] Id. xxi. 69.

It is sufficient, even where special damage is the gist of the action, to prove some of the words as alleged, and that the special damage resulted from them (x); but if all the words as laid constitute but one entire charge, the whole must be proved. The declaration stated, that the defendant said of the plaintiff, "He is selling coals at one shilling a bushel, to pocket the money, and become a bankrupt to cheat his creditors." Upon the trial the words "and become a bankrupt," were not proved, and the plaintiff was nonsuited (y).

Publication of the libel.

In case of a libel, before any evidence can be given of its contents, primâ facie evidence must be given of a publication by the defendant (A). Evi-

*620 dence *of a publication is either of a publication generally, or of a publication in some particular county or place, and it is either direct or indirect.

The publication may be directly proved, by evidence that the defendant with his own hand (z) distributed copies of the libel, or exposed its contents, or painted an ignominious sign over the door of another, or took part in a procession, carrying a representation of the plaintiff in effigy, for the purpose of exposing him to contempt and ridicule, or maliciously read or sung the contents of the libel in the presence of others; all of these facts are direct proofs of the averment that the defendant published the alleged libel (a).

But it frequently happens that no direct proof can be given of the defendant's agency in the publication of the libel, and resort must be had to indirect evidence, in order to connect him with the libel, and fix him with its publication. The most usual and important piece of evidence for this purpose consists in proving that the libel published is in the hand-writing of the defendant; when the plaintiff has proved this, he has, if the county be not material, made out such a primâ facie case as entitles him to have the contents read in evidence (b).

It was observed by a great authority (c), that "when a libel is produced, written in a man's own hand, he is taken in the mainer, and that throws the proof upon him; and if he cannot produce the composer, the verdict will be against him."

And even the possession of a libel which has been published is, it is said, evidence to prove a publication by the possessor (d).

The writing (e) or even printing (f) a libel, does not, however, in any case, amount to a publication, but is mere evidence from which it may be inferred; whether there has been any publication is usually a question of (u) Zenobio v. Axtell, 6 T. R. 162.

(x) Holt's R. 139.
(y) Flower v. Pedley, 2 Esp. C. 491.
(z) R. v. Almon, Burr. 2689. Seven Bishops' Case, 4 St. Tr. 338.
(a) 5 Rep. 125. 9 Rep. 59. b.
(b) Burr. 2689.
(c) Per Holt, C. J., R. v. Beere, Lord Raym. 417; 1 Vent. 31; 2 Salk. 40. Mullet v. Hulton, 4 Esp. 248. 9 Rep. 59, b.
(d) It has been said, that until publication, the possession of a libel is no more than the possession of a man's thoughts. See Entick v. Carrington, 11 St Tr. 321. But where the libel has been published, then the possession is evidence that the defendant was the publisher. R. v. Beere, 1 Vent. 31. The possession of a libel in the defendant's house or shop is evidence of a printing and publishing there, 12 Vin. Ab. 220; 4 Read, St. Law. 155; Dig. L. L. 22. If a libel be stolen, that is no publication (Barrow v. Lewellyn, Hob. 62): but if a single copy reach a single person in consequence of an intent to publish, it is sufficient. Ibid.
(e) Lamb's Case, 9 Rep. 59; 15 Vin. Ab. 91; Mod. 813.
(f) Baldwin v. Elphinstone, Bl. R. 1037, where the printing of a libel in a newspaper was intended by the the Court to be a publication.

(A) (Wuistel v. Holman, 2 Hall. 172.)

fact, falling within the province of the jury to decide (g); and though proof that the libel is in the hand-writing of the party goes far in fixing him with the publication, he is still at liberty to rebut, if he can, the strong presumption thus raised against him, by reconciling the fact with his own innocence.

The sending a letter to a third person is a sufficient publication (h) (A).

Where the libel was contained in a letter sent by the defendant to the plaintiff, proof that the defendant knew that letters sent to the plaintiff were usually opened by his clerks, was held to be sufficient evidence to go to a jury, of the defendant's intention that the letter should be read by a third person, so as to amount to a publication (i).

*A consent by the master to the act of the servant in printing a libel, is primâ facie evidence of a publication by the master (k). *621

An allegation that the defendant published the libel is satisfied by proof that it was published by his agent (l), if an authority from the principal to the agent can be proved. And although an authority to commit an unlawful act will not in general be presumed, yet it seems to be otherwise in the case of booksellers and others, where the book or libel is purchased from an agent in the usual course of trade (m) (1).

The publication of a newspaper is sufficiently proved by a witness who states it to have been published in the usual way, without producing a copy which has actually been published (n).

Where the libel (a song) from which the publication took place was lost, and the printer produced a similar one printed at the time, which was proved to correspond with that lost, it was held to be sufficient (o) (B).

The sale by an agent in a shop in the usual course of business is primâ facie evidence of a publication with the knowledge and privity of the owner; and although it be not conclusive evidence, yet it throws upon him the necessity of rebutting the presumption by evidence to the contrary (p). By an agent.

(g) Baldwin v. Elphinstone, Bl. R. 1037; R. v. Burdett,[1] 4 B. & A. 95.
(h) Rast. Ent. tit. Actions sur le Case, 3, a.; Lord Raym. 341, 417, 486.
(i) Delacroix v. Thevenot,[2] 2 Starkie's C. 63.
(k) R. v. Harris, 2 St. Tr. 1039. See Lord Camden's observations in Entick v. Carrington, 11 St. Tr. 322.
(l) Supra, tit. AGENT; and Hale, P. C. 613.
(m) Bac. Ab. tit. Libel, 458. R. v. Gutch & others,[3] 1 M. & M. 433. The sale of each copy is a distinct publication. R. v. Carlisle,[4] 1 Chitty, 451.
(n) R. v. Pearce, Peake's C. 75; and the copy need not bear a stamp; Ibid.
(o) Johnson v. Hudson,[5] 7 Ad. & Ell. 233, n.
(p) Bac. Ab. tit. Libel, 458; and R. v. Almon, 5 Burr. 2689. R. v. Dodd, 1724. 2 Sess. C. 33. Dig. L. L. 27. And Wood's Ins. 445, 2 Sess. C. 33. 12 Vin. Ab. 229. Plunkett v. Cobbett, 5 Esp. C. 136. Haw. P. C. c. 73, s. 10, Barnard, K. B. 308.

(A) (In an action on the case for a libel contained in an anonymous letter sent through the post-office to a person out of the jurisdiction of the court; proof that the letter was deposited in the post-office and duly despatched, and the production of the letter by the plaintiff, are sufficient proof of the publication without the oath of the person to whom it was addressed. Callan v. Gaylard, 3 Watts, 321. It seems, that where a libel is seen but by a few persons, neither of whom understand it as conveying an injurious imputation upon the plaintiff, such fact may be given in evidence to rebut the presumption of its publication as a libel. Maynard v. Beardsley, 4 Wend. 336. S. C. 7 Wend. 560. See also Gould v. Weed, 12 Wend. 12.)

(B) (The publication of a libel cannot be established by a comparison of one paper which is not proved to have been published with another published, but not produced on the trial, nor its absence accounted for; Simpson v. Wiley, 4 Porter, 215; and evidence of a general impression that the defendants are the editors of a paper, in which a libel is charged to be published, is not testimony that they are joint partners and editors thereof. Ibid.)

(1) [An action for a libel lies against the proprietor of a gazette edited by another, though the publication was made without the knowledge of such proprietor. Andres v. Wells, 7 Johns. 260. But if a printing press and newspaper establishment be assigned to a person merely as security for a debt, and the press remain in the sole possession and management of the assignor, the ownership of the person holding the security or lien is not such as will render him liable to an action as a proprietor. Ibid.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 358. [2]Id. iii. 245. [3]Id. xxii. 352. [4]Id. xviii. 135. [5]Id. xxxiv. 84.

even although the principal lives at a distance from his shop (q). But the defendant may rebut the presumption, by evidence that the libel was sold contrary to his orders, or clandestinely; that by reason of sickness he was ignorant of the fact; or that he was absent under circumstances which do not import fraud (r). The imprisonment of the defendant at the time of publication is evidence in exculpation, but not conclusive; it may be rebutted by proof of the access of agents (s).

Where in an action for a libel it appeared that the libel was written in the hand of the daughter of the defendant (a minor), who usually wrote his letters of business, but no evidence was given of any authority to write the letter in question, or of any recognition of the letter by him, it was held that there was no evidence to go to the jury of a publication by the defendant, since this was not an act within the scope of the defendant's authority (t).

If one procure another to publish a libel, the procurer is guilty of a publication, wherever it takes place, and the actual publisher, like any other particeps criminis, is competent to prove his employment by the defendant and the consequent publication (u). And if a letter be sent by the post, *622 it is *a publication by the defendant in any county to which the letter is in consequence sent (v).

A statement in a newspaper in consequence of a communication of the contents by the defendant to a reporter, for the purpose of publication, is a publication by the defendant, notwithstanding some immaterial variations; but the newspaper cannot be read without proof of the written statement delivered by the reporter (the witness) to the editor (x).

Where the defendant has admitted that he is the author of a particular book, errors excepted, it is incumbent upon him to prove that the errors excepted are material (y).

In the case of libel, as well as in all others, whether civil or criminal, presumptive evidence must be resorted to in failure of direct and positive testimony; and the same reasonable inferences and presumptions are to be made so by the juries as in all other instances (z).

Publication in a particular county.

In criminal cases it is always, and in civil cases it is in some instances, necessary to prove a publication within the particular county. It seems that wherever the publication of a libel has once been authorized by the defendant, he is guilty of a publication in every county where the libel shall afterwards be in consequence published (a). Where the writer of a libel sent it by post, directed to A. B. in the county B., and it was in consequence sent into the county B., and from thence sent by the post to A. B.

(q) R. v. Dodd, 2 Sess. C. 33. Dig. L. L. 27; for the law presumes that the master is acquainted with what his servant does in the course of his business. And see R. v. Nutt, Barnard, K. B. 308. Fitzg. 47. Dig. L. L. 27, where it was so held, although the defendant lived a mile from her shop, and had been bed-ridden for a long time. In Com. Dig. tit. Libel, B. 1, it is said that the sale of a libel in the defendant's shop, by his servant or agent there, for the defendant's benefit, is a publication by the defendant, though he was not privy to the contents or sale. (r) See 1 Haw. c. 73. R. v. Woodfall, Ibid. sec. 10.

(s) R. v. Woodfall, 1 Haw. c. 73, s. 10. (t) Harding v. Greening, 1 Moore, 477.

(u) R. v. Johnson, 7 East, 65. R. v. Dodd, 2 Sess. C. 33. Bac. Ab. tit. Libel, 497. Wood's Ins. 445.

(v) R. v. Watson, 1 Camp. 215. The defendant was indicted in Middlesex, the letter had been sent by the post into Berkshire, and had been sent from thence to the prosecutor in Middlesex.

(x) Adams v. Kelly,[1] R. & M. 157. (y) R. v. Hall, Str. 416. Macleod v. Wakeley,[2] 3 C. & P. 311.

(z) See R. v. Johnson, 7 East, 65; infra, note (a).

(a) B. N. P. 6, R. v. Johnson, 7 East, 65. If A. send a libel to London to be printed and published, it is his act in London, if the publication be there. Vide infra, R. v. Watson. In R. v. Johnson, C., in the county of Middlesex, received a letter in the hand-writing of the defendant, offering to supply political matter for publication by C. in a public journal, and two letters were afterwards received by C., also in the defendant's hand-writing. It was held that these letters might be read in evidence; and that as they indicated that the writer had sent them for publication there, and they had in fact been published, this was evidence of a publication, by the procurement of the defendant, in Middlesex.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxi. 403. [2]Id. xiv. 322.

in the county of M., where A. B. received it, and read it, it was held to be a publication in the county of M. (b) (1).

If the libel be dated of a particular place, the date is evidence that it was written there (c). It has been said, that the post-mark upon a letter is not primâ facie evidence to prove that a letter has been put into the post-office at the place denoted by the post-mark (d); it seems, however, from a later authority, that the post-mark is a fact admissible in evidence, when corroborated by other circumstances (e).

*A general confession that the defendant was the writer of a libel does not amount to an admission that he published it, still less is it a confession that he published in any particular county (f) (2). *623

A late case upon this subject excited much interest, and exercised great talent and profound learning. The points were shortly as follow: the information charged the defendant with composing, writing, and publishing a libel in Leicestershire; A. stated that he received the libel, which was in the hand-writing of the defendant, from B. on the 24th of August (g); it was contained in an envelope, which had been destroyed, but which, to the best of the witness's recollection, was addresed to B. who was the professional friend of the defendant; there was no trace of any seal, either on the envelope or paper. The paper was dated Kirby Park, Aug. the 22d, Kirby Park (the defendant's seat) being situate in Leicestershire, 100 miles from London, not far from the boundary between the counties of Leicester and Rutland. The defendant was seen in the county of Leicester, near Kirby Park, on the 22d and on the 23d of August, and there was no evidence of his having left the county of Leicester till after the publication (h) of the paper, which took place on the 25th; the only words either on the paper or envelope, besides the libel, were "forward this to A." (the witness). The (b) R. v. Watson, 1 Camp. 215. R. v. Girdwood, East's P. C. 1116, 1120. The sending a letter by post from the county A. to the county B., is a publication in A. R. v. Williams, 2 Camp. 646, per Ld. Ellenborough, C. J., and see the opinion of Abbot, C. J. and Best, J. in R. v. Burdett,[1] 4 B. & A. 717; and see tit. VENUE.

(c) R. v. Burdett,[1] 1 Camp. 95.

(d) R. v. Watson, 1 Camp. 215. But the defendant was found guilty of another publication.

(e) R. v. Johnson, 7 East, 65; note, that in this case the post-mark seems to have been perfectly immaterial; but upon principle there seems to be little doubt that a post-mark, upon a letter in the hand-writing of a defendant, and received through the medium of the post, is evidence, as a circumstance arising in the usual course and routine of business. The post-mark is evidence to show that the letter was in the office whose mark it bears, at the date of the mark. R. v. Plumer, Russ. & Ry. C. C. L. 164. In the case of Fletcher & others, assignees of Parry v. Braddyll, cor. Holroyd, J. Lanc. Summ. Ass. 1822, a letter of one of the bankrupts was offered in evidence to prove an act of bankruptcy; it was objected that proof ought to be given of the existence of the letter previous to the bankruptcy, and Holroyd, J. admitted the post-mark on the letter as prima facie evidence to prove the existence of the letter at that time. The post-mistress of Lancaster was called to prove that the letter was stamped with the Wakefield post-office stamp.

(f) The Seven Bishops' Case, St. Tr. 4 Jac. 2, where the defendants, in Middlesex, admitted their signatures to a petition which had been prepared and signed in Surrey; but it was held that this was not evidence of a publication of that which was termed (but grossly misnamed) a libel in the county of Middlesex. And see the observations upon this case by Ld. Ellenborough, C. J. and Lawrence, J. in R. v. Johnson, 7 East, 65; and R. v. Burdett,[1] 4 B. & A. See also Macleod v. Wakeley,[2] 3 C. & P. 311.

(g) A. did not state where he received it, but it was assumed, and no doubt it was the fact, that he received it in Middlesex.

(h) i. e. in the public newspapers.

(1) [A libel was published in a newspaper printed in another state, but which usually circulated in a county in the state of Massachusetts, and the number containing the libel was actually received and circulated in such county. Held, that this was competent and conclusive evidence of a publication within such county. Comm. v. Blanding, 3 Pick. Rep. 304.]

(2) [An affidavit of the defendant (who had been chairman of a public meeting at which the libel in question had been signed by him and ordered by the meeting to be published) and of another person, which the defendant in his own affidavit referred to as correct, stating that the address was ordered to be published, and admitting and justifying the publication, together with a copy of the address annexed to the affidavits and referred to in them,—were held sufficient evidence of publication. Lewis v. Few, 5 Johns. 1.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 431. [2]Id. xiv. 322.

paper was addressed to the electors of Westminster; and A. had no reason for supposing that the defendant intended that it should be published, except that it was so addressed. A. having been required to give up the author, the defendant wrote a letter, admitting that he was the author. No evidence was given on the part of the defendant. It was objected at the trial, and afterwards in the court of King's Bench, after the conviction of the defendant, on a motion for a new trial, that there was no evidence of a publication in Leicestershire. The learned Judge left it to the jury to say, whether there had been a publication in Leicestershire, by an open delivery of the libel. The question, and the principles relating to it, were discussed on the motion for a new trial, with all the aid which talent, learning, experience and unwearied diligence could supply. The ultimate, although it seems not the unanimous, decision of the Court was, that the evidence was sufficient to warrant the conviction (i).

Some proofs are to be noticed which apply particularly to the proprietors *624 *and publishers of newspapers. Upon an indictment for a libel, published In a newspaper. in a newspaper called The World, proof that the paper was sold at the defendant's office, and that he as proprietor had given a bond to the Stamp-office, as required by the stat. 29 Geo. 3, c. 10, s. 10, for securing the duties on advertisements, and that he had from time to time applied to the Stamp-office respecting the duties, was held to be strong evidence to prove a publication by him (k) (1).

Where the affidavit made by the printer and proprietor of a newspaper (according to the statute 38 Geo. 3, c. 78) (l), stated the place where it was

(i) R. v. Sir Francis Burdett, bart.,[1] 3 B. & A. 717; 4 B. & A. 95. The Judges delivered their opinion seriatim.—Best, J. was of opinion that there was presumptive evidence of an actual publication in Leicestershire, and that the sending the libel by the post from that county amounted to a publication. R. v. Watson, 1 Camp. 215. R. v. Williams, 2 Camp. 505, Codex, Lib. 9, tit. 36: and see Girdwood's Case, East's P. C. 1116, 1120.)—Holroyd, J. was of opinion, that the composing and writing a libel in the county of L. and afterwards publishing it, although the publication was not within the county of L., was an offence sufficiently charged as a substantive offence in the information, and which gave jurisdiction to a jury of the county of L. (see R. v. Beere, 2 Salk. 417. Carth. 409. Holt's R. 422. R. v. Knell, Barnard, K. B. 305. R. v. Carter, Dig. L. L. 124); and that the composing and writing, with the intent afterwards to publish, also amounted to a misdemeanor, and that a jury of the county of L. might inquire as to the publishing in another county, in order to prove the defendant's intention in composing and writing in the county of L. And that in the case of an aggregate charge, part of which, being in itself a substantive misdemeanor, is committed within a particular county, the jury may inquire into the remainder, although done elsewhere; that there was reasonable evidence of a publication in L.; and that a delivery of a libel within the county, although it be sealed, is a publication in law.—Bayley, J. was of opinion that there was not sufficient evidence to support a presumption that there had been an open delivery of the libel in L., considering that positive proof might have been given by calling B. as a witness. He gave no opinion on the question, whether a close delivery amounted to a publication. He held, that the whole corpus delicti must be proved within one county; and that there was no distinction in this respect between felonies and misdemeanors. He gave no opinion on the question, whether the composing a writing, with intent to publish, constituted an offence. Abbott, C. J., intimated his opinion, that mere delivery constituted a publication He held that the facts warranted the conclusion, that the paper had been delivered by the defendant in L., to B., in the state in which it had been delivered by the latter to A. That even supposing the libel to have been delivered by the defendant in a different county, yet as the whole was a misdemeanor compounded of distinct parts, each of which was an act done in the prosecution of the same criminal intention, the whole might be tried in the county of L., where one of those acts had been done.

(k) R. v. Popham, 4 T. R. 126.

(l) By sect. 1, no person shall print or publish any newspaper, until certain affidavits, &c. shall have been delivered to the commissioners of stamps, &c.—By sect. 2, these must contain a true description of the

(1) [Where the printer testified that he had been in the defendant's office, where a certain paper was printed, and saw it printed there, and that he believed the paper produced by the plaintiff was printed with the types used in the defendant's office; this was held to be prima facie evidence of the publication by the defendant. Southwick v. Stevens, 10 Johns. 442. It is sufficient proof of a person's being the printer of a newspaper in which a libel is published, for such paper to go to the jury, that the papers were deposited in a hole behind the door of a public library, and that his common clerk received payment therefor. Respublica v. Davies, 3 Yeates, 128.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 431.

printed in London, and the newspaper given in evidence stated at the foot of it that it was printed at No. 3, Warwick-lane, London, and it was also printer(), publisher and proprietors, or of two of them, and of their places of abode; of their shares in the paper, and the house in which it is intended to be printed, and of its title.—By sect. 9, all such affidavits and affirmations, or copies thereof, certified to be true copies according to the Act, shall, in all proceedings, civil and criminal(†), touching any newspaper or other such paper as aforesaid, which shall be mentioned in any such affidavits or affirmations, or touching any publication, matter or thing contained in any such newspaper or other paper, be received and admitted as conclusive evidence of the truth of all such matters set forth in such affidavits or affirmations as are hereby required to be therein set forth, against every person who shall have signed and sworn or affirmed such affidavits or affirmations; and shall also be received and admitted in like manner, as sufficient evidence of the truth of all such matters, against all and every person who shall not have signed or sworn or affirmed the same, but who shall be therein mentioned to be a proprietor, printer or publisher of such newspaper or other paper, unless the contrary shall be satisfactorily proved. The section then contains an exception in favour of such as have before the publication of the paper in question, delivered in to the commissioners an affidavit, stating that they have ceased to be the printers, &c. of such paper.—By the 10th section, in some part of every newspaper, &c. shall be printed the names, additions, and places of abode(‡) of the printers, publishers, &c., and the place where the same is printed.—By sect. 11, it shall not be necessary after any such affidavit, &c. or a certified copy thereof, shall have been produced in evidence as aforesaid, against the persons who signed and made such affidavit, or are therein named, according to this Act, or any of them, and after a newspaper, or other such paper as aforesaid, shall be produced in evidence, intituled in the same manner as the newspaper or other paper mentioned in such affidavit or copy is intituled, and wherein the name or names of the printer and publisher, or printers and publishers, and the place of printing, shall be the same as the name or names of the printer and publisher, or printers and publishers, and the place of printing, mentioned in such affidavit or affirmation, for the plaintiff, informant or prosecutor, or person seeking to recover any of the penalties given by this Act, to prove that the newspaper or paper to which such trial relates, was purchased at any house, shop or office belonging to or occupied by the defendant or defendants, or any of them, or by his or their servants or workmen, or where he or they, by themselves, or their servants or workmen, usually carry on the business of printing or publishing such paper, or where the same is usually sold.—By sec. 13, it is enacted, that a certified copy of such affidavit or affirmation shall be delivered by the commissioners to the person requiring it, upon payment of one shilling.—By sect. 14, in order to prevent the inconvenience which might result from requiring the personal attendance of the commissioners, it is enacted that a certified copy of any affidavit or affirmation, proved to be signed by the officer who has the custody of the original, shall be received in evidence as sufficient proof of such affidavit or affirmation, and that the same was duly sworn or affirmed, and of the contents thereof; and that such copies, so produced and certified, shall also be received as evidence that the affidavit or affirmation, of which they purport to be copies, have been sworn or affirmed according to this Act; and shall have the same effect for the purposes of evidence as the originals would have had in case they had been produced and proved to have been duly so certified, sworn and affirmed, by the person appearing by such copy to have sworn or affirmed the same as aforesaid.—By the 17th section it is enacted, that every printer or publisher of any newspaper or other such paper, shall, within six days, deliver to the commissioners, or their officer, one of the papers (§) so published, signed by the printer or publisher in his hand-writing, with his name and place of abode; and that the same shall be kept by the commissioners or their officer, under a penalty, in case of neglect by such printer or publisher, of 100*l.*; and that upon application by any person to the commissioners or their officer, to have such paper produced in evidence in any proceeding, whether civil or criminal, such com-

(*) One who lets out types and men to print a newspaper, is not a printer within the stat. 38 Geo. 3, c. 78; the party who hires the men, and superintends the printing, is the party responsible to the Stamp-office. Bagster v. Robinson,[1] 9 Bing. 77.

(†) The provisions of the statute are applicable in the case of a motion for a criminal information. R. v. Dennison,[2] 4 B. & Ad. 698; and R. v. Franceys,[3] 2 Ad. & Ell. 49.

(‡) The affidavit was, "situate Union-street, Castle-street;" the newspaper was, Union buildings, John-street; the variance, on motion for criminal information, was held to be fatal. Note.—The Court said they would notice the newspaper filed with the affidavits, although not expressly identified by or annexed to any affidavit. R. v. Dennison,[2] 4 B. & Ad. 698; R. v. Franceys,[3] 2 Ad. & Ell. 49.

(§) Such a delivery amounts to a publication in respect of which the party may be indicted, if the matter be libellous. R. v. Amphlitt,[4] 4 B. & C. 35. But the rule does not extend to one who is not the printer or publisher. Adams v. Kelly,[5] 1 Ry. & M. 157. Where the identical paper was produced by the distributor of stamps, marked with various charges corresponding with the sum paid by the defendant of the distributor; held that it was evidence to go to the jury of a publication by the defendant; held also, that it was libellous to print and publish a ludicrous story of the plaintiff, exposing him to ridicule, notwithstanding it appeared that the plaintiff himself had told it of himself; and that evidence of the plaintiff having been exposed to public laughter at a vestry was evidence as identifying the subject of the libel, and proving the consequences of the publication. Cook v. Ward,[6] 6 Bing. 409. Where the plaintiff produced a certified copy of the affidavit lodged at the Stamp-office, and a newspaper containing the libel, corresponding with the paper described in the affidavit, it was held to be sufficient evidence of publication. Moyne v. Fletcher,[7] 9 B. & C. 382. And see R. v. Leigh Hunt, Ib. in notis, 385.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxiii. 270. [2]Id. xxiv. 143. [3]Id. xxix. 27. [4]Id. x. 275. [5]Id. v. 429. [6]Id. xix. 117. [7]Id. xvii. 401.

proved that the defendant's printing-house was there; it was held to be sufficient evidence of a publication in London (m) (A).

The observations which have been made as to variances between the *626 allegation *and proof of words, apply still more forcibly to the case of a libel, which must be set out in the pleadings secundum tenorem or in hæc verba, or by equivalent words (m) (1) (a).

Variance. It is no variance, although the libel read in evidence contain matter in addition to that which is set out on the record, provided the additional part does not by its context alter the sense of that which is set out (n). But if the additional matter causes the libel proved to vary in sense from that alleged, or if by a selection of passages, and setting them out as one continuous libel, the sense be altered, the variance will be fatal (o).

With respect to the alteration of one or more letters of a word, the rule missioners or officer shall, at the expense of the applicant, at any time within two years from the publication, either cause the same to be produced in the court, and at the time when the same is required to be produced, or shall deliver the same to the applicant, on his giving reasonable security, at his own expense, for returning the same; and that in case such commissioners or their officer cannot, by reason of a previous application, comply with the terms of a subsequent one, they shall comply with such subsequent one as soon afterwards as they shall be able so to do. The above statute has been repealed, and provisions of a similar nature have been substituted by the 6 & 7 W. 4, c. 76, s. 8. See APPENDIX.

(m) R. v. Hart & White, 10 East, 94.

(m) See Dr. Sacheverell's Case, 8 St. Tr. 557; 2 Salk. 417., R. v. Beare, 1 Ld. Raym. 414; Holt's R. 348. 350; Starkie's Crim. Pl. 2d edit. 124; Starkie's Law of Libel, 314, 2d. edit.; and see the late st. 9 G. 4, c. 15; infra, tit. VARIANCE.

(n) See Sir J. Sydenham's Case, supra, 618; and Tabart v. Tipper, 1 Camp. 350. One count of a declaration for a libel stated the words as follow: "My sarcastic friend, by leaving out the repetition or chorus of Mr. T.'s poem, greatly injured the tout ensemble," &c. The words proved in evidence were, "My sarcastic friend ΜΩΡΟΣ by leaving out," &c., and Lord Ellenborough held that the variance was material. See also tit. VARIANCE; and Appendix; and Cartwright v. Wright,[1] 5 B. & A. 615. In an action for a libel contained in a letter addressed "to the treasurer of the N. E. Company," and slandering the plaintiff in his employment as surveyor of the company, held that it was not necessary to allege with extreme precision the description of the company, nor to prove the plaintiff's employment by deed, the libel being alleged of the plaintiff in that employment; the letter going on, after stating the libellous matter, to say, that the writer had never disclosed the matter, nor ever would, except to the person he addressed and his friend, which was not set out in the declaration; it was held, that although the defendant might avail himself of the whole of the letter to repel malice, yet the omission of such part in no way qualifying the meaning of the libellous part set out, was not a ground of variance. Rutherford v. Evans,[2] 6 Bing. 451.

(o) 1 Camp. C. 350. Where a declaration alleged a publication by the defendant, omitting a reference, from which on reading the libel it appeared to be a quotation, the variance was held to be fatal. Cartwright v. Wright,[1] 5 B. & A. 615. So where the libel as alleged imputed to an engineer "mismanagement or ignorance," and the words proved were, "ignorance or inattention." Brooks v. Blanshard, 1 C. & M. 779; 3 Tyr. 844. As to variances in allegations of intention, see tit. VARIANCE, and the observations of Buller, J. in Peppin v. Solomon, 5 T. R. 497.

(A) (It is competent for the plaintiff to prove by parol evidence that the defendant had a printing office, and that the paper in which the libel appeared was printed there, and that the paper produced was of the type of that office; and that it was printed in the name of the defendant. Southwick v. Stevens, 10 John. R. 444.)

(1) [In a declaration for a libel, if the plaintiff declares quæ sequitur in his verbis, scilicet, the minutest variance between the libel offered in evidence and the declaration is fatal. Semb. Harris v. Lawrence & al. 1 Tyler, 156. Olin v. Chipman, 2 ib. 148. So in an indictment, if the tenor is undertaken to be recited, and the recital is variant in a word, or letter, so as thereby to create a different word. The State v. Coffey, 2 Taylor, 272. Where an indictment for a libel charged the defendant with publishing that A. was "worse that the lowest vagabonds," &c., and the words proved were "worse than the lowest vagabonds"—a new trial was granted to the defendant. Walsh v. The State, 2 M'Cord, 248. But is not a ground to arrest judgment, that the declaration professed to set out a libel in hæc verba, and that there was an immaterial variance. Calhoun v. M'Meers, 1 Nott & M'Cord, 422.]

(2) [Where the declaration, in action for a libel, charges the publication, without purporting to set forth in hæc verba, proof of the publication of a libel, containing part of the libellous matter charged, is sufficient. Metcalfe v. Williams, 3 Litiell's Rep. 389.]

(a) Where the defendant published imputations against the plaintiff as envoy of Chili, and the plaintiff having avowed in his declaration that he was such, the averment was held to be sufficiently proved. Yrisarri v. Clement. Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiii. 36.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. vii. 358. [2] Id. xix. 128.

seems to be now settled, that if the sense be altered by the changing of one word into another the variance will be fatal, but not otherwises (p).

2dly. Where the plaintiff or prosecutor has fairly launched his case, by proof of the words or libel, he is next, in the usual order of proof, to establish in evidence the prefatory averments (q) and innuendos which are alleged in *the declaration or indictment, and which are essential to his case. If the publication affects the plaintiff in a particular character, it must be proved that the character belonged to him, or that he filled the office or situation at the time of the publication complained of. It has already been seen that a man's special character is usually established by evidence of his having acted in that capacity, for then a presumption in fact arises that he legally acted in that capacity (r). And where the title to the particular situation is not the subject of any express documentary appointment, the acting in the situation, trade or business, is of course the only evidence which the fact admits of. Proof of averments, &c. *627

The evidence of character, in actions brought by physicians (s), attornies (t), &c. has already been adverted to (u). Notwithstanding the doubts which have prevailed upon the subject, the better opinion seems to be, that evidence of the plaintiff's having acted in the particular character in which the words affect him, is primâ facie evidence of his title to it (v). Where, however, there is any reason to apprehend that evidence will be offered on the other side to disprove the fact, the plaintiff ought to be prepared with the best evidence to establish it. If the declaration allege a diploma or appointment, it must be proved, although the special allegation was unnecessary (x).

In general, if the slander or libel assume that the plaintiff possesses the character, or fills the situation or office in which he is defamed, it operates by way of admission (y), and is primâ facie evidence of the fact. Accord-

(p) According to the distinction taken in The Queen v. Drake, Salk. 660; 3 Salk. 224; as where the word not was inserted for nor. If the sense be not altered, the variance is immaterial, even upon an indictment for perjury. As where the assignment for perjury alleged that the defendant had sworn in the affidavit on which the perjury was assigned, that he understood and believed, whereas the words in the affidavit were "understood and believed;" and upon motion for a new trial, Lord Mansfield, after observing upon the great length of nicety to which the cases had been carried, particularly the case in Hutton, where Indicari had been written for Indictari, said that the case had been shaken by the doctrine laid down in Hawkins. 2 Haw. c. 46, s. 190. And that the true distinction had been taken in The Queen v. Drake, R. v. Beech, Leach, C. C. L. 158. R. v. May, Leach, 227. Starkie's Crim. Pl. tit. VARIANCE. Starkie's L. Libel, 2 edit. vol. 1, p. 377. Infra, tit. PERJURY—VARIANCE. R. v. Mary Ann Taylor, 1 Camp. 404.

(q) The Insolvent Act requiring that the petition shall be subscribed by the prisoner, and filed, and a certified copy admitted as legal evidence, held that it must be presumed to have been regularly done, and that such copy therefore was sufficient proof of an allegation in a declaration for a libel, that a petition subscribed by the plaintiff, as such prisoner, had been duly filed, &c. Gould v. Hulme,[1] 3 C. & P. 625. Where the words convey a substantive imputation of a crime, introductory averments are unnecessary. See Starkie on Slander and Libel, V. 1, p. 383. Curtis v. Curtis,[2] 10 Bing. 477. Slowman v. Dutton,[3] 10 Bing. 402. A declaration for a libel, headed "an honest lawyer," alleged that the plaintiff had been reprimanded by one of the masters of the Court for sharp practice, with introductory averments that the plaintiff had carried on the business of an attorney, and been engaged as such in a certain cause, and that sharp practice in such profession was considered to be disreputable to the attorney practising the same; held, that such matter was libellous, and that the averment that the libel was ironical, coupled with the innuendo that the term "honest lawyer" was used in a libellous sense, was sufficient. Boydell v. Jones, 4 M. & W. 446; and 7 Dowl. 210.

(r) Supra, 307, and the cases there cited.

(s) Words imputing adultery to a physician are not actionable, unless shown to be connected with professional character. Ayre v. Craven,[4] 2 Ad. & Ell. 2. And see Lumby v. Allday, 1 C. & J. 301; 1 Tyr. 217.

(t) See tit. ATTORNIES.—CHARACTER. (u) Supra, tit. CHARACTER.

(v) But see Collins v. Carnegie,[5] 1 Ad. & Ell. 695.

(x) Supra, 218. And see in general as to proof of special character, Moises v. Thornton, 8 T. R. 303; Collins v. Carnegie,[5] 1 Ad. & Ell. 695; Jones v. Stevens, 11 Price, 251; Sparling v. Heddon, 9 Bing. 11; R. v. Crossley, 2 Esp. C. 526; Whittington v. Gludwin,[6] 2 C. & P. 146.

(y) Berryman v. Wise, 4 T. R. 366. And see Smith v. Taylor, 1 N. R. 196. So where the libel itself showed that certain acts of outrage had been committed, it is evidence to support an averment of the fact ing *to the general rule, all averments which are material, that is, which are connected with the charge, must be proved, but those which are immaterial need not be proved (z). An information alleged that the King had issued a particular proclamation, and also averred, that on occasion of that proclamation divers addresses had been presented to his Majesty by divers of his subjects; the information charged the defendant with a publication with intent to bring the said proclamation into contempt, but did not refer to the addresses; it was held to be essential to prove the fact that such a proclamation was issued (a), but it seems that it was unnecessary to prove that any addresses had been presented (b).

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiv. 491. [2]Id. xxv. 206. [3]Id. xxv. 182. [4]Id. xxix. 11. [5]Id. xxviii. 180. [6]Id. xii. 64.

So in general where the declaration or indictment avers the existence of particular facts, and that the publication was of and concerning those facts, their existence, if material to the actionable or criminal quality of the publication, must be proved. In an action for libel on a constable, alleged in both counts of the declaration to have been published concerning his conduct in the apprehension of persons stealing a dead body, it was averred in the first count what that conduct had been, and it was alleged that he had carried the dead body to Surgeons Hall; the Court held that it was necessary, under both counts, to prove this introductory allegation (c) (1).

in the introductory part of the record. See the observations of Bayley, J., 4 M. & S. 548. Where in an action for a libel against the plaintiff, a medical practitioner, of and concerning him in his said practice, no evidence was offered of the plaintiff being of any regular degree, the libel stating him to be a quack, and that certain persons had the misfortune to come within his doctrinal prescriptions; held, that if the jury considered that the libel spoke of him as a medical practitioner, the libel was not withdrawn from their consideration, although they might not give the same damages as to a person proved to be a regular practitioner; held also, that subsequent publications, although the subject of action, were admissible in evidence to show the motives of the defendant. Long v. Chubb,[1] 5 C. & P. 55. The declaration alleged that the plaintiff was an auctioneer and appraiser, and had been employed by the defendant as an appraiser, to value certain goods; and that intending to injure him in his business of an auctioneer, the defendant spoke of him and of his conduct as to such valuation, "He is a damned rascal, he has cheated me out of 100*l.* on the valuation;" the words themselves were held sufficiently to show that the slander was of and concerning the plaintiff in the way of his trade, and sufficient after verdict. Bryant v. Loxton,[2] 11 Moore, 344. See further, Figgins v. Cogswell, 3 M. & S. 360; Hall v. Smith, 1 M. & S. 187; Rutherford v. Evans,[3] 6 Bing. 451; Yrisarri v. Clement,[4] 3 Bing. 432.

(z) Infra, tit. VARIANCE. R. v. Holt, 5 T. R. 436. Action on the case for exhibiting an inscription tending to defame the plaintiff as the keeper of a brothel, a prefatory allegation that he carried on business as a retailer of wines need not be proved, there being no colloquim of the trade. Jefferies v. Duncombe, 11 East, 226. In general, where the words or libel are laid to be published of and concerning several different facts, a variance from one or more, if it does not alter the nature of the criminal or actionable quality of the words or libel, is not material. Lewis v. Walter,[5] 3 B. & C. 138, n. May v. Brown,[6] 3 B. & C. 113. Infra, tit. VARIANCE. Where the plaintiff had a clear right to sell the whole of a certain interest, which he derived from the defendant, but his right to sell part only was doubtful; and he alleged that he put up his said interest to sell, and that the defendant published, &c. of and concerning his said interest; it was held that the allegation was not supported by proof that he put up an underlease of part of the term only; for a grant of an underlease is not a sale of anything; and therefore the proof did not sustain the averment pro tanto. Millman v. Pratt,[7] 2 B. & C. 486.

(a) R. v. Holt, 5 T. R. 436.

(b) Per Buller, J., Ibid. 446. As if the slander or libel state the plaintiff to be an attorney or physician.

(c) Teesdale v. Clement,[8] 1 Chitty, R. 603. The Court intimated that the plaintiff needed not to have burthened himself with the proof. Abbott, C. J.,[6] 3 B & C. 124, stated that the ground of decision in that case was, that the fact was material. The plaintiff had in truth made it material by the form of his declaration. Where the introductory averments are immaterial they need not be proved. See Cox v. Thomason, 2 C. & J. 391. See Vol. I. tit. VARIANCE; Heriot v. Stuart, 1 Esp. C. 437; Sellers v. Till,[9] 4 B. & C. 656; Shepherd v. Bliss,[10] 2 Starkie's C. 510. An innuendo which enlarges the meaning of the terms used is bad on demurrer. Gompertz v. Levi, 1 P. & D. 214.

(1) [On an indictment for a libel on C. J., describing her as the only daughter of the widow R., the innuendo averred the identity of the prosecutrix and the daughter of the widow R.; it was held that it was not necessary to prove the prosecutrix to be her only daughter. The State v. Perrin, 1 Const. Rep. 446. Matters stated as inducement, in a declaration for a libel, may be proved by parol. Southwich v. Stevens, 10 Johns. 443.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxiv. 209. [2]Id. xxii. 413. [3]Id. xix. 128. [4]Id. xiii. 36. [5]Id. x. 36. [6]Id. x. 24. [7]Id. ix. 156. [8]Id. xviii. 173. [9]Id. x. 434. [10]Id. iii. 453.

The colloquium, and other averments, which connect the words or libel with the plaintiff or subject-matter before stated, must next be proved. This is usually done by the testimony of one or more witnesses who know the parties and circumstances, and who state their opinion and judgment as to the intention of the defendant to apply his words or libel to the parties or circumstances as alleged (1) (A.) It seems to be sufficient if the witness in the first instance state his general belief and opinion as to the defendant's meaning, without disclosing his reasons, leaving it to the defendant if he think proper to inquire as to the grounds and reasons which support that conclusion. The truth of an innuendo is a question of fact for the jury (d); *and, in general, if the meaning of the term be ambiguous, it is for the jury to say in what sense they were used. Thus if the defendant call the plaintiff a thief, and it be doubtful under the circumstances whether the term was meant to be applied in its felonious sense, it is for the jury to decide (e). Colloquium and innuendos. *629

(d) Per Lord Ellenborough, C. J., in Roberts v. Cambden, 9 East, 96. Sir W. Blackstone, 2 W. Bl. 962; and Gould, J., in Oldham v. Peake, 2 W. Bl. 959; Cowp. 278. Pennfold v. Westcott, 2 N. R. 335.

(e) Penfold v. Westcott, 2 N. R. 335. It has been said that the understanding of the hearers is the rule to go by. Sel. N. P. 1252. M. S. Case, 1 Viner, 507; where it is laid down that the question is only what was understood by the hearers. In Fleetwood v. Curley, Hob. 268, Lord Hobart says, the slander and damage consist in the apprehension of the hearers. In Gilbert's Cas. Law and Equity, the rule laid down is, that the words shall be taken in the sense in which the hearers understand them. No doubt the understanding of the hearers is a good test for ascertaining the meaning, where the hearers understand them in an actionable sense, but it is not conclusive the other way; for where the words are actionable in respect of extrinsic facts, as for instance, where they are spoken of the plaintiff in his character of an attorney, it is not essential to show that the hearers knew the fact at the time of speaking, for they may know it afterwards, and communicate the words to those who know it. P. C. Fleetwood v. Curley, Hob. 267. Where the libel consisted of an insertion in a circular letter, sent by the secretary of a society for the protection of trade, stating "that a bill drawn on and accepted by the plaintiff was made payable at a banker's where he had no account;" held, that as it stated a specific fact which required no explanation, a witness could not be asked what he understood by finding a person's name in such a paper; but the Judge permitted the question, whether such statement had any other meaning beyond that which was expressed on the face of it. Humphreys v. Miller,[1] 4 C. & P. 7. A letter threatening to accuse the party of an infamous crime, but not naming it, was held to be within the 4 Geo. 4, c. 54, and that declarations of the prisoner as to what he meant are admissible. Tucker's Case,[2] 1 Ry. & M. 134. Where the libel purported to be the report of a proceeding in the Insolvent Court, and imputed to the insolvent's landlord (the plaintiff) that he colluded with the insolvent in putting in a fictitious distress; held, that the Judge ought not to have left it as a question to the jury, whether the defendant intended to injure the plaintiff, but that if he thought the tendency of the publication injurious to the plaintiff, to have told them it was actionable, and that the plaintiff was entitled to a verdict. The law presumes a party to have intended to produce the injury which his act is calculated to effect. Haire v. Wilson,[3] 9 B. & C. 643. And see Ward v. Smith,[4] 6 Bing. 749. Where the direction of the Judge to the jury was substantially, whether the tendency of the libel was injurious to the plaintiff, and that they were to collect the intention of the defendant from the libel itself, the Court refused a new trial. Fisher v. Clement,[4] 10 B. & C. 472. The question where the language of an alleged libel is

(1) [The plaintiff cannot prove by witnesses that from reading the libel they believe he was intended therein. Van Vetchten v. Hopkins, 5 Johns. 211.

From the nature of an innuendo, it cannot be the subject of proof by witnesses. Aliter, of an averment and colloquium, which introduce into the pleading extrinsic matter, that is the proper subject of proof. Ibid.

By a default and interlocutory judgment, the fact of publication and the truth of the innuendos are admitted—and the defendant cannot, before the jury of inquiry, call their attention to other paragraphs contained in the same publication in order to show a different meaning of the words complained of, than that set up by the plaintiff. Tillotson v. Cheetham, 3 Johns. 56. See The State v. Neese, 2 Taylor, 270. Caldwell v. Abbey, Hardin, 530. Davis v. Davis, 1 Nott & M'Cord, 290. Hoyle v. Young, 1 Wash. 152. Cave v. Shelor & ux., 2 Munf. 193. Burtch v. Nickerson, 17 Johns. 271. Lindsey v. Smith, 7 Ib. 359. M'Claughry v. Wetmore, 6 Ib. 82. Vaughan v. Havens, Ib. 109. Van Vetchten v. Hopkins, ubi sup. Chaddock v. Briggs, 13 Mass. Rep. 248. Shaffer v. Kintzer, 1 Binney, 543. Rice v. Mitchell, 2 Dallas, 58. Parker v. Spangler & al. 2 Binney, 60. M'Clurg v. Ross, 5 Ib. 218. Fowle v. Robbins, 12 Mass. Rep. 498, as to the doctrine of innuendo and colloquium.]

(A) (A witness cannot state whom or what he was induced by current rumour or the conversations of others, to think the defendant meant when he used the words. Allinsworth v. Coleman, 5 Dana, 315. And see Becket v. Sterrett, 4 Blackf. 499.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 250. [2]Id. xvii. 465. [3]Id. xix. 222. [4]Id. xxi. 117.

Wherever a specific meaning is given to the terms of a libel or oral slander by connecting it with previous matter, the whole must be proved as being essential to the nature and identity of the charge (f). Where the innuendo does not refer to any preceding averment, but unnecessarily introduces new matter, it may be rejected (g).

Evidence of malice.

In an action for oral slander or libel, the proof of malice either results from the slander itself, or is matter of extrinsic evidence (A). Where the slander or libel stands unexplained by any collateral evidence which indicates the intention of the party, and no light is derived from the occasion and circumstances attending the publication, by which the mind of the author can be read, the Court and jury necessarily derive their inference from the words themselves, reading and understanding them, according to

*630 *their plain import and meaning, in their usual and ordinary sense. If the natural tendency and import of the expressions used be to vilify, defame and injure, then, according to every principle of reason and justice, the plaintiff must be taken to have acted maliciously, that is, with a view to effect those consequences to which the means which he has used naturally and obviously tend (h) (1).

Where, therefore, there is no doubt as to the illegal quality of the words or writing published, and no circumstances appear which in point of law, entitle the speaker or writer to any privilege in making the communication, his malice is a mere inference of law from the act of publication, and no extrinsic proof of malice is necessary (i) (B).

ambiguous, is not as to the intention of the publisher, but the tendency of the matter published to injure the plaintiff. Ib. Lord Ellenborough, in the case of Dubost v. Beresford, 2 Camp. 512, held that the declarations of spectators admitted to see a libellous picture were evidence to show the intention to represent the parties libelled. The word rob is actionable unless it appear to have been used in a sense not actionable. Tomlinson v. Brittlebank,[1] 4 B. & Ad. 630.

(f) Supra, Vol. I. tit. Variance, and see May v. Brown,[2] 3 B. & C. 128. Sellers v. Till,[3] 4 B. & C. 656. Harvey v. French, 1 C. & M. 11. Williams v. Stott, 1 C. & M. 687.

(g) See Roberts v. Camden, 9 East, 93. Day v. Robinson,[4] 1 A. & E. 558. Harvey v. French, 1 C. & M. 11. Williams v. Gardner, 1 M. & W. 245.

(h) Supra, tit. Intention. [Erwin v. Sumrow, 1 Hawks, 472. Jackson v. Stetim, 15 Mass. R. 48.] Ld. Kenyon's observations in R. v. Lord Abingdon, Esp. C. 228. In R. v. Creevey, 1 M. & S. 273, which was an indictment against a member of parliament, for publishing in a newspaper a speech which he had delivered in the House of Commons, it was objected that the malice ought to be proved by extrinsic evidence; but Le Blanc, J. informed the jury, that where a publication is defamatory, the law infers malice, unless anything can be drawn from the circumstances attending the publication to rebut that inference; and added, that in point of law, the circumstance of its being a publication of a speech delivered by a member of the House of Commons did not rebut it. Vide supra, tit. Intention; and infra, tit. Malice. See also, R. v. Harvey,[5] 2 B. & C. 257. Macpherson v. Daniels,[6] 10 B. & C. 272. In 6 East, Lord Ellenborough observed, that in Bromage v. Prosser,[7] 4 B. & C. 247, it was held that where the occasion of speaking the words affords a prima facie justification, there malice in fact must be proved; but that where the act is in itself injurious, and is not privileged by any legal occasion, malice is a mere inference of law from the act itself. The Court are the judges of libel or no libel. Levi v. Milne,[8] 4 Bingh. 195. See Starkie on Libel, 2d edit. Preliminary Discourse, vol. 1, c. 8—13; vol. 2, c. 12, and the 6th Report of the Criminal Law Commissioners. In case for libel on a shipowner, alleging that his vessel was not seaworthy, and was hired by Jews, and intended to take in convicts; it was held to be a libel in his business, and entitling him to recover damages, without proof of malice, or allegation of special damage. Ingram v. Lawson, 6 Bing. N. C. 212.

(i) Where the plaintiff brought an action against the defendant, for saying that he had heard that the plaintiff was hanged for stealing a horse, and upon the evidence it appeared that the words were spoken in

(A) (The deliberate publication of a calumny, when the publisher knows it to be false, or has no reason to believe it to be true, is conclusive evidence of malice. Bodwell v. Osgood, 3 Pick. 379. If the defendant plead the truth of the words in justification, such plea will be sufficient evidence that they were uttered deliberately and maliciously. Alderman v. French, 18 Mass. R. 1.)

(B) (Where the words are not actionable in themselves, but become so by extrinsic circumstances, these must be averred and proved. Bullock v. Koon, 9 Cow. 30.)

(1) {The malicious intent charged in an indictment for a libel, where the truth of the facts contained in the libel is not admitted in evidence, is an inference of law. Comm. v. Blanding, 3 Pick. Rep. 304.}

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxiv. 128. [2]Id. x. 24. [3]Id. x. 434. [4]Id. xxviii. 151. [5]Id. ix. 77. [6]Id. xxi. 69. [7]Id. x. 321. [8]Id. xiii. 396.

But where it appears that the words were spoken or libel published on an occasion and under circumstances which the law regards as privileged, that is, as it seems, where they were spoken or published in the bonâ fide discharge of some legal or moral duty to society, or even in the fair and honest prosecution of the rights of the party himself, or the protection of his interests, the plaintiff will fail, unless he can establish the malicious intention by means of the words or libel, or by sufficient extrinsic evidence, and show that the defendant used the occasion as a mere colour and pretext for venting his malice (k) (A). In some instances, indeed, which will be afterwards noticed, where the publication occurs in the performance of a legal duty, which the defendant is bound to perform, the occasion of publication is not merely evidence to rebut the inference of *malice, but is an absolute bar to the action; as, where the party was acting in the capacity of a Judge, or witness, or party in the cause (l). And in such cases the malice of the party is immaterial. In other cases, where the publication arises in the course of discharging any duty, the performance of which is required by the ordinary exigencies of society, although the party was under no absolute legal obligation to perform it, the occasion operates in the nature of evidence, and supplies a primâ facie justification. *631

Thus where a party having probable cause lays claim to land, and a loss results to the real owner, it is a question for the jury whether the defendant acted bonâ fide; and the want of probable cause for making the claim, unless it be such as induces the jury, under the circumstances, to infer that the defendant acted out of malice (m), will not entitle the plaintiff to recover (1). Where a master gives the character of a servant, malice will not be presumed, but must be expressly proved (n); and that whether the master be or be not asked for a character (o). In such cases, proof that grief and sorrow for the news, the plaintiff was nonsuited, because the words were not spoken maliciously. Lev. 82; cited by Twysden, J., as a case which he had heard tried before Hobart, J., and all the Court agreed that the plaintiff had been properly nonsuited. See 1 Vin. Ab. 540. It may, however, well be doubted whether at the present day the mere absence of a malicious and injurious intention, without any justifying occasion recognized by the law, would furnish a legal defence for the use of words in themselves defamatory and illegal. If a man were falsely to say, though in sorrow, that a trader had become bankrupt, and a loss were occasioned by the assertion, it ought, in point of natural justice, to be compensated by the party who, through ignorance or carelessness, and without any legal cause, occasioned the loss; and the case stands on the same footing, though no actual loss can be proved, but where the law presumes one, and constitutes the communication a substantive injury.

(k) The jury may infer express malice, from the terms of the libel itself. Wright v. Woodgate, 2 C. M. & M. 573.

(l) Infra, 638. So where the defendant pleads that the allegations are true. See Starkie's Law of Libel, 229, 2d edit.; or where the defendant pleads that he has merely repeated the words of another, and that he has given up the author. Ibid. 329.

(m) Pitt v. Donovan, 1 M. & S. 639. Smith v. Spooner, cor. Lord Ellenborough, 1811. Starkie on Libel, 287, 2d edit. Where the owner of a house had prevented the plaintiff, his lessee for years, from disposing of the remainder of his term, by falsely asserting that he had no title, it was left to the jury to say whether there was malice or not. See Gerard v. Dickenson, 4 Rep. 18; and the cases cited, Starkie on Libel, Vol. I. p. 287, 2d edit. Smith v. Spooner, 3 Taunt. 246.

(n) Hargreave v. Le Breton, 4 Burr. 2425. Weatherstone v. Hawkins, 1 T. R. 110; Burr. 2425. Edmondson v. Stephenson, B. N. P. 8. [3 Pick. R. 315.] If, as laid down in Weatherstone v. Hawkins, 1 T. R., it be incumbent on the plaintiff to prove the falsity as well as malice of the charge, it seems that, provided malice be shown, general evidence of good conduct would be sufficient prima facie evidence to establish the falsity where the charge is specific, for in such a case, where the imputation is in fact unfounded, it is impossible that the plaintiff should be prepared with particular evidence. And see Pattison v. Jones,[1] 8 B. & C. 578. Child v. Affleck,[2] 9 B. & C. 403. To prove such express malice evidence that the character was false is admissible. Rogers v. Clifton, 3 B. & P. 587. Pattison v. Jones,[1] 8 B. & C. 578. King v. Waring, 5 Esp. C. 13.

(o) Rogers v. Sir Gervase Clifton, 3 B. & P. 587. But the fact that the master volunteered the giving of

(A) (See Faris v. Starke, 9 Dana, 130.)

(1) [In an action for slandering the plaintiff's title to property, by a letter written by the defendant, if it the master sought occasions of speaking ill of the servant, without any application to him for a character, and that the representation was made in heat and passion, after a quarrel between them, and above all, that the master wilfully misrepresented the servant's character contrary to his better knowledge, are important manifestations of malice in support of the action (p). Again, where a communication, imputing misconduct to the plaintiff, is made confidentially by a person interested, or to a person interested, no action is maintainable, provided it was made bonâ fide with a *632 view to the interests of those concerned (q); and *although in such case the expressions used are stronger than the exigency of the case warranted, it is a question for the jury whether they were used with an intention to defame, or with good faith to communicate facts, in the knowledge of which the party had an interest (r). Where an advertisement was published in a newspaper the tendency of which was to throw upon the plaintiff a suspicion that he had been guilty of bigamy; yet as it appeared that this had been done at the instance of the plaintiff's wife, it was left to the jury, under the circumstances, to say whether it had been done bonâ fide on behalf of the wife, in order to ascertain a fact in which she was materially interested (s). So where the alleged slander was contained in a the character, is a circumstance to be taken into consideration in estimating the defendant's motives. See the observations of the Court in Pattison v. Jones,[1] 8 B. & C. 578; Child v. Affleck,[2] 9 B. & C. 403.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xvii. 405. [2]Id. xvii. 405.

(p) Ibid. And see Lowry v. Aikenhead, cited 3 B. & P. 587. If the plaintiff, knowing what character the master will give, procure it to be given for the purpose of founding an action upon it, he will not, it is said, be entitled to recover.

(q) M'Dougall v. Claridge, 1 Camp. 267. Where the defendant wrote a letter to his bankers, charging the plaintiff, a solicitor, with misconduct in the management of their concerns, it appeared that the letter was written confidentially, and that the defendant was himself interested in those affairs, and Lord Ellenborough nonsuited the plaintiff, and referred to the case of Cleaver v. Sarraude, where it appeared that the letter had been written confidentially by the defendant to the Bishop of Durham, to inform him of malpractices on the part of the plaintiff as the Bishop's steward, and the learned Judge nonsuited the plaintiff. So where the plaintiff, a dissenting minister, went with a friend to the defendant, who in answer to questions put to him, stated that his wife had been cautioned against the plaintiff as a drunkard, &c. Warr v. Jolly,[3] 6 C. & P. 497. Where, in an action of slander against the defendant, a surveyor employed by a committee to investigate the truth of reports against the plaintiff, as having executed improperly contract work for them, which the defendant alleged, on such inquiry, to be the case; held, that such a report was not a privileged communication, it being found by the jury that the reports originated with the defendant, and were false. Smith v. Matthews, 2 M. & M. 151. And see Starkie on Libel, Vol. I. c. xiii. 2d ed.

(r) Dunmore v. Bigg, 1 Camp. 269, where the defendant having supplied beer to the plaintiff, for which Leigh was surety, went to Leigh and complained of the plaintiff's conduct in terms of great opprobrium, there being a sum then due for beer, and Lord Ellenborough, considering that the defendant had been betrayed by his passion into unwarrantable expressions, left the question of malice to the jury. A letter addressed to the judge, being an irregular and improper proceeding, cannot be considered as falling within the rule as to privileged communications. Gould v. Hulme,[4] 3 C. & P. 625. Where the libel, professing to be a report of proceedings in a court of justice, did not profess to state facts as deposed to by witnesses, but only as stated by the counsel for the prosecution; held that it could not be justified as a privileged publication; and that the Judge properly rejected evidence of publications by others to the same effect. Saunders v. Mills,[5] 6 Bing. 213.

(s) Delany v. Jones, 4 Esp. C. 191. Where the alleged libel was contained in a handbill offering a reward for the recovery of bills, and stated that the plaintiff was believed to have embezzled them; held, that if it was done with the view solely to protect persons liable on the bills, or for the conviction of the offender, it was a good defence; and that in order to show the bona fides of the defendant, evidence of his having preferred a charge of the same nature against the plaintiff was admissible. Finden v. Westlake,[6] 1 M. & M. 461. See Lay v. Lawson,[7] 4 Ad. & Ell. 795, and the remarks there made on Delany v. Jones. So in the case of an advertisement for the discovery of the plaintiff, an absconding debtor, at the instance of a party who had sued out a capias in order to enable the sheriff to take him. Lay v. Lawson,[7] 4 Ad. & Ell. 795; and see Finden v. Westlake,[6] M. & M. 462. If, however, the publication be more extensive than is appear that a loss to the plaintiff, in a sale of the property, was occasioned by such letter, the defendant ought to make reparation, though the jury believe that he designed no injury. Ross v. Pines, 3 Call, 568. Sed vide 4 Burr. 2422. Yelv. 89, note, and cases above, note (a).]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xv. 303. [2] Id. xvii. 405. [3] Id. xxv. 508. [4] Id. xiv. 490. [5] Id. xix. 60. [6] Id. xxii. 356. [7] Id. xxxi. 182.

communication made by the defendant, a sergeant in a volunteer corps, of which the plaintiff was also a member, to the committee by which the affairs of the corps were conducted, that the plaintiff was an improper person to remain a member of the corps (t) (A). So where the words are delivered by way of admonition or advice (u) (1), or spoken in confidence and friendship (x). *Upon similar principles, fair criticisms upon the merits of literary works are not actionable. *633

If a commentator does not step aside from the work, or introduce fiction for the purpose of condemnation, or follow the plaintiff into private and domestic life, for purposes personally slanderous, and unconnected with the work whose merits he professes to discuss, he exercises, it has been said by authority, a fair and legitimate right (y); but it is a question for the jury, whether the defendant has not made false assertions in point of fact, for injurious purposes, or exceeded the bounds of fair and legitimate criticism for the purpose of personal slander (z). Where the ground of complaint necessary for the purpose of procuring the desired information, it will be actionable. Brown v. Crome,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 297, subject, however, to the observations, supra.

(t) Barbaud v. Hookham, 5 Esp. C. 109. [See Mr. Day's note to this case.]

(u) M'Dougall v. Claridge, 1 Camp. 267; Dunmore v. Bigg, 1 Camp. 269; Herver v. Dawson, B. N. P. 8; Twogood v. Spyring, 1 C. M. & R. 181; 4 Tyr. 582, C. C.; and see Brooks v. Blanchard, 1 C. & M. 779. See the remarkable case, Cro. J. 90, cited by Lord Coke, where a clergyman, in his sermon, recited a story out of Fox's Martyrology, that one Greenwood, being a perjured person and a great persecutor, had great plagues inflicted on him, and died by the hand of God; whereas in truth he never was so plagued, and was himself present at that sermon; and he brought his action on the case; and Wray, J. delivered the law to the jury, that it being delivered but as a story, and not with any malice, or intention to slander any, he was not guilty of the words maliciously, and so was found not guilty. This case seems, however, to have been decided on a principle, the generality of which is now questionable, viz. that there was no malice in fact. It seems to be now settled that malice in law will support the action in the absence of circumstances which constituted a privileged occasion, or in a case of unnecessary publicity. In the case cited, it may be questionable whether the publicity of the communication did not exclude a defence on the score of privilege. A letter to a father advising him to have better regard to his children, though it use scandalous words, yet, if written bona fide, is not libellous. 2 Brownl. 150; secus if published in a newspaper, although the pretence should be reformation. R. v. Knight, Bac. Ab. Libel, A. 2.

(x) Herver v. Dawson, B. N. P. 8. An action was brought against a man for warning his friiend respecting the circumstances of the plaintiff; and Pratt, C. J., directed the jury, that if they were of opinion that the words were not spoken out of malice, but in confidence and friendship, and by way of warning, they should find the defendant not guilty; which they did. [S. P. Per Jackson, J. Jackson v. Stetson, 15 Mass. R. 58.]

(y) By Ld. Ellenborough, C. J., in Carr v. Hood, 1 Camp. 355; Tabart v. Tipper, Camp 350. And see Soane v. Knight, 2 M. & M. 74. Thompson v. Churchill, 2 M. & M. 187. Macleod v. Wakley,[2] 3 C. & P. 311. Fraser v. Berkeley,[3] 7 C. & P. 621. Whatever is fair, and can be reasonably said of the works of authors, or of themselves as connected with their works, is not actionable, unless it appear that under the pretext of criticising the works, the party takes the opportunity of attacking the character of the author. Whatever is published by the defendant at any time before the trial may be admitted in order to show his motives; but an admission of his being the publisher of the periodical work cannot be extended beyond the date of such admission. M'Leod v. Wakley,[1] 3 C. & P. 311. The defendant published of a painting publicly exhibited, that it was a mere daub, with other strong terms of censure; held that it was a question for the jury, whether this was a fair and temperate criticism, or only the vehicle of personal malignity towards the plaintiff. Thompson v. Shackell,[4] 1 M. & M. 187.

(z) Ibid.

(A) (A complaint made to a church by one member against another in the regular course of church-discipline, is excusable, if there be probable cause for making it. Remington v. Congden & al. 2 Pick. 310. Where a member of a church submitted to an investigation by the church of charges prepared against him, in a written complaint, by persons not members, and the church decided that the complaint was substantiated by the evidence, it was held that in an action for a libel, against the persons making the complaint, on account of the matter contained in it, the decision of the church was evidence of probable cause of making the charges, and sufficient to rebut the presumption of malice, and that the action could not be maintained without proving express malice on the part of the defendants. Ibid.)

(1) [If words actionable in themselves are spoken between members of the same church, in the course of their religious discipline, and without malice, no action will lie; and the jury are to decide whether there be malice or not. Jarvis v. Hathaway, 3 Johns. 180.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 353. [2]Id. xiv. 322. [3]Id. xxxii. 658. [4]Id. xxii. 286.

was, that the defendant had charged the plaintiff with the publication of books of an improper and immoral tendency, Lord Ellenborough informed the jury that it was certainly libellous gravely to impute to a bookseller a publication to which he was a stranger, as the evident tendency of the imputation was to hurt him in his business (a). Where an action was brought for publishing in a newspaper a paragraph, stating that the songs at a place of public entertainment were not of the plaintiff's composition, as they professed to be, and that the performance was despicable, Lord Kenyon said, "the editor of a public newspaper may fairly and candidly comment on any place, or species, of public entertainment, but it must be done fairly, and without malice, or view to injure or prejudice the proprietor in the eyes of the public; if so done, however severe the censure, the justice of it screens the editor from legal animadversion; but if it can be proved that the comment is unjust and malevolent, or exceeding the bounds of fair opinion, it is a libel, and actionable" (b).

*634 *It seems to be a general rule, embracing all the cases above referred to, where the occasion affords presumptive primâ facie evidence to rebut the inference of malice, that if it can be shown that the object of the party was malignant, and that the occasion was laid hold of as a mere colour and excuse for gratifying his private malice with impunity, the action is maintainable (A).

It is no answer to the action to show that the words were spoken carelessly, wantonly, or in jest; it has been well observed, that the mischief to the reputation of the party grieved is nowise lessened by the merriment of him who makes so light of it (c). A wanton disregard of the feelings and interests of others is perfectly consistent with malice, in every sense of the word; and a man does not the less intend to injure another, and therefore his act is not the less malicious, because his primary object is to derive some private gratification or emolument to himself (d). It is, however,

(a) Tabart v. Tipper, 1 Camp. 350. In that case the counsel for the defendant were permitted to inquire, upon cross-examination, whether the defendant had not published particular books; but qu (1).

(b) Dibdin v. Bostock, 1 Esp. C. 29. So it is not libellous to comment fairly upon a petition relating to matter of general interest, which has been presented to Parliament and published. Dunne v. Anderson,[1] 3 Bing. 88; R. & M. 287.

(c) Haw. P. C. c. 73.

(d) See the observations, tit. INTENTION. If a person were to write a libel, which was published through carelessness or accident, and damage were to result to the party reflected on, it seems that an action might be supported.

(A) (Where a slanderous charge is made, which the unlearned would understand as imputing a crime, the action of slander lies, although in the nature of things such crime could not be committed. Kennedy v. Gifford, 19 Wend. 296. Where the words contain an imputation of murder, the plaintiff may be entitled to recover, although the defendant should prove that the person alleged to be dead is still alive, if those in whose presence the words were spoken had well grounded reasons to believe that he was then dead. Jugart v. Carter, 1 Dev. & Bat. 8. [In slander for charging the plaintiff with perjury in a judicial proceeding, the defendant, under the general issue, though not permitted to prove the falsity of the words sworn by the plaintiff, was allowed to interrogate a witness as to what the plaintiff swore—in mitigation of damages. Grant v. Hover, 6 Munf. 13. In Kirtley v. Deck, 3 Hen. & Mun. 388, it was held in an action for charging the plaintiff with perjury in a court of record, that the defendant, on a plea of justification, could not give parol evidence of what the plaintiff swore to, without producing a copy of the record of that trial, to show that the testimony given by the plaintiff was material to the matter in question. See Crookshank v. Gray & ux. 20 Johns. 344.])

(1) [See Vol. I. p. 289, note (1), that in Massachusetts, a special plea in justification may be used by the plaintiff as conclusive evidence of the speaking of words complained of—and that if the defendant fail to establish such plea, the plea itself is evidence that the words were spoken maliciously. See also Vol. I. p. 436, note (1).] {See evidence of the defendant's procuring depositions, &c. to prove the truth of his charges, and afterwards declining to plead a justification, may be properly referred to a jury on the question of malice, but not on the question of damages. Bodwell v. Osgood, 3 Pick. Rep. 379.}

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xi. 43.

also to be observed, that a mere excess beyond what was strictly and absolutely necessary, such as the making a statement privileged per se in the presence of a third person, does not of itself deprive the communication of its privileged character, and that in such a case it is still a question for the jury whether such communication was made bonâ fide or of malice (e).

It is also to be observed generally, that although the occasion may protect the party in a publication to a certain extent, such as the circumstances and urgency of the case will fairly warrant, yet that any extraordinary and unnecessary publication, although not considered as resulting from a purely malignant intention, is still to be regarded as proceeding from a careless inattention to the interests and welfare of others, which is culpable in the eye of the law (f).

In an action by a servant against a former master for giving a false character, the plaintiff, in order to establish the malicious intention, may prove the falsity of the representation made by the defendant (g). It has been said, that where the defendant has made a charge against the plaintiff of dishonesty and misconduct, the defendant may adduce general evidence of good conduct, even antecedently to the service, general character being in some respects in issue (h). In an action by a servant.

*For the purpose of proving malice in a case where the intention is ambiguous, and proof of malice in fact is essential, it seems that any acts or words used by the defendant, tending (i) to prove a malicious and malignant intention towards the plaintiff, are admissible in evidence; although the words so given in evidence be in themselves actionable, and be not specified *635

(e) Twogood v. Spyring, 1 C. M. & R. 181; 4 Tyr. 482. Brooks v. Blanchard, 1 C. & M. 779; 3 Tyr. 844.

(f) Vid. infra, 639; and see Brown v. Croome, 2 Starkie's C. 297, where Lord Ellenborough held that an advertisement, addressed by an interested party to the creditors of a bankrupt, but reflecting strongly on the character of the bankrupt, would not be justifiable, if the legal object could have been effected by means less injurious. Where a party spread false reports prejudicial to a tradesman, and being called by the employers of the latter to examine the matters complained of, repeated the false statement, it was held that the communication was not privileged. Smith v. Matthews, 1 Mo. & R. 151. And although in a letter of confidence to an agent, on business in respect of property in which the plaintiff and defendant are jointly interested, a communication as to the plaintiff's conduct in respect of that property is privileged, it is otherwise as to mere foreign matters in respect of his conduct to his mother and aunt. Warren v. Warren, 1 C. M. & R. 250.

(g) Rogers v. Clifton, 3 B. & P. 587. The master there described the servant as a bad-tempered, lazy, impertinent fellow, and the plaintiff proved (without objection) that whilst he was in the defendant's service he had conducted himself well, and that no complaints of the nature ascribed to him in the defendant's letter had all that time existed. See also Pattison v. Jones,[1] 8 B. & C. 578.

(h) King v. Waring & ux. 5 Esp. C. 13; but see above, 307. It has been held, that a servant in an action of this nature must prove the character to have been given maliciously as well as falsely (Weatherstone v. Hawkins, 1 T. R. 110); the reason seems to be, that the knowledge of the servant's misconduct may often be confined to the master himself, and being unable to prove it by his own testimony, if the general presumption arising from his not justifying were to operate against him, and it were to be inferred that his representation was false, he would be left without defence. In order to prevent this inconvenience, the law does not permit the presumption so to operate, but requires proof of malice aliunde. No stronger proof of malice can be given than by evidence that the master knew that the character which he gave was false. Any evidence therefore which tends to such proof seems to be admissible and material evidence, but proof of a general character at an antecedent period is very remote from this object. In the case of Stuart v. Lovell,[2] 2 Starkie's C. 93, Lord Ellenborough, C. J. refused to permit the plaintiff in an action for a libel, under the plea of the general issue, to go into evidence to disprove the charges contained in the libel. In a case before Abbott, L. C. J. (cited[3] 4 B. & A. 132), the prosecutor was admitted to give evidence of the falsity of the charge, under the particular circumstances of the case, the supposed libel containing little more than a narrative of certain facts supposed to have taken place in one of the West India islands. In such a case it is competent to the defendant, under the general issue, to prove the truth of the facts.

(i) In Kelly v. Partington,[4] 4 B. & A. 700, very slight proof of express malice held to be sufficient to go to a jury. The master had been remonstrated with after having charged the plaintiff, formerly his maid-servant, with theft, and stated to him that she might (in consequence of the charge), have gone upon the town, to which he answered, "What is that to us?"

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xv. 303. [2]Id. iii. 261. [3]Id. vi. 358. [4]Id. xxiv. 144.

in the declaration (k), and although they were spoken subsequently to the words declared upon (l) (A). So where a libel was published in a weekly political paper, evidence was admitted of the previous sale of other papers, with the same title, at the same office, in order to show that the paper containing the libel was not published by mistake, but vended publicly, deliberately, and in regular transmission for public perusal (m). In an action for a malicious prosecution of an indictment for perjury, evidence was admitted of an advertisement published by the defendant pending the libel, although an information had been granted for publishing that advertisement (n) (1).

In an action for words imputing perjury, the plaintiff was allowed to prove, that subsequently to the speaking of the words, the defendant preferred an indictment against him (o). Where, however, other words not specified in the declaration, are given in evidence to prove malice, the defendant is at liberty to prove the truth of the words, for he had no opportunity of justifying (2). But it has been held, that other libels published by the defendant of the plaintiff, are not admissible in evidence to prove *636 malice, unless they *refer to the libel set out in the declaration (p); and in

(k) Lee v. Huson, Peake's C. 166. R. v. Pearce, Ibid. 75. Mead v. Daubigny, Ibid. 125. Warne v. Chadwell, 2 Starkie's C. 457. Stuart v. Lovell,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 93; Starkie's L. L. vol. 2, p. 58. But where other words than those laid in the declaration are given in evidence, their truth may be proved by the defendant; for then truth could not be pleaded. Warne v. Chadwell,[2] 2 Starkie's C. 93.

(l) Russel v. Macquister, 1 Camp. C. 49. And see Macleod v. Wakley,[3] 3 C. & P. 312. Tate v. Humphrey, 2 Camp. 73. Lee v. Huson, Peake's C. 166. Chubb v. Westley,[4] 6 C. & P. 436. And previous slander, in respect of which damages have been recovered, may be given in evidence. Defries v. Davies,[5] 7 C. & P. 162. The insertion of the same libel in substance, in other newspapers, is evidence of malice, although there are counts in the declaration to meet such other publications; and a demurrer to some of the pleas does not prevent the defendant from proving the truth of the libel. Delegal v. Highley, 8 C. & P. 444.

(m) Plunkett v. Cobbett, 5 Esp. C. 136.

(n) Chambers v. Robinson, Str. 691.

(o) Tate v. Humphreys, 2 Camp. 73, n. cor. Graham, B.; and afterwards by the Court.

(p) By Sir J. Mansfield, C. J. in Finnerty v. Tipper, 2 Camp. 72; who observes, "you might as well give evidence of one highway robbery on the trial of another."

(A) (The words, whether actionable or not, may be given in evidence as showing a malicious intent. Brittain v. Allen, 2 Dev. 120. Wilson v. Apple, 3 Ohio R. 270. Smalley v. Anderson, 4 Monr. 368. Kendrick v. Kemp, 6 Mart. N. S. 501. Smith v. Wynan, 16 Shepley, 13. Throgmorton v. Davis, 4 Blackf. 174. Barton v. Brands, 3 Green, 248. [Wallis v. Mease, 3 Binney, 550. Eccles v. Shackleford, 1 Littell's Rep. 35. Also actionable words spoken after the suit brought. Wallis v. Mease, supra. Kean v. M'Laughlin, 2 Serg. & R. 469. Shock v. M'Chesney, 2 Yeates, 473. So the plaintiff may give in evidence the speaking by the defendant of the same words, after the suit brought. Miller v. Kerr, 2 M'Cord, 285. {McAlmont v. Clement, 14 Serg. & R. 359.} Contra, Kirby, 151. Holmes v. Brown.] Words spoken more than two years before suit brought, may be given in evidence to show malice. Inman v. Foster, 8 Wend. 602. In an action for a libel, a previous publication by the plaintiff cannot be given in evidence by the defendant, unless the publication complained of as libellous is manifestly an answer to, or commentary upon the previous publication. Maynard v. Beardsley, 4 Wend. 336. S. C. 7 Wend. 560. [In Thomas v. Crosswell, 7 Johns. 264, Mr. Justice Spencer says, it is improper to suffer distinct libellous matter, subsequent to that charged in the declaration, to be given in evidence, to show the intent with which the matter charged was published. And in Tennessee, evidence of words spoken after suit brought is not admissible. Secus, as to words spoken before, though not declared on. Howell v. Cheatham, Cooke's Rep. 248.] See also Bodwell v. Osgood, 3 Pick. 376. And where the defendant, after the commencement of the action, took sundry depositions for the purpose of proving the truth of the words charged in the declaration, and afterwards declined pleading their truth in justification, it was held that evidence of such proceedings was properly submitted to the consideration of the jury on the question of malice. Ibid.)

(1) [In an action against a printer for publishing of the plaintiff, that while he was a member of a convention to form a constitution for the state, he avowed scandalous opinions (which were set forth in the libel)—it was held that an account of the debates of the convention reported by the defendant, in which the words in question did not appear, was evidence to show that the publication, on which the action was brought, was malicious. Stow v. Converse, 3 Conn. Rep. 325.] {See the case upon the new trial, 4 Conn. Rep. 18.}

(2) [Eccles v. Shackleford, 1 Littell's Rep. 38.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 261. [2]Id. iii. 430. [3]Id. xiv. 322. [4]Id. xxv. 474. [5]Id. xxxii. 460.

such cases the jury are not to consider the effect of such evidence in their measure of damages, but merely as a circumstance to prove malice (q). And as such evidence is merely to be used as evidence of the quo animo, it seems that where there is no doubt as to the intention, it ought not to be resorted to (r).

4thly. The general rule is, that no evidence of special damage is admissible unless it be averred in the declaration (A); whether special damage be the gist of the action, or be used as matter of aggravation, the words being in themselves actionable (s). But it has been said, that greater certainty is requisite where the special damage is the gist of the action, than where it is merely laid by way of aggravation (t). Damages.

Where the damage consists in loss of marriage, the plaintiff cannot, without specifying the individual with whom the marriage would otherwise have been contracted, give evidence of the loss (u). So if he allege loss of marriage with M. N. he cannot give in evidence loss of marriage with any other person (x).

In an action for slander, by which the plaintiff has lost his customers (B), he cannot give in evidence the loss of any whose names are not specified in the declaration (y) (1). But where it is alleged as special damage that the plaintiff was prevented from selling his estate, and that the bidding was prevented by the act of the defendant, the fact may be proved, although the names of particular bidders are not specified, for the loss is the preventing of the sale (z), and proof that persons would have purchased is evidence of such prevention.

The persons who are alleged in the declaration to have discontinued their (q) Ibid.

(r) See Stuart v. Lovell,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 93. In strictness, however, such evidence, if tendered, ought to be admitted in all cases where the intention is in the least equivocal, and proof of malice is essential, for it is impossible either for the party or the Court to pronounce à priori, whether, independently of the proposed evidence, the jury will be satisfied on the point of malice. It has been said, that subsequent words of the same import with the slander are not admissible where the words declared on are unambiguous. Pearce v. Ormsby, Mo. & R. 455. Symmons v. Blake, Mo. & R. 477.

(s) B. N. P. 7; 1 Will. Saund. 243, n. 5. It was formerly held, that where special damage was the gist of the action, such special damage might be given in evidence, although the particular instances were not specified; otherwise, where the words were actionable. Str. 666. Where the words are actionable per se, evidence of special damage is unnecessary. Tripp v. Thomas,[2] 3 B. & C. 427.

(t) Per Cur. in Wetherell v. Clerkson, 12 Mod. 597; 2 Lutw. 1295. See Clarke v. Periam, 2 Atk. 33.

(u) 1 Sid. 396; 1 Vent. 4. Hunt v. Jones, Cro. J. 499; 12 Mod. 597. Barnes v. Prudlen, 1 Roll. Ab. 58.

(x) Lord Raym. 1007. (y) 8 T. R. 130.

(z) See Smead v. Badley, Cro. J. 397; Sir W. Jones, 196.

(A) (In an action of slander no evidence can be given of any loss or injury sustained by the plaintiff, unless the same be specially stated in the declaration, and this whether the special damage be the gist of the action, or whether the words be actionable, per se. Shipman v. Burrows, 1 Hall, 399. Where therefore, under the allegation, that in consequence of the speaking of the slanderous words, certain insurance companies in the city of New York refused to insure any vessel by him commanded, the plaintiff was permitted to prove that the New York Insurance Company refused to make such insurance, the evidence was held to have been unproperly admitted. Ibid. For words which are not actionable per se, the plaintiff cannot recover, unless he shows special damage as the consequence of the words. Harcourt v. Harrison, 1 H. 474. [Hersh v. Ringwalt, 3 Yeates, 508. Bostwick v. Nickleson, Kirby, 65. Bostwick v. Hawley, ib. 290, acc. And where the words are not of themselves actionable, the proof of damage must be confined to the particular damage alleged in the declaration: Evidence of a general loss of reputation, by reason of the slander, is inadmissible. Herrick v. Lapham, 10 Johns. 281].)

(B) (See Bostwick v. Nicholson, Kirby, 65. Bostwick v. Hamley, Kirby, 290.)

(1) [And in an action for slanderous words charging a baker with using adulterated flour, if the declaration allege as special damage, that several persons (naming them) discontinued to take his bread, such persons must be called to prove why they ceased any longer to take it; the person who was the salesman not being permitted to state the reason given by the customers for refusing to purchase any longer. Tilk v. Parsons, 2 Car. & P. 201.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 261. [2]Id. x. 139.

dealings with the plaintiff ought to be called to prove the fact (a); and their mere declarations of the fact are not receivable in evidence (b).

Where the plaintiff alleged that he had been employed from time to time to preach to a congregation of Dissenters, and that by reason of the words, the persons frequenting the chapel had wholly refused to permit him to preach there, and had discontinued to give him the gains and profits which they otherwise would have given, the Court, after a verdict for the plaintiff, on motion in arrest of judgment, held that the allegation of damage was sufficient, for he could not have stated the names of all his congregation (c).

*637 *In such a case, therefore, it should seem that general evidence of the loss of emolument would be admissible.

A plaintiff under an allegation of general injury, may show a general diminution of business; but if he seeks specific damages he must give specific evidence (d).

Where the special damage was alleged to be the loss of the profits of several performances at a place of public amusement, it was held that the witnesses might be examined generally as to the diminution in the receipts; but that they could not be asked whether particular persons had not given up their boxes (e).

The jury are not bound to confine the damages to those sustained between the publication and the action (f).

In case for libel on the plaintiff in the way of his trade, imputing insolvency, and in other counts alleging special damage by the stopping of the partnership in which the plaintiff was engaged; held, that the plaintiff was entitled to maintain the action alone, as the words were not necessarily injurious to the firm, in which case only a joint action could be maintained (g).

That the damage followed from the act.

The plaintiff must also prove that the damage was the consequence of the defendant's act (h) (A).

The connection between the wrong done by the defendant, and the loss to the plaintiff, is matter of evidence. It is nevertheless a rule of law that the damage must be the natural and immediate consequence of the wrongful act. The defendant asserted that the plaintiff had cut his master's cordage, upon which the master had discharged the plaintiff from his service, although he was under an engagement to employ him for a term; but the Court held that the discharge was not a ground of action, since it was not the natural consequence of the words spoken (i). The damage must be attributable wholly to the words (k).

(a) 1 Saund. 243, d. (b) Tilk v. Parsons,[1] 2 C. & P. 201; 1 Esp. C. 50.
(c) Hartley v. Herring, 8 T. R. 130. See Starkie on Libel, vol. 1, p. 440, 2d ed.
(d) Delegal v. Highley,[2] 8 C. & P. 444. (e) Ashley v. Harrison, 1 Esp. C. 48.
(f) 6 Bing. N. C.; 9 C. & P. 326. (g) Harrison v. Bevington,[3] 8 C. & P. 713.
(h) But words are not actionable, although special damage may have ensued, unless the words be disparaging. Kelly v. Partington, 5 B. & A. 645; 3 N. & M. 116.
(i) Vicars v. Wilcocks, 8 East, 1. And see Morris v. Langdale, 2 B. & P. 284, where it was doubted, whether the occasioning a third person to break his contract with the plaintiff was a sufficient special damage, since the plaintiff might obtain a satisfaction by action for the breach of contract; but qu. whether in actions for words, by means of which the plaintiff has lost a marriage, it would be a bar to the action to show that a promise of marriage had been made; and qu. whether it be not a sufficient damage that the plaintiff, by the defendant's wrongful act, has had a benefit in possession wrested from him, and converted into a bare right to be enforced by action.
(k) The declaration alleged, that by reason of the defendant's false and slanderous words, one J. B. refused

(A) (Proof that the plaintiff was refused civil treatment at a public house, in consequence of slanderous words, it seems is sufficient to support an averment of special damage. Olmstead v. Miller, 1 Wend. R. 506; Fox v. Vanderbeck, 5 Cow. 513. And evidence that the plaintiff has been deprived of the hospitality of her friends, is sufficient to support the allegation of special damage. Williams v. Hall, 19 Wend. R. 305.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xii. 89. [2]Id. xxxiv. 472. [3]Id. xxxiv. 594.

Where the reason which a party assigned for not employing the plaintiff was founded partly on the defendant's words, and partly on the circumstance that he had been previously discharged by another master; it was held that no action was maintainable (l).

Where the defendant libelled a performer at a place of public entertainment, in consequence of which she refused to sing, and the plaintiff alleged, as special damage, that his oratorios had in consequence been more thinly attended, it was held by the Judge at the trial that the injury was too *638 remote (m), and that it did not appear but that the refusal to perform arose from caprice or indolence.

The plaintiff having once recovered damages, cannot afterwards recover any ulterior compensation for any loss resulting from the same words (n).

By the rules H. T. 4 W. 4, in actions on the case "not guilty" shall operate only as a denial of the breach of duty or wrongful act charged, and not of facts in the inducement. In an action of slander of a plaintiff in his office, profession, or trade, the plea of not guilty will operate to the same extent precisely as at present in denial of speaking the words, of speaking them maliciously and in the sense imputed, and with reference to the plaintiff's office, profession, or trade; but it will not operate as a denial of the fact of the plaintiff's holding the office, or being of the profession or trade alleged. All matters in confession or avoidance, shall be pleaded as in assumpsit.

5thly. The defendant may, under the general issue, give in evidence any matter which tends to disprove either the speaking of the words, or the publication of the libel (1); or to bar the action or rebut the evidence of malice (o) (A), or of special damage. He may prove under this issue, in bar of the action, that the publication was made by the defendant as a member of Parliament, in the course of his duty as such (p) (2), or as a

Proof in defence.

to trust the plaintiff; and the evidence was, that the words were spoken to one E. B., who of his own accord repeated the words to J. B. without any authority from the defendant; held that a nonsuit was proper. Ward v. Weeks,[1] 7 Bing. 211. And see M'Pherson v. Daniels,[2] 10 B. & C. 263, overruling the 4th resolution in Lord Northampton's Case, 12 Co. 134.

(l) 8 East, 1. (m) Lord Kenyon, Ashley v. Harrison, 1 Esp. C. 48.

(n) B. N. P. 7.

(o) The defendant may, in general, show under the general issue that the communication was privileged by the occasion. Lillie v. Price, 5 A. & B. 645. Stockdale v. Hansard,[3] 7 C. & P. 731. Pattison v. Jones,[4] 8 B. & C. 578. Blake v. Pilford, 1 Mo. & R. 198. Fairman v. Ives,[5] 5 B. & A. 644.

(p) See 4 Hen. 8, c. 8, and the declaration of the Bill of Rights, 1 Will. & Mary, stat. 2, c. 2; 1 Bl. C. 164. But the privilege does not extend to a publication out of Parliament. R. v. Ld. Abingdon, 1 Esp. C. 226. R. v. Creevey, 1 M. & S. 273.

(A) (See Gill v. Bright, 6 Munr. 130. Pegram v. Styron, 1 Bailey, 595. The defendant may show that the design was to impute only a breach of trust and no felony. Brite v. Gill, 2 Munr. 66.)

(1) [The defendant may show that the words, though in themselves actionable, were explained by a reference to a particular known transaction, not amounting to the charge which the words would otherwise import, and thus not furnishing a ground of action. Van Rensselaer v. Dole, 1 Johns. Cas. 279. S. P. Edie v. Brooks, Sup. Ct. of Pennsylvania, May 1814. Wharton's Digest, 555, 566. Shecut v. Dowell, 1 Const. Rep. 35. Thomson v. Bernard, 1 Camp. 48.]

(2) [A member of either house of the legislature is not answerable for words uttered in the execution of his official duty, although they are spoken maliciously. And the privilege of free deliberation, speech, and debate, secured to members of the legislature by the constitution of Massachusetts, exempts them from legal liability for everything said or done by them in the exercise of the functions of their office, whether the exercise be regular according to the rules of the branch of which they are members, or irregular and against such rules. So this privilege protects all words officially spoken without the walls of the house to which a member belongs—either in a convention of the two houses, or in a committee, while executing the commission of the house then in session; and the house is in session, notwithstanding occasional adjournments for short intervals. But a member of the legislature is answerable for defamatory words uttered maliciously, and not in discharging the functions of his office, though uttered within the walls of the house of which he is a member. And he cannot be in the exercise of his official functions, as a member of a body, unless that

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xx. 104. [2]Id. xxi. 69. [3]Id. xxxii. 707. [4]Id. xv. 303. [5]Id. vii. 220.

Judge (q), juror, witness (r), or party, in the course of a judicial proceeding (s) (A), whether civil or criminal (t), even although the Court wanted jurisdiction (u), and, as it seems also, where the process was improper (x); or upon an application made in the usual course to a magistrate or peace officer (y); or in the course of offering a petition to the King (z), or Parliament (a), or to a committee of the House of Commons appointed by the Commons to hear and examine grievances (b); or Secretary at War (c) (B), (q) Jekyll v Sir John Moore, 2 N. R. 341. R. v. Skinner, Lofft, 55.

(r) 2 Ins. 228; 2 Roll. R. 198; Pal. 144; 1 Vin. Ab. 387; Cro. Eliz. 230. Brodie's Case, Palm. 144. Harding v. Bulman, 1 Brownl. 2.

(s) Astley v. Young, 2 Burr. 807; Cro. Jac. 432. The rule extends to the case of scandalum magnatum. See Beauchamp v. Sir R. Croft, Dyer, 285. And see in Starkie on Libel and Slander; and Weston v. Dobniet, Cro. J. 432. [Hardin v. Comstock, 2 Marsh. (Ken.) R. 481.] Ram v. Lamley, Hutt. 113.

(t) 3 Bl. Com. 126; 10 Mod. 210, 219, 220; Str. 691. The remedy is by an action on the case for a malicious prosecution, or perhaps by indictment, where the jurisdiction of the Court has been abused by a malicious prosecution. Haw. P. C. c. 73, s. 8; 1 Will. Saund. 132.

(u) Buckley v. Wood, 4 Co. 14.

(x) 1 Vin. Ab. 389; 2 Lutw. 1571; contra, Buckley v. Wood, 4 Co. 14.

(y) Ram v. Lamley, Hutt. 113. See also Barbaud v. Hookham, 5 Esp. C. 109; Johnson v. Evans, 3 Esp. C. 32.

(z) Hare v. Meller, 3 Lev. 169; see also 4 Rep. 14.

(a) See the resolution of the House of Commons in Kemp v. Gee, 9 Feb. 8 Will. 3, in which it was declared, that all petitions to the House of Commons were lawful, or at least punishable by themselves only.

(b) Lake v. King, 1 Saund. 131; Lev. 241; 1 Mod. 58: Sid. 414.

(c) The defendant wrote a letter to the Secretary at War, with intent to prevail upon him to grant his authority to compel the plaintiff, an officer in the army, to pay the defendant a debt due to him, and not for the purpose of slander; and although the letter contained expressions derogatory of the plaintiff's character, yet it was held that the defendant might go into evidence, under the plea of the general issue, to prove the truth of the facts which he had stated, in order to show that he had acted bona fide. Fairman v. Ives,[1] 5 B. & A. 642; and see R. v. Baillie, Bac. Ab. tit. Libel, A. 2.

---

body be in session. Coffin v. Coffin, 4 Mass. Rep. 1. {See 3 Pick. Rep. 314, 315.} It is, however, no justification of a charge against a town officer of misconduct in his office, that it was made in open town meeting, by an inhabitent of the town, while animadverting on such officer's conduct relative to a subject then before the town, in which the defendant was interested as a qualified voter. Dodds v. Henry, 9 Mass. Rep. 262.]

(A) (Words charging a witness with perjury, uttered by a party or his counsel, in the course of a trial, may or may not be actionable, accordingly as they were or were not spoken maliciously; were or were not pertinent to the issue; as there was or was not colour for making the imputation; or as they were or were not spoken with a design to slander the witness, &c. Ring v. Wheeler, 7 Cow. R. 725. The privilege of a party is the same on such an occasion as that of counsel. And if either of them speak slanderous words of a witness or party, impertinently and without proper cause, an action of slander lies. Ib. See also Torrey v. Field, 10 Ves. R. 353. [Great allowance is to be made for what a man says when attending the trial of his own cause. He has a right to the utmost freedom in communicating his sentiments to his counsel, or the court; but he may not make this privilege a cover for malicious slander. Vigours v. Palmer, 1 Browne's Rep. 40. Swearingen v. Birch, 4 Yeates, 322.

Where a party in court said to a witness, who had just finished his testimony, "you have sworn to a manifest lie;" the words were held actionable in Pennsylvania. Kean v. M'Laughlin, 2 Serg. & Rawle, 469. So in New York, to say to a witness, while giving his testimony to a material point in a cause, "that is false," is actionable, if spoken maliciously. Mower v. Watson, 11 Ves. R. 536. M'Claughry v. Wetmore, 6 Johns. 82. But in New Jersey, if a party in the progress of the trial, and in open court, speaking of the testimony of a witness, say "it is a lie and I can prove it," it is not actionable. Badgley v. Hedges, 1 Penn. Rep. 233. See Steele v. Southwick, 9 Johns. 214.

If a party, in the course of his argument say that he will prove the testimony of the other to be false, he will not be liable, although he fail in the proof. Kean v. M'Laughlin, ubi sup.

If an attorney introduce slanderous matter into the pleadings of a cause, without the direction of his client, the latter is not responsible. Hardin v. Cumstock, 2 Marsh. 481.

Words spoken of the plaintiff by the defendant, before a Presbytery of the Presbyterian Church, in the course of his defence against charges for which he had been cited there by the plaintiff, are not actionable, if he do not designedly and maliciously wander from the point, for the purpose of slander. M'Millan v. Birch, 1 Binney, 178. See Mr. Howe's note to Fowler & ux. v. Homer, 3 Camp. 296].)

(B) (A memorial presented to a board of excise, remonstrating against the granting of a license to a particular individual to keep a tavern, charging him with stirring up justices' suits, with the view of having the causes tried at his tavern, is a privileged communication; and no action lies as for the publication of a libel, unless express malice be proved. Vandergee v. M'Gregor, 12 Wend. R. 545. The circulation of the memorial, for the purpose of obtaining signatures therein, is within the privilege. Ib. Where words which might otherwise be libellous are contained in a remonstrance which a citizen has a right to present to a public au-or other person or authority supposed to have the *means of granting redress for any real or supposed grievances (d) (A). But the defence would fail if it appeared that the mode or extent of the publication was not warranted by the usual course of proceeding in such cases.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. vii. 220.

In the case of Lake v. King, the main question was not whether the exhibiting the petition to Parliament was lawful, or not, but whether the defendant was warranted in printing his petition, and delivering copies to members of a committee of the House of Commons; and it was decided for the defendant, on the ground that such a publication was according to the order and course of proceeding in Parliament (e). It follows, that had he practised a mode of publication unwarranted by the usual course of proceeding, or by the necessity of the case, this defence would not have availed him (f).

(d) As to the postmaster-general, Woodward v. Lander,[1] 6 C. & P. 548; and see Blake v. Pilfold, 1 M. & R. 198; and see Flint v. Pike,[2] 4 B. & C. 484; 1 B. & A. 245, n.

(e) 1 Lev. 241; 1 Mod. 58; Sid. 414; of which, it was said, the Court would take notice.

(f) Ibid.; and see Browne v. Croome,[3] 2 Starkie's C. 297.

---

thority, malice must be proved by the plaintiff, and unless it be proved the action is not maintainable, although the allegations are shown to be false. Flitcraft v. Jenks, 3 Whart. 158. Privileged communications are prima facie excusable from the cause or occasion of the speaking or writing; but even in the cause of such communications an action will lie, if the party making the communication knows the charge to be false, and adopts that mode of gratifying his ill-will or malice. In such case, however, actual malice must be shown, and the question will be submitted to a jury; in ordinary slander, the question of malice is never submitted to a jury, except as to the amount of damages. King & Verplanck v. Root, 4 Wend. R. 113; but a publication by the editors of a newspaper affecting the character of a candidate for public office, is not a privileged communication relieving the publishers from the necessity of proving the truth of the charges made in order to shelter themselves from damages, and casting the onus probandi upon the party slandered of showing actual malice or a knowledge of the falsity of the charge. Ibid. So evidence may be given that the libel was posted in public places by persons unknown: the presumption of law being, that such person acted at the solicitation, and by the procurement of the defendant. Rice v. Withers, 9 Wend. R. 138.

[No action will lie for words contained in a petition for redress of grievances, whether the subject-matter of the petition be true or false, simply on its being preferred to either branch of the legislature, or disclosed to any of its members. Harris v. Huntington & al. 2 Tyler, 129. Hence charges alleged against the plaintiff, and addressed to the legislature of Vermont, for the purpose of preventing his reappointment to the office of justice of the peace, were held to be actionable, and judgment was arrested. Ibid. 1 Tyler, 164. So where false charges were preferred to the council of appointment, in New York, against a public officer, praying for his removal from office, it was held that no action would lie, unless the petition were proved to be malicious and groundless, and presented merely to injure the plaintiff's character—and as it seems, no actions would lie, whether the statement in the petition were true or false, or the motives innocent or malicious. Thorn v. Blanchard, 5 Johns. 508, in the Court of Errors, reversing the judgment of the Supreme Court against the opinion of the Chancellor. In Pennsylvania, however, accusations preferred to the governor against the character of public officers, are held to partake of the nature of judicial proceedings, and are actionable, if they originate in malice and are without probable cause—of which the jury are to judge. Gray v. Pentland, 2 Serg. & Rawle, 22. Same parties, 4 ib. 420. [And the rule has been held applicable, in Massachusetts, to the case of a letter from an inhabitant of a school district to the school committee accusing the schoolmistress of a want of chastity, the school committee having competent authority to redress the grievance complained of. Bodwell v. Osgood, 3 Pick. Rep. 379.] And the burden of proving malice and want of probable cause is on the plaintiff, as in an action for malicious prosecution. 4 Serg. & Rawle, ubi sup.

It is no justification, that the defendant signed a libellous address as chairman of a public meeting of citizens convened for the purpose of deciding on a proper candidate for the office of governor, at an approaching election, and that it was published by order of such meeting—although the plaintiff was a candidate whose election the address was intended to thwart. Lewis v. Few, 5 Johns. 1.]

On an indictment or information for a libel on public officers or candidates for office, the truth of any matter tending to show that the person libelled is unfit for the office, is a justification, and may be given in evidence as such, under the general issue. In other cases, the truth is no justification, but may be received in mitigation of the fine, nor is it necessary or proper to plead it. If the libel complained of is contained in a petition to the legislature, the truth may be given in evidence in justification. Commonwealth v. Morris, 1 Virg. Cas. 106. Words spoken of a candidate for office whereby he loses his election, are not actionable, unless the words were actionable in themselves. Brenner v. Weakley, 2 Tenn. R. 99. And words to be actionable, if uttered against official persons, must relate to past conduct, implying criminality or moral turpitude, and not to the prospect of future misconduct in office. Hogg v. Dorrah, 2 Porter, 212.)

(A) (See Goodenan v. Tappan, 1 Ohio R. 60.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxv. 53. [2]Id. x. 380. [3]Id. iii. 353.

So it is a bar to the action that the words suggesting particular facts, though false, were spoken by the defendant in the course of his duty as an advocate, provided they were pertinent to the subject, and were suggested by the client (g). And it will, it seems, be presumed till the contrary appear, that the fact was suggested in the brief (h). And no comment by the advocate upon the facts proved in evidence, or epithets used in commenting upon those facts, if the observations relate to the cause, will be actionable (i).

Where the alleged libel consists in a faithful report of a judicial proceeding, and the occasion, in point of law, amounts to a justification, doubt has been entertained whether it would be evidence under the general issue (k). But it is by no means a general rule, that even a correct report of parliamentary (l) or judicial proceedings (m) will furnish a legal defence to an action or indictment (1).

An ex parte statement of a criminal proceeding before a magistrate (n)
*640 *or coroner (o) cannot be justified, for such publications tend to deprive the accused of the benefit of a fair and impartial trial. So the publication of such an account will not be justifiable, if it contain matter of a scandalous, blasphemous, or indecent nature (p).

In general, in all cases where the real intention of the defendant is the test of civil liability, that is, as it seems, in all cases where the defendant made the communication upon a fair and honest occasion, with a view to benefit himself or others, but where the circumstances are not such as to furnish an absolute bar, independently of the question of malice, the defence not only may, but must, be given in evidence under the general issue; to plead the defence specially, would be to remove the question of actual malice from the consideration of the jury.

The defendant may therefore prove under the general issue, that the words were spoken or written for the purpose of admonition or advice (A), (g) Brook v. Sir Henry Montague, Cro. J. 90. Hodgson v. Scarlett, 1 B. & A. 232.

(h) Wood v. Gunston, Styles, 462.

(i) Hodgson v. Scarlett, 1 B. & A. 232. As to mere words of opinion, see Com. Dig. Action on the case for Defamation, F. 13.

(k) Currie v. Walter, 1 B. & P. 525, where such evidence was admitted under the general issue; but after a verdict for the defendant, it was objected, on motion, that such evidence had been improperly received under that issue; but the case stood over, and no judgment was ever given. In the subsequent cases of Astley v. Yonge, 2 Burr. 807, and Styles v. Nokes, 7 East, 493, the defence was pleaded specially. So also in Lewis v. Clement,[1] 3 B. & A. 702. See also Lewis v. Walter,[2] 4 B. & A. 613. R. v. Wright, 8 T. R. 298. R. v. Fisher, 2 Camp. 563. Styles v. Nokes, 7 East, 504. Roberts v. Brown,[3] 10 Bing. 523. It should seem that the defence, where available, is admissible under the general issue, as either excluding altogether the right to maintain the action, or as negativing malice by showing a privileged occasion.

(l) R. v. Creevey, 1 M. & S. 273.

(m) See the observations of Ld. Ellenborough, C. J. and Grose, J. in Styles v. Nokes, 7 East, 493; and R. v. Creevey, 1 M. & S. 273. See R. v. Lofield, 2 Barnard, K. B. 128; and qu. whether the defendant can justify the publication of a judicial proceeding, which is defamatory, of one who is not a party to the suit, nor present at the inquiry. Lewis v. Clement,[1] 3 B. & A. 702.

(n) R. v. Lee, 5 Esp. C. 123. R. v. Fisher, 2 Camp. 563. Where a newspaper professed to give a statement of proceedings before a magistrate, it was held that the insertion of libellous remarks purporting to have been made by persons present, could not be justified. Delegal v. Highley,[4] 8 C. & P. 444.

(o) R. v. Fleet, 1 B. & A. 379. Or before a royal commissioner, Charlton v. Walton,[5] 6 C. & P. 385.

(p) R. v. Mary Carlile,[6] 3 B. & A. 167.

(1) [A correct publication of the proceedings of a court of justice is not an indictable offence, unless it is intended to serve as a vehicle to convey slanderous charges, and to gratify a malicious purpose; in which case it is libellous and indictable. The State v. Lehre, 2 Const. 809. But if the publisher discolour or garble the proceedings, or add comments and insinuations of his own, in order to asperse the character of the party concerned, it is libellous and actionable. Thomas v. Croswell, 7 Johns. 964. Common v. Blanding, 3 Pick. 304. See Clark v. Binney, 2 Pick. 113.]

(A) (See Faris v. Starke, 9 Dan. 130.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. v. 427. [2]Id. vi. 535. [3]Id. xxv. 635. [4]Id. xxxiv. 472. [5]Id. xxv. 450. [6]Id. v. 252.

or in giving the character of a servant (q), in order to bring an offender to justice (r), or by way of criticism on a literary work (s).

The defendant may also prove, by way of defence, under the general issue, that the publication was procured by the contrivance of the plaintiff, for the purposes of the action (t), for the latter cannot complain of that as an injury which he has willingly occasioned. The truth of the publication is not admissible in evidence under the general issue in bar of the action, even to disprove malice (u) (A); proof that the plaintiff has been in the habit of libelling the defendant is no bar to the action, but is, it has been said, evidence in mitigation of damages (x) (B). It seems, however, that the defendant cannot, even in mitigation, prove that the plaintiff has published libels upon him, unless they constituted the provocation for publishing the principal libel (y). General evidence that the plaintiff has been in the habit of libelling the defendant is, it seems, almost inadmissible (z).

The defendant may also prove accord and satisfaction under this issue. The plaintiff had agreed to waive his right of action, in consideration that *defendant would destroy certain documents, which the defendant accordingly did, and evidence of this was held to be admissible as an accord and satisfaction under the general issue (a). *641

Although, in the ordinary action for slander, the defendant cannot, under (q) Edmonson v. Stevenson, B. N. P. 8. Weatherstone v. Hawkins, 1 T. R. 110. Rogers v. Clifton, 3 B. & P. 587. King v. Waring and ux. 5 Esp. C. 13. Childs v. Affleck,[1] 9 B. & C. 403. Ld. Alvanley, in Rogers v. Clifton, 3 B. & P. 592, says, "I do not mean to intimate that if a servant were strongly suspected of having committed a felony while in his master's service, he is not at liberty to warn others from taking him into their service; for it is the duty of every person to guard the public against admitting such servants into their houses." And see the observations of Bayley, J. in Pattison v. Jones,[2] 8 B. & C. 578.

(r) Johnson v. Evans, 3 Esp. C. 32.

(s) Carr v. Hood, 1 Camp. C. 354. Tabart v. Tipper, 1 Camp. C. 350. Dunne v. Anderson,[3] 3 Bing. 88. Soane v. Knight,[4] 1 M. & M. 64. Thompson v. Shackell,[5] Ib. 187.

(t) King v. Waring & ux. 5 Esp. C. 13. See Weatherstone v. Hawkins, 1 T. R. 110, where the letter was written on the application of the plaintiff's brother-in-law, and the writ was sued out the day after the letter was written, and the Court held that the action was not maintainable, the plaintiff having been entrapped into writing it. See also Smith v. Wood, 3 Camp. 323, where the defendant showed to the witness, at the request of the latter, a caricature of the plaintiff, and it was held that this was not sufficient to support the action; tam. qu. for it does not appear that the witness had been sent by the plaintiff.

(u) Underwood v. Parkes, Str. 1200.

(x) Finnerty v. Tipper, 2 Camp. 76. See Pasquin's Case, Ibid. and Tabart v. Tipper, 1 Camp. 355.

(y) May v. Brown,[6] 3 B. & C. 113. Watts v. Fraser,[7] 7 A. & E. 223; having come to his knowledge before the libel in question. Ib.

(z) Finnerty v. Tipper, 2 Camp. 76. Wakley v. Johnson,[8] 1 Ry. & M. 422. Turpley v. Blakey, 2 Bing. N. C. 473. But see May v. Brown,[6] 3 B. & C. 113.

(a) Lane v. Applegate,[9] 1 Starkie's C. 97.

(A) (Territory v. Urgent, 1 Mart. R. 103.)

(B) (It is not admissible to prove in a mitigation of damages that previous to speaking the words the plaintiff was in the habit of abusing and vilifying the defendant; Goodbrend v. Ledbetter, 1 Dev. & B. 12 [M'Alexander]; nor that it was known in the neighbourhood that there had been a quarrel between the parties. Swann v. Ram, 3 Blackf. 298. If the plaintiff has provoked the defendant by injurious acts or disparaging epithets that might be some palliative, but the mere fact that the plaintiff was the defendant's enemy, would prima facie have rather an opposite tendency, and the defendant may give evidence of that fact. Craig v. Cutlet, 5 Dana, 323. The defendant may mitigate damages by showing the plaintiff a common libeller, but it must be done in the same way that a general reputation is proved. Maynard v. Beardsley, 7 Wend. R. 560.

[In an action for a libel, the defendant may give in evidence a former publication by the plaintiff, to which the libel was an answer, to explain the subject-matter, occasion and intent of the defendant's publication, and in mitigation of damages. But such prior publication by the plaintiff, though a libel on the defendant, does not amount to a justification. Hotchkiss v. Lathrop, 1 Johns. 286. S. P. Thompson v. Boyd, 1 Rep. Con. Ct. 80.]) the general issue, give evidence of the truth of the defamatory charge (b) (A), it is otherwise in special actions, where malice and the want of probable cause are of the essence of the action. For there to adduce such evidence is but to rebut that which is essential to the maintenance of the action. Thus in an action for slander of title, where the slander consists in alleging that the plaintiff had encroached on his landlord's land, the defendant may prove that encroachments have in fact been made (c).

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xvii. 405. [2]Id. xv. 303. [3]Id. xi. 43. [4]Id. xxii. 255. [5]Id. xxii. 287. [6]Id. x. 24. [7]Id. xxxiv. 82. [8]Id. xxi. 480. [9]Id. ii. 312.

In mitigation. The defendant may under the general issue prove in mitigation of damages, that the plaintiff at the time of the publication laboured under a general suspicion of having been guilty of the charge imputed by the words (d) (B). For it is material to know what character the plaintiff possessed, in order to ascertain the injury which has been sustained (e).

(b) In the case of Stockley v. Clement,[1] 4 Bing. 162, where the alleged libel was contained in a public advertisement, relating to a forged bill of exchange, the defendant was allowed to go into evidence of the fact stated under the general issue; but in that case the Court held that it was no libel on the plaintiff. In an action for a libel against an officer of a court of justice, imputing negligence, the defendant cannot under the general issue prove negligence, in order to negative the general allegation of performance of duty. Dance v. Robson,[2] 1 M. & M. 295. But in an action for a libel on the plaintiff in the way of his trade as a manufacturer of bitters, which trade it was averred he carried on in an honest and lawful manner; it was held that, under the general issue the defendant might give in evidence that the plaintiff, under the pretence of manufacturing bitters, made and sold a composition of a very different description, not by way of justification of the libel, but as to the truth of the plaintiff's allegation as to his trade. Manning v. Clements,[3] 7 Bing. 362, and 5 M. & P. 211.

(c) Watson v. Reynolds,[4] 1 M. & M. 1; and see Hargreave v. Le Breton, 4 Burr. 2422. Smith v. Spooner, 3 Taunt. 246. Pitt v. Donovan, 1 M. & S. 639. Starkie's L. L. vol. 2, p. 103, 2d edit. In the case of Pattison v. Jones,[5] 8 B. & C. 578, which was an action by a servant against a master, for defamation, in professing to give a character, Lord Tenterden, C. J., received evidence on the part of the defendant to show the truth of the statement contained in the alleged libel, of drunkenness, &c.; but is said to have expressed doubts whether such evidence was admissible under the general issue, and left the matter to the jury, on the question whether the communication had been made bona fide.

(d) Earl of Leicester v. Walter, 2 Camp. 251, cor. Mansfield, C. J. —— v. Moor, 1 M. & S. 284. Note, that in these cases there were general allegations of the plaintiff's previous good character, and of the loss of character sustained by reason of the words; and the words were actionable per se.

(e) Supra, note (d); and Williams v. Callender, Holt's C. 307; Rodriguez v. Tadmire, 2 Esp. C. 720; where, on an action for a malicious prosecution, Lord Kenyon allowed the defendant's counsel to ask whether the plaintiff was not a man of general bad character. And see the observation of Wood, B. in Newsam v. Carr,[6] 2 Starkie's C. 70. And see Ellershaw v. Robinson, Lanc. Sp. Ass. 1824, Starkie's L. Libel, 90, 2d edition; which was an action for words imputing adultery to the plaintiff, a widow, Holroyd, J., held that it would be competent to the defendant to go into general evidence to impeach the plaintiff's general character for chastity. See also Eamer v. Merle, cited in The Earl of Leicester v. Walter, 2 Camp, C. 254. —— v. Moor, 1 M. & S. 284. It is not, however, competent to the defendant, in such cases, to do more than give general evidence of bad character; he cannot inquire as to particular facts. Waithman v. Weaver,[7] 1 D. & R. 10. Rodriguez v. Tadmire, 2 Esp. C. 720. But in the case of Jones v. Stevens, 11 Price, 235, which was an action for a libel on the conduct of the plaintiff as an attorney, where the defendant pleaded the general issue, and several pleas of justification, which alleged in general terms that the plaintiff had conducted himself in a disreputable and unprofessional manner: it was held that a witness could not be asked whether the plaintiff was of general bad character and repute in his profession. It is said to have been held by Chambre, J., (Snowden v. Smith, Devon Lent Assizes, 1811) that where a justification was pleaded, such general evidence was not admissible. But the ground of distinction is not very clear; and in the case of Mawby v. Barber, Lincoln Summer Assizes, 1826, Lord Tenterden, C. J., admitted such evidence, as being the safer course, although a justification was pleaded. Vide supra, note (e). Such evidence was also received by Lord Denman, C. J., after consulting Parke, B., in the case of Moore v. Oastler, York Sp. Ass. 1836, where the defendant was allowed to give such general evidence, but not to go into particulars; and by Coltman, J., in the case of Hardy v. Alexander, Liv. Summ. Ass. 1837. See Roscoe on Ev. 398.

(A) (Root v. King, 7 Car. 613. Kennedy v. Dean, 6 Porter, 90. Arrington v. Jones, 9 Porter, 139. Bodwell v. Swan, 3 Pick. 376. Bailey v. Hyde, 3 Conn. R. 463.)

(B) (The general rule of law is, that general reports of the truth of the matters charged cannot be given in evidence in mitigation of damages unless they be such as to have affected the general character of the plaintiff. Inman v. Foster, 8 Wend. 602. Mapes v. Weeks, 4 Id. 659. Treat v. Browning, 4 Conn. R. 408. Lewis v. Niles, 1 Root, 346. Kennedy v. Gifford, 19 Wend. 296. Kendrick v. Kemp, 6 Mart. N. S. 501. Long v. Brougher, 5 Watts, 439. Matson v. Buck, 5 Cow. 499. Kellogg v. Carey, 3 Penn. R. 102. Smith v. Buckecker, 4 Rawle, 195. Alderman v. French, 1 Pick. 1. {Bodwell v. Swan, 3 Pick. 376.} Wolcott

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiii. 390. [2] Id. xxii. 311. [3] Id. xx. 161. [4] Id. xxii. 231. [5] Id. xv. 303. [6] Id. iii. 249. [7] Id. xiv. 412.

*It has been said that any evidence short of such as would be a complete defence to the action, had a justification been pleaded, is admissible, in mitigation of damages (f); and accordingly in an action for a libel, charging the plaintiff with being concerned with one Knowles in procuring money from the friends of a capital convict, under the pretence of being able to procure a pardon, through the medium of the Duke of Portland, evidence was admitted, under the plea of the general issue, of an admission by the plaintiff that he had received money for conveying a letter to the Duke (1).

(f) Knobell v. Fuller, sittings after Trin. T. 1797, per Eyre, C. J.; and the case of Curry v. Walter was referred to, in which it was said that his lordship had received similar evidence; but it seems that in that case the evidence was received in bar of the action, and to show that the defendant had merely published a report of proceedings in a court of justice.

v. Hall, 6 Mass. Rep. 514. Aliter, in New Jersey. 1 Penn. Rep. 169, Cook v. Barkley—one judge dissenting. And see Nelson v. Evans, 1 Dev. 9. Henson v. Veatch, 1 Blackf. 369. Evidence of the general character of the plaintiff, or of the opinions of others as to the truth of the charge, is inadmissible, if in the publication the defendants state what they publish as facts within their own knowledge, without reference to the opinions of others. King et al. v. Root, 4 Wend. 113. Proof of any other than the crime charged cannot be given in evidence either in bar of the action or in mitigation of damages. Ridley v. Perry, 16 Shepley, 21. A witness cannot be asked if he has heard anything derogatory of the plaintiff. Freeman v. Price, 2 Bailey, 115. Where the witnesses for the plaintiff, and one of the defendant's witnesses, swore that the words charged assistance in burning a gaol, and murdering a man in it, and the defendant's other witnesses, present at the same time, swore the charge was of simply aiding an escape, held that evidence of the plaintiff being generally suspected of the latter was inadmissible either as corroborating the witnesses who swore to the words or in mitigation of damages. Cole v. Perry, 8 Cow. 214. It is not competent for a defendant in mitigation of damages in an action of slander, to give evidence of facts and circumstances which induced him to suppose the charges true at the time they were made, if such facts and circumstances tend to prove the charges, or form a link in the chain of evidence to establish a justification, and he is not allowed to give such evidence, although he expressly disavows a justification, and fully admits the falsity of the charge. Purple v. Horton, 13 Wend. 9. Nor that the people of the neighbourhood were in the habit of speaking in opprobrious language of the plaintiff. Kendricks v. Kemp, 6 Mart. N. S. 501. In an action for a libel, the publication in a newspaper of rumours cannot be justified by the fact that such rumours existed, though it may be given in evidence in mitigation of the damages. Skinner v. Powers, 1 Wend. 451. A charge of misconduct of a specified kind is not justified by proving the plaintiff guilty of misconduct of a similar character. Ib. In slander, under the plea of not guilty, the defendant cannot give evidence of the plaintiff's admissions several years before of his having been guilty of an offence similar to the one imputed to him by the defendant. Long v. Crougher, 5 Watts, 439. In an action for slander against husband and wife, evidence of the husband's efforts to prevent the circulation of the slander is not admissible in mitigation of damages. Yeates v. Reed, 4 Blackf. 463. In an action by husband and wife for a slander imputing a want of chastity to the wife, evidence that they lived unhappily together, or that the husband had whipped his wife, is inadmissible. Anon. 1 Hill, 251.

[In Kentucky, the general currency of a report is not a justification of slander; but evidence of general reputation is admissible in extenuation of malice and mitigation of damages. Calloway v. Middleton, 2 Marsh. 372.

Where the defendant, at the time of speaking the words, knows they are not true, and afterwards, with the same knowledge, pleads their truth in justification; no evidence whatever ought to be received in mitigation of damages. Larned v. Buffington, 3 Mass. Rep. 546.

In Virginia, evidence of circumstances of suspicion, not amounting to a full justification, is not admissible under the general issue, in mitigation of damages. M'Alexander v. Harris, 6 Munf. 465. (See Cheatwood v. Mayo, 5 Munf. 16, where this point was discussed but not decided.) Secus, in South Carolina and Connecticut; Buford v. M'Luny, 1 Nott & M'Cord, 268. Bailey v. Hyde, 3 Conn. Rep. 463].

(1) [In an action of slander for saying of the plaintiff, a deputy postmaster, that "he never sent from his office a treasury note," which had been enclosed in a letter and put into his office directed to a third person—but that "he had stolen it;" the defendant was not allowed, under the general issue, to prove, that before the speaking of the words, the plaintiff said, the "treasury note never left his office"—and that after speaking the words the plaintiff said "his brother J. S. was the author and first promulgator of the story." Bailey v. Hyde, 3 Conn. Rep. 436. In a suit for calling the plaintiff a thief, and saying that he had stolen the defendant's spar, the defendant cannot give in evidence, in mitigation of damages, the record of a former action of trespass, in which he had recovered damages against the plaintiff for maliciously taking away the spar. Watson v. Churchill, 5 Day, 256. In an action for a libel, the defendant cannot give in evidence, to reduce damages, a former recovery of damages against him, by the plaintiff, in another action for a libel which formed one of a series of numbers published in the same Gazette, and containing the libellous words charged in the declaration in the second suit. Tillotson v. Cheetham, 3 Johns. 56. Evidence of declarations by a defendant, made after suit brought, that he did not mean to charge the plaintiff with the actual fact, and that the words were spoken in the heat of passion, is not admissible under the general issue. M'Alexander v. Harris, 6 Munf. 465. Nor can the defendant show that he has been in the habit of relating the circumstances in a manner different

To admit such evidence would however be a violation of the rule established in Underwood v. Parkes (g), where it was agreed by all the Judges that evidence of the truth could not be admitted, either in bar of the action, or in mitigation of damages, unless it were pleaded. For if facts tending to prove the truth of the charge were to be admitted in mitigation of punishment, how would it be possible to draw the line, and stop short of actual conviction (h)?

General evidence of bad character seems to be admissible, although the defendant has justified that the imputation is true; for if the justification should fail, the question as to the quantum of damages would still remain (i) (A).

Where the defendant has in his libel referred to the source from which he derived the information, he may, although he has not justified, prove,

(g) Str. 1200; and see Mullett v. Hulton, 4 Esp. C. 248 [See Coleman v. Southwick, 9 Johns. 45.]

(h) See Starkie's L. L. vol. 2, p. 88, 2d ed.; and see Mills v. Spencer,[1] Holt's C. 534, where Gibbs, C. J., observed, that "general reports have been admitted in mitigation of damages, but not the specific facts." And it has since been held that a defendant is not at liberty to give evidence in mitigation of damages of any fact which would be evidence to prove a justification of any part of the libel; he ought to have justified as to that part. Vessey v. Pike,[2] 3 C. & P. 512.

(i) Supra, tit. CHARACTER.

in some essential respects, from that charged in the declaration—though he has first proved that such relation of the circumstances was true. Wills v. Church, 5 Serg. & Rawle, 190. Nor can he give in evidence, either in bar or in mitigation of damages, any other crime than the one charged. Andrews v. Vanduzer, 11 Johns. 38. Sawyer v. Eifert, 2 Nott & M'Cord, 511. In an action for charging the plaintiff with perjury, the defendant cannot give in evidence, for the purpose of reducing damages, that the plaintiff holds atheistical opinions, and disbelieves the existence of a future state of being. Ross v. Lapham, 14 Mass. Rep. 275.]

(A) (Waters v. Jones, 3 Porter, 442. Vick v. Whitfield, 2 Hayw. 222. M'Nutt v. Young, 8 Leigh, 542. In an action for a libel upon the plaintiff as a minister of the gospel, where the declaration avers the good character of the plaintiff, the defendant may, under the general issue, give evidence for the purpose of showing that the general character of the plaintiff is bad. Henry v. Norwood, 4 Watts, 347. [The Sup. Court of New York, in the case of Foot v. Tracy, 1 Johns. 45, were divided on the question whether in an action for a libel the defendant can give in evidence, under the general issue, the general character of the plaintiff, in mitigation of damages. It has, however, been since decided that such evidence is admissible, in an action for words spoken. Paddock v. Salisbury, 2 Cow. 811. See also Springstein v. Field, Anthon's N. P. 185. Similar decisions have been made in Connecticut, North Carolina, and South Carolina. Brunson v. Lynde, 1 Root, 354. Seymour v. Merrills, ibid. 459. Austin v. Hanchet, 2 Root, 149. Vick v. Whitfield, 2 Hayw. 222. Bufford v. M'Luny (two judges dissenting), 1 Nott & M'Cord, 268. Sawyer v. Eifert, 2 ib. 511. The same doctrine is held in Massachusetts, (Larned v. Buffington, 3 Mass. Rep. 546; Wolvott v. Holl, 6 ib. 514: Ross v. Lapham, 14 ib. 275). {Bodwell v. Swan, 3 Pick. Rep. 376.} Subject to the limitations mentioned ante, p. 469, note (1) where there has been an unsuccessful plea in justification. So also it seems in Kentucky. See Calloway v. Middleton. In Vermont this doctrine is rejected. Smith v. Shumway, 2 Tyler, 74, {and see as to Connecticut, Stow v. Converse, 4 Conn. Rep. 18.} See also Jackson v. Stetson, 15 Mass. R. 48. Gilman v. Dowell, 8 Wend. 573. But in an action of slander, proof of the bad character of the plaintiff, subsequent to the speaking of the words, is not admissible in evidence in mitigation of damages, although the character offered to be proved, is not of such a description that it could have been caused by a belief of the charge made by the defendant. Douglass v. Tousey, 2 Wend. 291. In slander for calling the plaintiff a whore, evidence that the plaintiff was reputed a thief, is not admissible either under the plea of justification, or under the plea of not guilty, with leave to give the special matter in evidence. Smith v. Buckecker, 4 Rawle, 295. And where the charge was felony, and the defendant neither pleaded or gave notice of justification, evidence that the charge related to a transaction in which, if the defendant was an actor, it by no means followed that he was innocent of the crime imputed to him, is inadmissible. Laine v. Wells, 7 Wend. 175. [The plaintiff may give in evidence his own rank and condition in life, for the purpose of enhancing damages. Larned v. Buffington, ubi sup. {M'Almond v. M'Clelland, 14 Serg. & R. 359}.] Beehler v. Steever, 2 Whart. 313. But he cannot give evidence of the size and strength of the defendant. Ibid. Nor [can the plaintiff give evidence of his having always sustained the reputation of an honest man, in order to rebut evidence adduced by the defendant to establish the truth of specific charges of official misconduct in the plaintiff. Stow v. Converse, 3 Conn. Rep. 325, {but he may, to repel evidence adduced by the defendant to justify a general charge of "having attempted to destroy all religious institutions," give in evidence certain subscription papers for the support of preaching, drawn up and circulated by himself, accompanied with proof of his having paid the money subscribed. Stow v. Converse, 4 Conn. Rep. 18.} Whether in an action for a libel, the plaintiff may show, for the purpose of enhancing damages, that the defendant had been indemnified for the publication?—quære. Hotchkiss v. Lathrop, 1 Johns. 286. Dole v. Lyon, 10 Johns. 447].)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 177. [2]Id. xiv. 420.

under the general issue, in mitigation of damages, that he did in fact so receive the information (k). As where the libel refers to a newspaper as the medium of communication (l).

In a late case the defendant was allowed to inquire whether the witness had not read the substance of the alleged libel in a public newspaper (m).

The defendant is entitled to have the whole of the publication read from which the alleged libel is extracted (n).

*As the truth, when offered as a defence in bar of an action for slander or libel must be specially pleaded (o), the evidence of course must be governed by the specific allegations upon the record (A). There seems to be little, if any, difference between the evidence in proof of a specific charge thus involved in a civil proceeding, and the evidence which is essential to support an indictment for a similar charge (p). It may happen, indeed, that greater precision may be necessary in the former case than in the latter, and that a variance as to sums or magnitudes, which would not be fatal upon an indictment, would be so upon issue taken on a justification in slander; for there the defendant may, by the specific nature *643 Proof in justification.

(k) Mullett v. Hulton, 4 Esp. C. 248.

(l) Ibid.; and see R. v. Burdett,[1] 4 B. & A. 717. Where a libel in a newspaper purported to be a correct account of what took place on a coroner's inquest, a statement of what took place there was held to be admissible in mitigation of damages. East v. Chapman,[2] 1 M. & M. 46; [3]2 C. & P. 507. Charleton v. Watson,[4] 6 C. & P. 385. Where the defendant had published an imperfect account of a trial, which was libellous, he was allowed in mitigation under the general issue to show that he had copied the statement from another newspaper. Saunders v. Mills,[5] 6 Bing. 213. But in Creevey v. Carr,[6] 7 C. & P. 64, it was ruled that the defendant could not in mitigation of damages show that the libel had appeared in another newspaper, and that the plaintiff had recovered in an action against the proprietors; but he was allowed to show that it was copied with the omission of passages reflecting on the plaintiff.

(m) Wyatt v. Gore,[7] 1 Holt's C. 303; and supra, 641.

(n) Cooke v. Hughes,[8] R. & M. 112.

(o) Smith v. Richardson, Willes, 20; 1 Saund. 130 (n). Underwood v. Parker, 2 Str. 1200. This rule does not, it seems, extend to an action on the case for slander of title. Watson v. Reynolds,[9] 1 M. & M. 1. Nor does the rule operate to the exclusion of such evidence as is otherwise properly admissible under the general issue. Manning v. Clement,[10] 7 Bing. 362. Rogers v. Clifton. The rule does not apply to a special action on the case for consequential damage, as where the action is brought for slander of title. In such a case the truth is evidence under the general issue. Watson v. Reynolds,[9] 1 M. & M. 1; and see Hargreave v. Le Breton, 4 Burr. 2422. Smith v. Spooner, 3 Taunt. 246; supra, 641, note (c).

(p) Cook v. Field, 3 Esp. C. 133. [Dirnells v. Aiken, 2 Tyler, 75.] A plea that the plaintiff had been guilty of bigamy, requires as strong proof as on an indictment for that offence; a plea, justifying a charge of polygamy, held sustained by proof of actual marriage in two instances, and of cohabitation and reputation as to a third. Willmett v. Harmer,[11] 8 C. & P. 695.

(A) (In an action for a libel if the plaintiff give in evidence parts of the libel, not set forth in the declaration for the purpose of showing malice, the defendant may give evidence of the truth of such passages, although he has not pleaded justification. Henry v. Norwood, 4 Watts, 347. See also {Treat v. Browning, 4 Conn. Rep. 408.} [A defendant who would justify a charge made by him must justify the specific charge laid, and cannot set up a charge of the same kind but distinct as to subject-matter. Sawyer v. Eifert, 2 Nott & M'Cord, 511. Matthews v. Davis, 4 Bibb. 173. Andrews v. Vanduzer, 11 Johns. 38. {Stow v. Converse, 4 Conn. Rep. 17.} See also Shepard v. Merrill, 13 Johns. 475. Van Ness v. Hamilton & al. 19 Johns. 349. Brooks v. Bemis, 8 Johns. 455. Biggs v. Denniston, 3 Johns. Cas. 198. Genet v. Mitchell, 7 Johns. 120.] If the defendant plead the truth of the words in justification and fail to support his plea, this will have a tendency to aggravate the damages. Clark v. Binney, 2 Pick. R. 113. Hix v. Drury, 5 Pick. R. 296. The truth of the publication may be pleaded in bar of the action, but if the defence thus set up be not supported by proof the defendant will not be allowed to show that the charge was made under a mistake, but if the defendant goes to trial on the general issue only, such testimony may safely be admitted, as it only goes to reduce the damages, by rebutting all presumption of actual malice. King v. Root, 4 Wend. 113. In slander, for charging the plaintiff with perjury, a defendant to support a justification, is bound to give as conclusive proof, as would be necessary to convict the plaintiff, on an indictment for such offence. Clark v. Dibble, 16 Wend. 601. Woodbeck v. Keller, 6 Cow. 118. Coulter v. Stewart, 2 Yerger, 225. Contra, Kincade v. Bradshaw, 3 Hawks. 63. In an action of slander, for charging the plaintiff with perjury in a certain suit, if the defendant justify stating, that in the trial of the suit, the plaintiff "swore that a hog had not a certain mark," proof that the plaintiff had swore, "if there was a certain mark upon the hog, he did not see it," will not support the plea. Wilson v. Nations, 5 Yerger, 111.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 431. [2] Id. xxii. 214. [3] Id. xii. 238. [4] Id. xxv. 450. [5] Id. xix. 60. [6] Id. xxxii. 438. [7] Id. iii. 111. [8] Id. xxi. 393. [9] Id. xxii. 231. [10] Id. xx. 161. [11] Id. xxxiv. 589.

of the charge which he has made, with which his plea must correspond, be bound to prove it with equal precision. If the defendant fail in proving all the matters of exaggeration stated in the libel and alleged in the justification to be true, the plaintiff will be entitled to a verdict on the plea of justification (q), although the plea may merely allege that the matters alleged in the libel are true in substance and effect (r); but it is otherwise where the part not proved forms no ingredient in the libellous charge (s). If the justification does not cover the slander to the full extent, the plaintiff will be entitled to damages for the excess not justified (t).

An acquittal of the plaintiff on an indictment charging him with the same offence as is specified in the plea of justification, does not preclude the defendant from proving the truth of the charge (u); and, in strictness, is not evidence at all (x). The general good character of the plaintiff is evidence to rebut the presumption of guilt (y) (A).

Where the defendant justifies, alleging that he heard the words from another, and mentioned the author when he published them, the proof depends upon the form of the issue taken (z) (B). Upon issue taken on (q) Weaver v. Lloyd,[1] 2 B. & C. 678.

(r) Ibid.

(s) Edwards v. Bell,[2] 1 Bing. 403.

(t) The words were, "he has robbed me to a serious amount;" justification as to the words "he has robbed me," which was proved; but the jury gave 40s. damages for the excess not justified, and the Court sustained the verdict. Cooban v. Holt, Lancaster Spr. Ass. 1825, and afterwards cor. Bayley and Holroyd, Justices. Where the statement in a newspaper, professing to give a report on an election petition, went on to comment on a party, bail for one of the petitioners, stating, "he is hired for the occasion," and the plea justified only the former part of the libel; held, that if the part left uncovered would by itself have formed a substantive ground of action, the plaintiff would be liable in damages; aliter, if the comment were only a necessary inference from the facts stated. Cooper v. Lawson, 1 P. & D. 15. Where the plaintiff's ship being advertised for passengers, &c., the defendant published that she was unseaworthy, and had been bought by Jews to take out convicts; held, that a plea to the whole declaration, that the ship was unseaworthy, was insufficient, as the latter allegation in the libel was calculated to deter passengers from applying. Ingram v. Lawson,[3] 5 Bing. N. C. 66; 7 Dowl. P. C. 125; 6 Sc. 775.

(u) England v. Bourke, 3 Esp. C. 80.

(x) Supra, Vol. I. and Index, tit. JUDGMENT.

(y) Vide supra, tit. CHARACTER.

(z) This defence cannot, it is said, be set up under the plea of the general issue. Mills v. Spencer,[4] Holt's C. 534; but see Starkie's L. L. vol. 1, p. 458, 2d ed.

(A) (In an action of slander, the plaintiff cannot give evidence of the fairness of his general character, until it is attacked by the defendants, and that a justification has been pleaded makes no difference in the rule. Shipman v. Burrows, 1 Hall, 399. Inman v. Foster, 8 Wend. 602. If the defendant plead the truth of the words in justification, the plaintiff may give in evidence his general good character, before it is impeached by the defendant otherwise, than by his plea of justification. Harding v. Brooks, 5 Pick. 244. [The insanity of the defendant at the time of speaking the words will be received in evidence as an excuse, where it is such that the words would produce no effect on the hearers. Aliter, where it is slight and not uniform. In the latter case the plaintiff is entitled to damages according to the injury. Dickinson v. Barber, 9 Mass. Rep. 225.

In Horner v. Marshall's Adm'x, 5 Munf. 466, it was held to be a sufficient ground of equity for a perpetual injunction to a judgment on slander, that at the time of speaking the words, and when the judgment was obtained, the defendant was insane, or in a state of partial mental derangement on the subject, to which those words related].)

(B) (See Robinson v. Harvey, 5 Monr. 520. Haines v. Welling, 6 and 7 Ohio R. 381. Trabue v. Mays, 3 Dana, 140.

In slander it is no evidence, nor can it be given in evidence in mitigation of damages, that the defendant at the time of speaking of the words, gave his author, and was in fact told by another what he uttered against the plaintiff. Inman v. Foster, 8 Wend. 602. See also, Austin v. Hanchet, 2 Root, 148.

[Whether a person who repeats a slander, but who at the same time names the person from whom he received it, may plead that circumstance in justification, seems to depend on the quo animo with which the words, with the name of the author, are repeated. They may be repeated with a malicious intent, and with mischievous effect. The public may be ignorant of the worthlessness of the original author, and may be led to attach credit to his name and slander, when both are mentioned by a person of undoubted reputation. Per Kent, C. J. 10 Johns. 449, Dole v. Lyon. S. P. Per Ld. C. J. Abbott, Holroyd and Best, Js. 4 B. & A. 611, 614, 615, Lewis v. Walter. There is no case in the English books, in which this justification has been allowed, under any circumstances, in an action for a libel; and Kent, C. J. and Ld. C. J. Abbott, and Best, J. in the cases above cited, strongly intimated that such a defence is not applicable to written slander.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ix. 217. [2]Id. viii. 360. [3]Id. xxxv. 33. [4]Id. iii. 177.

the *general replication de injuriâ suâ propriâ, the onus of proving the facts, that he heard the very words spoken by the third person, as alleged in the plea, and that, on repeating them he gave up his author, lies on the defendant, for the object of the plea is to show that the defendant has afforded to the plaintiff a certain cause of action against another (a); it would not be sufficient under this issue to prove that the third person spoke words to the same effect with those laid (b).

A plaintiff cannot upon the trial object to the insufficiency of a plea of justification in point of law (c).

II. Upon an indictment for publishing a libel, the prosecutor must prove, 1st, The fact of publication. 2dly, The introductory averments and the innuendos (d). 3dly, The malice of the defendant. Libel. Indictment.

1st. The evidence of publication has already been adverted to. In the case of an indictment, a publication to the prosecutor himself is, as has been seen, sufficient to constitute the offence, on the ground of its tendency to produce a breach of the peace, although a publication to the plaintiff alone would not support an action, since without some further publication no detriment can have resulted to the plaintiff (e). The defendant may be

(a) See Ld. Northampton's Case, 12 Rep. Crawford v. Middleton, 1 Lev. 82. Maitland v. Goldney, 2 East, 425. Woolnoth v. Meadows, 5 East, 463. [See Bell v. Bryne, 13 East, 554.]

(b) 2 East, 425. See also M'Gregor v. Thwaites,[1] 3 B. & C. 24. Lewis v. Walter,[2] 4 B. & A. 605. And it seems also, that this defence would not be available unless the defendant himself believed the words to be true, and spoke them on a justifiable occasion. M'Pherson v. Daniells,[3] 10 B. & C. 263.

(c) Edmonds v. Walter,[4] 3 Starkie's C. 7.

(d) Vide supra, 628.

(e) Supra, 617.

In South Carolina it is held that where a person affirms the truth of the words, he is liable, although he adds that he heard them from another; as where the defendant said of the plaintiff, "he stole a cart," but added "I heard it from J. S." Miller v. Kerr, 2 M'Cord, 285. S. P. in Connecticut. Austin v. Hanchet, 2 Root, 148. The court in S. Carolina seemed to hold that a person might justify the utterance of actionable words, if at the the time of speaking them he names the person of whom he heard them, and if in truth he did hear them—but that such justification is admissible only so far as it is evidence of the want of malice.

In Doe v. Lyon, ubi sup. the publisher of a libel was held responsible to the party libelled, though the libel was accompanied with the author's name.

In Pennsylvania it has been held, that if a libel is published innocently, and without malice, the person so republishing shall be excused, if at the time of republication he gives the true source of his information, so as to afford the injured party an opportunity of bringing his action against the real libeller. Binns v. M'Corkle, 2 Browne, 90. Aliter, if there be malice and an intention to injure. Ibid. (Quære, is he who originally publishes libellous matter "innocently, and without malice," liable to an action?) In the same case the rule as to oral slander is stated to be, that if the words are uttered generally, the defendant cannot justify by giving the name of the author in his plea, or at the trial; it can then only go in mitigation of damages; but if at the time he repeats the words, he gives the name of the author, so that the party may have his action against him, it is a justification. But in Hersh v. Ringwalt, 3 Yeates, 508, it is said, if the authority is mentioned at the time the words are uttered, it should be such an authority as would induce reasonable belief. In Kennedy v. Gregory, 1 Binney, 85, where the proof in an action of slander was, that the defendant, in reply to a question implicating the plaintiff, said, either "it is so," or "they say it is so;" it was held (one judge dissenting) that the defendant might give in evidence, to reduce damages, that A. B. told him what he related. So in Leister v. Smith, 2 Root, 24, it was held that the defendant might show, in mitigation of damages, from whom he heard the story. {But the doctrine has been denied in a late case decided in the supreme court of the state. Treat v. Browning, 4 Conn. Rep. 408.}

In an action for a libel against a printer of a newspaper, it is not a justification that the publication was made at the instance of a person whose name was given at the time, and who paid for it in the usual course of business—though it may go in mitigation of damages. Rankle v. Meyer & al. 3 Yeates, 518. So evidence of a writing purporting to be the copy of an anonymous letter, which appeared to have been sent to the preceding editor, was ruled to be admissible in mitigation of damages, to show that the defendant was not the original inventor of the charge. Morris v. Duane, 1 Binney, 90, n. {So the defendant may give evidence that the charge which he has published was taken from the Journal of Congress, thereby proving that he was not the author of the scandal in mitigation of damages. Romayne v. Duane, 3 Wash. C. C. Rep. 246.}

A letter stating that the writer had heard of a slanderous report, is good evidence to prove the circulation of the report, and may be read for that purpose—the hand-writing of the person being proved—but it is inadmissible to prove that the defendant propagated the report. Schwartz v. Thomas, 2 Wash. 157].)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. x. 6. [2]Id. vi. 535. [3]Id. xxi. 69. [4]Id. xiv. 145.

found guilty of the publishing, and acquitted of the composing or printing of a libel, which both are conjunctively alleged (f).

Proof of malice.

3dly. Many of the observations which have been already made (g) apply to the proof of malice. Malice is essential to the offence (h); and of the existence of malice, where express malice is essential, the jury are to judge. The defendant's malice consists in his intention to effect the particular mischief; and, as in all other cases, what he intends must be inferred from what he does. If nothing appear from which the intention is to be collected, except the publication of the libel itself, unexplained by any context of circumstances, if the very terms of the document itself tend to scandalize, degrade, and injure the individual, or to excite to acts of outrage and sedition, the intention on the part of the defendant to effect those objects must necessarily be inferred, without the aid of any extrinsic proof (i).

*645 *The defendant may in his turn rebut the inference of malice by evidence; he may show that he delivered the libel as the innocent agent of another, being himself ignorant of its contents; or that it was published by an agent without his knowledge or authority (k); or that he delivered it by mistake (l); or give in evidence any circumstances which show that what he did was done in the fair and honest discharge of any duty to society, or even that he acted bonâ fide in the prosecution of any claim, where he supposed himself entitled to a remedy, or to possess an interest (m). Where the alleged libel is contained in a newspaper, the defendant has a right to have other parts of the same paper, connected with the subject-matter, read in evidence, although they are contained in a different part of the paper (n). The defendant may also give in evidence any matter in defence which negatives any of the material allegations contained in the indictment. It is no defence to show that the same libel had already been published by another (o); neither is the defendant permitted to give the truth of the libel in evidence (p), but he may disprove the fact of publication, or negative the material facts averred, or the truth of the innuendos; as by evidence which shows that the matter published did not relate to the party or subject-matter alleged in the indictment (q).

In a late instance a defendant was allowed to prove that he had stopped the sale of a libellous publication, with a view to mitigation of punishment

(f) R. v. Hunt & another, 2 Camp. 583. R. v. Hart, 10 East, 94. R. v. Williams, 2 Camp. 646, cor. Lawrence, J. As where the record varies from the printed libel, but agrees with the manuscript delivered by the defendant to the printer. Ibid.; and R. v. Burdett,[1] 4 B. & A. 717; and see tit. VARIANCE.

(g) Supra, 629. See the observations of Grose, J., R. v. Creevey, 1 M. & S. 280. Subsequent publications, if connected with the subject, are evidence to show quo animo, &c. Per Lord Ellenborough, Stuart v. Lovell,[2] 2 Starkie's C. 83; R. v. Evans, cor. Bayley, J. Lancaster.

(h) R. v. Hart, 1 Bl. R. 386. R. v. Paine, 5 Mod. 167.

(i) Vide supra, tit. INTENTION and LIBEL, 629; and R. v. Creevey, supra, 862; and 1 M. & S. 273. R. v. Burdett,[1] 4 B. & A. 95. In case of libels, where the publication is proved, the law will infer malice. Per Lord Ellenborough, in R. v. Phillips, 6 East, 370. But as malice is a material averment on the record, which cannot be established but by the aid of a jury, and malice in law cannot be inferred from a legal act, the verdict, so far as malice is concerned, must, in such a case, depend on the question whether the matter published be or be not a libel, which is of course mere matter of law.

(k) R. v. Almon, 5 Burr. 2686; Starkie's L. L. vol. 2, p. 29, 2d. ed. As to the prima facie liability of the proprietor of a newspaper, see R. v. Gutch,[3] 1 M. & M. 485.

(l) Per Cur. R. v. Paine, 5 Mod. 163.

(m) 4 Bl. Comm. 151; 5 Rep. 125; Starkie's L. L. vol. 1, p. 292, and the cases there cited.

(n) R. v. Lambert & Perry, 2 Camp. 398. See R. v. Evans, 3 Starkie's C. 35, Appendix.

(o) R. v. Holt, 5 T. R. 436.

(p) 4 Comm. 151. 5 Rep. 125. And see the cases cited Starkie's L. L. vol. 1, p. 229, 2d ed.

(q) R. v. Horne, 2 Cowp. 672, 675.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 431. [2]Id. iii. 261. [3]Id. xxii. 352.

in case of conviction, and to avoid the expense of bringing the fact before the Court by affidavit (r).

By the stat. 32 Geo. 3, c. 60, it is declared and enacted, that upon a prosecution for libel, the jury may give a general verdict of guilty or not guilty upon the whole matter put in issue; and by the second section it is provided that the Court or Judge shall, according to their or his discretion, give their or his opinion to the jury on the matter in issue, as in other criminal cases. The effect of this statute seems to be simply that of placing the trial for a libel upon the same footing with trials for any other offence, by removing an anomaly which before existed. The statute does not require that the Court shall advance any opinion upon the case, except such as is given at the discretion of the Court in parallel cases (s). The offence consists of *certain facts done, and the intention with which they were done. Whether the facts be proved is in all cases for the consideration and decision of the jury, aided by the advice of the Court in doubtful cases, as to the weight of evidence. Effect of the statute 32 G. 3, c. 60. *646

Whether a particular publication be so far noxious in its bearing and tendencies, either per se or in conjunction with alleged facts, as to amount in the abstract to a libel, seems to be a pure question of law, just as much as it is a question of law what will constitute an obligation or forgery (t). If the publication in consideration of law be libellous, then it is a question of fact for the jury, whether it was wilfully and maliciously published, subject, however, to the ordinary presumption of law, that in the absence of proof to the contrary, a man intends that which is the natural consequence of the means which he employs. If collateral facts be proved in defence, it is for the Court to pronounce whether they furnish an absolute defence or a qualified one, dependent on the actual or express malice of the publisher, of the existence of which the jury are to decide. It follows that neither the jury nor the parties have a right to expect from the Court any specific and direct opinion upon the whole of the case, or any other than that which is ordinarily given at the discretion of the Court to the jury in parallel cases, with respect to the verdict which they ought to find in point of law, as dependent and contingent upon their conclusions in point of fact, drawn from the alleged libel itself, and all the circumstances of the case, as to the meaning, motives, and intention of the defendant (u).

(r) R. v. Hone, cor. Ld. Ellenborough, Guildhall sittings after Hil. T. 1817; but semble, this is entirely ex gratia. Vide supra, 642.

(s) See Parmiter v. Coupland, 6 M. & W. 105; where the practice is stated to be for the Court to give a legal definition of the offence of libel, and then to leave it to the jury to say whether the facts necessary to constitute that offence are proved to their satisfaction; and that the rule is the same both in civil and criminal cases; and that the Court is not bound to give an opinion as to the nature of the publication as a matter of law. Hence it may be inferred, that the Libel Act does not, in this respect, distinguish a criminal from a civil proceeding. Where the publication and innuendos are proved or admitted, there is, in reality, no fact for the jury to try, and, if the process of applying the terms of a dry legal definition to the terms of the alleged libel be left to them, some danger of mistake is incurred. Such application is usually matter of law within the province of the Court to decide upon, the making of which, without more special direction, the jury may easily make a mistake. If they mistake in finding that to be a libel which is not a libel, the defendant being improperly convicted (malice in law having been improperly found, as an inference from a lawful act), the mistake may be rectified at some trouble and expense to the defendant, by moving in arrest of judgment, or bringing a writ of error. If the jury should err on the other side, concluding that to be no libel, which in law was a libel, the defendant, though guilty, would escape with impunity. It was also held, in the case of Parmiter v. Coupland, that it was not a misdirection to state to the jury, that in the absence of imputation of wicked or corrupt motives there was a distinction between publications as relating to public and private individuals.

(t) See the opinion of the Judges, Howell's St. Tr. Archbishop of Tuam v. Robeson,[1] 5 Bing. 17. Levi v. Milne,[2] 4 Bing. 195.

(u) See R. v. Holt, 5 T. R. 436. R. v. Burdett,[3] 4 B. & A. 95. The observations of Parke, B., in Parmiter v. Coupland, supra, note (s). Starkie on Libel, vol. 2, 354, 2d edit.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xv. 350. [2]Id. iii. 396. [3]Id. vi. 358.

LICENSE (v).

See TRESPASS.—LEAVE AND LICENSE.—FRAUDS, STAT. OF.

LIEN.

THE evidence to establish a right of lien is either of an express agreement (x) between the parties in the particular instance, or is presumptive,
*647 *being founded either upon the mode of dealing between the same parties in former instances, or on the general usage and custom of the particular trade.

Proof of, by express agreement.

1st. An agreement amongst the members of a particlar trade or business to insist upon a lien for their general balance, is legal, and is binding upon all those to whom notice of their terms of dealing has been communicated (y). In such a case it is necessary to prove that the employer had notice of the special terms; it is not sufficient to prove that general notice was given by advertisement in the public newspapers, or otherwise, without further showing, by reasonable evidence, that the party to be affected by it read the notice (z).

Notice.

Presumptive evidence.

2dly. The presumption from former dealings rests upon the general principle, that the parties intended to deal, in the particular instance, upon the same terms on which they had dealt on former occasions, in the absence of any reason for supposing that they intended in that instance either to deal independently of any contract (a), or to adopt a fresh one.

Proof. General usage of trade.

3dly. By evidence of a general usage in the particular trade, collected from the dealings of other persons engaged in the same employment, of such notoriety that the inference may fairly be drawn that the parties knew the usage, and adopted it in the particular instance, intending to deal as all others did, according to the known usage of trade. It is a question for a

(v) A license to a lessee to aliene may be executed after a grant of the reversion. Walker v. Bellamy, Cro. Ja. 102. As to the effect of a license, see 1 Saund. 287, C. A license to aliene passes no interest; it merely removes a restraint set on a liberty, and therefore need not be shown in pleading. Walker v. Bellamy, Cro. J. 102. Any more than a warrant need not be shown; for, being executed, it is returned to the sheriff. Cro. J. 372. Otherwise of a thing which has continuance.

(x) The owner agreed that a mare should remain with the livery-stable keeper as a security for monies advanced, and for her keep, with a power of sale if not otherwise liquidated; held, that he had such a lien upon her as entitled him to maintain trover against the sheriff taking her under an execution against the owner. Donnally v. Crowthers,[1] 11 Moore, 479. A lien cannot be acquired by the voluntary and unauthorized act of the party who claims it. Stone v. Lingwood, 1 Str. 651: the defendant, being master of a ship, brought home a quantity of ivory for the defendant, the owner, and paid the duty; and it was held that he had no lien on the goods. So the finder of a dog cannot detain it against the owner for the expenses of the keep. Benstead v. Buck, 2 Bl. 1117. But in Stone v. Lingwood, it was held that the defendant, on showing the sum paid, might deduct it from the damages. In Green v. Farmer, 4 Burr. 2218, the plaintiff recovered against the defendant, a dyer, after tender of the particular lien, but the price of dyeing was deducted in damages. See as to the effect of notice given by a carrier that all goods shall be considered as subject to a lien, not only for the freight due in respect of the particular goods, but also for the balance due from the respective owners. Wright v. Snell,[2] 5 B. & A. 353; 3 B. & P. 48. Although such a notice may create a lien in respect of the balance due from the real owner, yet it does not create one in respect of the party to whom the goods are addressed, being the mere factor of the owner. Ibid.; and see Oppenheim v. Russell, 3 B. & P. 48; Butler v. Woolcot, 2 N. R. 64. The carrier's lien does not, as has been seen, devest the consignor's right to stop in transitu. Oppenheim v. Russell, 3 B. & B. 42.

(y) Kirkman v. Shawcross, 6 T. R. 14; and see Oppenheim v. Russell, 3 B. & P. 42. It has been doubted whether innkeepers, common carriers, &c. can, by notice, entitle themselves to a lien for the general balance. Ibid. But it is settled that carriers at least may do this, as they are in the constant habit of making special contracts in opposition to their common law liability. And see Rushforth v. Hadfield, 7 East, 224; 6 East, 519.

(z) Vide supra, tit. ASSUMPSIT.—CARRIERS; infra, tit. PARTNERS.

(a) Supra, 32. Kirkman v. Shawcross, 6 T. R. 14, 19. Downman v. Matthews, Prec. in Chan. 580. Demrinbray v. Metcalfe, 2 Vern. 691, 698.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxii. 416. [2]Id. vii. 127.

jury in such cases, whether the usage has been so general that the parties must be taken to have acted upon it (b).

The nature and force of the evidence requisite for this purpose has been already adverted to (c). The custom must be proved by means of witnesses who have had actual and frequent experience of the custom (d).

Where the claim attempted to be established is contrary to the general law of the land, the proof is, it is said, to be watched with jealousy (e).

Where a carrier claimed a lien for his general balance, and many instances were proved in which the right had been insisted upon, and acquiesced in within ten or twelve years back, and one case in which the same had been *done thirty years ago, and evidence was also given that this had been *648 the general practice in the North (where the contract arose), for twenty or thirty years, it was left to the jury to decide whether the usage was so general as to warrant them in presuming that the party employing the carrier knew it, and intended to contract in conformity with it. The jury by their verdict negatived the right of lien, and the Court of King's Bench afterwards refused a new trial (f).

It seems to be a general rule, that all tradesmen have a lien on a particular chattel, in respect of the labour bestowed upon it (g).

Where the right to insist upon a general lien has frequently been established by evidence, the custom becomes part of the law of the land, and the courts will not afterwards permit it to be disputed (h) (A).

(b) See Rushforth v. Hadfield, 7 East, 224, and Lord Ellenborough's observations there. Where the usage of wharfingers to claim a general lien had frequently been matter of dispute, and had, in many instances, been rejected, it was held that it could not be supported. Holderness v. Collinson,[1] 7 B. & C. 212; 1 Ry. & M. 55. (c) Supra, tit. CUSTOM.

(d) Ibid. And see Holderson v. Collinson,[2] 7 B. & C. 214; Bleaden v. Hancock, 4 C. & P. 156.

(e) See Rushforth v. Hadfield, 7 East, 224. (f) See Rushforth v. Hadfield, 7 East, 224.

(g) Naylor v. Mangles, 1 Esp. C. 109. Spears v. Hartley, 3 Esp. C. 81. Although the work is to be done, and the chattel re-delivered at a specific time. Fairman v. Gamble,[3] 2 C. & P. 266. Supra, tit. CUSTOM. And see Exparte Deeze, 1 Atk. 228. A workman who bestows labour on a chattel for a stipulated sum may detain the chattel till the price be paid, although it be delivered at different times, if the work to be done under the agreement be entire. Chase v. Westmore, 5 M. & S. 180. Secus, as it seems, where the parties contract for a mode or time of payment inconsistent with the workman's claim to the possession. Ibid. Or where work is done under several distinct contracts. Markes v. Lahee,[4] 3 Bing. N. C. 408. A lien for work done, must be for work done at the request of the owner. Hiscox v. Greenwood, 4 Esp. C. 174.

(h) As to the lien of an attorney, see 12 Mod. 554. Mitchell v. Oldfield, 4 T. R. 123. Exparte Nisbitt, 2 Scho. & Lef. 279, 315. 15 Ves. jun. 97. 16 Ves. jun. 164. 13 Ves. jun. 161, 195. 14 Ves. jun. 271. Alger v. Hefford, 1 Taunt. 38. Doug. 104. Ld. Raym. 738. Hoare v. Parker, 2 T. R. 376. 8 Mod. 306. Welsh v. Hole, Doug. 226. Read v. Dupper, 6 T. R. 361. Griffin v. Eyles, 1 H. B. 122. Pyne v. Earle, 8 T. R. 407. Ormerod v. Tate, 1 East, 464. Glaister v. Hewer, 8 T. R. 70. 1 H. B. 23, 217. 2 N. R. 99. 1 N. R. 22. Stevenson v. Blakelock, 1 M. & S. 535. By the General Rules, Hil. 2 W. 4, No. 91, no set-off of damages or costs between parties shall be allowed to the prejudice of the attorney's lien for costs in the particular in which the set-off is sought; provided, nevertheless, that interlocutory costs in the same suit, awarded to the adverse party, may be deducted. The lien of a solicitor on a fund in a court of equity, for his costs, is not affected by the bankruptcy of his client pending the suit. Pounsey v. Humphreys, 1 Coop. 142. A court of equity will not allow the lien of the solicitor to interfere with the equities between the parties; and

(A) (Possession is essential to the existence of a lien. Lander v. Clark, 1 Hall Rep. 355. A lien appears from the cases to be a personal right, and can endure no longer than the possession of the party holding it continues. Urquhart v. M'Ivor, 4 Johns. 127. But a factor may deliver the possession of goods to a third person on which he has a lien, with notice of it, and a declaration that the transfer is to such third person as agent for the factor and for his benefit. Id. Where it is agreed that the owners of a saw-mill shall have a lien for their charges in sawing logs into boards, that the boards should be removed a short distance from their premises, but that the lien shall continue until payment, and the boards are sawed and piled accordingly a short distance from the mill, the lien of the owners of the mill is as perfect as if the boards were in their millyard; the possession of the owner of the boards is their possession. Wheeler et al. v. M'Farland, 10 Wend. 318. Where a large quantity of any particular kind of merchandize is stored in a warehouse, and portions of it are, from time to time, delivered out without the storage thereon being paid, the warehouseman has a lien upon the portion left for the storage of the whole. Schmidt & Webb v. Blood & Green, 9 Wend. 268.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiv. 30. [2]Id. xix. 317. [3]Id. xii. 124. [4]Id. xxxii. 181.

*As the right of lien may be created, so may it be devested or determined by contract, either expressly or by implication, or by an abuse of the suba party having a lien or right of set-off for costs, is not deprived of it by issuing a writ of attachment for such costs. [Yelv. 676, note.] Of bankers, for their general balance; Jourdaine v. Lefevre, 1 Esp. C. 66. Bolland v. Bygrave,[1] R. & M. 271. Bawtree v. Watson, 2 Keene, 713. Davis v. Bowsher, 5 T. R. 488. Saville v. Barchard, 4 Esp. C. 53. Bosanquet v. Dudman,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 1. Calico-printers, for a general balance; Weldon v. Gould, 3 Esp. C. 268. Exparte Andrews, Co. B. L. 429. Of carriers, for a lien on the particular goods; Rushforth v. Hadfield, 6 East, 519. 7 East, 224. Aspinall v. Pickford, 3 B. & P. 44, n. Oppenheim v. Russell, 3 B. & P. 42. 6 T. R. 14. By water, Butler v. Woolcot, 2 N. R. 64. Abbott, 112, 215, 244. 1 Esp. C. 23. Dyers, for a particular lien. Kirkman v. Shawcross, 6 T. R. 14. Clarke v. Gray, 4 Esp. C. 178. And in some instances, for a general lien; Saville v. Barchard, 4 Esp. C. 53. Rose v. Hart,[3] 8 Taunt. 499. Hamphreys v. Partridge, Mont. B. L. 18, (n.) And see 6 East, 523. In some instances the evidence has been insufficient to establish a general lien; Close v. Waterhouse, 6 East, 523, (n.) Bennett v. Johnson,[4] 2 Chitty, 455. Green v. Farmer, 4 Burr. 2214. Roscoe on Evidence, 533. Factors, for a general lien; Kruger v. Wilcox, Ambl. 252. Walker v. Birch, 6 T. R. 262. 6 East, 25. Hollingworth v. Took, 2 H. B. 501. Drinkwater v. Goodwin, Cowp. 251. Hammonds v. Barclay, 2 East, 227. Man v. Shiffner, 2 East, 523. Copland v. Stein, 8 T. R. 199. Houghton v. Matthews, 3 B. & P. 485. Farriers; 7 East, 229. 1 Salk. 18. Bac. Ab. Trover, E. 4. Brennan v. Carrint, Say, 224. Selw. 1289. See 6 G. 4, c. 94, and tit. Trover. Of an innkeeper; Thompson v. Lacy,[5] 3 B. & A. 283. Jones v. Thurlow, 8 Mod. 172. Jones v. Pearle, 1 Str. 556. 6 East, 23. Bac. Ab. tit. Inns. Burn's J., tit. Alehouses. Salk. 388. Ld. Raym. 867. Johnson v. Hill, 3 Starkie's C. 172.

An innkeeper cannot sell or use a horse on which he has a lien as such, except by particular custom. Jones v. Pearle, 1 Str. 556. Jones v. Thurlow, 8 Mod. 172. Cowp. Yelverton, 67. Thompson v. Lacy,[5] 3 B. & A. 283. Proctor v. Nicholson,[6] 7 C. & P. 67. He cannot take off the clothes of his guest, or detain his person, to secure payment of his bill. Sunbolf v. Alford, 3 M. & W. 248. The lien is only a particular one on the thing itself in respect of which the debt is incurred; a horse can be detained only for its own meat, &c. 1 Bulstr. 207. Bac. Ab. tit. Fines. Burn's J., tit. Alehouses. Whitaker on Lien, 118. A livery-stable keeper has not a lien on horses in his stable for their keep, without express agreement. Wallace v. Woodgate,[7] R. & M. 194. Johnson v. Etheridge, 1 C. & M. 743. York v. Greenough, 2 Ld. Raym. 866. A trainer of horses has a lien on a horse for keeping and training. Bevan v. Waltgrs, M. & M. 236. Insurance brokers, for a general balance; Whitehead v. Vaughan, Co. Bl. 566. Parker v. Carter, Co. B. L. 567. Maans v. Henderson, 1 East, 335. Man v. Shiffner, 2 East, 523. Snook v. Davidson, 2 Camp. 218. George v. Claggett, 7 T. R. 359. Rabone v. Williams, 7 T. R. 360. Lanyon v. Blanchard, 2 Camp. 597. Richardson v. Goss, 3 B. & P. 119. Pulteney v. Keymer, 3 Esp. C. 182. Mann v. Forrester, 4 Camp. 60. Maans v. Henderson, 1 East, 335. Of a miller, on the corn ground by him; Exparte Ockenden, 1 Atk. 235; 1 M. & S. 180. Packers for a general balance; Savill v. Barchard, 4 Esp. C. 53. Green v. Farmer, 1 Bl. R. 651; 4 Burr. 2222. Pawnees, Hoare v. Hartopp, 3 Atk. 44; Bro. Pledges, 28; Vin. Ab. tit. Pawn. E. M'Combie v. Davies, 6 East, 538. Paterson v. Tash, 2 Str. 1178. Newsom v. Thornton, 6 East, 17. Fitzroy v. Gwyllim, 1 Tr. 153. Astley v. Reynolds, 2 Str. 915. Parker v. Patrick, 5 T. R. 175. Tailor; Hussey v. Christie, 9 East, 433; 6 Bac. Ab. 694; Yelv. 67. A printer employed to print numbers of a work not consecutive has a lien on the copies not delivered, for the general balance for the whole of such numbers. Blake v. Nicholson, 3 M. & S. 167. The part owner of a whale-ship has a lien for salvage. Holderness v. Shackell,[8] 8 B. & C. 612. A person who by his own labour preserves goods which the owner, or those entrusted with the care of them, have either abandoned in distress at sea, or are unable to protect and secure, is entitled by the common law of England to retain the possession of the goods saved until a proper compensation is made him for his trouble. Abbott on Shipp. 398. Hartford v. Jones, 1 Ld. Ray. 393. Baring & others v. Day, 8 East, 57. This compensation, if the parties cannot agree upon it, may by the same law be ascertained by a jury, in an action brought by the salvor against the proprietor of the goods, or the proprietor may tender to the salvor such sum of money as he thinks sufficient; and on refusal to deliver the goods, bring an action against the salvor, and if the jury think the sum tendered sufficient, he will recover his goods, or their value, in trover or detinue. Abbott, Ibid. Of a shipwright, for the repairs of a ship; Franklin v. Hosier,[9] 4 B. & A. 341. [4 Wheat. 438.] Of a ship-owner; Horncastle v. Farran,[10] 3 B. & A. 497. Christie v. Lewis,[11] 2 B. & B. 410. Hulton v. Bragg,[12] 7 Taunt. 14. Faith v. East India Company,[13] 4 B. & A. 630. A master of a ship has no lien on the receipt for wages, &c.; 1 B. & A. 575. [Sed vide 2 Caines's R. 81; 4 Mass. R. 91.] Of a master of a vessel on the luggage of his passengers, for passage-money; Wolfe v. Summers, 2 Camp. 631. Of a tailor, on cloth delivered to and made up by him; Hussey v. Christie, 9 East, 433. A trainer has a lien on a race-horse for the expenses and skill bestowed in the keeping and training him. Bevan v. Waters, 1 M. & M. 230. And see Jacobs v. Latour,[14] 5 Bing. 130; 2 M. & P. 201. The plaintiff put a pipe of wine in the defendant's cellar, which he was in the habit of letting, and partly bottled it there, and upon a demand of rent, offered to pay the usual charge, which was refused; held that the defendant was entitled to detain the wine until a reasonable sum was paid for the occupation. Gray v. Chamberlain,[15] 4 C. & P. 260. A vendor has by the common law a lien upon the property so long as it remains in his possession unpaid for. Hob. 41. Mason v. Lickbarrow, 1 H. Bl. 363; 2 Bl. Comm. 448. Hodgson v. Loy, 7 T. R. 440. Feize v. Wray, 3 East, 93; Noy's Maxims, 88; 7 East, 571. Dunmore v. Taylor, Peake's C. 41. Sluhey v. Hayward, 2 H. B. 504. Hammonds v. Anderson, 1 N. R. 69. And may maintain trover if his possession be devested by fraud. Hawse v. Crowe,[16] R. & M. 414. Of a wharfinger; Crawshay v. Homfray,[17] 4 B. & A. 50. Where, by the usage of trade, a specific time is given

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxi. 436. [2] Id. ii. 267. [3] Id. iv. 185. [4] Id. xviii. 395. [5] Id. v. 285. [6] Id. xxxii. 440. [7] Id. xxi. 414. [8] Id. xv. 315. [9] Id. vi. 446. [10] Id. v. 356. [11] Id. vi. 175. [12] Id. ii. 9. [13] Id. vi. 544. [14] Id. xv. 388. [15] Id. xix. 374. [16] Id. xxi. 477. [17] Id. vi. 345.

ject-matter, or by the voluntary relinquishment of that possession which is essential to its existence; or the right, though still existing, may be waived by the party entitled to it (A). Where his possession is determined by wrong, he is entitled to recover in trover. A lien for freight is determined by the receiving and negotiating a bill, although payment was to be made in good and approved bills, and the shipowner objected in *the first instance (i). *650
A lien is not destroyed or prevented by a special agreement, unless it be inconsistent with the right (k). So a lien is determined by abuse of the lien in pledging the goods (l). So a lien is waived by parting with the possession (m). If an agent part with papers by mistake on which his principal has a lien, the lien is at an end (n).

If a party having a lien on goods, does not, when they are demanded of him, insist on his lien, but rests his refusal to deliver the goods on other grounds, it is evidence of a waver of his lien (o). But where a defendant having a lien on goods, purchased them of the bailor after the latter had become a bankrupt, and on demand made by the assignees, said, "I may as well give up every transaction of my life;" it was held that these words were no waver, and that the lien had not merged in the purchase (p).

A claim to hold for a general balance does not waive a particular lien (q); but if possession be wrongfully devested, the lien revives on repossession taken without force (r). The lien remains although the vendor recover from the vendee for goods bargained and sold. But it would, it seems, be otherwise if the vendor recovered for goods sold and delivered (s). A lien is not devested by reason of a set-off to a larger amount, without a special agreement to deduct the one from the other (t); nor by the depositing of goods, on which the captain of a vessel has a lien, in the King's warehouse, under the direction of a statute (u). A general lien cannot be sustained against a party having a right to stop in transitu (v).

to the importer for the payment of wharfage, the bankruptcy of the importer subsequent to that time does not give a right to detain as against a purchaser, previous to that time. Ib. Qu. whether a lien is barred by the Statute of Limitations. Spears v. Hartley, 3 Esp. Ca. 81.

(i) Horncastle v. Farran,[1] 3 B. & A. 497.

(k) Chase v. Westmore, 5 M. & S. 180. If wharfage is to be due at Christmas, whether the goods be or be not removed, there is no lien. Crawshay v. Homfrey,[2] 4 B. & Ad. 52.

(l) Scott v. Newington, 1 Mo. & R. 252.

(m) Jacobs v. Latour,[3] 5 Bing. 130. Hartley v. Hitchcock,[4] 1 Starkie's C. 408. And where that is wrongfully done, the owner may maintain trover without tendering what is due on the lien. Jones v. Cliff, 1 C. & M. 540. Scott v. Newington, 1 Mo. & R. 252.

(n) Dicas v. Stockley,[5] 7 C. & P. 587.

(o) White v. Gainer,[6] 2 Bing. 23.

(p) Boardman v. Sill, 1 Camp. 410, n.

(q) Scaife v. Morgan, 4 M. & W. 271.

(r) Wallace v. Woodgate,[7] R. & M. 193. Dicas v. Stockley,[5] 7 C. & P. 587. And see Levy v. Barnard,[8] 8 Taunt. 149.

(s) Holditch v. Desanges,[9] 2 Starkie's C. 337.

(t) Pinnock v. Harrison, 3 M. & W. 532.

(u) Ward v. Felton, 1 East, 512.

(v) Morley v. Hay, 3 M. & Ry. 396. A house in N. directed foreign merchants at A. (the appellants) to contract for building a ship, except rigging, and to advise them in good time, to enable them to send it out, and a master, allowing them commission for trouble; such agency was usual. The agents entered into contracts with the builders, made advances to them, and drew from time to time for such advances on their principals. The N. house then directed their correspondents at L. (the respondents) to send out the rigging, which was done, and delivered to the appellants at Q.: held, that the property thereby vested in the N. house, and that the agents at Q. were entitled to retain the goods as against the L. correspondents, as a lien for the advances they had made to the builders, and the custom-house expenses, notwithstanding they had previously to such delivery obtained an assignment of the ship, and procured its registry, in the name of one of their partners; that appearing to have been done for securing the ship, and facilitating an equitable arrangement with the N. house. Rogerson v. Reid, 1 Knapp, 362.

(A) (But see Morent v. Williams, 11 Wend. 77.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. v. 356. [2]Id. vi. 345. [3]Id. xv. 388. [4]Id. ii. 447. [5]Id. xxxii. 643. [6]Id. ix. 302. [7]Id. xxi. 414. [8]Id. iv. 52. [9]Id. iii. 373.

*LIMITATIONS (w).

1. Provisions of the stat. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, as to making entry or distress, or bringing an action to recover any land or rent, p. 651.
2. Of the stat. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, as to actions of debt for rent on indentures of demise, actions of covenant, debt on bond or other specialty, actions of debt or scire facias on recognizance, p. 656.
3. Proof of an issue taken on the plea of actio non accrevit, &c. under the stat. 21 J. 1, p. 657.
4. Evidence of subsequent acknowledgements, mutual accounts, &c. p. 670.
5. Proof of disability, &c., p. 672.

Right of entry.

By the stat. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 2, it is (y) enacted, that after the 31st day of December 1833, no person shall make an entry or distress, or bring an action to recover any land (z) or rent but within twenty years next after the time at which the right to make such entry or distress, or to bring such action, shall have first accrued to some person through whom he claims (1);

(w) A decree in equity is not affected by the Statute of Limitations (21 J. 1). Mildred v. Robinson, 19 Ves. 587. Knapp's Case, 202. Where there is a term to attend the inheritance, and the right to the inheritance is lost by fine and nonclaim, equity follows law, and cannot consider him who has lost the inheritance as entitled to claim in equity the term which is to attend it. Reynolds v. Jones, 2 Sim. & Stu. 206. An estate was by deed of settlement conveyed to trustees, in trust for a tenant for life, who assigned her interest; the possession of the assignee is not to be deemed adverse to the trustee until the death of the cestui que trust. Fauset v. Carpenter, 1 Dow. & C. 233.

(y) The main objects of the statute are: 1, to make twenty years the limit for the recovery of land or rent, with an allowance for disabilities, and to prevent the remedy being lost during that period; 2, to make forty years the extreme limit for the recovery of land or rent, notwithstanding the existence of disabilities; 3, to alter the previous law where a person has different rights; 4, to alter the previous law in the case of entails and unbarred remainders; 5, to apply to equitable the same limitation as is provided for legal estates; 6, to provide a limitation as between mortgagor and mortgagee; 7, to provide a limitation as to claims of ecclesiastical and eleemosynary corporations sole, and in respect to advowsons; 8, to abolish all actions, real or mixed, except writs of dower and quare impedit and an ejectment, and except plaints for freebench; and 9, to provide a limitation in respect to money secured out of land or rent, or to any legacy and arrears of dower, and of rent, or interest. See Mr. Stalman's notes on this Act, p. 93.

(z) By the first clause of the Act land extends to manors, messuages, and all other corporeal hereditaments whatsoever, and also to tithes other than tithes belonging to a spiritual or eleemosynary corporation sole; and also to any share, estate or interest in them or any of them. Before this statute there was no limitation applicable to the right to impropriate tithes, nor could there have been a prescription de non decimando against a lay impropriator. See below, tit. TITHES. As nonpayment furnished no presumption of a grant, the consequence was, that time, instead of justifying, as in other cases, has opened the title to exemption from tithes, by rendering such proof as was sufficient to show a discharge the more difficult. See below, tit. TITHES, and Peters v. Blencowe, Gwill. 1483. And see above, tit. EJECTMENT. The statute operates, as has been seen, supra, 400, to do away with the doctrine of non-adverse possession, and to bar the action unless it has been brought within twenty years from the time when the right first accrued to the claimant or party through whom he claims in the manner pointed out by the statute. Where a party has had possession of land for twenty years, he cannot be ejected but by one who can show either that his right accrued within the twenty years in one of the modes, or that he laboured under one of the disabilities specified in the statute. And should a party after such possession of twenty years be dispossessed or discontinue his possession, he would be entitled to recover in ejectment at any time within twenty years after, for by the third clause the right to recover would be deemed to have accrued at the time of the discontinuance of the possession; so that he would not be barred by the statute, and his title by possession for twenty years would prevail against the defendants, whose title is, by sect. 34, expressly extinguished at the expiration of the period of limitation. Supra, 405 (s).

(1) [A remainder man or reversioner cannot enter so as to avoid the statute, during the continuance of the particular estate; and consequently as to them, the statute does not commence running, until after the determination of the particular estate. Jackson v. Shoemaker, 4 Johns. 390. S. P. Wallingford v. Hearl, 15 Mass. Rep. 471. Wells v. Prince, 9 Mass. Rep. 508. See also Jackson v. Sellick, 8 Johns. 262.

If a right of entry for a forfeiture of a life estate be barred by the statute, the right of entry arising afterwards on the death of tenant for life is not thereby affected. One of two rights of entry may be lost without impairing the other. Stevens & ux. v. Winship & ux. 1 Pick. 327.

or if such right shall not have accrued to any person through whom he claims, then within twenty years next after the time at which the right to make such *entry or distress, or to bring such action, shall have first ac- *652 crued to the person making or bringing the same (a).

By sec. 3, That in the construction of this Act the right to make an entry or distress, or bring an action to recover any land or rent, shall be deemed to have first accrued at such time as hereinafter is mentioned; (that is to say,) when the person claiming such land or rent, or some person through whom he claims, shall, in respect of the estate or interest claimed, have been in possession or in receipt of the profits of such land, or in receipt of such rent, and shall, while entitled thereto, have been dispossessed or have discontinued such possession or receipt, then such right shall be deemed to have first accrued at the time of such disposition or discontinuance of possession, or at the last time at which any such profits or rent were or was so received; and when the person claiming such land or rent shall claim the estate or interest of some deceased person who shall have continued in such possession or receipt in respect of the same estate or interest until the time of his death, and shall have been the last person entitled to such estate or interest who shall have been in such possession or receipt, then such right shall be deemed to have first accrued at the time of such death; and when the person claiming such land or rent shall claim in respect of an estate or interest in possession granted, appointed, or otherwise assured by any instrument (other than a will) to him, or some person through whom he claims, by a person being in respect of the same estate or interest in the possession or receipt of the profits of the land, or in the receipt of the rent, and no person entitled under such instrument shall have been in such possession or receipt, then such right shall be deemed to have first accrued at the time at which the person claiming as aforesaid, or the person through whom he claims, became entitled to such possession or receipt by virtue of such instrument; and when the estate or interest claimed shall have been an estate or interest in reversion or remainder, or other future estate or interest, and no person shall have obtained the possession or receipt of the profits of such land, or the receipt of such rent in respect of such estate or interest, then such right shall be deemed to have first accrued at the time at which such estate or interest became an estate or interest in possession; and when the person claiming such land or rent, or the person through whom he claims, shall have become entitled by reason of any forfeiture or breach of condition, then such right shall be deemed to have first accrued when such forfeiture was incurred or such condition was broken (b).

Sec. 4 provides, that the right to make an entry or distress, or bring an *action to recover land, shall, in respect of an estate in reversion or remain- *653

(a) The effect of the statute is, that twenty years adverse possession will be a bar to all adverse claims, with an allowance of ten years to persons under disability to pursue their rights. The limitation runs,

1. In the case of an estate in possession from the period of dispossession.
2. In the case of a person dying in possession, from the period of his death.
3. In the case of a person claiming by alienation, from the period of such alienation.
4. In the case of a future estate or interest, from the period of its falling into possession.
5. In case of a forfeiture or breach of condition, from the period of such forfeiture incurred or condition broken.

(b) See note (o), and supra, tit. EJECTMENT, 400, as to the effect of this clause as superseding the former doctrine of non-adverse possession.

In cases of an entry by a grantor, from whom a deed had been extorted by duress, or by his heirs, for the purpose of avoiding the deed, the period prescribed by the statute is to commence from the delivery of the deed—as the deed conveys a seisin to the grantee. Inhabitants of Worcester v. Eaton, 13 Mass. Rep. 375.]

der, be deemed to have accrued at the time when such estate shall have come into possession (c).

Sec. 5 provides, that the right shall be deemed to accrue to the reversioner when the estate vests in possession, by the determination of any estate in respect of which such land shall, or the profits thereof, or such rent shall have been received, notwithstanding the person claiming such land, or some person through whom he claims, shall at any time previous to the creation of the estate or estates which shall have determined, have been in possession or receipt of the profits of such land, or in receipt of such rent.

Sec. 6. An administrator is to claim as if he obtained the estate without interval after the death of the deceased (d).

Sec. 7. In the case of a tenancy at will, the right shall be deemed to accrue either at the determination of such tenancy, or at the expiration of one year next after the commencement of such tenancy. No mortgagee or cestui que trust to be deemed a tenant (e) at will within the meaning of the clause.

Sec. 8. In the case of a tenancy from year to year, or other period, without lease in writing, the right shall be deemed to have accrued at the determination of the first of such years or other periods, or at the last time when any rent payable in respect of such tenancy shall have been received, which shall last happen.

Sec. 9. When any person shall be in possession or in receipt of the profits of any land, or in receipt of any rent, by virtue of a lease in writing, by which a rent amounting to the yearly sum of 20*s.* or upwards shall be reserved, and the rent reserved by such lease shall have been received by some person wrongfully claiming to be entitled to such land or rent in reversion, immediately expectant on the determination of such lease, and no payment in respect of the rent reserved by such lease shall afterwards have been made to the person rightfully entitled thereto, the right of the person entitled to such land or rent, subject to such lease, or of the person through whom he claims, to make an entry or distress, or to bring an action after the determination of such lease, shall be deemed to have first accrued at the time at which the rent reserved by such lease was first so received by the person wrongfully claiming as aforesaid; and no such right shall be deemed to have first accrued upon the determination of such lease, to the person rightfully entitled (f).

Sec. 10. No person shall be deemed to have been in possession of any land, merely by reason of having made an entry thereon (g) (1).

(c) As to the former law, see Doe v. Danvers, 7 East, 299; 1 Ves. 278.

(d) Before this, the time was from the time of taking out administration. See Stanford's Case, Cro. J. 61; Cary v. Stephenson, Salk. 421; Murray v. East India Company,[1] 5 B. & A. 204. Supra, tit. EJECTMENT, 407.

(e) The stat. 21 J. 1, did not apply where the person in possession was tenant at sufferance; Doe v. Hull, 2 Dow. & R. 38. Nor in the case of a mortgagor in possession by consent of mortgagee; Hall v. Doe, 2 B. & A. 187; Doe v. Maisey,[2] 8 B. & C. 767.

(f) The stat. of James did not begin to run against the remainder-man till the expiration of the lease. Doe v. Danvers, 9 East, 299.

(g) To make an entry or claim available to avoid a fine with proclamations, possession must now be taken, &c. The stat. 4 & 5 Ann. c. 16, s. 16, enacted, that an action should be brought within the year. See the law on this subject previous to the statute, EJECTMENT, 401, 2.

(1) [See Bryan v. Atwater, 5 Day, 181. Jackson v. Ellis, 13 Johns. 118. Jackson v. Smith, ibid. 406. Jackson v. Moore, ibid. 513. Doe v. Campbell, 10 Johns. 475. Jackson v. Sears, ibid. 435. Jackson v. Thomas, 16 Johns. 293. Denn v. White, 1 Cox's Rep. 94. Den v. Morris, 2 Halstead's Rep. 6. Lux v. Pellet, 1 Har. & J. 83, n. Ridgely v. Ogle, 4 Har. & M'Hen. 123. Stanley v. Turner, Cam. & Nor. 533;

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. vii. 66. [2]Id. xv. 335.

*Sec. 11. No continual or other claim upon or near any land, shall preserve any right of making an entry or distress, or of bringing an action (h).

Sec. 12. When any one or more of several persons entitled to any land or rent as coparceners, joint-tenants, or tenants in common, shall have been in possession or receipt of the entirety, or more than his or their undivided share or shares of such land, or of the profits thereof, or of such rent, for his or their own benefit, or for the benefit of any person or persons other than the person or persons entitled to the other share or shares of the same land or rent, such possession or receipt shall not be deemed to have been the possession or receipt of or by such last-mentioned person or persons, or any of them (i).

Sec. 13. When a younger brother or other relation of the person entitled as heir to the possession or receipt of the profits of any land, or to the receipt of any rent, shall enter into the possession or receipt thereof, such possession or receipt shall not be deemed to be the possession or receipt of or by the person entitled as heir (k).

Sec. 14. Provided, that when any acknowledgement of the title of the person entitled to any land or rent, shall have been given to him or his agent in writing, signed by the person in possession or in receipt of the profits of such land, or in receipt of such rent, then such possession or receipt of or by the person by whom such acknowledgement shall have been given, shall be deemed to have been the possession or receipt of or by the person to whom or to whose agent such acknowledgement shall have been given at the time of giving the same, and the right of such last-mentioned person, or any person claiming through him, to make an entry or distress, or bring an action to recover such land or rent, shall be deemed to have first accrued at the time at which such acknowledgement, or the last of such acknowledgements, if more than one, was given.

Sec. 15. When no such acknowledgement as aforesaid shall have been given before the passing of this Act, and the possession or receipt of the profits of the land, or the receipt of the rent, shall not, at the time of the passing of this Act, have been adverse to the right or title of the person claiming to be entitled thereto, then such person, or the person claiming through him, may, notwithstanding the period of twenty years hereinbefore limited shall have expired, make an entry or distress, or bring an action to recover such land or interest, at any time within five years next after the passing of this Act.

(h) See Co. Litt. 250, a. b. n. (1). By the present Act the right of entry will not be tolled by a descent cast.

(i) See tit. EJECTMENT, 400, as to the former law on this subject; see also 429. Whether a writing amounts to an acknowledgement of title within the above clause, is a question for the Judge and not for the jury to decide. A party in possession adversely of land being applied to by the party claiming title to it to pay rent, and offered a lease of it, wrote as follows, "Although, if matters were contested, I am of opinion that I should establish a legal right to the premises, yet, under all circumstances, I have made up my mind to accede to the proposal you made of paying a moderate rent on an agreement for a term of twenty-one years." The bargain subsequently went off, and no rent was paid or lease executed. Held, that this letter was not an acknowledgement of title within the statute. Doe v. Edmonds, 6 M. & W. 295. Lands in 1786 were settled on the wife for life, with remainder to her issue in tail, and in 1818 the estate tail was enlarged into a fee, and a new estate tail carved out, with limitation in tail to the lessor of plaintiff; held, that the latter tenant in tail had the same time for bringing ejectment as the original tenant in tail had when his remainder came into possession, viz. twenty years. Ib.

(k) See Co. Litt. 242, a.

2 Hayw. 336; 1 Murphey, 14. Borrets v. Turner, 1 Taylor, 112. Clinton v. Herring, 1 Murphey, 414. Bayley v. Isby, 2 Nott & M'Cord, 343. White v. Reid, ibid. 534. Williams v. M'Gee, 1 Rep. Con. Ct. 97. Bodley v. Coghill, 3 Marsh, 615. Dale v. Good, 2 Overton's Rep. 394. King v. Travis, 2 Hayw. (Tenn.) Rep. 284. Patton v. Hynes, Cooke's Rep. 356. Pederick v. Searle, 5 Serg. & R. 240. Mace & al. v. Duffield, 2 ib. 527. M'Coy v. Dickinson College, 5 ib. 254. Lessee of Potts v. Gilbert, Circuit Court, 1 Journal of Jurisprudence, 256. Harrington v. Wilkins, 2 M'Cord, 289.] {Lund v. Parker, 3 N. Hamp. Rep. 49. Cummins v. Wyman, 10 Mass. Rep. 464.}

Sec. 16. Persons under disability of infancy, coverture, idiotcy, lunacy,
*655 *unsoundness of mind, or absence, or beyond seas, and their representatives, to be allowed ten years from the termination of their disability or death (l).

But by sec. 17, No action, &c. shall be brought beyond forty years after the right of action accrued (m).

And by sec. 18, No further time is to be allowed for a succession of disabilities (n).

Sec. 20. When the right to an estate in possession is barred, the right of the same person to future estates shall also be barred.

Sec. 21. Where the tenant in tail is barred, the remainder-men, whom he might have barred, shall not recover (o).

Sec. 22. Possession adverse to a tenant in tail shall run on against the remainder-men whom he might have barred.

Sec. 23. Where there shall have been possession under an assurance by a tenant in tail, which shall not bar the remainders, they shall be barred at the end of twenty years after the time when the assurance, if then executed, would have barred them.

Sec. 24. No suit in equity to be brought after the time when the plaintiff, if entitled at law, might have brought an action (p).

Sec. 25. In cases of express trust, the right shall not be deemed to have accrued until a conveyance to a purchaser (q).

Sec. 26. In cases of fraud no time shall run whilst the fraud remains concealed (r).

Sec. 27. Saves the jurisdiction of courts of equity in refusing relief on the ground of acquiescence or otherwise, to a party whose right may not be barred under the Act.

Sec. 28. A mortgagor is to be barred at the end of twenty years from the time when the mortgagee took possession, or from the last written acknowledgement (s).

Sec. 29. No lands or rents to be recovered by ecclesiastical or eleemosynary corporations sole, but within two incumbencies and six years, or sixty years (t).

Sec. 30. No advowson is to be recovered but within three incumbencies, or sixty years.

Sec. 31. Incumbencies after lapse to be reckoned within the period, but not incumbencies after promotions to bishoprics.

Sec. 33. No advowson to be recovered after one hundred years from the time of possession adversely claimed.

(l) Imprisonment is not included, as in the stat. of James, for it does not prevent a party from pursuing legal measures.

(m) This clause gives a title, notwithstanding a succession of disabilities.

(n) It was doubtful before this whether there might not be a succession of disabilities, provided there was no instant of time during which the disability was suspended. 4 T. R. 310; Doe v. Jesson, 6 East, 80.

(o) Cotterell v. Dutton, 4 Taunt. 826; 3 Cru. Dig. 493; and see, as to the effect of these and the two following clauses, Mr. Stalman's Notes to the statute.

(p) This clause places equitable interests on the same footing with legal estates.

(q) By the rule in equity no length of time bars an express trust; but this rule is applicable only as between the trustee and cestui que trust. Beckford v. Rode, 19 Ves. 97. (A)

(r) See Brown v. Howard,[1] 2 B. & B. 73; see also p. 659.

(s) See Swanton v. Raven, 3 Atk. 105; Stockly v. Stockly, 1 Ves. & B. 23.

(t) Previously ecclesiastical persons were not bound by the Statute of Limitations. Co. Litt. 115, a.; 11 Rep. 78, b.; 3 Cr. Dig. 513. As to fines under stat. 4 H. 7, c. 24, see 5 Cr. Dig. 232.

(A) (In cases of implied trusts in relation to personal property or to the rents and profits of real estate, where persons claiming in their own right are turned into trustees by implication, the right of action in equity will be considered as barred in six years in analogy to the limitation of similar actions at law. 4 Cow. 717. See also Lyon v. Marclay, 1 Watts, 375.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 25.

*Sec. 34. At the end of the period of limitation the right of the party out of possession to be extinguished (u).

Sec. 35. The receipt of rent is to be deemed the receipt of profits.

Sec. 36. Real and mixed actions, except of dower, quare impedit, and ejectment, are abolished.

Sec. 39. No descent cast, discontinuance, or warranty, shall toll or defeat a right of entry.

Sec. 40. Money charged upon land and legacies to be deemed satisfied at the end of thirty years, if there shall be no interest paid or acknowledgement in writing in the mean time.

Sec. 41. No arrears of dower shall be recovered for more than six years.

Sec. 42. No arrears of rent or of interest in respect of any sum of money charged upon or payable out of any land or rent, or in respect of any legacy or any damages in respect of such arrears of rent, or interest, shall be recovered by any distress, action or suit, but within six years next after the same respectively shall have become due, or next after an acknowledgement of the same in writing shall have been given to the person entitled thereto, or his agent, signed by the person by whom the same was payable, or his agent; provided, nevertheless, that where any prior mortgagee or other incumbrancer shall have been in possession of any land or in the receipt of the profits thereof, within one year next before an action or suit shall be brought by any person entitled to a subsequent mortgage, or other incumbrance, on the same land, the person entitled to such subsequent mortgage, or incumbrance, may recover in such action or suit the arrears of interest which shall have become due during the whole time that such prior mortgagee or incumbrancer was in such possession or receipt as aforesaid, although such time may have exceeded the said term of six years.

2. By the stat. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 3, actions of debt for rent upon an indenture of demise, actions of covenant or debt upon any bond or other specialty, actions of debt or scire facias upon recognizance, shall be commenced and sued within ten years after the end of that session, or within twenty years after the cause of such actions or suits but not after; all actions for penalties, damages, or sums of money given to the party grieved by any statute then or thereafter to be in force within one year after the end of that session, or within two years after the cause of such actions or suits but not after; actions of debt upon any award when the submission is not by specialty, or for any fine due in respect of any copyhold estate, or for an escape, or for money levied on any fieri facias, within three years after the end of the then present session, or within six years after the cause of such actions or suits, but not after; provided that nothing therein contained shall extend to any action given by any statute, where the time for bringing such action is or shall be by any statute specially limited.

Sec. 4. Provides for the case of an infant, feme coverte, non compos, or person beyond sea, as to whom the limitation begins to run from the time of disability removed.

Sec. 5. Provides, that if any acknowledgement shall have been made, either by writing signed by the party liable by virtue of such indenture, specialty, or recognizance, or his agent, or by part payment or part satisfaction on account of any principal or interest being then due thereon, it shall be lawful for the party entitled to bring his action within twenty years after such *acknowledgement; or in case the person entitled to such action *657 shall, at the time of such acknowledgement, be under such disability, or the party making such acknowledgement be at the time of making the same beyond the seas, then within twenty years after such disability shall have ceased, or the party shall have returned from beyond seas; and the plaintiff in any such action on any indenture, specialty, or recognizance, may, by way of replication, state such acknowledgement, and that such action was brought within the time aforesaid, in answer to a plea of the statute.

(u) See as to the effect of this clause, supra, 651, note (w), and tit. EJECTMENT, 405, (s).

Sec. 6. After reversal of judgment for the plaintiff, or arrest of judgment, or reversal of the defendant's outlawry, the plaintiff or his personal representative, may commence a fresh action within one year, and not after.

Sec. 7. No part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, nor the islands of Man, Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, Sark, nor any islands adjacent to any of them, being part of his Majesty's dominions, shall be deemed to be beyond seas within the Act.

By the stat. 21 J. 1, c. 16, s. 3, the following limitations are prescribed, viz. actions on the case (other than for slander), and actions for account, and actions for trespass, debt, detinue, and replevin for goods or cattle, and an action for trespass, quare clausum fregit, within six years next after the cause of such action or suit, and not after; and actions of trespass, of assault, battery, wounding, imprisonment, or any of them, within four years next after the cause of such actions or suit, and not after; and actions upon the case for words, within two years next after the words spoken, and not after (w).

Proof on issue of actio non accrevit.

On issue taken on the plea of this statute (x), that the cause of action accrued (y) within six years, the burthen of proof lies on the plaintiff, and he must prove a cause of action within the limit (z). After proof of the cause of action itself, he must show the commencement of the action according to the issue taken. Where the issue was on the question whether the cause accrued within six years of the exhibiting of the bill, the memorandum on the record was held to be evidence to show the day when the bill was exhibited (a).

Commencement of the action.

*658 Proof of the cause of action, within, &c. (A).

*Where the bill is entitled generally of the term, it has relation to the first day of the term (b).

Where the declaration had been filed in the vacation, and was intitled

(w) The statute will bar a foreign debt. A bill having been accepted in France by a Scotchman, the acceptor left France, and was absent till his death; but after he had left France, a suit was instituted, and judgment obtained against him in a French court; six years afterwards elapsed before a proceeding instituted in a Scotch court; it was held that the debt was barred, being no longer enforceable in the country according to the law of which it was sought to be enforced. Don v. Lippman, 4 Cl. & F. 1. The plea of the statute was held to bar an action in this country, brought on an instrument of obligation in Scotland, although by the law of that country the cause of action thereon continued for forty years from the execution of it. British Linen Com. v. Drummond,[1] 10 B. & C. 903.

(x) The statute must be pleaded by the defendant (as to a set-off, see tit. SET-OFF). But although the statute be not pleaded, yet if more than six years have elapsed, it may still be left to the jury to presume from lapse of time, under the special circumstances, that the debt has been satisfied. See 2 Starkie's C. 407, and tit. PAYMENT. The statute bars the remedy, not the debt. Higgins v. Scott, 2 B. & A. 413. And therefore, where an attorney for a plaintiff had obtained judgment, and the defendant was afterwards discharged under the Lord's Act, but at a subsequent period a fi. fa. issued against his goods, and the sheriff levied the damages and costs; it was held, that the attorney (though he had taken no step in the cause within six years) had still a lien on the judgment for his bill of costs, and the Court directed the sheriff to pay him the amount out of the proceeds of the goods. Higgins v. Scott,[2] 2 B. & Ad. 413.

(y) A limitation of action for anything done, &c. does not, it seems, apply to an action for money had and received. Umphelby v. Maclean, 1 B. & A. 42.

(z) Hurst v. Parker, 1 B. & A. 92.

(a) And now see the Process Act, tit. HUNDRED.—TIME. Formerly the plea stated the day when the bill was exhibited. 2 Will. Saund. 123, n. 5. (b) 1 T. R. 116. [See Yelv. 21, note (2).]

(A) (The time the cause of action may be said to accrue is that when a party has a right of action against another. Astor V. Girard, 4 Wash. C. C. R. 711. A statute of limitations affects only the remedy and not the validity of the contract. Andrews v. Heriot, 4 Cow. 508. And a plea of the statute of limitations of the state where the contract was made, is no bar to a suit in a foreign tribunal, but such plea of

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxi. 194. [2]Id. xxii. 113.

of the preceding term, it was held to be competent to the defendant to prove that the action was in fact commenced after the expiration of the six years (c).

If the plaintiff, to a plea of the statute, reply a writ (d) sued out within the time, and the defendant, by his rejoinder of nul tiel record, deny the existence of such a writ, the trial is by the Court on inspection of the record (e) (1).

If the plaintiff reply the writ generally, the defendant may in his rejoinder show the time when it really issued, and plead that the cause of action did not accrue within six years from that date. In this case (f), if the plaintiff in his sur-rejoinder allege a cause of action within the six years, and take issue on the fact, the day in the rejoinder will be taken to be the commencement of the action.

If the cause has been removed by habeas corpus from an inferior court, and after a declaration de novo in the superior court, the defendant plead that the cause of action did not accrue within the six years next before the teste of the habeas corpus, the plaintiff may reply the suit below, and show it to have been commenced within time to save the statute (g). So if the plaintiff having commenced a suit within due time die (h), or being a feme sole at the commencement of the action, marry; the representative in the one case, or husband and wife in the other, if they commence a new action within a reasonable time afterwards (and this is usually understood to be a year), may reply the fact to a plea of the statute (2). The proof

(c) Snell v. Phillips, Peake's C. 209. The defendant might show by the writ that it was not sued out till the 20th of November, the memorandum being general of Michaelmas term. Granger v. George,[1] 5 B. & C. 149, supra, note (a).

(d) A special testatum copias, though irregular, is a sufficient commencement to save the statute. Beardmore v. Rattenbury,[2] 5 B. & A. 452. Darwin v. Lincoln, 5 B. & A. 444.

(e) Smith v. Bower, 3 T. R. 662. And regular continuances must be shown on the record. [It is only when the writ and declaration disagree, that it is necessary to enter the continuances, in order to prevent the statute bar. Schlosser v. Lesher, 1 Dallas, 412.] An attachment of privilege is not a continuance of a bill of Middlesex, to save the statute. Ibid. (f) Vide supra, 449.

(g) Matthews v. Phillips, Salk. 424; for although this suit above be no continuance of the suit below, yet the plaintiff has legally pursued his right.

(h) Forbes v. Ld. Middleton, Willes, 259, note E; Salk. 424. [Oothout v. Thompson, 20 Johns. 277.]

the statute of the state where the suit is brought is available. Id.; 3 Johns. Rep. 263; 3 Johns. Chan. Rep. 190, 218. Lincoln v. Battelle, 6 Wend. 475. Ruggler v. Keeler, 3 Johns. Rep. 270. Nash v. Tapper, 1 Caine's, 402.)

(1) [Where a plaintiff, by issuing a writ, has saved the statute bar, and the writ has not actually abated, it is not necessary, in Pennsylvania, that the action should be prosecuted within one year after the limited time has elapsed. Schlosser v. Lesher, 1 Dallas, 411. See Brown's Ex'rs v. Putney, 1 Wash. 302. It is not a sufficient replication to a plea of the statute, that the plaintiff commenced a previous action within the period allowed by the statute, and, after the expiration of the period, was nonsuited by order of the court. Harris v. Dennis, 1 Serg. & Rawle, 236. S. P. Montgomery v. Caldwell, 4 Bibb, 305. Peyton v. Carr, 1 Randolph, 436. Contra, Shillington v. Allison, 2 Hawks, 347. Lynch v. Withers, 2 Bay, 118. The statute is a bar to an action brought within a year after a former action had been struck off. Cawood v. Whetcroft, 1 Har. & J. 103. Hallis v. Waddy, 2 Munf. 511. S. P. Unless a second writ appears from the record to be an alias, it cannot, in Kentucky, be connected with a former writ, so as to avoid the statute. Hume v. Dickinson, 4 Bibb, 276. See Jackson v. Horton, 3 Caines' Rep. 127. Where an action is brought in due time after the reversal of a judgment for the same cause of action, it is saved out of the statute 21 Jac. 1, c. 16. Drane v. Hedges, 1 Har. & M'Hen. 518. So where judgment is arrested. Schnertzell v. Chapline, 3 ib. 439. The time within which the new action must be commenced, is to be computed from the day on which judgment was reversed, and not from the end of the term of the court. Edwards v. Davis, 4 Bibb, 211.]

(2) [In Maryland, the statute is no bar where the suit is brought in time, which abated by the defendant's death, there being no letters testamentary taken out—nor is it barred until the expiration of three years, if a suit is brought without delay against the executor. Parker v. Fassit, 1 Har. & J. 339. See also M'Lel'an v. Hill, Cam. & Nor. 479. Jones v. Brodie, 2 Murphey, 594. A replication to the plea of the statute, that the suit was instituted within one year after the death of the intestate, and that five years after the action accrued had not expired at the time of the intestate's death, is not, in Kentucky, a sufficient answer to the plea. Langford v. Gentry, 4 Bibb, 468. A writ, taken out against one of several administrators, will not prevent the statute from running against the debt. Hopkins v. M'Pherson's Adm'r, 2 Bay, 194.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xi. 185. [2]Id. vii. 137.

will be either by inspection of the record by the Court, or by evidence of the cause of action within the time limited, according to the nature of the rejoinder, which may either deny the existence of such a record, or deny that the cause of action arose within the time.

In the case of trespass quare clausum fregit, and, as it seems, in other actions of tort, it is not sufficient to prove an acknowledgement of the trespass or tort, and a promise to make compensation within the limit (i). It has even been held, where there was no distinct evidence as to the time of committing the trespass, and it was doubtful whether it had been committed within six years, that such an acknowledgement by the defendant, and a promise to make compensation, was not evidence to go to a jury of a trespass within the six years (k). Although fraud will take a case out of *659 the *statute, yet the statute will be a bar, if six years elapse after the discovery of the fraud (l) (1).

In an action against an attorney for negligence, it has been held that the statute runs from the time of the negligence, and not from the time when special damage accrued in consequence of such negligence (m) (A) (2).

(i) Salk. 424. Hurst v. Parker, 1 B. & A. 92.

(k) Ibid. Note, there was no acknowledgement of a trespass committed within six years of the commencement of the suit, for even although the acknowledgement might prove a cause of action then existing, it does not follow that it existed at a subsequent time.

(l) Per King, Ld. C. in The South Sea Company v. Wymondsell, 3 P. Wms. 143. Bree v. Holbech, Doug. 630. A law agent was held to be responsible for negligence after a lapse of twenty-five years, and acquiescence in the loss and settlement of account and discharge by the client's representative; it appearing that the defendant had concealed the real state of the transaction, and had not communicated the insolvent state of the parties with whom he dealt. Macdonald v. Macdonald, 1 Bligh, 315. It is the policy of the statute to prevent the discussion of title where evidence has perished: even in cases where it is not too late to bring ejectment, courts of equity have refused to interfere because evidence has been lost; in a suit by an heir to set aside a deed as fraudulent, it was held that the cause of action arose at the moment when the deed was executed, or as soon after as the parties interested were apprised of the facts. Whalley v. Whalley, 3 Bligh. 12.

(m) The declaration stated the retainer of the defendant, an attorney, to ascertain whether certain mortgages, and a warrant of attorney, were a valid and sufficient security for a loan, and alleged his misrepresentation and misconduct in the premises, and that the securities afterwards turned out wholly insufficient; to which the Statute of Limitations was pleaded; it appeared that the loan was made, and securities were given in 1814, and the interest regularly paid until 1820; it was held that the allegation of special damage did not alter the gist of the action, which was the misconduct of the defendant, which having taken place more than six years since, although the discovery was only recent, the plea was a good bar. Howell v. Young,[1] 5 B. & Cr. 259; and 8 D. & Ry. 14. And see Bree v. Holbeck, Doug. 630. Fetter v. Beal, 1 Salk. 11. And Brown v. Howard,[2] 2 B. & B. 73. But see Compton v. Chandless, one, &c. 4 Esp. C. 18. See Hickman v. Walker, Willes, 27. Littleboy v. Wright, 1 Lev. 69. Peake v. Ambler, W. Jones, 329. 15 Vin. Ab. tit. Limitation.

(A) (It seems that actions on the case, though not within the terms of the proviso Act of Limitations, are within its equity, and that it should be so construed as to embrace actions on the case. Bank of the United States v. M'Kenzie, 2 Brockenb. C. C. R. 393.)

(1) [A plea of the statute may be avoided by replying that the cause of action had been fraudulently concealed by the defendant, until within the time limited by the statute before action brought. First Massachusetts Turnpike Co. v. Field & al. 3 Mass. Rep. 201. So in an action for fraud, by replying ignorance of the fraud until within the same time. Homer v. Fish & al. 1 Pick. 435. S. P. Jones v. Conoway & al. 4 Yeates, 109. See also Croft v. Arthur, 3 Desauss. 223. Harrell v. Kelly, 2 M'Cord, 426. But unless there be fraudulent concealment, the statute is a bar. Bishop v. Little, 3 Greenl. Rep. 405.

This doctrine is denied in New York, North Carolina, and Virginia, where the remedy in cases of fraud, &c. is confined to the court of chancery. Troup v. Ex'rs of Smith, 20 Johns. 33. Oothout v. Thompson, ibid. 278, Hamilton v. Sheppard, 2 Murphey, 115. Thompson v. Blair, ibid. 583. Callis v. Waddy, 2 Munf. 511.

See on this subject, Sel. Cas. in Chan. 34. 3 Atk. 538. 1 Bro. P. C. 445. 2 Scho. & Lef. 634.]

(2) [In an action against an officer for an insufficient return upon an original writ, by reason of which the judgment rendered in the suit is reversed, the statute begins to run from the time of such return, and not from the time of the reversal of the judgment. Miller v. Adams, 16 Mass. Rep. 456. But in an action for taking insufficient bail, the statute begins to run from the return of non est inventus upon the execution against the principal. Mather v. Green, 17 Mass. Rep. 60. Where the letters of guardianship of a spendthrift were revoked, and the spendthrift and his heirs avoided sales of real estate, the license having been granted without

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xi. 219. [2]Id. vi. 25.

So on an implied promise to indemnify, the statute runs from the damnification (n).

In an action for words actionable in themselves, the statute runs from the time of the speaking, although they have occasioned special damage (o), and the action must be brought within two years. Where special damage is the gist of the action, the statute runs from the time of the special damage only; and the limitation is six years (p).

In an action for the consideration money for an annuity avoided by the grantor, the limitation runs from the time when the grantor made his election (q).

Where the limitation is as to anything done under the Act, if the action be trespass, it must be brought within the limit from the act of trespass; but if the action be case for consequential damage, the time runs from the time of the damage (r).

(n) Huntley v. Sanderson, 3 Tyr. 469.

(o) According to the stat. 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 3. 6 Bac. Ab. 241. Cro. Car. 193. Salk. 206. 1 Sid. 95.

(p) Ibid. An action for scan. mag. may be brought within six years. Cro. Car. 535.

(q) Cowper v. Godmond,[1] 9 Bing. 748. The statute does not run till the action is maintainable. Ib.

(r) Roberts v. Read, 16 East, 215. And see Sutton v. Clarke,[2] 6 Taunt. 29. An illegal seizure was made by a Canal Company for rates, and a sale was afterwards made of coal, &c. in respect of the lessee of the colliery; the limitation runs from the time of seizure; but in respect of a mortgagee out of possession, and his administrator, from the sale. Fraser v. Swansea Nav. Comp.[3] 1 Ad. & Ell. 354. Where trespass is barred by limitation, ejectment is still maintainable. Per Parke, J., Trotter v. Simpson,[4] 5 C. & P. 60. In Gillon v. Boddington, 1 Ry. & M. C. 161, the defendants had undermined a wall of a wharf, so that on any great tide the water washed away some of the materials of the wall, more than six months (the period of limitation fixed by a Docket Act) before the action, but the wall fell within the six months; the action was held to be maintainable, although the wall was undermined in the lifetime of the plaintiff's father, and where the plaintiff had only an interest in remainder. Note, that the declaration alleged the plaintiff to be seized in fee of a third part, &c. whilst the wall was kept and continued, and suffered and permitt d to be, remain and continue undermined. From the language of the Court in the case of Umphelby v. Maclean, 1 B. & A. 42, it should seem that where the limitation is as to anything done, there must, according to the expression of Lord Ellenborough, be a positive act done. See also Gaby v. Wilts & Berks Canal Com. 3 M. & S. 580. And see Blakeman v. Glamorgan Canal Com. 3 Y. & J. 60; where it seems to have been doubted whether a matter of complaint arising from omission and nonfeasance would be within the protection of the restrictive clause. In that case the Act contained a limiting clause as to anything done within six calendar months before action brought, unless there was a continuation; and it was held, that the latter words meant an uninterrupted unintermitting damage, and did not apply to a damage which had ceased previous to the period of limitation. In Smith v. Shaw,[5] 10 B. & C. 277, Bayley, J. observed that it was not necessary to go to the length of Sellick v. Smith,[6] 2 C. & P. 284, nor to say whether a mere nonfeasance would be an act done within the meaning of such words; a point much doubted in the case of Blakemore v. Glamorganshire Canal Com. In Smith v. Shaw, above cited, the giving of directions by a dock-master as to the transporting a vessel into dock, was held to be a thing done. In Sellick v. Smith, it was held (at nisi prius, and afterwards by the Court of Common Pleas,) that a refusal by a Dock Company to deliver up wines, was within the terms of a similar clause. In an action by a reversioner against a surveyor of the highways, for building a wall on the plaintiff's close, and separating a portion which was thrown into the road, the digging of the soil and erecting the wall had been done more than three months before the action brought, but the wall had been subsequently, and within that period, raised higher; it was held that the action was too late. Wadsworth v. Harley,[7] 1 B. & Ad. 391. Where the wall had been commenced more than three months before the action brought, but not completed until within that period, held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover for any part of the trespass within this time; or if there had been any encroachment, might bring ejectment. Trotter v. Simpson,[8] 5 C. & P. 51. Action against commissioners under a local Act requiring the action to be brought within six months after the matter or thing done, the grievance alleged was an injury to the plaintiff's house in digging a sewer, whereby the foundation sank and the walls were cracked, and the plaintiff was disturbed in the enjoyment and customers prevented from having access to the house; held that the action not being brought within six months after the digging the sewer which occasioned the crack in the wall, the action could not be sup-

---

any authority, and thereupon the guardians were compelled upon their covenants to refund the money paid by the purchasers, it was held, that the guardians had a right of action against the spendthrift's administratrix for the amount refunded, as for so much paid by them for him upon a consideration which had failed; that this right did not accrue until the sales were avoided, and the money refunded, so that the statute of limitations began to run from that time, and not from the time of settling their guardianship accounts. Shearman v. Akins, 4 Pick. 283.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxii. 452. [2] Id. i. 298. [3] Id. xxviii. 105. [4] Id. xxiv. 207. [5] Id. xxi. 75. [6] Id. xiii. 66. [7] Id. xx. 406. [8] Id. xxiv. 207.

*Such a limitation does not, it seems, extend to an action for money had and received (s).

In trover the statute runs from the conversion, though it were not known to the plaintiff, provided no means have been used to conceal it (t). The plaintiff's want of knowledge makes no difference (u).

In an action of assumpsit the statute runs from the time of the breach of promise (x). On a promise to indemnify, from the time of damnification (y).

Non assumpsit, &c.

Where the cause of action and promise are contemporary, as in cases of indebitatus assumpsit*, the plea of non assumpsit infra sex annos is proper; but where the cause of action arises subsequently to the promise, as in cases of executory contracts, the plea of non accrevit infra sex annos is the proper plea; for although the promise was not made within the limit, the cause of action accrued within the time, which is sufficient to save the statute (z).

*661

Where goods are sold on an agreement for a fixed credit, the statute runs from the expiration of the time of credit (a).

Where money lent is the consideration for a bill of exchange, payable on a future day, or for a promise of repayment at a future day, the latter is the day from which the limitation is to be reckoned (b). And where a note is payable at a specified time after sight, the statute does not begin to operate till that time has expired after presentment of the note (c) (1).

Where a note is payable on demand, the statute runs from the date (d).

ported; the continuance of the crack was not a continuing damage nor repetition of the injury. And that the notice of action and declaration not alleging the keeping up the shores as a distinct ground of injury, the action could not be sustained in that respect although continued up to within the time limited for the action. Lloyd v. Wigney,[1] 6 Bing. 489.

(s) Umphilby v. Maclean, 1 B. & A. 47.

(t) Granger v. George,[2] 5 B. & C. 149. The defendant had delivered up, on the 10th November 1808, to the plaintiff's assignees, the box of papers, &c. for which the action was brought; held, that not having had them in his possession within that period, there could have been no conversion, and that the plea of the Statute of Limitations was a bar, and that the want of knowledge in the plaintiff made no difference. It appearing also that the plaintiff's writ was returnable on the 29th November, although filed generally as of Michaelmas term; held, that the Court was bound to consider the bill as exhibited on that day.

(u) 1b. and Short v. Macarthy,[3] 3 B. & A. 626. Brown v. Howard,[4] 2 B. & B. 73.

(x) Brown v. Howard,[4] 2 B. & B. 73. Short v. Macarthy,[3] 3 B. & A. 626. Battley v. Falkner,[5] 3 B. & A. 288. Wheatly v. Williams, 1 M. & W. 533. Wittersheim v. Countess of Carlisle, 1 H. B. 631. Howell v. Young,[6] 5 B. & C. 259, supra.

(y) Huntley v. Sanderson, 1 C. & M. 467.

(z) See 1 Saund. 33, n. 2.; 283, n. 2. 2 Saund. 63, c. n. 6. Gould v. Johnson, 2 Lord Ray. 838. Salk. 422. Buckler v. Moor, 1 Vent. 191. [Banks v. Coyle, 2 Marsh, Ken. R. 562.] Debt for goods sold and delivered, plea actio non accrevit infra sex annos; evidence of goods delivered beyond the six years, but of an acknowledgement within the six years. Bayley, J. held that this did not take the case out of the statute, but that the plaintiff was entitled to recover on the count on an account stated. York Sp. Ass. 1827.

(a) Goods were sold at six months' credit, payment to be then made by a bill at two or three months, at the purchaser's option. Held, Parke, J. dubitante, that this was in effect a nine months' credit, and consequently that an action for goods sold and delivered, commenced within six years from the end of the nine months, was in time to save the Statute of Limitations. Helps & another v. Winterbottom,[7] 2 B. & Ad. 431.

(b) Wintersheim v. Countess of Carlisle, 1 H. B. 631; which was an action by the payee against the drawer of a bill of exchange, to secure a sum lent by the payee to the drawer; and it was held that the statute began to operate, not from the loan, but from the time when the bill became due. And see Lord Holt's dictum, 3 Bac. Ab. 602.

(c) Holmes v. Kerrison, 2 Taunt. 323. Savage v. Aldren,[8] 2 Starkie's C. 312.

(d) Norton v. Ellams, 2 M. & W. 461. Christie v. Fonsick, Sel. N. P. 121. But see Sel. N. P. 344, 7th edit.

(1) [Nor against a parol guarantee of the sufficiency of a mortgage, given to secure a bond payable by instalments, until six years after the last instalment has become due. Overton v. Tracy, 14 Serg. & R. 311.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 145. [2]Id. xi. 185. [3]Id. v. 403. [4]Id. vi. 25. [5]Id. v. 288. [6]Id. xi. 219. [7]Id. xxii. 116. [8]Id. iii. 329.

Where a note is payable at so many months after demand, the statute runs from the demand and not from the date (e) (A).

Where the cause of action does not arise until request made, the statute runs from the time of the request (f).

A factor impliedly contracts to account for such goods consigned to him for sale as he has sold, to pay over the proceeds, and to deliver the residue unsold on demand. An action for not accounting does not lie until a demand be made, and from that time the statute runs (g). But in such cases, after a reasonable time has elapsed, the jury may presume that the consignor has made a demand, and that the factor has accounted (h).

Where a special damage has resulted from a breach of contract, the limitation is to be computed from the time (i) of the breach of contract, and not of the special damage.

*On an agreement to indemnify the plaintiff against a distress, and all costs of action by replevying, the statute runs from the time of payment, not from the time of the delivery of the bill of costs (k). *662

Where six years had elapsed since the committing of a trespass by cutting down trees, it was held that an action could not be maintained for the produce of the sale of the trees within the six years (l).

Where the defendant had once been tenant to the plaintiff, and no notice to quit had been given, but the defendant had not occupied, paid rent, or done any act within the last six years from which a tenancy could be inferred, it was held that the Statute of Limitations was a good defence (m).

A debt is barred by the statute, although a warrant of attorney be given as a collateral security (n).

Upon issue taken upon the replication of a promise within six years, the (e) Thorpe v. Booth,[1] 1 Ry. & M. C. 388. Thorpe v. Coombe,[2] 8 D. & Ry. 347. Per Ld. Hardwicke, 1 Ves. 344. Christie v. Fonsick, Sel. N. P. 137, 344, 7th ed.; see Harris v. Ferrand, Hardr. 36. Buckler v. Moor, 1 Mod. 89. 15 Vin. Ab. tit. Limitations, pl. 14. A bill payable to one who dies intestate, being accepted after his death, the statute runs from the date of the letters of administration; for till then there is no cause of action in any one. Murray v. East India Co.[3] 5 B & A. 204. Pratt v. Swaine,[4] 8 B. & C. 285. See Stamford's Case, Cro. J. 81; Cary v. Stephenson, Salk. 421; and a special replication is unnecessary. [5]5 B. & A. 204. To a declaration on a debt to the bankrupt, and promise to his assignee, a plea that the action did not accrue to the bankrupt within six years, held bad, for it excludes the plaintiff from proof of a promise to himself. Skinner v. Rebow, Str. 919.

(f) Gould v. Johnson, 2 Salk. 422. (g) Topham v. Braddick, 1 Taunt. 572.

(h) Ibid.; and fourteen years was held to be a reasonable time.

(i) Battley v. Faulkner,[6] 3 B. & A. 290, where the damage was, the being obliged by a suit in Scotland to pay damages to a vendee on the resale to him of goods originally sold by the defendant to the plaintiff. So in Short v. M'Carthy,[7] 3 B. & A. 626. {And Howell v. Young,[8] 2 Carr. & Payne, 238.} But a plea to an action for deceitfully delivering goods to the plaintiff, as the proper goods of the defendants, by means of which they were subsequently damnified, that the defendants were not guilty within six years, was held to be bad on special demurrer. Dyster v. Battye,[9] 3 B. & A. 448. And see Ld. Ellenborough's observations in M'Fadzen v. Olivant, 6 East, 387.

(k) Collinge v. Heywood, 10 Ad. & Ell. 633; 1 P. & D. 502.

(l) Hughes v. Thomas, 13 East, 474. The case was decided on the ground, that if a tenant for life levy a fine, and thus acquire a base fee, and cut down timber before the entry of the reversioner and owner of the inheritance, to avoid the fine and base fee, the reversioner cannot recover the value, the entry having no relation during the continuance of the base fee. And see Berrington v. Parkhurst, 13 East, 489; and Doe d. Compere v. Hicks, 7 T. R. 433.

(m) Leigh & Wife v. Thornton, 1 B. & A. 625. (n) Clarke v. Figes,[10] 2 Starkie's C. 234.

(A) (The statute begins to run against a note payable on demand from the day of its date; but not so as to a note payable at a given day after demand; in the latter case it commences running only from the time of the demand. Wiseman v. The Mohawk Ins. Co. 13 Wend. 267. So where an action will not lie without a previous demand. Little v. Blunt, 9 Pick. 488. See also, Larason v. Lambert, 7 Halsted, 247. And there is no difference between a note payable "when demanded" and one payable on demand; in both cases the statute of limitations begins to run from the date of the note. Kingsbury v. Butler, 4 Vermont R. 458.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxi. 468. [2]Id. xvi. 344. [3]Id. vii. 66. [4]Id. xv. 219. [5]Id. vi. 66. [6]Id. v. 288. [7]Id. v. 304. [8]Id. xii. 107. [9]Id. v. 344. [10]Id. iii. 330.

Replication of a promise within six years.

plaintiff may give in evidence, not only an express promise within six years (o), to pay the debt, but even an acknowledgement that the debt still subsists, for the admission is evidence of a new promise to pay the debt (p); or the law implies an assumpsit, or creates a new debt (q); or the acknowledgement rebuts the presumption raised by the statute, that the debt has been paid (r). But great mischief and inconvenience have resulted from permitting the salutary provisions of the statute to be defeated by mere oral acknowledgements; a practice by which the statute itself was nearly in effect defeated, and probably more encouragement was given to vexatious litigation and perjury than if it had been altogether repealed (s). These

(o) A promise made after the action brought, is, it seems, sufficient. Yea v. Foursaker, 2 Burr. 1099; secus, in the case of an infant, Thornton v. Illingworth, K. B. sitt. in Banc. after Easter T. 1824. Or in any case where the promise creates an entirely new debt. Per Bayley, J., Holt v. Brien,[1] 4 B. & A. 252.

(p) So considered in Hyeling v. Hastings, Ld. Raym. 422. And by Ld. Ellenborough, in Hurst v. Parker, 1 B. & A. 93, and P. C. in Ward v. Hunter,[2] 6 Taunt. 210; and Pittam v. Foster,[3] 1 B. & C. 248. And see Boydell v. Drummond, 2 Camp. 162. Gibbons v. M'Casland, 1 B. & A. 690. The law, where there is a sufficient consideration, presumes a promise in fact, but the plaintiff may rely on any promise actually made, though long after the executed consideration; and a mere admission is evidence of such a promise on the account stated. See 2 H. B. 563; and Tanner v. Smart,[4] 6 B. & C. 603.

(q) See the observations of Ld. Ellenborough in Bryan v. Horseman, 4 East, 599. It is not necessary that the acknowledgement should be made to the plaintiff. Halliday v. Ward, 3 Camp. 32. Mountstephen v. Brooke,[5] 3 B. & A. 141. Peters v. Brown, 4 Esp. C. 46.

(r) The Statute of Limitations (it has been said) proceeds on a presumption that where a debt is really due, a party is not likely to suffer six years to elapse without procuring an acknowledgement of it. Rowcroft v. Lomas, 4 M. & S. 457. See the observations of Bayley, J. Ibid. 461; and of Lord Ellenborough, in Thompson v. Osborne,[6] 2 Starkie's C. 98. But now see Tanner v. Smart, infra, 667.

(s) It is impossible to read the conflicting cases upon this subject without regretting that the Courts have ever departed from the plain letter of this wholesome statute. [Cowan v. Magauran, Wall. Rep. 66.] {Lord v. Shaler, 3 Conn. R. 131.} The following acknowledgements have been held to be sufficient: "I do not consider myself as owing Mr. B. a farthing, it being more than six years since I contracted; I have had the wheat, I acknowledge, and I have paid some part of it, and 26*l.* still remains due." There the Court thought themselves bound by the long train of previous decisions to hold that the acknowledgement was sufficient. Bryan v. Horseman, 4 East, 599, and see Rucker v. Hannay, Ibid. 604. Coltman v. Marsh, 3 Taunt. 380. Leaper v. Tatton, 16 East, 420. Clarke v. Bradshaw, 3 Esp. C. 157; but see Bicknell v. Keppell, 1 N. R. 20, infra. So where the defendant said, "Prove your debt, and I will pay you." [Seaward v. Lord, 1 Greenleaf, 163.] Or, "I am ready to account; but nothing is due;" and even slighter acknowledgements than these have been held to be sufficient to take the case out of the statute. Per Ld. Mansfield, C. J. in Trueman v. Fenton, Cowp. 544.—So where the defendant meeting the plaintiff, said, "What an extravagant bill you have sent me," per Ld. Kenyon, Lawrence v. Worrall, Peake's C. 93, it was held to be an acknowledgement that some money was due. So where the debtor referred his creditor to his trustee (Baillie v. Lord Inchiquin, 1 Esp. C. 435). So where in an action on a promissory note, and no other debt appearing, the defendant wrote as follows, "Business calls me to L.; should I be fortunate in my adventures you may depend on seeing me in B. in less than three weeks; otherwise, I must arrange matters with you as circumstances will permit." Frost v. Bengough,[7] 1 Bing. 266; and see Colledge v. Horne,[8] 3 Bing. 119. So where a surety on a promissory note, on a demand within six years, said, "You knew I had not any of the money myself, but I am willing to pay half of it," (B. N. P. 149; 2 Burr. 1099); there the acknowledgement was made after the commencement of the action. So, although in making the admission, the defendant denied his liability in point of law. As where being sued as acceptor of a bill of exchange, he acknowledged his acceptance, and that he had been liable, but denied his liability then, because it was out of date, it was held to be sufficient to take the case out of the statute. (Leaper v. Tatton, 16 East, 420.) So where the defendant said that the plaintiff had paid money for him twelve years ago, but that he had since become a bankrupt, and been discharged, as well by law as from the length of time since the debt accrued, Ld. Kenyon is said to have held, that it was sufficient to take the case out of the statute. Clarke v. Bradshaw, 3 Esp. C. 155; qu. tam. & vid. Owen v. Woolley, B. N. P. 148. So where the defendant said, "If others pay, I will pay." (Loweth v. Fothergill, 4 Camp. 184.) So where the defendant, on a demand being made for seamen's wages, for services which took place during a Russian embargo, said, "I will not pay, there are none paid; and I do not mean to pay unless obliged; you may go and try;" for there was proof of the service, and an acknowledgement by the defendant that it had not been paid for. (Dowthwaite v. Tibbut, 5 M. & S. 75). So where the defendant said, "If you had presented the protest it would have been paid," no protest being necessary. De la Torre v. Barclay,[9] 1 Starkie's C. 7.—In ordinary cases an acknowledgement by the wife will not be evidence against the husband. In an action against A. and his wife, on a note made by the wife and C. before her marriage, it was held that the acknowledgement of the wife after marriage was not sufficient to take the case out of the statute. Pittam v. Foster,[10] 1 B. & C. 248.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 418. [2] Id. i. 359. [3] Id. viii. 67. [4] Id. xiii. 373. [5] Id. v. 245. [6] Id. iii. 264. [7] Id. viii. 316. [8] Id. xi. 59. [9] Id. ii. 270. [10] Id. viii. 67.

*evils have been in a great measure corrected by two measures, the one legislative, the other judicial.

But an acknowledgement by a wife will be sufficient (1), if she has been entrusted with the management of the business out of which the debt arises. (Palethorp v. Furnish, 2 Esp. C. 511, n. cor. Lord Mansfield, 2 Freem. 178; Anderson v. Sanderson,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 204, cor. Richards, C. B., York, 1817. Supra, tit. Admissions.) So in general as to an acknowledgement by an agent (Burt v. Palmer, 5 Esp. C. 145. Supra, tit. Agent.) So a conditional promise to pay by instalments, if time should be given, has been held to take the case out of the statute (Thompson v. Osborne,[2] 2 Starkie's C. 98); but in the previous case of Davis v. Smith, 4 Esp. C. 36, it was held by Lord Kenyon that it was not enough to prove a promise to pay when the party should be able, without proving that he was able at the time of the action. [S. P. Robbins v. Otis, 1 Pick. 368. Rend v. Wilkinson, Circuit Court, 2 Browne's Rep. App. 16.] And it is otherwise where the defendant, admitting the receipt of the money, denies the debt in fact; as where the defendent, acknowledging the receipt of money, claims it as a gift (Owen v. Woolley, B. N. P. 148). So if the defendant, insisting on the statute, deny the debt, as where he said, "I owe you not a farthing, it is six years since," this is not evidence to be left to a jury (Coltman v. Marsh, 3 Taunt. 380). See also Hellings v. Shaw, 1 Moore, 340; where the plaintiff, in an action on a promissory note, proved that within the six years he showed the note to the defendant, who said, "You owe me more money; I have a set-off against it;" no set-off having been pleaded, it was held by Bayley and Holroyd, Justices, Best, J. dissentiente, that this was not a sufficient acknowledgement to take the case out of the statute (Swan v. Sewell, 2 B. & A. 759). [See White v. Potter, Coon. R. 157.] [Bangs v. Heall, 2 Pick. R. 368.] Where the defendant said, "I have paid the debt, and will send a copy of the receipt," his omission to do so was held to be sufficient to go to a jury; Holt's C. 381,[3] per Gibbs, C. J. But see Birk v. Guy, 4 Esp. C. 184, where the defendant said, "I have paid the debt and will send a copy of the receipt;" and Lord Ellenborough held that it was not sufficient. So where the defendant stated, "I shall be able to satisfy him (the plaintiff) respecting the misunderstanding which has occurred between us," (Craig v. Cox, Holt's C. 380.[3] See also Ward v. Hunter, 6 Taunt. 210). But where the acknowledgement was, that he would satisfy the plaintiff, for he could show his receipt, it was held that he was bound to produce it; and that in case he did not, there was at all events sufficient evidence to go to a jury. Anon. Holt's C. 381. Where the defendant, at the time when he admits the debt, insists that it has been discharged by a written instrument, the whole declaration must be taken together (Partington v. Butcher, 6 Esp. C. 66. Mansfield, C. J. 1806); and Earl of Montague v. Lord Preston, 2 Vent. 170; and Bermon v. Woodbridge, Doug. 751. But it was held that if it appeared that the instrument referred to did not amount to a discharge, it was a sufficient acknowledgement. (Ib.) Where an accountable receipt for the payment of money was shown to the defendant, the latter admitted his signature, but added, that he never would pay it; that it was out of date, and that no law should make him pay it; it was held to be insufficient to charge the defendant, since there was no acknowledgement, but the contrary, that the debt ever existed. Rowcroft v. Lomas, 4 M. & S. 457 (1). The defendant alleged that the

(1) [In Clementson v. Williams, 8 Cranch, 72, Marshall, C. J. says, it is not sufficient to take a case out of the statute, that the claim should be proved, or acknowledged to have been originally just; the acknowledgement must go to the fact that it is still due. Hence in that case, where the statute was pleaded to an action against two partners, evidence that the account was presented to one of them, who stated that it was due, and that he supposed it had been paid by the other partner, but that he had not paid it himself, and did not know of its being paid, was held insufficient to take the case out of the statute. {And the rule has been since confirmed in the case of Wetzell v. Buzzard, 11 Wheat. Rep. 309, and recognized in a very elaborate opinion, by the Supreme Court of Massachusetts, Bangs v. Hall, 2 Pick. 368.}

In Brown v. Campbell, 1 Serg. & R. 176, Tilghman, C. J. says, "I can never agree that a letter, which denies that the defendant was ever liable to the plaintiff's demand, will avoid the act of limitations, merely because it is not denied that payment has not been made"—and a letter from the defendant, denying responsibility, but referring to a third person whom he represented as liable, and offering to assist the plaintiff with evidence, was held not to amount to an acknowledgement from which the jury might infer a promise.

In Fries v. Boisselet, 9 Serg. & R. 128, where the defendant, on being arrested on a note, said he owed the plaintiff the money and intended to have paid him, but that as he had taken ungentlemanly steps to get it, he would keep him out of it as long as he could; was held that this was not sufficient to take the case out of the statute. The defendant's words altogether were held to amount to this—that he would not pay until compelled by law—which was wholly inconsistent with a promise to pay. In the same case is cited, with approbation by the Court, Murray v. Titly, tried before Tilghman, C. J. at Nisi Prius 1811, where the defendant, after the lapse of six years, on payment of a note being demanded of him, answered "that if the note had been presented to him in time, he would have paid it, but that he knew the statute of limitations would now bar the claim, and he would not pay it"—and the Chief Justice charged the jury that it was contrary to common sense to call this a promise to pay; and they found a verdict for the defendant. {And see Bailey v. Bailey, 14 Serg. & R. 195, and the cases there cited.}

In Sands v. Gelston, 12 Johns. 511; Danforth v. Culver, 11 Johns. 146; Lawrence v. Hopkins, 13 Johns. 288; Guier v. Pearce, 2 Browne's Rep. 35; and Stanton v. Stanton, 2 N. Hamp. Rep. 426, it was held that if the acknowledgement is qualified in a way to repel the presumption of a promise to pay, it is not evidence sufficient to revive the debt, and take it out of the statute. The same doctrine is asserted by Yeates, [1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 314. [2]Id. iii. 264. [3]Id. iii. 134.

*By the former, a mere oral acknowledgement is sufficient to revive a plaintiff's bill had been paid to Long, a deceased partner of the plaintiff, by the latter retaining the amount out of a floating balance which had been in his hands; and evidence was adduced by the plaintiff to falsify this, by showing the state of the accounts between the defendant and Long. After a verdict for the defendant, the Court held, that even admitting, as laid down by Gibbs, C. J. in Hellings v. Shaw,[1] 7 Taunt. 612, that where a defendant, alleging payment, designates the time and mode so strictly that the Court can say it is impossible that it should have been discharged in any other mode, then the plaintiff is at liberty to disprove that mode, yet that the principal case did not fall within the rule, as the time and mode were not designated strictly, and the evidence was not sufficient to negative that time and mode. Beale v. Nind,[2] 4 B. & A. 568.—In the case of Hellings v. Shaw,[1] 7 Taunt. 608, the defendant, to a demand made for the charges of executing an annuity deed, answered, "I thought I had paid it at the time, but I have been in so much trouble since, that I really don't recollect it;" evidence was adduced to show that the debt had not been paid at the time; but the Court held that the acknowledgement was insufficient, as it did not sufficiently put in issue whether the debt had been paid at the particular time. Gibbs, C. J. in that case, in addition to the case already cited, mentioned others, in which the Courts have held a defendant liable who was discharged by the words of the statute, viz. where he has admitted that the debt is unpaid, but alleges that it has been discharged by lapse of time; a third, where the defendant challenges the plaintiff to produce a particular proof of his liability, which the plaintiff does.

A. having by means of misrepresentation obtained money from B. and others, to which he was not entitled, on application by B. to have the money returned, saying that he and the other tenants had been induced to pay more than was due, replies, if there be any mistake it shall be rectified; this takes the case out of the statute as to all. Clarke v. Hougham,[3] 2 B. & C. 149. The defendant, upon being applied to for the debt, replied that he had a receipt in full, which he would search for; held, that whether true or false, it was clear he did not intend to pay, and therefore that no promise to pay could be inferred. Brydges v. Plumptree,[4] 9 D. & Ry. 746. The defendant being applied to for some money on account, said he had not got any; upon a second application, the amount was mentioned, but he made no answer; upon being requested to help the plaintiff to 5*l.*, he said he was going to H. in the course of the week, and that he would help him to 5*l.* if he could; held, that even if it were to be taken to amount to a promise or acknowledgement, it was merely a conditional one, and it was therefore incumbent on the plaintiff to show that the defendant was able to pay that sum. Gould v. Shirley,[5] 2 Moore & P. 581. Where a letter, relied on to take the case out of the statute, imported no more than offers on the part of the defendant to surrender his property, with a view to an arrangement with his creditors, provided he were allowed time to arrange his affairs; held, that they amounted to no more than a kind of conditional offer to pay, and not a general and unqualified acknowledgement, from which a promise to pay was to be implied, and not sufficient to take the case out of the operation of the statute. Fearn v. Lewis, 6 Bing. 359. A letter of the defendant, stating it to be "without prejudice of his rights, or as to any future right," is only a conditional statement, and cannot be read for the purpose of taking the demand out of the statute. Cory v. Bretton,[6] 4 C. & P. 462. But where the defendant, after bankruptcy, by letter acknowledged an application for the debt, and added, that in a few days he should have his banker's account, and would remit the sum by draft on them; it was held to be not a conditional promise, but a sufficient answer to a plea of a statute of limitations, and of the general plea of bankruptcy. Lang v. Mackenzie,[7] 4 C. & P. 463. Where one of the defendants, upon being called on to pay a debt due from him and his late partner, observed that "it was hard he should be called upon to pay when there were so many outstanding debts due to the concern uncollected;" and upon a second application, desired that the account might be handed to W. who was to "settle the business;" it was held, that it was not a conditional promise, but was properly left to the jury to say, whether the whole amounted to a promise or not. Pierce v. Brewster,[8] 12 Moore, 515. On a replication of a promise within six years to a plea of the statute, fraud is no answer to the plea. Ibid. Where the defendant on being arrested said, "I know that I owe the money, but the bill I gave is on a threepenny receipt stamp, and I will never pay it," the acknowledgement was held to be insufficient. A'Court v. Cross,[9] 3 Bing. 329. In Tulloch v. Dunn,[10] 1 Ry. & M. 416, Abbott, L. C. J. held, that in the case of executors neither a mere acknowledgement by all, nor an express promise by one, was sufficient.

J. in Jones v. Moore, 5 Binney, 573, and by the Court of Appeals in Kentucky, Bell v. Rowland's Adm'rs, Hardin, 301. Harrison v. Handley, 1 Bibb. 443. Ormsby v. Letcher, 3 Bibb, 569. {And the Supreme Court of Maine, Perley v. Little, 3 Greenl. 97.} See Mr. Howe's note to the case of Halliday v. Ward, 3 Camp. 32. Murray & al. v. Coster & al. 20 Johns. 576.

There are many American decisions which cannot be reconciled with those above cited; but the inclination of the English and American court seems now to be, to rescue the statute of limitations from former constructions which have operated almost as a repeal of its provisions.

In Pennsylvania, a debt barred by the statute is not revived by a clause in the debtor's will ordering all his just debts to be paid. Smith v. Porter, 1 Binney, 209. Secus, in North Carolina, Anon. 1 Hayw. 243. A devise of real or a bequest of personal property, for the payment of his debts, generally, does not revive a debt barred by the statute. Roosevelt v. Marks, 6 Johns. Ch. Rep. 293. Walker v. Campbell, 1 Hawks, 304. Campbell v. Sullivan, Hardin, 17. Nor will a provision in a will for the payment of debts generally, if no trust is created. Brown v. Griffiths, 6 Munf. 450. See also Chandler's Ex'rs v. Neale's Ex'rs, 2 Hen. & Mun. 124.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 236. [2]Id. vi. 517. [3]Id. ix. 47. [4]Id. xxii. 400. [5]Id. xvii. 219. [6]Id. xix. 473. [7]Id. xix. 474. [8]Id. xxii. 452. [9]Id. xi. 124. [10]Id. xxi. 478.

*debt (t); by the latter an acknowledgement is insufficient, unless a new promise to pay the debt be expressly made or can be clearly inferred.

(t) The stat. 9 G. 4, c. 14, s. 1, enacts, that in actions of debt, or upon the case, grounded upon any simple contract, no acknowledgement* or promise by words only† shall be deemed sufficient evidence of a new or continuing contract, whereby to take any case out of the operation of the said enactments or any of them, or to deprive any party of the benefit thereof, unless such acknowledgement or promise shall be made or contained by or in some writing‡ to be signed by the party chargeable thereby,§ and that where there shall be two or more contractors, or executors, or administrators of any contractor, no such joint contractor, executor or administrator, shall lose the benefit of the said enactments, or any of them, so as to be chargeable in re-

* The statute makes no alteration in the form of the acknowledgement, or as to the party to whom it is made. Haydon v. Williams,[1] 7 Bing. 163; 4 M. & P. 818. But although the acknowledgement be in writing, it must, in order to take the case out of the statute, be such as will raise the implication of a promise to pay. Brigstocke v. Smith, 1 C. & M. 483. A mere statement of an anteeedent debt by parol without any new contract or consideration is not sufficient. Jones v. Ryder, 4 M. & W. 32. But in the case of Smith v. Forty,[2] 4 C. & P. 126, Vaughan, B. is reported to have held, where the agents of the plaintiff (an administrator) and the defendant had gone over the accounts within six years, and struck a balance which the defendant promised orally to pay, the plaintiff had a good cause of action on the account stated, and that the statute was not applicable, as the plaintiff proceeded for a new debt.

† The stat. excludes oral evidence of an acknowledgement made previous to the day when the stat. began to operate. Towlar v. Chatterton,[3] 6 Bing. 258. The same point had been previously ruled by Ld. Tenterden and by Hullock, B. at Nisi Prius. See Ansell v. Ansell,[4] 3 C. & P. 563. An oral acknowledgement by the defendant that he has paid money on account of the debt, is insufficient. Willis v. Newham, 1 Lloyd & W. 197; 3 Y. & J. 518. But if the fact of payment can be proved by independent evidence, the application of the payment to the particular debt may be proved by the declaration of the debtor. Waters v. Tompkins, 2 C. M. & W. 723. In an action against A. on a note by A. and B., the signature of B. being attested, a part payment by B. cannot be proved in an action against A. without calling the attesting witness. Wild v. Porter, 3 N. & M. 585. Where after the statute a written acknowledgement had been given which had been lost, it was held that secondary evidence of the existence of such writing was admissible. Haydon v. Williams,[1] 7 Bing. 163. Where, at the time of the sale of the plaintiff's goods, a conversation took place as to the subject of a demand of the defendant's, and which was the subject of his set-off, and otherwise barred by the Statute of Limitations; held that such conversation was improperly rejected at the trial. Moore v. Strong,[5] 1 Bing. N. C. 441; and 1 Se. 367. Where, upon the settlement of an old account, a new note was given for the balance and a further sum, but was insufficiently stamped; held that it could not be used as an acknowledgement to take the case out of the statute. Jones v. Ryder, 4 M. & W. 32. The advertisement by an executor to creditors to send in their claims, is not sufficient to revive a debt already barred by the statute. Scott v. Jones, 4 Cl. & F. 382.

‡ A promise in writing to pay the balance due, is sufficient to take the case out of the stat.; but without other evidence to show what the balance is, the plaintiff will be entitled to nominal damages only. The defendant, in a letter to the plaintiff, promises to pay the balance due from him to the plaintiff, but does not specify any particular amount, this is sufficient to take the case out of the statute; it seems to be evidence of a new or continuing contract at the time of the date. The Act does not require the amount of the debt to be specified; before it passed, a verbal promise to pay the balance would have entitled the plaintiff to recover; a similar promise in writing will have the same effect since, but the plaintiff can recover nominal damages only; the promise is to pay a balance, and there is no evidence to show what that balance is. Dickinson v. Hatfield, 2 Mo. & M. 141. (Cor. Lord Tenterden.) And see Dodson v. Mackey,[6] 4 N. & M. 327. Where the defendant wrote, "I beg to say that I cannot comply with your request; the best way for you will be to send another bill, and draw another for the balance of your money, 30*l.*," it was held to be sufficient without showing that another bill had been drawn. Dubbs v. Humphries, 10 Bing. 496. A promise to pay a proportion of a joint debt is sufficient, though no amount be specified; it may be proved by other evidence. Lechmere v. Fletcher, 1 C. & M. 623; 3 Tyr. 450. An entry in a bankrupt's examination of a specified sum being due to A. is sufficient. Eicke v. Nokes, 1 M. & R. 359. The drawing a bill of exchange is not an acknowledgement of a debt due in respect of the original demand for which the bill was given. Gowan v. Foster,[7] 3 B. & Ad. 512. Where the evidence to take the case out of the stat. was a deed of composition in which the defendant stated that he was indebted to the plaintiff in the sum opposite his signature, but the plaintiff had never signed the deed, nor did the amount in any way appear, held that it could not be coupled with a parol admission that there was no other sum due than that on the note on which the action was brought, and that there was no sufficient acknowledgement to take the case out of the statute. Kennett v. Milbank,[8] 8 Bing. 38.

§ The signature by an agent is not sufficient. Hyde v. Johnson,[9] 2 Bing. N. C. 776. The acknowledgement, to satisfy the statute, must be signed by the party chargeable thereby. Where the party to whom an application was made for payment, replied that "family arrangements have been made to enable him to discharge the debt; that funds have been appointed for the purpose, of which A. is trustee; that the defendant has handed the account to A.; that some time must elapse before payment, but that the defendant is authorized by A. to refer to him for any further information:" it was held that the writing was insufficient to satisfy the statute. Whippy v. Hillary,[10] 3 B. & Ad. 399.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xx. 86. [2]Id. xix. 305. [3]Id. xix. 75. [4]Id. xiv. 451. [5]Id. xxvii. 450. [6]Id. xxx. 377. [7]Id. xxiii. 133. [8]Id. xxi. 213. [9]Id. xxix. 488. [10]Id. xxiii. 103.

*From the late decisions on the effect of an acknowledgement under the provisions of the statute 21 J. 1, c. 10, when all the former cases were *667 *brought under consideration, the result seems to be, that to repel the limiting power of the statute it must neither amount to an express promise, or to so clear an admission of a still subsisting liability, that a promise must necessarily be implied. And therefore, although from a general acknowledgement (x) that a once existing debt still exists unsatisfied, a promise to pay it may be inferred, yet it is otherwise where the party either denies his liability or limits it. Where the acknowledgement was, "I cannot pay

spect or by reason only of any written acknowledgement or promise made and signed by any other or others of them; provided always, that nothing herein contained shall alter or take away or lessen the effect of any *payment of any principal or interest made by any person whatsoever: provided also, that in actions to be commenced against two or more such joint contractors, or executors or administrators, if it shall appear at the trial or otherwise that the plaintiff, though barred by either of the said recited Acts or this Act, as to one or more of such joint contractors, or executors or administrators, shall nevertheless be entitled to recover against any other or others of the defendants by virtue of a new acknowledgement or promise, or otherwise, judgment may be given and costs allowed for the plaintiff as to such defendant or defendants against whom he shall recover, and for the other defendant or defendants against the plaintiff.—Sec. 2. That if any defendant or defendants in any action on any simple contract shall plead any matter in abatement, to the effect that any other person or persons ought to be jointly sued, and issue be joined on such plea, and it shall appear on the trial that they could not, by reason of the said recited Acts or this Act or of either of them, be maintained against the other person or persons named in such plea, or any of them, the issue joined on such plea shall be found against the party pleading the same.—Sec. 3. That no indorsement or memorandum of any payment written or made after the time appointed for this Act to take effect, upon any promissory note, bill of exchange, or other writing, by or on behalf of the party to whom such payment shall be made, shall be deemed sufficient proof of such payment, so as to take the case out of the operation of either of the said statutes.—Sec. 8. No memorandum or other writing made necessary by this Act shall be deemed to be an agreement within the meaning of any statute relating to the duties on stamps.†

(x) From a general acknowledgement, such a promise "may and ought to be inferred." Per Bayley, B., in Brigstock v. Smith, 3 Tyr. 445, citing Tanner v. Smart,[7] 6 B. & C. 603. The acknowledgement need not state the amount of the debt: extrinsic evidence is admissible to prove it. Lechmere v. Fletcher, 3 Tyr. 450; 1 Cr. & M. 633; S. P. Linley v. Bonsor, York Spring Ass. 1838, cor. Parke, B. A letter, containing as follows: "I beg leave to say, I cannot accede to your request; the best way will be to send the bill you hold, and draw another for the balance of your money;" held to be sufficient. Dobbs v. Humphries, 10 Bing. 446.

* It should appear that the payment was on account of the debt for which the action was brought, and in part payment of a greater debt. Tippets v. Heane, 1 C. M. & R. 252. But if evidence be given of a part payment of some debt, and it does not appear that any other debt is due from the defendant to the plaintiff, it will be sufficient. Evans v. Davies,[1] 4 Ad. & Ell. 840. Part payment by one of several joint-contractors, binds the rest. Whitcomb v. Whiting, Doug. 652. Wyatt v. Hodgson,[2] 8 Bing. 309. Pease v. Hurst,[3] 10 B. & C. 122. Chippendale v. Thurston,[4] M. & M. 411. And see in general as to the effect of acknowledgements by joint-contractors, infra, 669. A note having been given by the defendants as overseers, for money borrowed for the parish, payment of interest by the vestry, the accounts being signed by one of the defendants, was held to be sufficient to take the case out of the statute. Rew v. Pettit,[5] 1 Ad. & Ell. 196; 3 N. & M. 456. So of a payment to an administrator (on a note) who has neglected to take out administration in a diocese, in which the note is within the description of bona notabilia. Clarke v. Hooper,[6] 10 Bing. 480; 4 M. & S. 353. So in case of part payment to a legatee of money lent by the trustees of the legatees, as such trustees, to the defendant. Megisson v. Harper, 4 Tyr. 94; 2 C. & M. 323. Per Parke, B., it has been held by the Exchequer that a yearly settlement of account by which the items on the credit side were taken in diminution of the debt, amounted to a payment. A mere acknowledgement in a written account of payment of a 100*l.* note, does not take the case out of the stat., without specifying that it was part payment of a larger sum. Garbut v. Wilson, cor. Parke, B., York Sum. Ass. 1836. Where the testator by letter dated 23 April, 1813, requested of the plaintiff, his attorney, to let him have his account that everything might be settled, and shortly after died, having by will charged his real and personal estate in the hands of trustees for sale, with payment of his debts, the last item in the bill when delivered was of the date 19th August, 1808, but no bill was filed until 18th November, 1820; held that the letter was sufficient to take the debt out of the statute, and that the devise continued it until the filing of the bill. Rendell v. Carpenter, 2 Y. & J. 484.

† A promissory note improperly stamped is not admissible as a memorandum to take the case out of the stat. under this clause, which applies only to instruments which may be stamped as agreements. Jones v. Ryder, 4 M. & W. 34. The memorandum, "I acknowledge to owe M. 36*l.*, which I agree to pay him as soon as circumstances will permit," is exempt from duty for the purpose of being used as necessary under the Act. Morris v. Dixon,[8] 4 Ad. & Ell. 745.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxxi. 203. [2]Id. xxi. 301. [3]Id. xxi. 38. [4]Id. xix. 293. [5]Id. xxviii. 66. [6]Id. xxv. 206. [7]Id. xiii. 273. [8]Id. xxv. 203.

the debt at present, but I will pay it as soon as I can," it was held to be insufficient to take the case out of the statute, without proof of the defendant's ability (y).

And notwithstanding an acknowledgement of a debt, yet if it be made in *terms which repel the inference of a promise, it is insufficient to take the case out of the statute; and therefore, where defendant said, "I know that I owe the money, but the bill I gave is on a threepenny stamp, and I will never pay it," it was held to be insufficient to revive the debt (z). *668

Two circumstances must be proved:—1st, That a debt once existed; 2dly, It must appear from the defendant's acknowledgement that it continued to be a debt within the six years. If evidence be given aliunde to prove the existence of the debt, then payments (a) by the defendant, or statements by him, which now must be in writing, are admissible in evidence to show the continuance of the debt. Where the conduct and expressions of the defendant are ambiguous, it is a question of fact for the jury whether they amount to an admission of the continued existence of the debt (b). But a mere admission that the sum claimed has not been satisfied, is not sufficient evidence even of the previous existence of a debt (c).

If a precedent debt be proved, it seems that a general acknowledgement may be sufficient, if it be applicable to that debt; and whether it be so applicable is a question of fact for the jury (d). And if no other account between the parties appear, it seems that the onus of showing that other Evidence of an acknowledgement (A).

(y) Tanner v. Smart,[1] 6 B. & C. 603, on a review of all the cases. See also Scales v. Jacob,[2] 3 Bing. 638; Ayton v. Bott,[3] 4 Bing. 105. Where one of several executors acting in the affairs, said that he believed the debt to be a just one, but that he could not do anything without the consent of the testator's family; it was held that it was neither a promise nor even an acknowledgement to take the case out of the statute. M'Culloch v. Dawes,[4] 9 D. & R. 40. A memorandum is adduced in the hand-writing of the defendant, "T. O. U. 100*l*.," of a date beyond six years; and on the same paper a separate memorandum, "Received 20*l*.," within six years; held that the plaintiff was entitled to the latter sum only. A tender and payment into Court of the principal sum is no implied acknowledgement, so as to revive the claim to interest on the original debt. Collyer v. Willcock,[5] 4 Bing. 313. Where in an action by the drawers against the acceptor of a bill payable to L. & Co., the defendant admitted that he was indebted to L. & Co. on the bill, but not to the plaintiff, there being no original consideration for the bill; held, that being a denial of liability to the plaintiff, the defendant was within the protection of the statute. Easterby v. Pullen,[6] 3 Starkie's C. 187. Where the defendant, on application made for payment of an old demand, said, "I will see my attorney and tell him to do what is right," held to be insufficient. Miller v. Caldwell,[7] 3 D. & R. 266. So where he answered, "I cannot afford to pay my new debts, much less my old ones," the jury being of opinion that there was no acknowledgement of a subsisting debt, the Court refused a new trial. Knott v. Farren,[8] 4 D. & R. 479. See also Fearn v. Lewis,[9] 6 Bing. 1; and see Append.

(z) A'Court v. Cross,[10] 3 Bing. 329.

(a) The payment of interest is sufficient. Bealy v. Greenslade, 2 C. & J. 61. Irving v. Veitch, 3 M. & W. 90. A bill of exchange drawn by the debtor, and delivered in payment of a debt, operates as payment from the time of delivery only, and not from the time when the bill is paid. Irving v. Veitch, 3 M. & W. 90. On an agreement that goods shall be taken in reduction of the demand, the delivery of such goods operates as payment. Hooper v. Stephens,[11] 4 Ad. & Ell. 71. Hart v. Nash, 2 C. M. & R. 337.

(b) Lloyd v. Maund, 2 N. R. 760. Frost v. Bengough,[12] 1 Bing. 266; where it was left to the jury to decide whether a letter written by the defendant had reference to the promissory note on which the action was brought, and was sufficient to take the case out of the statute. In the subsequent case of Morell v. Frith, 3 M. & W. 402, it was held that the construction of an instrument given in evidence to defeat the Statute of Limitations was for the Court, although, where extrinsic facts were used in explanation, those were for the consideration of the jury. In Burkett v. Church, 9 G. & P. 209, it is stated to be the practice for the Judge to give his opinion whether a letter written by the defendant be a sufficient acknowledgement to take the case out of the statute, and to leave the case to the jury; and that it must either amount to a distinct promise to pay, or to a distinct acknowledgement that the sum is due.

(c) Rowcroft v. Lomas, 4 M. & S. 457.

(d) Frost v. Bengough, 1 Bing. 266. Baillie v. Lord Inchiquin, 1 Esp. 435. {Whitney v. Bigelow, 4 Pick. R. 110.}

(A) (If the defendant within the time of limitations, admit the debt to be unsatisfied, that takes it out of the Act. Stump v. Hughes, 5 Haywood's R. 93.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiii. 273. [2]Id. xiii. 85. [3]Id. xiii. 361. [4]Id. xxii. 385. [5]Id. xiii. 447. [6]Id. xiv. 176. [7]Id. xvi. 168. [8]Id. xvi. 191. [9]Id. xix. 98, 326. [10]Id. xi. 124. [11]Id. xxxi. 29. [12]Id. viii. 317.

transactions existed, to which the acknowledgement might possibly refer, is thrown on the defendant (e); although, in the first instance, it lies on the plaintiff to take the case out of the statute (f). But if the defendant wholly deny the debt, although he admit the receipt of the money (g), or deny the debt, insisting that it has been barred by the statute (h), there is no evidence of an acknowledgement to go to a jury. It was not necessary before the late statute that the new promise or acknowledgement should be in writing; although the original promise, as to guarantee the debt of another, was required to be in writing (i).

The giving a bill in part payment of a debt, more than six years before the action brought, but which bill has been paid within the six years, does not take the case out of the Statute of Limitations; for the reason why a *669 *payment takes a case out of the statute is, that it is evidence of a fresh promise; and the promise must be considered to have been made when the bill was given, and not when it was paid (k).

An acknowledgement to take the case out of the statute may be raised from circumstances, without express promise or admission (l).

Evidence of an acknowledgement by one of several joint contractors is sufficient to bind the rest (1), even in separate actions against them; and although the acknowledgement be not made to the plaintiff, but by one of two co-contractors to the other (m), or to a third person (n); and although it has been made by one of two partners subsequent to the dissolution of partnership (o) and although the party to be affected by the acknowledgement, but who has joined in a promissory note, be but a surety for the other (p). But since the late statute (q), a new promise, even in writing, by one joint contractor, or executor or administrator, does not bind any other.

Where one of two makers of a joint and several promissory note became bankrupt, the receiving a dividend under the commission within six years

(e) See the observations of the Court in Frost v. Bengough,[1] 1 Bing. 266. Per Park, J., "A paper is produced, which, though ambiguous, is sufficient to shift on the defendant the onus, which at first was on the plaintiff." Burrough, J.: "There is nothing to which the letter appears to relate but the prior demand."

(f) Ibid.; and per Bayley, J. in Beale v. Nind,[2] 4 B. & A. 571. {Contra, Guier v. Pearce, 2 Browne, 35. See the observations of Bristol, J. delivering the opinion of the Court in Marshall v. Dalliber, 5 Conn. Rep. 487, 488, upon Hellings v. Shaw, and Beal v. Nind.}

(g) Owen v. Woolley, B. N. P. 148.

(h) Coltman v. Marsh, 3 Taunt. 380.

(i) Gibbons v. M'Casland, 1 B. & A. 690.

(k) Gowan v. Forster,[3] 3 B. & Ad. 507.

(l) The plaintiffs being sued for money paid under a mistake to defendants, gave notice to the latter that if a verdict passed against the plaintiffs, they should look to the defendants, and they from time to time advised particular proceedings in the defence; held sufficient to warrant the jury in finding an acknowledgement, or to justify the proving under the defendant's commission. East India Company v. Prince,[4] 1 Ry. & M. 407.

(m) [Beitz v. Fuller, 1 M'Cord, 541.] In an action against A. on the joint and several promissory note of A. and B., it was held that a letter written by A. to B., desiring him to settle the money, took the case out of the statute. Halliday v. Ward, 3 Camp. 32. The same evidence seems also to be sufficient on issue taken on the plea actio non accrevit infra sex annos.

(n) [Whitney v. Bigelow, 4 Pick. 110.] As in a deed between the defendants and a third person. Mountstephen v. Brooke,[5] 3 B. & A. 141. See Clarke v. Hougham,[6] 2 B. & C. 149.

(o) Wood v. Braddick, 1 Taunt. 104. [M'Intire v. Oliver, 2 Hawks. 209.]

(p) Perham v. Raynal,[7] 2 Bing. 306. So in Burleigh v. Stot,[8] 8 B. & C. 36, in an action against the administrator of a surety in a note, part payment by the principal within six years was held to be sufficient; and see Manderton v. Robertson, 4 M. & Ry. 440. Payment of interest by one joint contractor is sufficient to take the case out of the statute, since 9 Geo. 4, c. 14. Chippendale v. Thurston, 1 M. & M. C. 411. The payment of interest by one of several makers of a note above six years after it had become due, takes the case out of the statute as to all. Channel v. Ditchburn, 5 M. & W. 494.

(q) 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 1; supra, 665.

(1) [Bound v. Lathrop, 4 Conn. Rep. 336. White v. Hall, 3 Pick. 291. Even against a joint contractor who is merely a surety. Hunt v. Bridgham, 2 Pick. 581. Perham v. Raynal et al. 2 Bing. 306.] [The acknowledgement of one heir, or devisee, is sufficient to take the case out of the statute, as respects all. Johnson v. Beardsley, 15 Johns. 3.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. viii. 317. [2] Id. vi. 517. [3] Id. xxiii. 133. [4] Id. xxi. 474. [5] Id. v. 245. [6] Id. xi. 47. [7] Id. ix. 413. [8] Id. xv. 151.

next before bringing the action, was held to be sufficient in an action against the other maker (r).

The principle upon which such evidence is admissible, is, as has been already observed (s), the community of interest between the party making the admission and the party to be affected by it, and the presumption that the former would not acknowledge that which was adverse to his own interest. And hence it may perhaps be doubted, whether such evidence be sufficient for such a purpose, where the party making it is no longer responsible (t).

Where one of two joint drawers of a bill of exchange became bankrupt, and the indorsees proved under the commission a debt exceeding the amount of the bill, and exhibited the bill as a security for the debt, and received a dividend within six years next before the action against the solvent partner, it was held that the action was barred by the statute (u). This case was *distinguished by the Court from that of Jackson v. Fairbank, for there the *670 claim was made and the dividend received upon the instrument itself (x); in the later case the dividend was on a distinct debt, and the instrument was introduced but incidentally, and the introduction or omission of it neither increased nor diminished the claim upon the dividends. And it seems that such evidence is not sufficient to bind a partner, unless it be clear and explicit (y).

Subsequent promise (A).

A subsequent promise, to take the debt out of the statute of limitations,

(r) Jackson v. Fairbank, 2 H. Bl. 340. But see the observations on this case in Brandram v. Wharton, 1 B. & A. 463. [Roosevelt v. Marks, 6 Johns. Ch. R. 292.]

(s) Supra, tit. Admission.

(t) 1 B. & A. 463. See the observations of Bayley and Abbott, Justices.

(u) Brandram v. Wharton, 1 B. & A. 463. Lord Ellenborough, in giving judgment, founded himself on the distinction between express and implied acknowledgements; and see his Lordship's observations in Holme v. Green,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 488.

(x) See the observations of Abbott and Holroyd, Justices.

(y) Per Lord Ellenborough, 1 B. & A. 468; and Holme v. Green,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 486. In Munderson v. Reeve, K. B. Easter T. 1829, it appeared on a special case that payments had been made within the six years by Robertson, who had let judgment go by default, upon the joint note on which the action was brought; and it having been admitted, or at least not disputed at the trial, that an account which Robertson had stated with the plaintiff contained an item for interest on the note, the Court held that the case was not distinguishable from that of Burleigh v. Stott,[2] 8 B. & C. 39; supra, 669, note (i). Bayley, J. observed, in the course of the argument, that in Brandram v. Wharton, supra, there was in fact no acknowledgement by any one. An acknowledgement by the acceptor that he was indebted on it to the payees but not to the drawer, there being no consideration for the bill, is not a sufficient acknowledgement in an action by the drawer. Easterby v. Pullen,[3] 3 Starkie, 186. But an acknowledgement, although it be to a stranger, of a debt due to the plaintiff, is sufficient. Peters v. Brown, 4 Esp. C. 46; and see Clarke v. Hougham,[4] 2 B. & C. 149. Halliday v. Ward, 3 Camp. 32. Mountstephen v. Brook,[5] 3 B. & A. 141.

(A) (Of late years the courts in England and in this country have considered statutes of limitations more favourably than formerly, on the ground that they rest upon sound policy, and tend to the peace and welfare of society. The courts do not now, unless compelled by the force of former decisions, give a strained construction to evade the effect of those statutes. By requiring those who complain of injuries to seek redress by action at law, within a reasonable time, a salutary vigilance is imposed, and an end is put to litigation. M'Cluny v. Silliman, 3 Peters, 273. Wetzell v. Buzzard, 11 Wheat. 316; 3 Conn. R. 133. See also Bell v. Morrison, 1 Peters, 360. Bradstreet v. Huntingdon, 5 Peters, 507. Church v. Fetcrow, 2 Penns. R. 301§ Gallagher v. Milligan, 3 Id. 179. Fisher v. Harnden, 1 Paine's C. C. R. 61. Kimmel v. Schwartz, 1 Breese, 218.

Where defendant said that if a certain witness would say that he had had the goods, he would pay for them, it was held that the promise being conditional would not take the case out of the statute, unless the condition were complied with. Robbins v. Otis, 18 Mass. Rep. 368. See also Wetsell v. Butsard, 11 Wheat. 309; and 5 Conn. R. 487. A defendant wrote to the plaintiff, "I would rather come to a settlement, although I should allow the account as insisted on by you, than wait the event of a lawsuit," held that these words took the case out of the statute. Ferguson v. Fitt, 1 Hayw. 639. The words "It was at the desire of my mother I gave it (a note of hand), I will not pay it; Rosser ought to pay it; I will speak to him about it;" held to take the case out of the statute. Cobham v. Moseley, 2 Hayw. 6. So also the words "I have credited him in my account with the value of the certificates, if he will meet me at Newbern I will settle it must agree with the original promise stated in the declaration (z). A subsequent acknowledgement to an executor will not support a declaration framed on promises to the testator (a); and an acknowledgement of negligence made within six years will not support a special assumpsit founded on negligence, which took place more than six years ago (b), although in fact the negligence was first discovered within the six years.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 479. [2]Id. xv. 151. [3]Id. xiv. 176[b]. [4]Id. ix. 47. [5]Id. v. 345.

So where the cause of action arises from the doing or not doing some act at a particular time, in breach of a contract, an acknowledgement within six years of the previous breach of contract will not avoid the statute (c).

So the principle does not apply to an acknowledgement made by one acting alieno jure. A. and B. made a joint and several promissory note, and ten years after the death of A., B. (who was one of A.'s executors) made a payment on the note on his own account, and it was held that this was no evidence of a promise by the executors (d).

(z) The plaintiff may declare on the original promise, and rely on the subsequent acknowledgement to take the case out of the statute. See Leaper v. Tatton, 16 East, 420, where the plaintiff declared against the defendant, as the acceptor of a bill of exchange; but note, that there the acknowledgement was held to be evidence on an account stated. See Bicknell v. Keppel,[1] 1 N. R. 21. A'Court v. Cross, 1 Bing. 332. The original debt remaining, and the remedy only being gone, it is only necessary to declare specially in the case of executors or administrators. Upton v. Else,[2] 2 Moore, 303. Secus, where the new promise is conditional. Haydon v. Williams,[3] 7 Bing. 163.

(a) Sarell v. Wine, 3 East, 409, and per Holroyd, J. in Short v. M'Carthy,[4] 3 B. & A. 632. A declaration by the defendant to the plaintiff (executrix), that the testator always promised never to distress him for it, is no evidence of a promise to the testator. Ward v. Hunter,[5] 6 Taunt. 210; 1 B. & C. 251.

(b) Short v. M'Carthy,[4] 3 B. & A. 626, and supra, 658.

(c) Boydell v. Drummond, 2 Camp. 157.

(d) Atkins v. Tredgold,[6] 2 B. & C. 29; and vide supra, 665, and Slater v. Lawson,[7] 1 B. & Ad. 396. The admission of the executors within six years before the filing of a creditor's bill is not sufficient, as against with him." Toomer v. Long, 2 Hayw. 18. An agreement to submit a question of boundary to arbitration, defeats the operation of the statute of limitations. Lessee of Hunt v. Guilford, 4 Ohio R. 310. In North Carolina it has been held, that in order to repel the statute of limitations, there must either be an express promise to pay or an explicit acknowledgement of a subsisting debt. Martin v. Waugh, 2 Dev. & Bat. 517. If a party says on his promissory note's being produced to him that it is as good as money, this is sufficient evidence to take the same out of the statute of limitations. Arnold v. Dexter, 4 Mason's C. C. R. 122. In Tennessee it has been held, that a slight acknowledgement is not sufficient to take a case out of the statute of limitations; but an express promise to pay is not required; if facts are acknowledged from which the existence of the debt necessarily follows, it is sufficient. Harwell v. M'Culloch, 2 Tenn. R. 275. An acknowledgement of a debt by a partner after the dissolution of the partnership will not take the debt out of the statute of limitations so as to make the copartners liable. Veaught v. Craighead, 1 Penns. R. 135. Anon. Philadelphia, Dec. 1827, stated by Smith, J., 1 Penns. R. 138. S. P. Bell v. Morrison, 1 Peters, 373. [In Virginia, though the acknowledgement of a debt by one or more partners, after a dissolution of the partnership, will remove the bar of the statute, in an action against the firm—the existence of the debt being first proved by other testimony or admitted by the pleadings—yet it is not of itself proper evidence of the existence of the debt, so as to charge the other parties. Shelton v. Cocke & al. 3 Munf. 191.] {Fishe's ex. v. Tucker's ex. 1 M'Cord's Cha. Rep. 169, where the question was elaborately discussed.} Aliter, in New York, and Massachusetts, and North Carolina, where it has been held, that the acknowledgement of a previous debt due from a firm made by one of the partners after the dissolution of the firm, binds the other partner so as to prevent him from availing himself of the statute of limitations. Patterson v. Patterson, 7 Wend. 441. White v. Hall, 3 Pick. 291. M'Intire v. Oliver, 2 Hawks. 209. And a promise to pay made by the executor, will not take a case out of the act of limitations as against the heirs. Peck v. Wheaton's Heirs, Martin & Yerg. 353. Reynolds v. Hamilton 7 Watts, 420. If a debtor, at the time of acknowledging a debt, refuses to pay it, or offers a smaller sum, saying that if his offer is not accepted he will plead the statute of limitations, there is nothing from which the law can imply a promise to pay the debt. M'Glensey v. Fleming, 4 Dev. & Bat. Law R. 129. So where a defendant admitted that there ought to have been a settlement with the plaintiff, but that little, if anything, was due, held that the statute was a bar to the action. Peebles v. Mason, 2 Dev. 367. An agreement or promise by the defendant to settle by the books of the plaintiff, is not sufficient to take the case out of the statute, although the books show a balance against the defendant. Russell v. Gass, Martin & Yerger, 270. See also Bank of Newbern v. Sneed, 3 Hawks, 500. Proof that the defendant had promised to pay a debt barred by the statute of limitations, is insufficient to take the case out of the statute unless evidence of the originial consideration of the indebtedness be also given. The promise to pay a debt barred by the statute, only removes the bar, and leaves the case to be proved as if no statute of limitations had been pleaded. Kimmel v. Schwartz, 1 Breese, 218.)

---

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xi. 124. [2]Id. xxii. 451. [3]Id. xx. 86. [4]Id. v. 403. [5]Id. i. 359. [6]Id. ix. 12. [7]Id. xx. 409.

*Where there is a mutual account between the parties, every new item and credit in the account given by the one party to the other is an admission of there being some unsettled account between them, the amount of which is to be afterwards ascertained: and any act which the jury may consider as an acknowledgement of its being an open account, is sufficient to take the case out of the statute (e) (A). Mutual accounts.

Where the items of account are all on one side, as in an account between a tradesman and his customer, and there be some items within the six years, but the rest are beyond it, the modern items will not enable the plaintiff to give evidence of the former (f).

Where there is a mutual account, but no item has accrued within the six years, the plaintiff will be precluded from recovering under this issue (g), or indeed from recovering at all, unless he can bring his case within the exception of the statute concerning merchants' accounts, which must be done by means of a special replication (h) (1).

the heir or devisee of a trader, so as to entitle him to payment out of the real estate in their hands, under the 47 Geo. 3, c. 74. Putnam v. Bates, 3 Russ. 188. A charge on the personal and real estate by will is a trust against which the statute does not run; a charge on land is a trust to be executed by the heir or devisee. Hargraves v. Michell, 6 Mad. 326; and see Burke v. Jones, 2 Ves. & B. 275.

(e) Per Lord Kenyon, C. J. in Catling v. Skoulding, 6 T. R. 189. In that case the defendants had hired certain premises of the plaintiff's testator for twenty-one years; ten years afterwards the testator died, and rent for nine years and a half was then due; and 20*l.* was also due for cash lent on account, seven or eight years before the death, and the testator was indebted to the defendants for various articles supplied by them in their trade. The last half-year's arrear of rent, and one or two of the last articles of the defendants' bill for goods supplied, were within six years before the suing out of the writ. The amount of the articles furnished by the defendants within the last six years was more than sufficient to cover the last half-year's rent. There had never been any settlement of account between the defendants and the testator. The balance due to the testator at the time of his death was 171*l.* Issues were joined on the pleas of non assumpsit and set-off, and on the replication of a promise within six years; and the Court, after a consideration of all the former cases, held that the executors were entitled to recover. Where the whole of the items of the plaintiff's bill, as a proctor in a suit terminated by a sentence, were incurred more than six years before the suit, but two items were added within that period for perusing a letter from the adverse proctor as to the costs being paid and threatening proceedings against the bail, and for attending him thereon, held, that as the latter subject was only accidental and not connected with the former duty of the plaintiff, the statute was a bar to the original demand, and he could only recover for the last items. Rothery v. Munnings,[1] 1 B. & Ad. 15. Where there has been no account in writing, nor any payment on account of a particular debt, it is not an open account within the meaning of the exception of the statute; where a payment has been made without any specific appropriation, the creditor is entitled to apply it in satisfaction of the part of his demand barred by the statute, but it is not such a part payment as to take the earlier portions out of the operation of the statute. Mills v. Fowkes,[2] 5 Bing. N. C. 455. And see Tippets v. Heane, 1 C. M. & R. 45; and Williams v. Griffith, 2 C. M. & R. 45; and Bosanquet v. Wray,[3] 6 Taunt. 597. The plaintiffs, as joint owners, worked co-partnership plantations in I, and kept an account with merchants and agents at B., to whom they became largely indebted; these were held not to be merchants' accounts within the exception in the statute. Forbes v. Skelton, 8 Sim. 355.

(f) Per Denison, J. in Cotes v. Harris, B. N. P. 149. (g) Per Lord Kenyon, 6 T. R. 192.

(h) Ibid. And the clause as to merchants' accounts extends to those cases only where there are mutual

(A) (But if the account be stated the statute will run from the time of such statement. Long acquiescence in an account makes it a settled one. Baker v. Biddle, 1 Baldwin's C. C. R. 418. The mere rendering an account does not make it a stated account; but if the other party receives it, admits the correctness of the items, claims the balance, or offers to pay it as it may be in his favour or against him, then it becomes a stated account. It is not at all important that the account was not made out between the plaintiff and the defendant, the plaintiff having received it, having made no complaint as to the items or the balance, but on the contrary, having claimed that balance, thereby adopted it, and by his own act treated it as a stated account. Toland v. Sprague, 12 Peters, 300. See also Sickles v. Mather, 20 Wend. 72. See also Chamberlain v. Cuyler, 9 Wend. 126. Ramchander v. Hammond, 2 Johns. 200. Tucker v. Ives, 6 Cow. 193. Clarke v. Dutcher, 9 Cow. 674. One item of an account within six years before suit, will not draw after it items beyond six years, so as to protect them from the statute, unless there have been mutual accounts between the parties. Kimball v. Brown, 7 Wend. 322.)

(1) [As to mutual accounts, &c. see Franklin v. Camp, 1 Coxe's Rep. 196. Smith v. Ruecastle, 2 Halsted's Rep. 357. Murray v. Coster, 5 Johns. Ch. Rep. 522. S. C. 20 Johns. 576. Bennett v. Davis, 1 N. Hamp. Rep. 19. Stiles v. Donaldson, 2 Yeates, 105, S. C. 2 Dallas, 264. Coleman v. Hutchinson, 3 Bibb, 209. M'Naughton v. Norris, 1 Hayw. 216. Cogswell v. Dolliver, 2 Mass. Rep. 217. Mandeville v. Wilson, 5 Cranch, 15. Bond v. Joy, 7 Cranch, 350.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 334. [2]Id. xxxv. 175. [3]Id. i. 495.

Where there are cross-demands arising out of the same transaction, and the plaintiff has kept alive his claim by continued process, he cannot avail himself of the statute to defeat the defendant's set-off (i).

*672 Disability.

*The disability (k) of a party must usually be pleaded in reply to a plea of the statute of limitations, but in some instances is matter of evidence, as upon trials of ejectments.

Where it is incumbent on a plaintiff to prove that he laboured under any disability which exempts him from the operation of the statute of limitations, he must show that it was a continuing disability from the first; for it seems to be a general rule, that where such a statute has once begun to operate, no subsequent disability will restrain its progress (l) (1). If thereaccounts and reciprocal demands between two persons. Per Denison, J., Cotes v. Harris, B. N. P. 149; and only to accounts current between merchants, and not to accounts stated between them. Webber v. Tivill, 2 Saund. 124; and see the cases cited, 2 Will. Saund. 127 (6). The rule is, that if the account be once stated, the plaintiff must bring his action within six years; but if it be adjusted, and a following account be added, the plaintiff is not barred by the statute, for it is a running account. Ibid. and Farrington v. Lee, 1 Mod. 270; 2 Mod. 311, 312. Scudamore v. White, 1 Vern. 456. Welford v. Liddel, 2 Ves. 400. Cranch v. Kirkman, Peake's C. 121. The clause is not confined to merchants. Ibid. and 2 Will. Saund. 127, b.; although that opinion seems once to have prevailed. Ibid. (i) Ord v. Ruspini, 2 Esp. C. 270.

(k) The exception in the stat. 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 7, was held to apply to the case of absent plaintiffs only. Hall v. Wyburn, Carth. 136. But the stat. 4 Ann. c. 16, s. 19, enacts, that if any person against whom there is any cause of action for seamen's wages, or of action on the case, the party may bring his action against such person after his return within the time limited by the former statute. See Williams v. Jones, 13 East, 439.

(l) See Lord Kenyon's observations in Doe d. Duroure v. Jones, 4 T. R. 311. Gray v. Mendez, Str. 556. Ireland is beyond seas, within the meaning of the stat. 21 Jac. 1, c. 16; per Holt, C. J, Show. 91; but Scotland is not. King v. Walker, Bl. R. 286, (2). Where the statute began to run in the lifetime of the debtor,

(1) [The terms "beyond seas," in the statute of Georgia, are equivalent to without the limits of the State. Murray's Lessee v. Baker, 3 Wheat. 541. So of the statute of any other State. Per Marshall, C. J. 3 Cranch, 177; Fow v. Roberdeau's Ex'r. The same construction prevails in Maryland, South Carolina and Massachusetts. Brent v. Tasker, 1 Har. & M'Hen. 89. Pancoast v. Addison, 1 Har. & J. 350. Forbes v. Foot, 2 M'Cord, 331. White v. Bayley, 3 Mass. Rep. 271. Bryne v. Crowninshield, 1 Pick. 263.

In Pennsylvania, the terms "beyond the sea," is construed to mean without the United States. Thurston & al. v. Fisher, 9 Serg. & Rawle, 288. Ward v. Hallam, 2 Dallas, 217. S C. 1 Yeates, 329. And in Connecticut, "over the sea" was held by the Superior Court, not to extend to Halifax (N. S.) Gustin v. Brattle, Kirby, 299. It is believed, however, that this decision was reversed by the Supreme Court of Errors in that State.

"Out of the country," in the statute of Kentucky, means out of the State. Mansell v. Israel, 3 Bibb, 510. But the statute runs against citizens of Virginia, who visited Kentucky, after the cause of action accrued, while it composed a part of Virginia. May v. Slaughter, 3 Marsh. 507. But where there are several non-resident plaintiffs, the coming of one of them into the State, will not take a case out of the statute as respects the others. Jones v. Hersey, 2 Littell's Rep. 48.

In Sleght v. Kane, 1 Johns. Cas. 76, a statute of New York which saved the rights of persons "out of the State," was held to mean out of the jurisdiction of the State—and that it applied to a person who was within the British lines within that State, during the war of the revolution—he having been "where the authority, which was exercised, was derived, not from the State, but from the king of Great Britain, by right of conquest."

Foreigners who have never been in the United States or the States where they sue, are within the exception of the statutes of limitation,—the phrase "return" meaning come into the State Hall v. Littell, 14 Mass. Rep. 203. Chomqua v. Mason & al. 1 Gallison, 342. Ruggles v. Keeler, 3 Johns. 263. S. P. 3 Wils. 145. 2 Bl. Rep. 723. See also Jones v. Hersey, ubi sup. Sed vide 1 Har. & J. ubi sup. And this doctrine applies, although the foreign plaintiff had an agent residing in the State where he brings his suit. Wilson v. Appleton, 17 Mass. Rep. 180.]

(2) [In South Carolina and Kentucky, if an ancestor dies, against whom the statute has begun to run, its practical operation is nullified in favour of his minor heirs; and it begins to run against them in the same manner as if the cause of action had first accrued upon his death. Rose v. Daniel, 2 Const. Rep. 549. Cook v. Cook, 1 M'Cord, 139. Machir v. May, 4 Bibb, 43. This is an exception to the rule which operates in other cases, in those States. May v. Slaughter, 3 Marsh. 511.

War between the countries of the creditor and debtor suspends the operation of the statute, during its continuance. Wall v. Robson, 2 Nott & M'Cord, 498.

The treaty of peace of 1783, between the United States and Great Britain, which stipulates (art. 4) "that creditors on either side shall meet with no lawful impediment to the recovery of the full value, in sterling money, of all bona fide debts heretofore contracted"—prevented the operation of a statute of limitations upon British debts contracted before that treaty. Hopkirk v. Bell, 3 Cranch, 454. But in the case of Brattie v. Tubb's Adm'r, 2 Munf. 254, it was held that the circumstance that a plaintiff is a British subject, and was entitled to his claim before the year 1776, is not in itself sufficient to protect him against the operation of the Virginia statute of limitations.]

fore a plaintiff be in England when his right of action or title accrues, and he then depart beyond seas, and the time limited elapses, he and his representatives will be barred (m).

So if one of several partners be in England when the cause of action accrues, although the rest be then beyond seas (n).

And if an estate descend to parceners, one of whom is under a disability, which continues for more than twenty years, and the other does not enter within the twenty years, the disability of the one does not preserve the title of the other (o) (1).

Where an ancestor died seised, leaving a son and daughter infants, and on the death of the ancestor a stranger entered, and the son went to sea and was supposed to have died abroad, within age, it was held that the daughter was not entitled to twenty years to make her entry after the death of her brother (p), but to ten years only after her coming of age, or to twenty after the death of the ancestor (2).

and after his death, the will being contested, there was for a considerable period no representative who could be sued, held that it did not suspend the operation of the statute. Rhodes v. Smethurst, 4 M. & W. 42. A direction, in a will of personal estate, for payment of debts, does not prevent the operation of the statute, if once it has begun to run; and it does not cease during the interval between the death and the time of a person being constituted personal representative. Freake v. Cranefeldt, 3 M. & C. 499. And see Jones v. Scott, 1 Russ. & M. 255; and Rhodes v. Smethurst, 4 M. & W. 42.

(m) Smith v. Hill, 1 Wils. 134. Ireland is a place beyond seas within this statute. Lane v. Bennett, 1 M. & W. 70. [S. P. Hasley v. Beach, 1 Penn. Rep. 122. Peck v. Randall, 1 Johns. 165. Fitzhugh v. Anderson, 2 Hen. & Mun. 289. Doe v. Warren, 6 Mass. Rep. 328. Bunce v. Wolcott, 2 Conn. Rep. 27. Griswold v. Butler, 3 ib. 227. Gustin v. Brattle, Kirby, 299. Hudson v. Hudson, 6 Munf. 352. Anon. 1 Hayw. 416, 459. Den v. Mulford, ibid. 316. Pearce v. House, 2 Taylor, 305. Faysoux v. Prather, 1 Nott & M'Cord, 296. Adamson v. Smith, Rep. Con. Ct. 296. Hall v. Vandergrift, 3 Binney, 374. Wells v. Newbolt, Cam. & Nor. 375. Inman v. Barnes, 2 Gallison, 315. Kendal v. Slaughter, 1 Marsh. (Ken.) Rep. 377. Richardson v. Whitefield, 2 M'Cord, 148. Walden v. Heirs of Gratz, 1 Wheat. 392.]

(n) Perry v. Jackson, 4 T. R. 516. Hall v. Wybourn, Carth. 136; and Chevely v. Bond, Carth. 226. [See Pendleton v. Phelps, 4 Day, 476.]

(o) Roe d. Langdon v. Rowlston, 2 Taunt. 441. [S. P. Doolittle & ux. v. Blakesley, 4 Day, 265. Johnson v. Harris, 3 Hayw. (Tenn.) Rep. 113. Thomas v. Machir, 4 Bibb, 412. Riden v. Frion, 2 Murphey, 577.]

(p) Doe d. George v. Jesson, 6 East, 80. [See Eaton v. Sanford, 2 Day, 523. Bush v. Bradley, 4 Day, 298. Thompson & al. v. Smith, 7 Serg. & Rawle, 209. Eager & ux. v. Commonwealth, 4 Mass. Rep. 182. Demarest v. Wynkoop, 3 Johns. Ch. Rep. 129.]

(1) [Coparceners, whose right of entry is barred by the statute, cannot, in Connecticut, recover in ejectment by joining with them one whose right is saved—each or any number being capable, by the law of that State (and Massachusetts) of vindicating his or their own right, without joining the others. Sanford & al. v. Button, 4 Day, 310. In joint-tenancy, if the right of entry as to some is barred by the statute, all are barred. Aliter, as to a tenancy in common. Dickey v. Armstrong, 1 Marsh. 39. See also Simpson v. Shannon, 3 Marsh. 462. Marsteller & al. v. M'Clean, 7 Cranch, 156. Turner v. Dehell, 2 Marsh. 384.]

(2) [The State is never included in an act of limitation unless expressly named, and is not barred by it. Commonwealth v. M'Gowars, 4 Bibb, 62. Inhabitants of Stoughton & al. v. Baker, 4 Mass. Rep. 528. Weatherhead v. Bledsoe, 2 Overton's Rep. 352. Johnson v. Irwin, 3 Serg. & Rawle, 292. Harlock v. Jackson, 1 Const. Rep. 135. Nimmo's Ex'or v. Commonwealth, 4 Hen. & Mun. 57. See a discussion of the common law doctrine on this point, 2 Mason's Rep. 313.

The local statutes of limitations of the different States do not bind the United States in suits in the national courts, and cannot be pleaded in bar of an action by the United States against individuals. United States v. Ibar, 2 Mason's Rep. 311.

Remedies on contracts are to be regulated and pursued according to the law of the place where the action is instituted, and not by the law of the place where the contract is made—and hence a plea of the statute of limitations of the State where a contract is made is not a bar to a suit brought in a foreign tribunal to enforce that contract. But a plea of the statute of limitations of the State where the suit is brought is a good bar. Nash v. Tupper, 1 Caines' Rep. 402. Ruggles v. Keeler, 3 Johns. 263. Pearsall & al. v. Dwight & al. 2 Mass. Rep. 84. Byrne v. Crowninshield, 17 ib. 55. Decouche v. Savetier, 3 Johns. Ch. Rep. 217. Medbury v. Hopkins, 3 Conn. Rep. 472. Graves v. Graves, 2 Bibb. 207. Le Roy & al. v. Crowninshield, 2 Mason's Rep. 151, and see the learned opinion of Mr. Justice Story. Sed vide Woodbridge v. Austin, 2 Tyler, 364.

Legacies are not barred by the statute of limitations, 2 Freem. 22, pl. 20. Ishy v. M'Crae, 4 Desauss. 432. Ward v. Reeder, 2 Har. & M'Hen. 154. Decouche v. Savetier, ubi sup. See Kane v. Bloodgood, 7 Johns. Ch. Rep. 136.

The statute does not apply as a bar to an action against a stockholder in a bank to recover the amount of a dishonoured note of the bank, under a provision of the bank charter making the stockholders personally liable for such note in such case. Bullard v. Bell, 1 Mason's Rep. 243. (This case, however, is now pending in the Supreme Court of the United States, on a writ of error.)]

It is no answer to a plea of the statute, that the debtor died within the six years; and that by reason of litigation as to the right of probate, an executor was not appointed until after the expiration of the six years (q).

MAJORITY.

In the exercise of a public or general power, a majority is to act for the whole (r).

*673

*MALICE.

Legal import of the term.

There are two classes of cases where the real intention of a man in doing a particular act is immaterial to civil or criminal responsibility. The one, where the act is of such a nature, that even though it be in itself noxious and injurious, yet, for reasons of policy, the law, without regard to the motives of the agent, excludes civil or penal liability. Thus a witness or deponent in a cause, however defamatory and however malicious his statement may be, is not responsible in an action, or in a prosecution for slander or libel.

There is another, and that a large class, where the question of intention is in no way material, so long as the act is voluntarily done.

Kinds of malice.

Whenever the law defines a right, or prescribes the performance of a duty, or prohibits a particular act, the wilful violation of the right, omission of the duty, or transgression, without legal excuse, is necessarily illegal, without regard to intention; it would be manifestly mischievous, and even inconsistent with the very notion of law, as a general rule of conduct, to allow the crude opinions of individuals to supersede the force of law (s). In an intermediate and very extensive class of human actions, the actual intention is material; this happens where the act is of such a nature that either unlimited restraint or total prohibition would be inexpedient, and therefore here the law makes the actual intention of the agent the test of civil or criminal liability. To permit every man to prefer criminal accusations against others with perfect impunity, or, on the other hand, to subject every (q) Rhodes v. Smethurst, 1 M. & W. 42.

(r) R. v. Justices of Lancashire, 5 B. & A. 755, upon the question in what cases the act of a majority is binding. See R. v. Beeston, 5 T. R. 592; Bac Ab. Corp. E. 7. In all cases a majority of a meeting capable of deciding binds. In the absence of any peculiar constitution, it is not essential that a majority of the whole should meet. See the St. 33 H. 8, c. 27, which in effect, and in cases within the statute, makes a majority of the body corporate to bind the rest. See Burn's Ecc. L. by Tyr., vol. 2, p. 113. In the case of dean and chapter, the dean has no casting voice. Ib. Case of Cathedral Church of Gloucester, Ib.; of Carlisle, Ib.; of Chester, Ib.; Dr. Bland's Case, Ib.; Howard v. Bishop of Chichester, 1 T. R. 650.

(s) A party may be subject even to an indictment for a breach of the law, although he erred not intentionally, but ignorantly. See R. v. Picton, 30 Howell's St. Tr. 489, and Lord Ellenborough's observations there. Thus magistrates are liable to an indictmint for refusing to license a public house, although they were acting under the advice of able counsel. R. v. Duke of Norfolk, as cited by Lord Ellenborough in R. v. Picton, 30 Howell's St. Tr. 489; where his lordship observed, that, "To assert that no man is to be considered as criminal because he has not acted intentionally, but ignorantly, would be leaving it to every man to say, 'I will not inform myself; and in consequence of such negligence I shall not be deemed criminal.' The subject was very much considered when I was at the bar, in the case of some magistrates of Cumberland, and where it was held that they were not entitled to an acquittal, although their mistake originated in the best advice." And see R. v. Sainsbury, 4 T. R. 451. In the same case (R. v. Picton, 30 Howell's St. Tr. 489), Lord Ellenborough also observed, "If the act be unlawful, it is a sufficient ground of conviction, although the party may have thought that he had reasonable and probable ground for committing it: being unlawful, he is chargeable for it by indictment. Malice is the essence of an action for a malicious prosecution; here it is an inference of law from the facts." If a judge in the ordinary exercise of his jurisdiction commit an error, he cannot be prosecuted; but if he commit an error in acting beyond his jurisdiction, he is not protected. Per Lord Ellenborough, Ibid. And one who in the exercise of a public function (as a trustee under a turnpike Act), without emolument, and which he is compellable to execute, acts without malice, according to the best of his skill and diligence, is not liable in respect of consequential damage arising from his act. Sutton v. Clarke,[1] 6 Taunt. 29; see also R. v. Sainsbury, 4 T. R. 794; but see Roberts v. Read, 16 East, 215.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. i. 298.

one to the payment of damages or to penal visitation who made a charge which turned out to be false, would be highly inconvenient; such prosecutions are therefore neither wholly permitted, nor wholly prohibited; they are allowed to be made with a bonâ fide intention, and under circumstances which supply *a probable cause for the proceeding. Malice, therefore, *674 which in legal and technical language is so frequently used as descriptive of those predicaments which constitute civil or criminal liability, is of two kinds; malice in law, and malice in fact, or actual malice.

Malice in law is a mere inference of law, which results simply from a wilful transgression of the law. Malice in law.

In numerous instances it means simply the evil inclination and disposition of one who wholly does that which is wrong, without any legal excuse (t). In this sense malice has been said to be un disposition à faire un mal chose (u).

In the same sense, one who being arraigned of felony refuses to plead, is said to stand mute of malice (x). Again, the statute "De malefactoribus in parcis," (y) reciting that trespassers did frequently refuse to yield themselves to justice, adds, "imo malitiam suam prosequendo & continuando," did flee or stand on their defence.

So where a clerk in orders entered into warranty for hire, and refused to take his trial before lay judges, propter privilegium clericale, then, according to Fleta, the warranty will avail nothing, and clericus gaolæ pro "malitiâ" committetur & redimatur (z).

So where one as a hired champion entered fraudulently into warranty, he is said to do so malitiosè & per fraudem & mercedem (a).

In such cases the term "malicious" imports nothing more than the wicked and perverse disposition of the party who commits the act, and the precise and particular intention with which he did the act; whether he was moved "irâ vel odio vel causâ lucri," is immaterial, he acts maliciously in wilfully transgressing the law.

The application of the term "malicious" is strongly illustrated in the case of homicide, where the malus animus, which brings the offence within the legal denomination of wilful murder, is frequently to be collected by the Court, as a matter of law, from the circumstances of the case, and is not an inference of fact to be drawn by a jury, as it must necessarily be whenever malice consists in the specific intention actually existing in the mind of the agent at the time of the act. "Most, if not all the cases of implied malice," says Sir Michael Foster, "will, if carefully adverted to, be found to turn upon this single point, that the fact hath been attended with such circumstances as plainly carry in them the indications of a heart regardless of social duty and fatally bent upon mischief" (b). Malice of this

(t) See Johnstone v. Sutton, 1 T. R. 493. Cro. Car. 271.

(u) 2 Roll. R. 461. Fost. 256. Malice in common acceptation means ill will against a person; but in its legal sense it means a wrongful act done intentionally without just cause or excuse. Per Bayley, J. in Bromage v. Prosser,[1] 4 B. & C. 255. See also Crozer v. Pilling,[2] 4 B. & C. 26; where Abbott, L. C. J. says, "The act of the defendants in detaining the plaintiff in custody after he had tendered the debt, was wrongful, and must be presumed to have been malicious, in the absence of any circumstances to rebut the presumption of malice." Under the st. 6 G. 3, c. 36. s. 48, the word maliciously is to be taken in its general signification as denoting an unlawful and bad act; whereas in order to bring the offender within the penalty of death, under the Black Act, the malice must be personal against the owner. Per Bayley, J. 4 B. & C. 252.

(x) 4 & 5 P. & M. c. 4. (y) 21 Edw. 1, stat. 2.

(z) Fleta, lib. i. c. 38, s. 8, 9. Fost. 256. The word malice was used in the same general sense by the best Roman authors, and in the civil law. Fost. 257.

(a) Bracton de Corona, c. 32, s. 7.

(b) Fost. 257; but even in the case of homicide, malice is frequently a question of fact, depending on the actual intention of the prisoner, and the real state of his mind. Vide infra, tit. Murder.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. x. 321. [2]Id. x. 271.

*description is sometimes termed malice in law, or implied or constructive malice; it is nothing more than the evil disposition, which is a necessary inference from the wilful doing of an injurious act without lawful excuse (c). Here malice does not depend on the actual intention of the prisoner; he may be guilty of malice prepense in legal consideration, although he entertained no malice whatsoever against the deceased (d).

In numerous instances it is unnecessary to use any allegation of malice in the description of the offence, and in others, where the averment of malice is usual, or even necessary, it is not essential to give evidence to prove the averment, unless it consist in the existence of some precise and particular intention in the mind of the agent; or in other words, where malice consists in a principle of malevolence to particulars (e), for otherwise it is a mere inference of law; and even where special and particular malice is essential, the fact itself is usually presumptive evidence to prove it.

Malice in fact.

In the next place, the term malice is frequently used to signify the actual state or disposition of the mind of the agent, with which he did a particular act; as that he did it with a view to prejudice a particular individual, either generally or in some specific manner. In this sense it is usually termed actual, express, or positive malice, and perhaps it may not improperly be termed malice in fact, in contradistinction to malice in law, where it is a mere inference of law; for it is obvious that wherever malice depends upon an actual state and disposition of mind, its existence is a question of pure fact, although undoubtedly in ascertaining that existence certain presumptions in fact which are recognized by the law, are to be regarded by juries. This kind of malice seems usually to resolve itself into a question of intention, a subject upon which some observations have already been hazarded (f).

A malicious intention in fact is a matter of inference from all the circumstances of the particular case; but nevertheless the terms malice and malicious, being technical terms of law, involve, as indeed all other technical expressions do, the application of legal judgment and consideration to the facts as found by a jury.

Presumptions as to malice.

Presumptions of law (g) as to malice in particular instances, depend upon considerations of policy and convenience, which greatly affect the nature of the proof, and the effect of malice when proved. In some instances the very existence of malice is wholly immaterial; in other words, the law will decide conclusively in favour of a defendant, notwithstanding his malice or its injurious consequences to the plaintiff. As, where an action is brought for a libel, or words published or spoken by a Judge, juror or witness, in the ordinary course of a judicial proceeding (h). In others, the law will not exclude evidence of malice, but will presume against its existence, until it has been established by positive proof; as in cases of libel or slander, *where the occasion supports such a presumption(i); or where the action is expressly founded upon a malicious proceeding, such as a malicious prosecution by a private person, or a malicious conviction by a magis-

*676

(c) Malice implied in case of murder, is where the act is attended with such circumstances as can admit of no excuse. Per Parker, C. J. 10 Mod. 214, 5. So an appeal brought per malitiam, was one which was wholly groundless. Per Lord Coke, 2 Ins. 281.

(d) See Foster, 256, 7. In cases of appeals of death, it seems formerly to have been held to be unnecessary to use the term malice as descriptive of the offence; it was sufficient to aver that the fact was done nequiter & in felonia.

(e) Fost. 256.

(f) Supra, tit. INTENTION.

(g) The assignment of a bond by the Lord Chancellor is, it has been held, conclusive evidence of fraud and malice in the suing out the commission. Smith v. Broombed, 7 T. R. 300, under the statute, 5 G. 2, c. 30.

(h) Supra, tit. LIBEL.

(i) See the different instances, supra, tit. LIBEL.

trate (k). In such and similar instances, malice, being the gist of the action, must be established by positive proof, independently of the act itself (l).

In other cases, again, where the act of the defendant is unsupported by any presumption of law, supplied in his favour by the occasion and circumstances of the act, which is in itself plainly hurtful and injurious to another, the very fact supplies evidence of malice, and the onus of exculpation is thrown upon the defendant (m).

Where a defendant is proved to have done that, the malicious doing of which is prohibited by the law, malice is a primâ facie inference from the very act, for he must be presumed to have intended to do that which he did, and an intentional violation of the law is a malicious violation of it (n). The proof of facts in justification, excuse, or alleviation, must be, in such cases, incumbent on the defendant. And where the offence consists not merely in the doing a particular act, but in the doing it maliciously, and with intent to effect a specified criminal object, evidence that the defendant intended to effect that purpose (o) is in like manner primâ facie evidence of malice.

It seems to be a general rule, that a gross, unfeeling and vicious disregard of consequences, however pernicious they may be to society, or however fatal to the individual in particular, is equivalent to express malice, or perhaps, to speak more correctly, is strong, if not conclusive evidence of a specific intention to injure (p).

Such seem to be presumptions of law, in which the Courts in some instances draw the inference; and upon which, in others, juries ought to act under the direction of the Court.

Where any doubt arises whether the party acted maliciously, or with such a fair and bonâ fide intention as would in law protect him, or whether the particular injury resulted from mere accident, seems to be a pure question of fact for the consideration of the jury, who are to decide whether the act was intentional, and if so, by what motive the agent was really actuated.

MALICIOUS PROSECUTION.

The proofs (q) in an action for a malicious prosecution are, 1st, Of the prosecution; 2dly, Of the want of probable cause, and of the defendant's malice; 3dly, Of damage to the plaintiff.

1st. Of a prosecution (r) by the defendant (1), from which the plaintiff has been discharged. If the prosecution was in the King's Bench, at the assizes, *or quarter sessions, the fact of prosecution and acquittal must be *677

Proof of the prosecution.

(k) Supra, Burley v. Bethune, infra, tit. Malicious Prosecution.

(l) See tit. Malicious Prosecution.

(m) And therefore, when noxious and defamatory words are published without explanation from context or circumstances, the question of malice ought not to be left to the jury. Bromage v. Prosser,[1] 4 B. & C. 255, and supra, 629.

(n) If one doth a grievous mischief voluntarily, the law will imply malice. Kel. 126. Holt, 484. Cro. Car. 131. W. Jones, 198. 1 Hale, 454. Palm. 585. Fost. 255. And see Farrington's Case, supra, 52.

(o) Supra, tit. Intention. (p) Vide infra, tit. Murder.

(q) It is, of course, incumbent on the plaintiff to prove so much as is put in issue by the pleadings, under the New Rules. See tit. Rules.

(r) An action lies for a malicious prosecution of a charge in the Ecclesiastical Court. Gibs. 216; Burn's Ecc. Law, tit. Churchwardens.

(1) [A memorial presented to a grand jury (but not acted upon by them) complaining of the conduct of a public officer, will not support an action for a malicious prosecution. O'Driscoll v. M'Burney, 2 Nott & M'Cord, 54.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps, x. 321.

proved in the usual way, by the production of the record, or proof of an examined copy of it (s) (A). It is no objection to this proof, that no order of court, or fiat of the attorney-general, allowing a copy of it to the party acquitted in a case of felony, is proved (t). It must appear that the plaintiff was acquitted of the charge (u); it is not sufficient to prove that the proceeding was stayed by the nolle prosequi of the attorney-general (x), otherwise if he had pleaded not guilty, and the attorney-general had confessed it (y); and it is sufficient that the party was acquitted upon a defect in the indictment (z) (1).

Some proof ought to be given of the identity of the plaintiff with the party prosecuted. In order to prove that the defendant was the prosecutor, it may be desirable to be prepared with the original bill of indictment; for although the names of the witnesses on the back of the bill are no part of the record, it is evidence that they were sworn to the bill (a); but it may be proved that the defendant was a witness, without producing the bill (b); and the indorsement of the party's name as a witness on the bill is no evidence that he was the prosecutor (c). Where the defendant merely acted as a magistrate, the proof of his name on the back of the indictment

(s) See Clayton v. Nelson, B. N. P. 13. Kirk v. French, 1 Esp. C. 81. Morrison v. Kelly, 1 Bl. R. 385. Where a party acquitted upon an indictment of felony, obtained upon the fiat of the attorney-general a copy of the record of acquittal, upon a representation that the Judge had promised to grant it after the assizes, but which it appeared he had no authority to do, the Court refused to restrain the party from making use of it. Browne v. Cumming,[1] 10 B. & C. 70.

(t) Legatt v. Tollervey, 14 East, 302. Jordan v. Lewis, 2 Str. 1122. And Ford's MS. [See the People v. Poyller, 2 Caines, 202. Mies v. Bert, 2 Rep. Con. Ct. 308. Taylor v. Cooper, ibid. 208.] The case of Legatt v. Tollervey, above cited, overruled that of Guinn v. Phillips, Monmouth Summer Assizes, 1763, where Adams, B. held that a copy of the record in felony ought not to be received, unless it had been ordered by the Judge (see Selw. N. P. 1063). But he held that, in all cases of indictments for misdemeanors, a defendant is entitled to a copy of the record. And the same distinction was taken by Lord Mansfield, C. J., in Morrison v. Kelly, 1 Bl. R. 385, where the prosecution, however, had been for a misdemeanor. Among the orders and directions to be observed by justices of the peace, at the Old Bailey, 26 C. 2, prefixed to Kelyng's Crown Cases, is one which directs "that no copy of any indictment for felony be given without special order, or motion made in the open court, at the general gaol delivery; because the late frequency of actions against prosecutors, which cannot be without copies of the indictments, deterreth people from prosecuting for the king upon just occasions." If A. and B. be tried on an indictment and acquitted, and a copy of the record be granted to A. alone, it is evidence for A. in an action against the prosecutor. Caddy v. Barlow,[2] 1 M. & R. 275. Jordan v. Lewis, Str. 1122. In R. v. Brangan, 1 Leach's C. C. L. 32, 3d edit. Willes, C. J., declared, that every prisoner on acquittal had an undoubted right and title to a copy of the record of such acquittal, for any use he might choose to make of it; but this has been denied in other cases. Ib. In the note.

(u) Hunter v. French, Willes, 517.

(x) Goddard v. Smith, 6 Mod. 262; {Smith v. Shakelford, 1 Nott & M'Cord, 36;} for, notwithstanding, the nolle prosequi, fresh process may be sued out upon the indictment. Ibid. per Ld. Holt; but it was said that there had been no instance of any further proceeding after a nolle prosequi. Ibid. S. C. Salk. 21. Note, that the declaration alleged an acquittal, but the Court held that the entry of a nolle prosequi did not amount to an acquittal.

(y) Ibid.

(z) Wicks v. Fentham, 4 T. R. 247. Pippet v. Herne,[3] 5 B. & A. 634.

(a) Per Holt, C. J., in Johnson & Ux. v. Browning, 6 Mod. 216.

(b) Ibid. per Ld. Holt.

(c) 1 Vent. 47; B. N. P. 14. It is a question of fact for the jury to determine who was the prosecutor. See the observations of Lord Ellenborough, C. J., in R. v. Commerell, 4 M. & S. 207, and infra, n. (d). See also R. v Smith, 1 Burr, 54; R. v. Kettleworth, 5 T. R. 33; in neither of which was the prosecutor's name in the indictment. Sometimes it is the business of the Court to make the inquiry. Ib. and R. v. Incledon, 1 M. & S. 268.

(A) (An exemplification of the record of a Court of Quarter Sessions is competent evidence to show the acquittal. Katterman v. Stitzer, 7 Watts, 189.)

(1) [Where a declaration alleges that the party was acquitted, proof that the grand jury had rejected the bill is not sufficient evidence to support the action for malicious prosecution. Thomas v. De Graffenried, 2 Nott & M'Cord, 143. If the plaintiff have been regularly discharged by order of court, after the bill is thus rejected, it may, perhaps, be sufficient. Ibid.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxi. 27. [2]Id. xvii. 252. [3]Id. vii. 217.

as prosecutor, will not render him liable (d). The proper evidence to establish *this fact is, that the defendant employed an attorney or agent to conduct the prosecution; that he gave instructions concerning it; paid the expenses; procured the attendance of witnesses, or was otherwise active in forwarding the prosecution (A). It has been said that a grand juror may be called to prove that the defendant was the prosecutor (e); this, however, appears to be doubtful. *678 Variance.

It has been said that the recognizance to prosecute entered into by the defendant is evidence of his being the prosecutor (f); this, however, is inconclusive evidence, to say the least, as the magistrate has it in his power to bind over all those who know or can declare anything material, &c., to prosecute or give evidence, so that a witness or party may be bound over without any option on his part.

Where the substance only of the charge contained in the judgment or information before a magistrate is alleged, it seems that a variance will not be material, unless the charge itself be different (g).

Where the declaration professed to set out the substance of the indictment, and in specifying the goods, and their value, used the word valoris for valentiæ, it was held that the variance was not material (h).

Where the declaration alleged that the defendant charged the plaintiff before the magistrate with assaulting and beating him, and the charge in fact was for assaulting and striking, the Court held, that as the declaration did not profess to describe the warrant, and had stated the charge correctly in substance, the variance was not material (i).

So where the declaration for a malicious arrest stated the warrant to be to arrest the plaintiff for an assault with intent to rob A. (the informant), and the words of the warrant were "with intent to rob, as he verily believes" (k).

Where the declaration alleged that the defendant charged the plaintiff

(d) Girlington v. Pitfield, 1 Vent. 47. In R. v. Commerell, 4 M. & S. 203, it was held that the Court of Quarter Sessions might make an order on A. and B. for costs after an acquittal of a parish on a new indictment, although the names of A. and B. were not indorsed on the indictment. And per Ld. Ellenborough, "We know that in an action for a malicious prosecution, if the prosecutor be kept out of sight, it sometimes becomes a point of very subtle evidence to determine. But id certum est quod certum reddi potest; and it is a question to be ascertained by inquiry and evidence. It sometimes is the business of this Court to make that inquiry; as in R. v. Incledon, 1 M. & S. 268, one question before the Court was, whether Sir A. Chichester was the prosecutor. So in this case the sessions have found these defendants to be the prosecutors, and the Court will not interfere with that decision unless it appeared that the sessions had improperly or carelessly so found." And per Bayley and Dampier, Js., "it does not follow that he whose name is on the indictment must be the prosecutor;" neither in R. v. Smith, 1 Burr. 54, nor in R. v. Kettleworth, 5 T. R. 33, was the prosecutor's name on the indictment.

(e) Sykes v. Dunbar, Selw. N. P. 1066, 7th ed. This evidence is said to have been admitted by Lord Kenyon, on the ground that this was a question of fact, the disclosure of which did not involve a breach of the grand juryman's oath; but yet it seems, that either the witness must disclose the whole that passed, or the defendant would be precluded from ascertaining upon cross-examination, the grounds from which the witness drew his general inference that the defendant was the prosecutor.

(f) Enger v. Dyot,[1] 5 C. & P. 4.

(g) See further, tit. VARIANCE. Walters v. Mace, Ib. and 2 B. & A. 756. Phillips v. Shaw,[2] 5 B. & A. 964.

(h) Johnson & Ux. v. Browning, 6 Mod. 216; but it was said, that it would have been otherwise had the indictment been set out in hæc verba. Ib. Vide supra, tit. LIBEL.

(i) Byne v. Moare,[3] 5 Taunt, 187; Marsh, 12.

(k) But note, that Holt, C. J. said he would save the point; a juror was afterwards withdrawn.

(A) (Where the jury on the trial of the prosecution complained of, directed the defendant in the suit for the malicious prosecution, as the prosecutor, to pay the costs, and the Court according to the Act of Assembly, sentenced him accordingly; an exemplification of the record of the original suit in the Court of Quarter Sessions is competent evidence to show that the defendant was the prosecutor. Katterman v. Stitzer, 7 Watts, 189.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxiv. 188. [2] Id. vii. 318. [3] Id. i. 69.

with felony before a magistrate, it was held that the averment was supported by proof of a charge made, stating the suspicion of the defendant (l).

*679 *Evidence that the defendant, upon his application to a magistrate, stated facts which showed the plaintiff to have been guilty of nothing more than a tortious conversion of the defendant's goods, upon which the magistrate issued a warrant to apprehend the plaintiff on suspicion of felony, will not support an averment that the defendant imposed the charge of felony upon him (m).

If the plaintiff in his declaration set forth the indictment, which contains several charges, it is sufficient to prove that some of them were maliciously preferred, although there were good grounds for the rest (n).

If the declaration allege an acquittal in bank, it is not proved by evidence of an acquittal at Nisi Prius (o).

But if the day of acquittal be not averred by way of description of the record, a variance from the day of acquittal alleged will not be material. The declaration averred that afterwards, to wit, on the morrow of the Holy Trinity, &c. the plaintiff was in due manner, and by due course of law, acquitted. By the record of Nisi Prius it appeared that the acquittal took place on Tuesday next after the end of Easter term, and the proof was held to be sufficient (p).

Malicious charge before a magistrate.

If the proceeding was by preferring a charge before a magistrate, the magistrate or his clerk should be served with a subpœna duces tecum, to produce the proceedings (q). If the information was laid by the defendant, his taking the oath, and hand-writing, should be proved, as also the issuing the warrant to the constable, &c.; the warrant must also be produced and proved, and evidence must be given of the apprehension and detention

(l) Davis v. Noak,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 377. cor. Ld. Ellenborough, C. J. and afterwards by the Court of K. B; Bayley, J. dissent.

(m) Leigh v. Webb, 3 Esp. C. 165; 1 Starkie's C. 67. Cohen v. Morgan, 6 D. & R. 8; infra, 680, note (u). Where the declaration charged that the defendant maliciously, &c. laid an information against the plaintiff, charging him with having feloniously ridden away with two geldings, and the information, which was of the defendant's servant, merely alleged the riding them away after he was told that he must not, held, that being no more than a trespass, a count stating a malicious charge of felony could not be supported; held also, that a subsequent charge of horse-stealing was evidence as to the motive of the defendant. Milton v. Elmore,[2] 4 C. & P. 456.

(n) Reed v. Taylor, 4 Taunt. 616.

(o) Woodford v. Ashley, 11 East, 508. The declaration alleged that the plaintiff on Wednesday next after fifteen days of, &c., in the Court of our said Lord the King, before the King himself at Westminster, before the Lord Chief Justice assigned to hold pleas before the King himself, &c. W. & J. being associated with him, &c. was in due manner, and by due course of law, by a jury of the said county of Middlesex, acquitted. In order to prove this, a copy of the original roll was given in evidence, which stated the finding of the bill of indictment in the K. B., the process issued to bring the party into Court, the issue joined, the venire facias juratores returnable in Hilary term, the distringas returnable in Easter term, the Nisi Prius record on the return of the distringas, setting out the postea (containing the trial, and verdict and acquittal), and lastly the judgment of the Court in bank.

(p) Purcell v. Macnamara, 9 East, 157, overruling the case of Pope v. Foster, 4 T. R. 590. And see R. v. Hucks,[3] 1 Starkie's C. 521; where on an indictment for perjury, alleged to have been committed in the defendant's answer to a bill of discovery filed in the Exchequer, it was alleged that the bill was filed on a day specified, and it was held to be no variance, although the bill was intitled of a preceding term. And see R. v. Payne, cor. Ld. Kenyon, Westm. after Mich. 29 Geo. 3, where a similar variance was held to be immaterial. See Phillips v. Shaw,[4] 4 B. & A. 435; 5 B. & A. 984. And though the acquittal be unnecessarily alleged with a prout patet, yet if it might have been struck out of the declaration it may be rejected as surplusage. Stoddart v. Palmer,[5] 3 B & C. 2, and tit. VARIANCE.

(q) Where the declaration alleged an information before a magistrate, and evidence was offered of an admission by the defendant that he had laid an information before a magistrate, and it appeared from the evidence of the magistrate's clerk that the practice was to take such information in writing, but no evidence was given of the information itself, the plaintiff was nonsuited. Smith v. Walker, cor. Bayley, J. York Sum. Ass. 1821.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 434. [2]Id. xix. 470. [3]Id. ii. 494. [4]Id. vi. 477. [5]Id. x. 4.

*of the plaintiff under the warrant, and his ultimate discharge must also be shown (1).

Where evidence was given of the loss of the warrant, parol evidence of its contents was admitted without proof of the information (r).

An allegation that the plaintiff wrongfully and without reasonable cause imposed the crime of felony on the plaintiff, cannot be supported but by evidence that the defendant went before a magistrate and made a charge of felony (s).

Where the defendant went merely as a witness to support a charge preferred by another, and the magistrate bound the witness over to appear as a witness on the trial (t), Lord Tenterden held that the action was not maintainable against him.

2dly. Malice and the want of probable cause.—If a party prosecute another on a criminal charge, it is a rule of law, which seems to be founded upon principles of policy and convenience, that the prosecutor shall be protected in so doing, however malicious his private motives may have been, provided he had probable cause (u) for preferring the charge (A). Without probable cause.

(r) Newsam v. Carr,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 70, cor. Wood, B. Note, it did not appear that any information had been taken, and yet it seems that it is to be presumed in a case of felony that one has been taken.

(s) Blizard v. Kelly,[2] 2 B. & C. 283. See Clark v. Postan,[3] 6 C. & P. 423.

(t) Enger v. Hurman and others, West. Sitt. after Trin. 1831.

(u) 1 T. R. 520. 1 Salk. 14, 15, 21. 5 Mod. 394, 405. 1 Vent. 86. Carth. 415. Where a party robbed or injured merely states actual facts to a magistrate, on which the latter acts according to his own discretion, the action it seems is not maintainable. The complainant cannot, in propriety, be said to be the prosecutor of the person against whom the magistrate may think fit to issue his warrant; and whether there be or be not probable cause for issuing the warrant, there was, at all events, probable cause for making the statement, and no malice can be inferred from a mere statement of facts according to the truth. Where the defendant went before a magistrate, and stated the fact of his having lost a bill of exchange, and the magistrate's clerk stated the substance, but added that the plaintiff had feloniously stolen the bill; there being no evidence of malice on the part of the defendant, it was held that the plaintiff had been properly nonsuited. Cohen v. Morgan,[4] 6 D. & R. 8.

(1) [The original warrant issued by a justice on a charge of felony, with the acquittal of the person charged, indorsed and signed by the justices who sat at the trial, is evidence of the acquittal. Dougherty v. Dorsey, 4 Bibb, 207.]

(A) (Probable cause is such a suspicion as would induce a reasonable man to commence a prosecution. Cabaness v. Martin, 3 Dev. 54. An action for malicious prosecution will not lie unless the want of probable cause is substantially proved. Proof of malice alone will not sustain the action. Murray v. Long, 1 Wend. 149. [That malice and want of probable cause must both be established against the defendant, in order to support an action for a malicious criminal prosecution or a vexatious civil suit, see Lyons v. Fox, 2 Browne, Appx. 69. Kelton v. Bevins, Cooke's Rep. 90. Marshall v. Bussard, Gilmer, 9. Bell v. Graham, 1 Nott & M'Cord, 278. White v. Dingley, 4 Mass. Rep. 433. Lindsay v. Larned, 17 ib. 190. Vanduzor v. Linderman, 10 Johns. 106. Yelv. 105, a. (2).] An action for a malicious prosecution cannot be sustained where a verdict and judgment of conviction have been had in court of competent jurisdiction, although the party was afterwards acquitted upon an appeal to a superior tribunal. Griffs v. Sellers, 2 Dev. & Bat. 492. Whitney v. Peckham, 15 Mass. R. 243. In an action for maliciously suing out a capias ad respondendum, the plaintiff is estopped from denying the existence of probable cause of action by the fact that a judgment was rendered against him in the suit in which he was arrested. Herman v. Brookerhoof, 8 Watts, 240. [In Virginia, a magistrate's committing a person accused of felony, or binding him in a recognizance to appear at court and answer the charge, is sufficient evidence of probable cause though he was acquitted by the court; unless he prove by other evidence that the prosecution was without any probable cause. Maddox v. Jackson, 4 Munf. 462.] Want of probable cause must be shown affirmatively, and will not be inferred from the mere neglect to prosecute a suit commenced. Gorton v. De Angelis, 6 Wend. 418. Malice may be inferred from a want of probable cause, but a want of probable cause is not to be inferred from the most rancorous malice. Per White, J., Kelston v. Benins, Cooke, 90. Though where a defendant pleaded singly the truth of the facts involved in the prosecution, which was for felony; held, that this was assuming to prove the truth on his own side, and that the plaintiff need not, on the trial in the first instance, show the want of probable cause. Morris v. Carson, 7 Cow. 281. And a discharge of a defendant by a magistrate upon a warrant for a felony is prima facie evidence of the want of probable cause in an action brought by the defendant against the prosecutor for a malicious prosecution. Bostick v. Rutherford, 4 Hawks. 83. Secon v. Babcock, 2 John. R. 303. See also Williams v. Narwood, 2 Yerger, 329. Johnston v. Martin, 3 Mur. 248. In an action for malicious prosecution the jury ought to be instructed by the Judge as to the law involved in the question of

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 249. [2]Id. ix. 87. [3]Id. xxv. 467. [4]Id. xvi. 250.

This protection appears to be not only one of convenience but of justice, or even of necessity, when it is considered how often it happens that the facts upon which a prosecution is properly founded are confined to the knowledge of the prosecutor alone; and if this proof were not to be required on the part of the plaintiff, every prosecutor would in such case be left exposed to an action, against which he might have no defence (x), if malice were to be inferred from the apparent want of probable cause.

It is incumbent on the plaintiff, in the first place, to prove the absence of probable cause (y); slight evidence has been held to be sufficient, the plaintiff being called upon to prove a negative (z). What will amount to *681 probable *cause may be either a question of law, to be decided by the Court on the particular facts, as found by the jury (a), or may, it seems, be (x) See Lord Kenyon's observations in Sykes v. Dunbar, 1 Camp. 202, in note.

(y) Willans v. Taylor,[1] 6 Bing. 183. Action for maliciously suing out a commission of bankruptcy; the plaintiff, after proving the commission and adjudication, and that it was afterwards superseded by the defendant, proved also, that in an action of trespass by him against the defendant for taking goods, under which the defendant justified as assignee, a verdict was given for the plaintiff; he also proved a removal of goods which, under the circumstances, could not amount to an act of bankruptcy, but which, in the absence of any other, was presumed to have been relied on as the act of bankruptcy; held, that it was sufficient evidence on the part of the plaintiff of want of probable cause, to call upon the other party to prove the affirmative. Cotton v. James,[2] 1 B. & Ad. 128.

(z) Incledon v. Berry, 1 Camp. 203. Taylor v. Willans,[3] 2 B. & Ad. 857. Per Ld. Tenterden in Cotton v. James, 1 B. & Ad. 133, it is said to have been held, that observations of the Judge on the trial of the indictment, tending to censure the mode in which the proceedings have been conducted, are admissible for the plaintiff. Warne v. Terry, cor. Littledale, J., Winton Summ. Ass. 1836. Roscoe on Evidence, 413.

(a) In Candell v. London, 1 Tr. 520, Buller, J., stated, that what is reasonable or probable cause is matter of law. In Johnstone v. Sutton, 1 Tr. 543, it is said, that the question of probable cause is a mixed question of law and fact: whether the circumstances alleged to show it probable or not probable existed, is a matter of fact; but whether, supposing them to be true, they amount to a probable cause, is a question of law (1), and that upon this distinction the case of Reynolds v. Kennedy, 1 Wils. 232, was decided. See also B. N. P. 14, which cites Golding v. Crowle, Mich. 25, G. 2, [Sayer, 1 S. C.] where a verdict for the plaintiff was set aside, not as a verdict against evidence, but as a verdict against law, the Judge having reported that there was probable cause. See also the judgments of Ld. Mansfield and of Ld. Loughborough, in Johnstone v. Sutton, 1 T. R. 544; 2 T. R. 231. The rule is one of legal policy, which protects a party to a certain extent, notwithstanding his malacious intention; (for although he may intend ill, yet still good may arise by encouraging the prosecution of offenders;) the application of the rule must usually be a question of law, for a jury cannot say how far a mere rule of law is to operate. See tit. Law and Fact, Vol. I. See also Hill v. Yeates,[4] 2 Moore, 80; Isaacs v. Brond,[5] 2 Starkie's C. 167. And see Davis v. Hardy,[6] 6 B. & C. 225. Davis hired a chaise in the name of Hardy, and received from the assignee of Martin, a bankrupt, the amount of the chaise-hire: he did not pay it to the innkeeper or to Hardy, nor did he mention to the latter that he had probable cause. Master v. Deyo, 2 Wend. 424. See Burlinghame v. Burlinghame, 8 Cow. 142. Murray v. Long, 1 Wend. 420. Whether there be probable cause is a mixed question of law and fact. M'Cormick v. Lisson, 7 Cow. 715. Munn v. Dupont, 3 Wash. C. C. R. 31. In an action on the case for malicious prosecution in causing the plaintiff to be arrested on a charge for feloniously taking property, it is sufficient evidence of want of probable cause that the party making the complaint knew that the other party claimed and had at least a prima facie right to the property. Weaver v. Townsend, 14 Wend. 192. But if a defendant by his folly or fraud expose himself to a well-grounded suspicion that he was guilty of the crime for which he was prosecuted, a prosecution based thereon will be founded on probable cause. Wilmarth v. Mountford, 4 Wash. C. C. R. 79. Evidence of the proof adduced on the trial of the suit complained of as malicious is inadmissible for the purpose of showing probable cause where the defendant himself was not a witness; the party is bound to produce the witnesses, and is not permitted to prove what they testified to. Burt v. Place, 4 Wend. 591. In an action for a malicious prosecution what the defendant swore on the trial of the indictment may be given in evidence for him. Moody v. Pender, 2 Hayw. 29. Scott v. Wilson, Cooke, 315. A justice of the peace before whom the witnesses were examined in a criminal prosecution, cannot, in a subsequent action for a malicious prosecution, testify to the facts as sworn to by the witnesses before him. The witnesses themselves are the best evidence. Richards v. Foulk, 3 Ohio R. 53.)

(1) [Leggett v. Blount, 2 Taylor, 123. Ulmer v. Leland, 1 Greenleaf, 134. Munns v. Dupont, & al. 2 Browne's Rep. Appx. 42. {3 Wash. C. C. Rep. 31.} Acc. In Crabtree v. Horton, 4 Munf. 59, it was held that the court ought not to instruct the jury that probable cause is proved, but should leave the weight of the testimony to the jury, unless the facts are agreed by the pleadings, or submitted to the court by the parties. See also Maddox v. Jackson, 4 Munf. 462 The Court of Tennessee, in the case of Kelton v. Bevins, Cooke's Rep. 90, were divided in opinion, on the question whether probable cause be a point for the decision of the jury or the court.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 47. [2] Id. xx. 358. [3] Id. xxii. 195. [4] Id. iv. 62. [5] Id. iii. 297. [6] Id. xiii. 152.

a conclusion or inference of fact to be drawn by the jury (b). Evidence of the most *express malice will not dispense with proof of the absence of *682 probable cause (c).

received the amount. Upon a charge being preferred against Davis, he was examined before one of the magistrates, and admitted most of the facts. On this evidence the learned Judge at the trial was of opinion, that there was sufficient evidence of the want of probable cause for indicting Davis for embezzlement. (The Court of K. B. were afterwards of the same opinion.) In the same case, Staines, the proprietor of the chaise, was afterwards called as a witness for the defendant; and it appeared on his evidence that Staines having applied to Davis for payment, the latter requested Staines not to tell Hardy, for it would do him a great injury. The learned Judge was of opinion that the subsequent facts, coupled with the former, nonsuited the plaintiff, though pressed by the defendant's counsel to leave it to the jury whether they believed Staines's evidence, and the Court of K. B. refused to set aside the nonsuit. See also Spencer v. Jacob,[1] 1 M. & M. 180. In an action by an attorney, for maliciously and without probable cause indicting him for sending a threatening letter, it appeared that his clients having inquired of the defendant as to the truth of a representation made by a person who had offered to buy goods of them, the defendant replied that he would not be responsible for the debt, but believed the person had the employment he represented. The goods were then supplied to him. His representations turned out to be false, and the plaintiff, by direction of his clients, wrote a letter to defendant, demanding payment of the price of the goods obtained from his clients through the defendant's representation; and stating, that the circumstances made it incumbent on his clients to bring the matter under the notice of the public, if the defendants did not immediately discharge the amount; that he had instructions to adopt proceedings, if the matter were not arranged in the course of the morrow; and that, as those measures would be of serious consequence to the defendants, he hoped they would prevent them by attention to his letter. The defendant was then summoned before a magistrate, to answer a charge of obtaining goods under false pretences; the plaintiff served the summons, and attended with his clients, and the complaint was dismissed. The defendant afterwards indicted the plaintiff for sending a threatening letter, contrary to the 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 8, and he was acquitted. On the trial of this action the Judge, without leaving any question to the jury, decided that there was reasonable and probable cause for preferring the indictment; held that the decision was correct, and that the evidence did not raise a question of fact for the jury, whether the defendant bona fide believed that he had a reasonable cause for indicting, but a pure question of law for the Judge, whether the defendant had such reasonable cause. Blackford, gent. one, &c. v. Dod,[2] 2 B. & Ad. 179. And see Append. vol. ii. 681.

(b) See Vol. I. tit. Law and Fact. Isaacs v. Brand,[3] 2 Starkie's C. 167. Brookes v. Warwick,[4] 2 Starkie's C. 389. Lord Kenyon's observations, in Holton v. Shepherd, 6 East, 14, n. Fry v. Hill,[5] 7 Taunt. 397. Starkie on Libel, &c. vol. 1, p. 379; infra, 683, note (p). Beckwith v. Phibly,[6] 6 B. & C. 635. Where a felony has been committed, though not by the plaintiff, a private person may justify not only a prosecution, but even an actual arrest, if he acted on fair and reasonable grounds of suspicion. But in an action of trespass, it would be necessary that the defendant (not being an officer) should plead specially the grounds on which he acted. See Mure v. Kaye, 4 Taunt. 34. M'Cloughan v. Clayton,[7] 2 Starkie's C. 445. Haw. b. 2, c. 12, s. 15. In such cases, therefore, it may be a question of law for the Court, whether the circumstances were sufficient to justify an arrest. No one who did not himself believe, on facts within his knowledge, that the party was guilty, would be justified in making an arrest. Haw. b. 2, c. 12, s. 15. Sir Anthony Ashley's Case, 12 Co. 92. The defendant, a constable acting upon the information of another, corroborated by a supposed intercepted anonymous letter, apprehended the plaintiff at her lodgings at night, without any warrant; it was left to the jury to consider whether, looking at the facts, the defendant had reasonable ground to suppose the plaintiff implicated in the felony with which she had been charged, and whether, standing in his place, they would have acted as he had done; and it was held that the direction was not improper. Davis v. Russell,[8] 5 Bing. 354. In an action for maliciously indicting A. for perjury, it appeared that the defendant B., in 1824, preferred the indictment, and gave evidence before the grand jury; that the bill was found, was removed into K. B., and tried in 1827; and that B., who was then in custody, was brought into Court under a habeas corpus, obtained by his attorney on the ground that he was a material witness; but he did not give evidence, and A. was acquitted. The Judge in his direction told the jury, that if the defendant did not appear at the trial as a witness, from a consciousness that he had no evidence to give which would support the indictment, then there was a want of probable cause, and they should find for the plaintiff; but if his non-appearance did not proceed on that ground, then there was no proof of want of probable cause, and they should find for the defendant. The defendant offered no evidence, and the jury found for the plaintiff. Upon error on a bill of exceptions, wherein the objection stated to the summing up was, that the Judge himself ought to have determined upon the facts whether there was probable cause, without leaving any question to the jury, it was held, that under the circumstances, the motive which induced the defendant not to appear as a witness was a question of fact for the jury, and that they might be directed to conclude there was or was not probable cause, and to find for or against the defendant, according to their opinion of the motive. Taylor v. Willans,[9] (in error,) 2 B. & Ad. 845. In the case of Macdonald v. Rook,[10] 2 Bing. N. C. 217, it was held that the Judge was warranted, under the particular circumstances of the case, in leaving the question of want of probable cause to the jury; and Tindall, C. J. observed, "There are some cases, no doubt, in which a Judge may be expected to tell the jury whether or not a defendant had probable cause for proceeding against the plaintiff, as in the case of a threatening letter, or the like; but where the probable cause consists partly of facts and partly of matter of law, a Judge would be warranted in leaving the question to a jury." But see Appendix.

(c) Turner v. Turner,[11] 1 Gow. 50. Johnson v. Sutton, 1 T. R. 545.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxii. 284. [2]Id. xxii. 53. [3]Id. iii. 297. [4]Id. iii. 396. [5]Id. ii. 152. [6]Id. xiii. 287. [7]Id. iii. 161. [8]Id. xv. 463. [9]Id. xxii. 195. [10]Id. xxix. 312. [11]Id. v. 444.

Under the New Rules probable cause is put in issue by the general plea of not guilty (d).

Where, upon an indictment for a malicious prosecution for perjury, it appeared that part of the affidavit on which perjury had been assigned had been falsely sworn, but that there was no probable cause for some assignments of perjury on some of the transactions contained in the affidavit, it was held that the action was maintainable (e); for there being no probable cause for some of the charges in the indictment, it was preferred without probable cause (f).

It is invariably necessary, in an action of this nature, to give some positive evidence, arising out of the circumstances of the prosecution, to show that it was groundless; it is insufficient to prove a mere acquittal, or even to prove any neglect or omission on the part of the defendant to make good his charge; for as was observed in the case of Purcell v. Macnamara (g),
*683 the *prosecution may have been commenced and abandoned from the purest and most laudable motives.

Thus it is not enough to show, that on an indictment of the plaintiff by the defendant for perjury, the former was acquitted upon the trial, on failure of the prosecutor's appearance when called (h); even although the facts lay within the defendant's knowledge, who, had there been the least foundation for the prosecution might have proved it (i).

Or to prove that the bill was thrown out by the grand jury (k), or that the defendant, after charging the plaintiff on oath with an assault, omitted to prefer an indictment (l).

Where the prosecutor has abandoned the prosecution without giving any evidence, and it is proved that the defendant was actuated by malicious motives in preferring the bill, although some evidence must still be given of the want of probable cause, slight evidence will be sufficient (m).

(d) Cotton v. Brown,[1] 3 Ad. & Ell. 312; 4 N. & M. 836, S. C. In an action for maliciously outlawing the plaintiff, the plea of not guilty puts in issue the existence of reasonable and probable cause, but not the reversal of the outlawry. Drummond v. Pigou,[2] 2 Bing. N. C. 114.

(e) Reed v. Taylor, 4 Taunt. 616.

(f) Per Gibbs, C. J., Reed v. Taylor, 4 Taunt. 616.

(g) 9 East, 361. [See also, Shock v. M'Chenny, 4 Yeates, 507.] Sykes v. Dunbar, cited 9 East, 363, in the note, where Lord Kenyon ruled, that it was not sufficient for the plaintiff to show his acquittal, without going farther, and giving evidence of malice in the defendant. And see Incledon v. Berry, 1 Camp. 203. Wallis v. Alpine, 1 Camp. 204, (n.) Willans v. Taylor,[3] 6 Bing. 183; [4]2 B. & Ad. 845.

(h) 9 East, 363.

(i) The circumstance, that in the particular case the facts are peculiarly within the knowledge of the prosecutor, and the proof of them within his reach, would clearly be an insufficient reason for departing from the general rule, which seems to be founded partly on the difficulty under which a defendant must often labour, in proving by other witnesses the cause which he had for instituting the prosecution. In Buller's Nisi Prius, 14, it is laid down, that where the facts are in the knowledge of the defendant himself, he must show a probable cause, though the indictment has been found by a grand jury, or the plaintiff shall recover, without proof of express malice; for this position, the case of Parrott v. Fishwick, Lond. Sitt. after Trin. T. 1772, is referred to; but from the note of this case, given 9 East, 362, it appears that where a defendant had been acquitted by verdict, Lord Mansfield, in summing up, said, "that it was not necessary to prove express malice; for if it appeared that there was no probable cause, that was sufficient to prove implied malice, which was all that was necessary to be proved to support this action. For in that case all the facts lay within the defendant's own knowledge; and if there were the least foundation for the prosecution, it was in his power and incumbent on him to prove it." Verdict for the plaintiff, damages 50*l*. It is observed by Mr. East, in the note referred to, that it was perfectly consistent with the summing up, that the plaintiff had given prima facie evidence to negative any probable cause.

(k) Byne v. Moore,[5] 1 Marsh, 12. In Nicholson v. Coghill, 4 B. & C. 23, Holroyd, J., said, that in actions for malicious prosecutions it had been held that evidence of the bill having been thrown out by the grand jury, was sufficient to warrant an inference of the absence of probable cause.

(l) Wallis v. Alpine, 1 Camp. 204.

(m) Per Le Blanc, J., Incledon v. Berry, 1 Camp. 203. In the note. [Kerr v. Workman, Addison's R. 170.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxx. 100. [2]Id. xxix. 278. [3]Id. xix. 47. [4]Id. xxii. 195. [5]Id. i. 69.

Where the defendant had preferred three bills of indictment against the plaintiff on the same charge, one of which had been found on his own testimony, and he abandoned the last indictment at the time of trial, after it had been pending three years, it was held to be sufficient primâ facie evidence of the want of probable cause (n).

In an action against a magistrate for a malicious conviction, the question is not whether there was probable cause in fact for convicting, but whether he had any probable cause for convicting; and for this purpose, what passed before him upon the hearing is not only proper, but essential evidence with a view to the question of malice (o). It is also incumbent on the plaintiff to prove the existence of malice, as well as the want of probable cause (A).

The existence of malice is usually (p) a question of fact for the jury. Malice (1).

*The proof of malice in this action (as has already been observed) usually *684 results from the want of probable cause, which when once established affords a strong presumption of malice (q). Evidence as to the conduct of the defendant in the course of the transaction, his declarations on the subject, and any forwardness and activity in exposing the plaintiff by a publication of the proceedings, is properly adduced to prove malice (r) (2). It seems also, that the plaintiff may give in evidence the proof adduced by

(n) Willans v. Taylor, 6 Bing. 183.

(o) Burley v. Bethune,[1] 5 Taunt. 580. [See Kennedy v. Terrill, Hardin, 490. Moore v. Vidorl, 6 Munf. 273.]

(p) See Johnstone v. Sutton, 1 T. R. 513. [Ray v. Law, 1 Peters R. 210. Munns v. Dupont, 2 Browne's R. Appx. 42. Somner v. Wilts, 4 Serg. & R. 19.] Yet there may be cases so circumstanced, that though the Courts might not go so far as to infer malice in point of law, without the aid of a jury, yet they would leave it to the jury to imply malice, Brookes v. Warwick,[2] 2 Starkie's C. 389. See also Isaacs v. Brand,[6] 2 Starkie's C. 167. Supra, Vol. I. tit. Law and Fact. The defendant had held the plaintiff to bail, as administratrix, for a debt due from the estate; and upon the trial of the action for maliciously holding to bail, the plaintiff relied wholly on the mere fact of her having been held to bail when she was not liable to arrest, and gave no extrinsic evidence of malice. The jury having found a verdict for the plaintiff, with five shillings damages, the Court, upon a motion for a new trial, doubted whether the very fact of holding the party to bail, under such circumstances, was not evidence from which malice was to be implied, and refused to disturb the verdict. Fletcher v. Webb, 11 Price, 381.

(q) No evidence of malice can be more cogent than that the defendant knew that the plaintiff was innocent. Purcell v. Macnamara, 9 East, 361; Burley v. Bethune,[1] 5 Taunt. 583. Turner v. Gow, 20. The want of probable cause is not conclusive as to malice. Mitchell v. Jenkins,[4] 5 B & Ad. 558. 2 N. & M. 301.

(r) Str. 691. So it has been held that evidence of malevolent misconduct by the defendant towards the plaintiff, tending to show evil motives after the prosecution, is admissible. Caddy v. Barlow,[5] 1 M. & Ry. 275. The plaintiff having been taken into custody on a criminal charge, offers bail before the magistrate, to which the prosecutor objects; a letter purporting to have been written by a Judge, on reading which the magistrate was induced to admit the plaintiff to bail, is evidence merely to show that the magistrate refused bail till so induced, without proof that the letter was written by the Judge. Taylor v. Willans,[6] 10 B. & C. 845. And in order to show that the prosecutor took steps to prevent a person from becoming bail, an affidavit made by the attorney's clerk was put in, as showing that those who conducted the prosecution had taken means to prevent a person becoming bail for A. This was held to be admissible, without calling the clerk to prove an authority from his master to make the affidavit. Taylor v. Willans,[6] (in error,) 2 B. & Ad. 845. It has been held that in order to support the averment of malice, it must be shown that the charge is wilfully false. Cohen v. Morgan,[7] 6 D. & R. 9, cor. Abbott, C. J.; this doctrine does not seem to be warranted by the authorities.

(A) (If a man prosecute another for real guilt, no matter how malicious his motive may be, he is not liable in an action for malicious prosecution, nor is he liable if he prosecute him from apparent guilt, arising from circumstances which he honestly believes. Plummer v. Gheen, 3 Hawks. 66.)

(1) [Grand jurors are not liable to an action for malicious prosecution for information given by them to their fellows, upon which a presentment is founded. Black v. Sugg, Hardin, 556.]

(2) [Where the plaintiff gives evidence of the conversation of the defendant to show malice, the defendant may prove by the committing magistrate what he swore before him. Guerrant v. Tinder, Gilmer, 36. And where the magistrate records the prosecutor's testimony, the plaintiff may give such parol evidence of this testimony as is consistent with the written statement, and tends to a more exact specification. Watt v. Greenlee, 2 Murphey, 246.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. i. 196. [2]Id. iii. 396. [3]Id. iii. 297. [4]Id. xxvii. 131. [5]Id. xvii. 252. [6]Id. xxii. 195. [7]Id. xvi. 250.

Under the New Rules probable cause is put in issue by the general plea of not guilty (d).

Where, upon an indictment for a malicious prosecution for perjury, it appeared that part of the affidavit on which perjury had been assigned had been falsely sworn, but that there was no probable cause for some assignments of perjury on some of the transactions contained in the affidavit, it was held that the action was maintainable (e); for there being no probable cause for some of the charges in the indictment, it was preferred without probable cause (f).

It is invariably necessary, in an action of this nature, to give some positive evidence, arising out of the circumstances of the prosecution, to show that it was groundless; it is insufficient to prove a mere acquittal, or even to prove any neglect or omission on the part of the defendant to make good his charge; for as was observed in the case of Purcell v. Macnamara (g),
*683 the *prosecution may have been commenced and abandoned from the purest and most laudable motives.

Thus it is not enough to show, that on an indictment of the plaintiff by the defendant for perjury, the former was acquitted upon the trial, on failure of the prosecutor's appearance when called (h); even although the facts lay within the defendant's knowledge, who, had there been the least foundation for the prosecution might have proved it (i).

Or to prove that the bill was thrown out by the grand jury (k), or that the defendant, after charging the plaintiff on oath with an assault, omitted to prefer an indictment (l).

Where the prosecutor has abandoned the prosecution without giving any evidence, and it is proved that the defendant was actuated by malicious motives in preferring the bill, although some evidence must still be given of the want of probable cause, slight evidence will be sufficient (m).

(d) Cotton v. Brown,[1] 3 Ad. & Ell. 312; 4 N. & M. 836, S. C. In an action for maliciously outlawing the plaintiff, the plea of not guilty puts in issue the existence of reasonable and probable cause, but not the reversal of the outlawry. Drummond v. Pigou,[2] 2 Bing. N. C. 114.

(e) Reed v. Taylor, 4 Taunt. 616.

(f) Per Gibbs, C. J., Reed v. Taylor, 4 Taunt. 616.

(g) 9 East, 361. [See also, Shock v. M'Chenny, 4 Yeates, 507.] Sykes v. Dunbar, cited 9 East, 363, in the note, where Lord Kenyon ruled, that it was not sufficient for the plaintiff to show his acquittal, without going farther, and giving evidence of malice in the defendant. And see Incledon v. Berry, 1 Camp. 203. Wallis v. Alpine, 1 Camp. 204, (n.) Willans v. Taylor,[3] 6 Bing. 183; 4 B. & Ad. 845.

(h) 9 East, 363.

(i) The circumstance, that in the particular case the facts are peculiarly within the knowledge of the prosecutor, and the proof of them within his reach, would clearly be an insufficient reason for departing from the general rule, which seems to be founded partly on the difficulty under which a defendant must often labour, in proving by other witnesses the cause which he had for instituting the prosecution. In Buller's Nisi Prius, 14, it is laid down, that where the facts are in the knowledge of the defendant himself, he must show a probable cause, though the indictment has been found by a grand jury, or the plaintiff shall recover, without proof of express malice; for this position, the case of Parrott v. Fishwick, Lond. Sitt. after Trin. T. 1772, is referred to; but from the note of this case, given 9 East, 362, it appears that where a defendant had been acquitted by verdict, Lord Mansfield, in summing up, said, "that it was not necessary to prove express malice; for if it appeared that there was no probable cause, that was sufficient to prove implied malice, which was all that was necessary to be proved to support this action. For in that case all the facts lay within the defendant's own knowledge; and if there were the least foundation for the prosecution, it was in his power and incumbent on him to prove it." Verdict for the plaintiff, damages 50*l*. It is observed by Mr. East, in the note referred to, that it was perfectly consistent with the summing up, that the plaintiff had given prima facie evidence to negative any probable cause.

(k) Byne v. Moore,[5] 1 Marsh, 12. In Nicholson v. Coghill, 4 B. & C. 23, Holroyd, J., said, that in actions for malicious prosecutions it had been held that evidence of the bill having been thrown out by the grand jury, was sufficient to warrant an inference of the absence of probable cause.

(l) Wallis v. Alpine, 1 Camp. 204.

(m) Per Le Blanc, J., Incledon v. Berry, 1 Camp. 203. In the note. [Kerr v. Workman, Addison's R. 170.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxx. 100. [2]Id. xxix. 278. [3]Id. xix. 47. [4]Id. xxii. 195. [5]Id. i. 69.

Where the defendant had preferred three bills of indictment against the plaintiff on the same charge, one of which had been found on his own testimony, and he abandoned the last indictment at the time of trial, after it had been pending three years, it was held to be sufficient primâ facie evidence of the want of probable cause (n).

In an action against a magistrate for a malicious conviction, the question is not whether there was probable cause in fact for convicting, but whether he had any probable cause for convicting; and for this purpose, what passed before him upon the hearing is not only proper, but essential evidence with a view to the question of malice (o). It is also incumbent on the plaintiff to prove the existence of malice, as well as the want of probable cause (A).

The existence of malice is usually (p) a question of fact for the jury. Malice (1).

*The proof of malice in this action (as has already been observed) usually *684 results from the want of probable cause, which when once established affords a strong presumption of malice (q). Evidence as to the conduct of the defendant in the course of the transaction, his declarations on the subject, and any forwardness and activity in exposing the plaintiff by a publication of the proceedings, is properly adduced to prove malice (r) (2). It seems also, that the plaintiff may give in evidence the proof adduced by

(n) Willans v. Taylor, 6 Bing. 183.

(o) Burley v. Bethune,[1] 5 Taunt. 580. [See Kennedy v. Terrill, Hardin, 490. Moore v. Vidorl, 6 Munf. 273.]

(p) See Johnstone v. Sutton, 1 T. R. 513. [Ray v. Law, 1 Peters R. 210. Munns v. Dupont, 2 Browne's R. Appx. 42. Somner v. Wilts, 4 Serg. & R. 19.] Yet there may be cases so circumstanced, that though the Courts might not go so far as to infer malice in point of law, without the aid of a jury, yet they would leave it to the jury to imply malice, Brookes v. Warwick,[2] 2 Starkie's C. 389. See also Isaacs v. Brand,[6] 2 Starkie's C. 167. Supra, Vol. I. tit. Law and Fact. The defendant had held the plaintiff to bail, as administratrix, for a debt due from the estate; and upon the trial of the action for maliciously holding to bail, the plaintiff relied wholly on the mere fact of her having been held to bail when she was not liable to arrest, and gave no extrinsic evidence of malice. The jury having found a verdict for the plaintiff, with five shillings damages, the Court, upon a motion for a new trial, doubted whether the very fact of holding the party to bail, under such circumstances, was not evidence from which malice was to be implied, and refused to disturb the verdict. Fletcher v. Webb, 11 Price, 381.

(q) No evidence of malice can be more cogent than that the defendant knew that the plaintiff was innocent. Purcell v. Macnamara, 9 East, 361; Burley v. Bethune,[1] 5 Taunt. 583. Turner v. Gow, 20. The want of probable cause is not conclusive as to malice. Mitchell v. Jenkins,[4] 5 B & Ad. 558. 2 N. & M. 301.

(r) Str. 691. So it has been held that evidence of malevolent misconduct by the defendant towards the plaintiff, tending to show evil motives after the prosecution, is admissible. Caddy v. Barlow,[5] 1 M. & Ry. 275. The plaintiff having been taken into custody on a criminal charge, offers bail before the magistrate, to which the prosecutor objects; a letter purporting to have been written by a Judge, on reading which the magistrate was induced to admit the plaintiff to bail, is evidence merely to show that the magistrate refused bail till so induced, without proof that the letter was written by the Judge. Taylor v. Willans,[6] 10 B. & C. 845. And in order to show that the prosecutor took steps to prevent a person from becoming bail, an affidavit made by the attorney's clerk was put in, as showing that those who conducted the prosecution had taken means to prevent a person becoming bail for A. This was held to be admissible, without calling the clerk to prove an authority from his master to make the affidavit. Taylor v. Willans,[6] (in error,) 2 B. & Ad. 845. It has been held that in order to support the averment of malice, it must be shown that the charge is wilfully false. Cohen v. Morgan,[7] 6 D. & R. 9, cor. Abbott, C. J.; this doctrine does not seem to be warranted by the authorities.

(A) (If a man prosecute another for real guilt, no matter how malicious his motive may be, he is not liable in an action for malicious prosecution, nor is he liable if he prosecute him from apparent guilt, arising from circumstances which he honestly believes. Plummer v. Gheen, 3 Hawks. 66.)

(1) [Grand jurors are not liable to an action for malicious prosecution for information given by them to their fellows, upon which a presentment is founded. Black v. Sugg, Hardin, 556.]

(2) [Where the plaintiff gives evidence of the conversation of the defendant to show malice, the defendant may prove by the committing magistrate what he swore before him. Guerrant v. Tinder, Gilmer, 36. And where the magistrate records the prosecutor's testimony, the plaintiff may give such parol evidence of this testimony as is consistent with the written statement, and tends to a more exact specification. Watt v. Greenlee, 2 Murphey, 246.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. i. 196. [2]Id. iii. 396. [3]Id. iii. 297. [4]Id. xxvii. 131. [5]Id. xvii. 252. [6]Id. xxii. 195. [7]Id. xvi. 250.

the defendant on the trial of the charge (s). So he may give in evidence publications by the defendant on the subject of the charge (t).

Where the prosecution was against the plaintiff and another, the plaintiff may, as part of the res gesta and to show the animus of the defendant, give in evidence misconduct in the transaction against the other party indicted (u).

Where the defendant, a Bank inspector, had procured the plaintiff, a tradesman, to be taken into custody on a charge of having in his possession a forged bank-note, without legal excuse, because he had refused, after paying the amount to the person to whom he had paid it away, to deliver it up to the inspector, Lord Ellenborough held that the pressing a commitment, under such circumstances, was such crassa ignorantia that it amounted to malice (v).

*685 *The defendant may give in evidence any facts which show that he had probable cause for prosecuting, and that he acted bonâ fide upon that ground of suspicion. It is no answer to the action that the defendant acted upon the opinion of counsel, if the statement of facts upon which the opinion was founded was incorrect, or the opinion itself unwarranted (x) (1).

If it appear that the jury, upon the trial of the plaintiff, entertained doubts upon the evidence, and deliberated as to his guilt after the case was concluded, the fact is, it seems, evidence of a probable cause (y).

It is obviously of importance to prove that a felony has been committed (z), and to be prepared with proof of such circumstances as tend to throw suspicion on the plaintiff (a) (2). This, however, would probably be deemed to be insufficient in case of express proof that the defendant knew that the prosecution was without foundation.

In the case of Johnson v. Browning (b), where it appeared that no one

(s) B. N. P. 13, 14.

(t) Chambers v. Robinson, Str. 691, where the plaintiff gave in evidence an advertisement published by the defendant pending the prosecution of an indictment for perjury, though an information had been granted; but the Chief Justice informed the jury that they were not to consider it in damages, but only as a circumstance of malice.

(u) Caddy v. Barlow,[1] 1 M. & Ry. 275.

(v) Brookes v. Warwick,[2] 2 Starkie's C. 389. The plaintiff had taken the note in the usual course of business, and paid it in the usual course to B. The note being stopped at the bank, was stamped as a forgery, and brought by an inspector to the plaintiff. The plaintiff paid the amount to B., and refused to give it up to the inspector, insisting on his right to retain it. The inspector, without any ground for suspicion, charged the plaintiff with feloniously having the note in his possession, without lawful excuse. The case was very pertinaciously pressed on the part of the plaintiff, although Lord Ellenborough had, early in the cause, expressed a strong opinion on the subject, and left it to the jury upon the ground of malice. The jury found for the plaintiff, damages 50*l.*

(x) Hewlett v. Crutchley,[3] 5 Taunt. 277.

(y) In Smith v. Macdonald, 3 Esp. C. 7, Lord Kenyon held, that if the jury paused before they acquitted the plaintiff upon his trial for the offence, he should hold that there was probable cause for the prosecution. It does not appear whether in that case the evidence rested upon the testimony of the prosecutor, the defendant in action. It is also to be observed, that there was no evidence to negative probable cause, a circumstance in itself sufficient to warrant a nonsuit. See also Lilwal v. Smallman, Selw. N. P. 946. Golding v. Crowle, B. N. P. 14.

(z) In Johnson v. Browning, 6 Mod. 216, Lord Holt seems to have considered this proof to be essential to the defence; but it seems to be a good defence to prove reasonable grounds for suspecting the guilt of the plaintiff, although no felony was committed. See Samuel v. Payne, Dougl. 345. Ledwith v. Catchpole, Cald. 291. Supra, 601.

(a) See Knight v. Germain, Cro. Eliz. 134. Pain v. Rochester, Cro. Eliz. 871.

(b) 6 Mod. 216. In B. N. P. 14, citing Cobb v. Carr, it is said, that the defendant's evidence of what he

(1) [Moody v. Pender, 2 Hayw. 29.]

(2) [In an action for malicious prosecution, papers taken by a magistrate from the person of the plaintiff, and used upon an indictment against him, and which are in the possession of the defendant, may be read upon the trial. Munns v. Dupont, 3 Wash. C. C. R. 31.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xvii. 252. [2] Id. iii. 396. [3] Id. iii. 396.

was present at the time of the supposed robbery but the wife of the defendant in the action, Lord Holt admitted evidence of what she swore at the trial of the indictment; but it is obvious that this was done under the impression that it was incumbent on the defendant to establish the fact of probable cause, although no evidence were given to establish the negative.

Where the plaintiff has been arrested on a charge of larceny, it has been doubted whether the defendant, after having given some evidence of probable cause, can give evidence to prove that the plaintiff was a man of bad character (c); but it seems that although such evidence affords no presumption of probable cause in the particular instance (d), yet that it is matter admissible in mitigation of damages.

3dly. The damage sustained.—The plaintiff may prove, in aggravation of damages, the length of imprisonment, his expenses, situation, and circumstances. The peril and jeopardy in which a man's life and liberty are placed by a malicious prosecution, or the prejudice to his fame and reputation, constitute a sufficient ground of action (e); so although neither his *fame nor liberty be affected, if he has been put to needless expense to defend himself (f). In the assessment of damages, the costs incurred by the plaintiff are to be estimated as between attorney and client (g) (1). Damage (A). *686

If a man be falsely and maliciously indicted of a crime which is a scandal to him, and hurts his fame, an action lies, although the indictment be insufficient, or an ignoramus be found (h); for although no expense may have been incurred, the mischief of the slander has been effected (i).

Upon the execution of a writ of inquiry, where the defendant in an action for slander has allowed judgment to go by default, it is not incumbent on the plaintiff to give any evidence. The jury, in the absence of evidence of damage, are not confined to nominal damages (k).

In a joint action against several, the jury cannot assess several damages (l).

In an action for a malicious arrest the plaintiff must prove the arrest, the determination of the suit, the want of probable cause, and the defendant's malice, and the damages sustained (m).

swore upon the trial of the indictment is evidence: this however, does not seem to be warranted; for if the principle of necessity operated in such a case, the effect would be to admit the testimony of the defendant himself, by which means the plaintiff would have the benefit of a cross-examination.

(c) In the case of Rodriguez v. Tadmire, 2 Esp. C. 721, Lord Kenyon admitted general evidence to that effect. In Newsam v. Carr,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 69, cor. Wood, B., where a witness was asked whether the plaintiff's house had not been searched on former occasions, and whether he was not a man of suspicious character, Wood, B. overruled the question, observing, that in actions of slander such evidence would be admissible to mitigate the damages, but that in the present case it would afford no evidence of probable cause.

(d) Ibid. (e) Savill v. Roberts, B. N. P. 13.

(f) B. N. P. 14. This was formerly doubted. Ibid. But it has been decided, that such an action lies by the husband for the expense of defending his wife. B. N. P. 13. Jones v. Gwynn, 10 Mod. 214; 1 Salk. 15; Gilb. 185.

(g) Sandbank v. Thomas,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 306. But see Sinclair v. Eldred, 4 Taunt. 7.

(h) Savill v. Roberts, B. N. P. 13. Chambers v. Robinson, Stra. 691.

(i) Ibid. (k) Tripp v Thomas,[3] 3 B. & C. 427.

(l) Lowfield v. Banckcroft, Str. 910; B. N. P. 15, 93. Contra, Lane v. Santeloe, B. N. P. 15; Stra. 79.

(m) Or so much as is put in issue by the pleadings, under the new rules.

(A) (In Pennsylvania, where the jury in an action for malicious prosecution, have not expressly stated that they assessed only single damages, the court cannot double them. Campbell v. Finney, 3 Watts, 84.—The defendant may give in evidence in mitigation of damages, that after the prosecution instituted by him, the character of the plaintiff was bad upon subjects unconnected with the felony for which he was prosecuted. Bastick v. Rutherford, 4 Hawks, 83.)

(1) [This action cannot be maintained for the ordinary costs and expenses of a defence, without an arrest or some special damage. Potts v. Imlay, 1 Southard's Rep. 330. No action lies to recover of a prosecutor the money expended by the plaintiff in defending against an indictment. Fleet v. M'Intire, 1 Coxe's Rep. 161.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 249. [2] Id. ii. 401. [3] Id. x. 139.

Malicious arrest. Proof of the arrest.

In an action for a malicious arrest, the plaintiff must be prepared to prove the affidavit made by the defendant, either by means of the affidavit itself, or proof of an examined copy; the former, it is said, is the better course (n). He must also prove an examined copy of the writ and return, and produce and prove the warrant of the sheriff made by virtue of the writ (o), and the arrest and detention under it. The official return made by the sheriff is evidence of the fact for either party (p).

Where the plaintiff alleged that he was arrested under and by virtue of a plaint for debt, in the Sheriff's Court, it was held to be proved by evidence that the plaint was entered, and that the officer in consequence arrested the plaintiff, having first received a paper, in the nature of a warrant, containing the parol directions of the sheriff, which were good by custom, although the stat. 12 Geo. 1 requires an affidavit of debt, which had been made (q).

The arrest may be proved by the sheriff's officer (r).

*687 *Where the declaration alleged a malicious arrest, and the imprisonment of the plaintiff until he was forced to give bail; and it appeared in evidence that, on a message sent by the officer, informing the plaintiff that he had a warrant against him, he went to the officer's house and executed a bail-bond; it was held that there was no evidence of arrest, and that as the allegations were not divisible, the variance was fatal (s). But to support an allegation that the defendant held the plaintiff to bail, it is sufficient to show that the plaintiff, on being informed of the writ, went to the officer's house and gave bail (t).

The determination of the action (u) must also be proved by means of an (n) Peake's Ev. 330. See Webb v. Herne, 1 B. & P. 289, where the plaintiff, having in an action against the sheriff alleged that I. S. was arrested under a writ indorsed for bail, by virtue of an affidavit filed of record, it was held that the allegation must be proved. See Casburn v. Reid, 2 B. Moore, 60; B. N. P. 14. Crook v. Dowling, 3 Doug. 75. Rees v. Bowen, 1 M'Clelland & Y. 392. R. v. James, 1 Show. 397. Buller, J. held that the writ indorsed was sufficient evidence of the holding to bail. Rogers v. Ilscomb, 2 Esp. C. 38.

(o) As to this proof, see tit. SHERIFF. In an action for maliciously holding to bail, the bare production of the writ by a person who received it in a letter, will not entitle the plaintiff to have it read. Jackson v. Burleigh, 3 Esp. C. 34. Secus, after proof of the affidavit to hold to bail, and of the warrant founded upon the writ. Ibid.

(p) Gyfford v. Woodgate, 11 East, 297; supra, Vol. I. Contra, Lloyd v. Harris, Peake's C. 174. It is not sufficient to prove the arrest, and return of cepi corpus, without proof of the warrant. Lloyd v. Harris, Peake's C. 174. See Drake v. Sykes, 7 T. R. 113. [2 Phil. Ev. 116.]

(q) Arundel v. White, 14 East, 216.

(r) If a bailiff, having process against one who is on horseback, or in a coach, say, "you are my prisoner, I have a writ against you;" on which he submits, turns back, or goes with him; though the bailiff never touch him, it is an arrest, because he submitted to the process; but if, instead of going with the bailiff, he had gone or fled from him, it could be no arrest, unless the bailiff had laid hold of him. Herner v. Batty, (n.) B. N. P. 62. See below, tit. TRESPASS; and Berry v. Adamson,[1] 6 B. & C. 528. Gage v. Radford,[2] 3 C. & P. 464. Crainger v. Hill,[3] 4 Bing. N. C. 412.

(s) Berry v. Adamson,[4] 2 C. & P. 503. Where the officer told the plaintiff that he had a warrant against him at the suit of the defendant, and did not touch him, but took his word that he would put in bail; and the plaintiff, giving him a small gratuity, asked him to go to his attorney and desire him to put in bail, which he did, and bail was put in; L. C. J. Tenterden said, that it was the strong inclination of his opinion that it was not a sufficient arrest to sustain the action for a malicious arrest. George v. Radford,[5] 1 Mood. & M. C. 244.

(t) Small v. Grey,[6] 2 C. & P. 605.

(u) When the action is put an end to by a stet processus by consent of the parties, no action for a malicious arrest can be supported. Wilkinson v. Howell,[7] 1 Mood. & M. C. 493. In an action for maliciously suing out a commission of bankrupt, it must be averred and proved that the commission was superseded before the commencement of the action; and if this fact be not proved, the plaintiff ought to be nonsuited, though it was not averred in the declaration, and though the defendant, who might have demurred for the omission, had not done so. Whitworth v. Hall,[8] 2 B. & Ad. 695. Proof that no declaration was filed or delivered within one year after the return of the writ is sufficient. Pierce v. Street,[9] 3 B. & Ad. 396.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiii. 245. [2]Id. xiv. 391. [3]Id. xxxiii. 328. [4]Id. xii. 235. [5]Id. xiv. 391. [6]Id. xii. 284. [7]Id. xxii. 368. [8]Id. xxii. 173. [9]Id. xxiii. 102.

examined copy of the entry on the record (1). Proof of the rule of court to discontinue, and of the taxation and payment of costs, is sufficient evidence of the determination of the action (x). But it is said that proof of an order made by a Judge to stay proceedings is insufficient, although the costs have been taxed and paid (y). Determination of the action.

The not declaring for a year after the return of the writ, is evidence of the determination of the suit, under an averment that the plaintiff did not declare, but permitted the suit to be discontinued (z).

A stet processus by consent is not such a determination as will support the action (a).

Where it appeared to be the practice in the Sheriff's Court in London, upon the abandonment of a suit by the plaintiff, to make an entry in the *minute-book of "withdrawn by the plaintiff's order," opposite to the entry of the plaint, it was held that proof of such an entry was sufficient to prove the determination of the suit (b). *688

Where the declaration, in stating a judgment by default, stated "and thereupon it was considered by the said Court of K. B. that the plaintiffs should take nothing by their said writ, but that they and their pledges to prosecute should be in mercy, &c., as by the record and proceedings thereof, &c., now fully appear, and the said action was and is thereby wholly ended and determined," it was held to be no variance, although the record produced wanted the words "and their pledges to prosecute," but only an &c., and that as the substance of the allegation was the discontinuance of the former suit, those words might be rejected as surplusage (c). Variance.

Where the declaration alleged a plaint against the defendant at the Sheriff's Court in London, it was held to be supported by proof of a plaint before one of the sheriffs (d).

An allegation of an arrest is satisfied by evidence of a detainer (e).

(x) Bristow v. Haywood,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 48. Brandt v. Peacock,[2] 1 B. & C. 649. Gadd v. Bennett, 5 Price, 540. So if the proceedings be stayed by rule of court, though the rule has been obtained on the affidavit of the party. Brooke v. Carpenter,[3] 3 Bing. 297. The Court held it to be receivable on the ground of necessity. An averment that the defendants did not prosecute their suit, but therein made default, and their pledges were in mercy, &c. is not proved by the production of a will to discontinue. Webb v. Hill,[4] M. & M. 253.

(y) Kirk v. French, 1 Esp. C. 80, on the ground that the evidence is not the best which the case admits of; but note, that a juror was withdrawn in that case, and Lord Kenyon seems to have entertained doubts. See Austin v. Debnam,[5] 3 B. & C. 140. An order from the Lord Chancellor for superseding a commission is not evidence, in an action for maliciously suing it out, to show that it has been superseded; a supersedeas under the great seal must be produced. Poynton v. Forster, 3 Camp. 58; [and Mr. Howe's note to the case.] See Barton v. Mills, Cas. temp. Hardw. 125, 6.

(z) Pierce v. Street, 3 B. & Ad. 396.

(a) Wilkinson v. Howell, M. & M. 295. For such a termination does not afford prima facie evidence of the essential to the action, that the former suit was without foundation.

(b) Arundel v. White, 14 East, 318. In an action for maliciously suing out a commission of bankruptcy, it must be averred that before the commencement of the action the commission was superseded. Whitworth v. Hall,[6] 2 B. & Ad. 695. The supersedeas alone is not sufficient evidence of the want of probable cause. Hay v. Weakly,[7] 5 C. & P. 361. An allegation of nonsuit is not proved by showing a rule to discontinue. Webb v. Hill,[8] M. & M. 253; Supra. The mere acceptance of debt and costs, as awarded by the prothonotary on reference to him, under a rule, without the intervention of the Court, does not show a determination of the suit. Per Pattison, J., Combe v. Capron, 1 Mo. & R. 398.

(c) Judge v. Morgan, 13 East, 547.

(d) Arundel v. White, 14 East, 216. So the Assize Courts may be stated indifferently to be held, either before both the Judges of Assize, or before the one who in fact sat at the time; per Lord Ellenborough, Ibid.; and R. v. Alford, Leach's C. C. L. 179.

(e) Whalley v. Pepper,[9] 7 C. & P. 506.

(1) [In an action for a malicious prosecution in a foreign country, it is not indispensably necessary to produce a copy of the record of the proceedings there, but the plaintiff may prove them by other evidence. Young v. Gregory, 3 Call. 446.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 289. [2]Id. viii. 172. [3]Id. xi. 108. [4]Id. xiv. 403. [5]Id. x. 37. [6]Id. xxii. 173. [7]Id. xxiv. 361. [8]Id. xiv. 403. [9]Id. xxxii. 603.

It lies on the plaintiff to prove that the arrest was malicious, and without reasonable or probable cause (f) (1). And it seems that if the defendant act merely through mistake, and without actual malice, the action is not *689 *maintainable (g). It is not sufficient to show that the action was non-prossed (h), or that the defendant in the former action took a less sum out of Court (i); or that an action on a bill, in respect of which the present plaintiff had been discharged by the laches of the present defendant, had been discontinued (j).

But where the defendant arrested the plaintiff for money paid to his use, but did not declare till he was ruled to do so, and soon discontinued his action, and paid the costs, it was held to be evidence to go to a jury of malice, and the want of probable cause (k).

(f) Reasonable or probable cause may, it seems, be either a question of law or of fact; supra, 680. But see the Appendix, 680, 688. Where the defendant, being the indorser of a bill of exchange, arrested the plaintiff as the acceptor of the bill, when in fact he was not the acceptor, but was of the same name and address, and upon being applied to denied that it was his acceptance, but it did not appear that the defendant was informed that he so disclaimed the bill, Lord Tenterden, on an action for a malicious arrest, nonsuited the plaintiff, observing, "the defendants may have been careless, they certainly were mistaken, but I can see no appearance of mulice in their conduct. How can I say that they were without reasonable cause for what they did? It does not even appear that they were informed that the plaintiff, on presentment, disclaimed the acceptance." Spencer v. Jacob,[1] 1 M. & M. 280. In an action for maliciously holding the plaintiff to bail on a bill, held, that whatever was admissible in the action on the bill, was also admissible in that action; the judgment in the original action would not be sufficient; the plaintiff was therefore entitled to show that the defendant at the time of the action brought, was the holder of the bill as indorsee after it was once due, and that the bill was a mere accommodation bill, and that the defendant therefore had no right of action against the plaintiff on it. Haddon v. Mills,[2] 4 C. & P. 487. Where the defendant was arrested for 327*l*., after a tender of 250*l*. and upon a reference, the arbitrator awarded the latter sum only, held that the defendant himself, not trusting to the sufficiency of his tender, but having paid it into Court, it was not to be deemed a vexatious arrest, within the 43 Geo. 3, c. 46, to entitle him to costs. Sherwood v. Taylor,[3] 6 Bing. 280. Upon the 43 Geo. 3, c. 46, s. 3, it is sufficient to entitle the defendant to costs, that the plaintiff had no reasonable or probable cause for arresting the defendant for the amount; it is not necessary that the arrest should have been malicious. Doulan v. Brett,[4] 10 B. & C. 117. So where there could be no debt until the period of audit had expired, held that till then there could be no reasonable cause for arresting the defendant to that amount. Day v. Picton, 10 B. & C. 120.

(g) Bicton v. Burridge, 3 Camp. 140. But in that case, on the plaintiff's informing the officer who had the writ to execute, that he did not owe the debt, the officer did not actually arrest the plaintiff, who afterwards needlessly incurred expense by putting in bail. The same was held where the defendant, through mistake, and without malice, caused another to be arrested as the indorsee of a bill of exchange. Spencer v. Jacob,[5] M. & M. 180.

(h) Sinclair v. Eldred, 4 Taunt. 7. [See Ray v. Law, 1 Peters, 210.] But in a previous case of Hamilton v. Beddell, cor. Pratt, C. J., 4 July, 1756, Beareroft's MSS. 22, Roscoe on Ev. 406, it was held that the defendant's suffering the former action to be non-prossed was sufficient prima facie evidence of malice; and Pratt, C. J., is reported to have said, "Here the defendant's never proceeding and suffering a non-pros, is, in my opinion, prima facie evidence of malice. I hold most clearly, that the affidavit, bail, and non-pros, make up sufficient prima facie evidence to call for a defence."

(i) Jackson v. Burleigh, 3 Esp. C. 311, cor. Lord Kenyon.

(j) Bristow v. Haywood,[6] 1 Starkie's C. 48.

(k) Nicholson v. Coghill,[7] 4 B. & C. 21. Webb v. Hill, M. & M. 254.

(1) [Demanding excessive bail where there is a good cause of action, or holding to bail when there is no cause of action, if done for the purpose of vexation, entitles the party to an action. Ray v. Law, 1 Peters, 210. So maliciously (and for the purpose of vexing, distressing and impoverishing the plaintiff) directing an officer to levy a much greater sum than is due on a judgment obtained by the defendant against the plaintiff, and causing the officer so to levy and sell the plaintiff's goods to an amount exceeding the sum due. Somner v. Wilt, 4 Serg. & Rawle, 19.

Pleading the truth of the words in justification, in an action of slander, does not so admit probable cause as to preclude the party so pleading from showing the want of it in an action, for a vexatious suit, against the party suing him. Sterling v. Adams & al. 3 Day, 411. Where the declaration is for a vexatious suit and holding to bail in one action only, the records of other actions brought by the same defendant against the same plaintiff cannot be given in evidence. Ray v. Law, 1 Peters, 207. Where the declaration in such action states that the sum demanded as bail in the vexatious suit, was indorsed on the writ, no other evidence but the indorsement can be given in evidence to show that such bail was demanded. Ibid. Sed vide Munns v. Dupont & al. Wharton's Digest, 5.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxii. 284. [2] Id. xix. 487. [3] Id. xix. 84. [4] Id. xxi. 37. [5] Id. xxii. 284. [6] Id. ii. 289. [7] Id. x. 269.

It is evidence of malice that the defendant sued out the writ after a release of the debt (l); but it is not sufficient to show that the writ was sued out after payment of the debt to the defendant's agent, upon an affidavit made before the payment, without proof of malice (m).

The action lies for maliciously arresting an attorney in practice, knowing him to be an attorney, although he owes a large sum to the defendant (n).

It seems that if the plaintiff allege that the defendant had no cause of action against him, upon which by law he could be held to bail, proof of a cause of action, to a bailable amount, would be an answer to the action, and that the plaintiff ought to have declared specially (o). But where the declaration was in that form, and it appeared that the defendant's affidavit was for money had and received, and money paid, and that he had a claim to the amount of 100*l.* for commission on the sale of timber, and that on the general balance of account he was indebted in a large sum to the plaintiff, the action was held to be maintainable (p). Malice.

In an action for maliciously refusing to sign an authority to the sheriff to discharge a defendant out of custody, on tender of the debt and costs, the refusal to sign the discharge is primâ facie evidence of malice, in the absence of any circumstances to rebut the presumption (q).

*If one of two parties, between whom there are transactions of mutual account, arrest the other for the whole amount due on one side, without deducting what is due on the other, the arrest is malicious (r). *690

If a party having laid his case fairly before counsel, acts bonâ fide upon the opinion given, he is not liable to an action for acting bonâ fide on that opinion, however erroneous it may be. But it is otherwise where he does not act bonâ fide on the opinion, but arrests though he believes that he has no cause of action (s); whether he did so or not, is a question of fact for the jury (t).

Where the defendant, after arresting the plaintiff, did not declare until he was urged by the plaintiff, and shortly after that discontinued, it was held to be sufficient evidence of malice for the consideration of the jury (u). Where the defendant held the plaintiff to bail, when she was liable as ad-

(l) Waterer v. Freeman, Hob. 267.

(m) Gibson v. Chater, 2 B. & P. 129. Note, in that case the Court were of opinion that the circumstances excluded the inference of malice. Vide infra, 499, note (c).

(n) Whally v. Pepper,[1] 7 C. & P. 506. And the defendant's attorney is liable to be joined in the action, if, besides acting as an attorney, he co-operated in the arrest. Ib.

(o) Wilkinson v. Mawby, cited 1 Camp. 297; Wetherden v. Embden, 1 Camp. 295; Savil v. Roberts, 1 Salk. 14.

(p) Wetherden v. Embden, 1 Camp. 295; cor. Sir J. Mansfield.

(q) Crozer v. Pilling,[2] 4 B. & C. 26. Payment of the debt and costs to the landlord or sheriff, does not discharge the defendant, Ib.; and Taylor v. Baker, 2 Lev. 203. Slackford v. Austen, 14 East, 468. A defendant is not bound to pay money to the sheriff, but to the party. Norton's Case, 2 Show. 139. But see Whally v. Pepper,[1] 7 C. & P. 506; where it was held, that the question was, whether the former plaintiff had a probable cause of action for the amount for which he held the party to bail, not whether he had a probable cause of action in the particular form of action brought; and that where A. having a good cause of action on a covenant against B. & C. separately, but not jointly, sued B. & C. jointly, and arrested B. in that action, he was not liable as for a malicious arrest.

(r) Austin v. Debenham,[3] 3 B. & C. 139. Note, that the question of malice was left by Abbott, C. J., to the jury. See also Dr. Turlington's Case, 4 Burr. 1996; and Drovefield v. Archer,[4] 5 B. & A. 513. Barclay v. Hunt, 4 Burr. 1996. Contra, Brown v. Pigeon, 2 Camp. C. 594.

(s) Ravenga v. Muckintosh,[5] 2 B. & C. 693. Where the affidavit of debt was made by the defendant, and it was to be inferred from circumstances that he knew of the plaintiff's being discharged under the Insolvent Act; held that he was to be deemed responsible for the acts of his attorney, although it was sworn by the latter that the arrest was by his mistake, and without the interference or knowledge of the defendant. Jones v. Nicholls, 3 M. & P. 12.

(t) Ibid.

(u) Nicholson v. Coghill,[6] 4 B. & C. 21.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxxii. 603. [2]Id. x. 271. [3]Id. x. 37. [4]Id. vii. 177. [5]Id. ix. 225. [6]Id. x. 269.

ministratrix only, it was held to be such evidence of malice that the Court refused to disturb a verdict with 5*s.* damages (v).

The taking a less sum than that arrested for out of Court is not enough to maintain the action (x).

If the defendant, though advised by a competent person that he has a good cause of action, believes that he must fail, and yet arrests the plaintiff from indirect motives, there is no probable cause.

Although a jury may, they are not bound to infer malice from the want of probable cause (y).

It has been held at Nisi Prius, that one, who as arbitrator in an action between the parties has seen their books of accounts, and awarded that nothing was due, is not a competent witness for the plaintiff in an action for a malicious arrest, on the ground that he has had access, by consent, to documents which the present defendant, the plaintiff in the former action, could not have been compelled to produce (z).

Expressions showing malice on the part of the defendant cannot be taken into consideration as showing the want of probable cause (a).

Damages. The plaintiff must prove the arrest, and the expenses to which he was put (b). Where a bailable writ was sued out against the plaintiff by mis-

*691 take, *and the bailiff to whom the warrant was delivered to be executed merely requested payment of the money, informing him that he had a writ out against him, and on the mistake being discovered, the plaintiff was told that he need give himself no further trouble, but the plaintiff afterwards incurred expense by putting in bail above, it was held that the action was not maintainable (c).

Defence. It is competent to the defendant, for the purpose of rebutting the inference of malice, to show that he acted under professional advice, although it was unfounded in law: the defendant, after taking the present plaintiff's bail in execution, arrested the plaintiff on a testatum ca. sa. after notice from the plaintiff's attorney that the proceeding was irregular; the defendant proved that he had acted upon Higgins's case (d), and on the opinion of a special pleader, and the plaintiff was nonsuited (e).

(v) Fletcher v. Webb, 11 Price, 382.

(x) Jackson v. Burleigh, 3 Esp. C. 34.

(y) Mitchell v. Jenkins,[1] 5 B. & A. 588. The defendant arrested the plaintiff for 35*l.* knowing that 25*l.* only was due. The Judge told the jury that the law implied malice. After a verdict for plaintiff the Court of K. B. granted a new trial. K. B. Mich. 1833.

(z) Hubershon v. Troby, 3 Esp. C. 38. Qu. tamen.

(a) Whally v. Pepper,[2] 7 C. & P. 506.

(b) He cannot, it is said, recover any damage for extra costs. Sinclair v. Eldred, 4 Taunt. 7. In Webber v. Nicholas, 1 Ry. & M. 419, Best, C. J. said, that though he should have thought that Lord Ellenborough's opinion in Sandback v. Thomas (1 Starkie's C. 306) was the more correct one, yet that he was bound by the decision in the Common Pleas. But see Grace v. Morgan,[3] 2 Bing. N. C. 534, where it was held that a plaintiff in replevin who had received the taxed costs of his replevin, could not in an action for an excessive distress, recover the extra costs of the replevin as damages; and see Hodges v. Earl of Lichfield,[4] 1 Bing. N. C. 500.

(c) Bicten v. Burridge and others, 3 Camp. 139. See Arrowsmith v. Le Mesurier, 2 N. R. 211. In general, an action does not lie for bringing an action without good ground, unless it be done maliciously with intent to imprison the party for want of bail, or to do some special prejudice. Per Cur. Savil v. Roberts, B. N. P. 13. Purton v. Honnor, 1 B. & P. 205. And an action will not lie against a party for neglecting to countermand a writ, after payment of debt and costs, unless it be alleged to have been done maliciously. Page v. Wiple, 3 East, 313. Scheibel v. Fairbain, 1 B. & P. 388; and if in such a case it be incumbent on the party suing out the writ, to countermand it, what shall be a reasonable time for so doing is a question of law. 1 B. & P. 388. [See Vail v. Lewes, 4 Johns. 450.]

(d) Cro. J. 320; 2 Buls. 68; 10 Vin. Ab. 578.

(e) Snow v. Allen,[5] 1 Starkie's C. 502; and see Ravenga v. Mackintosh,[6] supra, 690. Secus where a full case has not been stated to counsel. Hewlett v. Cruchley,[7] 5 Taunt. 281. [S. P. Sumner v. Wilts, 4 Serg. & Rawle, 19.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxvii. 131. [2] Id. xxxii. 603. [3] Id. xxix. 409. [4] Id. xxvii. 469. [5] Id. ii. 485. [6] Id. ix. 225. [7] Id. i. 107.

It has been held that the arbitrator in the former suit, who had inspected the defendant's books and decided that he had no cause of action, was not competent to prove the defendant's malice (f).

MALICIOUS INJURIES, INDICTMENTS FOR.

For maliciously cutting, &c.

Upon an indictment for shooting at or cutting another, with intent to murder or maim him, or to do him some grievous bodily harm (g), whether *the act was done by the prisoner with the particular intention wherewith it is charged to have been done, is, as in other cases of specific malice and intention, a question for the jury. Their inference upon this important point, as in other cases of malicious intention, must be founded upon a consideration of the situation of the parties, the conduct and declarations of the prisoner, and above all, on the nature and extent of the violence and injurious means he has employed to effect his object (1). *692

Proof of intention.

In estimating the prisoner's real intention, it is obviously of importance to consider the quantity and quality of the poison which he administered, the nature of the instrument used, and the part of the body on which the wound was inflicted; according to the plain and fundamental rule, that a man's motives and intentions are to be inferred from the means which he uses and the acts which he does (g). If with a deadly weapon he deliberately inflicts a wound upon a vital part, where such a wound would be likely to prove fatal, a strong inference results that his mind and intention was to destroy.

It is not, however, essential to the drawing such an inference that the wound should have been inflicted on a part where it was likely to prove mortal; such a circumstance is merely a simple and natural indication of intention, and a prisoner may be found guilty of a cutting with an intention within the statute, although the wound was inflicted on a part where it

(f) Habershon v. Troby, 3 Esp. C. 38, cor. Ld. Kenyon. This was on the ground that the parties themselves could not have been examined in the former cause, and the plaintiff in that cause could not have been compelled to produce his books. qu.

(g) See the St. 9 G. 4, c. 31, sec. 12, 13, &c. A striking on the face with a sharp claw of a hammer, by which the face was cut, has been held to be within the Act 43 G. 3, c. 58, s. 1. Atkinson's Case, York Spring Ass. 1806, Russ. & Ry. C. C. L. 104. So the cutting off part of the skull by means of an instrument adapted to the purpose of prizing open doors, was held to be within the statute; a piece of the skull, according to the evidence, having been taken out as if sawed out, not broken out, but cut out. R. v. Hayward, O. B. Jan. 1805; and afterwards before the Judges. Russ. & Ry. C. C. L. 78. The intent there was to resist the lawful apprehension of the prisoner; and the jury found that the intent was not to cut but to break or lacerate the head. The Judges held that the conviction was right, and the prisoner was executed. In Adams's Case, O. B. Sess. 1808, and afterwards before the Judges, 1 Burn's J. 296, 23d edition, it was held that the striking with a square iron bar was not within the statute; but there the wound was not an incised wound, but contused and lacerated. It has been said, that in a case before Dallas, C. J. and Burton, J. at Chester, 5 Ev. St. part V. c. 4, p. 334, note (z), it was held that a blow with the handle of a windlass was not within the Act, although it made an incised wound; but in Atkinson's Case, above referred to, the nature of the wound, and not of the instrument, seems to have been considered to be the proper test of decision. The shooting at another with a pistol loaded with powder and wadding only, was held to be within the Act, if it be fired so near the person that it would probably kill or do some grievous bodily harm. R. v. Kitchen, Bridg. Sum. Ass. 1705; and afterwards by the Judges, 1 Burn's J. 293, 23d edit. Russ. & Ry. C. C. L. 95. But in order to constitute the offence of attempting to discharge loaded fire-arms, it must appear that they are so loaded as to be capable of effecting the mischief. R. v. Carr, Russ. & Ry. C. C. L. 377. A blow with a hammer (R. v. Withers), or with a stick or club (R. v. Lancaster), is within the Act, if it occasion a wound. S. P. ruled at York, cor. Park, J. But the inflicting blows with a hammer or iron instrument, so as to break the collar bone and violently bruise, but without breaking the skin, is not a wounding within the statute. R. v. Wood,[1] 4 C. & P. 381. Striking on the head with a bludgeon, whereby the skin was broken and blood flowed, was held to be a wounding within the stat. 9 Geo. 4, c. 31, ss. 11, 12. R. v. Payne,[2] 4 C. & P. 558.

(g) See tit. Intention—Malice—Murder.

(1) [See Pennsylvania v. M'Birnie, Addison, 30. Respublica v. Langcake & al. Yeates, 415.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 430. [2]Id. xix. 526.

could not have proved mortal (h), provided the criminal intention can be clearly inferred from other circumstances.

In the case of an attempt to poison, evidence of former and also of subsequent attempts of a similar nature are admissible.

Where the question was, whether the shooting was by accident or design, proof is admissible that the prisoner at another time maliciously shot at the same person (i).

Where the cutting was laid with intent to do some grievous bodily harm, and the jury found that the act was done with intent to resist a lawful apprehension of the prisoner, and with no other intent, it was held by the Judges that the conviction could not be supported (j).

Where the act is charged to have been done with intent to resist a lawful *693 *apprehension, the right of the prosecutor to arrest must be proved by the production and proof of the warrant or other authority (k).

(h) R. v. Case, York Summer Ass. 1820, cor. Park, J., who said that it had been so held by the Judges. See R. v. Akenhead,[1] Holt's C. 469. It is obvious that a case may fall within both the letter and the spirit of the statute, although from accident or from ignorance the prisoner has not succeeded in reaching a vital part. Supra, tit. INTENTION—MALICE.

(i) R. v. Voke, Russ. & Ry. C. C. L. 531.

(j) R. v. Marshall & others, Surrey Spring Assizes, 1818. Cor. Wood, B. and afterwards by the Judges. The jury in this case negatived any other intent; and therefore the case differs most essentially from that of R. v. Fox, above cited, p. 783; where, although it seems that the primary intention of the prisoner probably was to commit a rape, yet the jury found that he did by cutting intend to do some grievous bodily harm.

(k) R. v. Dyson,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 246, cor. Le Blanc, J. York Spring Ass. 1816; there the prisoner having cut A. B. on the cheek, the prosecutor and several others who were not present at the transaction, went without any warrant to the prisoner's house to apprehend him, and he then wounded the prosecutor; and Le Blanc, J., held, that to enable a private person to apprehend in such a case, he must either have been present when the offence was committed, or must be armed with a warrant, this branch of the statute being intended to protect officers and others armed with authority in the apprehension of persons guilty of robberies or other felonies.—Note, that it did not appear in the above case that the first cutting amounted to a felony, or that the wound was likely to be mortal. Vide supra, 441. Where a private person arrests for felony, a notification of his purpose must be given before he can legally arrest. Infra, tit. MURDER. Where the prosecutor, whose property had been stolen, found it concealed in an adjoining field, and waited at night to detect the thief, and when he came and had lifted up the bag containing the property, seized him without any previous notification, whereupon the prisoner cut the prosecutor, it was held that for want of previous notification the case was not within the statute. (Rickett's Case, cor. Lawrence, J., 3 Camp. 68.) But where, in a case somewhat similar, the goods had been concealed by the thief in an out-house, and the owner, together with a special constable under the Watch and Ward Act, waited at night to apprehend the thief when he came to take away the goods, and the prisoner and another came at night and removed the goods from the place where they were deposited, and upon an attempt to apprehend them, the prisoner fled, and was pursued by the owner of the goods, who cried out after him several times in a loud voice, stop thief, and on being overtaken, the prisoner drew a knife with which he cut the hands of the prosecutor, and made many attempts to cut his throat, the prisoner was convicted and executed. R. v. Robinson, cor. Wood, B. Lancaster. Under the 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, the servant of the owner, finding a party in the act of committing the offence of stealing vegetables, and taking him before a justice, was held to be entitled to all the protection of a constable, and that the cutting him with intent, &c. would be a capital felony; but where the party was only found with the stolen property in the adjoining close, and was taken by the servant, not to a justice, but to the owner's house, it was held that the party stabbing the servant was not guilty of a capital offence: if he had killed him it would not have amounted to murder. R. v. Curran,[3] 3 C. & P. 397. But where the prisoner was discovered at night in the act of felony, and being pursued escaped over into an adjoining garden, where he was found secreted, and upon being apprehended resisted and stabbed the prosecutor; held that the arrest was lawful, and that no previous notice of the cause of apprehension was necessary. Howarth's Case, 1 Ry. & M. 207. A party was wrongfully arrested and detained by a constable on a charge of assault, which did not take place in his presence, and whilst in such custody, struck a party assisting the constable having him in charge, for which the constable also said he should take him before a magistrate; whilst proceeding thither, the prisoner in resisting struck the party with a knife, for which he was indicted under the 43 Geo. 3, c. 58; held that as he might be considered to be still acting under the provocation of the original wrongful arrest, he was entitled to an acquittal. Curran's Case, 1 Ry. & M. 132. Where two parties were seen by watchmen with two carts containing stolen apples, and upon one watchman going up and walking by one, was wounded by him whilst his colleague was near the other, held that the latter could not be convicted of the wounding, unless the jury found not merely that they went together with the common intent of stealing apples, but also of resisting with extreme violence any attempt to apprehend them. R. v. Collison,[4] 4 C. & P. 565.

[1] Eng. Com. Law. Reps. iii. 159. [2] Id. ii. 376. [3] Id. xiv. 368. [4] Id. xix. 529.

A variance from the particular instrument, or poison, alleged to have been used, does not appear to be material (l). Variance.

An indictment for striking and cutting is not supported by evidence of stabbing (m).

Upon an indictment for administering (n) a noxious substance to a woman *quick with child, with intent to procure abortion, it is essential to prove that she was quick with child at the time (o). But where the indictment charged the prisoner with administering a decoction of savin (describing it to be a noxious substance) to a woman with child, but not quick with child, it was held to be unnecessary to prove that the substance so administered was savin, or that it was capable of procuring a miscarriage, or that the woman was with child; these being unnecessary averments (p). *694

Under indictments framed upon the stat. 9 Geo. 1, c. 22 (q), for maiming (r) or wounding cattle, it has been held that if it appear that the malice was against the animal, and not against the owner, the case is not within the statute (s). But it was not essential on the part of the prosecution to prove previously existing malice against the owner (t). The brutality of the act indicates a malignant mind, and the jury are to judge of the real motives and intention of the prisoner. Under the late stat. 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30, s. 25, it is immaterial whether the offence be committed from malice against the owner or otherwise. Indictment for maiming cattle.

Where the prisoner broke into a stable at night, and cut the sinews of the fore-leg of a racer, in order to prevent his running, he was capitally convicted (u).

Where persons riotously assembled, had obtained money from the prosecutor, under the pretence of advice; held, that other demands of the same

(l) Vide tit. MURDER.—VARIANCE.—Starkie's Crim. Pleadings, R. v. Goldsmith, 3 Camp. 75; where, on an indictment for administering a decoction of savin to a woman with child, but not quick with child, with intent to procure a miscarriage, it was held by Lawrence, J., to be unnecessary to prove that the substance administered was savin; for if the prisoner believed at the time that the substance which he administered would procure a miscarriage, and administered it with that intent, the case was within the statute.

(m) R. v. Macdermot, Nott. Lent. 1818, cor. Garrow, B.

(n) Where the prisoner merely gave the poisoned article to the party intended to be destroyed, but the latter never took or applied it, it was held to be insufficient to sustain a charge for administering, &c. under 43 Geo. 3, c. 58, s. 1; but that if any part were taken, it was not necessary that it should be swallowed, Cadman's Case, 1 Ry. & M. 114. Where the prisoner, a servant, placed the coffee-pot, in which she had mixed arsenic, by the fire, and told her mistress it was for her, and the latter took and drank of it, it was held to be a sufficient "causing the poison to be taken," and to be an "administering," within the 9 Geo. 4, c. 31, s. 11; manual delivery not being necessary. R. v. Harley,[1] 4 C. & P. 369.

(o) Goldsmith's Case, 3 Camp. 73; cor. Lawrence, J. The medical men differed as to the time when the fœtus may be stated to be quick, and to have a distinct existence; but they all agreed that, in common understanding, a woman is not considered to be quick with child till she has herself felt the child alive and quick within her, which happens usually about the fifteenth or sixteenth week after conception. Lawrence, J., said, that this was the construction to be put on the words of the statute; and as the woman had not felt the child move within her before she took the medicine, he directed an acquittal. On an indictment for administering drugs to A. B. in order to procure miscarriage, alleging her "being with child;" held that it appearing negatively that she was not with child, a conviction on 43 Geo. 3, c. 58, was wrong. Scudder's Case, 1 Ry. & M. 216. See R. v. Phillips, 3 Camp. C. 76. (p) Goldsmith's Case, 3 Camp. 73; per Lawrence, J.

(q) The word cattle in this statute includes horses, mares, and colts. Paty's Case, 2 East's P. C. 1074; 2 Bl. R. 721. The statute applies although the wound be not mortal, and does not occasion any permanent injury. Haywood's Case, East's P. C. 1076.

(r) Injuring a mare by pouring nitrous acid into the ear and eye, so that it became necessary to destroy her, it was held to be a maiming within the 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 16. Owen's Case, 1 Ry. & M. 205.

(s) Shepherd's Case, cor. Hotham, B. and Heath, J., O. B. 1790, East's P. C. 1073; where it was left to the jury to say whether a brutal injury to a horse resulted from sudden passion against the animal itself, or from motives of personal revenge against the master; and the prisoner was acquitted. S. P. in R. v. Austin, cited by Bayley, J.,[2] 3 B. & C. 248. See also Pearce's Case, East's P. C. 1072; 1 Leach, 527. Kean's Case, O. B. 1789, 1 Leach, 527.

(t) So held by the Judges in Ranger's Case, Surrey Summer Ass. 1798, East's P. C. 1074.

(u) R. v. Dobbs, 3 East's P. C. 513. So in Dawson's Case, Russel, 1688, who was executed for poisoning a mare in order to prevent her from running a race, he having betted against her.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 423. [2] Id. x. 67.

kind on the same day, when the prisoners were present, were admissible (x).

On an indictment for destroying machines (y), against the stat. 7 & 8 *Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 4, the prisoner was allowed to ask in cross-examination if persons had not been compelled to join the mob, and to call a witness to prove they had agreed to run away from the mob the first opportunity, and did so shortly afterwards (z). *695

MANDAMUS.

As to a mandamus to Justices to set out facts in a conviction, see R. v. Wilson, 1 Ad. & Ell. 627. As to a traverse of a return, see 1 Ad. & Ell. 297.

MANOR.

Evidence essential to proof of manor.

EVERY manor consists of demesnes and services (a), and it is essential to the existence of a manor, not only that there should be two freeholders within the manor, but two freeholders holding of the manor, and subject to escheats (b); and in default of freehold tenants, the manor ceases to be a legal manor (c). But that which has been once a legal manor may still be a manor by reputation, and exist for the purpose of many prescriptive rights attached to it, although the right of holding courts, for want of freehold tenants, may have been severed from it (d).

Where the plaintiff alleged that he was seised of the manor of Froome Selwood, by virtue of which he claimed a prescriptive right to appoint a sexton, and it appeared in evidence that Froome Selwood had once been a legal manor, but had for some time ceased to be so for want of any freehold tenants, it was held that it might still be a manor by reputation, for the special purpose to satisfy the allegation (e).

The question, whether a certain manor be of ancient demesne or not, is proved, as all such tenures are, by an inspection of Domesday by the Court (f).

Proof of the existence of a manor.

The existence of a manor is proved by the production of the ancient muniments of the manor, the court-rolls, the exercise of manorial rights (g), and by reputation (h). Reputation is also admissible evidence to prove the boundaries of a manor. And it seems that the description of the manor as *such in ancient deeds (i), or even mere oral reputation, without proof (k) of the actual exercise of any manorial rights, is evidence of a manor by reputation. *696

Proof of manorial rights.

In actions by or against the lord of a manor, the right usually depends (x) R. v. Winkworth,[1] 4 C. & P. 444.

(y) Where the prisoners broke only the detached parts of a machine which had been taken to pieces, it was held to be within the 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 4. R. v. Mackerel,[2] 4 Carr. & P. C. 448. So where they broke the water-wheel, the moving power of a threshing machine. R. v. Fidler,[2] 4 Carr. & P. C. 450.

(z) R. v. Crutchley,[3] 5 C. & P. 133.

(a) Com. Dig. Copyhold, (Q. 1.) A manor commenced where the king granted lands with jurisdiction to another, who before the statute of Quia Emptores granted parcel of them to others, to hold of him by certain services. Co. Litt. 58. A grant of tithes within a manor, includes the tithes of the freehold as well as of the demesne lands. Best v. Heightman, Cro. Eliz. 689. But a grant of free manor, rent-charge, &c. extends to the demesne lands only, for otherwise it would be a charge upon other men. Ibid.

(b) Per Lord Kenyon, Glover v. Lake, 3 T. R. 447. Bradshaw v. Lawson, 4 T. R. 443.

(c) Soane v. Ireland & others, 10 East, 259. Finch's Case, 6 Co. 63.

(d) Ibid. A manor by reputation is sufficient to entitle the lord to manorial wastes. Curzon v. Lomax, 5 Esp. C. 60. See R. v. Bishop of Chester, Skinn. 661; Ld. Raym. 291. Thinne v. Thinne, 1 Lev. 87; Cary, 33, 4; 2 Brownl. 223. Lenox v. Blackwell, Skinn. 191.

(e) Soane v. Ireland, 10 East, 259. See also 2 Brownl. 223, Hill. 7, J. B. R. citing Finch v. Durham, where it was said to have been held, on issue joined on the plea of non dimisit manerium in ejectment, that upon a finding by the jury that there were not any freeholders, but divers copyholders, and that it was known by the name of a manor, that it should pass to him who pleaded the demise of the manor. See also 12 Vin. Ab. T. b. 67.

(f) Hob. 188; B. N. P. 248. Supra, Vol. I.

(g) Supra, tit. COPYHOLD.

(h) Ib.

(i) Curzon v. Lomax, 5 Esp. C. 60.

(k) Steele v. Prickett,[4] 2 Starkie's C. 466.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 465. [2]Id. xix. 467. [3]Id. xxiv. 244. [4]Id. iii. 433.

on proof of the particular custom (l) of the manor, and of the actual enjoyment of that which is claimed by or against the lord (m).

Where a tenant has made an inclosure of part of the waste, it is to be presumed to have been made for the benefit of the landlord (n). An inclosure from the waste made without objection, and seen from time to time by the lord and his steward, may be presumed to have been made with the desire of the lord, and the tenant cannot be treated as a trespasser without notice to give it up (o).

Upon a question, whether the lord of a manor was entitled to the coals under a freehold tenement within the manor, it was held that he might give parol evidence to show that there was a known distinction within the manor between old and new land, and to show by evidence of reputation, *as well as by acts of taking coal under the lands of other freeholders within the new land, that the lord was entitled to the coal within that boundary (p). And it was held that it was necessary in such a case to prove the exercise of the lord's right in getting coal in the particular land then in question; it was sufficient to prove the exercise of the right with respect to lands similarly circumstanced, and then reputation was evidence *697

(l) Independently of custom, the lord of a manor, as such, has no right to enter on copyholds within the manor, to bore and work for coals. Bourne v. Taylor, 10 East, 189. Nor to enter on a copyhold of inheritance to cut timber for his own use, leaving sufficient for botes and estovers. Whitechurch v. Holworthy, 4 M. & S. 340. It is a good custom that the inhabitants of a manor shall grind all their corn, grain and malt, which by them, or any of them, shall be used, spent or ground within the manor, at certain mills. Cort v. Birkbeck, Dougl. 218. That the steward or his deputy should have the sole right of preparing all the surrenders of copyhold tenements within the manor. Rex v. Rigge, 2 B. & A. 550. Where there is a custom in a manor for the payment of a separate set of fees to the steward upon the surrender of each separate tenement, and two are admitted as tenants in common of one piece of land; two sets of fees become due, and continue payable, although the land is afterwards conveyed to one person, as in the case of indivisible services. Attree v. Scott,[1] 2 Smith, 449; 6 East, 476. Where a person is admitted to several distinct copyhold tenements, the steward of the manor is not entitled, in the absence of a special custom, to the full fees on each admission separately, and must therefore stand on his quantum meruit. Everest v. Glynn, 2 Marsh, 84; Holt's C. L. Semble, that coparceners are entitled to admission as one heir. R. v. Bonsall,[2] 3 B. & C. 173. Where the custom of a manor is silent, the common law must regulate the course of descent. Denn d. Goodwin v. Spring, 1 T. R. 466. An agreement between the lord and tenants of a manor, that the tenants may cut down, use and dispose of wood for the repairing, upholding or maintaining of their houses, hedges and fences, "or for any other their necessary uses," does not empower them to fell wood for sale; for which, if they do, the lord may support trover. The words "or for any other their necessary uses," mean, uses in their characters of tenants. Blackett, bart. v. Lowes, 2 M. & S. 494. If a manor be granted, reserving the waste, these are thereby severed from the manor, subject, however, to the rights of common, &c. as before. Revell v. Jodrell, 2 T. R. 415. A fine by tenant for life of parcel of a manor, the residue being in possession of the tenant in fee, severs it from the manor. Goodright ex. dem. Fowler v. Forrester, 8 East, 552.

(m) Where the lord claimed the exclusive privilege of cutting sea-weed (braie) from rocks covered at ordinary tides by the sea, held that, in the absence of any grant from the Crown, he could only sustain such right by evidence of long continued and undisturbed enjoyment, as well by the common law of England as by the civil law of Normandy. Where the evidence was of continued adverse claim without resistance, followed up by suit, the Court of Appeal (Privy Council) set aside the judgment in favour of the lord. Benest v. Pipon, 1 Knapp, 60.

(n) Bryan d. Child v. Winwood, 1 Taunt. 208; 1 Esp. C. 461; and by Park, B. in Doe v. Rees,[3] 6 C. & P. 610. Ld. Kenyon was of opinion that if a tenant inclose part of a waste, and remain in possession for a length of time sufficient for giving a possessory right, the inclosure does not belong to the landlord, unless, perhaps, where he acknowledged such part to belong to his landlord. Doe v. Mulliner, 1 Esp. C. 140. See Attorney-gen. v. Fullarton, 2 V. & B. 263. (o) Doe d. Foley v. Wilson, 11 East, 56.

(p) Barnes v. Mawson, 1 M. & S. 77. Evidence of rights exercised by the lord over conventionary tenants in one of several manors forming one district under the same lord, may be received to show what rights he had reserved or parted with to a class of tenants called conventionary tenants throughout the district. Rowe v. Brenton,[4] 8 B. & C. 862. Where the largest interest ever claimed by the conventionary tenants was from seven years to seven years, renewable for ever, it was held that it would not give them a right to the minerals; and though a positive usage to take them might be valid in law, it must be proved, otherwise the right would remain in the lord. Rowe v. Brenton,[4] 8 B. & C. 766. Where the question was whether a slip of land between an old inclosure and the highway belonged to the lord of the manor or to the owner of the adjoining land, it was held that acts of ownership by the lord, as inclosure of other slips in open places in the same manor, were properly admitted in evidence, and that such evidence of right ought not to be confined to the part in dispute, the circumstance of all being in the same manor, giving a general unity of character to the whole. Doe d. Barrett v. Kemp,[5] 7 Bing. 732, and 5 M. & P. 173.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 5. [2]Id. x. 47. [3]Id. xxv. 561. [4]Id. xv. 335. [5]Id. xx. 150.

to show the generality and extent of the right (q). It was observed that the nature of the right rendered it probable that the exercise of it would be confined to the same spot until the subject-matter was exhausted; and therefore that the proof could not be expected of the exercise of the right in all places to which it might extend, for that would be proving a right to a thing, which had ceased to be of any value (r). So, in general, what old people, deceased, have said concerning the boundaries of manors, is evidence, although what they have said as to particular facts and transactions is not admissible (s).

Usual reputation for sixty years past as to the contents of a manor, was held by Lord Chancellor Egerton to be evidence to be left to a jury, notwithstanding the production of ancient deeds, which showed that part of the lands claimed as parcel of the manor belonged to another manor (t). The evidence to prove the existence of a custom within a manor has already been considered (u).

The lord is not entitled to salvage for taking and preserving parts of a ship against the consent of the owner, whose servants were there to take care of them for him (x).

Variance. Where the plaintiff in ejectment claimed the manor of Artam as ancient demesne, and upon inspection of Domesday it appeared that the manor of Nettam was of ancient demesne, the plaintiff was not allowed to prove that Nettam was the ancient name of the manor claimed, for the variance ought to have been averred on the record (y). If the lord convey a customary estate to the tenant, he cannot reserve the ancient services (z); for the *698 *tenant, under the statute of Quia Emptores, must then hold of the superior lord.

MARRIAGE.

Jurisdiction on questions of marriage. The Spiritual Court has the sole and exclusive cognizance of questioning and deciding directly the legality of marriage, and of enforcing specifically the rights and obligations respecting persons depending upon it; but the temporal courts have the sole cognizance of examining and deciding upon all temporal rights of property; and so far as such rights are concerned, they have the inherent power of deciding, incidentally, either upon the fact or legality of marriage: when such questions lie in the way to the decision of the proper objects of their jurisdiction, they do not want or require the aid of the Spiritual Courts (a); nor has the law provided any legal means of sending to them for their opinion, except where an issue is joined upon the record in certain real writs, upon the legality of a marriage, or its immediate consequence, general bastardy. In those cases, upon the issue so formed, the mode of trying the question is by reference to the ordinary; and his certificate, when received, returned, and entered upon the (q) Ibid. And see Lord Ellenborough's observations in that case.

(r) Per Lord Ellenborough, C. J. Barnes v. Mawson, 1 M. & S. 77.

(s) Nicholls v. Parker, Exeter Summer Ass. 1805, cor. Le Blanc, J. 14 East, 331. Supra, Vol. I. tit. Witness.—Hearsay. [Smith v. Walker, 1 Car. Law. Rep. 514.]

(t) 12 Va. Ab. T. b. 67. (u) Supra, tit. Copyhold.

(x) Sutton v. Buck, 2 Camp. 392.

(y) B. N. R. 248, cites Gregory v. Withers, Hil. 28 Car. 2. Qu. as to the description in the declaration in this case.

(z) And a confirmation to a customary tenant, of his customary and tenant-right estate, discharged from all customs, services and demands, except, &c., is tantamount to a release of the rents and services not specifically excepted; and the customary tenement becomes frank-free, or held in free and common socage. Doe d. Reay v. Huntington, 4 East, 271.

(a) The answer to the claim of the Spiritual Courts to decide exclusively in such matters, in the reign of Edward 2, was, Quando eadem causa diversis rationibus coram judicibus ecclesiasticis et secularibus ventilatur, dicunt quod non obstante ecclesiastico judicio curia Regis ipsum tractet negotium ut sibi expedire videtur. 2 Inst. 22; 11 St. Tr. 261.

record in the temporal courts, is a perpetual and conclusive evidence against all the world upon that point (b).

The proof of a marriage is either, 1st, of a marriage in fact; or 2dly, of a marriage by evidence of repute, cohabitation, &c.; or 3dly, by evidence of a sentence or decree in the Spiritual Courts.

Proof of a marriage in fact.

1st. The usual proof of a marriage in fact, before a jury, is by means of a witness who was present at the celebration (A).

Where it has been celebrated in a parish church it does not appear to be necessary, in the first instance, to prove that the church was one in which marriages may lawfully be celebrated (c); so in general it is not essential to prove, in the first instance, that the officiating minister was a clerk in holy orders (d), or that the banns have been duly published (e), or that a license has been granted, nor is proof of registration necessary (f).

(b) Per De Grey, C. J., in giving judgment in the Duchess of Kingston's Case. As the certificate of the ordinary is peremptory, the stat. 9 Henry 6 requires public proclamation to be made, in order that parties who are interested may come in and be parties to the proceeding. Vide supra, tit. BASTARDY; and Vol. I.

(c) Previous to the Marriage Act, it was not essential that the marriage should be performed in a church or chapel; it might be celebrated in a private room. R. v. Fielding, 5 St. Tr. 614. Jesson v. Collins, Salk. 487; 6 Mod. 155. Marriages solemnized in chapels, &c. whilst the parish church is under repair, and in chapels wherein banns cannot be legally published, or of which the due consecration may be doubtful, were declared valid, 6 Geo. 4, c. 18.

(d) Before the Marriage Act, 26 Geo. 2, c. 33, s. 18, it was essential to the validity of a marriage that it should have been solemnized by a person in holy orders; (Haydon v. Gould, Salk. 119; 1 Bl. Comm. 439. R. v. Luffington, 1 Burr. S. C. 232). But this was much questioned in a late case. But a marriage celebrated by a Roman-catholic priest was binding. Evidence of the ceremony being celebrated in England between the prisoner and a Roman-catholic woman, by a Romish priest, in a language which the witnesses did not understand, and which they cannot swear to, as the ceremony of marriage according to the church of Rome, was held to be insufficient. Lyon's Case, O. B. Dec. 1748, cor. Willes, L. C. J. East's P. C. 469. And see the observations of Lord Ellenborough, R. v. Brampton, 10 East, 287. In Haydon v. Gould, Salk. 119, the parties were Sabbatarians, and the ceremony had been performed according to the rites of their sect, and they lived together for seven years, till the death of the wife; yet the officiating minister being a layman, the Ecclesiastical Court repealed the letters of administration granted to the husband, and the Court of Delegates, on appeal, confirmed the sentence. In R. v. Fielding, 5 St. Tr. 610, the marriage here by a Roman-catholic priest was held to be good, on evidence of the words of present contract, the rest being read in the Latin tongue, which the witness did not understand. And see R. v. Brampton, 10 East, 287, and infra, 704. And see the observations of Willes, L. C. J. in Lyon's Case, East's P. C. 469.

(e) But it is competent to the adverse party to prove that the banns have not been regularly published. Standen v. Standen, Peake's C. 32. See Ld. Mansfield's observations, St. Devereux v. Much Dewchurch, Bl. R. 367; 4 Burn's J. 280, 22d edit.

(f) R. v. Allison, Russ. & Ry. C. C. 109. Even upon an indictment for bigamy. Ibid. See below, 700, note (p).

(A) The validity of a marriage is to be determined by the law of the place where it was celebrated; if valid there, it is valid everywhere. Phillips v. Gregg, 10 Watts, 158. But although the place is necessarily the law of a marriage for its primitive obligation, yet the courts of the country where the marriage was celebrated, have no jurisdiction of a cause of divorce alleged to have been committed by one of the parties within another country. The law of the actual domicil at the time and place of the injury is the rule in cases of divorce, for everything but the original obligation of marriage. Dorsey v. Dorsey, 7 Watts, 349. A marriage is complete if there be a full, free and mutual consent between the parties capable of contracting, though not followed by cohabitation, and the circumstance of a party being in custody as the putative father of a bastard child is not a duress to avoid the contract. Jackson v. Winner, 2 Wend. 47. See Fenton v. Read, 4 Johns. 52. Strict proof of solemnization of the marriage is only necessary in prosecutions for bigamy, and in actions for criminal conversation. A marriage may be proved in other cases from cohabitation, reputation, acknowledgement of the parties, reception in the family, and other circumstances from which a marriage may be inferred. The People v. Humphrey, 7 John. R. 314. For civil purposes, cohabitation and reputation are sufficient evidence of marriage. But every intendment may be made in favour of legitimacy; and a jury are not bound to presume a prior marriage from the facts of cohabitation and reputation for the purpose of invalidating a subsequent one, and rendering the issue of it illegitimate. Senser v. Bower, 1 Penns. R. 453. Marriage is a civil contract which may be completed by any words in the present tense without regard to form. But where the parties, who had for some time lived in an adulterous intercourse, although considering themselves lawfully married, went together to their counsel on business, without any intention of marrying, and there the man said, "I take you for my wife," &c., the woman being told that if she would say the same thing the marriage would be complete, answered, "to be sure, he is my husband good enough," it was held that these words did not establish a marriage. Huntz v. Sealy, 6 Binn. 405. [See Commonwealth v. Norcross, 9 Mass. Rep. 492. Commonwealth v. Littlejohn, 15 Ib. 163. Ellis v. Ellis, 11 Ib. 92. Inhabitants of Milford v. Inhabitants of Worcester, 7 Ib. 48, as to the evidence of a marriage required in Massachusetts, in different cases. After a divorce a vinculo, in Massachusetts, for adultery, a marriage contracted there by the guilty party is illegal and void, and the issue thereof illegitimate. But such marriage in another state, where it is permitted by the laws thereof, will so far render it valid in Massachusetts as to entitle the

*A marriage may also be proved by the production of the register, or proof of an examined copy of it (g), with some evidence of the identity of the parties (h).

It has been seen that although the entry be first made in a day-book, the day-book is not evidence, if the entry has been afterwards made in the register (i). It is not necessary to call one of the subscribing witnesses to the entry in the register (k).

The identity of the parties may be proved (l) by evidence of their handwriting, payment of money to the bell-ringers, the giving a wedding-dinner, or any other circumstances which satisfy the jury (m).

Chapel. Where the marriage has been solemnized in a chapel, evidence should be given that banns have been usually published there previous to the Marriage Act (n); as by old registers of marriages solemnized in such chapels ante-700 cedently to the Act, and registers of banns published there since; and to prove as far as can be done by living testimony, that marriages have been usually celebrated there (o). Such evidence furnishes a reasonable presumption that the chapel is one in which marriages may legally be solemnized.

(g) Supra, Vol. I. Ind. tit. MARRIAGE. (h) Hemings v. Smith, 4 Doug. 29.
(i) Vol. I. p. 243. May v. May, Str. 1073. Lee v. Meecock, 5 Esp. C. 177.
(k) Birt v. Barlow, Doug. 170; supra, 352. See further provisions as to registers, 52 G. 3, c. 146.
(l) Supra, 353. (m) B. N. P. 27.
(n) 26 G. 2, c. 33. By sect. 1, all banns shall be published in the parish church, or in a public chapel in which banns have been usually published.—By sect. 8, all marriages solemnized in any other place than a church or chapel, unless by special license, or without publication of banns, or license of marriage, from a person having authority to grant the same, shall be void. It has been held, that the words "have usually been published," refer to the time of the Act, and consequently that marriages in a public chapel erected since the passing of the Act are illegal. R. v. Northfield, Doug. 658. By different statutes, marriages celebrated in such subsequently erected churches, which have been duly consecrated, are rendered valid. See 21 G. 3, c. 53; 44 G. 3, c. 77; and the stat. 48 G. 3, c. 127, as to marriages solemnized before August 23d, 1808, and 6 G. 4, c. 92. Provisions are also made by those statutes for the reception of the registers of those marriages in evidence, subject to the same exceptions as in the case of other marriage registers. By the stat. 48 G. 3, c. 127, such registers are to be removed within thirty days next after August 23d, 1808, to the parish church; or if the situation of the chapel be extra-parochial, to the parish church of the next adjoining parish, to be there kept with the parish registers of the parish; copies are also to be transmitted to the bishop of the diocese, or his chancellor. A publication of banns in an adjoining parish church, where the publication in the proper parish church was impossible from the state of the church, which was under repair, was held to be sufficient. Stallwood v. Tredgar,[1] 2 Phillim. 287. By the stat. 4 G. 4, c. 76, s. 2, banns are to be published in the parish church, or in some public chapel, in which chapel banns of matrimony may now, or may hereafter be lawfully published in, of, or belonging to such parish or chapelry, &c. —By sect. 3, the bishop of the diocese, with the consent of the patron and incumbent of the church of the parish in which any public chapel having a chapelry thereunto annexed may be situated, or of any chapel situated in an extra parochial place, signified to him under their hands and seals, may authorize the publication of banns and the solemnization of marriages in such chapel, for persons residing in such chapelry or extra-parochial place.—By sect 9, where a marriage shall not be had within three months after the complete publication of banns, it shall not be solemnized without republication, or license granted. By the 6 G. 4, c. 92, s. 2, it shall be lawful for marriages to be in future solemnized in all churches and chapels erected since the passing of 26 G. 2, and consecrated, in which churches and chapels it has been customary and usual, before the passing of the 6 G. 4, to solemnize marriages; and the registers of such marriages, or copies thereof, are declared to be evidence.—By sect 3, power is given to the bishop of the diocese, with the consent of the patron and incumbent of the church of the parish in which any public chapel, with a chapelry thereunto annexed, may be situated, or of any chapel situated in an extra-parochial place, signified to him under their hands and seals respectively, to authorize under his hand and seal, the publication of banns and the solemnization of marriages in such chapels for persons residing in such chapelry or extra-parochial place. And see 6 & 7 W. 4, c. 85, s. 26.
(o) See Taunton v. Wybourne, 2 Camp. 297. There a register of marriages, going back to the year 1758, and a register of the publication of banns from the year 1754 (when the Marriage Act was passed), were produced from the chapel in the Tower. Lord Ellenborough held that it might be presumed that banns had usually been published there before the Marriage Act.

---

issue to the rights of legitimate children. Inhabitants of West Cambridge v. Inhabitants of Lexington, 1 Pick. 506. So where a mulatto and a white person belonging to Massachusetts, (where their intermarriage was prohibited and made void by statute) went to Rhode Island, where such intermarriage was not forbidden by law, and were there married, and immediately returned to Massachusetts, the marriage was held to be valid in the latter state, and the issue legitimate. Inhabitants of Medway v. Inhabitants of Needham, 16 Mass. R. 157.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. i. 260.

Although the Marriage Act requires an entry to be made in the register immediately after the celebration, in which it shall be expressed that the marriage was by banns or by license; and that, if both or either of the parties be under age, that it was with the consent of the parents or guardians; and that it shall be signed by the minister and parties, and attested by two witnesses; yet the registration of a marriage is but evidence of it, and is not essential to its validity (p).

The banns ought to be published in the true names of the parties (q). But if they have been published in the names by which alone the parties are known, and without fraud, the marriage is within the meaning of the statute. Abraham Langley resided for three years in Lamberhurst, and during that time was known by the name of George Smith only, and the banns of his marriage were published and he was married under that name, and the Court of King's Bench held that the marriage was valid (r). And where a deserter assumed another name, and after residing for sixteen weeks at L., where he was known by that name only, and then married there, the Court held that the marriage was valid, the name having been assumed for the purpose of concealment, and not in order to impose upon the woman whom he married (s) But where there has been a change of the name for the purpose of fraud, or (t) even a deliberate omission of part of a real name (u) with a view to mislead, it seems that the marriage will be void. *So if the banns be published in a wrong name, although without any fraudulent motive (x). *701

Publication of banns.

The law was held to be as above stated under the st. 26 G. 2; the statute

(p) R. v. St. Devereux, 1 Bl. R. 377. Read v. Passer, Peake's C. 231; 1 Esp. C. 213.

(q) For although the Marriage Act does not specify in what manner the banns shall be published, yet it was the clear intention of the Legislature to require it; and the statute requires that notice in writing shall be delivered to the minister, of the true christian and surnames of the parties seven days before the publication.

(r) R. v. Inhabitants of Billinghurst, 3 M. & S. 250; and see Frankland v. Nicholson, there cited, where Sir W. Scott says, there may be cases where names acquired by general use and habit may be taken by repute as the true christian and surnames of the parties.

(s) R. v. Inhabitants of Burton-upon-Trent, 3 M. & S. 537. So where a widow assumed her maiden name, and many years afterwards was married by that name with the addition of widow. R. v. St. Faith's, Newton,[1] 3 D. & R. 348.

(t) See Frankland v. Frankland, cited 3 M. & S. 258; where Ann Nicholson, with a view to fraud, described herself to be Mrs. Ross, and was known by that name at the house where she lived: but it did not appear that she ever went by that name down to the time of the marriage, for before that time she cohabited with the producent, under the name of Frankland, Sir W. Scott pronounced the marriage to be null and void. Vide etiam, Fellowes v. Stewart,[2] 2 Phillim. 257. Meddowcroft v. Gregory,[3] Ib. 365. [2 Haggard, 207, S. C.] Bayard v. Morphew,[4] 2 Phill. 321.

(u) Pougett v. Tompkyns, cited 3 M. & S. 263; [2 Haggard, 142; 1 Phillim. 490, S. C.]; where William Peter Pougett, who was a minor, of the age of sixteen, and generally known and addressed by the name of Peter only, few people knowing that he had likewise the christian name of William, was married by banns to Letitia Tomkyns, his father's maid-servant, in a parish where the parties had never resided, the banns were published in the names of William Pougett and Letitia Tomkyns, and the marriage was pronounced to be null and void. See Lord Tenterden's observations in R. v. Tibshelf,[5] 1 B. & Ad. 195.

(x) Mather v. Ney, [cited 2 Haggard, 254,] Consistory Court, 1807, where the real name of the woman was Ney, and the banns were published under the name of Wright, and the marriage was held to be void. And see Lord Tenterden's observations in R. v. Tibshelf,[5] 1 B. & Ad. 195. But where Anna Colley was married upon a publication of banns in the name of Anna Sophia Colley, it was said by Sir W. Scott, that in the absence of fraud the Court would be very unwilling to question the validity of the marriage, after a long cohabitation by the parties. And see Tree v. Quinn, cited 3 M. & S. 266; [2 Phillimore, 14 S. C. 2 Haggard, 255, n.]; and Mayhew v. Mayhew, Ibid. [2 Phillimore, 11 S. C.][6] A publication in the name of Edward Stanhope, the real name being Augustus Henry Edward Stanhope, was held to be bad. Stanhope v. Baldwin, Ad. 93;[7] see also Green v. Dalton,[8] Ib. 289. So where a false name is fraudulently assumed for the purpose of marriage. Frankland v. Nicholson, cited 3 M. & S. 259; and see Fellowes v. Stewart,[9] 2 Phill. 257. Bayard v. Morphew,[10] Ib. 321. Meddowcroft v. Gregory,[11] Ib. 365. But where the banns were published, the woman being a natural daughter, in the name of the mother, as well as of the putative father, it was held to be sufficient. Sullivan v. Sullivan,[12] Ib. 45. [2 Haggard, 238, S. C.] A marriage of sixteen years' standing was refused to be set aside on the ground of a false name used in the banns, it not appearing which was the true name, and no intention of fraud. Diddeur v. Faucit,[13] 3 Phill. 580.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xvi. 171. [2]Eng. Eccles. Reps. i. 250. [3]Id. i 278. [4]Id. i. 273. [5]Id. iv. 523. [6]Id. i. 161. [7]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xx. 375. [8]Eng. Eccles. Reps. i. 166. [9]Id. ii. 42. [10]Id. ii. 121, [11]Id. i. 273. [12]Id. ii. 314. [13]Id. i. 479.

now in force does not annul the marriage except where both parties knew of the undue publication (y).

Minor. Where the marriage was by license, and either of the parties, not being a widower or widow, was a minor, it is essential to prove the consent of the father of that party, if he was then living, or if he was dead, then of the guardians of the minor, or of one of them, or if there was no guardian, then of the mother, if living and unmarried, and if there was no mother living and unmarried, then of a guardian of the person appointed by the Court of Chancery (z).

*702 *In a prosecution for bigamy, where it appeared that the first wife was a minor at the time of the marriage, which was by license, the prisoner was acquitted for want of proof of the consent of a parent or guardian (a).

(y) And therefore where the proposed husband procured the banns to be published in a christian and surname which the woman had not borne, and she was ignorant of the fact till after the solemnization of the marriage, it was held to be good. R. v. Wroxton,[1] 4 B. & Ad. 640.

(z) 26 G. 2, c. 33, s. 11. An illegitimate child has been held to be within this clause; R. v. Hodnett, 1 T. R. 96; although it seems once to have been held that the consent of the putative father was sufficient. R. v. Edmonton, East, 24 G. 3; 2 Bott. 76, pl. 114, cited 1 T. R. 97. And the consent of the putative father or natural mother in such a case has been held to be insufficient. Horner v. Liddiard, Daniel v. Cooke, cor. Sir W. Scott; and Priestly v. Hughes, 11 East, 3, Grose, J. being of opinion that illegitimate children were not within the contemplation of the Legislature in framing this clause. Where the parties have long cohabited, the Court (ecclesiastical) will require the evidence of minority and want of consent to be full and conclusive. Johnston v. Parkes,[2] 3 Phillim. 49. [2]Hayes v. Watts, Ibid. Where a testamentary appointment of a guardian was not attested by two witnesses, the marriage of a minor, with the consent of such guardian, held to be void. Reddall v. Liddiard,[3] 3 Phillim. 256. Consent is necessary, although the minor be a Jewess, married according to Christian rites. Jones v. Robinson,[4] 2 Phillim. 285. But the Ecclesiastical Court will not dissolve the marriage without satisfactory proof of minority, especially where the father's consent is rendered probable by circumstantial evidence. Agg v. Davies,[5] 2 Phill. 341. By the stat. 3 G. 4, c. 75, s. 2, marriages by license before the passing of the Act, without such consent as is required by the Marriage Act, and where the parties shall have continued to live together as husband and wife till the death of one of them, or till the passing of this Act, or shall only have discontinued their cohabitation for the purpose or during the pendency of any proceedings touching the validity of such marriage, shall be deemed good and valid. Where an infant was married by license without consent of parents between the repeal of 26 Geo. 2, c. 33, by 3 Geo. 4, c. 75, and the time when the latter Act came into operation, held that such marriage was valid. Waully's Case, 1 Ry. & M. 163. A marriage which would have been void by the 26 Geo. 2, c. 33, and had once been rendered valid by the second section of the 3 Geo. 4, c. 75, cannot subsequently be rendered invalid by the marriage of either of the parties, during the life of the other, with a third person. R. v. The Inhabitants of St. John Delpike,[6] 2 B. & Ad. 226. The stat. 4 G. 4, c. 76, repeals the stat. 3 G. 4, c. 75, except as to things done under its provisions, and except so far as it repealed any former Act, or any clause, matter or thing therein contained. The retrospective clause (sect. 1) in the 3 Geo. 4, c 75, operated, with respect to the marriages to which it was applicable, as a repeal of the clauses in the former Marriage Act which rendered them invalid; it therefore was not repealed by the subsequent statute. And, therefore, where one of the parties was married by license, under age and illegitimate, before the passing of the 3 G. 4, c. 75, and at the time of the passing of that Act they were living together as husband and wife, and were of full age, the marriage was held to be good. Rose v. Blakemore,[7] 1 Ry. & M. 372. But where the marriage was void, under 26 G. 2, by reason of undue publication of banns (in a false name), held that the statute was still unrepealed as to that ground of nullity, and the marriage void, notwithstanding the later Acts. Farquharson v. Farquharson,[8] 3 Ad. 282. Bridgewater v. Crutchley,[9] Ad. 473. The stat. 4 G. 4, c. 76, s. 16, provides that such consent as was required under the 26 G. 2, shall be necessary, unless there be no person authorized to give such consent.—This clause is directory only, sec. 23 inflicting a penalty on parties disobeying the directions of sec. 16; a marriage, therefore, by a minor by license, without consent of his father then living, was held to be valid. It is no objection to its validity that the marriage was obtained by the fraudulent practice of the parish officers. R. v. Birmingham,[10] 8 B. & C. 29; and 2 M. & Ry. 230. By sec. 17, where a father is non compos, or the mother or guardian is non compos, or beyond the seas, the Lord Chancellor shall have power to consent on petition made. Where the marriage of a minor by license was void, under the 26 G. 2, c. 33, but the parties at the passing of 3 G. 4, c. 75, were living separate, under a mere voluntary agreement, without any legal sanction; held that they were to be deemed to have "continued to live together as man and wife," within the meaning of the retrospective effect of the latter Act, and in a state of matrimonial cohabitation, how locally soever situate, and upon what terms soever of matrimonial intercourse. King v. Sansom,[11] 3 Ad. 277. A conviction for bigamy will not preclude the party from setting up the nullity of the first marriage, in a cause of divorce. Bruce v. Buck,[12] 2 Add. 471.

(a) Cor. Le Blanc, J. York Assizes. R. v. Butler, 1 Russ. & Ry. 61. Qu. Whether the license reciting the consent of the father or guardian would be prima facie evidence of the fact? See tit. Polygamy.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxiv. 131. [2]Eng. Eccles. Reps. i. 163. [3]Id. i. 402. [4]Id. i. 260. [5]Id. i. 276. [6]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxii. 63. [7]Id. xxi. 465. [8]Eng. Eccles. Reps. ii. 532. [9]Id. ii. 186. [10]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xv. 151. [11]Eng. Eccles. Reps. ii. 532. [12]Id. ii. 381.

Whether the marriage has been solemnized upon a license granted, or the publication of banns, it is unnecessary after solemnization to give any evidence in support of the marriage that the parties resided within the limits and for the times specified by the Act, and evidence to the contrary is inadmissible (b). Residence.

*It is provided by the st. 6 & 7 W. 4, c. 85, that superintendant registrars may grant licences to be married in a building registered under the Act, or in his office (c); provision is made for the registration of chapels (d). *703

It is further provided, that if any persons shall knowingly and wilfully intermarry in any other place than the church, chapel, registered building, or other place specified in the notice and certificate (to be given according to the Act), or without due notice to the superintendant registrar, or without certificate of notice duly issued, or without license where a license by the Act is necessary, or in the absence of a registrar or superintendant where their presence is necessary, the marriage shall be void (e).

The Marriage Act does not extend to any of the marriages of any of the royal family (f), or to Scotland, or to marriages among Quakers or Jews (g) (1), &c., or to marriages beyond seas (h).

A marriage of English minors in Scotland is valid (i), although the mar-

(b) See the stat. 26 G. 2, c. 33, s. 11, and 4 G. 4, c. 76, s. 26, which provides, that after the solemnization of any marriage under a publication of banns, it shall not be necessary, in support of such marriage, to give any proof of the actual dwelling of the parties in the respective parishes or chapelries wherein the banns of matrimony were published; or where the marriage is by license, it shall not be necessary to give any proof that the usual place of abode of one of the parties, for the space of fifteen days as aforesaid, was in the parish or chapelry where the marriage was solemnized; nor shall any evidence in either of the said cases be received to prove the contrary, in any suit touching the validity of such marriage. But by sec. 22, if any persons shall knowingly and wilfully intermarry in any other place than a church, or such public chapel wherein banns may lawfully be published, or without due publication of banns, or license from a person or persons having authority to grant the same first had and obtained, or shall knowingly and wilfully consent to or acquiesce in the solemnization of such marriage by any person not being in holy orders, the marriages of such persons shall be null and void to all intents and purposes. See also Drovey v. Archer,[1] 2 Phill. 347. Clarke v. Hawkins, Ib. in the note. Wiltshire v. Wiltshire,[2] 3 Hag. 333. But the stat. avoids the marriage only where the parties knowingly and wilfully intermarry without due publication; and to avoid the marriage under this clause, both must know. R. v. Wroxton, Inhabitants of,[3] 4 B. & Ad. 640. Where the pauper and her husband were married by banns in the surname of her baptismal register, which appeared by mistake to have been that of the grandfather, and she had never been called or known by it; held, that under 26 Geo. 2. c. 33, the marriage was void. R. v. Tibshelf,[4] 1 B. & Ad. 190.

(c) Sec. 61.

(d) See secs. 18, 19, 34, &c.

(e) Sec. 42. But it is provided that nothing therein contained shall annul any marriage solemnized under the st. 4 G. 4.

(f) Sec. 17.

(g) [Jones v. Robinson,[5] 2 Phillimore, 285.] In the case of a Jewish marriage, it has been held at Nisi Prius to be insufficient to give evidence of the solemnization at the synagogue, without also proving the previous written contract of marriage. Horn v. Noel, 1 Camp. 61. In the case of Ganer v. Lady Lanesborough, a Jewess was allowed to give parol evidence of her own divorce in a foreign country. As to the form of a Jewish contract of marriage, see Lindo v. Belisario, 1 Hagg. Con. 225, 247. Goldsmid v. Bromer, 1 Hag. Con. 324. In the case of Woolston v. Scott, Norfolk Lent Assizes, 1753, Denison, J. in an action for crim. con., admitted the plaintiff, who was an Anabaptist, to prove that the marriage was celebrated according to the Anabaptists' form of religion. B. N. P. 28. In the case of a Quaker, the marriage must be proved according to the ceremonies of the sect. In the case of other dissenters, no provision was made previous to the 6 & 7 W. 4, c. 85.

(h) Sec. 18.

(i) Crompton v. Bearcroft, Bull. N. P. 113. Phillips v. Hunter, 2 H. B. 412; 2 Burr. 1080; Co. Litt. by Harg. & Butler, note 79, b.; Huberus, 33.

(1) [On the subject of Jewish marriages, see the interesting cases of Lindo v. Belisario, 1 Haggard, 216, and Goldsmid v. Bromer, ibid. 324, and the papers, Nos. 1, 2, 3 and 4, in the Appendix to that volume.]

[1]Eng. Eccles. Reps. i. 274. [2]Id. v. 130. [3]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxiv. 131. [4]Id. xx. 375. [5]Eng. Eccles. Reps. i. 260.

riage be contracted in direct contravention of the law of England, between parties repairing to Scotland for the purpose (1).

A marriage by a dissenting minister in Ireland, in a private room, is valid (k).

A marriage may be avoided by evidence of the incapacity of either of the parties to the contract, either by reason of consanguinity or affinity (l), *704 or *of a previous and still-subsisting marriage with another; from want of reason, for consent is absolutely requisite to matrimony (m), although formerly a lunatic was supposed to be able to contract matrimony (n).

By 15 Geo. 2, c. 30, all persons found lunatics under a commission of lunacy, or committed to the care of trustees, are declared incapable of marrying before they have been declared of sound mind by the Chancellor, or by the majority of the trustees.

Beyond the seas. Marriages beyond the seas are excepted out of the prohibition in the Marriage Act. To be valid, however, they must be celebrated either as marriages were in England before that Act (o), or according to the law of the country where the marriage takes place (p). And therefore it seems, (k) R. v. ——, Old Bailey, Jan. 1815, cor. Sir J. Silvester. Although no evidence be given of any license obtained. Smith v. Maxwell,[1] 1 R. & M. 80. Upon a charge of bigamy, the first marriage was proved to have been in Ireland by license, the party being a minor, and without consent of parents; it was held a valid marriage, the 9 Geo. 2, c. 11 (Irish Marriage Act), making it voidable only. Jacob's Case, 1 Ry. & M. 140. Upon a question as to the settlement of Elizabeth the wife of C., the respondents proved by the testimony of C. his marriage with the panper in 1829. The appellants, in order to prove that that marriage was void, on the ground that he had been married in 1826 to M. B., called the latter, who stated that she, in 1826, went with C. before W., a reputed clergyman of the Established Church in Ireland, who in his private house there read to them the marriage ceremony. A document was also produced, purporting to be W.'s letter of orders, signed in 1799, by the then Archbishop of Tuam, which was proved to have been among W.'s papers at the time of his death, in July 1829. Held, first, that M. B. was a competent witness to prove the first marriage, although her husband had been before examined and proved the second marriage; secondly, that the certifiate of the ordination of W. was properly received in evidence, having come from the proper custody, and being more than thirty years old; and that the certificate not being the act of any Court, and not having any relation to the corporate character of the Archbishop, the seal was to be considered the seal of the natural person, and not of the corporation; had it been of the latter character, quære whether it would have been admissible without evidence that it was the proper seal. The King v. The Inhabitants of Bathwick,[2] 2 B. & Ad. 639.

(l) By the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 54, marriages within the prohibited degrees of consanguinity or affinity, thereafter celebrated, are to be void.

(m) 1 Bl. Com. 438. Morrison's Case, cor. Deleg. cited ibid. Semble, it is unnecessary to prove a decree of nullity in such a case. See Nolan, 200. [Sed vide Wightman v. Wightman, 4 Johns. Ch. Rep. 343.]

(n) By three Judges, Manby v. Scott, 1 Lev. 4, 5; 1 Sid. 109; Bac. Abr. Baron and Feme, H.; 1 Roll. Ab. 357.

(o) A marriage between two British subjects, solemnized by a Catholic priest at Madras, and followed by cohabitation, but without license of the governor (although it had been the uniform practice to obtain such license), is valid. Lautour v. Teesdale,[3] 8 Taunt. 830; and see R. v. Brampton, 10 East, 286.

(p) 1 Hale's P. C. 692, 3; 1 Haw. c. 43, s. 7; Roll. 79, 80; 1 Sid. 71; East's P. C. 465, 469; 3 Inst. 88. A marriage between Protestant British subjects, celebrated at Madras by a Catholic priest, according to the rites of the Romish church, is valid, although no license be obtained from the governor, according to the local usage there. Lautour v. Teesdale,[3] 8 Taunt. 830. Such a marriage would have been valid in England before the Marriage Act. Ibid. The canon law is the general law of marriage, unless it be altered by the municipal law of the particular place. Ibid. And therefore a marriage between British subjects, celebrated at Versailles by a Protestant English clergyman there, but which is invalid according to the law of France, is invalid here. Lacon v. Higgins,[4] 3 Starkie's C. 178. So a marriage by contract in Scotland, valid according to the law of Scotland, is valid here. Dalrymple v. Dalrymple,[5] 2 Haggard, 54 Harford v. Morris, Ib. 430. So a marriage in Ireland, celebrated in a private house by a person who had been curate of a parish for eighteen years, was held to be valid, without any proof of license granted. Smith v. Maxwell,[3] 1 Ry. & M. 80; and see 1 Russ. C. L. 205. By the stat. 4 G. 4, c. 91, marriages celebrated by a minister of the Church of England, in the chapel or house of any British ambassador residing within the country to the court of which he is accredited, or in the chapel belonging to any British factory abroad, or in the house of any British subject residing within such factory, and those solemnized within the British lines by any chaplain or officer, or other person

(1) [See Inhabitants of Middleborough v. Inhabitants of Rochester, 12 Mass. Rep. 363. Wightman v. Wightman, 4 Johns. Ch. Rep. 343. Turner v. Myers, 1 Haggard, 414. Browning v. Reane, 2 Phillemore, 69.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xi. 390. [2]Id. xxii. 152. [3]Id. iv. 299. [4]Id. xiv. 176.[d] [5]Eng. Eccles. Reps. iv. 485.

that if the ceremony be not performed according to the laws of the country where such marriage is had, it must be solemnized by a person in holy orders (q), and not by a mere layman (r), and per verba de presenti (s).

*Where the marriage is celebrated between English subjects in a foreign country, occupied by the troops of the King of England, it is to be presumed that the law of England, ecclesiastical and civil, was recognized and observed there (t). *705

In general, if it be insisted that the marriage has been solemnized in conformity with the law of the country where the marriage took place, it is necessary to prove what the law of that country was (u).

Where the marriage appeared to have been solemnized by one who publicly assumed the office of a priest, and appeared to be such, and was performed openly in a public chapel, and was followed by a long cohabitation of the parties, it was held, in a settlement case, that a valid marriage was to be presumed (x).

Evidence of the law of the country, with respect to marriages, must be derived from a person of competent knowledge on the subject (y). The Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer refused to receive evidence of the law of Scotland, in regard to the validity of a marriage contracted there, from a tobacconist.

2dly. Cohabitation and repute, including the declarations of deceased members of a family, are, it has been seen, evidence not only as to the fact of marriage, but also as to the state and condition of the family, and the relationship of its various members (z). It seems to be a general rule, that in all civil personal actions, except that for criminal conversation, general reputation and cohabitation are sufficient evidence of marriage (a) (1). Cohabitation and repute.

officiating under the orders of the commanding officer of a British army serving abroad, shall be deemed to be good and valid. A marriage between English subjects in a foreign country, not celebrated according to the laws of that country, nor according to the law of this country before the marriage, nor according to the stat. 4 G. 4, c. 91, seems to be void. See Middleton v. Javerin, 2 Hag. Con. 437. Lacon v. Higgins,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 183. Scrimshire v. Scrimshire, 2 Hag. Con. 437. In the case of a foreign marriage, some evidence should be given of the law of the country; the Ecclesiastical Courts receive such evidence from professors of the law of the foreign state. Lindo v. Belisario, 1 Hag. Con. 248. Middleton v. Javerin, 2 Hag. Con. 441; and see Dalrymple v. Dalrymple,[2] 2 Hag. Con. 81, and Harford v. Morris, 2 Hag. Con. 431.

(q) See the cases referred to in R. v. Brampton, 10 East, 287. It appeared that a soldier in the British army in St. Domingo, in 1796, went with the widow of another soldier to a chapel in the town, where they were to be married; the ceremony was performed there by a person appearing to be a priest, and officiating as such; the service being in French, but interpreted into English by one who officiated as clerk, which the woman understood by means of an interpreter, at the time, to be the marriage service of the Church of England. After this they cohabited as man and wife for eleven years, till the death of the husband. Upon a question as to the validity of this marriage in a settlement case, the Court held that the facts warranted a presumption that the marriage had been legally contracted, since it appeared to have been contracted per verba de presenti; to have been celebrated by one who publicly assumed the habit of a priest, and appeared to be such, in a public chapel; and had been followed by cohabitation for eleven years.

(r) Haydon v. Gould, Salk. 119. Smith v. Maxwell, supra, note (p).

(s) Lord C. J. Holt said, that a contract, per verba de presenti, was a marriage, viz. "I marry you—you and I are man and wife;" and that such a contract amounts to actual marriage, as if it had been in facie ecclesiæ. 6 Mod. 155; and see Dyer, 369, a. S. P.

(t) Per Ld. Ellenborough, R. v. Brampton, 10 East, 288.

(u) See tit. Foreign Law, and supra, p. 704, note (p).

(x) R. v. Brampton, 10 East, 289, and supra, p. 704, note (p).

(y) Ibid. Vide supra, tit. Foreign Laws. In Ganer v. Lady Lanesborough, Peake's C. 17, a Jewess was allowed by Lord Kenyon to prove that she had been divorced in a foreign country, according to the custom and ceremonies of the Jews there.

(z) Supra, Vol. I. Ind. tit. Reputation, &c. Vol. II. tit. Bastardy; and infra, tit. Pedigree, where this subject, and also that of the competency of witnesses in such cases, is further considered.

(a) Ibid.; and Leader v. Barry, 1 Esp. C. 353. Read v. Passer, Peake's C. 231. May v. May, B. N. P. 112. Hervey v. Hervey, 2 W. Bl. 877; 2 Roll. Ab. 551. Kay v. Duchess de Pienne, 3 Camp. 123. Vide

(1) [By the canon law, which is the basis of the marriage law all over Europe, and by the law of Scot-

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiv. 176.[d] [2]Eng. Eccles. Reps. iv. 485.

Sentence of Ecclesiastical Court.

3dly. The effect of judgments in ecclesiastical courts, upon the question of marriage, has been already adverted to (b).

In the case of civil proceedings, a direct sentence of nullity, or sentence in affirmance of a marriage, are, it has been held, conclusive evidence upon a question of legitimacy, arising incidentally upon a claim to a real estate (c).

*706 *A sentence in a jactitation suit, it has been held, is evidence as to a marriage upon a question of title in ejectment, and in personal actions, founded upon a supposed marriage between the same parties or their privies (d).

So a direct sentence in a suit upon a promise of marriage against the contract, is evidence to disprove the contract in an action brought upon the same contract for damages (e). But in these cases it is to be observed, that the suits in which the evidence is so receivable must be between the same parties or their privies (f).

Bigamy.

It seems that a sentence concerning marriage in a spiritual court is not evidence in a criminal proceeding, unless it be a direct proceeding in rem, and final and conclusive in its nature; and that even there it is liable to be impeached for fraud (g).

It has been solemnly determined, in the case of the Duchess of Kingston, that a sentence in a jactitation suit is not conclusive evidence upon a prosecution for bigamy (h), and that at all events it is liable to be impeached on the part of the Crown by evidence of collusion (i).

Standen v. Standen, cited 4 T. R. 469, and infra, tit. PRESUMPTION. Where a marriage in Ireland was inferred from circumstances of avowal and reputation, the Ecclesiastical Court held that it was not invalidated by evidence of belief on the part of the husband that it was invalid, having been celebrated by a Popish priest. Stedman v. Powell,[1] 1 Add. 58. In Doe d. Fleming v. Fleming,[2] 4 Bing. 266, it was held that reputation was good evidence of a marriage, although the plaintiff adducing it claimed as heir at law, and his parents are still living.

(b) Supra, Vol. I. Ind. tit. JUDGMENT.

(c) 11 St. Tr. 261. Supra, Vol. I. tit. JUDGMENT.

(d) 11 St. Tr. 261. Supra, Vol. I.

(e) Per De Grey, C. J., 11 St. Tr. 231. Da Costa v. Villa Real, Stra. 691; supra, Vol. I. tit. JUDGMENT.

(f) Supra, Vol. I. tit. JUDGMENT; 11 St. Tr. 261. It is there said by Chief Justice De Grey, that in such cases the parties to the suits, or at least the parties against whom the evidence was received, were parties to the sentence, and had acquiesced under it, or claimed under those who were parties, and had acquiesced. Qu. whether such a sentence would be evidence for a stranger against a party, there being no mutuality. Vide supra, Vol. I. tit. JUDGMENT.

(g) Vide Supra, tit. FRAUD.

(h) 11 St. Tr. 262. Supra, tit. FRAUD. It seems upon principle that such a sentence is not evidence at all. Vide Vol. I. tit. JUDGMENT.

(i) Ibid.

land, and of those States in the Union where there are no marriage acts to control it, consent alone to a contract of marriage, de presenti, is sufficient to render the marriage binding, without any other act. See M'Adam v. Walker, 1 Dow, 148. Dalrymple v. Dalrymple, 2 Haggard's C. Rep. 54, 81. Inhabitants of Milford v. Inhabitants of Worcester, 7 Mass. Rep. 48. Inhabitants of Londonderry v. Inhabitants of Chester, 2 New Hamp. Rep. 268. Cheseldine v. Brewer, 1 Har. & M'Hen. 152. Fenton v. Reed, 4 Johns. 22. See also Benton v. Benton, 1 Day, 111. Dumarsely v. Fishly, 3 Marsh, 370. Hammock v. Bronson, 5 Day, 290. Furcell v. Purcell, 4 Hen. & Mun. 507. Inhabts. of Newburyport v. Inhabts. of Boothbay, 9 Mass. Rep. 414. Telts v. Foster, 1 Taylor, 121. Whitehead v. Clinch, 2 Hayw. 3. Fenton v. Reed, 4 Johns. 52, acc. But where, without any apparent rupture, the parties after a cohabitation of about two years, separated and continued separate nearly forty years, without any claims or pretensions on each other as husband and wife, the presumption of marriage arising from the previous cohabitation is rebutted. Sem. Jackson v. Claw, 18 Johns. 346. In cases of cohabitation, the presumption is in favour of its legality; but when it is known to have been illicit in its origin, this presumption cannot be made. Cunninghams v. Cunninghams, 2 Dow. 482. Sed vide Fenton v. Reed and Jackson v. Claw, ubi. sup. In an information for incest, alleged to have been committed with a legitimate daughter, an actual marriage between the prisoner and the daughter's mother must be proved; neither cohabitation, reputation, nor the confessions of the prisoner, are admissible. The State v. Rosewell, 6 Conn. Rep. 446.

In Forney v. Hallacher, 8 Serg. & Rawle, 159, the Sup. Ct. of Pennsylvania decided, that in an action for crim. con. the declaration of the defendant, that he knew the woman was married to the plaintiff, and that with knowledge of that fact, he had seduced her affections, &c. might be given in evidence in proof of the marriage. 2 Phil. Ev. 151; where the same doctrine is suggested.

The weight of such evidence may be very small; its admissibility seems to rest on clear principles.]

[1]Eng. Eccles. Reps. ii. 26. [2]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiii. 426.

In the case of Martin Lolly (k), the prisoner being indicted for bigamy, his defence was, that previous to his second marriage, he had been divorced from his first wife, whom he had married in England, by virtue of a sentence of the Consistorial Court in Scotland, in a suit instituted by the first wife, on the ground of adultery committed by the prisoner in Scotland; it appeared that although the proceedings had been instituted bonâ fide by the wife, the whole had resulted from the artful practices and contrivances of the husband: the prisoner was convicted, and sentenced to transportation. The case was afterwards argued before the Judges, who are stated to have been unanimously of opinion that a marriage solemnized in England could not be dissolved but by act of the Legislature (l).

Action for breach of promise of marriage (A).

In an action for breach of promise of marriage, evidence of the promise is either, 1st, express, or 2d, is from the nature of the case frequently presumptive (m). It has been seen that the promise need not be in writing (n); where it is in writing it need not be stamped (o).

*707

*A promise to marry generally is in point of law a promise to marry within a reasonable time (p). Where the defendant, having called upon the plaintiff, to whom he paid his addresses, at her father's house, said to the father upon going away, "I have pledged my honour to marry her in six months, or in a month after Christmas;" and this varied from the counts, which alleged a promise to marry within a specified time; it was left to the jury to presume from the circumstances a general promise to marry (q).

Proof of refusal.

The refusal to marry should also be proved, either by proof of an actual refusal (r), or of conduct and declarations equivalent to an absolute refusal: and where it is alleged that the plaintiff has married another woman, the fact must be proved (s) (B) (1).

(k) Cor. Wood, B. Lancaster Sum. Ass. 1812.

(l) Russel, 287. See Tovey v. Lindsay, 1 Dow. 117; where this case is referred to by the Lord Chancellor.

(m) If there be an express promise by the man, and it appear that the woman countenanced it by her actions at the time, and behaved as if she agreed to the matter, although there be no actual promise, yet it shall be sufficient evidence of a promise on her part; per Holt, C. J. in Hatton v. Mansel, 3 Ann. A promise on the woman's part may be inferred from such circumstances of apparent acquiescence as usually attend such an engagement; from her being present and not objecting when the consent of a parent was asked; the making preparation as for the wedding; the receiving her suitor's visits, and demeanour towards him. Ib. and Daniel v. Bowles,[1] 2 C. & P. 554. The promise on the part of the man is more frequently capable of proof by means of explicit declarations, but it is also frequently matter of presumption from his conduct.

(n) Supra, 479. The contrary has been held. Phillip v. Walcot, 3 Lev. 65; Skin. 24; Com. Dig. Action on the Case, F. 3. The position in the text seems however to be now established in practice. B. N. P. 210. Orford v. Cole,[2] 2 Starkie's C. 351; and see Cock v. Baker, 1 Str. 34. Harrison v. Cage, 1 Ld. Ray. 386.

(o) Orford v. Cole,[2] 2 Starkie's C. 351. Infra, tit. Stamp.

(p) Potter v. Deboos,[3] 1 Starkie's C. 82. Phillips v. Crutchley,[4] 3 C. & P. 178; 1 M. & P. 239.

(q) Potter v. Deboos,[3] 1 Starkie's C. 82; cor. Ld. Ellenborough.

(r) As where, in answer to a question by the father of an infant child, whether the defendant meant to marry her, he replied, "Certainly not." Gough v. Farr,[5] 2 C. & P. 631.

(s) As to the proof, vide supra, 699.

(A) (In an action for breach of promise of marriage, a witness may be asked his opinion, whether from living with the plaintiff, and an observance of her deportment, &c. he is of opinion that she was sincerely attached to the defendant. M'Kee v. Nelson, 4 Cow. 355.)

(B) (Where a promise to marry generally was proved without any time fixed, but the defendant broke off all intimacy with the plaintiff, and though requested, gave no explanation; it was held, that it might be left to a jury to infer a refusal to marry. Willard v. Stone, 7 Cow. 22.)

(1) [In an action for breach of promise of marriage, an express promise need not be proved (6 Mod. 172. Holt, 458); a promise may be inferred from those circumstances which usually accompany such an engagement; such as expressions of attachment in letters, &c. Wightman v. Coates, 15 Mass. Rep. 1.

In Peppinger v. Lowe, 1 Halsted's Rep. 384, it was held that declarations of the plaintiff, that she had promised to marry the defendant, made long before the suit was brought, were good evidence for herself, to show the mutuality of the contract.

Evidence of seduction may be given in evidence to enhance the damages. Semb. Per Parsons, C. J. Paul [1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xii. 258. [2]Id. iii. 378. [3]Id. ii. 305. [4]Id. xiv. 260. [5]Id. xii. 293.

Proof in defence.

A defence (t) to an action of this kind frequently results from the very peculiar nature of the contract (A). It would be going much too far to say, that a party who is morally excused in breaking off an engagement to marry, is also in all cases legally absolved.

Nevertheless, the practising of fraud and deception in matters likely to influence the conduct of the other contracting party, would in this case, as well as in any other matter of contract, render the agreement void. It seems, also, that where it is discovered that one party has been guilty of fraudulent or dishonest conduct in collateral transactions, the other party is not bound to fulfil a promise made previously to the discovery (u). But it would be incumbent on the defendant in such a case to substantiate the grounds of refusal by evidence. It would be insufficient to prove merely that a suspicion of the kind existed; and that upon being called upon to repel the charge, the plaintiff omitted to do so. But although the omission on the part of the plaintiff to exculpate himself would be no bar to the action, it may nevertheless, under the circumstances, materially affect the damages (x). It seems that in general where one party has improvidently made a promise to marry another, the gross misconduct and general bad character of the plaintiff is a good defence to the action (y) (B).

If, however, a man promise to marry a loose and immodest woman, knowing her to be such, he is bound by his promise (z).

*708 *So if a man, after a promise of marriage has been made by the woman, conduct himself in a brutal or violent manner, and threaten to use her ill, she is not bound to commit her happiness to his keeping, and this would be a legal defence to the action (a). And even in cases where the misconduct of the plaintiff does not afford a legal bar to the action, yet if he has betrayed gross habits or want of feeling, such circumstances ought, it seems, to be considered by a jury in their estimate of damages (b).

So it is a good defence to show that the defendant was induced to enter

(t) See the new rules of Hil. T. 4 W. 4.

(u) See Baddely v. Mortlock & Ux.[1] Holt's C. 151. And in general, as to the principles on which a justification of this nature rests, see Pothier's Traité du Contrat de Marriage, part 2, c. 1, art. 7. Qu. whether a discovery of a woman's want of chastity be not a legal bar to an action by her. Semble, it is; per Abbott, C. J. in Foote v. Hayne, West. Sitt. after Mich. T. 1824.

(x) Ibid.

(y) Foulkes v. Sellway, 3 Esp. C. 236. In that case the defendant had a verdict, but note, that he proved not only that the plaintiff was a woman of general bad character, but also one instance of gross misconduct. In the same case Lord Kenyon held, that a witness might give evidence as to the character which he had heard of the woman upon inquiry in the neighbourhood, although it was objected that those who knew her character in the neighbourhood ought to be called and give evidence, since otherwise the party would be precluded from cross-examining as to the means of knowledge. Tam. qu.

(z) Per Lord Tenterden, in Irving v. Greenwood,[2] 1 C. & P. 350.

(a) Per Lord Ellenborough, in Leeds v. Cook & Ux. 4 Esp. C. 256.

(b) Ibid.

---

v. Frazier, 3 Mass. Rep. 73. Boynton v. Kellogg, ib. 189. Conn. v. Wilson, 2 Overton, 233. Contra, 2 Bibb, 341, Burks v. Shain.

If no time or place for the marriage is appointed, an offer to perform must be alleged and proved; allegation and proof of readiness and willingness are not sufficient. Burks v. Shain, ubi sup. See Martin v. Patton, 1 Littell's Rep. 235.

A promise of marriage, made to an infant by an adult, is binding on the latter, and the infant may maintain an action for the breach of it, without averring the consent of his parent or guardian to the marriage (Connor v. Alsbury, 1 Marsh. 78); but if the infant be sued for a breach of his promise, his infancy is a good defence. Pool v. Pratt, 1 Chip. Rep. 252.]

(A) (After a defendant has once broken a promise of marriage, his offer to renew it is no defence to an action for the breach of the promise. Sothward v. Resford, 6 Cow. 254.)

(B) (Unchastity or immorality in the plaintiff may be given in evidence by the defendant. M'Kee v. Nelson, 4 Cow. 355.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 57. [2] Id. xi. 412.

into the engagement by any fraudulent misrepresentation or suppression of the circumstances of the family, or conduct of the plaintiff (c). In proof of such misrepresentations, letters written by the father of a female plaintiff to the defendant, with her knowledge, and containing representations concerning her, are admissible to show deceit on her part (d).

Where the plaintiff's counsel was apprized by the course of cross-examination of the plaintiff's intention to impute deceit to the plaintiff, it was held that the plaintiff's counsel ought, upon such notice, to offer evidence for the purpose of rebutting the charge, before he closes his case.

Any circumstances which enable the jury to appreciate the loss sustained by the plaintiff are admissible in evidence, in order to mitigate the damages. It is competent to the defendant for this purpose to show that his parents disapproved of the match (e) (A).

MERGER OF CIVIL ACTION.

See ASSUMPSIT.

OF a civil action in a felony, see tit. RECORD (f).

MISNOMER (B).

A MISNOMER of the plaintiff's or defendant's name was formerly pleadable in abatement, but could not be taken advantage of under a plea in bar (g). But it was otherwise, if the misnomer constituted a misdescription of a contract (h).

(c) Wharton v. Lewis,[1] 1 C. & P. 531. And see Foote v. Hayne,[2] 1 C. & P. 547.

(d) Foote v. Hayne,[2] 1 C. & P. 547. But she will not be responsible for particular expressions. Ib. And a representation made by the father orally to a third person, though communicated to the defendant, is not admissible against her. Ib.

(e) Irving v. Greenwood,[3] 1 C. & P. 350. And where the father was incompetent, having employed the attorney, a relation was admitted to prove such disapprobation. Ib.

(f) See also Crosby v. Levy, 12 East, 412. M. has an annuity for the life of W; J. kills W. in order to determine the annuity; no action lies; Freem. 382. Qu. whether maintainable after J. had been acquitted of the murder.

(g) Jowett v. Charnock, 6 M. & S. 45. Mayor of Stafford v. Bolton, 1 B. & P. 40. Boughton v. Frere, 3 Camp. 20. The Court will not set aside process on the ground of a misnomer of the plaintiff. Morley v. Law,[4] 2 B. & B. 34. Secus, in the case of a defendant. Ib. Wilks v. Lorck, 2 Taunt. 399; and see Clerk of Trustees of Taunton Market v. Kinleedey, 2 Blk. 1120. Gardner v. Walker, 3 Ans. 935. A plaintiff may sue by his name of baptism or confirmation, or both. Per Holt, C. J. in Walden v. Holman, 6 Mod. 115. See 2 Ld. Ray. 1015. The transposing two christian names, e. g. James Richard, for Richard James, is a misnomer. Jones v. Macquillin, 5 T. R. 195. It is a good plea in abatement for the defendant to say, that he was known and called by such a name, though he was never baptized. Per Holt, C. J. 6 Mod. 166.

(h) Gordon v. Austin, 4 T. R. 614. Note, that the party whose name was misdescribed as a maker of the note had been outlawed. See the observations of Buller, J. Ib. Where the name is idem sonans, it is no ground for a plea in abatement; but Shakpear and Shakspeare are materially different. 10 East, 83. Some names

(A) (M'Kee v. Nelson, 4 Cow. 355.)

(B) (The law knows but one Christian name, and the omission or insertion of the middle name, or of the initial letter of that name is immaterial; and it is competent for the party to show that he is known as well without as with the middle name. Franklin v. Tallmadge, 5 John. R. 84. Roosevelett v. Gardinier, 2 Cow. 463. See also Keene v. Meade, 3 Peters, 6. A defendant cannot plead in abatement, that an alias dictus is added to his true name. Reid v. Lord, 4 John. R. 118. The addition of Junior to a name is mere description of the person, and the omission of it does not affect any act or proceeding done by the same person. People v. Collins, 7 John. R. 549. Where the name of the obligor in the body of the bond varies by a slight misspelling from his signature, he may be sued by his name as subscribed, without an alias dictus. Meredith v. Hensdale, 7 Caines, 362. In a foreign name, a variance of a letter, not varying the sound according to the pronunciation of the language to which it belongs, is not a misnomer, as Petris for Petrie. Petrie v. Woodworth, 3 Caines, 219. Where, in a suit against two defendants, in assumpsit, in which one is arrested and the other returned not found, it appears on the trial that the defendant not brought in is misnamed in the declaration, being called John instead of George, the plaintiff will be nonsuited for the variance. Waterbury v. Mather, 16 Wend. 611. Had both the defendants been arrested the misnomer could only have been taken advantage of by plea in abatement. Ib.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xi. 459. [2]Id. xi. 466. [3]Id. xi. 412. [4]Id. vi. 9.

*The plea of misnomer in abatement is now abolished, by the st. 3 & 4 W. c. 42, s. 11. See tit. ABATEMENT (i).

MORTGAGE.

As to proof in an action of ejectment by a mortgagor, see tit. EJECTMENT.

In the case of lands let for years and then mortgaged, the mortgagee is entitled to rent accruing after the mortgage, and after notice to the tenant, before any possession taken (j).

A mortgagor is not properly tenant-at-will to a mortgagee, for he does not pay rent; he receives the rent by tacit agreement with the mortgagee, who may put an end to it when he pleases. The mortgagor cannot be considered tenant-at-will where there is an under-tenant, for there can be no under-tenant to a tenant-at-will; in such case the mortgagor is only a receiver of the rent for the mortgagee, who may at any time countermand the implied authority by notice (k).

MONEY (l).

See ASSUMPSIT.—PAYMENT.

MURDER.

THE offence consists in the killing any person under the King's peace, with malice aforethought, either express or implied (m).

This definition includes, 1st, The killing of another; 2dly, Of malice: and the evidence is either direct or indirect.

1. The proof of killing another involves the proof of the death of the person, and that it was occasioned by some act done by another.

Proof of the death.

First, Of the death of the person specified in the indictment. It has been laid down by Lord Hale, as a rule of prudence in cases of murder, that to

*710 *warrant a conviction, proof should be given of the death, by evidence of the fact or the actual finding of the body (n). But although it be certain may be used the one for the other indifferentiy. 2 Rol. Ab. 135; 1 Leon. 147; as Jean for John, Jane for Joan. A peer must sue by his christian name as well as name of dignity. See Com. Dig. Abatement, F. 19; E. 18, 19, 20. R. v. Cooke,[1] 2 B. & C. 871. If judgment be obtained against a person in a wrong name, and the plaintiff sue him again for the same cause of action in the right name, he may plead the judgment recovered, and prove that he is the same person. 2 Str. 1218. In some instances a defendant may, on being arrested in a wrong name, procure his discharge in a bailable action, on putting in common bail.[2] 1 Ch. R. 282. But if he put in bail in the wrong name without notice, or execute a deed in the wrong name, he will be estopped from disputing it. 3 Taunt. 504; Dyer, 279; 1 Ray. 249.

(i) Irving v. Greenwood,[3] 1 C. & P. 350.

(j) Moss v. Gallimore, Doug. 266. See Chinnery v. Blackburn, 1 H. B. 118.

(k) Ibid. A mortgagor is not properly tenant-at-will to the mortgagee, for he is not to pay rent; he is only so quodam modo. There is nothing more apt to confound than a simile. Per Lord Mansfield, in Moss v. Gallimore, Doug. 269.

(l) In what cases money may be followed and recovered, see Scott v. Sumner, Willes, 400. Whitcombe v. Jacob, 1 Salk. 161. If a factor sell the goods of his principal before the bankruptcy, the money cannot be followed unless he purchase the specific thing with the same money. Ib. See Taylor v. Plumer, 3 M. & S. 563; and supra, 176.

(m) Fost. 256; 4 Bl. Comm. 198; 3 Inst. 47; 1 Hale, 424. See the fourth report of the Criminal Law Commissioners. The killing is of malice aforethought whensoever it is voluntary, and is not justified, excused, or extenuated by circumstances. Ib. And it is voluntary whensoever death results from any act or unlawful omission done or omitted, with intent to kill or do great bodily harm to any other person; or whensoever any one wilfully endangers the life of another, by any act or omission likely to kill, and which does kill any other person. Ib.

(n) 2 Hale, 290; where Lord Hale said, "I would never convict any person of murder or manslaughter, unless the fact were proved to be done, or at least the body found dead, for the sake of two cases; one mentioned in my Lord Coke's P. C. 104, p. 232, a Warwickshire case (vide supra, Vol. I. tit. CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE): another, that happened within my remembrance in Staffordshire, where A. was long missing, that no conviction ought to take place unless there be most full and decisive evidence as to the death, yet it seems that actual proof of the finding and identifying of the body is not absolutely essential. And it is evident that to lay down a strict rule to that extent might be productive of the most horrible consequences (A).

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ix. 263. [2]Id. xviii. 81. [3]Id. xi. 412.

In Hindmarsh's Case (o), the prisoner, a mariner, was indicted for the murder of his captain at sea; a witness saw the prisoner throw the captain overboard, and he was not seen or heard of afterwards; and it was left to the jury, under the circumstances, to say whether the deceased had not been killed by the prisoner before he was thrown into the sea; and the jury being of that opinion, the prisoner was convicted and executed (p).

A variance in the proof in the name of the deceased, as alleged in the indictment, will be fatal (q).

Next, the act (r) of the prisoner which occasioned the death, is to be proved. The proof must agree in substance with the allegations on the record. But if the act of the prisoner, and the means of death proved, agree in substance with those which are alleged, the nature of the violence, and the kind of death occasioned by it being the same, a mere variance as *to the name or kind of instrument used will not be material (s). Neither will the variance be material, though it should appear that the party charged as a principal in the second degree was a principal in the first degree; or although it should turn out that a party, indicted as a principal in the first degree, was but a principal in the second degree (t). Proof of the cause of the death. *711 and upon strong presumptions B. was supposed to have murdered him, and to have consumed him to ashes in an oven, that he should not be found, whereupon B. was indicted for murder, and convicted and executed; and within one year after A. returned, being indeed sent beyond sea by B. against his will; and so, though B. justly deserved death, he was really not guilty of that offence for which he suffered." The published account of the case of Ambrose Gwynnett, is a very remarkable one; after being convicted of murder, he was suspended for a considerable time in the usual course of execution, and afterwards gibbeted; and yet, in consequence of a series of singular circumstances, he survived his supposed execution, and having escaped to a foreign country, actually met and conversed with the person for the supposed murder of whom he had been condemned to die. (o) 2 Leach, 571.

(p) The conviction was unanimously approved of by the Judges. The objection, that the body had not been found, was urged by Mr. Garrow at the trial. See a case cited Russel, 683; where Gould, J. directed the acquittal of two prisoners who had been seen to strip an infant, the bastard child of one of them, and throw it into a dock at Liverpool, on account of the possibility that the tide might have carried out the living infant from the dock.

(q) See Starkie's Criminal Pleadings, 184, 2d edit.; and infra, tit. VARIANCE. An indictment for the murder of a child is bad, which neither states the name, nor alleges that the child had none. R. v. Biss, 2 Moody's C. C. 93.

(r) It is necessary that the death should have been occasioned by some bodily injury done to the party by force, or by poison, or by some other mechanical means which occasion death; for although a person may in foro conscientiæ be as guilty of murder by working on the passions or fears of another, and as certainly occasion death by such means as if he used a sword or pistol for the purpose, he is not the object of temporal punishment. 1 Hale, 427, 429; East's P. C. 225. But it is not essential that the hand of the party should immediately occasion the death; it is sufficient if he be proved to have used any mechanical means likely to occasion death, and which do ultimately occasion it; as if a man lay poison for another, with intent that he should take it by mistake for medicine, or expose another, against his will, in a severe season, by means of which he dies. 1 Haw. c. 31, s. 5; 1 Hale, 431, 2. So where a harlot left her newly-born child in an orchard, covered only with leaves, where it was killed by a kite, 1 Hale, 431; East's P. C. 226. So where a pauper is wilfully removed from parish to parish till he die for want of care and sustenance. Palm. 545. Or an apprentice dies from negligence and harsh usage. Self's Case, East's P. C. 226, 7.

(s) See the cases Crim. Pl. 91, 2d edit. It seems that proof of any one of the means of death stated is sufficient. Ib.; and R. v. Clark,[1] 1 B. & B. 473; Bulst. 87. Weston's Case, 3 Inst. 49. Watkin's Case, 4 Rep. 41. But where the indictment stated the death to have been by striking with a piece of brick, &c., the fact being that the prisoner struck him with his fist down upon a brick floor, and that the fall upon the brick was the cause of death; it was held, that the means were not truly stated. Kelly's Case, 1 Ry. & M. 113. S. P. Thompson's Case, Ib. 139.

(t) See Crim. Pleadings; and supra, tit. ACCESSORY.

(A) (Convictions for murder may take place, when the murdered body is not found. United States v. Gibert, 2 Sumner, C. C. R. 19.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. v. 151.

Connection between the act and the death.

Unless the death be so immediately and obviously occasioned by the violence inflicted by the prisoner, as to exclude all doubt upon the subject, the connection between the act of the prisoner and the death of the deceased must be proved by means of the judgment of persons of professional skill and experience, who have had an opportunity of forming an opinion upon the subject, or who are enabled to form an opinion from the circumstances of the case, as detailed by others (u).

Where there is any doubt whether the death was occasioned by the act of the prisoner, or by some other cause, it is of course a question of fact for the jury (v).

Where the husband and wife were charged with the murder of an apprentice to the husband, by using him in a barbarous manner, and not providing sufficient nourishment, and the opinion of the surgeon who opened the body, was, that the boy died from debility, occasioned by the want of proper nourishment, and not from the wounds, &c., it was held that the wife was entitled to be acquitted, as it was the duty of the husband and not of the wife to provide sufficient food and nourishment for the apprentice (x).

It is sufficient in law to prove that the death of the party was accelerated by the malicious act of the prisoner (y), although the former laboured under a mortal disease at the time of the act. And it is sufficient to constitute murder that the party dies of the wound given by the prisoner, although the wound was not originally mortal, but become so in consequence of negligence or unskilful treatment (z); but it is otherwise where the death arises, not from the wound, but from unskilful applications or operations used for the purpose of curing it (a).

Proof of malice.

II. Malice is either positive and express, or it is implied malice, or malice in construction of law (A). Malice of the former kind consists in an actual and deliberate intention unlawfully to take away the life of another, or do him great bodily harm (b); and the actual existence of such an intention is *712 a *question of fact to be found and ascertained by the jury. Implied or constructive malice is not a fact for the jury, but is an inference or conclusion founded upon the particular facts and circumstances ascertained by them; in which case the real intention and object of the prisoner, is frequently a very material ingredient, although he did not deliberately meditate and intend actual destruction.

It is a general rule, that the law infers malice from the very fact of killing (c); and that all the circumstances of necessity, accident, or infirm-

(u) Vide Vol. I. tit. WITNESS, OPINION, and Squire's Case, Stafford Lent Assiz. 1799, cor. Lawrence, J., Russel, 621.

(v) Self's Case, East's P. C. 226, 7; where an apprentice having returned from Bridewell, whither he had been sent for misbehaviour, in a lousy and distempered state, and was afterwards ill-treated by his master, and medical evidence was given that if he had been properly treated after his return home he might have recovered, it was left to the jury to say whether the death had been occasioned by ill-treatment which the apprentice received from his master after returning from Bridewell.

(x) R. v. Squire & Ux., Russel, 621. R. v. Webb, York Assizes.

(y) 1 Hale, 428. (z) Ibid. (a) Ibid.

(b) 1 Hale's P. C. 451, and 4th report of the Crim. L. Commiss., p. xxxiii, art. 14. Malice being essential to the offence, it follows that no person can incur the penalties of homicide who is of so imbecile or unsound a mind as to be incapable of malice, according to the rule of civil law, ut nec infans nec furiosus nec qui casu fortuito occidit hac lege teneatur. L. 12, L. 3, § 4. Heince. E. J. C. p. 7, sec. 201. Vide supra, tit. INFANT, 728; infra, tit. WILL.

(c) Fost. 255. That is, where, so far as appears, the act was wilful, and is not extenuated by circum-

(A) (To constitute murder in the first degree, it is not necessary that the premeditated design to kill should have existed for any particular length of time. If, therefore, the accused, as he approached the deceased and first came within view of him, at a short distance, then formed the design to kill, and walked up with a quick pace, and killed him without any provocation then, or recently received, it is murder in the first degree. Whiteford's Case, 6 Rand. 721.)

ity, which justify, excuse, or extenuate the act, are to be proved by the prisoner, unless they arise out of the evidence produced against him (1). It is for the jury to pronounce upon the truth of such facts; and it is for the Court to decide whether in point of law the fact of killing is justified, excused, or extenuated by those facts (d).

Actual intention to destroy.

Upon an indictment for murder, whenever the question turns upon the actual and specific intention of the prisoner at the time of the act which occasioned the death, the existence of that intention or disposition is a question of fact for the decision of the jury under all the circumstances of the case. And it seems, that in general, notwithstanding any facts which tend to excuse or alleviate the act of the prisoner, if it be proved that he was in fact actuated by prepense and deliberate malice, and that the particular occasion and circumstances upon which he relies were sought for and taken advantage of, merely with a view to gratify actual malice, in pursuance of a preconceived scheme of destruction, the offence will amount to murder (e).

Where, however fresh provocation intervenes between the preconceived malice and the death, it will not be presumed that the killing was upon the antecedent malice.

If A. and B. quarrel, and they are reconciled, and afterwards fall out again, and A. kill B., it will not be presumed that they fought upon the old grudge (f). But if proof be given that the reconciliation was but counterfeit, and that the prisoner was actuated by the previously conceived malice, it will be murder (g).

The materials from which the jury are to draw their conclusion as to such an intention, are obviously the previous situation of the parties, the connection and transactions between them, the conduct and expressions of the prisoner towards the deceased, the motives by which he was probably influenced, and, above all, the facts and circumstances immediately connected with the transaction, particularly the means of destruction used, the mode in which they were procured, and the subsequent conduct and demeanour of the prisoner.

*Where malice is an inference of law from the facts, that is, as it seems, in all cases where the act does not result from actual and preconceived malice, the question still frequently depends upon the actual intention of the prisoner, which is to be found as a fact by the jury. They are to find the nature, extent and origin of the intention; as, whether the prisoner really intended not to destroy the deceased, but to do him some bodily injury, and to what extent, and whether this intention was preconceived, or arose upon the occasion of some sudden provocation given (h). *713 stances. The general rule in the text has, in one instance at least, been misapprehended. A watchman employed to guard some premises and property in the night-time, being suddenly alarmed by the approach of one whom he suspected of having come for the purpose of robbing the premises, instantly fired at and killed him; and the jury being told that they ought to infer malice from the act of killing, found the prisoner guilty, but the prisoner was not executed.

Intention to injure, &c.

(d) Ibid.; Ld. Raym. 1493; Str. 733. Where the motive to commit murder was to prevent the party discovering the previous murder of another, it was held that the circumstances of that case were admissible in evidence upon the trial of parties charged with the second murder. R. v. Clewes and others,[1] 4 C. & P. 221.

(e) East's P. C. 224; 1 Hale, 451. (f) 1 Hale, 451; infra, 621. Mason's Case, note (f).

(g) Ibid.; and see Mawre's Case, Fost. 132; East's P. C. 239.

(h) If A. intendeth to beat B. in anger, or from preconceived malice, and death ensueth, it will doubtless be no excuse that he did not intend all the mischief that followed; for what he did was malum in se, and he must be answerable for the consequences of doing it. Fost. 259.

(1) [Pennsylvania v. Honeyman, Addison, 148. Same v. Bell, Ibid. 171. Same v. M'Fall, Ibid. 257. Same v. Lewis & al. Ibid. 282. The State v. Zellers, 2 Halsted, 220. Acc. But since the statute of 1794, in Pennsylvania, the burden of proof is on the Commonwealth; unless the circumstances of malice are proved, it is murder only of the second degree. Commonwealth v. O'Hara, before M'Kean, C. J., Wharton's Digest, 148.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 354.

Negligence.

Where there was no intention either to kill or injure, it seems also to be a question of fact for the jury, whether the prisoner conducted himself carelessly and negligently, and whether he might not, by using proper precaution, have prevented the death. According to the opinion of Sir Michael Foster, the law does not require the utmost caution to be used; it is sufficient that a reasonable precaution, what is usual and ordinary in like cases, be taken (i), and this appears to be a question of fact for the jury (k) (1).

Constructive malice.

By constructive malice, or malice in law, it is meant that the fact has been attended with such circumstances as are the ordinary symptoms of a wicked, depraved and malignant spirit (l), and carry with them the plain indications of a heart regardless of social duty, and fatally bent upon mischief (m). Here the law itself infers malice from the circumstances found by the jury, without their special finding of an actual intention to destroy or do great bodily harm to the deceased.

It would be manifestly inconsistent with the design of this work to enter into a discussion of those circumstances and particulars which constitute constructive malice, or malice in law. In point of practice, it is usual and proper to be prepared with evidence of all the circumstances connected with the transaction which tend to explain its real nature. In particular, it is essential to show what the real intention and object of the prisoner was, although it fell short of a deliberate design to take away the life of the deceased; that his intention was to commit some other felony, or a trespass, or some other unlawful act, or that the death resulted from carelessness and culpable want of caution; the nature and circumstances of the quarrel and provocation, where such have existed; the nature of the weapon used, and the mode of procuring it.

Malice in case of killing by accident.

Where the defence is that the death was occasioned by accident, the nature *of the act itself which occasioned the death, and the real motive and intention of the prisoner, are the proper subjects of evidence; but the conclusion as to the quality of the offence, as founded upon such facts, is usually a question of law. If the act was done in the prosecution of a felonious intention, it will amount to murder (n) (A). But it is not murder,

*714

(i) Fost. 264, 5.

(k) Ibid.; and the case there cited; where it was left by Mr. J. Foster as a question for the jury, to say whether the prisoner, on a charge of manslaughter, had not reasonable grounds for believing that a gun which went off accidentally in his hands, was not loaded. (l) Fost. 256.

(m) Ibid. 257. [U. S. v. Conell, 2 Mason, 91. U. S. v. Ross, 1 Gallison, 628.] This is the general inference of that most able and learned Judge, upon a consideration of the authorities and decisions on this subject. It is plain, however, that the terms of such a description are of too indefinite a nature to supply any certain rule or test for mere legal decision; and it may probably appear on inquiry that these cases turn upon the question, whether the defendant did not wilfully place the life of another in danger and jeopardy by an act or unlawful omission likely to kill, and which did kill another person. This is a question of fact rather than of law. If he did so, then the case properly falls within the description of one regardless of social duty, and fatally bent upon mischief. If, on the other hand, he were guilty of no such act or unlawful omission as was likely to produce such a consequence, it would be difficult to suppose any case which would fall under this branch of the law against murder. See the observations made on this subject in the 4th report of the Crim. Law Commissioners.

(n) Fost. 258. If A. shoot at the poultry of B., and accidentally kill a man, if he intended to steal them, it is murder; but if he intended merely to kill them, it is but manslaughter; and it is not even manslaughter if the wrongful act be merely malum prohibitum; as, where an unqualified person uses a gun to kill game. Fost. 259. See the next note.

(1) [If a person assume to act as a physician, however ignorant of medical science, and prescribe with an honest intention of curing the patient, but through ignorance of the quality of the medicine prescribed, or of the nature of the disease, or both, the patient die in consequence of the treatment, contrary to the expectation of the person prescribing, he is not guilty of murder or manslaughter. But if the party prescribing have so much knowledge of the fatal tendency of the prescription, that it may be reasonably presumed that he administered the medicine from an obstinate wilful rashness, and not with an honest intention and expectation of effecting a cure, he is guilty of manslaughter at least, though he might not have intended any bodily harm of the patient. Commonwealth v. Thompson, 6 Mass. Rep. 134.]

(A) (On the trial of an indictment for murder, where there is no pretence that the prisoner killed the debut manslaughter, if the prisoner intended to commit a mere trespass when he accidentally killed the deceased (o).

So malice may be inferred where an act unlawful in itself is done deliberately, and with intention of mischief or great bodily harm to those on whom it may chance to light, and death is occasioned by it (p). And although such an original intention should not appear, but such unlawful act be done heedlessly and incautiously, the offence will amount to manslaughter (q).

If A. intend to beat B. in anger, or from preconceived malice, and death ensues, he is guilty of murder, or of manslaughter at the least, although he did not intend the death (r); for what he did was malum in se, and he is answerable for the circumstances; but the nature of the offence in such cases must depend upon the particular circumstances.

If there was an actual intention to kill or do great bodily harm, the offence would undoubtedly be murder, without regard to the means used; but if there was a mere intention, as evidenced by the act itself, to do some bodily injury, the complexion of the defence will depend upon the nature of the instrument, and the manner and circumstances of using it, and the offence will be murder or manslaughter accordingly as these facts do or do not indicate that brutal or malignant intention which constitutes malice in law (s).

The inference of malice frequently arises from the means used by the prisoner; as where he has used such an instrument as was likely to produce fatal consequences, and where if he had used one of a different nature, and not likely to occasion death, the offence, on account of the provocation previously given, or other circumstances, would have amounted to manslaughter only (A). Thus if a master or parent, in the correction of a child, exceed the bounds of moderation, either in the measure of it or in the instrument made use of, it will be murder or manslaughter, according to the circumstances of the case (t).

*And even in the case of homicide by a person following his lawful occupation, any degree of carelessness and negligence, through which the death was occasioned, will constitute him guilty of manslaughter, and he must show in defence that he used all due caution (u). If the driver of a cart *715

Negligence in a lawful occupation.

(o) Foster, 258. Ld. Coke seems to have doubted whether, even in the latter case, the offence would not amount to murder; but Mr. J. Foster was of opinion that it would amount to no more than manslaughter; and even in the former case the rule of law is exceedingly ambiguous and unsatisfactory, as every rule must be which is not founded upon the degree of moral guilt, or upon grounds of public convenience or necessity. Upon what ground can it be reasonably contended that a man ought to suffer death because he has from pure accident killed another, whilst he was committing an act for which he probably would not have been imprisoned for six months? The immorality of his act is not increased by a circumstance wholly unforeseen and unexpected, and the mere possibility that death may be occasioned in the course of committing a larceny, and that the punishment, when such an accident does happen, may be capital, is not likely to operate in the least degree to diminish the number of offenders.

(p) Fost. 261. (q) Ibid.

(r) Ibid. 259; 1 Hale, 440, 1; Kel. 127.

(s) See East's P. C. 257; Kel. 127. If one throw a large stone at another with a deliberate intention to hurt, but not to kill, it will be murder. 1 Hale, 440, 1.

(t) Fost. 262; Hale, 474. [U. S. v. Connell, 2 Mason, 91.]

(u) Fost. 262, see the 4th Report of the Crim. Law Commissioners. The crime of manslaughter includes ceased while engaged in a riot or other misdemeanor not amounting to a felony by misadventure, but the death ensued in consequence of an intentional violence upon the person of the deceased, whether the prisoner designed to kill or not he is not entitled to have the jury instructed that they cannot convict of murder if they should come to the conclusion that the mortal wound was inflicted in committing or attempting to commit an offence which of itself is less than a felony. The People v. Rector, 19 Wend. 569.)

(A) (Malice is presumed from the nature of the instrument which caused the death and the want of legal provocation, and it is a matter of indifference whether the temper of the prisoner is mild or violent. State v. Merrill, 2 Dev. 264.)

had notice of the mischief likely to ensue, and yet drove on, he is guilty of murder; if he might have seen the danger but did not look before him, he is guilty of manslaughter, for there was a want of due circumspection; if the accident happened in such a way that no want of due care can be imputed to the driver, it will be but accidental death (x). And in general it is not sufficient that the act from which death resulted was lawful or innocent; it must be done in a proper manner, and with due caution (y) to prevent mischief (z).

If a person not of medical education, in a case where professional aid might be obtained, undertakes to administer medicine which may have a dangerous effect, and thereby occasions death, such person is guilty of manslaughter. He may have no evil intention, or he may have a good one, but he has no right to hazard the consequences in a case where medical attendance may be obtained (a).

*716 Proof where the inference of malice re-

*Although it is, as has been seen, a general rule, that circumstances in justification, excuse, or alleviation, are to be proved by the prisoner, yet where the inference or implication of law as to malice results from the legal authority and situation of the deceased, that authority must be all cases of voluntary and merely extenuated homicide, and also all involuntary homicide, which is not by misadventure; and homicide is by misadventure when a person doing an act without intention of bodily harm to any other person, and using proper caution to prevent danger, happens to kill another, provided the act done be either a lawful act, or be not attended with risk of hurt to the person of another. 1 East's P. C. 260. The crime of manslaughter includes all cases. 1st. Where death results from any act or unlawful omission done or omitted with intent to hurt the person of any other. 2d. Where death results from any wrong wilfully occasioned to the person of any other. 3d. Where death results from any unlawful act or unlawful omission, attended with risk of hurt to the person of any other. 4th. Where death results from the want of due caution in doing an act, or neglecting to prevent mischief, which the offender is bound in law to prevent.

(x) Kel. 40.

(y) The law does not require the utmost caution that can be used, but only such a reasonable degree of caution as is appropriate to the nature of the act and the probability of danger in the particular case. See 4th Report of the Crim. Law Commiss. p. 42; and 1 East's P. C. 265; Fost. 264.

(z) Fost. 262. R. v. Higgins, Dyer, 128; 9 St. Tr. 112. R. v. Rampton, O. B. 1664. See the case, Kel. 41, and Fost. 263. A man found a pistol in the street, which he had reason to believe was not loaded, he having tried it with the rammer; he carried it home and showed it to his wife, and she standing before him, he pulled up the cock and touched the trigger; the pistol went off, and killed the woman. This was ruled to be manslaughter. Mr. J. Foster, with great reason, as it seems, expressed his disapprobation of this case; and adds, that admitting the judgment to be strictly legal, it was, to say no better of it, summum jus.

(a) R. v. Simpson, cor. Bayley, J. at Lancaster,[1] 4 C. & P. 398, in the note. A mariner on board a vessel, whose wife had used opium, recommended a labourer on board the vessel, who complained of pains in his head, to take opium, and he sent for one pennyworth and gave it to the labourer, who took the whole; and it was left by Alderson to the jury, to say, whether he was not guilty of gross negligence. York Spr. Ass. 1834.

A publican administered large quantities of Morison's pills to a young man labouring under smallpox. He attended him for ten days, administering the pills (composed of gamboge, aloes, colocynth, and cream of tartar) in large quantities, which, according to the testimony of medical men, were highly diuretic and violent purgatives, and improper in reference to the disorder. Lord Lyndhurst, C. B. left it to the jury to say whether the prisoner had not, by the administration of severe medicines in a dangerous complaint, of the nature of which he was ignorant, occasioned the death of the deceased. If the opinion of the jury was, that the death was accelerated by the medicines, and that the prisoner had administered them in gross ignorance, the jury ought to find him guilty. He was convicted, and suffered six months' imprisonment.

If a person bona fide and honestly exercising his best skill to cure a patient, perform an operation, which causes the patient's death, he is not guilty of manslaughter, and it is immaterial whether the party be a regular or irregular practitioner. R. v. Van Butchell,[2] 3 C. & P. 629; contrary to the dictum in Coke, 4 Inst. 251. And see 1 Hale's P. C. 429; 4 Bl. Com. C. 14. The question is whether he has been guilty of criminal misconduct, arising either from gross ignorance or criminal inattention. R. v. Long,[3] 4 C. & P. 398, 423. The death having been occasioned by the application of a powerful lotion to the skin, it was held that the prisoner might show that the same lotion had been applied to other patients, and that they had been treated in the same manner. Ib. & 1 Hale's P. C. 429 (a). Where an irregular practitioner in midwifery mistaking an unusual appearance, attempted to remove it by force, and occasioned the death of the patient, it appearing that he had had considerable experience, and that there had been no want of attention, held that he could only be found guilty of manslaughter upon proof of criminal misconduct, arising either from the grossest ignorance or the most criminal inattention. R. v. Williamson,[4] 3 C. & P. 635.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 445. [2]Id. xiv. 493. [3]Id. xix. 454. [4]Id. xiv. 497.

proved, or in default of proof the offence will in general amount to no more than manslaughter. sults from legal situation of parties.

In general, ministers of justice are specially protected by the law whilst they act in the execution of their duty, and the killing of officers so employed is deemed to be murder, because it is an outrage wilfully committed in defiance of the justice of the kingdom (b); such an officer is protected eundo morando et redeundo (c); and so is every man who acts in his aid, whether he be commanded to assist or not (d). In general, if one having lawful authority to arrest in either a civil or criminal proceeding, and using lawful means, be resisted and killed, it will be murder in all who made or aided in the resistance (e).

Those who have lawful authority are either, 1st, public officers; or 2dly, private persons.

A public officer acts either, 1st, under a warrant; or 2dly, without one.

By legal process, whether by writ or warrant, is meant a process which is not defective in the framing of it; for if the writ or warrant be legal, although the previous proceedings were irregular, it will be murder to kill the officer, for he was bound to obey it; and therefore it is sufficient in evidence to prove the writ or warrant, without showing the decree or judgment upon which it is founded (f). But it is not sufficient to prove the sheriff's warrant to the officer, without producing the writ of capias, &c. on which it is founded (g). Warrant.

But if the process be defective in the frame of it, or if there be any mistake *in the name or addition of the person upon whom it is to be executed, or if the name of the person or officer by whom it is to be executed be inserted without authority, and after the issuing of the process (h), or it be otherwise altered after it has been issued, or if the officer exceed the limits of his authority, and be killed, it is no more than manslaughter in the person whose liberty is so invaded (i). So it is if the court from which the process issued wanted jurisdiction (k). *717

Without a warrant.—A peace-officer may justify an arrest on a charge of felony, on reasonable suspicion, without a warrant, although it turn out that no felony has in fact been committed; for all that a constable can do is to inform himself of the circumstances, and it is the duty of all persons to submit to the known officers of the law (l). Arrest without warrant.

(b) Fost. 208, 370; 1 Hale, 457. It seems that in general the killing is deemed to be of malice aforethought, whensoever one unlawfully and forcibly resists any officer or other person lawfully executing, in a lawful manner, any civil or criminal process or other authority for the advancement of the law, or lawfully interposing in a lawful manner for the prevention or suppression of any breach of the peace or other offence, and in so resisting happens to kill such officer or other person. See 4th report of the Criminal Law Commissioners, p. 40; and see East's P. C. 295, where the authorities on the subject are collected.

(c) Fost. 309.

(d) Ibid.; 1 Hale, 463. If a man be lawfully arrested, and he and his party resist, and a stranger to the facts interposes, the question seems to turn principally on his intention; for if he interposes with intent to aid the one party against the other, he does it at his peril, and is guilty of implied malice if he lend aid to the party lawfully arrested, and the officer be killed. Sir C. Stanley's Case, Kel. 87. But if he merely interpose, being ignorant of the facts, with intent to preserve the peace, he certainly would not be guilty of murder. East's P. C. 296; 1 Sid. 160. See the Sissinghurst-house Case, 1 Hale, 461, 2, 3.

(e) Fost. 270, 308.

(f) Fost. 311, 312. R. v. Rogers, East's P. C. 310. As to proof of a writ, see Vol. I.

(g) 2 Starkie's C. 205.[1]

(h) An arrest upon a warrant in which the officer's name is inserted after it has been signed and sealed by the sheriff, is illegal. Housin v. Barrow, 6 T. R. 122. R. v. Stokley, East's P. C. 310. But where a magistrate keeps a number of blank warrants ready signed, and on being applied to, fills them up, the officer may execute the warrant, and consequently it will be murder to kill him. R. v. Inhab. of Winwick, cited 8 T. R. 455.

(i) Fost. 312. (k) East's P. C. 309; MS. Sum. 163.

(l) Samuel v. Payne, Dougl. 359; and vide supra, 601; and R. v. Ford, supra.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 315.

By a private person.

A private person, it seems, is a trespasser (m), unless a felony has in fact been committed; and where a felony has been committed, and A. suspecting B. to be guilty, who is in fact innocent, attempts to arrest him, A. is not within the protection of the law, and the killing would amount to manslaughter only (1) (n); but if a felony has been committed, or a dangerous wound has been inflicted, and the party flies, it is the duty of every one to prevent an escape (o).

Notice.

Either a constable or private person may lawfully interpose, on his own view, to prevent a breach of the peace, or quiet an affray (p); but in the case of the constable, a notification of the character in which he interposes may, it seems, be implied from his office (q); but a private person must give express notice (r).

And it seems that a peace-officer has no authority to arrest after the fray is over, and peace has been restored (s), except for the purpose of taking an offender before a magistrate to find sureties (t).

No private person can justify an arrest in a civil suit (u).

Proof of authority.

The fact that the party killed was an officer of justice, such as a constable or other peace-officer, may be proved generally by evidence that he acted in that capacity, without strict evidence of his appointment (x). Although a special authority to arrest under a precept be alleged in the indictment, *if a legal authority to arrest, but not under the precept, be proved, the variance will not be material (y).

*718

Where the deceased was killed in the execution of some authority derived from the articles of war, a copy of them, printed by the King's printer, ought to be produced (z). In several instances prisoners have been acquitted of the charge of murder for want of such evidence.

Notification of authority. Malice implied.

Using lawful means.—There must in all cases be a notification of the character and object of the party. Where a bailiff rushed abruptly into the bedchamber of a gentleman (a), not telling his business nor using words of arrest, and the gentleman, not knowing that he was an officer, under the first surprise, took down a sword that hung in the chamber and stabbed him, it was held to be but manslaughter at common law, &c.

Proof of lawful execution of authority.

So where a peace-officer interposes to suppress a riot; for otherwise the parties engaged in the heat and bustle may imagine that the officer takes a part in the riot (b). But a small notification in the case of a peace-officer is sufficient; as, if he command peace, or in any other way declare with what intent he interposes (c). If he announce his business, it is not neces-

(m) 2 Hale, 83, 92; East's P. C. 301. Qu. whether the finding of a bill by a grand jury be such prima facie evidence of a felony as to warrant the apprehension of the party by a private person. East's P. C. 301.

(n) Fost. 318; where Mr. J. Foster says, "This suspicion, though probably well founded, will not bring the party attempting to arrest or imprison within the protection of the law so far as to excuse him from the guilt of manslaughter if he killeth; or, on the other hand, to make the killing amount to murder. I think it would be felonious homicide, but not murder in either case; the one not having used due diligence to be apprized of the truth of the fact, and the other not having submitted or rendered himself to justice; yet in such a case A. might justify the imprisonment of B." 1 Hale, 490; supra, 603.

(o) Fost. 271, 309; East's P. C. 298. Jackson's Case, 1 Hale, 464, 481, 489.

(p) Fost. 310; 1 Hale, 463; 1 Haw. c. 31, s. 44.

(q) Ibid. (r) Fost. 272, 311.

(s) 2 Inst. 52; 2 Ld. Raym. 1501; Dalt. c. 1, s. 7.

(t) 2 Hale, 90. If a felony be threatened the party may be arrested.

(u) 1 Haw. c. 28, s. 19. (x) Supra, 307.

(y) Macally's Case, 9 Co. 67; East's P. C. 345. (z) Supra, Vol. I. tit. PUBLIC DOCUMENTS.

(a) 1 Hale, 470; Fost. 298. See also the cases cited supra, 716, 717.

(b) Fost. 310, 311; East's P. C. 314.

(c) Fost. 310; 1 Hale, 460, 1. Gordon's Case, Leach's C. C. L. 337.

(1) [A well-grounded belief that a felony is about to be committed will extenuate a homicide committed in prevention of the felony, but not a homicide committed in pursuit, by an individual of his own accord. The State v. Rutherford, 1 Hawks, 457.]

sary that he should produce his warrant, unless it be demanded (d); and he is in no case bound to part with the warrant out of his possession (e).

An officer cannot, in the execution of civil process, justify the breaking open an outward door or window (f); for, in the language of the books, every man's house is his castle, for safety and repose to himself and his family; but if the officer enter by an open door, he may then lawfully remove every obstruction to the execution of his duty (g).

The rule is confined to the protection of the owner and his family who are domiciled there; if a stranger take refuge there, it is not his castle, and he cannot claim the benefit of sanctuary within it (h).

The rule is also confined to the case of arrests in the first instance; for if a man be legally arrested, and then escape and take shelter in his own house, the officer may, on fresh suit, break open doors to retake him, having first given due notice of his business, and demanded admission, which has been refused (i) (1).

It is also confined to civil cases; for in case of a felony committed, or dangerous wound given, or even where a minister of justice is armed with a warrant, in case of a breach of the peace, an outer door may be forced (j). But in no case can an outer door be legally broken, unless a previous notification and demand have been made, and a refusal given (k).

Indirect evidence.

Next as to indirect evidence.—Where the death has been occasioned in secrecy, a very important preliminary question arises, whether it has not resulted from accident, or the act of the party himself, who was felo de se.

It sometimes happens that a person determined on self-destruction resorts to expedients to conceal his guilt, in order to save his memory from dis*honour, and to preserve his property from forfeiture. Instances have also *719 occurred where, in doubtful cases, the surviving relations have used great exertions to rescue the character of the deceased from ignominy, by substantiating a charge of murder (l). On the other hand, in frequent instances, attempts have been made by those who have really been guilty of murder, to perpetrate it in such a manner as to induce a belief that the party was felo de se. It is well for the security of society that such an attempt seldom succeeds, so difficult is it to substitute artifice and fiction for nature and truth (m).

Proof of the prisoner's agency.

Where the circumstances are natural and real, and have not been counterfeited with a view to evidence, they must necessarily correspond and agree with each other, for they did really so co-exist; and therefore, if any one circumstance which is essential to the case attempted to be established be wholly inconsistent and irreconcilable with such other circumstances as are known or admitted to be true, a plain and certain inference results that fraud and artifice have been resorted to, and that the hypothesis to which such a circumstance is essential cannot be true (n).

The question, whether a person has died a natural death, as from apo-

(d) 1 Hale, 458, 583; 9 Co. 69. (e) East's P. C. 319.
(f) Fost. 219; 2 Roll. Rep. 137; Palm. 52; 1 Hale, 458. Lee v. Gansell, Cowp. 1.
(g) Lee v. Gansell, Cowp. 1. (h) 5 Co. 93; 2 Hale, 117; Fost. 320.
(i) Fost. 320; Salk. 79; 6 Mod. 173; Ld. Raym. 1028; 2 Roll. Rep. 138; 1 Hale, 459. Laying hold of the prisoner, and pronouncing words of an arrest, is an arrest. Fost. 330.
(j) Fost. 320. Curtis's Case, Ib. 135; supra, 596. (k) Ibid.
(l) See the trial of Spencer Cowper, a barrister, for the alleged murder of Mrs. Stout, at Hertford, during the previous assizes. 5 St. Tr.
(m) Vide supra, Vol. I. (n) Vide supra, Vol. I.

(1) [Bail may depute another to take and surrender their principal; and the bail, or the person deputed by him for that purpose, may take the principal in another state, or at any time and in any place, and may, after demand of admittance, and refusal, break open the door of the principal's house, in order to take him. Nicolls v. Ingersoll, 7 Johns. 146. See also 5 Esp. C. 172. (Day's ed.) note, 2 H. B. 120.]

plexy, or a violent one from strangulation; whether the death of a body found immersed in water has been occasioned by drowning, or by force and violence previous to the immersion (o); whether the drowning was voluntary, or the result of force; whether the wounds inflicted upon the body were inflicted before or after death, are questions usually to be decided by medical skill.

It is scarcely necessary to remark, that where a reasonable doubt arises whether the death resulted on the one hand from natural or accidental causes, or, on the other, from the deliberate and wicked act of the prisoner, it would be unsafe to convict, notwithstanding strong, but merely circumstantial evidence against him.

Even medical skill is not, in many instances, and without reference to the particular circumstances of the case, decisive as to the cause of the death; and persons of science must, in order to form their own conclusion and opinion, rely partly on external circumstances. It is therefore, in all cases, expedient that all the accompanying facts should be observed and noted with the greatest accuracy: such as the position of the body, the state of the dress, marks of blood, or other indications of violence; and in cases of strangulation, the situation of the rope, the position of the knot; and also the situation of any instrument of violence, or of any object by which, considering the position and state of the body, and other circumstances, it is possible that the death may have been accidentally occasioned.

Where it has been clearly established that the crime of wilful murder has been perpetrated, the important fact, whether the prisoner was the guilty agent, is of course for the consideration of the jury, under all the circumstances of the case. Circumstantial evidence in this, as in other criminal cases, relates principally,

Presumptive evidence.

1st, To the probable motive which might have urged the prisoner to commit so heinous a crime; for however strongly other circumstances may weigh against the prisoner, it is but reasonable, in a case of doubt, to expect

*720 *that some motive (p), and that a strong one, should be assigned as his inducement to commit an act from which our nature is abhorrent, and the consequence of which is usually so fatal to the criminal.

2dly, The means and opportunity which he possessed for the perpetrating the offence (q).

3dly, His conduct in seeking for opportunities to commit the offence, or in afterwards using means and precautions to avert suspicion and inquiry, and to remove material evidence (r).

The case cited by Ld. Coke and Ld. Hale, and which has already been adverted to (s), is a melancholy instance to show how cautiously proof arising by inference from the conduct of the accused is to be received, where it is not satisfactorily proved by other circumstances that a murder has been committed; and even where satisfactory proof has been given of the death, it is still to be recollected that a weak, inexperienced and injudicious person, ignorant of the nature of evidence, and unconscious that the truth and sincerity of innocence will be his best and surest protection, and how greatly fraud and artifice, when detected, may operate to his prejudice, will often, in the hope of present relief, have recourse to deceit and misrepresentation.

4thly, Circumstances which are peculiar to the nature of the crime; such

(o) See Cowper's Case, 5 St. Tr.
(p) Supra, Vol. I. tit. CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE.
(q) Ib. (r) Ib.
(s) Ib., and 2 Hale, 290.

as the possession of poison, or of an instrument of violence corresponding with that which has been used to perpetrate the crime, stains of blood upon the dress, or other indications of violence.

Upon the general nature and effect of circumstantial evidence, some observations have been already made; and it would be inconsistent with the limits of the present work to enlarge further upon the subject. It is essentially necessary to the security of mankind that juries should convict, where they can do so safely and conscientiously, upon circumstantial evidence which excludes all reasonable doubt; and that it should be well known and understood that the secrecy with which crimes are committed will not secure impunity to the criminal. In acting, however, upon circumstantial evidence, the just and humane rule upon which Lord Hale laid so much stress (t), cannot be too often repeated: Tutius semper est errare in acquietando, quam in puniendo, ex parte misericordiæ quam ex parte justitiæ.

Evidence by the defendant.

It has been seen that the law infers malice from the act of killing, and that it is incumbent on the prisoner to prove those circumstances in his defence which justify, excuse, or extenuate the act.

Justification. Process of law.

1st. He may justify the act by proof that he acted in execution of the process of the law (u); that the death was occasioned by the resistance made by the deceased to the execution of a lawful authority (v). In such a case it is necessary to prove a lawful authority, and that the officer used legal means to enforce it (x), and that the death was unavoidably occasioned by the attempt to enforce the execution of the authority against the party who resisted it (y).

*721

*If a party fly to avoid an arrest for a felony which has been committed, or where a dangerous wound has been given, or where an officer is armed with a lawful warrant to apprehend the party for felony, although no felony has been committed, and he cannot otherwise be taken, the killing him will be justifiable (z); but in the case of any misdemeanor short of felony, and in all civil cases, if the officer kill the party, who flies in order to avoid an arrest, he will be guilty of murder or manslaughter, according to the particular circumstances of the case (a).

Self-defence.

The accused may also show in justification that he committed the act in self-defence. If A. manifestly intends to commit a felony on the property or person of B. by violence or surprise, B. is not obliged to retreat, but may pursue his adversary till he find himself out of danger, and if in the conflict A. happeneth to die such killing is justifiable (b); but in the case of mutual conflict, the party, to excuse himself, must show that he retreated as far as he could before he gave the mortal stroke, and that he killed his adversary through mere necessity to avoid immediate death (c) (1).

(t) 2 Hale, 290.
(u) Fost. 267; 4 Bl. Comm. 178; 1 Hale, 496, 502.
(v) Fost. 270.
(x) Supra, 594, & seq.; and 714.
(y) It has been said that an officer was guilty of manslaughter because he had not first given back, as far as he could, before he killed the party, who had escaped out of custody in execution for a debt, and resisted being retaken. 1 Roll. R. 189. But this case has since been disapproved of. Fost. 271; East's P. C. 307. In the case of resistance to officers of the customs and excise, see the stat. 9 Geo. 2, c. 35, s. 35, &c.
(z) 1 Hale, 489, 490; 1 Haw. c. 28, s. 11; Fost. 271. The pursuit is not barely warrantable; it is what the law requires, and will punish the neglect of. See the case of the Marquis de Guiscard, Fost. 271. Semble, the finding a bill of indictment by a grand jury for felony will warrant a private person in apprehending the party indicted. 1 Hale, 489, 490; East's P. C. 300, 301. So officers of justice are justified in killing rioters in endeavouring to suppress and disperse a mob (in case it cannot be otherwise suppressed), both at common law and under the Riot Act. See 1 Hale, 53, 494, 495; East's P. C. 304; 1 Geo. 1, stat. 2, c. 5. And so semble are private persons.
(a) Fost. 271; 1 Hale, 481.
(b) Fost. 273, 4; 1 Hale, 481, 484.
(c) Fost. 277.

(1) [Granger v. The State, 5 Yerger, 459. To justify a homicide on the ground of self-defence, it must clearly appear that it was a necessary act, in order to avoid death or some severe calamity. The State v. Wells, 1 Coxe, 424.]

Excuse. 2dly. In excuse.—Proof that the death was not wilfully and intentionally occasioned by the prisoner will not, it has been seen, enure as a defence, unless he can show that the death was an inevitable accident, occasioned by the doing of a lawful act, which he could not, by the exercise of usual and ordinary caution, have avoided (d).

Evidence in extenuation. 3dly. The prisoner may, in certain instances, extenuate his crime, and reduce it from murder to manslaughter, by proof that the act was committed during a transport of passion and resentment excited by sudden provocation, which for the time subdued his reason; for such evidence repels the inference of that deliberate malice and malignity of heart which is essential to the offence (e) (1).

Provocation. Whenever the defendant seeks to shelter himself under the plea of provocation, he must prove his case to the satisfaction of the jury (f); the *722 presumption *of law is against him till that presumption be repelled by contrary evidence. What degree of provocation, and under what circumstances, heat of blood, the furor brevis, will or will not avail the defendant, is usually a question of law arising upon the special facts of the case (A).

Where the sudden occasion is but a mere pretext and excuse to cover deliberate malice, it can never be available, even in extenuation (g). Where there is no evidence of any motive for the act, except the sudden provocation, upon which the defendant relies, then, although the criminal nature of the act depends upon the malice of the agent (that is, upon malice in its legal sense, as evidenced by the facts themselves), yet malice, in this sense, is a necessary legal result and inference from the facts as found by the jury.

The legal distinctions which range themselves under this head, seem to

(d) Vide supra, 715.

(e) Fost. 315; East's P. C. 232. It seems that the guilt of the offender is extenuated where the act being done under the influence of passion from sudden provocation, or of fear, or of alarm, which for the time suspends or weakens the ordinary powers of judgment and self-control, is attributable to transport of passion or defect of judgment so occasioned, and not to a deliberate intention to kill or do great bodily harm. See 4th Report of Crim. Law Commiss.

(f) Fost. 293. Mason's Case, ibid. 132; East's P. C. 239; 1 Hale, 451; 1 Haw. c. 31, s. 24. In Mason's Case, the deceased and prisoner first played at cudgels, then fought in good earnest; being parted, the prisoner left the room in anger, and repeatedly threatened to fetch something in order to stick his brother. In half an hour the prisoner returned: the deceased offered to play at cudgels, to which the prisoner assented, but dropped his cudgel as the deceased approached; the deceased then struck the prisoner two blows on the shoulder; the prisoner immediately put his right hand into his bosom, drew out the blade of a tuck sword, and immediately stabbed the deceased and killed him. The judges held that the killing was wilful murder; the prisoner returned with a deliberate intention to take a deadly revenge for what had passed, and therefore neither the circumstance of the previous blows, nor of the quarrel, made any difference; the blows were plainly a provocation sought on his part, that he might execute the wicked purpose of his heart with some colour of excuse.

(g) Mason's Case, see the last note.

(1) [Mitchell v. The State, 5 Yerger, 340. Passion arising from provocation is evidence of the absence of malice, and reduces homicide to manslaughter, but passion without provocation, or provocation without passion, is not sufficient; and where there are both provocation and passion, the provocation must be sufficient. Pennsylvania v. Bell, Addison, 162. Same v. Honeyman, ibid. 149. Drunkenness does not incapacitate a man from forming a premeditated design to murder; but as drunkenness clouds the understanding and excites passion, it may be evidence of passion only, and of want of malice and design. Pennsylvania v. M'Fall, Addison, 257.

Where it appears, from the whole evidence, that the crime was, at the moment, deliberately or intentionally executed, the killing is murder. Commonwealth v. Dougherty, 1 Browne's Rep. Appx. 221. It is sufficient, if the circumstances of wilfulness and deliberation are proved, though they arose and were generated at this period of the transaction. Ibid. Pennsylvania v. M'Fall, ubi sup. See also United States v. Cornell, Mason, 91.

If the party killing had time to think, and did intend to kill for a minute, as well as an hour or a day, it is wilful and premeditated killing. Commonwealth v. Smith, and Commonwealth v. O'Hara, Wharton's Digest, 148.]

(A) (Provoking language does not justify a blow, and if an instrument calculated to produce death be used, the slayer is guilty of murder. State v. Merrill, 2 Dev. 269.)

depend principally, if not entirely, upon the question, whether, in the absence of previous malice, the act of the defendant, under all the circumstances of the case, can be attributed to the general infirmity and weakness of our nature, or, on the contrary, the facts themselves evince a wicked and vindictive disposition, and malignant spirit, fatally bent upon mischief (h); for, as was observed by Sir Michael Foster, "It is to human frailty, and that alone, that the law indulgeth in every case of felonious homicide" (i). All those facts, therefore, are most material which show the nature and extent of the provocation, and the return made by the prisoner as compared with that provocation, and the interval which has occurred between the provocation and the return made. It is the nature of the provocation, and not the mere effect of it on the mind of the prisoner, which the law regards; and the sufficiency of the provocation to extenuate the prisoner's guilt is a question of law (j).

If one kill another immediately upon a grave and serious provocation (k) likely to excite great passion, the offence will amount to no more than manslaughter, although the defendant used a deadly weapon; as, where A. detects a man in adultery with his wife (l), and in the first transport of passion kills him; but even in such a case, if he killed the adulterer deliberately upon revenge, after the fact and sufficient cooling time, it would have been murder. So a severe blow, or wound, occasioning considerable pain and effusion of blood, has been held to be a sufficient provocation to extenuate an immediate act of killing, although by means of a deadly weapon, into manslaughter (m).

*In cases of slight and inferior provocation, much depends upon the nature of the return made, and the instrument used. Where a boy had been assaulted, and his father ran three-quarters of a mile, and beat and killed the assailant, it was held to be but manslaughter; but this was so held (n) because he struck with a wand or small cudgel, and not with a deadly weapon. *723

No trespass to land or goods (1), or words of reproach, or provoking or insulting actions or gestures, short of an assault (o), are sufficient to free an homicide from the guilt of murder; and this rule governs all cases where the prisoner uses a deadly weapon, or otherwise manifests an intention to kill or to do some great bodily harm (p). But if on such a provocation by words or gestures, the prisoner strike with a stick, or other weapon not

(h) See Fost. Disc. 2, c. 5.

(i) Fost. 293.

(j) See Fost. Disc. 2, c. 5. Yet it is clearly a question of fact whether the killing be attributable to heat of blood occasioned by the provocation. The provocation must be such as the law recognizes, and not such a slight one that the return made is so excessive and disproportionate to the cause that the killing cannot be attributed to mere heat of blood; where, however, such excess and disproportion do not exist, then whether heat of blood was excited, and whether the act was attributable to heat of blood so excited, seem to be mere questions of fact. See 4th Report of the Crim. Law Commiss.

(k) See Tooley's Case, 2 Ld. Ray. 1296; 1 East's P. C. 325; Fost. 291; 1 Hale's P. C. 473; 1 Haw. P. C. c. 31, s. 34; 1 East's P. C. 236.

(l) 1 Hale 486. 1 Vent. 158. Sir T. Raym. 212.

(m) Stedman's Case, Fost. 292; where a woman struck a soldier in the face with an iron patten, which drew a great deal of blood, upon which he struck her on the breast with the pummel of his sword, and afterwards pursued her and stabbed her in the back, and it was held to be but manslaughter. But Lord Holt said, that a single box on the ear would not have been a sufficient provocation to kill in this manner, after he had given her a blow in return for the box on the ear. Mr. J. Foster observes upon this case, that the smart of the man's wound, and the effusion of blood, might possibly keep his indignation boiling to the moment of the fact.

(n) Fost. 294.

(o) Brain's Case, Hale, 435. Cro. Eliz. 778; Kel. 131.

(p) Fost. 290, 112; 2 Hale, 456.

(1) [No man has a right to defend his property (except his dwelling-house) against a mere trespasser, by making use of a deadly weapon. The State v. Zellers, 2 Halsted's Rep. 220. Commonwealth v. Drew & al. 4 Mass. Rep. 391.]

likely to kill, and unluckily, and against the intention of the party, death ensue, it will be but manslaughter (q) (1).

Where A. found B. trespassing on his land, and in the first transport of his passion beat and unluckily killed him, it was held to be manslaughter (r); but it would have been otherwise if he had betrayed malice by the instrument used, as if he had beaten the deceased with a hedge-stake (s).

In Holloway's Case (t), where a servant caught a boy in his master's grounds stealing wood, and tied him to a horse's tail, by means of which he was killed, it was held to be murder. In all cases of slight provocation the general rule is, that if it can be collected from the weapon made use of, or from any other circumstance, that the party intended to kill, it will be murder (u).

Conflict. Although it be a general rule that no words of reproach, or provoking
*724 *words or gestures, will reduce the offence from murder to manslaughter, yet if upon a sudden quarrel, and not upon preconceived malice (v), parties fight in the heat of blood upon equal terms, and no undue advantage be taken by the party who kills the other, the offence will be manslaughter; and it matters not who gave the first blow (x). But if B. draw his sword and make a pass at A., whose sword is undrawn, and then a contest ensue, in which A. is killed, it will be murder in B., for he sought the blood of A.; but if B. had first drawn, and waited till A. had drawn, it would have been manslaughter (y). So where A. threw a bottle with great force at the head of B. and immediately drew his sword, and B. returned the bottle at the head of A. and wounded him, and then A. stabbed B., it was held to be murder; for A. in throwing the bottle manifested an intention to do some great mischief, and his drawing immediately showed that he intended to follow it up (z). The plea of provocation is in no case available where the offender either seeks the provocation as a pretext for killing or

(q) Fost. 290. In Brain's Case, 1 Hale, 455, it is stated that Watts came along by the shop of Brain, and distorted his mouth, and smiled at him. Brain killed him; and held to be murder. But note, it does not appear how he killed him. See Lord Morley's Case, 1 Hale, 455; Kel. 55.

(r) 1 Hale, 473.

(s) Fost. 291; Ibid. 94. Even if a deadly weapon be used, but not in such a way as to show malice, it will be but manslaughter. R. v. Rowland Phillips, Cowp. 830.

(t) Pal. 548.

(u) Fost. 291. See the case of Tranter v. Reason, Fost. 293, and Str. 499; where the case seems to have been erroneously reported, and where it is represented that Mr. Lutterel having struck a sheriff's officer a slight blow with a cane, the officer and his companion fell upon him, stabbed him in nine places, and shot him whilst he lay on the ground entreating for mercy; and Mr. J. Foster intimates his opinion in very strong terms, that the circumstances constitute wilful murder; but it appears that the facts were misreported. See also the case of Willoughby & another, East's P. C. 228, Bodmin Summ. Ass. 1791. Two soldiers were refused liquor by a publican at eleven o'clock at night; an hour and a half afterwards, when the door was opened to let out some company, one of them rushed in, and renewed his demand for beer, which was again refused, and on his refusing to depart, and offering to lay hold of the landlord, the latter at the same instant collared him, the one pushing and the other pulling, towards the outer door, where, when the landlord came, he received a violent blow on the head with some sharp instrument from the other soldier, which occasioned his death. Buller, J. held it to be murder in both, notwithstanding the previous struggle; for the landlord did no more in attempting to put the soldier out at that time of night and after the warning he had given, than he lawfully might, which was no provocation for the cruel revenge taken, more especially as there was reasonable evidence that the prisoners came the second time with a deliberate intention to use personal violence. And see Mason's Case, supra, 721 (f).

(v) Supra, 721. (x) 1 Hale, 456.

(y) Fost. 295; 1 Haw. c. 31, s. 27.

(z) Mawgridge's Case, Kel. 128, 9; Fost. 295, 6. Oneby's Case, 2 Ld. Raym. 1485; 2 Str. 771.

(1) [The general rule is, that words are not, but that blows are, a sufficient provocation to make a homicide manslaughter. The State v. Tackett, 1 Hawks, 210. But it exists in the very nature of slavery, that the relation between a white man and a slave is different from that between free persons; and therefore many acts will extenuate the homicide of a slave, which would not constitute a legal provocation, if done by a white person. Ibid. And a person charged with the murder of a slave, may give in evidence that the deceased was turbulent, and that he was insolent and impudent to white persons in general. Ibid.] doing great bodily harm, or endeavours to kill or do great bodily harm before provocation given (a).

In every case of homicide upon provocation, if there be time for passion to subside, and reason to interpose, such homicide will amount to murder (b). Where, however, an interval has occurred between the quarrel and the combat, and there be a doubt whether the parties when they fought were still in heat of blood, it seems to be a question of fact rather than of law, whether they acted coolly and deliberately, or under the influence of passion. It seems, in all cases of a defence of this nature, to be a question of fact, whether the prisoner yielded to sudden infirmity of temper occasioned by a provocation recognized by law, or by a malicious and deliberate artifice sought the provocation for the purpose of wounding or destroying (c). If a man encourage another to destroy himself, and is present whilst he does so, he is guilty of murder as a principal (d).

Upon a prosecution for a murder committed abroad by one subject upon another, under 9 Geo. 4, c. 31, s. 7, the jury ought to be satisfied that the prisoner was a British-born subject; but the declaration of the prisoner as to his place of birth unexplained is, as against himself, evidence to go to the jury (e). Where the body of the infant was found in a bed amongst the feathers, but there was also proof of the mother having sent for a surgeon and provided clothes, held that it negatived the charge of concealment (f).

Accessories, &c.

If A. require B. to procure some one to murder C., and B. procure D. to do it, A. is an accessory before the fact to D. (g). So it is a general rule, that if A. command B. to do an unlawful act, he is accessory to all that ensues upon the execution of that act (1). If he command B. to beat C. and B. kills C., A. is accessory to the murder, for his command naturally tended to endanger the life of C. (h). So if A. command B. to do an unlawful act, and B. executes the act in substance, although he deviates in particular circumstances, A. is accessory to the offence; as for instance, if A. command B. to poison C., and he stab or shoot him (i). It is otherwise where B. departs from the command in substance; as where A. directs B. to beat C. with a small stick, and he beat him with a bludgeon, or wound him with a sword (k); for there was no command to do anything which would probably occasion death.

*725

NEGLIGENCE (l).

General principle.

Negligence may be considered, 1st, generally as a test of civil or criminal liability. A gross and vicious disregard of the interests of others

(a) See 4th Report of the Crim. Law Commiss. p. 39.

(b) Fost. 296, and supra, 721.

(c) As where A. bade B. take a pin out of his sleeve, with intent to take occasion to strike or wound (1 Hale, 457), or A. with the like intent offers B. a pint of ale to strike him. 1 Haw. c. 31, s. 24. Mason's Case, supra, 721.

(d) R. v. Dyson, Russ. & Ry. C. C. L. 523. (e) R. v. Helsham,[1] 4 C. & P. 394.

(f) R. v. Highley,[2] 4 C. & P. 366. (g) Fost. 125.

(h) 2 Haw. P. C. c. 29, s. 18; 4 Bl. Com. 37; 1 Hale, 435. So if A. direct B. to rob C., and B. kills C. in the attempt; for the death is the immediate effect of an act done in the execution of a felonious command. 2 Haw. c. 29, s. 18.

(i) 2 Haw. c. 29, s. 20; 4 Bl. Com. 37. (k) 1 Hale, 436.

(l) As to the cases in which negligence in the performance of a contract may be set up as a defence to an action for remuneration for services performed, vide supra, 105, and infra, tit. Work and Labour.

(1) [If one commit suicide in consequence of the counsel and persuasion of another, the latter is guilty of murder, even though the felo de se were under sentence of death. Commonwealth v. Bowen, 13 Mass. Rep. 356.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 438. [2]Id. xix. 421.

is not distinguishable either in point of moral guilt, or evil results, from a malicious intention to injure; and therefore, where a man so uses even that which is his own carelessly and negligently, and without a reasonable degree of care and caution not to injure others, where injury is likely to ensue, he is usually not only civilly but even criminally responsible for the consequences (m). It may be regarded as an important and fundamental principle of adjudication in cases where a loss occasioned by spoliation or fraud must fall on one or other of two innocent persons, that he through whose negligence or want of caution the injury has been effected should bear the loss (n).

In the next place, negligence may be regarded as a species of fraud, being a breach of some undertaking, either express or implied. In this point of view its effect will at present be considered.

Particulars of proof.

Where the plaintiff complains of an injury resulting from the negligence or unskilful conduct of the defendant, in the performance of some work or duty undertaken by the latter, he must, whether the action be framed in contract or in tort, prove, 1st, The contract or undertaking on the ground of which the defendant acted (o). 2dly, The negligence of the defendant. 3dly, The loss which has resulted from it, according to the allegations in the declaration (p); or so much of these essentials as is put in issue by the new rules (q); the degree of negligence which is essential to the action varies much in reference to circumstances. According to the soundest principles of morality, the very foundation of the law itself (r), "whoever undertakes

*726 *another man's business, makes it his own, that is, promises to employ upon it the same care, attention and diligence, that he would do if it were actually his own; for he knows that the business was committed to him with that expectation, and with no more than this." This principle seems to govern all cases where one man acts gratuitously for another, whether the business in which he acts does or does not import particular skill and knowledge. If the party act gratuitously, and in a situation which does not import particular skill and experience, and act bonâ fide to the best of his ability, and with as much discretion as he would exercise in his own affairs, he is not liable to an action for any loss which ensues (s).

Where the defendant acted without reward.

Thus, where a merchant voluntarily, and without reward, undertook to enter a parcel of goods at the custom-house, for the plaintiff, together with a parcel of his own, and made the entry under a wrong denomination, in consequence of which the goods were seized, it was held, that having acted

(m) See tit. MURDER.—NUISANCE. The maxim of the English as well as of the civil law is, sic utere tuo ut alienum non hedas.

(n) If a banker pay the money of a customer on a forged order, the banker and not the customer, who gave no authority, must bear the loss. Hall v. Fuller,[1] 5 B. & C. 750. And see Smith v. Mason,[2] 6 Taunt. 76. But where the customer draws a draft so negligently that a stranger easily alters the sum to a larger one, the loss must fall upon the customer. Young v. Grote,[3] 4 Bing. 253. The same principle applies where a negotiable security is taken without sufficient caution. See Snow v. Peacock,[4] 3 Bing. 108. Supra, tit. BILL OF EXCHANGE; infra, tit. TROVER.

(o) Supra, p. 57, 282. As to parties to the action, vide supra, 284, 297. Variance from allegations, supra, 297, & seq. And Hill v. Tucker, 1 Taunt. 7, and tit. PARTIES.

(p) As to variance, vide supra, 58, 284, 299; and Vol. I. tit. VARIANCE. In an action by an infant against a surgeon for mal-treatment; the allegation that the plaintiff employed him is not material, the declaration being framed as on a branch of duty. Gladwell v. Steggall,[5] 5 Bing. N. C. 733; 8 Se. 60.

(q) Supra, tit. CASE. Infra, tit. NUISANCE. And see the new rules, infra, tit. RULES.

(r) Paley's Moral Philosophy, 144.

(s) See 1 H. B. 162. Ld. Loughborough says, "I agree with Sir W. Jones, that where a bailee undertakes to perform a gratuitous act, from which the bailor alone is to receive benefit, there the bailee is liable only for gross negligence; but if a man gratuitously undertakes to do a thing to the best of his skill where his situation or profession is such as to imply skill, an omission of that skill is imputable to him as gross negligence."

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xii. 368. [2]Id. i. 312. [3]Id. xiii. 420. [4]Id. xiii. 25. [5]Id. xxxv. 292.

bonâ fide, and to the best of his knowledge, he was not liable (t). But it seems that in such a case, if a ship-broker, or a clerk in a custom-house, had undertaken to enter the goods, although gratuitously, such a mistake in making the entry would have amounted to gross negligence, since his situation and employment would then have necessarily implied a competent degree of knowledge in making such entries (u).

Although in each of the preceding cases the agent acted gratuitously, in the former he was not liable, because he acted to the best of his ability, which was all that he engaged to do; in the latter, he impliedly undertook to exert a degree of skill and knowledge, which he failed to do.

Most then of the cases of this nature, if not all, resolve themselves into a question of understanding and compact. Lord Holt, in the case of Coggs v. Bernard (x), held, that the mandatory was liable, because in such a case *a neglect is a deceit to the bailor: for when he trusts the bailee upon his undertaking to be careful, he has put a fraud upon the plaintiff by being negligent, his pretence of care being the persuasion that induced the plaintiff to trust him; and a breach of trust undertaken voluntarily will be a good ground of action. *727

Where a party receives a reward for the performance of certain acts, he is by law answerable for any degree of neglect on his part; the payment of the money may be considered as an insurance for the due performing of what he has undertaken (y). Where the defendant undertook, &c., for reward.

And it seems, that in general where a person professes himself to be of a certain business, trade or profession, and undertakes to perform an act which relates to his particular employment, an action lies for any injury

(t) Shiells v. Blackburn, 1 H. B. 158. [See 6 Mass. Rep. 258.]

(u) See Ld. Loughborough's observations, 1 H. B. 162. If a man applies to a surgeon to attend him in a disorder for a reward, and the surgeon treats him improperly, there is gross negligence, and the surgeon is liable to an action; the surgeon would also be liable for such negligence, if he undertook, gratis, to attend a sick person, because his situation implies skill in surgery; but if the patient applies to a man of a different employment or occupation, for his gratuitous assistance, who either does not exert all his skill, or administers improper medicines, to the best of his ability, such person is not liable.

(x) 2 Lord Ray. 809. Where a law agent in Scotland was employed to place out money on heritable security, and in preparing the heritable bond he drew it up as a public holding (as under the superior lord), although the precept of sasine made no reference to any particular manner, yet held, that as it must be necessarily referred to the manner of holding specified in the deed, and no confirmation by the lord had been obtained, the bond was, as against subsequent incumbrancers, a mere nullity, and the omission such gross negligence or ignorance that the agent was bound to make good the loss sustained by his employer. Stevenson v. Rowand, 2 Dow & C. 104.

Where the respondents, a mercantile house, received a commission from a party for whom they had before purchased stock, to sell it out when it reached to or above a certain price; held, that from such time they made the stock their own, and were liable to account to their employer for the price, with interest, allowing the dividends he had afterwards received in ignorance of the stock having ever reached the price stated. Bertram v. Godfrey, 1 Knapp, 381.

In an action by the shippers for loss of goods, against the owners, it is no defence that the owners chartered the ship to the master by an instrument which in substance amounted to nothing more than the appointment of a master, upon an undertaking by him that the ship should earn a certain sum, and all beyond should be for his own benefit, but all loss to be made good by him; and the plaintiffs are not prevented by a knowledge of that instrument from recovering. Colvin v. Newberry,[1] 8 B. & C. 166; and 2 M. & Ry. 47.

The law implies a duty in the owner of a ship, whether a general one or hired for the special purpose of the voyage, to proceed without unnecessary deviation in the usual and customary course; where there had been a deviation without any justifiable cause, during which the cargo (of lime), in consequence of tempestuous weather, became heated and took fire, and the cargo and vessel entirely lost; held that the owner was liable, and that the wrongful act of the master was a sufficiently proximate cause of the loss. Davis v. Garrett,[2] 6 Bing. 716.

(y) See the observations of Wilson, J. in Shiells v. Blackburn, 1 H. B. 161. He adds, that where the undertaking is gratuitous, and the party has acted bona fide, it is not consistent either with the spirit or policy of the law to render him liable in an action.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xv. 179. [2]Id. xix. 212.

resulting either from want of skill (z) in his business or profession, or from negligence or carelessness in his conduct (a).

In some instances, as in the cases of carriers (b) and innkeepers (c), the undertaking results as a legal obligation incident to the character in which the defendant undertakes to act; and it is consequently sufficient to show that the plaintiff dealt with him in that character, without proof of any special undertaking or agreement.

Proof of negligence.

2dly. The question of negligence is usually one of fact for the jury. The question may be either one of law, where the case falls within any general and settled rule or principle; or of fact, where no such rule or principle is applicable to the particular circumstances, and where therefore the conclusion of negligence in fact must be found, or excluded by the jury (d).

*728

*In an action against a coach-owner for negligence, proof that the coach broke down, and that the plaintiff was greatly bruised, is primâ facie evidence that the injury arose from the unskilfulness of the driver, or the insufficiency of the coach (e).

Damage.

3dly. As to the proof of the damage resulting to the plaintiff, see the titles ASSUMPSIT, &c. (f).

(z) See Shiells v. Blackburn, 1 H. B. 158. Moore v. Morgue, Cowp. 480. Pnff. lib. 5, c. 4, s. 3. As to actions against attornies, vide supra, 112. See also tit. CARRIERS; and B. N. P. 73, where the general rule is laid down, that in all cases where a damage accrues to another by the negligence, ignorance, or misbehaviour of a person in the duty of his trade or calling, an action on the case will lie; as, if a farrier kill my horse by bad medicines, or refuse to shoe (quære), or prick him in the shoeing.

(a) Seare v. Prentice, 8 East, 348; where it was held, that case would lie against a surgeon for want of skill, as well as for negligence. (b) Supra, 282.

(c) It has been held, that, though an innkeeper refuse to take charge of goods till a future day, because his house is full of parcels, yet that he is still liable for the loss if the goods be stolen during the time while the plaintiff stops as a guest. Bennet v. Mellor, 5 T. R. 273. [See Clute v. Wiggins, 14 Johns. 175. Sereider v. Geiss, 1 Yeates, 34. Quinton v. Courtney, 1 Hayw. 40.]

(d) See the case of Moore v. Morgue, Cowp. 479, where, in an action by a merchant against his agent, for negligence in not insuring goods, Lord Mansfield directed the jury generally, that if they thought there was gross negligence, or that the defendant had acted mala fide, they should find for the plaintiff; if, on the contrary, they were of opinion that he had acted bona fide, and to the best of his judgment, then they should find for the defendant. And see Reece v. Righy,[1] 4 B. & A. 202; where it was left by Abbott, L. C. J. as a question of fact for the jury, whether the defendant, an attorney, had used reasonable care in the conduct of a cause. In the case of Russell v. Hankey, which was an action against a banker, the defendant having received bills from correspondents in the country, to whom they had been indorsed, had given them up to the acceptor, on receiving cheques for the amount, and Lord Kenyon nonsuited the plaintiff. The Court afterwards refused a rule nisi to set aside the nonsuit. See further as to proof of the defendant's breach of undertaking, supra, 101. And see 3 Taunt. 117. A broker is employed to insure goods from Gibraltar to Dublin, the principal stating, that he would take the risk from Malaga to Gibraltar Bay; the broker is guilty of gross negligence in insuring at and from Gibraltar. He should have stated that the goods were loaded at Malaga, and have effected the insurance at and from Gibraltar Bay. Park v. Hammond,[2] 2 Marsh. 180. If mice eat the cargo, and thereby occasion no small damage to the merchant, the master must make good the loss, because he is guilty of a fault; yet if he had cats on board his ship he shall be excused. Roccus. s. 58. Abbott on Shipping, 241. Where the master filled the boiler of a steam-engine at night, in winter, with water, and a frost ensuing, the water was frozen and a pipe burst, and water in consequence escaped into the hold and did damage there; it was held that the jury were warranted in finding that the loss was occasioned by the defendant's negligence, and not by the act of God. Siordet v. Hall,[3] 4 Bing. 107.

(e) Christie v. Griggs, 2 Camp. 79. Curtis v. Drinkwater,[4] 2 B. & Ad. 169. If the coach be insufficient the owner is liable although the defect be out of sight, and not apparent on an ordinary examination. Sharp v. Gray,[5] 9 Bing. 457; and see Israel v. Clarke, 4 Esp. C. 259. Aston v. Heaven, 2 Esp. C. 533. Goodman v. Taylor,[6] 5 C. & P. 410. Supra, tit. CARRIERS.

(f) See also, tit. CASE, ACTION ON. Where the defendant, a postmaster, agreed to deliver letters in a particular mode, and by mistake omitted to deliver one for two days, which contained a returned bill, but the plaintiff might have given notice of dishonour in due time by sending a special messenger for the purpose, though he might be too late to do so by the post, it was held that he was not liable in damages to the amount of the bill. Hordern v. Dalton,[7] 1 C. & P. 181.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 401. [2]Id. i. 464. [3]Id. xv. 87. [4]Id. xxii. 51. [5]Id. xxiii. 331. [6]Id. xxiv. 385. [7]Id. xi. 359.

NOTICE (g).

General rules.

The laws and statutes of the realm, and many other matters of universal interest, are presumed to be known to all (h). In matters of private concern the fact of notice, or knowledge of particular facts, is often an essential and important circumstance to constitute civil or even criminal (i) liability; and this is, in ordinary cases, matter of proof.

It is a rule of law that every one who has an interest in land shall take notice, at his peril, of acts concerning the land (j) (A). It is also a general rule that notice is unnecessary where the fact lies equally within the knowledge of both parties (k).

*729

*Every one must take notice at his own peril whether his act be legal. If A. having a right of way over the land of B., the latter stop it up and let the land to C., an action lies against the latter for continuing the stoppage, though he had no notice (l).

It is uniformly held, in the case of executions, that an act done after notice, is done at the peril of the actor (m).

The want of notice is usually sufficient to rebut an inference of acquiescence or of a waver of a forfeiture; and therefore where the receipt of rent is relied on as evidence of a waver of a forfeiture, it is of importance to show that at the time the landlord had notice of the forfeiture (n). Notice of forfeiture in such cases is a material and issuable fact (o).

If several be bound under an oligation to do a particular act, notice to one is notice to all (p). If notice be given to the principal, notice to his agent is unnecessary, for it is the business of the principal to give notice to the agent (q). But it seems that in general, where it is necessary to prove (g) In what case a notice by a public company amounts to the exercise of option to purchase, see R. v. Hungerford Market Company,[1] 4 B. & Ad. 327. As to notice of the appointment as constable at least, see Fletcher v. Ingram, 5 Mod. 127. As to notice of a prior deposit of title deeds, see Plumb v. Fluitt, 2 Anst. 432.

(h) Supra, Vol. I. and Index, tit. NOTICE. Ignorance of the law excuses no man; not that all men know the law, but because it is an excuse every man will make, and no man can tell how to confute him. Selden.

(i) Notice is requisite in order to make the rescuer of a felon from the custody of a private person guilty of felony. 1 Hale, P. C. 606.

(j) 5 Co. 113. Com. Dig. Condition, L. 9. If therefore a woman lessor marry, the lessee ought to take notice, and pay the rent to the husband; and if he pay it to the wife, without the husband's consent, he shall pay it again to the husband. Cro. J. 617.

(k) Hardr. 42. 11 Mod. 48. Chitty on Pleading, 321. As to cases where an averment of notice is necessary, see Com. Dig. tit. Pleader, C. 73. Where the act on which the plaintiff's demand arises is secret, and lies within his own knowledge, an action cannot be maintained without notice given. Per Holroyd, J., Bickerton v. Burrell, 5 M. & S. 383. Com. Dig. Pleader, C. 73.

(l) 1 Roll. R. 222; Ray. 424. And see Prince v. Allington, Cro. Eliz. 918. So a sheriff may become liable for the tort of his predecessor. Ray. 424. Or a gaoler for the detention of prisoner under a lawful writ, but in a place to which the writ did not extend. Lambert v. Bessey, Ray. 421; sed vid. infra, 745.

(m) Per Lord Mansfield, in Moss v. Gallimore, Doug. 269.

(n) See tit. EJECTMENT.

(o) 2 Will. Saund. 207, c. Pennant's Case, 3 Rep. 646. R. v. Harrison, 2 T. R. 430.

(p) Mo. 555.

(q) Mayhew v. Eames,[2] 3 B. & C. 601.

(A) (A purchaser has not by law constructive notice of all matters of record, but only of such as the title deeds of the estate refer to or put him upon inquiry for. Dexter v. Harris, 2 Mason's C. C. R. 531. A conveyance with a recital of the intent of a purchase, is a conveyance with notice, and the grantee takes the property subject to the trusts implied as well as expressed. Cuyler v. Bradt, 2 Caine, C. 326. He who acquires a legal title, having notice of the prior equity of another, becomes a trustee for that other, to the extent of his equity, but notice of an illegal act can have no operation. Wilson v. Mason, 1 Cranch, 451. A purchaser however for a valuable consideration, without notice, has a good title, though he purchased of one who had obtained a conveyance by fraud. Jackson v. Henry, 10 John. R. 185. See also Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch, 87, 133. And one who is about to purchase land is bound to regard information given to him by one who was the agent of the vendor for renting the land, respecting the title. Lewis v. Bradford, 10 Watts, 67. So notice of a prior incumbrance to an agent is notice to the principal. Astor v. Wells, 4 Wheat. 446.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxiv. 68. [2]Id. x. 195.

notice to a man in a matter which concerns his trade or business, it is usually sufficient to prove notice to his servant or agent (r). A notice of prior title to the attorney is equivalent to notice to the client himself (s), provided it arise out of the same transaction (t).

The same person being co-executor and co-partner, his knowledge of a transaction in the latter capacity affects the right of the executor to sue (u).

Where an Act of Parliament enacts that no action shall be brought for anything done or performed in execution or under the authority of the Act, unless notice be previously given, such a notice is necessary in those cases only where the party against whom the action is brought had reasonable ground for supposing that what he did was authorized by the Act (x).

*730 *A particular Act of Parliament, giving further protection to magistrates, does not dispense with the necessity of giving notice under the general statute 24 Geo. 2 (y).

The rule in equity is, that whatever is sufficient to put a party upon inquiry is good notice (z) (A).

Direct proof. The proof is either direct or presumptive; direct where actual notice has been given either orally or in writing (a).

(r) Supra, tit. CARRIER. Facts coming to the knowledge of a party's agent or counsel, are notice to the party. Norris v. La Neve, R. T. Hardw. 329.

(s) Merry v. Abney, 1 Ch. C. 38. Brotherson v. Holt, 2 Vern. 594, 609; 1 Bro. C. C. 244.

(t) Fitzg. 207; 3 Atk. 291; Bac. Ab. Ev. A. 2.

(u) —— v. Adams, 1 Young, 117.

(x) Cooke v. Leonard,[1] 6 B. & C. 351, where the defendants had removed a dromedary from a private stable, and attempted to justify under a local Act, which (inter alia) prohibited the exhibition of any beast in the streets. So in Lawton v. Miller, cited Ib., where a custom-house officer seized a man going abroad, hinking he was an artificer. Morgan v. Palmer,[2] 2 B. & C. 729, where a justice exacted a fee from a publican for renewing his license. Secus, where the act is done bona fide, and may reasonably be supposed to be within the statute; as where a magistrate being authorized to commit a party for riding on the shafts of a cart, committed him for being on the shafts whilst the cart was standing still. Bird v. Gunston, cited by Bayley, J., 8 B. & C. 354. And see Beechey v. Sides,[3] 9 B. & C. 806; supra, 588 (c), 506 (q).

Where the defendant, a fenreeve of a parish, conceiving the plaintiff to be trespassing without any authority, had, after desiring him to desist, caused him to be apprehended; held, that having reason to suppose he was acting under 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30, s. 4, he was entitled to notice of action. Wright v. Wales,[4] 5 Bing. 336. Where a scavenger, appointed by the Commissioners of Sewers for London, seized a cart and horse (supposed to contain cinders), and assaulted and imprisoned the driver (plaintiff), and beat the horse; held that it was within the section of the local Act 57 G. 3, c. 19, s. 136, requiring twenty-one days' notice of action for anything done in pursuance and by authority of that Act. Breedon v. Murphy,[5] 3 C. & P. 574. Where the treasurer of the West India Dock Company was sued in trover for goods deposited in the company's warehouses; held that he was entitled to fourteen days' notice given by 39 G. 3, c. 69, s. 185, although he had delivered over the goods upon an indemnity, it being the act of the company through him. Sellick v. Smith,[6] 11 Moore, 459. The protection under statutable provisions of this description is not confined to actions of tort. Under such provisions in a local Act, a toll-collector is entitled to notice. Greenway v. Hurd, 4 T. R. 553; Waterhouse v. Keen,[7] 4 B. & C. 200. Secus, in case of a contract made by an officer, to whom similar provisions are applicable under a local Act. Fletcher v. Grenwell, 4 Dowl. P. C. 166.

(y) Rogers v. Broderip,[8] 9 D. & R. 194.

(z) Smith v. Low, 1 Atk. 490. The knowledge of a practice among publicans to deposit leases with their brewers has been held to be such notice as ought to put a prudent man upon inquiry, so as to give an equitable mortgage by the deposit of the copy of a court roll a priority over a legal mortgage. Whitbread v. Jordan, 1 Young, 303. Ex parte Warren, 19 Ves. 202. Winter v. Lord Anson, 3 Russ. 493.

(a) Where a statute requires reasonable notice, it is not essential that the notice should be in writing. 5 B. & A. 539.[9]

(A) (It is a general rule that whatever is sufficient to put the party upon inquiry is good notice. Where a party has knowledge of the fact, he has notice of the legal consequences resulting from those facts. The Ploughboy, 1 Gallis, C. C. R. 41. Knowledge that another has a claim to land is enough to put the party on inquiry, and charge him with presumptive notice, which is where the law imputes to a purchaser the knowledge of a fact of which the exercise of common prudence and ordinary diligence must have apprized him. Jackson v. Cadwell, 1 Cow. 622. Knowledge of a material fact imparted by a director of a bank to the board at a regular meeting is notice to the bank. Bank v. Whitehead, 10 Watts, 397. Vague reports and rumours from strangers, and suspicion of notice, though a strong suspicion, are not sufficient ground on which to charge a purchaser with notice of a title in a third person. Hagg v. Mason, 2 Summers C. C. R. 100.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiii. 195. [2] Id. ix. 232. [3] Id. xvii. 502. [4] Id. xv. 462. [5] Id. xiv. 458. [6] Id. xiii. 66. [7] Id. x. 310. [8] Id. xxii. 387. [9] Id. vii. 183.

Although it be a general rule that secondary evidence shall not be admitted as to the contents of any written document in the possession of the adversary, unless notice has been given to produce it, yet notice to produce the latter notice is unnecessary, for the obvious reason, that if it were, the same necessity would extend to every successive notice ad infinitum (1). Doubts have sometimes occurred at Nisi Prius upon the question, to what notices the exception extends (b), and whether it applies to notices in general, such as notices of the dishonour of bills of exchange, &c. In principle, it seems to be clear that the exception is limited to the case of a notice to produce some other document for the purpose of evidence in the cause; all other cases of notice are within the general rule, but not within the exception. The particular contents of a notice to quit may be as essential to the cause as those of any other document, and it may therefore be as material to require the best evidence in that case as in any other. Such a document is essentially distinguishable from a mere formal notice to produce an instrument in evidence: its contents create or vary the rights of the litigant parties; it is part of the res gestæ; and the objection which excludes the necessity of proving a notice to produce a notice, namely, that an infinite series of such notices would be equally necessary, is wholly inapplicable, the nature and object of the two documents being entirely different. Notice to produce a notice, when unnecessary.

In an action against the surety, on an idemnity bond conditioned to pay to the plaintiffs what should be due from the principal, within six months after notice, Lord Ellenborough held, that in order to let the plaintiff into proof of a written notice to the defendant, of the balance due, the usual preparatory proof of notice to produce the document was necessary; for the notice to the surety to pay the money was not a mere formal notice, but *a statement of what was due (c). The same principle seems also to apply to notices of the dishonour of bills of exchange (d), notices to quit (e), and all other notices which are part of the res gestæ, upon the contents of which the legal rights and situation of the litigant parties materially and essentially depend (f). *731

The Judges have resolved that a written copy of a letter, giving notice of the dishonour of a bill of exchange, and made at the same time, was sufficient without proof of notice to produce the original (g). This case, however, seems to have been decided on the ground that the action was brought on the very bill to which the notice related; in a later case it was held (h), that an examined copy of a letter giving notice of the dishonour of a bill of exchange (not the subject of the action) was not receivable in evidence, without notice to produce the original. How proved.

It seems to be sufficient in all cases to prove the service of a duplicate

(b) Vide supra, 364.

(c) Grove & another v. Ware,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 174.

(d) In Langdon v. Hulls, 5 Esp. C. 157, and Shaw v. Markham, Peake's C. 165, notice to produce the letter containing notice of the dishonour of a bill was held to be necessary; in Ackland v. Pearce, 2 Camp. C. 601, the proof of the notice to produce was held to be unnecessary; so in Roberts v. Bradshaw,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 28.

(e) Vide supra, p. 417.

(f) And, as it seems, the same principle also applies to notices of action to justices and others required by particular statutes. It is essential that the Courts should see that the requisitions of the particular statute have been complied with, and this is best proved by means of the notice itself or by proof of a duplicate original.

(g) Kine v. Beaumont,[3] 3 B. & B. 288.

(h) By Abbott, C. J. in Lanauze v. Palmer,[4] 1 M. & M. 32.

(1) {Eisenhart v. Slaymaker, 14 Serg. & Rawle, 153.}

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. vii. 300. [2]Id. ii. 281. [3]Id. vii. 440. [4]Id. xxii. 239.

notice (i). Notice to produce a document may be served, as has been seen, either on the adverse party or his attorney (k), in criminal as well as civil proceedings (l). Service at the dwelling-house is sufficient, unless some statute requires personal service (m). Some instances of presumptive evidence of service have already been referred to (n). Evidence of a notice by parol is usually sufficient (o).

Service of an order of removal by justices must either be by the delivery of the order itself, or by leaving a copy of the order and at the same time producing the original (p). Where notice is alleged, it is not sufficient to *732 *prove circumstances which excuse notice (q); but it is sufficient to prove a notice which, under the particular circumstances, was given within a reasonable though not within the usual time (r).

Presumptive and constructive notice.

In some instances presumptive evidence of notice is sufficient; as by showing that the notice was contained in a newspaper which the party to be affected with the notice usually read (s) (A). It has been held, that a recital in a deed is constructive notice of the contents to a party to the deed (t). But notice of the contents of the deed cannot be inferred from the mere fact that the witness attested the execution of the deed by a surety.

(i) Jory v. Orchard, 2 B. & P. 41. Gotlieb v. Danvers, 2 Esp. C. 455. Anderson v. May, 2 B. & P. 237. Philipson v. Chase, 2 Camp. 110. Supra, Vol. I. tit. WRITTEN EVIDENCE. And (semble) there is no difference between a duplicate original and a copy made at the time. Kine v. Beaumont,[1] 3 B. & B. 288.

(k) Supra, Vol. I. tit. WRITTEN EVIDENCE. Attorney-General v. Le Merchant, 2 T. R. 201. Cates v. Winter, 3 T. R. 306; Peake's Ev. 115. Where there is an agent in town, notices in the course of the cause ought to be given to him, and not to the attorney in the country; per Buller, J., Griffiths v. Williams, 1 T. R. 711; and see Hayes v. Perkins, 3 East, 568. As in the case of executing a writ of inquiry. Ibid.

Service of a copy on any person resident at or belonging to the place, entered by an attorney in the book of the Clerk of Pleas of Exchequer, is good service; R. G. Excheq. M. and Tr. 1 W. 4. Service of rules, notices and orders, must be made before nine at night; R. G. Hil. 2 W. 4. It is not essential, except in cases of attachment, that the original should be shown, unless demanded. Ib.

(l) Ibid.

(m) Per Mansfield, C. J., Waters v. Taylor, Westm. June 24, 1813. Logan v. Houlditch, 1 Esp. C. 22. Where notice is to be given at the place of abode, it seems that notice given at a place of business where neither of the plaintiffs slept, but a servant only, is not sufficient. Johnson v. Lord,[2] 1 M. & M. 444. Where notice is required, proof ought to be given in the first instance as the foundation for the other evidence. Ib.

(n) See the case of Champneys v. Peck, supra, 110, 228.

(o) Supra, Vol. I. tit. WRITTEN EVIDENCE. R. v. Justices of Surrey,[3] 5 B. & A. 439. But the properest course is to serve a written notice; and Gould, J., at Exeter, held a parol notice to produce a deed to be insufficient.

(p) R. v. Alnwick Inhab.,[4] 5 B & A. 184. (q) Supra, 229.

(r) Field v. Thrush,[5] 8 B & C. 387.

(s) See tit. PARTNERS. Proof of notice being advertised in a county newspaper is not sufficient proof of notice to a party, without some proof that he took in the paper in question. Norwich and Lowestoff Navigation Company v. Theobald,[6] 1 M. & M. 153. Where notice was to be published in the Northampton and Cambridge newspapers, there being but one at each place, it was held to be sufficient to advertise in those, although others were afterwards established. Tibbetts v. Yorke,[7] 5 B. & Ad. 605.

(t) Prosser v. Watts, 6 Madd. 59. Title-deeds, as laid before a counsel or attorney, or anything which could not be supposed to make an impression on the memory, shall not be taken as constructive notice. Ashley v. Bayley, 2 Ves. 370. As to the effect of a Registry Act as notice, see Lord Redesdale's judgment in Bushell v. Bushell, 1 Sc. & Lefroy, 103.—Lord Hardwicke, in Hide v. Dodd, 2 Atk. 204, said, that the Register Act (7 Anne, c. 20) is notice to everybody, and the meaning of it was to prevent parol proofs of notice, for it was only in case of fraud that the Courts have broke in upon the statute, though one incum-

(A) Notice in the newspapers is not such a notice to consignees as will put goods discharged on the levee at their risk, unless the knowledge of that notice be brought home to them. Koln v. Packard, 3 Louis. R. 229. And the same principle applies to a notice to freighters of the departure of a vessel. Jones v. Smalley, 5 Louis. R. 31. An advertisement in a newspaper, by the drawer of a note, cautioning the public against taking it, and stating that he had a legal and just defence, is not evidence to charge an endorsee with notice, although it appears that the latter was a subscriber to the paper, that it was duly sent to him, and that no complaint was made of its not being received. Beltzhoover v. Bluckstock, 3 Watts, 20. General notice in a newspaper, printed in a place where a partnership is carried on, is notice of the dissolution of the partnership to all who had no previous dealing with the concern, but it is not sufficient notice to those who have had previous dealings with the partnership. Watkinson v. Bank of Pennsylvania, 4 Wharton, 402.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. vii. 440. [2]Id. xxii. 355. [3]Id. vii. 183. [4]Id. vii. 62. [5]Id. xv. 242. [6]Id. xxii. 272. [7]Id. xxxii. 137.

The mere fact that A. subscribed a paper writing as a witness, is not in itself sufficient to charge him with notice of the contents (u).

Where the father and uncle of the lessor of the plaintiff, being seised in tail, each granted a lease for ninety-nine years of one-third of the premises, and the jury found expressly that the lease had been confirmed by the lessor of plaintiffs, it was held that the father's lease, being only voidable by the issue in tail and not void, he could not, after ten years receiving rent from the lessee, be supposed to have acted in ignorance of his right (x).

General principle as to notice of legal proceedings.

It is a rule of law, founded on the first principles of natural justice, that no judgment shall be pronounced against one who has not had notice given of the proceedings, and an opportunity to defend himself (A).

Where trustees under a turnpike Act had power to turn roads through private grounds, and if they could not agree with the proprietors, to summon a jury to inquire of damages, an inquisition under the Act was set aside, because it did not appear on the face of the proceedings that any notice had been given to the owners of the land (y).

Upon an appeal against a conviction upon the 5 Geo. 4, c. 83, s. 4, of a party as a rogue and vagabond for indecent exposure in a public place, it was held that a notice of appeal, stating as a ground that he was not guilty of the offence, was sufficient, and signified that all the ingredients of the offence were disputed (z).

*733 *As to notice of disputing the steps of bankruptcy, in an action by the assignees of a bankrupt (a), notice of an act of bankruptcy (b), of the dishonour of a bill of exchange (c), notice to prove value given for a bill of exchange (d), of non-responsibility by carriers, (e) of a distress by a landlord (f), of notice to quit by a landlord (g), of disputing the value, &c. in an action for goods sold and delivered (h), of a robbery, &c. in an action against the hundred (i), by the husband not to trust the wife (k), notice in actions against justices (l), constables, &c., in actions against revenue offi-brance was registered before another; as in Ld. Forbes v. Nelson, 4 Bro. P. C. 489. Blades v. Blades, 1 Eq. Ab. 358, pl. 12; and see Cheval v. Nichols, 1 Stra. 664. There may be some cases divested of fraud, but then the proof must be extremely clear; clear notice is a proper ground for relief, but a suspicion of notice, though strong, is not sufficient to justify the Court in breaking in upon an Act of Parliament. Hide v. Dodd, 2 Atk. 204; and see Le Neve v. Le Neve, 1 Ves. 64; 1 Atk. 254; Chandos v. Brownlow, 2 Ridg. P. C. 428; Johnson v. Stainbridge, 3 Ves. 478.

(u) Harding v. Curthorne, 1 Esp. C. 57.

(x) Doe d. Southouse v. Jenkins,[1] 5 Bing. 469.

(y) R. v. Bagshaw, 7 T. R. 363. And see R. v. Mayor of Liverpool, 4 Burr. 2244.

(z) R. v. Justices of Newcastle-upon-Tyne,[2] 1 B. & Ad. 393. A notice of appeal against a distress for an assessment under a Highway Act may be within six days after the levy, although not within six days after the warrant granted. R. v. Justices of Devon, 1 M. & S. 411. The notice need not disclose the ground on which the appellant objects to the distress. Ib. As to notice of an appeal from a commissioner's direction in writing previous to an award, see R. v. Nicholls,[3] 1 A. & E. 245.

(a) Supra, 123.
(b) Supra, 169.
(c) Supra, 225.
(d) Supra, 221.
(e) Supra, 288.
(f) Supra, 390.
(g) Supra, 415.
(h) Vide infra, tit. VENDOR AND VENDEE.
(i) Supra, 530.
(k) Supra, 544.
(l) Supra, 580.

(m) Infra, Where, in an action against commissioners, &c. the plea was that the injury arose from so negligently making sewers running under, through, &c. the plaintiff's house, and the evidence was that the sewer did not run close to the plaintiff's house, but to five others; and that the house was damaged, and fell, in consequence of the fall of a stack of chimnies in one of those others; it was held to be sufficient. Jones

(A) (Wherever magistrates proceed judicially, both parties to the proceedings are entitled to be heard, and notice to both is indispensably requisite, notwithstanding there is no direction in the act by which the tribunal is constituted, that notice shall be given. Commissioners of Kinderhook v. Claw, 15 John. R. 537. But appearance is a waver of a want of notice. Tipton v. Harris, Peck. 414. Winston v. Overseers of Hanover, 4 Call, 357.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xv. 506. [2]Id. xx. 509. [3]Id. xxviii. 79.

cers, &c. (m), or a dissolution of partnership (n), of abandonment in an action on a policy of insurance (o), in actions for malicious trespasses (p), of trial (q),—see those titles respectively.

NUISANCE.

Heads of proof.

UNDER the present title, the evidence relating to some torts or nuisances to persons or personal property, and 2dly, to real property, will be considered, which are unconnected with any immediate contract, but which do not amount to trespasses, the damage being purely consequential. In an action for a wrongful act, or nuisance to his person, or personal property, the plaintiff must prove (r), 1st, a wrongful act or omission by the defendant; 2dly, the consequential damage to his own person or property.

Proof of the nuisance.

First. The rule of common law is that of the civil law, sic utere tuo ut alienum non lædas; and an action is maintainable to recover damages for any injury resulting to the person or property of the plaintiff, from the carelessness *734 *and negligence of the defendant, or of his agent, in the use or management of his own property (s) (A).

v. Bird,[1] 5 B. & A. 837. A notice of action to a trustee for having lent his horses for the repair of a road, must state all the ingredients in the offence, and therefore (it has been held) must state that he was an acting trustee at the time. Towsey v. White,[2] 5 B. & C. 125.

(n) Infra, tit. PARTNERS.

(o) Infra, tit. POLICY, &c.

(p) Infra, tit. TRESPASS.

(q) Infra, tit. TRIAL.

(r) In an action for nuisance, either to personal or real property, as well as in all other actions on the case, the plea of the general issue operates only as a denial of the breach of duty or wrongful act, and not of the inducement; and the latter if not denied need not be proved. See CASE, ACTION ON, and the New Rules, infra, tit. RULES; and Dickens v. Gosling, 1 Bing. N. C. 538. Frankum v. Earl of Falmouth, 4 N. & M. 333. See Hogan v. Sharpe,[3] 7 C. & P. 755. Underwood v. Burrows,[4] 7 C. & P. 26. In case for keeping a ferocious animal, the general issue puts the scienter in issue. Hogan v. Sharpe,[1] 7 C. & P. 755. In an action on the case for a nuisance to the occupation of a house by carrying on an offensive trade, the plea of not guilty will operate as a denial only that the defendant carried on the alleged trade in such a way as to be a nuisance to the occupation of the house, and will not operate as a denial of the plaintiff's occupation of the house. See the NEW RULES. In an action for negligent driving, the plea of not guilty admits the fact of the carriage having been driven by the defendant's servant. Emery v. Clark, 2 Mo. & R. 260. So also the fact of a cart being driven by him or in his possession, as stated in the indictment. Taverner v. Little,[5] 5 Bing. N. C. 678.

(s) As if he exercise unruly horses in an improper place (Michael v. Alestree, 2 Lev. 172), or entrust a dangerous instrument, such as a loaded gun, to an indiscreet agent. Dixon v. Bell,[6] 1 Starkie's C. 287. Or where his barge having been sunk by accident in a navigable river, he neglects to give proper notice of the fact, as by placing a buoy over the spot. Harmond v. Pearson, 1 Camp. 517. Or the occupier of a house neglects to fence in a dangerous area, although it has immemorially remained open. Couplund v. Hardingham, 3 Camp. 396. In an action for leaving open the area of defendant's house, it appeared that there had been a thoroughfare through an unfinished street for five years; held that the jury were warranted in presuming that it was used with the full assent of the owners of the soil, and a dedication presumed to justify the allegation that it was a common public highway. Jarvis v. Dean,[7] 3 Bing. 447. A corporate body entrusted with a power from the exercise of which mischief may result to the public, is bound to use the

(A) (Showing or exhibiting a stud horse in a town is a nuisance. Nolin v. The Mayor, &c. of Franklin, 4 Yerger, 163. And it is not lawful for an individual, without grant, to construct and moor a floating storehouse or vessel for the receiving and delivering out of goods and merchandize, in any public river, or in any port or harbour, or in its basins or docks; such permanent appropriation and exclusive occupation of a portion of a public river, &c., is an obstruction to its free and common use, and is indictable as a public nuisance. Hart v. The Mayor, Aldermen, and Commonalty of Albany, 9 Wend. 571. So a dwelling-house, cut up into small apartments, inhabited by a crowd of poor people, in a filthy condition, and calculated to breed disease, is a public nuisance, and may be abated by individuals residing in the neighbourhood, by tearing it down, especially during the prevalence of a disease like the Asiatic cholera. Meeker v. Van Rensselaer, 15 Wend. 397. It is no defence to an action for a nuisance affecting the health of the plaintiff and his family, to allege that the neighbourhood was generally as much affected by the nuisance as the plaintiff, or that the defendants had been previously indicted for the same nuisance. Story v. Hammond, 4 Ohio R. 377. Every individual who suffers actual damage, whether direct or consequential, from a common nuisance, may maintain an action for his own particular injury, although there may be many others equally damnified. Lansing v. Smith, 4 Wend. 9. And the remedy by action is not barred by the act of abating the nuisance. Pierce v. Dart, 7 Cow. 609.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. vii. 277. [2] Id. xi. 176. [3] Id. xxxii. 720. [4] Id. xxxii. 422. [5] Id. xxxv. 269. [6] Id. ii. 392. [7] Id. xiii. 45.

Nuisance. Mischievous animal.

The evidence in an action for the negligent keeping (t) of an animal, which has, in consequence, occasioned damage to the plaintiff, must of course be governed by the pleadings. If the declaration allege that the defendant knew that his dog, or other animal, was accustomed to bite sheep, or to bite mankind, the allegation must be proved, although the action might have been sustained without that averment (u). If it be alleged that the defendant knew that the dog was accustomed to bite sheep, it is not enough to show that it had attempted to bite a man (x). Where the declaration alleged that the dog was accustomed to bite mankind, proof that the defendant had warned the witness to beware of the dog, lest he should *be bitten, was held to be primâ facie evidence of the allegation to be left to the jury (y); although mere proof that the dog was fierce, and usually tied up, and that the defendant afterwards promised to take some compensation, has been held to be insufficient (z). It must also be proved that the owner knew the propensity of the animal (a).

*735

Scienter.

The plea of not guilty puts the scienter in issue (b).

It is no answer to the action, where the defendant knew the vicious propensity of the animal, to prove that the party injured was himself guilty of some imprudence or negligence in the transaction; as that the plaintiff trod upon the defendant's dog whilst it was lying at his door, the defendant being aware that the dog was accustomed to bite (c). And where the owner greatest caution. Weld v. Gas Light Company,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 189. So if a person place dangerous traps in his own ground, baited with flesh, so near to the highway, or to the grounds of another, that dogs passing along the highway, or kept in his neighbour's grounds, are likely to be attracted, and the plaintiff's dogs are in consequence injured. Townsend v. Wallace, 9 East, 277. See Ilott v. Wilkes,[2] 3 B. & A. 304. In an action against the defendant, for negligence in forming a hayrick, in consequence of which it took fire, Patteson, J. directed the jury to consider whether the defendant had acted as a man of ordinary skill and prudence would have acted, or whether, through his negligence and carelessness, the plaintiff's property has been consumed. Vaughan v. Menlove,[3] 7 C. & P. 527, [4]3 Bing. N. C. 468. The defendant, a publican, in letting down, after dark, casks into his cellar, left open the flap, and the plaintiff fell in; held, that it being for the private advantage of the defendant, he was bound to take proper care to prevent injury, and that it was for the jury to say whether the defendant had sufficiently protected the public against danger at that hour, and whether the plaintiff had himself used due caution. Proctor v. Harris,[5] 4 C. & P. 337. Where the flap of a cellar-door opening into the street, being used in letting down goods, fell against the plaintiff's leg and broke it, held that the defendants were bound to have the door secured with such precautions as, under all ordinary circumstances would prevent its falling down; and that if, whilst so secured, it fell from the improper act of a third person, over whom they had no control, the defendants were not liable, but the party injured must resort to the wrongdoer. Daniels v. Potter,[6] 4 C. & P. 262. Where trustees, under an order for stopping up a turnpike-road in order to furnish the plaintiff, an owner of land, with a new access to his field, obtained from the defendant, an adjoining owner, a license to remove part of his hedge, which he was liable to keep in order, and they prostrated it, but omitted to put up a gate, or any fence, from the new road; held, that being wrongdoers, and acting under the license of the defendant, he was responsible. Winter v. Charter, 3 Y. & J. 308.

(t) The harbouring a dog about a man's premises, or allowing him to be or resort there, is a sufficient keeping. M'Cane v. Wood,[7] 5 C. & P. 2, cor. Ld. Tenterden.

(u) Hartley v. Halliwell,[8] 2 Starkie's C. 211; 1 B. & A. 620. And see Judge v. Cox,[9] 1 Starkie's C. 285. It seems that the owner of a fierce and unruly dog is bound to secure him without notice. Ibid. and Jones v. Perry, 2 Esp. C. 482. And common report that a dog is mad renders it incumbent on the owner to confine him. Ibid. See this case differently reported, Peake's Ev. 292, 5th ed. The owner of a wild ferocious animal, such as a lion or bear, which escapes and occasions damage, is liable, without any proof of notice of the animal's ferocity. B. N. P. 76. R. v. Huggins, 2 Ld. Ray. 1583.

(x) Ibid. But where a dog accustomed to worry sheep was left at large, and bit a horse, the owner was held to be liable. Jenkins v. Turner, 1 Ld. Raym. 110.

(y) Judge v. Cox,[9] 1 Starkie's C. 285. (z) Beck v. Dyson, 4 Camp. 198.

(a) Ibid. and 12 Mod. 555. An offer on the part of the defendant to settle the matter, if it could be proved that his dog had bit the plaintiff's cattle, was held to be some evidence of the scienter, but of little weight. Thomas v. Morgan, 2 C. M. & R. 496. Proof that the dogs were of a savage disposition, and had bit other people's cattle, was held to be no evidence of the defendant's knowledge of their being accustomed to bite cattle. Ib.

(b) Thomas v. Morgan, 2 C. M. & R. 496. (c) Smith v. Pelate, 2 Str. 1264.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 350. [2]Id. v. 295. [3]Id. xxxii. 613. [4]Id. xxxii. 208. [5]Id. xix. 411. [6]Id. xix. 375. [7]Id. xxiv. 187. [8]Id. iii. 318. [9]Id. ii. 392.

knowing that his dog had been bitten by another dog which was mad, instead of destroying the animal, as it was his duty to have done as soon as he knew him to be in danger of so dreadful a malady, fastened him up, and the child of the plaintiff coming near the dog, irritated him with a stick, upon which the dog flew at him and bit him, and the child in consequence died of hydrophobia, it was held that the plaintiff might recover from the owner of the dog the expenses of the apothecary (d).

A man has a right to keep a fierce dog for the protection of his property, but not to place it in the approaches to his house, so as to injure persons exercising a lawful purpose in going along those paths to his house (e). But if the injury arise from the plaintiff's incautiously going into the defendant's yard, after it has been shut up, and being bitten by a dog accustomed to bite, let loose for the night to protect the yard, no action will lie (f).

Some doubt has existed on the question whether the owner of land, who places traps or spring-guns on his premises, is liable in respect of mischief which consequentially ensues to men or dogs trespassing on the property. It has been held, that at all events he is not liable if the party injured had notice of the fact (g).

*736 Proof of negligence.

*In an action against the owner or driver of a stage-coach for negligence, some degree of blame must of course, be proved, either in respect of the furniture and equipage of the coach itself (h); the skill of the driver or his knowledge of the road, or his exercise of a competent judgment and discretion under the particular circumstances (i). It is not sufficient merely to show that if he had kept the left side of the road the accident would not have happened; for where there is no other carriage on the road, a coachman may drive on any part of it (k). Nor is he bound to keep to the left side of the road, provided he leave sufficient room for other carriages which (d) Jones v. Perry, 2 Esp. C. 482. See the cases on this subject, Mason v. Keeling, 12 Mod. 332; 1 Ld. Raym. 606. Bayntine v. Sharp. 1 Lutw. 90. Buxendine v. Sharp, 2 Salk. 662.

(e) Per Tindal, C. J.,[1] Sarch v. Blackburn, M. & M. 505. And see Blackman v. Simmons,[2] 3 C. & P. 138; Bird v. Holbrook.[3] 4 Bing. 628.

(f) Brock v. Copeland, 1 Esp. C. 203.

(g) See the case of Dean v. Clayton,[4] 1 Moore, 203; 2 Marsh, 577; 7 Taunt. 489. The defendant had placed sharp spears in his premises in such a manner that a hare would run under them, but a dog pursuing a hare would be wounded, and there were several public footpaths through the defendant's woodland not fenced off, and on the outside of the woodland notices were painted that dog-spikes were set therein; a hare was started by the plaintiff's dog in the land of J. T., which adjoined the defendant's woodland, in which land of J. T. the plaintiff had liberty to sport; the dog started the hare in the land of J. T., pursued it, the plaintiff using every means in his power to prevent such pursuit, into the woodland of the defendant, and ran against a spike and was killed. The Judges of the Court of Common Pleas were equally divided on the question, whether an action was maintainable. In the later case of Ilott v. Wilkes,[5] 3 B. & A. 304, for setting spring-guns on the defendant's lands, and negligently leaving them there, whereby the plaintiff (a trespasser) was injured, it was held to be a good defence to show that the plaintiff had notice that the guns were set there. In the case of Bird v. Holbrook,[3] 4 Bing. 628, it was held that a party was liable in respect of mischief occasioned by the setting of spring-guns without notice in the daytime in a walled garden. See the stat. 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 18.

(h) The coachman must be provided with steady horses, a coach and harness of sufficient strength and properly made, and also with lights by night. Per Best, C. J., in Crofts v. Waterhouse,[6] 3 Bing. 321. The owner is liable, although the defect be not visible. Sharpe v. Gray,[7] 9 Bing. 547.

(i) He is blameable if he has not exercised the soundest judgment; if he could have exercised a better judgment, the owner is liable. Per Lord Ellenborough, Jackson v. Tollett,[8] 2 Starkie's C. 39. And see Dudley v. Smith 1 Camp. 167; supra, 208.

(k) Aston v. Heaven, 2 Esp. C. 533. But where the defendant was driving on the wrong side of the road (which was of considerable breadth,) and the plaintiff's servant being on horseback, without any reason crossed over to the side on which the defendant was driving, and on endeavouring to pass the horse was killed; although Lord Kenyon held that he had voluntarily put himself in the way of danger, and that the injury was of his own seeking, the Court of K. B. refused to disturb a verdict found for the plaintiff. Cruden v. Fentham, 2 Esp. C. 685. In an action for running down the plaintiff's vessel, which was at the time sailing by or against the wind, the defendant's vessel sailing before the wind, and with studding-sails set, at meet him on their proper side (l). But where he may adopt either of two courses, one of which is safe, the other hazardous, he adopts the latter at his peril (m), even although he drive on his own side of the road (n). And one who deviates from the proper side of the road imposes, as it seems, upon himself the necessity of using a greater degree of caution than might otherwise have been requisite (o).

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 394. [2]Id. xiv. 243. [3]Id. xv. 91. [4]Id. ii. 183. [5]Id. v. 295. [6]Id. xi. 119. [7]Id. xxxiii. 331. [8]Id. iii. 233.

When occasioned wilfully. *737

If in an action on the case for negligent driving or steering, it turn out that the injury was occasioned wilfully, the action, it has been said, cannot *be maintained; trespass is the proper remedy (p). But if it be occasioned by the negligence of the driver of the carriage, or pilot of the vessel of the defendant, although he himself be present, the proper remedy is by action on the case (q).

Whenever the injury is forcible and immediate, but not wilful, case will lie for the negligence (r). And it seems that whenever consequential damage is occasioned even by wilful violence, the trespass may be waived, and the plaintiff may recover in an action on the case, in respect of the consequential damage (s).

By the defendant's agent.

Where the action is brought against the defendant for the negligence of his agent, it is necessary to prove not merely that the servant or other person whose negligence occasioned the damage, was the servant of the defendant, but also that the mischief was occasioned in the transacting the business of the master; for the latter is not responsible for any substantive tort committed by the agent whom he employs, unconnected with the employment and the authority delegated to him (t). It seems to be sufficient night; the Court, doubting the propriety of such conduct, granted a new trial, after a verdict for the defendant. Jameson v. Drinkald,[1] 12 Moore, 138. In an action for running down the plaintiff's barge, held that he could only recover upon proof that the accident arose from the want of care and caution on the part of the defendant's servants, and not if it happened from any state of tide or other circumstances which persons of competent skill could not guard against; or if the plaintiff's barge were placed so as that persons using ordinary care would be liable to run against it; or if it might have been avoided but for the negligence of the plaintiff's own servants, in not being on board whilst the vessel was in a situation liable to danger. Lack v. Seward,[2] 4 C. & P. 107. To enable a party to maintain an action for an injury to his ship by the unskilful navigating of the defendant's ship, the injury must be attributable entirely to the fault of the crew of the latter; if there has been want of care on both sides, the action cannot be maintained. Vanderplank v. Miller,[3] 1 M. & M. 169. The rule as to ships meeting at sea was found by the jury to be, that the ship which is going to windward is to keep to windward, and the ship which has the wind free is to bear away; in such cases the question is not as to which of the ships first struck, but whose negligence it was by which the injury was caused. Handasyde v. Wilson,[4] 3 C. & P. 528. A steam vessel being more under command, and having seen the other vessel, is bound to give way. Shannon, 1 Hag. 174.

(l) Wordsworth v. Willan, 5 Esp. C. 273. See also Wade v. Lady Carr,[5] 2 D. & R. 255. The Court there said, that whatever might be the law of the road, it was not to be considered inflexible and imperative; and that, in the crowded streets of the metropolis, situations and circumstances might frequently occur where a deviation from what was termed the law of the road, would not only be justifiable, but absolutely necessary.

(m) Jackson v. Tollett,[6] 2 Starkie's C. 37.

(n) Mayhew v. Boyce,[7] 1 Starkie's C. 423.

(o) Pluckwell v. Wilson, 3 C. & P. 528.

(p) Day v Edwards, 5 T. R. 648, on demurrer. Savignac v. Roome, 6 T. R. 125, in arrest of judgment. Tripe v. Potter, 6 T. R. 128, n. Ogle v. Barnes, 8 T. R. 188. Kingston v. Booth, Skin. 228. Middleton v. Fowler, 1 Salk. 282. Bowcher v. Nordstrom, 1 Taunt. 568. Macmanus v. Crickett, 1 East, 106.

(q) Huggett v. Montgomery, 2 N. R. 466. 2 H. B. 413.

(r) Morton v. Hordern,[8] 4 B. & C. 223.

(s) Per Holroyd, J. Ib. And see Branscomb v. Bridges,[9] 3 Starkie's C. 171.

(t) In Brady v. Giles, 1 Mo. & R. 494, it was left to the jury, as a question of fact, whether the servants were acting as the agents of the person hiring a carriage, or the owner. The defendant in that case was a carriage-jobber in London; he had furnished Mr. M'Kinley with a barouche and four horses, for a two days' excursion to Windsor; the horses were driven by two of the defendant's postilions. There was no evidence that the hirer or his party interfered as to the manner of driving. Lord Abinger refused to nonsuit the plaintiff. He intimated his opinion, that the Court of K. B. had taken an erroneous course in allowing such a question to be discussed as matter of law; he considered it to be matter of fact, and that it was impossible to lay down any rule of law on the subject. The jury found for the plaintiff. The legal principle to show that the agent was engaged in driving the carriage, or steering the ship, of his principal, or in the performance of any other duty in which agents are usually employed (u). Such evidence, however, is not conclusive; for if a servant were to take a horse out of a stable in defiance of his master's orders, the latter would not be responsible for the mischief which ensued *738 (x), any *more than he would be for any other act of the servant done of his own authority, and without the assent of the master (y). And in general, if a servant being ordered to do a lawful act, exceed his authority, and thereby commit an injury, the master is not liable (z). An averment that the injury was occasioned by the negligent act of the master, will be supported by evidence that it was occasioned by the negligent act of the servant (a), as in an action for the negligent driving of the defendant's cart. So an averment that damage was done by the driver of the waggon of A., against whom alone the action is brought, is satisfied by evidence that such damage was done by a person employed by B. to drive the waggon; A. and B. being partners under an agreement to conduct and manage the waggon each for his own stages (b). The name painted on a coach is evidence of ownership (c).

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxii. 442. [2] Id. xix. 298. [3] Id. xxii. 280. [4] Id. xiv. 429. [5] Id. xvi. 84. [6] Id. iii. 233. [7] Id. ii. 454. [8] Id. x. 316. [9] Id. xiv. 177.

Where there is an intermediate agent, or more than one, the maxim of law is respondeat superior; the maxim is founded upon the principle that he who expects to derive advantage from an act which is done by another which governs such liabilities seems to be this, that in respect of a negligent act done by an agent, his employer is liable; the damage ought to fall rather on the party who has trusted and employed a negligent agent, than on the plaintiff, who is wholly free from blame. In the case of the hirer of a carriage and horses, to be driven by the servant of the lender, the latter, who has selected the agent, is the party really in fault; it is not to be expected that one who hires a carriage for a day should be burthened with the making inquiry as to the character and skill of the lender's servant; there is no negligence in his presuming that one of competent skill will be supplied, and where that is not done, the hirer, if liable to the party injured, would be entitled to recover over against the lender. Where, therefore, no negligence in point of selection is attributable to the hirer, it should seem to be a convenient rule that not he, but the lender only, should be considered liable. A landlord, who does not personally interfere in making a distress, is not liable for the negligence of his broker, in not delivering a copy of his charges, and of the costs, &c. to the person whose goods are levied upon. Hart v. Leach, 1 M. & W. 560. A master is liable for the negligent driving of his servant, although he was driving improperly, and in a direction different from that ordered by his master. Heath v. Wilson, 2 Mo. & R. 181. Secus, if the servant take out the carriage for purposes of his own, and without authority. Ib.

(u) In Michael v. Alestree, 2 Lev. 172, it was held, that an action was maintainable against the master for damage done by his servant in exercising his horses in an improper place, though he was absent; because it should be intended that the master sent the servant to exercise horses there.

(x) See the observations of Buller, J., 3 T. R. 762. But where a servant took a horse of another person out of his master's stable, and going on his master's business, rode over the plaintiff, and the defendant having first admitted the horse to be his, refused to tell his name, it was held that this was sufficient evidence to show that the servant was riding the horse with the master's assent; and the Court refused to disturb a verdict for the plaintiff. Goodman v. Kennell,[1] 1 M. & P. 241.

(y) See Macmanus v. Crickett, 1 East, 106. Bowcher v. Noidstrom, 1 Taunt. 568.

(z) Kingston v. Booth, Skinn. 228; Middleton v. Fowler, 1 Salk. 282. But if the master order his servant to do an act, in the doing of which a trespass is the necessary, or even the natural consequence, the master is liable even in trespass. Gregory v. Piper, K. B. after Easter Term, 1829. Even although the master limited his authority, by directing the servant not to commit a trespass.

(a) Brucker v. Fromont, 6 T. R. 659. And see Waland v. Elkins,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 272; infra, tit. PARTNERS; and Fromont v. Coupland,[3] 2 Bing. 170, and see below, tit. TRESPASS. So where a stable-keeper let horses for a day to draw the carriage of the hirer to Epsom, which were driven by the servant of the stable-keeper, it was held that the latter was liable for accidents occasioned by the postboy's negligence. Dean v. Braithwaite, 5 Esp. C. 35, cor. Lord Ellenborough; and see Samuel v. Wright, ib.; Smith v. Lawrence, 2 M. & Ry. 1. Goodman v. Kennell,[1] 1 M. & P. 241. The master is liable for damage done through the improper driving of his cart, although his servant was not driving at the time of the accident, but had entrusted the reins to a stranger who was riding with him. Booth v. Mister,[4] 7 C. & P. 76.

(b) Waland v. Elkins,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 272. Where one of several proprietors of a stage-coach was driving when the accident happened, it was held that all were liable for his negligence, although the plaintiff might perhaps have been entitled to sue the one who drove, in trespass. Moreton v. Hardern,[5] 4 B. & C. 223.

(c) It is required to be done under the st. 50 Geo. 3, c. 48, s. 7. Barford v. Nelson,[6] 1 B. & Ad. 511.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xvii. 180. [2]Id. ii. 387. [3]Id. ix. 366. [4]Id. xxxii. 439. [5]Id. x. 316. [6]Id. xx. 441.

for him, must answer for the injury which a third person may sustain from it (d); and the action ought to be brought either against the very party who committed the injury, or against the principal (e). Thus, where A. the owner of a house which he had never occupied, contracted with B. to repair it, and B. contracted with C. to do the work, and C. with D. to furnish the materials, and the servant of C. placed a quantity of lime on the public road adjoining the house, in consequence of which the plaintiff's carriage was overturned; it was held that A. the owner was liable for the damage sustained (f). So where the owner of a house demised by lease, covenanted *to repair it, and he employed workmen for that purpose, the *739 landlord, and not the tenant, was held to be liable for a nuisance in the house, occasioned by the negligence of the workmen (g). The principle of responsibility is, that the agent is the mere instrument of the defendant, and that it is incumbent upon him to select an agent of competent skill and ability, and to exercise a control and authority over him, in order that others may not be injured (h). Hence, where the supposed agent acts under a paramount authority, and not under that of the supposed principal, the latter is not responsible. It was held that the captain of a sloop of war was not answerable for damage done in running down a vessel, the mischief occurring during the watch of the lieutenant, and whilst he had the actual management of the vessel by virtue of his office and duty as lieutenant, and so acted independently of any authority from the captain (i).

By the Pilot Act, 52 Geo. 3, c. 39, s. 30, an owner or master of a vessel is not liable for any damage occasioned by the incompetence of a pilot taken on board according to the provisions of the Act (k). But the pilot

(d) Per Best, C. J. in Hall v. Smith,[1] 2 Bing. 160.

(e) See Stone v. Cartwright, 6 T. R. 411. Per Ld. Kenyon, Bush v. Steinman, B. & P. 404. Horn v. Nicholls, 1 Salk. 289. Jones v. Hart, 2 Salk. 441; 1 Bl. Comm. 431; Inst. Lib. 4, tit. 5, s. 1; Dig. Lib. 9, tit. 3. Littledale v. Lord Lonsdale, 2 H. B. 267, 299. In an action against A. and B. for obstructing lights, it is sufficient to show that the latter, though but a mere agent, superintended the work and gave directions. Wilson v. Peto,[2] 6 Moore, 47.

(f) Bush v. Steinman, 1 B. & P. 404. Matthews v. West London Waterworks, 3 Camp. 403. And see Flower v. Adam, 2 Taunt. 314. [Sly v. Edgley, 6 Esp. C. 6.] And see Weld v. Gas Light Company,[3] 1 Starkie's C. 189. Henley v. Mayor of Lynn,[4] 5 Bing. 91. Where engineers were employed by the defendant to erect a steam-engine on the defendant's premises, which adjoined to the plaintiff's, and the engine exploded through the mismanagement of the defendant's servant, the engineer being present, the action was held to be maintainable. Wilts v. Hague,[5] 2 D. & R. 33. See Bowcher v. Noidstrom, 1 Taunt. 568; infra, note (k). Where defendant hired a pair of horses to his own carriage for the day, which were driven by the servant of the party letting them out, and an injury happened through his negligent driving; held, per Abbott, L. C. J., and Littledale, J., that the hirer was not liable in an action on the case for the injury sustained; contra, Bailey and Holroyd, Js. Laugher v. Poynter,[6] 8 D. & R. 556; 6 B. & C. 126. Semble, that the owner of a barge is not responsible for any injury occasioned by the negligence of a person to whom he has lent her. Scott v. Scott & others,[7] 2 Starkie's C. 438, cor. Best, J., 1818.

(g) Leslie v. Pounds, 4 Taunt. 649. So where the defendant employed a bricklayer to make a sewer, and the latter leaving it open, the plaintiff broke his leg. Sly v. Edgley, 6 Esp. C. 6; and see Coupland v. Hardingham, 3 Camp. 398; supra, 733;[8] 5 B. & C. 559.

(h) 1 Bl. Comm. 431. Where a man entrusted a loaded gun to a young mulatto girl, and mischief resulted from the accidental discharge of the instrument in her hands, he was held to be responsible. Dixon v. Bell,[9] 1 Starkie's C. 287. [S. C. 5 M. & S. 198.]

(i) Nicholson v. Mouncey, 15 East, 384. [See Bussy v. Donaldson, 4 Dallas, 206. Snell v. Rich, 1 Johns. 305.]

(k) Bennett v. Moita,[10] 7 Taunt. 258; 1 Moore, 4; Holt's C. 359.[11] And see Fletcher v. Braddick, 2 N. R. 182. Before the stat. a master was not discharged of his responsibility for the acts of his crew, although they acted under the direction of the pilot, who by the regulations of a statute had the temporary management of the ship. Bowcher v. Noidstrom, 1 Taunt. 568. The statutable exemption extends to damage done by the piloted ship to others. Ritchie v. Bowsfield,[12] 7 Taunt. 309. And see Carruthers v. Sydebotham, 4 M. & S. 77. But not to vessels having on board pilots appointed for other places than those expressly named in the preamble or purview of the Act. Attorney-general v. Case, 3 Price, 302.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ix. 357. [2]Id. xvii. 13. [3]Id. ii. 350. [4]Id. xv. 376. [5]Id. xvi. 67. [6]Id. xii. 311. [7]Id. iii. 420. [8]Id. xii. 310. [9]Id. ii. 392. [10]Id. ii. 95. [11]Id. iii. 129. [12]Id. ii. 117.

is liable for personal misconduct, although a superior officer be on board (l). But where damage is occasioned to another vessel, although a pilot was on board, it is a question of fact for the jury whether, at the time the accident happen, the defendant's vessel was under the direction of a pilot (m).

Public commissioners or their clerks, who are entrusted with the conduct of public works, are not liable for the negligence of the workmen employed *740 *by those with whom they have contracted for the execution of such works. In such cases, the action for negligence occasioning an injury ought to be brought against the contractor and his servants (n).

Against an occupier, &c.

In an action against the defendant for not repairing his fences, it is necessary, in addition to evidence of the obligation to repair, and of the damage which has resulted from the neglect, to prove that the defendant is the occupier of the estate liable to the repair (o). But where the owner of a house is bound to repair it, he, and not the occupier, is liable for the damage occasioned by the neglect to repair (p).

Proof of damage.

Thirdly. It must be shown that damage resulted to the plaintiff (q), as alleged in the declaration, from the act or omission of the defendant (r).

Where a public nuisance has been committed by the defendant, as by obstructing the King's highway, the plaintiff cannot support a private action without proving, as alleged in the declaration, that he has sustained some special and particular damage beyond that which is suffered by other subjects (s); as by a hurt to himself or his horse, from falling into a trench cut in a public highway (t).

(l) Stort v. Clements, Peake's C. 107. Huggett v. Montgomery, 2 N. R. 466. And see Lowe v. Cotton, 12 Mod. 472, 477; 5 Mod. 455; Carth. 487; Salk. 17; Lord Raym. 650; where three of the Judges, contrary to the opinion of Holt, C. J., held that the postmasters were not liable for the loss of exchequer bills lost by the default of clerks in office. [See Bolan v. Williamson, 2 Bay, 551. Maxwell v. M'Hoey, 2 Bibb. 211.] As to the personal responsibility of officers, see Macbeath v. Haldimand, 1 T. R. 172. Unwin v. Wolsely, Ib. 674.

(m) Cutts v. Herbert,[1] 3 Starkie's C. 12. And see Ib. as to proof of a pilot's appointment; and qu. whether the renewal of an appointment by sub-commissioners, when an appointment under the seal of the Trinity House has been proved, be sufficient.

(n) Hall v. Smith,[2] 2 Bing. 156, where the action was brought against commissioners under a lighting and paving Act, for digging a ditch in the street, and leaving the same without light or guard, &c., per quod the plaintiff fell in and was injured, &c. And see Harris v. Baker, 4 M. & S. 27. In Sutton v. Clarke,[3] 1 Marsh. 429, it was held that the defendant, a trustee under a turnpike Act, was not liable for an injury occasioned by the making of a drain, although he had directed it to be made in an improper manner, but had given the order after having taken the best advice he could obtain. One acting for the public (gratuitously) is not liable for the negligence of the artificer. Hall v. Smith,[2] 2 Bing. 156.

(o) Cheatham v. Harrison, 4 T. R. 318.

(p) Payne v. Rogers, 2 H. B. 349. But such an action does not lie against the inhabitants of a county for not repairing a public bridge. Russel v. Devon, Inhab. 2 T. R. 667.

(q) It is not essential that the plaintiff should be the owner of the property; it is sufficient if he have the use of it for the time. Thus a gratuitous bailee of a horse may maintain an action for negligence in not repairing a fence, which the defendant is bound to repair, by means of which the horse is injured. Booth v. Wilson, 1 B. & A. 59. A., the supposed owner of a shop and goods, allows P. to reside there, and act as owner in the sale of the goods. P. may maintain an action for an injury to the goods by negligent driving whilst under the care of his servant. Whittingham v. Bloxham,[4] 4 C. & P. 597. The plaintiff was allowed to call A. in reply, to negative ownership in A. Ib.

(r) Supra, tit. Case, and tit. Libel. Where the plaintiff's horse escaped through a defect of the defendant's fences into his close, and was there killed by the falling of a haystack, it was held that the damage was not too remote to prevent the action being sustainable. Powell v. Salisbury, 2 Y. & J. 390. And see Anon. 1 Vent. 264. Holbatch v. Warner, Cro. Jac. 665. Where by the improper act of the defendant, in throwing packs of wool out of a loft instead of using a crane, the plaintiff was deprived of his presence of mind and ran into the danger; held, that it was for the jury to say whether the injury was not occasioned by the wrongful act of the defendant. Wolley v. Scovell, 1 Mo. & R. 105.

(s) 1 Inst. 56. Hubert v. Grove, 1 Esp. C. 48. Iveson v. Moore, 1 Lord Raym. 486; 12 Mod. 262; Willes, 74, n. It is said that the mere obstruction of the plaintiff's business, by merely delaying him on the road for a short time, will not support an action, the injury being but consequential. P. C. Paine v. Patrick, Carth. 91.

(t) Carth. 191. [See Harrison v. Sterret, 4 Har. & M'Hen. 540. Dunn v. Stone, 2 Com. Law Reps. 261. Hughes v. Heiser, 1 Binney, 463.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law. Reps. xiv. 148. [2] Id. ix. 357. [3] Id. i. 298. [4] Id. xix. 543.

Where the defendant had re-moored his barge across a public navigable creek, by means of which the plaintiff, who was navigating along the creek, was forced to unload his barge, and carry his goods inland at a considerable expense, it was held to be a special damage, sufficient to support the action (u). So where the plaintiff was obliged, in consequence of an obstruction of a public road, to carry his tithes by a longer and more inconvenient way (v). In such an action the proximate cause of the mischief *should be stated in the declaration; and if the remote cause alone be al- *741 leged, it will not be competent to the plaintiff to give the intermediate causes in evidence (w).

A defendant liable in respect of damages to the plaintiff's vessel by collision, is not entitled to deduct a sum paid by an insurer in respect of the same damage (x).

Evidence in defence.

In an action for an injury occasioned by the negligence of another, the defendant may show that the damage was occasioned by mere accident, no blame being imputable to the defendant or his agent (y). It is a good defence (z) to show that the injury so far arose from the negligence of the plaintiff himself, that he might, by ordinary care and caution, have avoided the injury. Thus, one who is injured by riding against an obstruction in a public highway, cannot recover damages if it appear that he was riding violently, and without ordinary care; and that with due care he might have seen and avoided the obstruction (a). And although the defendant's negligence be the primary cause of consequential injury to the plaintiff, yet if the proximate and immediate cause be the unkilfulness of the plaintiff, it seems that the latter will not be entitled to recover (b). As where A. placed rubbish in the highway, and the dust blown from it frightened the horse of B., which carried him nearly in contact with a waggon, to avoid which B. unskilfully rode over other rubbish, and was overthrown and hurt (c). But where, in consequence of unskilful driving, a stage-coach was likely to be overturned, and an outside passenger, with a view to his own safety, jumped off, and his leg was broken, it was left to the jury to say whether he did this rashly and without sufficient cause, or from a reasonable apprehension of danger (d).

(u) Rose v. Miles, 4 M. & S. 101.

(v) Hart v. Bassett, T. Jones, 156. The Court said that the plaintiff had sustained a particular damage; for the labour and pains which he had been forced to take with his cattle and servants, by reason of this obstruction, might be of more value than the loss of a horse, which was sufficient to support an action. See also Chichester v. Lethbridge, Willes, 73. [See Comyn's R. 60.]

(w) Fitzsimmons v. Inglis,[1] 5 Taunt. 534. (x) Yates v. Whyte,[2] 4 Bing. N. C. 272.

(y) See Crofts v. Waterhouse,[3] 3 Bing. 321. Lack v. Seward,[4] 4 C. & P. 106. Supra; and where the plaintiff's case rests on a mere presumption of negligence from the defendant's coach breaking down, the latter may show that it had recently been examined, when no defect was discovered, and that the coachman was a skilful driver, and was driving at a moderate pace. Christie v. Griggs, 2 Camp. 81.

(z) As to the proper plea for admitting evidence of any particular defence, see above, tit. Case, and the rules of H. T. 3 & 4 W. 4, below, tit. Rules. As to the competency of witnesses for the defendant, see Vol. I, p. 125.

(a) Butterfield v. Forrester, 11 East, 60. Chaplin v. Howes,[5] 3 C. & P. 554. Although the defendant be guilty of negligence, yet if the plaintiff might by ordinary care have avoided the consequences, and did not, he is to be regarded as the author of his own wrong; per Parke, B., in Bridge v. The Grand Junction Railway Co., 3 M. & W. 244. Williams v. Holland,[6] 10 Bing. 112; 6 C. & P. 23. So in the case of running down a ship. A plaintiff, however, may recover although he might have prevented the collision, provided he was in no degree in fault in not endeavouring to prevent it. Vennall v. Ganner, 1 C. & M. 21.

(b) 2 Taunt. 314.

(c) Flower v. Adam, 2 Taunt. 314. [See also, Steele v. Ireland Western Lock Navigation Company, 2 Johns. 283. Town of Lebanon v. Olcott, 1 N. Hamp. R. 339.]

(d) Jones v. Boyce,[7] 1 Starkie's C. 403, cor. Ld. Ellenborough, C. J.; the jury found for the plaintiff, damages 400*l.* And see Cruden v. Fentham, 2 Esp. C. 685. Williams v. Holland,[6] 6 C. & P. 24; 10 Bing. 112. Woolf v. Beard,[8] 8 C. & P. 373. And see above.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. i. 181. [2] Id. xxxiii. 349. [3] Id. xi. 119. [4] Id. xix. 298. [5] Id. xiv. 445. [6] Id. xxv. 50, 261. [7] Id. ii. 482. [8] Id. xxxiv. 435.

Proof of possession, &c.

In an action for a nuisance to the plaintiff's real property (e) (A), he must, in *case the matter be put in issue by proper pleas, prove, 1st, his possession (f) of the house or land, or his reversionary interest (g); or if an incorporeal right be effected, his title to it (h). 2dly. The act of nuisance done by the defendant. 3dly. The damage resulting to the plaintiff's right (1).

*742

(e) In general, case lies for an injury to the house or land of another; as for building a house which overhangs the land of another, and causes the rain to fall upon it and injure it. (See Penruddock's Case, 5 Rep. 100. Bowry v. Pope, 1 Leon. 168: Cro. Eliz. 118.) Batin's Case, 9 Rep. 53, b. So for any injury to lands or houses which renders them useless, or even uncomfortable for the purposes of habitation, an action lies; as for the erection and use of a smith's forge (Bradley v. Gill, Lutw. 69); a privy (Styan v. Hutchinson, cor. Ld. Kenyon, Sitt. after Mich. 40 Geo. 3, cited 2 Selw. N. P. 1047); a pig-stye (Aldred's Case, 9 Rep. 59); a lime-kiln (Ibid. per Wray, C. J.); a tobacco-mill (Jones v. Powell, Hutt. 136). So for the corruption of water by drugs, by means of which water running through the plaintiff's premises is rendered less serviceable for the use of his cattle. In a house four things are desired: Habitatio hominis, delectatio inhabitantis, necessitas luminis, salubritas aeris. Aldred's Case, 9 Co. 57. Where the defendant erected a stove with a chimney, for the purpose of having a fire in a saddle-room adjoining his stables, which were situated behind the defendant's house in Spring-Gardens, and the smoke occasioned inconvenience to the plaintiff, whose house was also situated in Spring-Gardens, at the distance of forty or fifty yards from the chimney, by injuring the furniture in the drawing-room, &c., it was held to be a nuisance. Lord Colchester v. Ellis, cor. Abbott, C. J. It is otherwise where the defendant's act is attended simply with inconvenience to the plaintiff; as where he merely cuts off a prospect from the house by building a wall, but does not exclude the light (Knowles v. Richardson, 2 Mod. 55; 9 Rep. 586); or by opening a new window disturbs the privacy of the plaintiff (per Eyre, C. J. cited by Le Blanc, J. 3 Camp. 82). The only remedy in such a case is to obstruct the window by a wall built on the plaintiff's premises. In Street v. Tugwell (41 Geo. 3, cited 2 Selw. N. P. 1047), an action was brought for keeping a number of pointers so near the plaintiff's house that his family were disturbed in the enjoyment of it, and prevented from sleeping during the night; and the jury found for the defendant, although he adduced no evidence. A new trial is said to have been refused; and yet it seems to be difficult to distinguish between a nuisance occasioned by the establishing a dog-kennel near a man's house, and the use of a forge or mill. An action will also lie against the proprietor of tithes for not removing them from the soil within a reasonable time (8 T. R. 72), provided the tithe has been duly set out, the wheat in the sheaf (Shallcross v. Jowle, 13 East, 261), and hay in the cock, after being tedded. Mayes v. Willett, 3 Esp. C. 31. Newman v. Morgan, 10 East, 5. Blaney v. Whitaker, 23 Geo. 3, cited Ibid. Halliwell v. Trappes, 2 Taunt. 55. A plaintiff having demised a cottage without excepting mines, may maintain an action on the case against one who injures the cottage by excavating coal, although it be doubtful whether the injury was occasioned by getting the coal under the cottage or under adjoining land. Raine v. Alderson,[1] 4 Bing. N. C. 702. An action lies for erecting a hay-rick near the plaintiff's house, at the extremity of the defendant's land, with such gross negligence that, by its spontaneous ignition, the plaintiff's house is burnt. Vaughan v. Menlove,[2] 3 Bing. N. C. 468. So where a lessee overcharges his floor with weight, whereby it falls into the plaintiff's cellar below. Edwards v. Hallinder, 2 Leon. 93. Or the defendant builds a house overhanging that of the plaintiff, whereby the rain falls upon the plaintiff's house. Batin's Case, 9 Rep. 53, b. An action is not maintainable in respect of the reasonable use of a person's rights, although it be to the annoyance of another; as if a butcher or brewer exercise his trade in a convenient place. Com. Dig. Action on the Case for Nuisance, C. See R. v. Cross,[3] 2 C. & P. 483. R. v. Watts,[4] M. & M. 281. So an action does lie in respect of that which becomes a nuisance only by reason of some modern alteration made by the plaintiff himself; as where he opens a new window, in consequence of which only the nuisance exists. Lawrence v. Obee, 3 Camp. 514.

(f) If a prescriptive right be alleged, such right must be proved. (See tit. Prescription.) But although it was formerly held to be necessary to allege a right by prescription (Bowry v. Pope, 1 Leon. 168; Cro. Eliz. 118), it is now settled that a general averment of a right, as incident to the plaintiff's possession of house, or land, is sufficient. Supra, tit. Disturbance; and see the cases cited infra, note (o.)

(g) Vide tit. Reversion.

(h) Supra, tit. Disturbance.

(A) (In an action for a nuisance in flowing water back upon the plaintiff's land by means of a mill-dam, the defendant may give evidence of a parol license from a former owner of the plaintiff's land. M'Kellip v. M'Ilhenny, 4 Watts, 317. In an action for a nuisance occasioned by obstructing a stream made navigable by law, if it appear that the injury arose from causes which might have been foreseen, such as freshets and the collection of ice, he whose superstructure is the cause of the mischief, shall be liable for damages—otherwise if the injury be occasioned by act of Providence. Bell v. M'Clintoch, 9 Watts, 119. If a dam be built or a navigable stream in conformity with the provisions of the law, and the schute had been rendered innavigable by flood or accident, the owner of the dam would not be liable for damage occasioned thereby, before he had time to repair it. Roush v. Walter, 10 Watts, 86.)

(1) [Where one built a house on his own land, within two feet of the boundary line, and seven years afterwards the adjoining owner dug so deep into his own land as to endanger the house, whereupon the owner of the house left it and took it down; it was held that no action would lie for damage to the house, but that the owner was entitled to damage for the falling of his natural soil into the excavation thus made. Thurston v. Hancock, 12 Mass. Rep. 220. A person who builds a house adjoining that of another, and sinks

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxxiii. 498. [2]Id. xxxii. 208. [3]Id. xii. 226. [4]Id. xxii. 307.

Variance.

All actions for nuisances affecting real property, whether corporeal or incorporeal, are local in their nature, and must be proved to have been committed within the county in which the action is brought (i). But in general, unless the declaration contain a precise local description of the *nuisance, the local situation will be acribed to venue, and will not require presise proof (k). Where a declaration for damaging the plaintiff's wharf alleged that it was situate near the river Thames, to wit, at Kingston, in the parish of St. Saviour, Southwark, in the county of Surrey, and it appeared in evidence that there was no such place as Kingston, in that parish, it was held that the description might be referred to venue (l). *743

Proof of an incorporeal right.

The evidence to prove the right, as claimed, is either direct or presumptive: direct, as where there is an express grant of a right of way. So the title may arise by implication of law. Where, for instance, a man conveys land to another which is inaccessible except through his own lands, he grants, by implication of law, such a way for the enjoyment of the land (m). So if a man, who has built a private house on his land, sells the house, neither he nor any one who derives title to the adjacent land from him can obstruct the lights (n).

Presumptive evidence.

In an action for a nuisance to an incorporeal right, as for obstructing the plaintiff's lights, evidence of an uninterrupted use and enjoyment of the lights for the space of twenty years will raise primâ facie presumption of a legal title so to enjoy them (o).

(i) Mersey and Irwell Navigation v. Douglas, 2 East, 497. Where no local description is alleged in an action for a nuisance, the property will be presumed to be situated in the county specified in the margin (Warren v. Webb, 1 Taunt. 379). An averment, that the defendant suffered a water-spout to be out of repair at A., in the county of B., was held to be an averment that it was situated there (Ibid.) The general rule is, that the venue in the margin may aid, but cannot hurt.

(k) Hamer v. Raymond,[1] 5 Taunt. 789; 1 Marsh. 363; supra, tit. CASE; and see tit. VARIANCE.—VENUE.

(l) Hamer v. Raymond,[1] 5 Taunt. 789. And see tit. PENAL ACTION.

(m) Com. Dig. tit. Chimin. D. 3; 2 Cro. 170; Mod. Ca. 4. Chichester v. Lethbridge, Willes, 71. Howton v. Frearson, 8 T. R. 50. A lodger in a house has a right to the use of the knocker, door-bell, staircase and water-closet, in the use of which if the landlord obstruct him, case lies. Underwood v. Burrows,[2] 7 C. & P. 26. It was held to be no answer under the general issue, that the water-closet had become useless before the defendant removed it. But evidence was admitted in mitigation of damages, that the plaintiff and his family were bad lodgers, and that the defendant did the acts complained of in order to get rid of them. Ib.

(n) Palmer v. Fletcher, 1 Lev. 122. [See Story v. Odin, 12 Mass. R. 157. Yelv. 216, a note (1).] One who builds a new house on his own land cannot recover against the owner of adjacent land for digging in his own land, per quod the wall of his house is weakened and falls. Wyatt v. Harrison,[3] 3 B. & Ad. 871; and see Wilde v. Minsterley, Com. Dig. Action on Case for Nuisance (C.); 2 Roll. Ab. Trespass (I.) 1. Palmer v. Fletcher, 1 Sid. 167. A. being the owner of two adjoining houses, grants a lease of one to B. and then leases the other to C., there then being in that house certain windows. B. accepts a new lease from A.; B. cannot alter his tenement so as to obstruct C.'s lights, although they have not existed for twenty years. Couts v. Gorham,[4] M. & M. 396; and see Riviere v. Bower,[5] R. & M. 24. Swansborough v. Coventry,[6] 9 Bing. 309. Compton v. Richards, 1 Price, 27.

Where a body corporate is bound to discharge an obligation for the benefit of the public, an indictment lies for the general injury to the public, and an action on the case for any special or particular injury to an individual. Mayor, &c. of Lyme Regis v. Henley (in error),[7] 3 B. & Ad. 77. Although the obligation be not an immemorial one. Ib.

Where a corporation held under a grant from the Crown of a borough, quay, and all tolls, immunities, &c., with a direction to repair sea-walls, it was held that a party suffering loss by the walls being suffered to fall into decay, may maintain an action against the corporation for damages. Henley v. Mayor, &c. of Lyme Regis,[8] 5 Bing. 91.

(o) Cotterell v. Griffiths, 4 Esp. C. 69. Darwen v. Upton, cited 2 Will. Saund. 175, a. Lewis v. Price, cited Ib. Dougal v. Wilson, cited Ib. Hubert v. Groves, 1 Esp. C. 148. Daniel v. North, 11 East, 372. Lawrence v. Obee, 3 Camp. 514. Lord Guernsey v. Rodbridges, Gil. Eq. R. 3; Com. Dig. Temps. 6; infra, the foundation lower than that of his neighbour, is not liable for any consequential damage, if he have used due diligence to prevent injury to the other's house. Panton v. Holland, 17 Johns. 92. If a surveyor of highways dig down or raise a street, discreetly and not wantonly, whereby a house contiguous thereto is endangered or injured, the owner has no remedy. Callender v. Marsh, 1 Pick. 418.]

---

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. i. 266. [2]Id. xxxii. 422. [3]Id. xxiii. 205. [4]Id. xxii. 338. [5]Id. xxi. 373. [6]Id. xxiii. 286. [7]Id. xxiii. 32. [8]Id. xv. 376.

*Where there is a grant of a franchise, the exercise of the right is evidence of the value and extent of the right. The owner of an ancient market may, by evidence of the constant exercise of the right, show that he is entitled to it, to the exclusion of any sale of marketable commodities by Market. an inhabitant in his private house or shop (p). The lord of the market may determine in what particular place within the district it shall be held (q).

It is no variance that the market is alleged to be held on specified days of the week, without the exception of days on which the holding is prohibited by a general statute (r).

If the lord of a market permits part of the space in which the market is held to be occupied otherwise than for the sale of marketable commodities, to the partial exclusion of the vendors of marketable commodities, he cannot maintain an action for selling beyond the limits of the market, without proof of notice to the defendant that there was room for him in the market on the particular occasion (s).

A legal title may also be presumed from a period of enjoyment short of twenty years, if other circumstances render it probable that such a right has been acquired by grant or otherwise; on the other hand, an enjoyment for a longer period is but presumptive evidence tending to prove the right; and the presumption may be rebutted by positive evidence to the contrary, or by evidence which explains the forbearance of the other party, to interrupt the enjoyment of the privilege consistently with his right to interrupt it (t).

tit. PRESCRIPTION.—TIME. Supra, tit. DISTURBANCE. So a right of way will be presumed from an enjoyment of twenty years. Campbell v. Wilson, 3 East, 294. Keymer v. Summers, B. N. P. 74; 3 T. R. 197. So, although every person is entitled to the benefit of the water that flows over his land, without diminution or alteration, yet an adverse right may exist, founded on the occupation of another; and although the stream be either diminished in quantity, or even corrupted in quality, as by means of the exercise of certain trades, yet if the occupation of the party so taking or using it has existed for so long a time as may raise the presumption of a grant, the other party, whose land is below, must take the stream, subject to such adverse right. Twenty years exclusive enjoyment of the water, in any particular manner, affords a conclusive presumption of the right of the party so enjoying it, derived from grant, or Act of Parliament; but less than twenty years' enjoyment may or may not afford such a presumption, accordingly as it is attended with circumstances to support or rebut the right. Per Lord Ellenborough, Beeley v. Shaw, 6 East, 214. [Angell on Watercourses, Chap. iv, vii, viii.] And see Balston v. Benstead, 1 Camp. 463; and see tit. WATERCOURSE, PEW, and PRESCRIPTION; and now see the stat. 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 71, by which the law on this subject is now governed. Where a nuisance is of a permanent nature, an action lies at the suit of the reversioner, as well as of the tenant in possession. Biddlesford v. Onslow, 3 Lev. 209. A reversioner cannot sue for a mere trespass, although done with a view to claim a right, if the act during the tenancy be not injurious to the reversion. Baxter v. Taylor,[1] 4 B. & Ad. 72. But the reversioner may sue for an injury to his right, although the nuisance may easily be removed. Shadwell v. Hutchinson,[2] M. & M. 350. A landlord may maintain an action against his tenant, in respect of anything done to destroy evidence of title. Young v. Spencer,[3] 10 B. & C. 152.

(p) Mosley, Bart. v. Walker,[4] 7 B. & C. 40; and see The Prior of Dunstable's Case, 11 H. B. 19, a.; 8 Co. 127; Com. Dig. Market, F. 2; Vin. Ab. tit. Market. Bailiffs of Tewkesbury v. Bricknell, 2 Taunt. 133. But semble that the mere right to the franchise does not, per se, confer such an exclusive privilege. And semble, that the grantee of a new right of market cannot compel persons carrying on trade there in their shops to desert them and frequent the market. 1b.

(q) Curwen v. Salkeld, 3 East, 538; 7 B. & C. 54.

(r) Mosley v. Walker,[4] 7 B. & C. 40. For where the law raises the exception, it need not be stated in pleading. Comyns v. Boyer, Cro. Eliz. 185.

(s) Prince v. Lewis,[5] 5 B. & C. 360. Secus, where the defendant, at the time of selling marketable goods in his own house adjoining to the market, had a stall in the market which he might have used; the jury finding that he had no reasonable cause for selling in his own house. Mosley v. Walker,[4] 7 B. & C. 40.

(t) See tit. PRESCRIPTION; PRESUMPTION, and supra, note (o). The same rule prevails in general with respect to incorporeal rights, easements, and privileges claimed in the lands of another; as in the case of a right of way. Campbell v. Wilson, 3 East, 294. Keymer v. Summers, B. N. P. 74; 3 T. R. 157. Wood v. Veal,[6] 5 B. & A. 454. In R. v. Barr, 4 Camp. 16, the way had been used for thirty years by the public, during a succession of tenancies, the owner having had notice, &c.; Lord Ellenborough held, that it was evidence that the way had been used with his assent. But see Wood v. Veal,[6] 5 B. & A. 454.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxiv. 26. [2]Id. xxii. 33. [3]Id. xxi. 47. [4]Id. xiv. 13. [5]Id. xi. 252. [6]Id. vii. 158.

Thus the evidence of a title to a right of way, or to the use of lights derived from enjoyment by the claimant, and that the acquiescence of others, for the space *of twenty years, may be rebutted by proof that the adjoining property was in the occupation of a tenant under a lease; for the landlord is not bound by the laches of the tenant (u). *745

The right acquired by length of enjoyment is commensurate with the nature and extent of the enjoyment. Thus, if the plaintiff prescribe for a window to a malthouse, he cannot maintain an action for erecting a wall by means of which his window is generally darkened, if it appear that sufficient light is still admitted for the occupation of the plaintiff's building as a malthouse (x). But where an ancient window has been enlarged, the owner of the adjoining premises is not at liberty to obstruct any part of the original window, although the unobstructed part of the new window be larger than the old one (y), and although he may possess no means of reducing the new window to its original size.

Secondly. The plaintiff must of course prove some act or omission (z), constituting a nuisance on the part of the defendant. The evidence to prove the act to have been done by the defendant, or by his authority, is of too obvious a nature to require comment (a). It is sufficient to prove that the defendant either erected the nuisance, or that being the alienee of the land he continued the nuisance (b), or that having erected the nuisance he let the premises and received rent from his tenant (c). After damages have been recovered for the erection of a nuisance, another action is still maintainable for the continuance of the same nuisance by the defendant. And where the plaintiff had recovered from a tenant for years, who afterwards underlet the premises on which the nusiance was erected, to a sub-tenant, and an action for the continuance of the nuisance was brought against the former tenant, the Court held that the action was maintainable, for the defendant had transferred the premises with the original wrong, and by his demise had affirmed the continuance of it (d); and the plaintiff might in such case, proceed against the sub-lessee (e); but in such case it has been said that notice to the latter is necessary (f). Where the damage has re- Defendant's agency.

(u) Daniel v. North, 11 East, 372. There the lights had been used by the plaintiff, and enjoyed without interruption for the space of twenty years, during the occupation of the opposite premises by a tenant; and it was held that this did not conclude the landlord without knowledge of the fact. And see Bradbury v. Grinsell, 2 Will. Saund. 175, d. e. Campbell v. Wilson, 3 East, 294. Cooper v. Barber, 3 Taunt. 99. And Infra, tit. Prescription.—Presumption.—Time.

(x) Martin v. Goble, 1 Camp. 322. See the East India Company v. Vincent, 2 Atk. 83.

(y) Chandler v. Thompson, 3 Camp. 80, cor. Lord Ellenborough. See Cherrington v. Abney, 2 Vernon, 646. Beeley v. Shaw, 6 East, 208.

(z) Case for non-repair of fences is maintainable against the occupier only. Cheetham v. Hampton, 4 T. R. 318. Unless the owner, though not in possession, be bound to repair. Payne v. Rogers, 2 H. B. 349.

(a) Supra, tit. Agent. A landlord who employed workmen to do repairs in a house in the possession of his tenant, who was bound to repair, and directed the repairs, was held to be liable for a nuisance occasioned by the negligence of the workmen. Leslie v. Pounds, 4 Taunt. 649; see tit. Negligence. In an action for obstructing lights, a clerk who superintends the work complained of, and alone directs the workmen, is liable as a co-defendant. Wilson v. Peto,[1] 6 Moore, 47. Proof of the employment of an agent by A. to pull down the house of A., which adjoins the house of B., is evidence against A., in an action by B. against A. for injuring his house, without calling the agent. Peyton v. Governors of St. Thomas's Hospital,[2] 4 M. & R. 625.

(b) Penruddock's Case, 5 Rep. 100.

(c) R. v. Pedley, 3 N. & M. 627;[3] 1 Ad. & Ell. 822.

(d) Rosewell v. Prior, Salk. 460; W. Jones, 272; Cro. Jac. 373, 555. [See Hughes v. Mung, 3 Har. & M'Hen. 441. Carruthars v. Tillman, 1 Hayw. 501. Anon. v. Deberry, Ibid. 248. Staple v. Spring, 10 Mass. R. 72.]

(e) Ibid. and semble against both, for one was but the agent of the other in doing the wrong.

(f) Penruddock's Case, 5 Co. 100; sed vide supra, 728. Where a notice to remove a nuisance had been served on the defendant's predecessor, Abbott, C. J. held that having been delivered on the premises to the occupier for the time being, it bound a subsequent occupier. Salmon v. Bensley,[4] R. & M. 189.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xvii. 13. [2]Id. xvii. 483. [3]Id. xviii. 220. [4]Id. xxi. 414.

sulted from an omission by the defendant, as in neglecting to repair a public road, his *obligation must be proved (g). Where an action is brought for neglecting to remove tithes, it seems that it is necessary to prove a notice to the defendant of their having been set out (h). If the injury were occasioned in part by the negligence of the plaintiff's as well as of the defendant's agent, the action is not maintainable (i).

*746

Where a house, in respect of which a nuisance has been committed, has been aliened, the alienee may maintain an action for the continuance of the nuisance, after request made to abate or remove the nuisance (k). And it should seem that proof of such request is unnecessary in order to enable the alienee to maintain an action against a wrong-doer, who is guilty of a continuing nuisance by neglecting to remove it (1).

The defendant's act must not only be detrimental, but wrongful, either in respect of the doing such act at all, or the doing it in an improper manner. An action does not lie against a man for pulling down his own house, by means of which the adjacent house falls for want of shoring (l). So if a party build a house on his own land, which has previously been excavated to its extremity for mining purposes, he has not a right to support from the adjoining land of another, unless such a right can be either expressly proved or presumed (m). In such cases, therefore, no action lies, for no wrong is done by the defendant in merely using his own. Yet even in such instances, if a party having a right so to use his own, do it in a wasteful, negligent, and improvident manner, so as to occasion greater injury to his neighbour than was necessary, or than would in the ordinary course of doing the work have been incurred, he is liable. As where the owner of the house injured neglects to shore it up, and the defendant by pulling down his house in a negligent and careless manner, enhances the risk to the plaintiff's premises (n).

(g) 1 Inst, 56, a. n. Hagr. ed. The action will not lie where a parish or county is bound to repair a highway. Russell v. Men of Devon, 2 T. R. 671.

(h) 3 Burr. 1892. But the common law does not require notice to be given in general of the intention to set out tithes, either predial or of animals. Kemp v. Filewood, 11 East, 358. 1 Roll. Ab. 643, tit. Dismes, x. pl. 1. Body v. Johnson, Somerset Summer Assizes, 1815, cor. Dampier, J. cited 2 Sel. N. P. 1052. But a special custom may render such a notice necessary. Butter v. Heathly, 3 Burr. 1891.

(i) Hill v. Warren,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 377, where the action was brought for negligence in taking down a party-wall, and it appeared that the plaintiff appointed an agent to superintend the work jointly with the defendant's agent, and that both agents were to blame. Where a canal company being bound to repair the banks, brought case against the owner of adjoining lands for digging clay-pits, whereby the plaintiff's banks gave way, &c.; held that it ought to have been presented as a question of fact to the jury, whether at the time of the alleged cause of complaint the bank was in such a state as the Act of Parliament required, and the owner of adjoining lands was entitled to expect; and not merely whether the falling of the bank was occasioned by the digging of the pits by the defendant. Stafford Canal Co. v. Hallen,[2] 6 B. & Cr. 317.

(k) Penruddock's Case, 5 Rep. 101, a; Willes, 583; Cro. J. 555; supra, 728.

(l) Peyton v. Mayor of London,[3] 9 B. & C. 725. The owner of a house not ancient, cannot recover against the owner of the adjoining land for merely, and without apparent negligence, digging away that land so that the house falls in. Wyatt v. Harrison,[4] 3 B. & Ad. 871.

(m) Partridge v. Scott, 3 M. & W. 220. Semble, after a lapse of twenty years from the time when the owner of the adjoining land first knew or had the means of knowing that the land had been excavated, a grant may be presumed.

(n) Walters v. Pfiel,[5] M. & M. 365. See Trower v. Chadwick,[6] 3 Bing. N. C. 334. Dodd v. Holmes,[7] 1 Ad. & Ell. 493. Where a dock company was authorized by an act to make a swing-bridge across a public highway, by the opening of which the public were delayed, held that a party seeking damages for such delay, must make out that it was unnecessary; if the company do all that can be expected of reasonable men, availing themselves of such means as they ought, they will not be liable. Wiggins v. Boddington,[8] 3 C. & P. 544. Where the plaintiff alleged his possession of a dwelling-house, belonging to and supporting which were certain foundations of a certain pine wall which he was then enjoying, and of right ought to enjoy,

(1) [Quære de hoc. See Willes, 583. Jenk. 260, pl. 57. 2 Chit. Pl. 333, note (c).]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 390. [2]Id. xiii. 184. [3]Id. xvii. 483. [4]Id. xxiii. 205. [5]Id. xxii. 334. [6]Id. xxxii. 142. [7]Id. xxviii. 128. [8]Id. xiv. 439.

An action does not lie against trustees or commissioners, in respect of *damage occasioned by them in the execution of their powers, unless it be *747 for an excess (o), or vexatious abuse of authority (p), or at least a careless and negligent exercise of their authority.

Thirdly. It is sufficient to prove, that by reason of the nuisance the plaintiff cannot enjoy his right in as full and ample a manner as formerly. In an action for obstructing lights, it is not necessary to prove a total privation; it is sufficient in general to show that the plaintiff cannot (in consequence of the obstruction) enjoy the light in as free and beneficial a manner as before (q). Damage, &c.

So the plaintiff may prove that the stream which flows through his land is diminished in quantity, or that its quality has been affected, and that it is less wholesome for cattle, or less fit for any other purpose to which it may have been applied. Proof of an abridgement of the means and power of exercising the right is sufficient, without evidence to show that any positive damage has resulted to the plaintiff. Thus, it is sufficient to prove an obstruction of a way to which the plaintiff is entitled over the defendant's land, without showing that any special damage has been occasioned by the obstruction (r). Evidence of damage.

*Where a market or fair of the defendant is held on a different day from *748 and then alleged the wrongful excavating by the defendant of his soil adjoining such foundation, which was thereby weakened and sunk, and the plaintiff's house supported thereon injured; held, that such averment amounted to an averment, not of property, but of an easement on such foundations; and proof being given, and the evidence establishing such easement on the foundations of the defendant's pine wall, and showing that the excavation caused the injury through the careless mode in which it was done, the action was maintainable. Brown v. Windsor, 1 Cr. & J. 20. Where the defendants removed an adjoining building, on the footing of whose walls those of the plaintiff also in part rested, it was held, that having given previous notice, the question was, whether the defendants had used reasonable and ordinary care in the work; and if they had, that they were not answerable for any injury which the plaintiff's building had sustained. Massey v. Goyder,[1] 4 C. & P. 191. If A. and B. have lands contiguous, and after A. has erected a house extending to the boundary of his land, B. negligently, unskilfully, and improperly digs his own soil, so that A.'s land is injured, an action lies. Dodd v. Holme,[2] 1 Ad. & Ell. 493. But qu. if he be bound to protect his neighbour in making the excavation without negligence, either in the case of a new house or of one twenty years old.

(o) See Leader v. Moxon, 3 Wil. 461; 2 Bl. 924. There the defendants had exceeded their authority, by raising the pavement so high as to obstruct the plaintiff's windows. Per Bayley, J., in Boulton v. Crowther,[3] 2 B. & C. 708. Harris v. Baker, 4 M. & S. 27.

(p) Boulton v. Crowther,[3] 2 B. & C. 703, where the gravamen was that the trustees of a road had raised the highway so as to obstruct the plaintiff's entrance. The trustees had power under the Act to improve the road, and the jury found that the defendants had not acted arbitrarily, carelessly or oppressively, and it was held that the defendants were not liable. See also The Plate Glass Comp. v. Meredith, 4 T. R. 794. In Jones v. Bird,[4] 5 B. & A. 837, it was held that commissioners were liable for an act done by them in discharge of their authority, but it was expressly found that they had acted carelessly and negligently, 2 B. & C. 711. In general, one who is in the exercise of a public function, without emolument, and which he is compellable to execute, acts without malice, according to the best of his skill and diligence, is not liable in respect of consequential damage arising from his act. Sutton v. Clarke,[5] 6 Taunt. 29.

(q) Cotterell v. Griffiths, 4 Esp. C. 67. [See Mr. Howe's note to Chandler v. Thompson, 3 Camp. 82.] Pringle v. Wernham,[6] 7 C. & P. 377. Wells v. Ody,[7] 7 C. & P. 410. R. v. Neil,[8] 2 C. & P. 485. But see Back v. Stacey,[9] 2 C. & P. 465; Parker v. Smith,[10] 5 C. & P. 438. The merely preventing an excess in the use of ancient lights, beyond the extent to which they were formerly enjoyed, is not actionable. Com. Dig., Action on the Case for Nuisance, C. It seems that windows in an enlarged house, and in a different situation from the original one, are not entitled to the same privilege of protection. Blanchard v. Bridges,[11] 4 Ad. & Ell. 176.

(r) Allen v. Ormond, 8 East, 4. Even although such way has been used by the public for more than twelve years. [See Angell on Watercourses, 50 & seq.] In the case of Taylor v. Bennett, 7 C. & P. 239, which was an action for disturbing the plaintiff in the use of a well, by putting rubbish into it, it was held, that if the water was thereby rendered shallower, and the water made inconvenient for use, the plaintiff would be entitled to recover; but that if the effect merely were to make the water muddy for a time, the damage was too minute to sustain the action.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 321. [2]Id. xxviii. 128. [3]Id. ix. 227. [4]Id. vii. 277. [5]Id. i. 298. [6]Id. xxxii. 548. [7]Id. xxxii. 560. [8]Id. xii. 226. [9]Id. xii. 218. [10]Id. xxiv. 401. [11]Id. xxxi. 46.

the plaintiff's, it is a question of fact for the jury, whether the former be a nuisance to the latter (s).

Proof in defence.

It is not only a good defence (t) to show that the obstruction was erected by the leave and license of the plaintiff, but even where the license has subsequently been recalled, to show that the erection was made under a parol license from the plaintiff at the defendant's expense, the expenses not having been tendered to the defendant (u).

But an easement in the land of another cannot (it has been held) be created but by grant (x).

It was held to be no defence that the window in question was to be deemed a nuisance under the stat. 14 G. 3, c. 78, having been built upon a party-wall, no conviction having taken place (y).

The Building Act, 14 G. 3, c. 78, s. 43, which authorizes the raising of a party fence wall, does not protect from liability in respect of any collateral damage which results, as by darkening the windows of the adjoining house (z).

A window which has been completely closed up with bricks and mortar for twenty years, is no longer privileged (a); so if a party has, by his mode of discontinuing the enjoyment of lights, evinced an intention never to resume the enjoyment, he cannot afterwards maintain an action against the defendant for a subsequent erection which prevents him from using his right, although twenty years have not elapsed (b).

It is no defence that the nuisance had been carried on for ten years before the plaintiff was possessed of his term in the premises, and that the noise complained of was essential to the defendant's trade (c).

Plea in trespass, for throwing down the plaintiff's chimnies, that they adjoined a highway, and in consequence of the destruction of the adjoining house, were in danger of falling and endangering the lives of the King's subjects passing along the said highway; held that, if made out, the plea was a good answer to the action (d).

An indictment lies for keeping a ruinous house adjoining to the highway (e).

Where a trade in its nature was a nuisance, but from the place where *749 *carried on was not such unless it occasioned more inconvenience than before, it was held that an increase in the business, by improvements in the mode of conducting it, did not render it indictable, unless there was an increase of annoyance (f).

Where commissioners, for the protection of lands which it was their duty to protect, erected a groin which had the effect of exposing adjoining lands to the inroads and force of the sea, it was held that they were not

(s) Yard v. Ford, 2 Saund. 172; Stat. H. 4, 5 & 6. A market beyond the distance of twenty miles non est vicinum, Fl. 1. 4, c. 28, s. 13; Com. Dig. Market, C. 2; et poterit esse vicinum, et infra predictos terminos et non injuriosum; but if held on the same day, it is said that it will be intended to be to the nuisance. F.N. B. 184, a.; 2 W. Saund. 174, n. (2).

(t) As to the necessity for a special plea, see above.

(u) Winter v. Brockwell, 8 East, 308. The obstruction there was a sky-light over the defendant's area, which prevented the access of the light and air through a window to the plaintiff's dwelling-house. [See Anon v. Deberry, 1 Hayw. 248.]

(x) Hewlins v. Shippam,[1] 5 B. & C. 221, where the plaintiff claimed a right to have a gutter or drain across the defendant's land; and see Co. Litt. g. n. 42 a., 85 a, 169; 2 Roll. Ab. 62; Shep. Touch. 231; Gilb. Law of Ev. 96. Fentiman v. Smith, 4 East, 107, where Lord Ellenborough lays it down distinctly, that the title to have water flowing in the tunnel over the plaintiff's land could not pass by parol license without deed.

(y) Titterton v. Conyers,[2] 1 Marsh, 140.

(z) Wells v. Ody, 1 M. & W. 452.

(a) Lawrence v. Obee, 3 Camp. 514.

(b) Moore v. Rawson,[4] 3 B. & C. 332.

(c) Elliotson v. Feetham,[4] 2 Bing. N.C. 134.

(d) Dewey v. White,[5] 1 M. & M. C. 56.

(e) R. v. Watt, 1 Salk. 357.

(f) R. v. Watts,[6] 1 M. & M. 281.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xi. 207. [2]Id. i. 161. [3]Id. x. 99. [4]Id. xxix. 283. [5]Id. xxii. 246. [6]Id. xxii. 307.

liable to make compensation to such owners, but that as against a common enemy they must protect themselves (g).

A party is indictable for a public nuisance on a road, by the erection of building upon it, although liable to a summary conviction (h).

Lord Hale, de portibus maris, holds that the question of nuisance or no nuisance is one of fact for the jury (i). It seems to be no defence to an indictment, for that which is of itself a nuisance, that some collateral advantage is conferred on a portion of the public (k).

A plan, showing not merely the streets but supposed position of the carriages, in an action for negligent driving, was rejected, as too leading a representation of the fact in dispute (l).

Where, upon the accident occurring, some persons in the defendant's carriage gave their address, and said, that "any damage would be paid for;" held that the address given, but not any other statement, was admissible (m).

OFFICE COPY.

An office copy is admissible in evidence in the same cause and in the same court; but not in a different court, nor in a different cause in the same court (n).

OFFICERS (o).

By the stat. 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 53, which consolidates the previous statutes relative to the excise and customs, various provisions are made for the protection *of officers. Sect. 114 provides that no action shall be brought *750 against any officer, or any person acting in his aid or assistance, unless a month's previous notice (p) in writing shall have been delivered to such officer or person, or left at the usual place of his abode, by the attorney or agent who shall intend to sue out the writ, &c., expressing the cause of action, with the time when and place where it arose; and the name and (g) R. v. Commrs. of Pagham Sewers,[1] 8 B. & C. 355.

(h) R. v. Gregory,[2] 5 B. & Ad. 555.

(i) It may however, in some instances, be a question of law arising upon the facts.

(k) In R. v. Ward, K. B. Mich. T. 1835, Denman, L. C. J. observed, "If it were to be held, that against the disadvantage to the public ought to be weighed an advantage to a particular part of the public from the act charged as a nuisance, it would be impossible for juries to decide the case, and it would be to desert the plain principles of law." He said, that R. v. Russel,[3] 6 B. & C. 566, had been doubted, and probably would on consideration, be further doubted.

(l) Beamon v. Ellice,[4] 4 C. & P. 585. (m) Ibid.

(n) Per Ld. Mansfield, in Denn v. Fulford, Burr. 1177. See Burnand v. Nerot,[5] 1 Carr. & P. 578. And see APPENDIX.

(o) An election to an inferior vacates a superior office, if they be incompatible. Milward v. Thatcher, 2 T. R. 81. A conviction before a recorder de facto is good; per Buller, J. Where by the charter the common clerk was bound to attend corporate meetings and take minutes of the proceedings, for neglect of which he might be amerced; and he also received a salary which might be varied in amount, or discontinued, at the pleasure of the mayor, aldermen and bailiffs; held, that an alderman could not hold such office, it being incompatible, and that the acceptance of the one vacated the other. R. v. Tizzard,[6] 9 B. & C. 418. Where the affidavit, on an application for a quo warranto, for exercising an office alleged to have been vacated by the acceptance of a second office incompatible with the first, only stated the belief that he exercised the second office, but did not show any valid appointment thereto, it was held to be insufficient. R. v. Day,[7] 9 B. & C. 708.

(p) The notice must state the plaintiff's place of abode at the time of delivering the notice. Where the notice stated the plaintiff's place of abode at the time when the cause of action arose, but did not state his place of abode at the time when notice was given (which was five weeks after the injury), the notice was held to be insufficient. Williams v. Burgess, 3 Taunt. 127. As to the description of the place of abode, vide supra, tit. JUSTICES; and Wood v. Folliott & others, 3 B. & P. 152. If the notice be not proved at the trial, the defendant will be entitled to a verdict, and no evidence can be received. See also stat. 23 Geo. 3, c. 70; 6 Geo. 4, c. 80, s. 108; and see tit. JUSTICE.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xv. 237. [2]Id. xxvii. 125. [3]Id. xiii. 254. [4]Id. xix. 537. [5]Id. xi. 479. [6]Id. xvii. 411. [7]Id. xvii. 476.

place of abode of the person or persons in whose name such action is intended to be brought, and the name and place of abode of such attorney or agent.

Sect. 115 limits the suit to three calendar months after the cause of action shall have arisen, requires the venue to be laid in the proper county, enables the defendant to plead the general issue, and, after a verdict, &c. for the defendant, awards treble costs.

Sect. 116 enables the defendant to tender amends, and to plead the tender in bar, if not accepted.

Sect. 119 provides that where on the trial of an information for the condemnation of any goods seized under any Act relating to the revenue of excise, the Court shall certify that there was probable cause for the seizure, the plaintiff, on action brought, shall not be entitled to more than 2*d.* damages.

The steward of a court-baron is a judicial officer, and trespass does not lie against him for the mistake of his bailiff in taking the goods of B. under a precept commanding him to take the goods of C. (q).

The nomination of an officer may be without deed (r).

OVERSEER (s).

See CHURCHWARDEN.

Appointment of.

IN order to justify an appointment of overseers for a subdivision of a parish, it should be shown that otherwise the parish could not reap the benefit of the statute 43 Eliz. c. 2 (t). But where a parish consisted of four townships, and had always, since the statute, had more than four overseers, it was held that each township was entitled to have separate overseers (u). And where the two districts of which a parish consisted, had from the 43d
*751 *of Eliz. down to the 13th and 14th C. 2, agreed to separate in the maintenance of the poor, and that separate overseers should be appointed, on condition that the rateable property, whether situated in the one or the other district, should be rated where the occupiers resided; and, in pursuance of this agreement, the districts had maintained their poor separately, and had separate overseers, constables, &c.; it was held, that the evidence clearly showed that the parish, at the time of the agreement, could not reap the full benefit of the statute of Elizabeth, and that the separation was valid, and the appointment of overseers for the whole parish was bad (v).

Whether or not a parish can have the benefit of the statute of Elizabeth is a fact which the session ought to find, and not merely evidence of the fact (w).

(q) Holroyd v. Breare, 2 B. & A. 473. It is incident to every public office, that the party should be in a situation to discharge the duties of it. And he cannot act by deputy; per Ld. Kenyon, in the matter of Bryant, 4 T. R. 716. See R. v. Ferrand,[1] 3 B. & A. 260.

(r) Salk. 467; Com. Dig., OFFICER, D. 5.

(s) All the overseers of a parish, &c. constitute but one joint officer; and a payment by or to one, is a payment by or to all. R. v. Bartlett, 1 Bott. 206. But one of several churchwardens cannot release or give away the funds of the church. They are quasi a corporation. Cro. Ja. 234; Burn's Ec. Law, 292. They may appoint a bailiff. See tit. REPLEVIN—CHURCHWARDENS. The Court will grant a mandamus to two justices to issue their warrant under the 50 Geo. 3, c. 49, at the instance of one of the succeeding overseers, although the rest refuse to concur. R. v. Pascoe, 2 M. & S. 343.

(t) R. v. Uttoxeter, 1 Doug. 346; Cald. 84. Although it appear that since the year 1648 the parish has constantly had more than four overseers, and though the hamlet part has immemorially had a constable of its own. Ib.

(u) R. v. Horton, 1 T. R. 3741.

(v) R. v. Walsall, 2 B. & A. 157. See also Lane v. Cobham, 7 East, 1. R. v. Leigh, 3 T. R. 746.

(w) R. v. Watson, 7 East, 214.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. v. 274.

The appointment of an overseer may be by parol (x).

An order of sessions, appointing overseers, for a parish, which, though large, is able to reap the benefit of the statute, is a nullity (y).

Two overseers, one of whom is sole churchwarden, do not form a body corporate within the meaning of the statute 49 G. 3, c. 12, s. 17, and the parish property does not vest in them (z).

Where a pauper had been put in possession of a cottage forty years ago, by the then existing overseers of the poor, and had continued in the parish pay, and the cottage had been from time to time repaired, until two years ago, when the pauper disposed of it to the defendant, and went away, and no act had been done to acquire a tenancy under the present overseers, it was held that they could not recover (a).

Under the 55 Geo. 3, c. 137, it is sufficient to state goods to be the property "of the overseers for the time being" (b).

It is the duty of overseers to keep the possession of indentures of parish apprentices, if they come into their possession, and to deposit them in the parish chest; and a presumption arises, from not being found there, that they are lost (c).

Action against.

In an action against an overseer for not returning the surplus arising on a distress for poor-rates, a formal demand is necessary under the statute 27 G. 2, c. 20, s. 2 (d). A plaintiff cannot recover against several overseers money lent to one without the concurrence of the rest, unless all the rest have expressly promised to repay the money lent; for it is contrary to the duty of an overseer to borrow money for parochial purposes (e). Where money has been paid by a party at the sole request of one overseer, and without the knowledge of the others, and no demand is made upon them till they are out of office, it is a question for the jury whether, under the special circumstances, the party ought not to be considered as having relied on the sole responsibility of the overseer on whose request he acted (f).

In an action against an overseer for refusing to permit an inspection of *the rate-book, under the statute 17 Geo. 2, c. 3, s. 2, it is necessary to show *752 that a demand was made at a reasonable time and place. Where the demand was made at a parishioner's own house, and not at the overseer's, at eight o'clock in the evening, it was held that the demand was not sufficient (g). Nor can the plaintiff recover unless he shows that he has been injured by the refusal (h).

The right to inspect churchwardens' and overseers' accounts, under 17 Geo. 2, c. 38, is not general, but a mere private right, and the applicant ought to show some public ground for desiring to inspect them, to entitle himself to the remedy by mandamus; and it is no answer to the application that a penalty is imposed for refusing, which is given not as a compensation to the party complaining, but to punish the offender, and for the relief of the poor (i). So a mandamus to a mayor, &c. to permit the party to have inspection of the records of a court leet, will be refused, unless good reason is assigned (j).

(x) Anon. Lofft, 434. And see R. v. Morris, 4 T. R. 552. R. v. Walsall, 2 B. & A. 557.
(y) Peart v. Westgarth, 3 Burr. 1610; Cald. 90. (z) Woodcock v. Gibson,[1] 4 B. & C. 462.
(a) Doe v. Clarke, 14 East, 488. R. v. Went, Russ. & Ry. C. C. L. 359.
(b) R. v. Went, Russ & Ry. C. C. L. 359. (c) R. v. Trowbridge,[2] 8 B. & C. 96.
(d) Simpson v. Routh,[3] 2 B. & C. 682. And an improper tender does not render such a demand unnecessary. Ib.
(e) Massey v. Knowtes,[4] 3 Starkie's C. 65. (f) Malkin v. Vickerstaff,[5] 3 B. & A. 89.
(g) Spenceley v. Robinson,[6] 3 B. & C. 658. (h) Ib.
(i) R. v. Clear,[7] 4 B. & C. 899; and 6 D. & Ry. 393. (j) R. v. Maidstone, Mayor of, &c.,[8] 6 D. & R. 334.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. x. 379. [2]Id. xv. 155. [3]Id. ix. 219. [4]Id. xiv. 164. [5]Id. v. 235. [6]Id. x. 211. [7]Id. x. 466. [8]Id. xvi. 261.

Where, in an action against a guardian of the poor for having supplied the poor with provisions, against the statute 55 Geo. 3, c. 139, s. 6, it was alleged that he had the ordering and directing of the poor of one parish, and it appeared in evidence that he had the ordering and directing of the poor of that parish, and also others, united under the statute 22 Geo. 3, c. 83, s. 43, and that he had supplied goods to the master of the workhouse, who had contracted for supplying the poor, at so much per head; it was held that the evidence was sufficient (k). But it was held, that an overseer, who had an interest in coals supplied nominally by another for the use of the poor, was not liable without proof that they were supplied with a view to profit (l). And as the statute only prohibits the supplying a workhouse or the poor of a parish generally, it was held that an overseer who, under an order for the relief of the poor, paid him part in money, and the rest, with the pauper's consent, in shop goods, was not liable to a penalty (m).

PAROL EVIDENCE.

General principle.

The great principle which regulates the admission or rejection of parol evidence in relation to written instruments has already been adverted to (n).

Where written instruments are appointed, either by the immediate authority of law, or by the compact of parties, to be the permanent repositories and memorials of truth, it is a matter both of principle and of policy to exclude any inferior evidence from being used, either as a substitute for such instruments, or to contradict or alter them. Of principle, because such instruments are in their own nature and origin entitled to a much higher degree of credit than that which appertains to parol evidence; of policy, because it would be attended with great mischief and inconvenience if those instruments upon which men's rights depended were liable to be impeached and contradicted by loose collateral evidence (A).

Consistently with the principles already adverted to, it is a general rule
*753 *that oral evidence shall in no case be received as equivalent to, or as a substitute for, a written instrument, where the latter is required by law (o), (k) West v. Andrews,[1] 5 B. & A. 77; and see 5 B. & A. 328.

(l) Skinner v. Buckee,[2] 3 B. & C. 6; S. C. 4 D. & R. 628.
(m) Proctor v. Mainwaring,[3] 5 B. & A. 145. But see Pope v. Backhouse,[4] 2 Moore, 186.
(n) Vol. I. tit. BEST EVIDENCE. (o) Infra, 754.

(A) (A contract in writing, in the absence of fraud, mistake, ignorance, or latent ambiguity, cannot be varied, impaired, or explained by parol evidence. Tilghman v. Tilghman's Executors, Baldwin's C. C. R. 489. Kemmil v. Wilson, 4 Wash. C. C. R. 308. A contract entered into between the parties by letter, is such a contract. Clark v. Russell, 3 Dall. 415. But the rule that parol evidence is not admissible to alter or contradict written instruments, applies only to the parties and their representatives, and not to strangers to such instruments. Kreider v. Lafferty, 1 Whart. 303. Overseers of New Berlin v. Overseers of Norwich, 10 John. R. 229. But see Reading v. Weston, 8 Conn. R. 117. So the letting in of parol evidence to prove consent in making alterations in a deed is not within the mischiefs intended to be prevented by the Statute of Frauds. Speake v. The United States, 9 Cranch, 28. It is a general rule that an agreement in writing or an instrument carrying an agreement into execution, shall not be varied by parol testimony, stating conversations or circumstances anterior to the written instrument. Hunt v. Rousmanier, 8 Wheat. 174. Baker v. Whiteside, 1 Breese, 132. So subsequent admissions, or parol promises of a party to an instrument of writing, are not admissible in evidence to change its character or legal effect. Hamilton v. Neel, 7 Watts, 517. But parol evidence may be received to establish an independent fact, or to prove a collateral agreement incidentally connected with the stipulations of a deed, or other written contract. Davenport v. Mason, 15 Mass. R. 85. And a written contract may be explained, but it cannot be altered, by parol testimony. O'Harra v. Hall, 4 Dall. 340. See also note (a), (ed. 1838.) Thompson v. White, 1 Dall. 424; and notes (a) & b), (ed. 1830.) The reasons however which forbid parol evidence to alter and explain written instruments, do not apply to contracts implied by the operation of law—therefore evidence of an agreement made between the holder and endorser of a note whereby the latter was to be discharged on the happening of a certain event, was held to be admissible. Susquehanna Co. v. Evans, 4 Wash. C. C. R. 480. So parol evidence is admissible to prove a resulting trust. Jackson ex dem. Kane v. Stembergh, 1 John. Ca. 153.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. vii. 118. [2]Id. x. 5. [3]Id. v. 246. [4]Id. iv. 87.

or to give effect to a written instrument, which is defective in any particular which by law is essential to its validity (p); or to contradict, alter, or vary (q) a written instrument, either appointed by law, or by the compact of private parties, to be the appropriate and authentic memorial of the particular facts which it recites; for by doing so, oral testimony would be admitted in usurpation of a species of evidence decidedly superior in degree.

But parol evidence is admissible to defeat (r) a written instrument, on the ground of fraud, mistake, &c. or to apply it to its proper subject-matter (s), or in some instances, as ancillary to such application, to explain the meaning of doubtful terms (t), or to rebut presumptions arising extrinsically. In these cases the parol evidence does not usurp the place or arrogate the authority of written evidence, but either shows that the instrument ought not to be allowed to operate at all, or is essential in order to give to the instrument its legal effect.

Inasmuch as the rejection of parol evidence, where it is placed in competition with written evidence, usually arises from the consideration that to admit it would be to allow the weaker evidence to usurp the place of the stronger, and to render the most solemn, authentic, and permanent instruments of evidence which the law can devise, uncertain, inoperative, and ineffectual, the extent to which the principle operates, and the rules deducible from that principle, will, perhaps, be exhibited in the clearest point of view by reference to the different purposes for which parol testimony can be offered in relation to written instruments. Parol evidence, in general, may be offered for three purposes in relation to written evidence: First, in OPPOSITION to written evidence, where it is offered with a view to supersede the use of written evidence, and to supply its place, or to contradict it, or to vary its effect; or wholly to subvert such evidence, by showing that it has no legal existence, or no legal operation in the particular case; or secondly, it is offered in AID of written evidence, in order either to establish a particular document, or to apply it to its proper subject-matter, or to explain it, or to rebut some presumption which affects it; or as secondary evidence, where the original is unattainable (u); or thirdly, it is used as original and

Not admissible to supersede, &c., by supplying omissions (A).

(p) Infra, 755.
(q) Infra, 757.
(r) Infra, 765.
(s) Infra, 768.
(t) Infra, 775.
(u) Supra, Vol. I. WRITTEN EVIDENCE.

(A) (Parol evidence of what passed at the execution of a deed, is admissible to show that the conveyance, though nominally absolute, was in fact for the purpose of enabling the grantor to institute an ejectment, in the name of the grantee, in the Circuit Court of the United States. Ingham v. Crary, 1 Penns. R. 389. In Pennsylvania, "we seem to have settled down to this, that whatever is material to the contract, and was expressed and agreed to, when the bargain was concluded, and the writing drawn out, may, if not expressed in the writing, be proved by parol, unless perhaps, it is expressly contrary to the writing." Per Huston, J. Bollinger v. Eckert, 16 Serg. & Rawle, 424. Contra, Gilpin v. Consequa, 1 Peters C. C. R. 85. Where a conveyance of land does not express any consideration, parol evidence may be given of the real consideration, White v. Weeks, 1 Penns. R. 186. So where a deed is made in consideration of natural love and affection, and the further consideration of "one dollar," parol proof may be admitted of other valuable considerations. Harvey v. Alexander, 1 Rawle, 219. And in general other consideration than that expressed in a deed may be given in evidence under particular circumstances, and where it does not contradict the consideration expressed. Steele v. Haines, 2 Ohio R. 185. See also Clark's Ex'r v. Farran, 3 Mart. 250. Berthole v. Mace, 5 Mart. 593. What property was embraced within the terms of a levy on real estate, may be shown by parol evidence, when the description in the sheriff's return is not precise; but evidence of the plaintiff's directions to the sheriff on the subject, is not admissible. Scott v. Sheakly, 3 Watts, 50. Parol evidence is often admissible, in order to designate the location of the premises described in a deed. Jackson v. Parkhurst, 4 Wend. 369. Where A. and B. sign a bond, B. signing as security (though such fact in no way appears by the bond) in a suit on the bond, it is admissible to show by parol evidence, that B. signed as security. Smith v. Bing, 3 Ohio R. 185. Parol evidence is admissible to prove that through the mistake of the scrivener, a clause intended by the parties to be in an agreement for the sale of land was omitted. Gower v. Sterner, 2 Whart. 75. Parol evidence may be given to explain a written agreement, so far as to give identity and locality to the subject-matter of it, and apply the contract to it. Bertsch v. Lehigh Coal Co. 4 Rawle, 130. Parol evidence has been admitted to show the misdescription of premises in a policy of insurance against fire that arose from the mistake of the secretary of the company, to whom the premises

INDEPENDENT evidence to prove a particular fact, without regard to written evidence of the fact, not being excluded by any rule of law.

I. In the first place, parol evidence is never admissible to supersede the use of written evidence, where written proof is required by the law.

To supersede written evidence.

Where the law, for reasons of policy, requires written evidence, to admit oral testimony in its place would be to subvert the rule itself. The same observation applies where the law prescribes a certain form of written evidence; to allow a defect in the instrument to be supplied by oral evidence, would be pro tanto, to dispense with the law. Hence, in general, where the law requires a formal written instrument (x), if the document offered in evidence be defective, so that it cannot operate without collateral aid, the defect cannot be supplied by oral testimony. Thus, if in a will the name of *754 *the intended devisee or legatee be omitted, or a blank be left for the description of the estate, or amount of the legacy, these omissions cannot be supplied by oral testimony as to the real intention of the testator (y). And although different writings may, by internal reference, be connected together so as to constitute one entire instrument within the Statute of Frauds, yet they cannot be connected by mere oral testimony (z), neither can any defect in the writing be supplied by oral evidence (a).

By supplying defect, &c.

In cases where a written document is not absolutely essential in point of law to give a legal operation to that which is to be proved, as it is in cases under the Statute of Frauds and of Wills, yet if an authentic written memorial be constituted by law, parol evidence cannot, in general, be substituted for it; for being appointed by law for the purpose of evidence, it must be considered as the best evidence (b). Thus, in general, judgments and (x) See the Stat. of Frauds, supra, 482.

(y) Baylis v. Attorney-general, B. N. P. 298; 2 Atk. 249. Woollam v. Hearn, 7 Ves. 211. Where the testatrix made a disposition in favour of Lady ———, and the will contained other provisions in favour of Lady Hort, and she was appointed a trustee in the will by the name of Dame Hort, Lord Thurlow held that the blank could not be supplied by parol evidence. Hunt v. Hort, 3 Bro. C. C. 311. In Abbott v. Massey (3 Ves. 148), where a legacy was given to Mrs. G——, Lord Loughborough referred it to the master to ascertain who Mrs. G. was, who was there described by initial letter only. But see Sir D. Evans's observations upon this case in his edition of Pothier, vol. ii. p. 204. See also Baylis v. Attorney-general, 2 Atk. 239. Where a will mentioned George the son of George Gord, and also George the son of John Gord, a bequest to George the son of Gord, was explained, by means of the testator's declarations, to mean George the son of George Gord. Doe v. Needs, 2 M. & W. 129. Where a blank was left for the Christian name, parol evidence was admitted to show who was intended. Price v. Page, 4 Ves. 680.

(z) Supra, 483.

(a) Supra, 482. So an agreement, referring to such parts of another instrument as had been read by one party to another, is not sufficient within the statute, because it is imperfect without parol evidence; but an instrument which is conformable to the statute may by reference include the contents of another which is not so. Brodie v. St. Paul, 1 Ves. jun. 326. Although parol evidence be not admissible to aid an imperfect instrument (Halliday v. Nicholson, 1 Price, 404), yet where a question arises as to which an instrument is admissible but not decisive evidence, such parol evidence is admissible for the purpose of explanation. See R. v. Laindon, 8 T. R. 379.

(b) Supra, Vol. i. tit. BEST EVIDENCE. The appellants having proved that the pauper occupied a tenement of 10*l.* per annum, and paid rent and taxes for it, the respondents attempted to prove by parol that the letting was to the pauper and two others; on cross-examination it appeared that the letting was by a written instrument; held that it was necessary to produce it. R. v. Rawdon,[1] 8 B. & C. 708.

---

had been accurately described by the insured at the time of the insurance. Moliere v. The Penns. Fire Ins. Co. 5 Rawle, 342. In an action against a common carrier by a consignee, for not delivering goods in good order, the defendant will not be permitted to give evidence to contradict the bill of lading signed by him, unless it be to prove that a fraud or imposition was practised upon him. Warden v. Greer, 6 Watts, 424. A bill of parcels delivered by I., stating the goods as bought of D. and I., is not conclusive evidence against I., that the goods were joint property, but the real facts of the case may be shown by parol. Harris v. Johnston, 3 Cranch, 311. On a written warranty of soundness, parol proof is admissible to show that at the time of sale, the vendor informed the vendee of a defect. Schuyler v. Russ, 2 Caines, 202. Parol proof cannot be adduced to show, that a guaranty which was addressed to one was intended to be addressed to two. Allison v. Ruttledge, 5 Yerger, 193. A letter of credit addressed by mistake to John and Joseph, and delivered to John and Jeremiah, for goods furnished by them to the bearer upon the faith of the letter of credit, is not a written contract between the parties, and parol proof cannot be admitted to make it such. It is not a case of ambiguity, fraud, or mistake on the part of the plaintiffs. Pollard v. Dwight, 4 Cranch, 421.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xv. 329.

judicial proceedings must be proved by means of the record. The examination of a prisoner before a magistrate upon a charge of felony cannot be proved by parol, unless it has been expressly shown that the examination was not taken as the statutes require, in writing (c).

The same principle applies where private parties have by mutual compact constituted a written document the witness of their admissions and intentions (d).

Written contracts.

To admit oral evidence as a substitute for instruments, to which, by reason of their superior authority and permanent qualities, an exclusive weight and authority is given by the solemn compact of the parties, would be to substitute the inferior for the superior degree of evidence; conjecture for fact; and presumption for the highest degree of legal authority; loose recollection, and uncertainty of memory, for the most sure and faithful memorials *which human ingenuity can devise, or the law adopt—to introduce a dangerous laxity and uncertainty as to all titles to property, which, instead of depending on certain fixed and unalterable memorials, would thus be made to depend upon the frail memories of witnesses, and be perpetually liable to be impeached by fraudulent and corrupt practices. In short, the great advantages which are peculiar to written evidence would be, in a great measure, if not entirely sacrificed (e). *755

Where the instrument is defective.

As oral evidence is inadmissible for the purpose of supplying an omission in an instrument where written evidence is required by law, because to admit it would virtually be to give to oral the superior force of written evidence, and occasion that to pass by parol which by law ought not to pass but by writing, it is upon the same principle inadmissible to give any effect to a written instrument which is void in law for inconsistency, repugnancy, or ambiguity in its terms; for if a meaning could be assigned, by the aid of extrinsic evidence, to that which was apparently destitute of meaning, or if the same instrument could be made to operate in different ways, according to the weight of oral evidence, it is plain that the effect and result would depend, not upon the terms of the instrument, but upon the force and effect of the oral evidence, and thus the latter would virtually be substituted for the former. What degree of ambiguity and uncertainty will avoid a will, deed, or other instrument, is a question of law.

Apparent and latent ambiguities (A).

An important distinction has already been adverted to between ambiguities which are apparent on the face of an instrument, and those which arise merely extrinsically in the application of an instrument of clear and (c) Supra, tit. Admission.

(d) Supra, tit. Assumpsit. Where a demise offered in evidence contained words struck out (of a printed blank form), it was held that the Court might look at the parts struck out in order to ascertain the meaning of the parties as to the remainder. Strickland v. Maxwell, 2 C. & M. 539; but see Doe v. Pedley, 1 M. & W. 670.

(e) See Countess of Rutland's Case, 5 Rep. 26. Haynes v. Hare, 1 H. B. 659. Buckler v. Millard, 2 Vent. 107. Clifton v. Walmesley, 5 T. R. 564; 3 Atk. 8; 1 Wils. 34. Mease v. Mease, Cowp. 47. It would be inconvenient (observes Ld. Coke) that matters in writing, made by advice and on consideration, and which finally import the certain truth of the agreement of the parties, should be controlled by an averment of parties, to be proved by the uncertain testimony of slippery memory; and it would be dangerous to purchasers and all others in such cases, if such rude averments against matter in writing should be admitted. [See Stackpole v. Arnold, 11 Mass. R. 27.]

(A) (Parol evidence is inadmissible to explain a deed or to vary a contract in writing, unless it contain some latent ambiguity. Richards v. Killam, 10 Mass. R. 239. Eveleth v. Crouch, 15 Id. 307. See also Jackson v. Still, 11 Johns. 201. Boardman v. The Lessees of Reed and Ford, 6 Peters, 328. A latent ambiguity is that which arises from evidence dehors the instrument which may then be explained by such evidence. Tole v. Hardy, 6 Cow. 333. But if patent ambiguities exist in the contract itself, and if the language be too doubtful for any settled construction by the admission of parol evidence, you create and do not merely construe the contract. Peisch v. Dickson, 1 Mason's C. C. R. 9. There is an intermediate class of cases partaking of the nature both of patent and latent ambiguities, where the words are all sensible, and have a settled meaning, but, at the same time, consistently admit of two interpretations according to the subject-matter in the contemplation of the parties. In such case parol evidence is admissible to show the circumstances under which the contract was made, and the subject-matter to which the contract referred. Peisch v. Dickson, 1 Mason's C. C. R. 9. Parol evidence of the understanding of the parties in relation to the construction of a written agreement may be given to explain that which is otherwise ambiguous. Telder v. Wil- definite intrinsic meaning to doubtful subject-matter. An ambiguity, apparent on reading an instrument, is termed ambiguitas patens; that which arises merely upon its application, ambiguitas latens. The general rule of law is, that the latter species of ambiguity may be removed by means of parol evidence, the maxim being, "Ambiguitas verborum latens verificatione suppletur; nam quod ex facto oritur ambiguum verificatione facti tollitur" (f). On the other hand, it is a settled rule that such evidence is inadmissible to explain an ambiguity apparent on the face of the instrument (g).

By apparent ambiguity must be understood an ambiguity inherent in the words, and incapable of being dispelled either by any legal rules of construction applied to the instrument itself, or by evidence showing that terms in themselves unmeaning or unintelligible, are capable of receiving a known conventional meaning. The great principle on which the rule is founded is, that the intention of parties should be construed not by vague evidence of their intentions, independently of the expressions which they have thought fit to use, but by the expressions themselves. Now those expressions which are incapable of any legal construction and interpretation (h) by the rules of art, are either so because they are in themselves
*756 merely unintelligible, or *because, being intelligible, they exhibit a plain and obvious uncertainty (i). In the first instance, that is, where the terms used are in themselves simply unintelligible to an ordinary reader, the case admits of two varieties; the terms, though at first sight unintelligible, may yet be capable of having a certain and definite meaning annexed to them by extrinsic evidence, just as if they are written in a foreign language, or if mercantile terms are used, which amongst mercantile men bear a distinct, clear and definite meaning, although others do not comprehend them (k): they may, on the other hand, be capable of no distinct and definite interpretation. Now it is evident that to give effect to an instrument, the terms of which, though apparently ambiguous, are yet capable of having a distinct and definite meaning annexed to them, is no violation of the general principle, for in such a case effect is given not to any loose conjecture as to the intent and meaning of the party, independently of the expressions used, but to the expressed meaning; and that, on the other hand, where either the terms used are incapable of any certain and definite meaning, or being in themselves intelligible are clearly uncertain, equally capable of different applications, to give any effect to them by extrinsic evidence as to the intention of the party, would be to make the mere intention operate inde-

(f) See Lord Bacon's Reading on the Statute of Uses.

(g) Ambiguitas patens is never holpen by averments. Regula 25.

(h) It is a general rule that a patent ambiguity is always, if possible, to be removed by construction and not by averment. Colpoys v. Colpoys, 1 Jac. 451.

(i) As where an estate is left by will to one of the three sons of J. S. without specifying which.

(k) Thus where a creditor, together with other creditors, agreed to certain resolutions to watch a commission of bankrupt, supposed to be fraudulent, "and to contribute in the usual way," it was held that parol evidence was admissible to show that by that expression it was meant that each creditor should contribute in proportion to his claim against the bankrupt, without mutual responsibility. Taylor v. Cohen,[1] 4 Bing. 53. So to the case of a will where its characters are difficult to be deciphered, or its language is unintelligible to an ordinary reader, the testimony of persons skilled in deciphering writing, or who understand the language, is admissible for the purpose of explanation. Goblet v. Beechey, 3 Sim. 24. Masters v. Masters, 1 P. Wms. 421. Norman v. Morrell, 4 Ves. 769. So if the testator express himself in terms peculiar to a particular trade or calling. Smith v. Wilson,[2] 3 B. & Ad. 728. Doe v. Watson,[3] 4 B. & Ad. 787. Attorney-general v. Plate Glass Company, 1 Aust. 39.

---

liams, 9 Watts, 9. Where a check was drawn by a person who was the cashier of an incorporated bank, and it appeared doubtful on the face of it whether it was an official or a private act, parol evidence was admitted to show that it was an official act. Mechanics' Bank of Alexandria v. The Bank of Columbia, 5 Wheat. 326. In cases of equivocal written agreements, the circumstances under which they were made may be given in evidence to explain their meaning. Crawford v. Janett, 2 Leigh, 630. M'Mahow v. Spangler, 4 Rand. 51.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiii. 339. [2]Id. xxiii. 169. [3]Id. xxiv. 164.

pendently of any definite expression of such intention. By apparent ambiguity, therefore, must be understood an inherent ambiguity, which cannot be removed either by the ordinary rules of legal construction, or by the application of extrinsic and explanatory evidence, which show that expressions primâ facie unintelligible, are yet capable of conveying a certain and definite meaning.

This distinction is an immediate result from the general principles already specified. If an instrument which is in itself wholly devoid of meaning, according to the usual and ordinary rules of legal construction, or which is so indefinite and ambiguous as to be equally capable of several different constructions and applications, might have one particular definite meaning annexed to it by means of extrinsic oral evidence, it is plain that the oral evidence, and not the writing, would produce the definite effect. On the contrary, where the oral evidence is used to annex a definite meaning to the written expressions, or to point the application to this or that subject-matter, the oral evidence does not usurp the authority of the written instrument: it is the instrument which operates; the oral evidence does no more than assist its operation by assigning a definite meaning to terms capable of such explanation, or by pointing out and connecting them with the proper subject-matter.

According to these principles, parol evidence is never admissible to explain an ambiguity which is not raised by extrinsic facts (l). Thus, upon a *devise to one of the sons of J. S., who has several, evidence is not admissible to show that one in particular was meant (m); and the devise is void for uncertainty (n). *757

Not admissible to vary, &c.

As oral evidence is inadmissible either as a substitute for a written instrument required by law, or to give effect and operation to such an instrument where it is defective, it follows à fortiori that it is not admissible to contradict, or even to vary, any instrument to which an exclusive operation (o) is given by law, whether that exclusive quality result from a peremptory rule of law, or from private compact

To contradict or vary a written agreement.

Where the terms of an agreement are reduced to writing, the document itself, being constituted by the parties as the true and proper expositor of their admissions and intentions, is the only instrument of evidence in respect of that agreement, which the law will recognize so long as it exists, for the purposes of evidence (p) (A). If the parties have contracted by (l) Doe v. Westlake,[1] 4 B. & A. 57.

(m) 2 Vern. 624–5; 6 Co. 68, b.; 2 P. Wms. 137; infra, 763; 47 Ed. 3, 16, b. In Harris v. Bishop of Lincoln, 2 P. Wms. 135, where a man limited his estate by will to his own right heirs by his mother's side, Ld. Macclesfield held that he might mean either the heir of his mother's father, or of his mother's mother, and admitted parol evidence to prove which he meant: qu. (n) Ibid.

(o) As to the cases in which a written instrument has such an operation, vid. infra, 785 (1).

(p) Supra, Assumpsit; and see Preston v. Merceau, 2 Bl. R. 1249. Rolleston v. Hibbert, 3 T. R. 406. Hodges v. Drakeford, 1 N. R. 270. Pym v. Blackburn, 3 Ves. 34. It is a general rule, that where an agreement has been reduced to writing, evidence of oral declarations, though made at the same time, shall not be admitted to contradict or to alter it. [Pitkin v. Brainerd, 5 Conn. R. 451.] A written agreement, however, where it is not under seal, may be altered by the addition of new terms by an oral agreement, which, in fact, constitutes a new agreement, incorporating the former one; or, as has been seen, such an agreement may be wholly discharged by parol, before any breach has occurred, supra, p. 103; and Lord Milton v. Edworth, 6 Bro. P. C. 587. In such cases it is obvious that the evidence is adduced, not to vary the terms of an existing

(1) [In Maine, Maryland and North Carolina, parol evidence cannot be given to prove the non-payment of the purchase-money for lands, when the deed states that the consideration has been paid. Steele v. Adams, 1 Greenleaf, 1; Dixon v. Swigget, 1 Har. & J. 252; Brocket v. Foscue, Ruffin's Rep. 64. Aliter, in Massachusetts, New York and Pennsylvania. Wilkinson v. Scott, 17 Mass. Rep. 257; Shephard v. Little, 14 Johns. 210. Bowen v. Bell, 20 Johns. 338. Hamilton v. Ex'rs of M'Guire, 3 Serg. & Rawle, 355. Jordan v. Cooper, ibid. 564. Weigley's Adm'rs v. Weir, 7 Serg. & Rawle, 309. See Dyer, 169. Moore, 569. 1 Hayw. (Tenn.) Rep. 70. Dow v. Tuttle, 4 Mass. Rep. 414. Thompson v. Ketcham, 8 Johns. 189.]

(A) (Parol evidence is admissible to show that a deed absolute in its terms is in fact a mortgage. Roach deed, as the obligation under seal imports greater deliberation and more solemnity than a mere written agreement which is not under seal, no evidence, whether oral or written, which is not under seal, can be admitted to contradict or to vary it (q).

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 348.

*758 *Where A. agreed to take B. into partnership as an attorney, no time being mentioned, it was held that the partnership commenced from the time of the agreement, and that evidence was inadmissible to show that the agreement was not to take effect until B., who was not then an attorney, should be admitted (r).

original agreement, but to show that it has been superseded or discharged. And in Bywater v. Richardson,[1] 1 Ad. & Ell. 508, it was held that a written warranty of the soundness of a horse might be limited to twenty-four hours, by rules painted on a board at the place of sale. And see Jeffery v. Walton,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 267. What took place in Court previous to a rule being made is inadmissible, the Court can only look to rule itself. Edwards v. Cooper,[3] 3 C. & P. 277. The auctioneer's declarations, where there are printed conditions, are inadmissible. Gunnis v. Erhart, 1 H. B. 289; Powell v. Edmonds, 12 East, 6. Evidence of usage at the Navy-office is inadmissible to enlarge written terms. Hogg v. Smith, 1 Taunt. 347.

(q) Where a deed stated the purchase-money on the sale of land to have been paid, it was held that evidence was inadmissible to prove an agreement at the time that part should be satisfied by work to be done by the purchaser, and that the money had not in fact been paid. Baker v. Dewey,[4] 1 B. & C. 704. Where parties contract by deed, assumpsit will not lie; for where a man resorts to a higher security the law will not raise an assumpsit (Toussaint v. Martinnant, 2 T. R. 100); as where a surety takes a bond from his principal (Ib.) So a plaintiff cannot recover in indebitatus assumpsit upon an executed consideration, where the contract was by deed (Atty v. Parish, 1 N. R. 104). The only excepted case is that of debt for rent, which rests on peculiar grounds (Hardr. 332. Warren v. Consett, 8 Mod. 107; Com. Dig. tit. Pleader, O. 15. Kemp v. Goodall, 1 Salk. 277). And where a subsequent parol agreement is inconsistent with a deed, the agreement cannot be set up against the deed (see the case of Leslie v. De la Torre, cited 12 East, 583). But an action of assumpsit may be maintained upon an agreement subsequent to the making a deed of charter-party, the parol contract not being inconsistent with the contract by deed (White v. Parkins, 12 East, 578). Where the obligor of a respondentia bond promised, by indorsement upon it, to pay the amount to any assignee, it was held that an assignee might maintain indebitatus assumpsit. Fenner v. Mears, 2 Bl. 1269; {See 10 Serg. & R. 321;} but this was doubted by Lord Kenyon, in Johnson v. Collins, 1 East, 104, and by Bayley, J., in White v. Parkins, 12 East, 582.

(r) Williams v. Jones,[5] 5 B. & C. 109; and see Boydell v. Drummond, 13 East, 142.

---

v. Cosine, 9 Wend. 227. Swart v. Service, 21 Wend. 36. Parol evidence is inadmissible to show, that a deed was never delivered. Roberts, Ads. v. Jackson, 1 Wend. 478. So it may be shown by parol testimony, that an assignment of a mortgage, absolute in its terms, is a mere security for the performance of a contract. Gilchrist v. Cunningham, 8 Wend. 641. See also Livingston v. Ten Broeck, 15 Johns. 14. M'Curtie v. Stevens, 13 Wend. 527. Contra, Benton v. Jones, 8 Conn. R. 186. If a money consideration be expressed in a deed of bargain and sale, there shall be no averment to the contrary, so as to affect its operation as such, nor is any evidence to the contrary admissible. Allison v. Kurtz, 2 Watts, 187. Contra, Wilkinson v. Scott, 17 Mass. R. 249. It seems according to the American cases, that the only effect of a consideration clause in a deed, is to estop the grantor from alleging that the deed was executed without consideration, and that for every other purpose it is open to explanation and may be varied by parol proof. M'Crea v. Purmort, 16 Wend. 460. See also Brocket v. Foscue, 1 Hawks. 64. Spiers v. Clay's Adm'r, 4 Hawks. 22. In ejectment against a sheriff's vendee, parol evidence that a certain tract was not included in the sale, is inadmissible to contradict the levy. Beeson v. Hutchinson, 4 Watts, 442. So where a person claimed under a deed from Nathaniel S., who was alleged to have purchased the premises at a sheriff's sale, it was held, that parol evidence was not admissible to show that the acknowledgement by the sheriff was originally of a deed to Nathaniel S., and that afterwards the prothonotary's clerk, at the instance of Charles S., and by collusion with him, erased the name of Nathaniel S. and substituted that of Charles S.; the defendant claiming by deed from Charles S. Hoffman v. Coster, 2 Whart. 453. Parol evidence is inadmissible to show that in a release of all demands a particular debt was not intended to be released. Pierson v. Hooker, 3 Johns. 68. And the assignees of a bond in a suit against the assignor upon a written assignment, parol evidence is not admissible to show that the assignor had expressly guarantied the payment of the bond, this being no part of the written contract. O'Hara v. Hall, 4 Dall. 340. So if in a policy of insurance, the vessel insured be warranted as neutral, parol evidence will not be admitted to prove that such warranty was not intended by the parties. Lewis v. Thacher et al. 15 Mass. R. 431. And in an action on a valued policy, it is not competent for the underwriters to give parol evidence to show that the value of the property insured is different from that stated in the policy. The Marine Ins. Co. v. Hodgson, 6 Cranch, 206. In an action by the master of a ship for his wages against the defendant as owner of the vessel, and who held a bill of sale from M., and also a register of the ship in his own name, the defendant may prove by parol, that the bill of sale was given to him merely by way of collateral security or mortgage. Chapman v. Butler, 8 Johns. 169. Parol evidence is admissible that an agreement in writing, not under seal for the delivery of goods to A., was made by A. as agent for C. Hubbard v. Borden, 6 Whart. 79. Parol evidence is not admissible to prove a contract for the delivery of freight, different from that expressed in the bill of lading. Babcock v. May, 4 Ohio R. 346. Nor is parol evidence inadmissible to vary the terms or legal import of a bill of lading free from ambiguity. Creery v. Holly, 14 Wend. 26.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxviii. 135. [2]Id. ii. 385. [3]Id. xiv. 304. [4]Id. viii. 193. [5]Id. xi. 169.

Where the issue was on the plea of plenè administravit, evidence that the defendant, upon executing a bond of submission to arbitration, had agreed to pay what should be awarded to be due, was rejected, as being either contradictory of or in addition to the agreement in the bond (s). So, oral evidence is not admissible to show that a bond, conditioned for the payment of money to the wife in case she survived, was intended in lieu of dower (t). Nor is such evidence admissible to show that a clause of redemption was omitted in an annuity-deed, lest it should render the transaction usurious (u). So, although it is an established rule that a party may aver another consideration which is consistent with the consideration expressed, no averment can be made contrary to that which is expressed in the deed (v). Extend or limit terms of agreement.

Where the conveyance is mentioned to be in consideration of love and affection, as also for other considerations, proof may be given of any other, for this is consistent with the terms of the deed (w). But if one specific consideration be alone mentioned in the deed, no proof can be given of any other, for this would be contrary to the deed; for where the deed says it is in consideration of such a particular thing, it imports the whole consideration, and negatives any other (x) (1). The case where no consideration is expressed in the deed, is, according to Lord Hardwicke, a middle case; and he held the proof of a valuable consideration in such a case was admissible (y) (2). But in general, as will be seen, evidence as to the real consideration is in all cases admissible with a view to prove fraud (z).

Where A. granted an annuity for his own life to B., which was secured by *a bond and warrant of attorney, and judgment was entered, the Court would not, after the death of B., permit the attorney of B. to prove a *759

(s) Pearson v. Henry, 5 T. R. 6: the evidence was rejected at the trial; and upon motion for a new trial the propriety of the rejection was not disputed. 1 Bro. C. C. 54, 93. And see the Observations of Blackstone, J., in Preston v. Merceau, Bl. 1250; and infra.

(t) See Mascall v. Mascall, 1 Ves. 323; and infra, 762, note (f).

(u) Ld. Irnham v. Child, 1 Bro. C. C. 92. Ld. Portmore v. Morris, 2 Bro. C. C. 219. Hure v. Shearwood, 3 Bro. C. C. 168; 1 Ves. J. 241. But where a man and woman, being about to marry, conveyed their lands to trustees, in trust, to dispose of the rents as the wife, without the consent of the husband, should appoint; notwithstanding which the husband received the rents during his life, and the wife after his death filed a bill in equity for an account, the Court admitted parol evidence to prove, that before the settlement was made, the husband and wife agreed that the premises should be in trust for them during their joint lives, and that they were settled otherwise merely to protect them from sequestration by Cromwell; and on that ground relieved against a covenant in the settlement, by which the trustees were bound to pay the rents as the wife should appoint. Harvey v. Harvey, 2 Ch. C. 180; Fitz. 213. But where articles were reduced to writing, and signed by the parties, and afterwards drawn up at length, and executed, Reynolds, B. held that the articles could not be restrained by the memorandum, there being no reference from the articles to the memorandum. Lloyd v. Wynne, 5 G. 2; 1 Ford. 136.

(v) Mildmay's Case, 1 Rep. 176. Bedell's Case, 7 Rep. 39; 2 Roll. Ab. 786. [Quarles v. Quarles, 4 Mass. R. 680.]

(w) Per Lord Hardwicke, Peacock v. Monk, 1 Ves. 128. And see the case of Villers v. Beaumont, 2 Dyer, 146, a. Vernon's Case, 4 Rep. 3.

(x) Ibid. And see Green v. Weston, Say. 209; and Stratton v. Rastall, 2 T. R. 366. [Shermerhorn v. Vanderheyden. 1 Johns. 139. Maigley v. Haner, 7 Johns. 341.]

(y) Peacock v. Monk, 1 Ves. 128. (z) Infra, 765.

(1) [Where a deed, after stating a certain consideration, adds "and for other considerations," parol evidence is admissible to show what those other considerations were. Benedict v. Lynch, 1 Johns. Ch. Rep. 370. In Virginia, where a deed was made "in consideration of natural love and affection, and of one dollar," parol evidence was held admissible to show that other valuable consideration passed. Harvey v. Alexander, 1 Randolph, 219. So either party may, in that state, aver and prove a consideration different from that stated in the deed—but not to the prejudice of a bona fide purchaser without notice. Duval v. Bibb, 4 Hen & Mun. 113. So a deed may, in equity, be proved to have been made in consideration of a marriage, though not so expressed in the deed. Eppes & al. v. Randolph, 2 Call, 125. It is said in the case of Garret v. Stuart, 1 M'Cord, 514, that a different consideration from that expressed in the deed cannot be shown in a court of law, but that a less or greater consideration of the same character may be shown.]

(2) [If a deed conveying land contains nothing respecting the consideration, parol evidence concerning it is admissible. Davenport v. Mason, 15 Mass. Rep. 92.]

parol agreement that A. should be at liberty to redeem the annuity on terms (a).

Where the agreement was, that A. for certain considerations, should have the produce of Boreham Meadow, it was held that he could not prove by parol that he was to have both the soil and produce of Millcroft and Boreham Meadow (b). One who executes an instrument in his own name cannot defeat an action by showing that he did so merely as agent for another (c). So in an action on a bond conditioned for payment absolutely, the defendant cannot plead an agreement that it should operate merely as an indemnity (d). Where a modern lease uses the term Michaelmas, evidence is inadmissible to show that Old Michaelmas was meant (e).

In an action of trespass, where the defendant insists upon a release executed by the plaintiff, and in terms including the trespass in question, the plaintiff cannot defeat the effect of the release by proof that the arbitrators who awarded the release have not taken into their consideration the particular trespass (f).

Upon the same principles evidence is inadmissible of a parol agreement prior to or contemporary with the written instrument, and which varies its terms; as to show that a note made payable on a day certain was to be payable upon a contingency only (g), or upon some other day (h), or not until the death of the maker (i).

Where a policy was on an adventure from Archangel to Leghorn, the defendant was not allowed to prove an agreement, previous to the signing of the policy, that the adventure should begin from the Downs only (k).

*760 *Where a ship was chartered to wait for convoy at Portsmouth, it was held that evidence could not be received of an agreement to substitute Corunna for Portsmouth (l).

In general, where a contract has been reduced into writing, nothing

(a) Haynes v. Hare, 1 H. B. 659; and per Ld. Thurlow, nothing can be added to a written agreement, unless there be a clear subsequent independent agreement varying the former; but not where it is matter passing at the same time with the written agreement. Rich v. Jackson, 4 Bro. C. C. 519. Ld. Portmore v. Morris, 2 Bro. C. C. 219.

(b) Meres v. Ansell, 3 Wils. 275. And see Hope v. Atkins, 1 Price, 143.

(c) Magee v. Atkinson, 2 M. & W. 440. But in an action on a written contract between the plaintiff and a third party, evidence on the part of the plaintiff is admissible to show that the contract was in fact made by the third party, not on his own account but as the agent of the defendant. Wilson v. Hart,[1] 7 Taunt. 295.

(d) Mease v. Mease, Cowp. 47; 2 N. R. 597.

(e) Doe v. Lea, 11 East, 312. Where a written agreement stipulates that goods are to be taken on board forthwith, it cannot be shown by parol that in two days was meant. Simpson v. Henderson,[2] M. & M. 300.

(f) Shelling v. Farmer, Str. 646.

(g) Rawson v. Walker,[3] 1 Starkie's C. 361; 1 C. M. & R. 703. Where a note was on the face of it absolute, it was held that parol evidence to show that it was only to be paid on certain terms, which had not been complied with, was inadmissible. Moseley v. Hanford,[4] 10 B. & C. 729. And see Adams v. Woadley, 1 M. & W. 374. It is not, it seems, competent to a party who appears on the face of a promissory note to be a principal, to show that he is merely a surety. Price v. Edmunds,[5] 10 B. & C. 578. See Fentum v. Pocock,[6] 5 Taunt. 192. Where a note was given by the defendant's wife, dum sola, expressed to be, "for value received by my late husband," held that it was not competent to the defendant to give in evidence that it was executed only by the wife as an indemnity, being inconsistent with the terms of the note itself. A party, although he may show a failure of or an illegal consideration, cannot show that it was a different one. Ridout v. Bristow & Ux, 1 C. & J. 231; and 1 Tyr. 84. And see Rawson v. Walker,[7] 1 Starkie's C. 361.

(h) Free v. Hawkins,[8] 1 Moore, 28; 7 Taunt. 278. [Erwin v. Saunders, 1 Cow. 249; Rose v. Learned, 14 Mass. R. 155.]

(i) Woodbridge v. Spooner,[9] 3 B. & A. 233. Or till certain estates had been sold, the defendant being the payee and but a security; or to show that a transfer of a ship, which was absolute on the bill of sale, was intended as a security only. Robinson v. M'Donnell, 2 B. & A. 134.

(k) Kaimes v. Knightly, Skinn. 54. Uhde v. Walters, 3 Camp. 16. Weston v. Emes, 1 Taunt. 115. Note, the case of Kaimes v. Knightly, is cited in Bates v. Graham, 2 Salk. 444, but misstated.

(l) Leslie v. De la Torre, cited 12 East, 583. Note, that the charter-party was under seal.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 112. [2] Id. xxii. 313. [3] Id. ii. 427. [4] Id. xxi. 156. [5] Id. xxi. 135. [6] Id. i. 72. [7] Id. ii. 427. [8] Id. iv. 31. [9] Id. v. 268.

which is not found in the writing can be considered as part of the contract (m).

Where a contract is entered into for the sale of goods, and a bill of sale is afterwards executed, the bill of sale is the only evidence of the contract which can be received (n) (1), and parol evidence of the agreement cannot be received, even although the written instrument of sale be inadmissible for want of a stamp (o).

The same rule applies if such parol agreement add to the terms expressed. Thus in the case of Preston v. Merceau (p), the landlord, in an action for use and occupation, under a written agreement for rent at 20*l.* per annum, was not allowed to show, in addition, by parol evidence, that the tenant had also agreed to pay the ground-rent. Mr. J. Blackstone is said in that case to have observed, that although the Court could neither alter the rent, nor the terms which were expressed in the agreement, yet that with respect to collateral matters it might be different; the plaintiff might show who was to put the house in repair, or the like, concerning which nothing was said. The question, how far collateral matter may be proved by parol, will be considered hereafter (q); at present it may be observed, that to permit terms to be engrafted by mere parol evidence upon a written agreement, would be attended with all the danger, laxity and inconvenience, which the general rule is calculated to exclude; for an agreement might by such additional terms be as effectually altered as if the very terms of the agreement had been changed by the operation of parol evidence (2).

By addition, &c.

(m) P. C. in Kain v. Old,[1] 2 B. & C. 634. Note, that the first agreement was in writing, but void for not reciting the certificate of the ship's registry. And see Meyer v. Everett, 4 Camp. 22. Gardner v. Gray, 4 Camp. 144. Powell v. Edmonds, 12 East, 6. Hope v. Atkins, 1 Price, 143. Pickering v. Dowsing, 4 Taunt. 779; and Countess of Rutland's Case, supra. And tit. WARRANTY.

(n) Lano v. Neale,[2] 2 Starkie's C. 105. The previous contract there was for a ship, forty tons of iron kintlage, &c.; the bill of sale was of a ship, together with all stores, &c. in the usual form, and silent as to kintlage; and held that the vendee could not recover for non-delivery of kintlage.

(o) Per Ld. Kenyon, in Rolleston v. Hibbert, 4 T. R. 413. And see Drakeford v. Hodges, 1 N. R. 270; where it was held, that if a parol warranty or agreement to assign be reduced to writing, and the assignment be afterwards legally executed, the warranty cannot be proved by parol.

(p) Preston v. Merceau, 2 Bl. 1249. So in Rich v. Jackson, 4 Bro. C. C. 515, where an agreement specified the rent and the term, but was silent as to taxes, the Court refused to receive parol evidence on the part of the lessor, that previous to the drawing up of the memorandum it had been agreed and understood by the parties that the rent was to be paid clear of all taxes.

(q) Infra, 781, 787, &c.

(1) [A bill of parcels delivered by A. stating the goods as bought of B. and A. is not conclusive evidence against A. that the goods were the joint property of B. and A.; but the real circumstances may be explained by parol. Harris v. Johnston, 3 Cranch, 311. Where A. sold to B. several bags of hops, and gave a bill of parcels, stating the number of bags, the weight, price, &c., with these words, "the hops are warranted to be first quality;" in an action by B. against A. for a false warranty, it was held that A. was not precluded by the bill of parcels from showing that the hops were warranted only in case they were carried by B. to a particular place. Wallace v. Rogers, 2 N. Hamp. Rep. 506. In Schuyler v. Russ, 2 Caines, 202, in an action on a written warranty of soundness, parol proof was held to have been rightly admitted that the vendor at the time of sale, informed the vendee of a defect, which was visible, and called his attention to it. The defect was held not to be within the purview of the contract. See Smith v. Williams, cited in the next note.]

(2) [Parol evidence is not admissible to prove an agreement between mortgagor and mortgagee, that the former should remain in possession of the mortgaged premises. Colman v. Packard, 16 Mass. Rep. 39. Nor to prove that a lessor, in consideration of the rent reserved, promised to make any other repairs than those which are stipulated in the lease. Bringham v. Rogers, 17 Mass. Rep. 571. Nor to prove a warranty of the soundness of a slave, when there is a written instrument conveying the slave, and containing a warranty of title only. Smith v. Williams, 1 Car. Law Repos. 263. 1 Murphey, 426. See Barber v. Brace, 3 Conn. Rep. 9. In debt on a bond conditioned for payment of an indent for 1,200*l.* evidence of a parol agreement between the parties, that if the indent was not returned on the day mentioned in the condition, it should be converted into a special debt, was held to be inadmissible. Atkinson v. Scott, 1 Bay, 307. So where property is pledged by a written contract as security for a certain sum advanced, parol evidence is not admissible to prove an agreement that the property shall be held until certain sums, afterwards advanced,

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. ix. 205. [2] Id. iii. 267.

Where an agreement specifies only the rent and the term, but is silent as to repairs, it is obvious that such an agreement may be as completely varied by proof of an additional stipulation that the landlord should lay out a specific sum in alterations, as by evidence that the rent shall be diminished, without any stipulation as to repairs. Cases in which the additional terms constitute in fact a new agreement, incorporating the *761 fomer written terms (r), or continuing the former *contract (s), or amount to a substantive collateral agreement (t); those also, where certain terms are engrafted upon an agreement, which is silent on the point, by some known custom, or general understanding (u); and lastly, those where the instrument offered as evidence to prove a collateral fact, has, in the particular instance, no exclusive operation (x), fall, as will be seen, under a different consideration.

At present, assuming the particular instrument to be that which the parties have agreed upon as the evidence of their intentions in respect of the particular transaction, the only question is, whether the parol evidence, which is adduced to superadd something to the written agreement, does not vary that agreement; if it does, it is inadmissible.

Where the conditions of sale described only the number and kind of timber-trees to be sold by lot, but said nothing as to the weight of the timber, the defendant, in an action for not completing his purchase according to the conditions, was not permitted to prove that the auctioneer had, at the sale, warranted the timber to amount to a certain weight; for if that representation induced him to become the purchaser, he ought to have had it reduced to writing at the time (y) (1). Lord Ellenborough, in that case, (r) Where one written instrument refers to another, from which it requires explanation, with sufficient certainty, the latter is virtually incorporated with the former, and may be said to give effect to it. But it is a general rule of law, that an instrument properly attested, in order to incorporate another instrument not attested, must deseribe it so as to be a manifestation of what the paper is which is meant to be incorporated, in such a way that the Court can be under no mistake. Per Lord Eldon, C. Smart v. Prujean, 6 Ves. 565.

(s) Supra, 757; and see Warren v. Stagg, 3 T. R. 591; Cuff v. Penn, 1 M. & S. 21; Lord Milton v. Edworth, 6 Bro. P. C. 587.

(t) Granville v. Duchess of Beaufort, 1 P. Wms. 114; 2 Vern. 648; and supra, 757.

(u) Infra, 786. (x) Infra, 787.

(y) Powell v. Edmonds, 12 East, 6. And see Buckmaster v. Harrop, 13 Ves. 471; Shelton v. Livius, 2 C. & J. 411; Higginson v. Clowes, 15 Ves. 516; Jenkinson v. Pepys, cited 6 Ves. 330; Meres v. Ansell, 3 Wills. 275; Rich v. Jackson, 4 Bro. C. C. 515; Gunnis v. Erhart, 1 H. B. 289. But where previous to the sale of a leasehold estate by auction, the purchaser promised the vendor to indemnify him against the cove-are paid. Hamilton v. Wagner, 2 Marsh. 333. Where the defendant gave the plaintiff a writing acknowledging the sale of a note of hand, and the receipt of part payment, and that the balance was to be paid when the money should be collected on the note; parol evidence was held to be inadmissible to prove that the defendant, at the time of the contract, promised to commence an action within ten days against the maker of the note. Clark v. M'Willan, 2 Car. Law Repos. 65. {So it is inadmissible to prove, that at the time when a note of hand was transferred by an indorsement in blank, the indorser agreed to be responsible at all events, without demand of the maker, and notice of non-payment. Barry v. Morse, 3 N. Hamp. Rep. 132.} Parol evidence that seller of land agreed, at the time of sale, to extinguish an interfering claim, is not admissible. Machir v. M'Dowell, 4 Bibb, 473. Nor to enlarge or diminish the quantum of articles for which a receipt is given: nor to show that a further sum, not mentioned in the writing, was to be paid on a contingency. Querry v. White, 1 Bibb, 271. In an action by an assignee of a bond against the assignor, upon a written assignment in general terms, parol evidence cannot be received to show that the defendant expressly guaranteed payment of the bond. O'Harra v. Hall, 4 Dallas, 340, Circuit Court of U. S. In this case, Peters, J. thought such evidence would be admitted by the Courts of Pennsylvania, where there is no Court of Equity—and in the case of Field & al. v. Biddle, 1 Yeates, 132; 2 Dallas, 171, S. C. parol evidence was held admissible to show that when a bond was executed, it was agreed that it should be void on a particular contingency. So in Birchfield v. Castleman, Addison, 181, in an action of covenant against a vendor of land, who had covenanted "to make good the land against all persons claiming"—where the vendee had been ejected in consequence of a judgment which had been irregularly entered it was held that parol proof was admissible to show that when the deed was executed, the vendor agreed to defend all suits. See also M'Meen v. Owen, 2 Dallas, 173. 1 Yeates, 132, S. C. Wallace v. Baker, 1 Binney, 616. Zantzinger v. Ketch, 5 Dallas, 132. Hurst's Lessee v. Kirkbridge & al., cited 1 Yeates, 139.]

(1) [The general rule of law is, that parol evidence of declarations of an auctioneer is not admissible to observed, that if such evidence were admissible, in what instance might not a party by parol testimony, superadd any term to a written agreement? which would be setting aside all written contracts, and rendering them of no effect. In such cases it is to be presumed that the parties, in expressing their intention, have expressed the whole of it, subject to those incidents and consequences which the law annexes to the terms which they have used.

Where no date is inserted in a deed, date is construed to mean delivery; but where a date is given, and an act is to be done at a certain time from the date, the party bound cannot allege a different time of delivery (z).

Where a written agreement for the sale of goods is silent as to the time of delivery, the law implies a contract to deliver them within a reasonable time, to be judged of according to the circumstances. In such a case evidence is inadmissible of a contemporaneous oral contract by the purchaser to take them immediately (a) (2).

Intention to alter the legal operation of an instrument.

Parol evidence is also inadmissible for the purpose of altering the legal operation of an instrument, by evidence of an intention to that effect, which *is not expressed in the instrument (b). Thus the defendant cannot be admitted to prove that at the time of making a promissory note it was agreed, that when the note became due payment should not be demanded, *762 but that the note should not be renewed (c) (3).

So also parol evidence is inadmissible to show that a bond, purporting to be absolute, was intended merely as an indemnity, and that the plaintiff has not been damnified (d) (4); or to show that the directions of a will were nants entered into by the lessee, a specific performance was decreed, although the terms of the sale were silent as to such indemnity. Pember v. Mathers, 1 Bro P. C. 54.

(z) Styles v. Wardle,[1] 4 B. & C. 908; Co. Litt. 46, b.; Com. Dig. Fait. b.; 2 Cro. 264; and supra, tit. Deed. Armit v. Breame, 2 Ld. Raym. 1076. But where a lease dated Lady-day, 1783, purported to commence on Lady-day last past, evidence was admitted to show that the lease was in fact executed after the date, and consequently that the term commenced Lady-day 1782, not 1783. Steele v. Mart,[2] 4 B. & C. 272.

(a) Greaves v. Ashlin, 3 Camp. 426. Halliley v. Nicholson, 1 Price, 404.

(b) In equity, however, it seems that parol evidence is admissible to show that the testator intended that specific legacies should be paid out of particular funds (Cliff v. Gibbons, Ld. Raym. 1524). But not to show that a testator intended to exempt his personal estate from debts. See Reeves v. Newenham, 2 Ridg. 21, 35, 44.

(c) Hoare v. Graham, 3 Camp. 57. Hogg v. Snaith, 1 Taunt. 347. Supra, 241, 242.

(d) Mease v. Mease, Cowp. 47.

---

vary the written terms of sale. Wright's Lessee v. Deklyne, 1 Peters' Rep. 204. But where an advertisement stated that a certain farm would be sold, without stating that the whole would be sold at one time, evidence of declarations by the sheriff, at the time of sale, that a particular part of the farm would not be sold, was received. Ibid. Parol evidence was held admissible to show that a slave, sold at auction, was sold subject to every defect except that of title, though the auctioneer's advertisement described the slaves as "prime negroes." Limehouse v. Grey, 1 Const. Rep. 73.]

(2) [Where there was a memorandum for the hire of a slave at a certain sum for the first year, and a larger sum for two succeeding years, it was held that parol evidence was admissible to prove that the money was to be paid quarterly. Stone v. Wilson, 1 Const. Rep. 68.]

(3) {But in Pennsylvania, it has been decided, that under the plea of payment to a suit on a bond against a surety, parol evidence is admissible to show, that he executed the bond under a declaration by the obligee that his signing was mere matter of form, and that he never should be called upon for payment. Miller v. Henderson, 10 Serg. & Rawle, 290. Unless, however, the obligor was induced by such declaration to execute the bond, the evidence would be inadmissible, although the declaration were made at the time of its execution. Hain v. Kalback, 14 Serg. & Rawle, 159. And see Moies v. Bird, 11 Mass. Rep. 436.}

(4) [Parol evidence is admissible to prove that a deed was delivered as an escrow. Pawling & al. v. United States, 4 Cranch, 219. Fairbanks v. Metcalfe, 8 Mass. Rep. 230. Couch v. Meeker, 2 Com. Rep. 302. {Raymond v. Smith, 5 Conn. Rep. 555.} But it is not admissible {at law} to prove that a deed, absolute on the face of it, was intended for a mortgage. Flint v. Sheldon, 13 Mass. Rep. 443. Streator v. Jones, 1 Murphey, 449. Nor that a deed, absolute on the face of it, was given in trust. Dickerson v. Dickerson, 1 Car. Law Repos. 262. M'Teer v. Sheppard, 1 Bay, 461. Goodwin v. Hubbard, 15 Mass. Rep. 218. Flint v. Sheldon, ubi sup. {But in equity, as between the original parties to a transaction, parol evidence is admis-intended to operate in satisfaction of a bond (e); or that a bond given by the husband before marriage, conditioned to secure 400*l.* to the wife, in case she survived the husband, was given in lieu of dower (f).

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. x. 468. [2] Id. x. 332.

To extend or limit, &c. (A).

Where a man gave a bond that his executors should, within six months after his death, pay 5,000*l.* to trustees, in trust, to apply the interest to the maintenance of his natural son till he should attain the age of twenty-one, and then to pay him the principal, but in case he should die before the father, or under the age of twenty-one, then in trust over; and by his will directed his trustees to lay out 15,000*l.* in trust, to pay 200*l.* a year to his said son till twenty-five, and then to pay him the principal, with remainder over if he died before that age, the Chancellor refused to admit parol evidence of declarations alleged to have been made by the testator, for the purpose of explaining the will, and showing it to be in satisfaction of the bond (g).

Where a man conveyed his estate to certain uses, reserving to himself the power of changing or revoking them, and afterwards conveyed it to trustees, in trust to pay his debts, and then in trust to re-convey, it was held that a proof of a declaration by one of the trustees under the latter deed, that the party did not intend to revoke the former by the latter, was inadmissible (h).

Intention of a testator

Parol evidence of the intention of the testator is in no case admissible to contradict the express terms of a will (i) (B).

(e) Jeacock v. Falkener, 1 Bro. C. C. 295.

(f) Finney v. Finney, 1 Wils. 34. But where a man who had agreed to settle 100*l.* a year on his intended wife, finding himself ill, made his will, and afterwards left her 100*l.* a year, and recovering, married her, Clarke, B. held, that evidence was admissible to show that he intended her one of the annuities only. Mascall v. Mascall, 1 Ves. 323.

(g) Jeacock v. Falkener, 1 Bro. C. C. 295.

(h) By Reynolds, B. and by the Chancellor and Master of the Rolls. Fitzgerald v. Fancomb, Fitz. 207.

(i) A testator having copyhold estates in North C. and South C., devises to his wife all his wines, &c., in addition to the settlement made her on his copyhold estate; to his niece M. the rents and profits of his new inclosed freehold cow-pasture close in North C. during the life of his wife; and after the decease of his wife, sible to show, that a deed, absolute on its face, was intended as a mere security or mortgage, the attempt to treat it as an absolute deed being a fraud. James v. Johnson, 6 Johns. Cha. Rep. 417. Strong v. Stewart, 4 Johns. Cha. Rep. 167. Todd v. Rivers, 1 Desauss. Cha. Rep. 155. Accident or mistake by which a deed is drawn and executed as an absolute deed when the parties had agreed it should be executed as a mortgage, is a ground for the admission of parol evidence to control the deed (Washburn v. Merrils, 1 Day's Rep. 139), as is a difference existing between a deed as expressed, and the admitted intention of the parties, when application is made to a Court of Equity, founded upon, and with a view to enforce the real object of the parties. Moses v. Murgatroyd, 1 Johns. Cha. Rep. 119. Such evidence, however, would not be received to prejudice the rights of third persons, who have, without notice and for valuable consideration, acquired interests upon the faith of a deed purporting to be absolute on its face. James v. Johnson, Mills v. Comstock, 5 Johns. Cha. Rep. 214.} And where the grantor remained till his death in possession of lands conveyed by an absolute deed, and the grantee did not call for an account of rents and profits; parol evidence was admitted to benefit of the grantor, and his heirs. Gay v. Hunt, 1 Murphey, 141. See St. John v. Benedict, 6 Johns. Ch. Rep. 111.

---

In Pennsylvania, {where the Courts proceed upon Equity principles,} it has been decided that parol evidence may be given to prove that a mortgage given to A. was in fact intended for the security of B. Peterson v. Milling, 3 Dallas, 506. {But in New York such evidence has been rejected in a Court of Law to prove the same fact. Jackson v. Foster, 12 Johns. 488.}

In Kentucky, parol evidence is held admissible to prove that a bill of sale of a slave was to be cancelled, and the slave revest in the maker of the bill. Trambo v. Cartwright, 1 Marsh. 582. See Dabny & al v. Green, 4 Hen. & Mun. 101. Ross v. Norvell, 1 Wash. 14.

See other cases collected by Mr. Norris, in his edition of Peake on Evidence, 178.]

(A) (Parol evidence is admissible to show the time at which a specialty was actually executed. Battles v. Fobes, 21 Pick. 239. And to enlarge the time for performing a condition of an agreement, or to show a waver of the performance of the condition of a bond. Fleming v. Gilbert, 3 John. R. 528.)

(B) Parol evidence of the declarations of the testator cannot be received to explain the intention of the bequest, but such evidence may be received to prove the situation of the property. Puller's Ex'rs v. Puller, 3 Rand. 83. Nor is it competent to receive the evidence of the scrivener as to the meaning of the testator in his will. M'Cay v. Hagas, 6 Watts, 345. So parol evidence of the intention of the testator is inadmissible to vary the express terms of a will. Avery v. Chappell, 6 Conn. R. 270.)

*Where a legacy was given to A. B., and in case of his death to his wife, and the wife after his death received the legacy, and the question at law was, whether she received the legacy in her own right, or as her husband's representative, it was held that evidence was inadmissible to prove that the testator when he was in extremis had declared his intention to be, that the husband should have the interest only during the life of the wife, and that if she survived him she should have the principal (k). to vary the terms of a will.

Where a father by his will made his three brothers, who were presbyterians, together with a clergyman, guardians of his children, in general terms, King, Chancellor, on a bill filed by the three against the clergyman, to have the children delivered up to them, rejected parol evidence of directions alleged to have been given by the testator, that the children should be educated as presbyterians; and he said, that as that was not expressed in the will, parol evidence was no more admissible in the case of a devise of a guardianship than in the case of a devise of land (l).

Oral declarations of the testator cannot be received for the purpose of explaining his intention (m), even where it is apparently ambiguous on the face of the will. Where the testator, after mentioning his wife and niece in his will, afterwards gave a particular estate to her for life, the Lord Chancellor refused to receive parol evidence to show which was meant (n).

So such extrinsic evidence is inadmissible to prove the legal construction of words, or to effect a legal presumption arising from the construction (o).

Where a legacy was given A. B. who was dead at the time, it was held, that evidence was not admissible to show the intent of the testator that the legacy should be transmissible (p).

Where a devise was to the son of the devisor, and the heirs of his body, on condition that he, they, or any of them, should not aliene, discontinue, &c.: parol evidence was held to be inadmissible to show the intention of the devisor, that the condition should extend to the son and his heirs (q).

So it was held to be inadmissible to show that the testator did not intend to pass the reversion and remainder in fee of certain settled lands, by a devise of all lands, tenements and hereditaments out of settlement (r).

An estate was devised in trust to receive the profits for three years, and if the heiress of the devisor should marry Lord G. within that time, in trust to two nephews, his furniture, &c. and all his copyhold estates in North C. and South C. It was held, that as there was no ambiguity on the face of the will, or in the application of it, the testator having copyhold estates in North C. and South C. which answered the description, extrinsic evidence was not admissible to show that the description in the settlement included a freehold close, which was mistakenly enumerated there as a copyhold; and that by all his copyhold estates in North C. and South C., this freehold passed, although the settlement was referred to in the will; and that other documents not referred to were inadmissible for that purpose. Doe d. Brown v. Brown, 11 East, 441. A testator gave one of his debtors certain messuages, and after other legacies and devises gave all the rest of his estate, not thereby devised, to his executors, or such of them as should act, and made that debtor and J. S. his executors. They both acted, and J. S. filed a bill against the debtor for a proportion of his debt; the debtor offered parol evidence to show that the testator meant that the debt should be extinguished, and that he gave the attorney who drew the will instructions to release it, but that the attorney, and a counsel whose opinion was taken, were of opinion that the debt would be released by implication. But Lord Talbot said that the cases went no further than to let in parol evidence to rebut an equity or resulting trust; but as the residuary clause directed the property not before disposed of by the will to be divided between the executors, and as the debt in question had not been previously disposed of by the will, the evidence contradicted the express words of the will. Brown v. Selwin, Ca. Temp. Talbot, 240; 7 Bac. Ab. 337, 6th edit.

(k) Lowfield v. Stoneham, Str. 1261.

(l) Storke v. Storke, 3 P. Wms. 51. But see 2 Ves. 56.

(m) 2 Vernon, 624. [Richards v. Dutch, 8 Mass. R. 506. Sword v. Adams, 3 Yeates, 34. Torbert v. Twining, 1 Yeates, 432.]

(n) Castleton v. Turner, 3 Atk. 258. Humpshire v. Pearce, 2 Ves. 216.

(o) Per Ld. Talbot, 2 Bro. C. C. 821.

(p) Maybank v. Brookes, Bro. C. C. 84.

(q) Cheney's Case, 5 Co. 68. 2 Bro. C. C. 821.

(r) Strode v. Falkland, 2 Vernon, 621; but it is stated by Salkeld that the decree was reversed; according to Vernon, it was compromised.

for her, for life, with remainder to her children in strict settlement; and if the marriage should not happen, in trust for Lord F.; the marriage did not *764 *take place; and it was held that parol evidence was inadmissible of a declaration by the testator that Lord G.'s refusal should not disinherit his heir-at-law (s).

To vary legal construction, &c.

Upon a question of legal construction upon the terms of a will, whether the devisor gave an estate for life, or an estate in fee, Lord Holt was of opinion that the intention of the devisor must be collected, not from collateral matters, but from the will itself; but the other Judges were against him, and their opinion was confirmed in the exchequer chamber (t). And in some other instances the Courts have taken into consideration the state and circumstances of the family, in order to enable them the better to construe the testator's real intention as to the personal estate (u) (1).

Where, however, extrinsic evidence is allowed to operate so far as to give to the terms of a will a different construction from that which the terms abstractedly imply, the rule seems to be carried farther than is warranted by principle or analogy (x).

Where evidence was offered of the value of an estate charged with sums of money payable to the sisters of the devisee, as an argument in favour of a particular construction, the Court of King's Bench held that it was nugatory and inadmissible as matter of proof, although it might have been of (s) Bertie v. Falkland, Salk. 231; Vern. 333.

(t) Cole v. Rawlinson, Salk. 234. See Doe v. Fyldes, Cowp. 833. Doe v. Dring, 2 M. & S. 455. Bootle v. Blundell, 1 Merivale, 316. Richardson v. Edmonds, 7 T. R. 640. Standen v. Standen, 2 Ves. jun. 593. Vin. Ab. tit. Devise, Y. 2, pl. 10. Pepper & ux. v. Winyeve, Bac. Ab. tit. Wills, 367, 6th edit.

(u) See the cases cited in the preceding note; and see Baldwin v. Karver, Cowp. 312; where Lord Mansfield observed, that all cases upon the construction of wills depend upon the particular penning of the wills themselves, and the state of the families to which they relate; and in the case of Jones v. Morgan, (cited in Lytton v. Lytton, 4 Bro. Ch. 1,) the same learned Judge observed, that to construe a will the intent is to be taken from the whole will together, applied to the subject-matter to which the will relates. Sir D. Evans, 2 Pothier, 212, remarks also, that Lord Loughborough, in quoting the opinion of Lord Mansfield, took notice of different cases in which certain words were held to apply to a failure of issue at a certain period, although taking the words strictly, and construing them without considering the circumstances, would have imported a general failure of issue. (Vide Lytton v. Lytton, 4 Bro. Ch. 1.) In the case of Masters v. Masters, (1 P. W. 420,) the testator, after bequeathing a legacy to two particular hospitals in Canterbury, by his codicil bequeathed another sum "to all and every the hospitals." As the testator had by his will taken notice of two hospitals in Canterbury, and as it appeared in evidence that he lived there, it was held, that the intention sufficiently appeared to apply the latter bequest to the hospitals in Canterbury. And see the distinction taken by Lord Thurlow in Jeacock v. Falkner, 1 Bro. C. C. 296.

(x) See Lord Hardwicke's observations in Blinkhorne v. Feast, 1 Ves. 28. Strode v. Russell, 2 Vern. 624. Castleton v. Turner, 3 Atk. 258. Petit v. Smith, 1 P. Wms. 9. Brown v. Langley, 2 Barn. 118. Brown v. Selwin, C. Temp. Talbot, 240. Jeacock v. Falkener, 1 Bro. C. C. 296. The doctrine once prevailed that a Court might receive evidence which was inadmissible before a jury; that, however, has since been denied, per Buller, J. 2 H. B. 522.

(1) [In Sargent & al. v. Towne, 19 Mass. Rep. 303, it was held that a devise, which, by the terms used, would carry only a life estate, might be extended to carry an estate in fee, by showing by parol that the subject of the devise was wild land, from which a tenant for life could derive no benefit. Where a tract of land, conveyed by deed, was described as the farm on which the grantor resided, parol evidence was admitted that a particular piece of land, claimed under the deed, was at the time of the grant in a state of nature, unenclosed and separate from the rest of the farm, and that the grantor remained in possession, and occupied it as his own until his death—to show that it was not within the grant. Doolittle & ux. v. Blakesley, 4 Day, 265. See also Foster v. Wood, 16 Mass. Rep. 116. Leland v. Stone, 10 ib. 461. Richards v. Dutch & al. 8 ib. 506. Parol testimony of the testator's circumstances, situation, connection with the legatees, and his transactions between the making of his will and the time of his death, is admissible to discover his intention, by explaining things or persons denoted by doubtful words. Reno's Ex'rs v. Davis & ux. 3 Hen. & Mun. 283. Shelton & al. v. Shelton, 1 Wash. 53. Where a plaintiff in an execution gave to an officer who had the defendant in custody on a ca. sa. a writing stating that he wished the officer to show the prisoner as much indulgence as could be shown with safety to himself, and without hazarding in any way the debt; it was held that the writing being in itself ambiguous, parol evidence of the conversation between the plaintiff and the officer at the time, and of collateral extraneous facts relating to the prisoner's situation, was admissible, to ascertain the nature and extent of the indulgence which was to be shown to him. Ely & al. v. Adams, 19 Johns. 313.]

great weight had the Court been called upon to make a will for the testator (y).

*In the late case of Doe d. Oxendon v. Sir A. Chichester (z), it was observed by Sir V. Gibbs, that courts of law had been jealous of extrinsic evidence for the purpose of explaining the intention of a testator; and that he knew of one case only in which it is permitted, that is where an ambiguity is introduced by extrinsic circumstances. *765

Admissible to disprove, &c.

The objection does not apply where evidence is offered not for the purpose of contradicting or varying the effect of a written instrument of admitted authority, but where on the contrary it is offered in order to disprove the legal existence, or rebut the operation of the instrument. To do this, is not to substitute mere oral testimony for written evidence, the weaker for the stronger, but to show that the written ought to have no operation whatsoever; an object which must usually be accomplished by oral evidence.

Fraud.

As a written instrument in general derives its authenticity from the aid of external evidence, it may in like manner be defeated. Thus a written instrument may be impeached by extrinsic evidence, on the ground of fraud, even in the case of a record (a) (A).

So also in the case of a private agreement oral evidence is admissible to prove a fraudulent omission (b). Where there was an agreement for a lease, evidence was admitted of a parol agreement that the rent should be clear of all taxes, but that the plaintiff reduced the agreement to writing without mentioning that point, and that the defendant could not read (c). In order to impeach a will, and to show that it had been fraudulently submitted to a testator for his signature, parol evidence was admitted, that at the time of signing the will he asked whether the contents were the same with those of a former will, and that he was answered in the affirmative (d). So it may be shown that one will was substituted for another (e). So in general it may be shown that fraud and imposition were practised upon a

(y) Doe v. Fyldes, Cowp. 833. In Oates v. Brydon, 3 Burr. 1895, Lord Mansfield went into an inquiry as to value, in order to found an argument upon the result, as to the construction of a will, and in order to show that property of such small value could not be intended to be the subject of particular limitations; but the same learned Judge seems to have been of a different opinion in the case of Doe v. Fyldes, just cited, where he concurred with the other Judges; and in Goodtitle v. Edmonds, 7 T. R. 635, Ld. Kenyon intimated that the case of Oates v. Brydon had not been satisfactory to the profession, and that he believed that Lord Mansfield had afterwards doubted whether he had proceeded upon substantial grounds. In the case of Bengough v. Walker, (15 Ves. 514,) the Master of the Rolls said, "You cannot refer to extrinsic evidence to construe a will, but you may to show with reference to what a will was made."

(z) 4 Dow. 65; infra, 774.

(a) B. N. P. 173. Paxton v. Popham, 9 East, 421. Doe v. Allen, 8 T. R. 147. R. v. Mattingley, 2 T. R. 12. Supra, tit. Fraud; and see tit. Forgery. But such evidence is not admissible to defeat a record by showing a rasure, &c.; as that a rasure was made in a precept since it was issued. Dickson v. Fisher, Burr. 2267; and tit. Judgment, Vol. II.

(b) Lord Irnham v. Child, 1 Bro. C. C. 92; 3 Atk. 389.

(c) Jones v. Statham, 3 Atk. 388. Note, the agreement was executory.

(d) Doe d. Small v. Allen, 8 T. R. 147. (e) Ibid.

(A) (Parol evidence is admissible to contradict the written return of an officer which has been obtained by fraud practised upon him. Commonwealth v. Bullard, 9 Mass R. 270. And in an action on a charter party to recover the price agreed upon for the use of the vessel, the defendant may give evidence of fraudulent representation by the plaintiff as to the burden or capacity of the vessel in mitigation or satisfaction of the plaintiff's demand. Johnson v. Miln, 14 Wend. 195. So parol evidence is admissible to show fraud in the formation of a written instrument, or a fraudulent use of it afterwards. Oliver v. Oliver, 4 Rawle, 141. See also Erwin v. Saunders, 1 Cow. 250. Roberts v. Jackson, 1 Wend. 478. Badon v. Badon, 6 Louis. R. 258. The declarations of the testator before and at the time of making a will, and afterwards, if so near as to be a part of the res gestæ, are admissible to show fraud in obtaining the will, but not declarations at any distance of time after the will has been executed, especially where the will has always been in the testator's possession. The declarations of the testator as to his intention to alter his will, and being prevailed upon not to do so, are not admissible to show that the will was fraudulently prevented from being revoked, there being no act or attempt shown to revoke the will, &c. Smith v. Fenner, 1 Gallis, C. C. R. 170.)

party to an instrument, by a fraudulent omission, or misrepresentation of the contents, especially if the party were illiterate (f).

And it is a general principle of law, that where a statute makes a deed void, as for a charitable or superstitious use, or where it is void at common law, as being contra bonos mores, the proof of invalidity may be collected not only from the instrument itself, but from circumstances which, though they do not appear on the face of the deed, may be taken into consideration (g).

Again, in the case of all covenants to stand seised to uses, a party is at liberty to prove other considerations than those mentioned in the deed (h).

In the case of Filmer v. Gott (i), where the considerations mentioned in *766 *the deed were 10,000*l.*, and natural love and affection, the lords commissioners of the great seal directed an issue to try whether natural love and affection formed any part of the consideration, the estates being worth 30,000*l.* On appeal to the House of Lords, it was held that the commissioners had done right; and the jury finding that natural love and affection formed no part of the consideration, the deed was afterwards set aside by the Lord Chancellor.

Although a party, in order to prove fraud, may adduce extrinsic evidence to show the inadequacy of the consideration when compared with the value of the estate, the party who claims under the deed cannot be admitted to show a consideration in support of it, different from that which is expressed. Upon a bill to set aside a conveyance of an estate of inheritance worth 40*l.* a year, conveyed to the defendant by an infirm old man of the age of seventy-two, in consideration of an annuity of 20*l.*, it was held, that the defendant was not at liberty to show blood and kindred to have been the real consideration of the conveyance, and to prove that the grantor had often declared that he had rather that his kinsman (one of the defendants) should have the estate for this annuity than any other person for a valuable consideration (j).

In cases also where the public have an interest in the real nature of a transaction between two parties, they are not bound by the representation made in the private agreement, but may impeach it pro tanto, as to any misrepresentation; for this misrepresentation may properly be considered as a species of fraud upon the public. Thus, although the private deed of conveyance of an estate expressed 28*l.* to be the purchase-money, it was held, that as between two contending parishes, it was competent to one of them (k) to show that the real consideration was 30*l.*, in order to establish a settlement under the statute (l). And, in general, extrinsic evidence is admissible for the purpose of avoiding a particular instrument, on the ground of a fraud attempted to be practised on the revenue; as by proof that under the particular circumstances the instrument ought to have been differently stamped (m).

Parol evidence is also, in general, admissible for the purpose of showing (f) 3 Atk 389. As where a mortgagee draws the mortgage deed and omits the covenant for redemption. So where there were to be two mortgage deeds, an absolute one and a defeasance, it was held that the mortgagor might prove an agreement to execute the latter. Ibid.

(g) Per Holroyd, J., in Doe d. Welland v. Hawthorn, 2 B. & A. 96. And therefore a lease to trustees may be avoided by a subsequent declaration of trust by some of the trustees. 2 B. & A. 96. See as to superstitious uses, 4 Ed. 6, Carey v. Abbott, 7 Ves. 490.

(h) Per Ld. Kenyon, 3 T. R. 475.

(i) Cited by Ld. Kenyon, in R. v. Scammonden, 3 T. R. 474; 7 Bro. P. C. 50.

(j) Clarkson v. Hanway & al., 2 P. W. 203.

(k) R. v. Scammonden, 3 T. R. 474; see also R. v. Laindon, 8 T. R. 379. R. v. Mattingley, 2 T. R. 12; and infra, 791. [Overseers of New Berlin v. Overseers of Norwich, 10 Johns. 229.]

(l) 9 Geo. 1, c. 7. s. 5.

(m) Supra, 254, and infra, tit. Stamp.

that an instrument is void on the ground of some illegality committed by the parties; as that it is void for usury, or because it is given to secure a gaming debt, or founded upon some illegal consideration (n). And, in general, where a statute avoids an instrument which does not fully state the consideration on which it is founded, extrinsic evidence is admissible to show that the directions of the statute have not been complied with. To avoid, &c., illegality (A).

Oral evidence is also admissible for the purpose of correcting a mistake (o); a practice more frequent in courts of equity than of common law (p). In such cases, especially where recourse is had to equity for relief, *the extrinsic evidence is not offered to contradict a valid existing instrument; but to show, that from accident or negligence the instrument in question has never been constituted the actual depository of the intention and meaning of the parties (B) (1). Mistake. *767

(n) An agreement, varying from the condition of the bond, may be pleaded, to show that the bond was founded on an illegal agreement. Greville v. Atkins,[1] 9 B. & C. 462. Supra, 101, 245. So that it has been obtained by duress, 765.

(o) A contract, apparently usurious, may be shown to be legal by evidence of a clerical error. Anon. 1 Freem. 253. Booth v. Cooke, ib. 264.

(p) The usual, and certainly the safer course, in case of a mistake, is to apply to a court of equity for relief, in the first instance; but a party is not obliged to resort to equity for relief; and there seems to be no reason why such evidence should not be received by way of defence in a court of law.

(A) (Parol evidence is admissible to prove the object of a written contract to be illegal, if such evidence do not contradict the terms of the contract. Russell v. De Grand, 15 Mass. R. 35. So in ejectment it is competent to prove that the patent under which the plaintiff claims was obtained contrary to law, although upon the face it appears to have been regularly issued. Hambleton v. Wells, 4 Call. 213. And it may be proved by parol that the will was executed under duress. Jackson v. Kniffen, 2 John. R. 31.)

(B) (A. seised of a lot in Fourth street, Philadelphia, in the occupation of R. H. and having no lot in Third street, devised his "lot in Third street in the occupation of R. H." Held that parol evidence was admissible to explain the mistake. Lessee of Allen v. Lyons, 2 Wash. C. C. R. 475.)

(1) [Where a contract in writing is made and signed, but the name of the party contracted with is omitted by mistake, the omission may be supplied by parol evidence. Per Parker, C. J. Brown v. Gilman, 13 Mass. Rep. 161. Parol proof, however, is generally inadmissible, in a court of law, to show a mistake in a written agreement. Fitzhugh v. Runyon, 8 Johns. 375. See Jackson v. Sill, cited post.

The rules of evidence are the same in a court of chancery as those of common law. It will not, therefore, receive parol evidence tending to prove an agreement different from one made by the same parties under seal. Dwight v. Pomeroy & al. 17 Mass. Rep. 303. When a party applies to a court of chancery to enforce specific performance of a written contract, the adverse party is allowed to show by testimony, that the instrument relied on does not contain the true agreement of the parties, or the whole of it; and in such case, the court will withhold the exercise of its powers, unless the party seeking relief will do full justice to the other party according to the facts which are made to appear to the court. Ibid. Per Parker, C. J.

The name of one of the children of a testator being omitted in the will, the court of chancery permitted parol evidence to be given that the omission was through mistake, and corrected it. Geer v. Winds, 4 Desauss. 85. But where the scrivener was offered to support, by parol evidence, an allegation of a mistake in a will, and to prove that the testator intended to dispose of his property in a manner not apparent on the face of the will, he was not permitted to be heard. Rothmaler v. Myers, ibid. 215. So where the grantor in a deed of gift, gave a certain sum to trustees to be invested in property for the use of his brother "J. P.'s lawfully begotten children," the court refused to admit parol evidence that the grantor intended to confine the grant to the children of a first marriage, and that he gave instructions to the scrivener accordingly. Holmes v. Simonds, 3 Desauss. 149. Parol evidence to prove that certain property was intended to have been comprehended in a deed of settlement, was rejected. Barrett v. Barrett, 2 Desauss. 447. So parol evidence was rejected which was offered to extend the meaning and operation of receipts given to an administrator by the heirs of the intestate for their shares of the estate to prove a mistake; as that their interest in the real estate was intended to be included. Harris v. Denkins, 4 Desauss. 60. So where a wife joined her husband in conveying her real estate in fee to a third person, and he conveyed it back to the husband, who afterwards conveyed certain lands and slaves to trustees for the use of the children, and then died insolvent; it was held, on a bill by the trustees against the executors of the husband, that parol evidence was inadmissible to prove a mistake in drawing the deed of conveyance of the wife's land, and that it was intended to settle the land in trust for their children. Lloyd v. Ingle's Ex'rs, 1 Desauss. 333. Parol evidence is not inadmissible (in order to vary the effect of the dispositions of a will,) to show that a scrivener, in drawing it, inserted words of which he did not know the meaning. Iddings & al. v. Iddings, 7 Serg. & Rawle, 111. See Christ v. Diffenbach, 1 Serg. & Rawle, 464. Cozen v. Stevenson, 5 ib. 421. Ross v. Norvell, 1 Wash. 14. Montague & al. v. Smith, 13 Mass. Rep. 396.

Assuming that a mistake in drawing articles of agreement may be proved by parol, yet in an action of

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xvii. 421.

Where parties covenanted to convey an estate, in trust, to raise 30,000*l.* to pay off debts and incumbrances, with remainder over, parol evidence was admitted to show that it was the concurrent intention of all the parties to raise that sum in addition to the sum of 24,000*l.*, with which the estate was encumbered (q).

In cases also of marriage settlements, where mistakes have been committed, and, in consequence, the deeds have varied from the instructions of the parties, they have been rectified by a court of equity (r). The same has also been done in instances of mercantile and other contracts (s). Where two persons entrust a third to draw up minutes of their intention, a mistake of his may, it has been held, be relieved against (t). Cases of this nature are nearly of kin to those of fraud; it is, in point of conscience and equity, an actual fraud to claim an undue benefit and advantage from a mere mistake, contrary to the real intention of the contracting parties.

Where a party at the time of executing a deed pointed out a mistake, which the other agreed to rectify, but afterwards refused to do so, parol evidence of the fact was held to be admissible, on the ground of fraud (u).

Such evidence ought not, for obvious reasons, to be allowed to prevail, unless it amount to the strongest possible proof (x). The most satisfactory evidence for this purpose consists of the written materials and instructions which were intended by the parties to be the basis and ground-plan for the construction of the intended instrument (y).

Where a mistake was alleged to have been made in a settlement by an attorney's clerk, the Court would not allow it to be corrected by the mere testimony of the attorney himself, who had received oral instructions for the preparation of the deeds; nothing appearing in the hand-writing of the parties to show that a mistake had been committed (z).

In general, where a written document is given in evidence as containing *768 *an admission by the adversary, parol evidence is admissible to explain it, or to show that it originated in mistake (a).

The principle on which evidence is received to explain mistakes in matters of contract between private persons, does not extend to the admission

(q) Shelburne v. Inchiquin, 1 Bro. C. C. 338. The evidence, however, proved to be insufficient, and no more than 30,000*l.* was ordered to be raised. The decree was affirmed in the House of Lords. See also Baker v. Paine, 1 Ves. 457. Towers v. Moore, 2 Vern. 98. [13 Mass. R. 402.]

(r) Barstow v. Kilvington, 9 Ves. 59; Randal v. Randal, 2 P. W. 469.

(s) See Henkle v. Royal Exchange Assurance Comp. 1 Ves. 317. Thomas v. Fraser, 3 Ves. jun. 399; 10 Ves. 227. And see 1 Atk. 545. Baker v. Paine, 1 Ves. 456.

(t) 1 Bro. C. C. 350. [Hamilton v. Asslin, 14 Serg. & R. 448.]

(u) Per Ld. Talbot, 1 Bro. C. C 54. South Sea Co. v. Oliffe, 2 Ves. 374. Pitcairne v. Ogbourne, Ibid. {Christ v. Diffenback, 1 Serg. & R. 464.} [See Nelson's R. 7.]

(x) Per Ld. Hardwicke, in Henkle v. The Royal Exchange Assurance Co., 1 Ves. 318. In that case, upon a bill to rectify a mistake in a policy of insurance, the principal evidence consisting in the deposition of an agent of the company, who had transacted business for them, the Court held that it was not sufficiently certain to be relied on. Ld. Hardwicke, C. J., in that case observed, that the Court of Chancery had jurisdiction to relieve against plain mistakes in contracts in writing, as well as against fraud; so that if reduced into writing, contrary to the intention of the parties, that, on proper proof, would be rectified. Ld. Eldon, C., in a subsequent case, observed on the loosenesss of this expression, as it left it to every Judge to say, "whether the proof was that proper proof which ought to satisfy him."

(y) Baker v. Paine, 1 Ves. 457.

(z) Hardwood v. Wallis, cited 2 Ves. 195. Hence it seems that the Court, in such cases, will not rely on mere parol evidence alone. And see the dictum of Sir Thomas Clark to that effect, 1 Dickenson, 295. And see Shergold v. Boone, 13 Ves. 373, 376.

(a) Holstein v. Jumpson, 4 Esp. C. 189; and see 1 T. R. 182.

---

covenant on written articles, the plaintiff cannot prove by parol evidence an agreement different from that on which he has declared. Barndoller v. Tate, 1 Serg. & Rawle, 160.

A mistake in one writing referring to another may be corrected in a court of equity, by the writing referred to. Argenbright v. Campbell & ux. 1 Hen. & Mun. 144. See also Vance v. Walker, ibid. 288.]

of evidence to show that a mistake or alteration has been made in records: those memorials having been made and kept under the immediate authority of the law, and by officers in whom confidence is for that purpose reposed, it is to be concluded that they have been correctly made, and faithfully preserved (b). But such evidence is admissible to show a mistake in a memorial not of record; as a court-roll (c).

Fraud. Such extrinsic evidence is also admissible for the purpose of proving fraud. Thus, although a buyer of goods under a written contract cannot show a previous parol contract for the purpose or varying the terms of the written one, he may show by extrinsic evidence that the seller, by some fraud, prevented him from discovering a defect which he knew to exist (d).

To discharge, &c. It is obvious that the general exclusive principle is also inapplicable in all cases where the party admits that the deed or other instrument did once legally exist as such, but offers extrinsic proof to show that it has been discharged by some subsequent instrument or agreement (e), or by the receiving payment or satisfaction (f).

To give effect to a written instrument. II. In the next place, extrinsic parol evidence is admissible generally to give effect to a written instrument, by establishing its authenticity, applying it to its proper subject-matter, and also, as ancillary to the latter object, for the purpose, in some instances, of explaining expressions capable of conveying a definite meaning by virtue of that explanation, and of annexing customary incidents, and also, in other instances, for the purpose of removing presumptions arising from extrinsic facts which would otherwise obstruct such application.

To establish, &c. Whenever an instrument is not proved by mere production, it must necessarily derive its credit and authenticity from extrinsic evidence (g).

To apply. In the next place, it is always necessarily a matter of extrinsic evidence to apply the terms of an instrument to a particular subject-matter, the existence of which is also matter of proof. A difficulty in this case occurs, where, although the terms of the instrument be sufficiently definite and distinct, the objects to which it is to be applied are not equally so, and where it is doubtful whether the description applies at all to the particular object pointed out by the evidence, or whether it be not equally applicable to several distinct objects.

Latent ambiguity. The general rule has already been adverted to, that a latent ambiguity (that is, an ambiguity arising from extrinsic evidence) may be removed by *extrinsic evidence. The illustration most usually given of the operation of this rule is that of a description in a will of a devisee, or of an estate, where it turns out that there are two persons, or two estates, of the same name and description. Where the testratrix devised an estate to her cousin John Cluer, and there were two persons, father and son, of that name, evidence was admitted to show that John Cluer, the son, was meant (h). *769

(b) Reed v. Jackson, 1 East, 355. In Hall v. Wiggett, 2 Vern. 547, an entry in the steward's book, and parol proof by the foreman of the jury of copyholders, was admitted to show that a feme covert had surrendered the whole of her copyhold estate, although the surrender on the roll, and admission, were but of a moiety. And see Towers v. Moore, 2 Vern. 98. Amendments in records are, in numerous instances, made by the Courts themselves, on proper application.

(c) 1 Leon. 289. Kite v. Quentin, 4 Co. 25. Towers v. Moore, 2 Vern. 98. Hill v. Wiggett, Ib. 547, and supra, 767. Walker v. Walker, Barnard, 215. Scriven on Copyholds, 378.

(d) Kain v. Old,[1] 2 B. & C. 634, citing Pickering v. Dowson, where it was so laid down by Gibbs, C. J.

(e) Supra, tit. Deed, Assumpsit; and supra, 757, note (p).

(f) Supra, Accord and Satisfaction. (g) Supra, Vol. I. Written Evidence.

(h) Jones v. Newsam, 1 Bl. 60. Yet if there be father and son of the same name, it is usually to be presumed that the father is meant by the name used simply, and without the addition of 'the younger.'

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. ix. 205.

So in Lord Cheney's case (i), it was held, that if a testator, having two sons of the same name of baptism, and supposing the elder, who had long been absent, to be dead, devise his land to his son generally, the younger son may be permitted to prove the intent of the father to devise to him, and to show that, at the time of the devise, he thought that the other son was dead, or that at the time of making his will, he named his son John the younger, and the writer left out the addition.

According to Lord Coke, no inconvenience can result if an averment be taken in such a case, for he who sees the will by which the land is devised cannot be deceived by any secret averment; when he sees the devise to the testator's son generally, he ought at his peril, to inquire which son the testator intended, which may easily be known by him who wrote the will, and by others who were privy to the intent; and if no direct proof can be made of his intent, then the devise is void for uncertainty (k).

So if a person grant his manor of S. generally, and it appear that he has two manors of S. (south S. and north S.), parol evidence is admissible to show what was intended (l).

Where the testator gave 100*l.* to the four children of Mrs. Banfield, and it appeared that she had four children by Mr. Banfield, her latter husband, and two children by Mr. P. her first husband, a declaration by the testator that he had provided for the four children of Mrs. B., but would give nothing to B.'s children, was admitted in evidence to show who were meant by the description of the four children in the will (m).

So if a man, having two manors of the same name, levy a fine of one, without distinguishing which, parol evidence is admissible to show which was meant (n).

Parol evidence is admissible for the purpose of raising such an ambiguity (o). And in the case of a will &c., the declarations made by the testator at the time of making the will are admissible in order to explain an ambiguity of this nature.

Where the testator devised to his grand-daughter, Mary Thomas, of Llechloyd, and it appeared that he had a grand-daughter of the name of Ellenor Evans, at Llechloyd, and a grand-daughter, Mary Thomas, who lived elsewhere, evidence on the part of Ellenor Evans was admitted to prove, that when the will was read over to the testator, he said that there was a mistake in the name of the woman to whom he intended to give the *770 *house, but that there was no occasion to alter it, as the place of abode and the parish would be sufficient (p). But in the same case it was held that evidence was properly rejected of declarations made by the testator at other times previous to the making of his will, of his great regard for the defendant Mary Thomas, and of his intention to give the house to her (q).

As an ambiguity arising from too great generality of description may be removed by oral evidence, which restrains and confines, and applies that description to a single object, although on the mere comparison of the terms with several objects, they may be equally applicable to more than one; so it is a rule that a redundant and superfluous description, which is inappli-

(i) Lord Cheney's Case, 5 Rep. 58, b. See also Careless v. Careless, 1 Merivale, 354.
(k) 5 Rep. 58. (l) Bac. El. Rule 23.
(m) Humpshire v. Pearce, 2 Ves. 216; and note, that in the same will, the testator having subsequentl given 300*l.* to the children of Mrs. B., Sir John Strange, the Master of the Rolls, held that the declaration was inadmissible as to the 300*l.*, being contradictory of the will.
(n) Partridge v. Stracye, Plow. 85, b. Mears v. Ansell, 3 Wilson, 376.
(o) 6 T. R. 671; 1 Bro. C. C. 85, 342, 350.
(p) Thomas v. Thomas, 6 T. R. 671.
(q) Ibid. by Lawrence, J. at the trial; the admission of the evidence was afterwards approved of by the Court of K. B. And see 8 Vin. Ab. 312, pl. 29; 2 Ves. 216.

cable to an object well ascertained by previous or subsequent description, will not prevent such application. Thus, where property was given to A. and B. legitimate children of C. D., it was held that A. and B. the illegitimate children of C. D. were entitled to take (r). So if a grant be made to William, bishop of Norwich, the name of the bishop being Richard, the grant will be good, the intention being sufficiently clear and apparent (s). So if a devise be made to John, the son of J. S., and J. S. has but one son, whose name is James (t).

Upon the same principles, if the description in the instrument apply partially to each of two persons, but to neither of them entirely, so that a doubt arises which was intended, oral evidence is admissible to remove it. For as an erroneous and superfluous description will not prevent the application of the description which in part is certain, and as a description equally applicable to two objects may be ascertained and fixed by external evidence, it seems to follow, that where the description, although redundant and partially erroneous, is still limited to two or more objects, to whom it is equally applicable, then the generality may be further limited by means of extrinsic evidence (u).

It is observable that in the case of a will, evidence for the purpose of giving effect to the maker's intention, has been more liberally admitted than in the case of any other instrument, and in some instances to a greater extent than is strictly warranted by any general principle. Some authorities on this subject have been already referred to, and others will be cited under the head of WILLS. It will however be proper in this place briefly to refer to the general principles and rules which govern this large class of cases, either in common with others of a similar nature, or as peculiar to the class.

First, then, evidence of the facts and circumstances in respect of which *the terms of a will are to be applied are necessarily admissible for the purpose of applying them in the strict and primary sense (v); and it is an inveterate rule founded on plain and obvious principles, that where the terms *771

(r) Standen v. Standen, 2 Ves. jun. 589; see 2 Pothier, by Sir D. Evans, 210. Where a woman made a will in favour of a person whom she described to be her husband, and it appeared that he had another wife, Arden, Master of the Rolls, held that the disposition was void; but this was founded not on any defect in the description, but on the principle, that where a legacy is given to a person in a character which he has falsely assumed, and which alone can be supposed to be the motive of the bounty, the law will not permit him to avail himself of it. Where the description is true in part, but not true in every particular, parol evidence is admissible provided there be enough to justify the reception of the evidence. Millar v. Travers,[1] 8 Bing. 248. See Careless v. Careless, 1 Meriv. 384. Beaumont v. Field, supra.

(s) Co. Litt. and Evans's Pothier, vol. 2, 209.

(t) Dowsett v. Sweet, Amb. 175. Bradwin v. Harper, Amb. 174. See also Parsons v. Parsons, 1 Ves. 166. Fonnereau v. Pointz, 1 Bro. C. C. 472.

(u) See the case of Thomas v. Thomas, 6 T. R. 671, above cited.

(v) That is where such primary sense is not limited or confined by the rules of legal construction. The great principle is to give effect to the testator's intention in the first place, and within certain limits, by using the words not in their strict primary sense, but in that which was manifestly intended by the testator. See Hoyle v. Hamilton, 4 Ves. 437; 2 Eden. 196, n. (a), and the cases there cited; and Wigram's Examination, &c., p. 14. And where the sense is not so limited and confined by the context, although the terms are to be applied in the first instance according to their primary sense and acceptation, yet where they are, upon the evidence, incapable of such application, then in furtherance of the same principle of effectuating the testator's intention, they may, if capable, and within certain limits, be applied in a secondary sense. Where however the sense in which a term is used is determined by the context, or by the testator's own exposition of his meaning, the term can no longer be applied as evidence in a popular or secondary sense, for this would be to use his words in a sense different from that intended by the testator. Thus where the testator by his use of the word close showed that he meant to use it in its ordinary sense of inclosure, it was held that it could not afterwards be applied by the aid of extrinsic evidence to comprehend several inclosures, as meaning, in the popular sense in which the word was used in that part of the country, a farm. Doe v. Watson,[2] 4 B. & Ad. 799.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxi. 288. [2]Id. xxiv. 164.

of the instrument are capable of application in their strict and primary acceptation, they must be applied in that sense and no other (w). But, secondly, where it appears from evidence of the material facts, that the terms of a will are incapable of application in their strict primary acceptation, evidence is admissible to show that they are still capable of application in a secondary sense, in order so to apply them. In other words, evidence of material extrinsic facts and circumstances (x) is admissible simply in aid of *772 the *construction of a will. And, thirdly, it is a general rule that not only material facts, but also declarations made by the testator are under certain circumstances admissible, when necessary in order to ascertain the person or thing intended, that is, the object of the testator's bounty, or the subject of disposition, where the terms are applicable indifferently to more than one person or thing (y): of the operation of this rule several instances have already been given. The authorities go still further: it has been held that difficulties arising in the application of the terms of a will from defect in the description of the person or thing intended, may be removed by the aid of extrinsic evidence, even although no part of the description be perfectly correct. One of the strongest instances to this effect is the case of Beaumont v. Fell (z). A will was made in favour of Catherine Eardley, and evidence was allowed to show that Gertrude Yardley was the person meant; no such person as Catherine Eardley appearing to claim the legacy. Evidence was admitted to prove that the testator's voice, when he made his will, was very low and scarcely intelligible; that the testator usually

(w) In the case of a demise of "my real estate," property subject to a power will pass if the devisor have no real estate; but if there be any real estate on which the words can operate, it is otherwise. Napier v. Napier, 1 Sim. 28. Lewis v. Lewellyn, 1 Turn. 104. Sugden on Powers, c. v. s. 56, a. The word child may be applied by evidence to an illegitimate child, where an application, according to the strict legal meaning of the word, is of necessity excluded; but if no such necessity exist, the word must be used in its strictly legal sense. Godfrey v. Davis, 6 Ves. 43. Cartwright v. Vawdrey, 5 Ves. 530. Swain v. Kennerley, 1 V. & B. 469. Harris v. Lloyd, 1 Turn. & R. 310. And see Wigram's Examination, &c., p. 16, 2d edition. Miller v. Travers,[1] 8 Bing. 244; infra, tit. WILL. A power over a personal estate will not pass under the words "my personal estate," whether the testator at the time of making the will had any personal estate or not, because the words are applicable to such personal estate as may possibly be afterwards acquired. Andrews v. Emmett, 2 Bro. C. C. 297. Nannock v. Horton, 7 Ves. 391. Jones v. Tucker, 2 Mer. 533. Wigram's Examination, &c., 2d ed. p. 16, and the cases there cited. In Druce v. Dennison, 6 Ves. 385, it was indeed held that, for the specific purpose of raising a case of election, extrinsic evidence was admissible to show that the testator by the words "my personal estate," meant personal estate subject to a power. This case, however, as is observed by Mr. Wigram, p. 27, stands opposed to a strong current of authorities. In further illustration of the general rule above stated, the case of Doe d. Richardson v. Watson,[2] 4 B. & Ad. 799, may be cited. The question was whether two closes of land passed under the word close, and it was held that they did not; and Parke, J. observed, "Generally speaking, evidence may be given to show that the testator used the word close in the sense which it bore in the country where the property was situate, as denoting a farm, but here such evidence was not admissible, because it is manifest that in this will the testator used the word close in its ordinary sense, as denoting an inclosure; for the word closes occurs in other parts of the will. See also Roys v. Williams, 3 Sim. 573. Doe d. Westlake v. Westlake, 4 Dow. P. C. 65. Doe v. Bower,[3] 3 B. & Ad. 453. Doe d. Templeman v. Martin,[4] 4 B. & Ad. 771. Lord Bacon, in his comment on his 13th maxim, Non accipi debent verba in demonstrationem falsam quæ competant in limitationem veram, states the rule thus, "If I have some land wherein all the demonstrations are true, and some wherein part of them are true, and part false, then shall they be intended words of true limitation to pass only those lands wherein all those circumstances are true."

(x) It seems to be a general rule that all facts relating to the subject and object of the devise, as to the possession of the testator or other person, the mode of acquisition, local situation, and distribution of the property, are admissible to ascertain the meaning of a will. See the observations of Parke, J., Doe v. Martin,[4] 4 B. & Ad. 785.

(y) See note (w). Thus the word child may be construed to mean an illegitimate child. Gill v. Shelley, Wigram's Examination, &c., p. 31; and see Steede v. Berrier, 1 Freem. 292, 477. The words "my real estate," may be shown to mean a power. Lewis v. Lewellyn, 1 Turn. 104. Denn v. Roake,[5] 5 B. & C. 720; Sug. on Powers, c. 5, ss. 5, 6. And see in further illustration of this rule, Wigram's Examination, &c., p. 29. Napier v. Napier, 1 Sim. 28. Wilkinson v. Adam, 1 V. & B. 422. Beachcroft v. Beachcroft, 1 Mad. 436. Bayly v. Snelham, 1 Sim. & Stu. 78. Woodhouslie v. Dalrymple, 2 Mer. 419.

(z) 2 P. Wms. 141. See also Ld. Thurlow's dictum in Maybank v. Brooks, 1 Bro. C. C. 85. And see Brown v. Langley, 2 Barn. 18.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxi. 288. [2]Id. xxiv. 164. [3]Id. xxiii. 118. [4]Id. xxiv. 159. [5]Id. xii. 363.

called Gertrude Yardley by the name of Gatty, which the scrivener who made the will might easily mistake for Katy; and that the testator referred the scrivener to his wife for the name of the legatee, and she afterwards declared that Gertrude Yardley was the person intended.

Where the testator gave a legacy to John and Benedict, sons of John Sweet, and John Sweet the father had two sons only, viz. James and Benedict, evidence was admitted to prove that the testator used to address James Sweet by the name of "Jackey" (a). Where a legacy was given in moieties, one to Ann, the daughter of Mary Bradwin, the other to the children of Mary Bradwin, another daughter of the first-named Mary Bradwin, and it appeared that when the will was made Ann Bradwin was dead, having left two children, but that Mary Bradwin the daughter was living, and single, the Master of the Rolls held that evidence was admissible to explain the legacy (b).

The apparent impossibility of reconciling upon principle the giving effect to a description inapplicable to any subject with the undisputed law that even in the case of a legacy evidence is inadmissible to fill up a blank (c), seems to induce the necessity of at once placing the reception of such evidence upon the footing of a peremptory and arbitrary exception to general rules and principles, and to exclude all attempts at reconciliation. In the case of a blank, the effect of the evidence might simply be to supply a name mentioned by the testator: in the case of a total misdescription, evidence is necessary *not simply to supply but to substitute a description. The *773 distinction between a latent mistake and one which is patent is at best but technical, and it seems to be very questionable whether Lord Bacon's rule, as to ambiguities, be applicable to the case not of a double meaning but to simple deficiency of description (d).

It has been said, that as before the statute a nuncupative will would have been good, the Courts might, notwithstanding the statute which required a will to be in writing, use extrinsic evidence as before. This is an argument which, carried to its full extent, would go far to repeal the statute altogether, and which is wholly at variance with several decisions on other branches of the Statute of Frauds. It has also been (e) urged, that the admission of such evidence is no violation of the statute, for this reason, that the names of persons having no intrinsic meaning, the will is rectified without any addition to the sense. Were this argument well founded, it would warrant the reception of extrinsic evidence to supply a blank. As the main purpose of a will is to ascertain what the testator meant to give, and to whom, it would certainly be singular that, under a statute requiring such meaning to be expressed in writing, it should be unnecessary that either the person or thing should be so described; neither does the case seem to be properly within the scope of the principle that an ambiguity created by evidence may be removed by evidence (f). There is a wide distinction between evidence which raises an ambiguity by showing that the words are capable of several applications, and that which shows that it is incapable of any application either in a primary or secondary sense; and there is an equally wide distinction between evidence which applies words in their

(a) Dowsett v. Sweet, Ambl. 175; and see 1 Bro. C. 31, 85. See also Masters v. Masters, 1 P. W. 421.

(b) Bradwin v. Harper, Ambl. 374.

(c) In the case of Beaumont v. Fell, the Master of the Rolls, although he admitted the evidence, said, "If this had been a grant, nay, had it been a devise of land, it had been void by reason of the mistake both of the christian and surname."

(d) See Wigram's Examination, &c. 98, 135.

(e) Roberts on the Satute of Frauds, 16, 17.

(f) See 1 W. Bl. 60; 7 T. R. 148; 1 Bro. C. C. 350; Sug. Ven. 137; 1 Phill. Ev. 531, 7th ed.; 2 Roberts on Wills, p. 13.

natural sense to one of several objects, one or other of which must certainly have been intended, and evidence to annex a meaning to terms of themselves inapplicable.

To prove whether parcel or not.

In general, where there is any doubt as to the extent of the subject devised by will, or demised or sold, it is matter of extrinsic evidence to show what is included under the description as parcel of it (g) (1). The question *774 being *whether a description in a lease (inter alia) of a piece of ground, late in the occupation of A. (the piece of ground being a yard, then in the occupation of A.), a cellar and certain wine-vaults under it, passed, evidence was admitted to prove, that at the time of the lease the cellar and vaults were not in the occupation of A. but were under a lease to B. another tenant of the lessor, and that the defendant never claimed them until the expiration of B.'s lease. But where a subject-matter exists, which satisfies the terms of the will, and to which they are perfectly applicable, there is no latent ambiguity; and no evidence can be admitted for the purpose of applying the terms to a different object (h). In the case of Doe d. Sir A.

(g) Doe v. Burt, 1 T. R. 701. Buller, J. said, whether parcel or not of the thing demised, is always matter of evidence. See Kearslake v. White,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 508, where it was held, that the demise of a messuage, with all rooms and chambers thereto belonging and appertaining, included all that was occupied together as the entire messuage at one and the same time, and that the demise did not include a room which had once formed part of the messuage, but which had been separated from it for many years anterior to the demise. Herbert v. Reid, 16 Ves. 481. In Doe d. Beach v. Earl of Jersey,[2] 3 B. & C. 270, under a demise by the testator of all his Briton Ferry estate, it was held, that accounts of deceased stewards of former owners, in which they charged themselves with the receipt of various sums of money on account of the owners, were admissible in evidence to show that particular lands had gone by the name of the Briton Ferry estate. See Goodtitle v. Southern, infra. So in the case of a written agreement to convey all those brickworks in the possession of A. B., parol evidence is admissible of what passed at the time of the agreement, to show what was intended to pass. Paddock v. Fradley, 2 C. & J. 90. Where a fine was levied of twelve messuages in Chelsea, and it appeared, that the cognisor had more than twelve messuages in Chelsea, parol evidence was admitted to show which were meant. Doe v. Wilford, R. & M. 88. There being a devise of Trogues Farm, in the occupation of M., it may be shown that M. was not tenant. Goodtitle v. Southern, 1 M & S. 299. Where a deed purported to grant all the coal mines in the lands in the occupation of widow K. and son, and the grantor had not at that time any lands in the occupation of widow K. and son, and the deed was founded upon a contract of sale executed some months before, to which the grantor's land steward was the subscribing witness; held that, for the purpose of explaining the latent ambiguity in the deed, letters written by the latter to the grantees respecting the sale to them by the grantor of the coal mines in the deed, and purporting to be written by his directions, were admissible evidence, without showing an express authority from the grantor to write them. Beaumont v. Field, 1 B & A. 247. Devise to S. H., second son of T. H., when in fact he was the third son, evidence of the state of the testator's family and other circumstances was admitted to show the mistake in the name. Doe v. Huthwaite,[3] 3 B. & A. 632.

(h) See Lord Walpole v. Lord Cholmondeley, 7 T. R. 138, and the observations of Sir D. Evans, 2 Evans's

(1) [In trover for the sails of a vessel, brought by the owner of the vessel against the vendee of an officer who was directed by the precept to sell her "together with her tackle, apparel and furniture, or so much thereof as might be necessary, the same being in his custody and possession," and who returned that he sold the vessel, "her tackle, apparel, &c." to A. for a certain sum; it was held that it might be shown that the sails were in A.'s possession at the time of the inventory and sale, and were expressly excepted at the time of sale, and not sold. Dolan v. Briggs, 4 Binney, 496. But parol evidence is not admissible to prove that part of the premises, included in a deed, was not intended to be so included. Jackson v. Croy, 12 Johns. 427. S. P. Barret v. Barret, 4 Desauss. 447. Lessee of Snyder v. Snyder, 6 Binney, 413: (Unless in case of fraud. See 2 Dallas, 172. 1 Yeates, 140; 4 ib. 281. 1 Binney, 616.) Nor to show that a deed, stating a course for thirty-six chains, was intended to express twenty-nine. Jackson v. Bowen, 1 Caines, 358.—See cases collected by the reporter, in his note to that case, 2d edition. Nor to explain what land was intended to be conveyed by a deed, which describes the lands by courses and distances. Hamilton v. Cawood, 3 Har. & M'Hen. 437.

Where the courses, distances and lines are found to correspond with the deed, parol evidence is not admissible to show that any other was intended. Milling v. Crankfield, 1 M'Cord, 261. But where there was a plain mistake in a deed, such evidence was admitted to explain the situation of the land, though contrary to the description in the deed. White v. Eagar, 1 Bay, 247. Middleton v. Perry, 2 Bay, 539. See also Francis v. Hazlerig, 1 Marsh. 96. Marshall & ux. v. Currie, 4 Cranch, 172. Baker v. Seekright, 1 Hen. & Mun. 177. Dinkle v. Marshall, 3 Binney, 587. Patton & al. v. Goldsborough, 9 Serg. & Rawle, 47. Richardson v. Lessee of Stewart, 2 Ib. 84.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 452. [2]Id. x. 253. [3]Id. v. 406.

Chichester v. Oxenden (i), the question was, whether parol evidence could be admitted to show that the testator, by a devise of his estate at Ashton, intended to devise all his maternal estate, consisting of two manors in the parish of Ashton, and one in the adjoining parish; the Court, after hearing two arguments, decided against the evidence. Sir J. Mansfield, C. J., in giving judgment, referred to the cases of Beamont v. Fell (k), and Dowset v. Sweet (l); and distinguished the present case, on the ground that in those the will would have had no operation unless the evidence had been received; whereas in the present the will would have an effective operation to pass all the estate within the parish of Ashton, without the evidence proposed: that in the other cases the evidence was admitted to explain that which otherwise would have had no operation, and that it was safer not to go beyond that line. The same question was afterwards brought before the House of Lords (m), where judgment was given corresponding with that of the Court of Common Pleas (1).

Pothier, 210. And see Carruthers v. Sheddon, 6 Taunt. 14. So where words have acquired a precise and technical meaning, Ib. Per Lord Kenyon, 6 T. R. 352. Mounsey v. Blamire, 4 Russ. 384. And although the mere name of a devise in a will be applicable to several, parol evidence of application is not admissible if it can be collected from the will who was intended. Doe v. Westlake,[1] 4 B. & A. 57.

(i) 3 Taunt. 147; 4 Dow, 65.

(k) 2 P. Wms. 140; and also to the case of Whitbread v. May, 2 Bos. & Pull. 593, where the question was as to the effect of a codicil, by which the testator revoked a former general devise of all his estates, so far as it related to his estate at Leeshill in the county of Wilts, and Hearne and Buckband in the county of Kent. The testator had lands in Hearne, and several other parishes, all of which he had purchased by one contract from one person; evidence was offered to show that the testator meant to revoke the devise, not only as to the lands in the parish of Hearne, but also as to all the lands in other parishes purchased at the same time; the evidence was received at the trial, subject to the opinion of the Court of C. B., which was equally decided upon the question. See Doe d. Brown v. Brown, 11 East, 441. See also Doe v. Lyford, 4 M. & S. 550.

(l) Amb. 175; Supra, 772.

(m) Doe d. Oxenden v. Sir A. Chichester, 4 Dow, 65, in an action brought by the devisee against the heir-at-law. The question on the admissibility of the evidence having been referred to the Judges, Sir V. Gibbs, C. J. of C. P., delivered their unanimous opinion, that the evidence ought not to be admitted. In delivering that opinion, he observed, "The Courts of Law have been jealous of extrinsic evidence to explain the intention of a testator, and I know only of one case in which it is permitted; that is, where an ambiguity is introduced by extrinsic circumstances. There, from the necessity of the case, extrinsic evidence is admitted to explain the ambiguity. For example, where a testator devises his estate of Blackacre, and has two estates called Blackacre, evidence must be admitted to show which of the Blackacres is meant. So if one devises to his son John Thomas, and he has two sons of that name. So if one devises to his nephew William Smith, and has no nephew answering the description in all respects, evidence must be admitted to show which nephew the testator meant, by a description not strictly applying to any nephew. The ambiguity there arises from an extrinsic fact or circumstance; and the admission of evidence to explain the ambiguity is necessary to give effect to the will; and it is only in such a case that extrinsic evidence can be received. It is of great importance that the admission of extrinsic evidence should be avoided, where it can be done, that a purchaser or heir at law may be able to judge from the instrument itself what lands are or are not to be affected by it. Here the devise is of all the devisor's estate at Ashton, for there is no difference between the words 'Estate of Ashton' and 'Estate at Ashton,' and he has an estate at Ashton which satisfies the description." And see Doe v. Morgan, 1 C. & M. 235.

(1) [A. by a written contract, agreed to receive of B. sixty shares of the Hudson Bank, on which ten dollars per share had been paid, and to deliver B. his note for 667 dollars, and pay him the balance in cash; and also to pay five per cent. advance: here is a latent ambiguity, and the nominal value of each share being fifty dollars, parol evidence was held to be admissible to show whether the five per cent. advance was to be paid on the sum paid in on each share only, or on the nominal amount. Cole v. Wendell, 8 Johns. 146. A patent was granted to David H. without any other words of description; parol evidence was admitted to show that Daniel H. and not David H. was the patentee intended. Jackson v. Stanley, 10 Johns. 123. Quære; and see Jackson v. Hart, 12 Johns. 77. Lucy v. Pumfrey, Addison's Rep. 380.

In Pennsylvania, parol evidence was held admissible to prove that a legacy, given to Samuel P., was intended for William P., though there were persons of both names. Powell v. Biddle, 2 Dallas, 70. If there be a devise of a lot "on Third Street, in the occupation of J. P.," and the lot lies on Fourth Street, and was in the occupation of J. P., this is a latent ambiguity, and may be explained by parol evidence. Allen's Lessee v. Lyons, Circuit Court, Jan. 1811, Wharton's Digest, 258.] {Reported, 2 Wash. C. C. Rep. 475. So when lands are described in a deed as bounded on a river, the centre of the stream is to be considered as the

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 348.

To explain a charter, &c.

*In the next place, extrinsic evidence is admissible for the purpose of constructing ancient charters, explaining the meaning of the terms of contracts, to which a peculiar and technical sense has been annexed, by custom and usage. Also, for the purpose of showing the consequences and incidents, which, by virtue of a known and established custom, are by presumption of law appurtenant to the general terms of a contract.

When it is said that oral evidence shall not be admitted to explain an ambiguity or uncertainty apparent on the instrument, this must be understood of such defects as render the instrument in point of law inoperative; for it is not every species or degree of doubt or uncertainty which may occur upon the reading of an instrument, that will thus wholly avoid it; on boundary, and if an island be situated in the river, and is nearest that bank where the premises lie, it passes to the grantee, but it is competent to show by parol evidence, that the quantity of water was such on each side of the island, as to be called by the name of the river; and then as a latent ambiguity it may be explained by other testimony showing what the parties probably meant by the expression in the deed. Claremont v. Carlton, 2 New Hamp. Rep. 369.}

In the case of a devise of "the farm which I now occupy," parol evidence was held not to be admissible to show that the testator intended to devise the whole of his real estate at W. including a farm of ninety acres in the tenure of A. under a lease, and that he gave instructions for that purpose to the scrivener who drew the will. Jackson v. Sill, 11 Johns. 201. Where the grantor in a deed described the premises as the farm on which he then dwelt, this was held to be a latent ambiguity, which might be explained by evidence, aliunde. Doolittle & ux. v. Blakesly, 4 Day, 265. Parol evidence was held admissible to show what was meant by a devise of "a tract of land called the Beaver Dam." Hatch v. Hatch, 2 Hayward, 32. Where the word convey was used in a devise, it was held that parol proof was not admissible to show that the testator intended to give only a life estate, it being, if any ambiguity at all, one apparent on the face of the instrument, which it is the exclusive province of the court to interpret. Denn v. Cornell, 3 Johns. Cas. 174. See also M'Dermot v. U. States Insurance Co. 3 Serg. & Rawle, 607. Duncan v. Duncan, 2 Yeates, 302. Stith v. Barnes, 1 Car. Law Repos. 491. Dupree v. M'Donald, 4 Desauss. 209. Where a charter-party stipulated that the freighters should pay a certain sum per pound, &c., "British weight," it was held that as the word weight had two meanings, gross and neat, this was such a latent ambiguity as to warrant the introduction of parol testimony. Goddard v. Bulow, 1 Nott & M'Cord, 45. And where the words of a will are susceptible of reference to two objects, viz. a freehold in the lands, or rents which had previously accrued, parol evidence may be admitted to show to which they apply. Ellsworth v. Buckmeyer, 1 Nott & M'Cord, 431. The identical monument or boundary referred to in a deed is always a subject of parol evidence: there may be two trees of a similar species and with similar marks: two similar stakes not far distant from each other, or two rivers of the same name; and which was intended by the deed is to be settled by parol evidence, on the ground that it is a latent ambiguity. Per Woodbury, J., Proprietors of Claremont v. Carlton, 1 N. Hamp. Rep. 373. {So a collateral fact as to the situation of the premises at the time of a grant, may be proved by parol evidence. Baker v. Sanderson, 3 Pick. 348.}

In Peish v. Dickson, 1 Mason's Rep. 11, Story, J. says he had found himself unsuccessful in every attempt which he had made to reconcile all the decisions upon the subject of latent and patent ambiguities. "The difficulty," he remarks, "lies not in the rule itself (than which nothing can be clearer), but in applying it to particular cases, where the shades of distinction are very nice. There seems indeed to be an intermediate class of cases, partaking of the nature both of patent and latent ambiguities; and that is, where the words are all sensible, and have a settled meaning, but at the same time consistently admit of two interpretations, according to the subject-matter in the contemplation of the parties. In such a case, I should think parol evidence might be admitted to show the circumstances under which the contract was made, and the subject-matter to which the parties referred. For instance, the word freight has several meanings in common parlance; and if by a written contract a party were to assign his freight in a particular ship, it seems to me that parol evidence might be admitted of the circumstances under which the contract was made to ascertain whether it referred to goods on board of the ship, or an interest in the earnings of the ship; or in other words, to show in which sense the parties intended to use the term." Accordingly, in that case, (which was assumpsit for a balance alleged to be due on consignments), parol evidence was received of the circumstances under which a contract was made, which contained this clause relating to the plaintiff's goods, viz. "On which goods Mr. D. [the defendant] has advanced me $5833, for which amount he will hold for reimbursement on the amount and net proceeds of the sales of said goods, which are only considered answerable for said amount advanced, as per our agreement"—for the purpose of showing whether it was intended to waive any personal claim on the plaintiff, and to restrict the defendant's security, for the re-payment of the advance, to the goods only—or was meant merely to exempt the goods of the shippers on freight from being included as a security for the advance on the plaintiff's goods.

Ellsworth, C. J. in a note to Clarke v. Russel, 3 Dallas, 421, suggested a distinction in principle between solemn instruments and loose commercial memoranda. "I will, for instance," said he, "state this case: —A. and B. being at a wharf, the former says to the latter, 'I will sell you my ship John.' B. asks an hour to think of the proposition; goes home; and shortly after sends a note to A. in these words— 'I will take your ship John.' May not the party go beyond the note, to explain, by existing circumstances, the word take, which, according to existing circumstances, will equally embrace a purchase, a charter-party, and a capture?"] the contrary, many difficulties of this nature may be removed by legal construction, acting upon certain settled rules and maxims, and there are some kinds of obscurity and doubt which may be dispelled by the aid of extrinsic evidence, as in the instances of ancient charters and mercantile contracts. In ancient charters words are often to be found of doubtful import from their antiquity; the particular terms may have become obscure, or even obsolete; but it would be highly unreasonable, as well as inconvenient, that on this account the whole should perish; the terms were probably understood when the instrument was made; and it is also probable that the usage and practice then conformed, and that they have since continued to conform, with the real meaning and sense of those expressions; and hence such ancient and continuing usage may with reason and prudence be resorted to as the expositors of such doubtful terms (n) and phrases; more *especially where the charter concerns the public interests of a large body, *776 who would not, it may be presumed, have acquiesced in an illegal interpretation and application of its terms. Such evidence may be considered as somewhat analogous to the practice of the Courts, in considering the usage supplied by the precedents as to the construction of a doubtful statute, except that in the latter case the Courts themselves notice the contemporaneous and subsequent construction put upon the statute (o); but in the case of a charter, the usage, if not admitted, must be ascertained as a fact by a jury.

Such evidence in aid of the construction of a doubtful charter is also founded in part upon considerations of legal policy and convenience, for the purpose of quieting litigation, and supporting long-continued and established usages (p).

In the case of Withnell v. Gartham (q), Lawrence, J. observed, "if there be any ambiguity in this deed, usage is admissible to explain it; and the argument of convenience or inconvenience from this or that construction of a deed creates that sort of ambiguity that should be explained by usage (1)."

(n) In the case of The Attorney-general v. Parker (3 Atk. 576), Lord Hardwicke observed, that in the construction of ancient grants and deeds there is no better way of construing them than by usage, and contemporanea expositio is the best way to go by. In R. v. Varlo, (Cowp. 248), Lord Mansfield observed, "supposing the terms of the charter doubtful, the usage is of great force; not that usage can overturn the clear words of a charter; but if they are doubtful, the usage under the charter will tend to explain the meaning of them." Lord Coke, in his comment on the Stat. of Glo'ster, 2 Inst. 282, observes, that "ancient charters, whether they be before the time of memory or after, ought to be construed as the law was when the charter was made, and according to ancient allowance;" and again, "when any claimed, before the justices in eyre, any franchises by an ancient charter, though it had express words for the franchises claimed, or if the words were general and a continual possession pleaded of the franchises claimed, as if the claim was by old and obscure words, and the party in pleading, expounding them to the Court, and averring continual possession according to that exposition, the entry was ever, 'Inquiratur super possessionem et usum,' &c. which I have observed in divers records of those eyres, agreeable to that old rule, 'Optimus interpres rerum usus.'" However general the words of ancient deeds may be, they are to be construed, as Lord Coke says, by evidence of the manner in which they have been possessed and used. Per Ld. Ellenborough, in Weld v. Hornby, 7 East, 199. Long user may serve to explain an ambiguous act of Parliament. Stewart v. Lawton,[1] 1 Bing. 377. To explain what is meant by "tithes" in a crown grant, contemporaneous leases and other extrinsic evidence and testimony are admissible to show the kind of tithes intended to be conveyed. Linton School v. Scarlett, 2 Y. & J. 330.

(o) See 1 T. R. 728.

(p) See the observations of Buller, J. 3 T. R. 288.

(q) 6 T. R. 388. Where the nomination of a curate was, by a deed of 1656, given to the "inhabitants," it was held that the word was properly explained by past usage to mean "all housekeepers."

(1) [In patents of great antiquity, where the description of the land is vague, and the construction somewhat doubtful, the acts of the parties, the acts of government, and of those claiming under adjoining patents, are entitled to great weight in the location of the grant. Jackson v. Wood, 13 Johns. 346.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. viii. 353.

In the case of The King v. Osborn (r), by the terms of the charter the power of electing aldermen was committed to the mayor and commonalty. According to the usage, the term commonalty included aldermen; and the Court were of that opinion and construed the charter accordingly (s). Usage was, on the same principle, admitted as explanatory evidence as to the mode of presentation, where a presentation to a curacy had been given by deed ninety years before to the parishioners and inhabitants of Clerkenwell (t). Also, in order to show that an Act, which by the terms of a charter was committed to the mayor, aldermen and burgesses, or the greater part of them, was well executed by the majority present at a regular meeting, although not by a majority of the whole number (u); that a presentation given by a charter to the mayor, aldermen and burgesses, was properly executed by the mayor and aldermen only (x); that the justices of a county have a concurrent jurisdiction with the justices of a borough (y), under the particular charter; again, where the power of appointing a schoolmaster was *777 *given to the minister and churchwardens, to show that an appointment by the minister and a majority of the churchwardens is good (z).

It is not essential to the admissibility of evidence of usage that the instances proved should be as ancient as the deed; a custom from time of legal memory is frequently established by evidence of facts done at a much later period (a).

Where, however, the terms of an ancient charter are not in themselves doubtful, either from the use of equivocal and obscure terms, or in point of legal construction, evidence of usage can no longer avail; its legitimate object is to remove doubts; its functions therefore cease where no doubt exists; and to admit it in such a case would be not to obviate, but to create, doubts.

Where a statute constituted a body of 48, with power in conjunction with certain others, to do corporate acts in the town of Northampton, it was held that an usage of 300 years' continuance was unavailable to show that the attendance of a majority of 48 was not requisite, the general question having been already settled, that where such powers are delegated to a definite body, the attendance of a majority of that body is essential (b).

(r) 4 East, 327.

(s) Lord Ellenborough said, that without resorting to any assistance from contemporaneous and subsequently continuing usage (to which, however, in such cases, upon the best authorities in the law, resort may allowably be had), on the face of the charter itself, by a fair construction of it, commonalty does include aldermen.

(t) Attorney-general v. Parker, 3 Atk. 576.

(u) R. v. Varlo, Cowp 248. But as to the decision in this case, vid. infra, 777, note (b). See also, R. v. Osborn, 4 East, 333. Bailiff of Tewkesbury v. Bricknell, 2 Taunt. 120. R. v. Mayor of Chester, 1 M. & S. 101. Chad v. Tilsed,[1] 2 B. & B. 409. R. v. Mayor, &c. of Stratford-upon-Avon, 14 East, 348. Mayor of London, &c. v. Long, 1 Cowp. 22. Weld v. Hornby, 7 East, 199. See also R. v. Mayor of St. Albans, 12 East, 559.

(x) Gape v. Handley, 3 T. R. 288, n.

(y) Blankley v. Winstanley, 3 T. R. 279. Note, Buller, J. observed, that "Usage consistent with the charter has prevailed for 190 years past; and if the words of the charter were more disputable than they are, I think that ought to govern the case. There are cases in which the Court has held that settled usage would go a great way to control the words of a charter; and it is for the sake of quieting corporations that this Court has always upheld long usage, where it was possible, though recent usage would perhaps not have much weight."

(z) Withnell v. Gartham, 6 T. R. 388.

(a) See Lord Kenyon's observations in Withnell v. Gartham, 6 T. R. 388; where the question was upon the construction of an ancient deed, granting to the minister and churchwardens of a parish the power of appointing a schoolmaster.

(b) R. v. Miller, 6 T. R. 268; and see R. v. Bellringer, 4 T. R. 810. There the charter of Bodmin gave power to a definite body, which was exercised by a majority of the subsisting body, but not by a majority of the definite number. Usage was adduced to show that a majority of the definite number was essential; but

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 171.

To decide whether the construction of a charter be so doubtful as to admit of explanation from usage, or whether, on the other hand, the terms be so intelligible in their usual plain and ordinary natural sense, or by necessary construction of law, with reference to antecedent decisions, is obviously a pure question of law (c). The ambiguity, to require such aid, must clearly be such as arises upon reading the instrument itself, independently of any extrinsic considerations; and unless a doubt arise from that source, usage can avail nothing; for if it be consistent with the legal construction of the deed, it is unimportant; if it be contrary to such construction, to admit it would be, not to explain, but to subvert, an authentic instrument by the aid of presumption and opinion. In the case of Stammers v. Dixon (d), where the ancient admissions of the copyholders were to land by the description of trees acras prati, it was held that evidence was admissible to show, from acts of enjoyment, that the admission must be construed to mean primo tonsura only. Even in the case of a statute universal usage has sometimes been resorted to for the purpose of explaining doubtful terms (e). And in the case of Withnell v. Gurtham (f), it was held that *evidence of usage was as much admissible to construe a deed made by the founder of a school, though a private person, as in the case of the King's charter. *778

The doctrine of applying evidence of contemporaneous usage to the construction of ancient deeds, has, it appears, been applied to merely private as well as to public instruments (g); but it is obvious that the reasons for allowing it in the former case apply with much less force, inasmuch as the mere assent and acquiescence of a private person, who may have been ignorant of his rights, affords a presumption very inferior in weight to that which is to be derived from the long-established practice and usage of a public body. The application of this principle to the case of private instruments has, however, been denied in two instances (h) in equity, and it seems to be very doubtful whether such evidence would now be received in a court of law. Private deeds.

Where terms are used which are known and understood by a particular class of persons, in a certain special and peculiar sense, evidence to that the Court declined to decide upon the validity of the usage alleged, being of opinion, upon the construction of the charter, and without reference to usage, that a majority of the whole definite body was requisite.

(c) See the observations of Sir D. Evans on this head; 2 Evans's Pothier, 219, & sequent.

(d) 7 East, 200.

(e) Shepherd v. Gosnold, Vaugh. 169. R. v. Scott, 3 T. R. 104. But in general evidence is not admissible to explain the meaning of a statute, as to show what is meant by the word square according to the technical usage of the trade. The Attorney General v. The Plate Glass Co., 1 Ans. 39. Where the contract is for so many bushels of corn, statutory bushels must be intended. [1] 1 Chit. R. 28.

(f) 6 T. R. 388. Lord Kenyon observed, that if there were any difference, it would be in favour of the admissibility in the case of a private deed, for the King's grants are not construed strongly against the grantor, as private deeds are.

(g) In the case of Cooke v. Booth, (Cowp. 819,) the doctrine was extended to a subject of a nature merely private. A lease contained a covenant of renewal; the question was, whether by the terms of the covenant, each subsequent lease was to contain a similar covenant; and as there had been several successive renewals, with similar covenants, the Court held that the parties by their practice had put their own construction on the covenant, and were bound by it. Where the terms of an award are ambiguous in relation to a road, subsequent usage is admissible in explanation of its meaning. Wadley v. Bayliss,[2] 5 Taunt. 752.

(h) 3 Ves. 298; 6 Ves. 237. In the case of Iggulden v. May, in error, 2 N. R. 449; Mansfield, C. J. in giving judgment, observed upon the case of Cooke v. Booth, "we think that was the first time that the acts of the parties to a deed were ever made use of in a court of law to assist the construction of that deed." S. C. 7 East, 237. In Hughes v. Gordon, 1 Bligh, 289, it was said that evidence to explain a deed was highly dangerous, except in cases of fraud or misrepresentation. See Clifton v. Walmesley, 5 T. R. 564. Clinan v. Cooke, 1 Sch. & Lef. 22. Stammers v. Dixon, 7 East, 200; infra, tit. Wills. [9 Ves. 325; see South Carolina Society v. Johnson, 1 M'Cord, 41.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xviii. 19. [2] Id. i. 252.

To explain mercantile contracts (A).

effect is admissible for the purpose of applying the instrument to its proper subject-matter; and the case seems to fall within the same consideration as if the parties in framing their contract had made use of a foreign language, which the Courts are not bound to understand. Such an instrument is not on that account void; it is certain and definite for all legal purposes, because it can be made so in evidence through the medium of an interpreter. Conformably with these principles, the Courts have long allowed mercantile instruments to be expounded according to the usage and custom of merchants, who have a style and language peculiar to themselves, of which usage and custom are the legitimate interpreters (i).

*779 *Thus a general warranty in a policy of insurance, to depart with convoy, may be proved, according to mercantile usage and understanding, to be satisfied by a joining of convoy at the nearest usual place of rendezvous (k) (1).

So where upon the sale of a cargo, the vendor covenanted to pay all duties, allowances, &c. to be taken out of them, he was permitted to adduce proof of a custom to show that such allowances were to be limited (l) to the price which he should receive.

Where it was stipulated in a charter-party that the captain should receive a stipulated sum in lieu of privilege and primage, and the question was, whether the terms of the contract excluded all right on the part of the

(i) Witnesses may be called to show that a particular expression in a commercial contract, is understood in the mercantile world in a different sense from its ordinary import. Chaurand and another v. Angerstein, Peake's C. 43. Or that a particular meaning was affixed to the word of indeterminate signification (privilege), in a previous conversation between the parties. Birch and another v. Depeyster,[1] 4 Camp. C. 385; 1 Starkie's C. 210. [4 Camp. 385, S. C.] And see Iggulden v. May, 7 East, 237; [Stultz v. Dickey, 15 Binney, 287.] 3 Smith, 269; 9 Ves. 325; 2 N. R. 419, S. C. A bill of lading contains a memorandum, "to be discharged in fourteen days," or pay five guineas a day demurrage; evidence of usage may be adduced to show that working days, and not running days, are meant. Cochran v. Retberg, 3 Esp. C. 121. Evidence of a communication to the insurer is admissible to define what otherwise is indefinite. Urquhart v. Barnard, 1 Taunt. 450. But evidence that "last" imports foreign, not English measure, is inadmissible. Moller v. Living, 4 Taunt. 102. Where an entry made by a clerk since deceased is ambiguous, a person conversant with the mode in the office in which the business was conducted, may be called to explain a particular item. Hood v. Reeve,[2] 3 C. & P. 532. In trover for goods sent by the plaintiff to the defendant, a packer, and expressed in the receipt to have been received on account of the plaintiff for M., the party to whom they had been sold; it was held, that evidence of the usage of trade was admissible to explain the meaning of ambiguous terms in such receipt. Bowman v. Horsey, 2 Mo. & R. 85. And see the case cited below. Also Syers v. Bridge, Doug. 509. Uhde v. Walters, 3 Camp. 16. Edie v. East India Company, 2 Burr. 1216; 1 Ves. 459; 2 B. & P. 16; 7 East, 237. A jury may properly judge of the meaning of mercantile phrases in the letters of merchants. P. C. Lucas v. Groning,[3] 7 Taunt. 164.

(k) Lethullier's Case, 2 Salk. 443. See also Cutter v. Powell, 6 T. R. 320. Noble v. Kennoway, Doug. 492. In Robertson v. French, 4 East, 130, Lord Ellenborough observed, that the same rules which applied to all other instruments applied also to a policy of insurance, that is, to be construed according to its sense and meaning, as collected, in the first place, from the terms used in it, which are to be understood in their plain, ordinary and popular sense, unless they have generally in respect of the subject, as by the known usage of trade, or the like, acquired a peculiar sense distinct from the popular sense of the word. See also Lord Eldon's observations on the subject, in Anderson v. Pitcher, 2 B. & P. 164; and Evans's Pothier, vol. 2, p. 214. Salvador v. Hopkins, 3 Burr. 1707. Baker v. Paine, 1 Ves. 459. Ford v. Hopkins, Salk. 283. [See Harris v. Nicholas, 5 Munf. 483.]

(l) Baker v. Paine, 1 Ves. 459. Ibid. 317. See 6 Ves. 336, n. Ekins v. Maclish, Amb. 186. Ford v. Hopkins, Salk. 283. Henkle v. Royal Exchange Assurance Company, 1 Ves. 318. Thomas v. Fraser, 3 Ves. jun. 399; 10 Ves. 227. And see 1 Atk. 545.

(A) (Where a new word is used in a contract, or a word is used in a technical sense as applicable to any branch of business, evidence of usage is admissible to explain it, and that evidence is to be considered by the jury under the instruction of the court as to its legal effect on the contract. Eaton v. Smith, 20 Pick. 150. But it is inadmissible to show what is commonly understood by a term to which law has applied a precise and definite meaning. Sleght v. Rhinelander, 1 John. R. 192.)

(1) [Parol evidence is not admissible to show that by the term "specie," in a policy of insurance, certain paper bills were intended by the underwriters. Benezet v. M'Clenachan, cited 2 Dallas, 173.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 359. [2]Id. xiv. 432. [3]Id. ii. 61.

captain to use the cabin for the carriage of goods on his own account, Gibbs, C. J. said, evidence may be received to show the sense in which the mercantile part of the nation use the term privilege, just as you would look into a dictionary to ascertain the meaning of a word; and it must be taken to have been used by the parties in its mercantile and established sense (m) (1).

In the case of Cutter v. Powell, where a promissory note was given to a sailor, to be paid provided he served on board the ship as second mate during the voyage, and he died before the completion of the voyage, the Court, deciding upon the terms of the contract, held that his administrator was not entitled to recover pro ratâ for the time during which he served; but it appears from the language of the Court in that case, that if a custom could have been established that such notes were in general use, and that the commercial world would have acted upon them in a different sense, they would have decided differently (n).

It is to be observed, that it has been questioned by the highest authorities, whether the practice of construing mercantile documents by usage has not been carried too far.

In the case of Anderson v. Pitcher (o), Ld. Eldon observed, "It is now *too late to say that this warranty (in a policy of insurance) is not to be *780 expounded with due regard to the usage of trade; perhaps it is to be lamented that in policies of insurance parties should not be left to express their own meaning by the terms of the instrument. This seems to have been the opinion of that great judge Lord Holt (p). It is true, indeed, that Lord Mansfield, who may be considered the establisher, if not the author, of great part of this law, expressed himself thus, 'whenever you render additional words necessary, and multiply them (q), you also multiply doubts and criticisms.' Whether, however, it be not true, that as much subtlety is raised by the application of usage to the construction of a contract, as by the introduction of additional words, might, if the matter were res integra, be reasonably questioned."

The legitimate object of extrinsic evidence in such cases, as consistent with general principles, seems to be to explain terms, (in order to their due application,) which are not intelligible to all who may understand the language; but which nevertheless have acquired by virtue of habit, custom and usage, a known definite sense and meaning amongst a particular class of persons, which can be well ascertained by means of the extrinsic testimony of those who are conversant with the peculiar use of those terms. The witnesses for this purpose may be considered to be the sworn interpre-

(m) Birch v. Depeyster,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 210. [4 Camp. 385, S. C.] And note, that in that case the same learned Judge admitted evidence of a conversation between the parties, to show in what sense they used the term. He said, he thought such evidence fell within the general current of mercantile understanding; since, if the term had been used in different trades in different ways, the conversation was evidence to show in what sense it was used on that occasion. So evidence has been admitted for the purpose of showing the understanding of mariners, in geographical matters; as to show that the Mauritius is considered to be an East India island. Robertson v. Money,[2] R. & M. 75. See Uhde v. Walters, 3 Camp. 16.

(n) Cutter v. Powell, 6 T. R. 320.

(o) 2 B. & P. 164. The question in that case was as to the meaning of a warranty (contained in a policy) to depart with convoy; and it was held that it is not complied with unless sailing instructions be obtained before the ship leaves the place of rendezvous, if by due diligence they can be obtained. So in the case of a bill of lading, &c. evidence was admitted to show what was meant by "days." Cochrane v. Retberg, 3 Esp. C. 121.

(p) Lethullier's Case, Salk. 443. (q) Lilly v. Ewer, Dougl. 74.

(1) [See Astor v. The Union Ins. Company, 7 Cow. Rep. 203, where parol evidence was received to show what was included under the term fur, in a policy of insurance.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 359. [2]Id. xxi. 383.

ters of the mercantile language in which the contract is written (r). Beyond this, however, the principle does not extend; merchants are not prohibited from annexing what weight and value they please to words and tokens of their own peculiar coinage, as may best suit their own purposes, but they ought not to be permitted to alter and corrupt the sterling language of the realm. If they use plain and ordinary terms and expressions, to which a natural unequivocal meaning belongs, which is intelligible to all, then, it seems, according to the great principles so frequently adverted to, that plain sense and meaning ought not to be altered by evidence of a mercantile understanding and usage to the contrary. It is clear, indeed, that if a contrary practice were to prevail, and be carried to its full extent, the effect would nearly be to annihilate special contracts in mercantile affairs, and to compel all persons, under all circumstances, to conform with the usages of trade; the written contract would become a dead letter; the question would not be, what is the actual contract, but what is the usage; and the very same terms would denote different contracts as often as mercantile *781 fashions varied. In short, the *jus et norma loquendi, in a legal sense, would become wholly dependent on the usages of trade (s).

Where a policy of insurance (in the common form) expressed "that the insurance on the said ship shall continue until she is moored twenty-four hours, and on the goods till safely landed," the Court of King's Bench held that evidence of an usage, that the risk on the goods as well as the ship expired in twenty-four hours (t), was inadmissible.

Where the vendor of a quantity of bacon warranted it to be of a particular quality, it was held that the vendee could not give evidence of a custom in the trade, that the buyer was bound to reject the contract if he was dissatisfied with it at the time of examining the commodity (u), and Heath, J. who tried the cause, said that it would breed endless confusion in the contracts of mankind if custom could avail in such a case.

So where words have a known legal meaning which belongs to them,

(r) Within this principle numerous cases have occurred, of which the following may be cited in addition to those already referred to. Parol evidence is admissible to show the meaning of the word level in a lease of coal mines (Clayton v. Gregson,[1] 5 Ad. & Ell. 302; 4 N. & M. 602); of "mess pork of S. & Co.;" Powell v. Horton,[2] 2 Bing. N. C. 668. To reconcile apparent variances in bought and sold notes by the testimony of brokers; Bold v. Rayner, 1 M. & W. 343. Where the captain of a ship had agreed to convey a boat for the plaintiff of stated dimensions, evidence was admitted of the practice to remove the decks of such boats when put on board. Haynes v. Halliday,[3] 7 Bing. 587. And see Hood v. Reeves,[4] 3 C. & P. 532. In Chaurand v. Angerstein, Peake's C. 43, where it had been represented to an insurer that the ship would sail from St. Domingo in October, he was permitted to show in his defence, that this was understood among merchants to mean between the 25th and the end of October. The admission of such evidence seems, however, to have been carried further than either principle or convenience warrants. See below.

(s) See Anderson v. Pitcher, 2 B. & P. 168. Parkinson v. Collier, Parke on Ins. 314, infra. Parol evidence is inadmissible to explain the meaning of the words "more or less" in a mercantile contract. Cross v. Eglin,[5] 2 B. & Ad. 106.

(t) Parkinson v. Collier, Parke on Ins. 314. Yeates v. Pym,[6] 2 Marsh. Rep. 141. 1 Holt's C. 95. The practice of construing mercantile instruments according to the custom of trade, was carried to a great length in the case of Donaldson v. Foster (Sittings after Mich. Term, 29 Geo. 3, Abbott's Law of Shipp. 213). There, by the terms of the charter-party, it was stipulated that the merchant should have the exclusive use of the ship outwards, and the exclusive privilege of the cabin, the master not being allowed to take any passengers. The defendants insisted, that under a charter-party so worded, it was the constant usage of trade to allow the master to take out a few articles for a private trade. Lord Kenyon admitted evidence to be given to prove this usage, observing, that although prima facie the deed excluded this privilege, yet he thought the deed might be explained by uniform and constant usage, the usage being a tacit exception out of the deed. Notwithstanding this high authority, sanctioned as it has, in a measure, been by its adoption and insertion in the very learned work from which it is cited, some doubt may perhaps still be entertained whether the receiving such evidence be strictly warranted in principle. See Sir D. Evans's remarks in his edition of Pothier, vol. 2, p. 215.

(u) Yeates v. Pim,[6] Holt's C. 95.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxxi. 342. [2]Id. xxix. 452. [3]Id. xx. 248. [4]Id. xiv. 432. [5]Id. xxii. 36. [6]Id. iii. 39.

evidence is not admissible to show that the parties intended to use them in a different sense according to the custom of the country (x) (1).

In many instances extrinsic evidence of custom and usage is admissible for the purpose of annexing incidents to the terms of a written instrument, concerning which the instrument is silent (y). The principle upon which such evidence is admissible, seems to be a reasonable presumption that the parties did not express the whole of their intention, but meant to be guided by custom as to such particulars as are generally known to be annexed by custom and usage to similar dealings. It is evident that in commercial affairs, and all the other usual and common transactions of life, it would be attended with great inconvenience that the well-known ordinary practice *and usage on the subject should not be tacitly annexed, by virtue of such a presumption, to the terms of a contract, and that the parties should either be deprived of the certainty and advantage to be derived from the known course of dealing, or be placed under the necessity of laboriously specifying in their contracts by what particular usages they meant to be bound. To annex customary incidents. *782

It is unnecessary to allude to the numerous instances in which, upon the same principle, the law itself annexes its own terms to a contract. If a contract for the sale of goods be silent as to the time of delivery, the law annexes the term that they shall be delivered within a reasonable time. A bill of exchange is payable at a certain day; but the law allows three additional days of grace, concerning which the instrument is silent. The instance of a bill of exchange is also a strong one to show how far custom operates to annex terms not expressed in the instrument (2).

It would be superfluous to specify how many terms and conditions, which are not expressed on the face of a bill of exchange, are annexed to it by the custom of merchants, as necessary and inseparable instruments. The operation of this presumption is not confined to mercantile instruments.

It has been held that a tenant might avail himself of a local custom to take a way-going crop after the expiration of his term under a lease; for the custom did not alter or contradict the terms of the lease, but merely superadded a right consequential to the taking (z).

(x) Supra, 301: and see Doe v. Benson,[1] 4 B. & A. 586.

(y) To what extent the silence of a mercantile contract on a particular point may be supplied by evidence of the general course and usage of trade, is a question which it would be difficult to answer with exactness and precision. Per Tindal, C. J. in Whittaker v. Mason,[2] 2 Bing. N. C. 369. Where the stipulations in a lease as to the mode of cultivation applied only to the holding during the tenancy, but were wholly silent as to the terms of quitting; held that an affirmative covenant, that the wheat lands should be summer fallowed, and an affirmative custom for the off-going tenant to have one proportion of the wheat for a way-going crop, if sown after a summer fallow, and another proportion if sown after turnips, were not so inconsistent as that the tenant might not be entitled to his share of wheat growing at the determination of the tenancy after a crop of turnips, the landlord having a right of action if the covenant had not been observed. Holding v. Piggot,[3] 7 Bing. 465. If any condition in the lease is necessarily repugnant to or inconsistent with a custom, the latter is excluded.

(z) Wigglesworth v. Dallison, Dougl. 201. [Stultz v. Dickey, 5 Binn. 285.]

(1) [See Frith v. Barker, 2 Johns. 327. Sleight v. Rhinelander, 1 Johns. 192. Thompson v. Ashton, 14 Johns. 316. Stoever v. Whitman, 6 Binney, 417. Henry v. Risk & al. 1 Dallas, 265. Homer v. Dorr, 10 Mass. Rep. 26; and tit. Custom, Vol. II.]

(2) [In Massachusetts, the usage of banks, at which the parties to a note have been accustomed to transact business, are recognized by the courts, not as rules of decision, but as evidence of the assent of the parties to such usages, which may vary the terms annexed to their contracts by general mercantile custom. Blanchard v. Hilliard, 11 Mass. Rep. 85. Jones v. Fales, 4 ib. 245. Lincoln and Kennebeck Bank v. Page, 9 ib. 155. Pierce v. Butler, 14 ib. 303. Whitwell & al. v. Johnson, 17 ib. 499.] {City Bank v. Cutter, 3 Pick. Rep. 414. Bank of Washington v. Triplett, 1 Peters's Sup. Ct. Rep. 25. Renner v. The Bank of Columbia, 9 Wheat. 581}.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 527. [2]Id. xxix. 357. [3]Id. xx. 301.

Upon the same principle, evidence was admitted to show that a heriot was due on the death of the tenant for life, although that duty was not expressed in the lease (a).

So it has been held that a custom for an away-going tenant to provide work and labour, tillage and sowing, and all materials for the same, in his away-going year, the landlord making him a reasonable compensation, is not excluded by an express written agreement between the landlord and tenant, which is consistent with such a custom (b).

The presumption necessarily ceases where it can be collected, from the terms of the instrument, that it was contrary to the intention of the contracting parties, in the particular instance, to be guided by the custom: as where the parties have actually expressed an intention different from the custom, for then, according to the general rule of law, expressum facit cessare tacitum; or even where a contrary intention may be inferred from the terms of the contract. Thus, where the lease specified certain payments to be made by the in-coming to the out-going tenant at the time of quitting, but specified no payment for foldage, it was held that this agreement excluded the operation of a custom for the in-coming tenant to pay to the out-going tenant an allowance for foldage (c). But a stipulation as to quitting does not exclude so much of a custom as is not inconsistent with such stipulation (d). Parol evidence was admittted to show, that by the *783 custom *of the county the word "thousand," applied in a lease to rabbits, meant 1,200 (e).

To rebut a presumption.

It is a general rule, that oral and extrinsic evidence is admissible to rebut a presumption of law or equity. Here, the evidence is not offered as a substitute for written evidence, but to remove an impediment which would otherwise have obstructed or altered its operation (f) (1). Thus, it has been held that parol evidence is admissible to show that a legacy was not intended in satisfaction of a debt (g), or that the testator, although he gave the executor a legacy, intended that he should have the surplus (h), or to (a) Per cur. White v. Sayer, 211.

(b) Senior v. Armitage,[1] Holt's C. 197. See Dalby v. Hirst,[2] 1 B. & B. 224. An usage for a landlord to compensate the off-going tenant for tilling, fallowing and manuring arable and meadow land, according to good husbandry, and often from which the tenant can receive no benefit, is reasonable, and is to be considered not as a custom but an usage, and need not be from time immemorial. See Roxburg, Duke of, v. Robertson, 2 Bligh. 156.

(c) Webb v. Plummer, 2 B. & A. 746. Roberts v. Barker, 1 C. & M. 808. So evidence of an usage at the Navy-office to pay bills indorsed by an attorney in his own name, and negotiated by him under a power, cannot be received for the purpose of enlarging the terms of the power. Hogg v. Snaith, 1 Taunt. 347.

(d) Where a lease provided for the tenant's spreading more manure on the premises than the custom required, leaving the rest to be paid for by the landlord at the end of the term, and the custom was for the tenant to be paid last year's ploughing and sowing, and to leave the manure if the landlord would buy it, it was held that the tenant was still entitled to be paid for the last year's sowing and ploughing, according to the custom. Hutton v. Warren, 1 M. & W. 486. Holding v. Pigott,[3] 7 Bing. 475.

(e) Smith v. Wilson,[4] 3 B. & Ad. 728. (f) 2 Atk. 69, 99; Amb. 126; 2 Vern. 252.

(g) Cuthbert v. Peacock, 2 Vern. 593. But see Fowler v. Fowler, 3 P. Wms. 353; where an allowance of pin-money, being in arrear to the wife for two years, Talbot, C. would not admit evidence to show the intention of the testator that she should have a legacy of 500*l.* in addition to the arrears.

(h) 2 Vern. 252, 618, 673. Wingfield v. Atkinson, 2 Ves. 673; 2 P. W. 158; 9 Mod. 9; 1 Str. 568. So where the wife was executrix, and real and personal property were left to her by her husband. Lake v. Lake, 1 Wils. 313; Amb. 126, per Buller, J.; Dougl. 40; 2 Atk. 69. Evidence is admissible to show that one prima facie a trustee takes for his own benefit. Langfield d. Banton v. Hodges, Lofft, 230. Doe v. Langton,[5] 2 B. & Ad. 680. The gift of a legacy in reversion to an executor, does not necessarily exclude, but only raises a presumption against his taking the residue beneficially, and if there is no express declaration that rebut the equity of an heir at law (i). So where the conusor of a fine dies before the uses are declared, the presumption that the fine was levied to the use of the conusor may be rebutted by evidence (k).

(1) [S. P. Mann v. Mann, 14 Johns. 1; 1 Johns. Ch. R. 333. Steere v. Steere, 5 Johns. Ch. R. 1. Davenport v. Mason, 15 Mass. R. 85. Eustace v. Gaskins, 1 Wash. 190. Payne's Ex'r v. Dudley, ibid. 198. Bigger's Adm'r v. Alderson, 1 Hen. & Mun. 54. Nelson v. Carrington, 4 Munf. 332.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 71. [2]Id. v. 66. [3]Id. xx. 201. [4]Id. xxiii. 169. [5]Id. xxii. 166.

If a tenant for life pays off a charge on the estate primâ facie, he is entitled to that charge for his own benefit, with the qualification of having no interest during his life. If a tenant in tail or in fee-simple pays off a charge, that payment is primâ facie presumed to be made in favour of the estate; but the presumption may be rebutted by evidence, as by calling for an assignment, or by a declaration (l).

So oral evidence has been admitted by courts of equity to show that a portion advanced to a child subsequent to the making of a will, and of the same amount with the legacy, was not intended as an ademption of a legacy (m); *and for this purpose, and to show the real intention, even oral declarations are admissible (n). *784

In the case even of a devise of lands, it has been held that the legal implication, as to the revocation of the will, founded upon the subsequent marriage of the testator, and birth of a child, may be rebutted by parol evidence (o). Lord Mansfield observed, "I am clear that this presumption, like all others, may be rebutted by every sort of evidence. There is a technical phrase for it in the case of executors (p); it is called rebutting an he is to be a trustee, but only circumstances raising a presumption, parol evidence is sufficient to rebut it. Oldman v. Slater, 3 Sim. 84. Where a specific bequest was given in the will to the executor for his care and trouble, held that it excluded him from taking the residue beneficially, and that parol evidence of the testator's declarations after the making of the will were inadmissible. Whitaker v. Tatham,[1] 7 Bing. 628. And see Foster v. Munt, 1 Vern. 473; and Gibbs v. Romney, 2 V. & B. 294.

(i) Mallabar v. Mallabar, Cas. Tem. Talb. 79; 1 Powell, L. D. c. xii.; 2 Powell, L. D. 40.

(k) Roe v. Popham, Dougl. 24. Lord Altham v. Lord Anglesea, Gilb. Eq. R. 16.

(l) Per Lord Eldon, in The Earl of Buckinghamshire v. Hobart, 3 Swanst. 186. Where a tenant for life of a settled estate purchased incumbrances and had them assigned to a trustee, and purchased the remainder and had it conveyed subject to existing charges, and devised the estate subject to the charges so purchased, it was held that parol evidence was admissible to show that the charges were merged. Astley v. Mills, 1 Sim. 298.

(m) Debeze v. Man, 2 Bro. C. C. 165. Coote v. Boyd, 2 Bro. C. C. 521. Or, as it seems, to show that such advancement was intended as an ademption (Rosewell v. Bennett, 3 Atk. 77). But note, that the intention of the legacy was specified in the will; and the case was not decided on that ground. See also Hooley v. Hatton. 1 Ves. jun. 390. Where portions are provided by any means whatever, and the parent gives a provision by will for a portion, it is a satisfaction prima facie, and unless there be circumstances to show that it was not so intended. Per Lord Alvanley, Hinchcliffe v. Hinchcliffe, 3 Ves. jun. 516. Per Lord Eldon, in Pole v. Lord Somers, 6 Ves. 325. The question there was as to satisfaction.

(n) Ellison v. Cookson, 1 Ves. jun. 100. Clinton v. Hooper, 1 Ves. jun. 173. But those made at the time of the will are the most important. Trimmer v. Bayne, 7 Ves. 508.

(o) Brady v. Cubitt, Dougl. 30. See the observations on this case in Goodtitle v. Otway, 2 H. B. 516. For the cases in which an alteration in circumstances amounts to an implied revocation of a will, see Bac. Ab. tit. Wills and Testaments, 363, 6th edit. Brown v. Thomson, 1 P. Wms. 304. Lugg v. Lugg, 1 Ld. Raym. 441. Shepherd v. Shepherd, Dougl. 38, n.—Sir D. Evans observes that "the allowing a written instrument to derive a construction different from that which it would naturally import, in consequence, not of any relative character of the subject-matter, but of verbal declarations, cannot, on principle, be reconciled with the general tenor of our jurisprudence." It is impossible not to regret, in common with that learned writer, that in any branch of cases, particularly one so important as the present, the uncertainty and vagueness of oral testimony of the very weakest and loosest description should be in effect substituted for the certainty of a written document. The practice involves an inconsistency. If the extrinsic circumstances be so powerful as to create a stronger presumption as to the intention of the party, than that which arises from his own written exposition of that intention (which still remains uncancelled), how can that presumption be considered to be so weak as to be met and defeated by mere oral declarations? It seems to be inconsistent to consider such evidence to be more forcible than the written instrument, and yet weaker than oral evidence; and it is in effect to give to oral evidence a greater authority than the written evidence, to subject solemn and authentic written instruments to all the laxity and uncertainty of parol evidence, and to render titles to property contrary to the policy of the law, hazardous and precarious. And now see the st. 7 W. 4, & 1 Vic. c. 26, and tit. WILLS.

(p) An executor is not excluded from proof of the testator's intention that he should take the surplus, by the circumstance of his taking a reversionary contingent interest. Lynn v. Beaver, 1 Turn. 63. Such evidence, however, is admissible only for the purpose of supporting the apparent effect of an instrument; it is equity." And Mr. J. Buller said, that implied revocations must depend on the circumstances at the time of the testator's death.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xx. 266.

But although such evidence be admissible to rebut a presumption arising from the operation of matter in pais as to the intention of the party to revoke, it is otherwise where the revocation is by act of law, where the law pronounces upon a presumption juris et de jure (q), that is, where the presumption of law is so violent, that it does not admit circumstances to be set up to repel it (r). Thus, where a testator devised his lands to B., and afterwards, upon his marriage, conveyed them by lease and re-lease to trustees, to other uses, with the usual limitations in marriage settlements, the Court, on a trial at bar, refused to hear parol evidence to show that the devisor meant that his will should remain in force (s) (1).

Again, parol evidence as to the state and circumstances of a testator are deemed to be admissible in order to give effect to a will, by explaining that which otherwise would have no operation. The legitimate limit to evidence of this description seems to be, that it is admissible to show what the words
785 themselves, as applied to their subject-matter, express; but not to show independently of the expressions themselves, what the testator intended to express.

For the purpose of determining the meaning of a testator's words, extrinsic evidence seems to be generally admissible (t). And it seems to be immaterial whether the necessity for resorting to extrinsic evidence be apparent on the face of the will, or is first raised by extrinsic circumstances (u).

It is, however, to be carefully remarked, that if, from evidence of the testator's circumstances, it appear that his words, strictly interpreted, are sensible and applicable, and there be nothing on the face of the will from which an intention to use the words in a different sense is apparent, the strict interpretation of the words must be adhered to, although they be capable of some secondary construction, and though the most conclusive evidence could be given to show that the testator used them in such secondary sense (x).

Independent force and effect of parol evidence.

III. Having thus seen how far parol evidence is admissible to contradict, vary, or wholly subvert, a written instrument, as also, on the other hand, to establish, explain, and support written evidence, it remains, in the third inadmissible to show that a legacy in a second will was intended as an ademption of a legacy given by the former will. Hurst v. Beach, 5 Madd. 360.

(q) See tit. PRESUMPTION; and Heinecc. El. J. C., part 4, s. 124.

(r) See 2 H. B. 522. (s) Goodtitle v. Otway, 2 H. B. 516.

(t) Per Ld. Hardwicke, in Goodinge v. Goodinge, 1 Ves. 231. Per Ld. Thurlow, in Jeacock v. Falkner, 1 Bro. C. C. 295; and Fonnereau v. Poyntz, 1 Bro. C. C. 471. Per Ld. Loughborough, in Gaskell v. Winter, 3 Ves. 540. Ld. Manners, in Crane v. Odell, 1 Ball. & B. 480. Sir T. Plumer, in Beachcroft v. Beachcroft, 1 Madd. 430; and Colpoys v. Colpoys, 1 Jac. 451. Per Ld. Eldon, in Oakden v. Clifden, Lin. Inn Hall, 1806. See also Lane v. Lord Stanhope, 6 T. R. 345. Doe d. Le Chevalier v. Huthwaite,[1] 3 B. & A. 632. Gibson v. Gell,[2] 2 B. & C. 680. Pocock v. Bishop of Lincoln,[3] 3 B. & B. 27. Alford v. Green, 5 Madd. 95. Goodright v. Downshire, 2 B. & P. 608; 1 N. R. 344. Wilder's Case, 6 Rep. 16. See Powell on Dev. by Jarman, vol. i. p. 488.

(u) See the judgment given by Bayley, J. in Smith v. Doe d. Jersey,[4] 2 B. & B. 553. Fonnereau v. Poyntz, 1 Bro. C. C. 471. Abbott v. Massie, 3 Ves. 148. Price v. Page, 4 Ves. 680. Colpoys v. Colpoys, 1 Jac. 451.

(x) Doe d. Oxenden v. Chichester, 3 Taunt. 147; 4 Dow. P. C. 65; supra, 771.

(1) [It has been decided in Massachusetts, that where a husband conveyed his life estate in his wife's land to her father, who afterwards, being insolvent, reconveyed it to the wife, to prevent its being taken by his creditors, one of whom, nevertheless, extended an execution on the land, parol evidence was inadmissible to prove that the conveyance to the wife's father was in trust to her use; so that the reconveyance was to be taken to be fraudulent against creditors. Smith v. Lane, 3 Pick. 205.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. v. 406. [2]Id. ix. 218. [3]Id. vii. 335. [4]Id. vi. 207.

place, to consider in what cases parol extrinsic evidence is admissible to prove a fact by virtue of its own weight and authority, notwithstanding the casual existence or use of collateral written evidence to prove or disprove the same fact. What has been already said supplies, indeed, a sufficient test; for it seems that, in general, the mere circumstance that a written instrument exists which may be made evidence of a particular transaction, does not exclude oral testimony either to prove or disprove the fact, unless that written instrument be by law constituted the authentic and sole medium of proving that fact (y). The importance of the subject, however, renders it desirable further to consider, 1st, In what instances written instruments are of an exclusive nature; 2dly, With respect to what parties and to what facts.

Written instrument, when conclusive in its nature.

In the first place, written evidence has an exclusive operation in many instances, by virtue of peremptory legislative enactments (z). So it has in all cases of written contracts (a).

*So also, in all cases where the acts of a court of justice are the subject of evidence. Courts of record speak by means of their records only; and even *786 where the transactions of courts, which are not, technically speaking, of record, are to be proved, if such courts preserve written memorials of their proceedings, those memorials are the only authentic means of proof which the law recognizes (b). And it seems that, in general, where the law authorizes any person to make an inquiry of a judicial nature, and to register the proceedings, the written instrument (c) so constructed is the only legitimate medium to prove the result (1).

Thus, as has been seen, parol evidence cannot be received of the declaration of a prisoner taken before a magistrate under the statutes of Philip & Mary, where the examination has, as required by those statutes, been taken in writing (d).

So the official return of the sheriff to a writ of execution is usually conclusive as between the litigating parties, although not as between them and himself (e) (A).

But in general, public and authorized documents, whether appointed by express authority of law, or recognized by the law as instruments of autho-

(y) See Grey v. Smithies, Burr. 2273, and infra. [Commissioners v. Allen, 2 Rep. Con. Ct. 88.] Still less does the existence of a deed or other written instrument exclude parol evidence as to a collateral transaction. Fletcher v. Gillespie, 3 Bing. 635. So in the case of a parol agreement to do repairs, in consideration that the plaintiff would become the tenant to the defendant. Seago v. Deane, 4 Bing. 459. So where the parties to an indenture of charter-party afterwards agreed by parol for the use of the ship, ad interim. White v. Parkins, 12 East, 578. An admission of a fact is evidence of the fact against the party who makes it, although a written instrument be essential to the fact. Slattery v. Pooley, 6 M. & W. 664. Doe v. Ross, 6 M. & W. 102.

(z) Supra, tit. Frauds, Statute of.

(a) Supra, tit. Assumpsit.

(b) Vide Vol. I. tit. Judgment. Supra, Insolvent, 562. [Thompson v. Bullock, 1 Bay, 364.] In Bledstyn v. Sedgwick, Anst. 304, the Court refused to hear parol evidence of the condemnation of a ship in Carolina, a copy of the condemnation which had been given to the captain having been lost at sea. [See Arnold v. Smith, 5 Day, 150.]

(c) Or, in some instances, an examined copy of it. Supra, vol. I. tit. Judgment.

(d) Supra, 38. [The State v. Grove, Martin's R. 43.] But parol evidence may be given of the same declarations made by the prisoner at other times; supra, 38; infra, 787. [See Lewis v. Blair, 1 N. Hamp. Rep. 68.]

(e) Gufford v. Woodgate, 16 East, 296, vol. i. [State v. Wells, 1 Coxe's R. 424.]

(1) {Therefore on trying the issue of nul tiel record, the defendant is not at liberty to give parol evidence to show, that a recognizance purporting to be taken before the Prothonotary, was in fact taken before another person. Patton v. Miller, 13 Serg. & Rawle, 254.}

(A) (Where a fieri facias had lain in the sheriff's hands six years, and was then returned by him nulla bona, it was held that evidence was admissible to contradict the return, and show that the sheriff had sold property under it, and paid the proceeds to the plaintiff. Williams v. Carr, 1 Rawle, 420.)

rity, if they be but collateral memorials of the fact, possess no exclusive authority as instruments of evidence. Thus, although the entry of a marriage in the parish register, made according to the Marriage Act, be evidence of the marriage, it does not exclude the parol evidence of any witness who can prove the fact of marriage. So, although public printed proclamations of government gazettes, public books, official returns, and other (f) documents of authority, are admissible in evidence to prove particular facts, they do not exclude parol evidence. The principle applies in general, as it seems, where the document contains a mere subsequent memorial and recognition of the fact (1).

Receipt. A receipt for money, it has been held, is not conclusive evidence against the person who gives it, that he has actually received the money (A).

Thus, upon the failure of an annuity deed for want of a memorial, upon an action brought by the plaintiff against the two grantors, to recover the consideration paid, one of the defendants, who was a surety only, was permitted to show, notwithstanding his having signed a receipt for the money, jointly with the other defendant, the principal, that he had never in fact received the money (g).

Confession. In the case of Wilson v. Poulter, which is very briefly reported (h), it is *787 stated *merely that a defendant in trover was charged with his confession taken before commissioners of bankrupt, and that the Chief Justice refused to let the defendant explain it by parol evidence. It is not stated in what (f) Vol. I. tit. Written Evidence.

(g) Stratton v. Restall & another, 3 T. R. 366. And see The Attorney-general v. Randall & others, 2 Eq. C. Abr. 742, and cited 5 T. R. 369, and approved of by Buller, J.; where, although a receipt had been signed by three trustees, the Lord Chancellor decreed that the one only who had received the money should be answerable for it. And see Rowntree v. Jacob, 2 Taunt. 141; also, 1 Sid. 44; 1 Lev. 43; 1 Saund. 285; Lutw. 1173; Co. Litt. by Harg. and Butler, 373. Latour v. Bland,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 382.

(h) Str. 794. In Rowland v. Ashby,[2] 1 Ry. & M. 231, it was held that admissions made by a party on his examination before commissioners of bankrupts, and which were material though not contained in the written examination, might be proved. So additional statements made by a prisoner before a magistrate, and not contained in the written examination, may be proved by parol. Venafra v. Johnson, 1 Mo. & R. 310. Supra, tit. Admissions. What a prisoner says before he may know the charge against him is admissible; interlineations and erasures in a confession are cured by the attestation; and it is no objection that it is said to be signed, where the party was a marksman; and a voluntary confession, taken before the conclusion of the evidence against the prisoner, may be given in evidence on the parol statement of the clerk, refreshing his memory by the paper. R. v. Bell,[3] 5 C. & P. 162; questioning R. v. Fagg,[4] 4 C. & P. 566.

(1) [Parol evidence is admissible to prove the defendant to be an innkeeper, in an action against him as such, although his license as such is on record. Owings v. Wyant, 1 Har. & M'Hen. 393. Or to prove the existence of a partnership, although there are written articles of partnership. Widdifield v. Widdifield, 2 Binney, 245. See also 1 Serg. & Rawle, 464. On an issue of infancy, parol evidence is admissible to prove the age of the party, though there be an entry in the family bible. Buler v. Young, 3 Bibb. 520.

In Massachusetts, parol evidence of marriages is received, although officiating clergymen and magistrates are by statute required to keep a record of all marriages solemnized before them, and to return annually, to the clerk of the town where they reside, a certificate of the names of all persons by them joined in marriage. So parol proof of the age of persons, and the time of their death, is constantly admitted, although a statute requires that births and deaths shall be recorded by town clerks; and parents, householders, &c., are liable to a penalty for neglecting to give notice of births in their families.

Where the magistrate, before whom a clerk of a militia company was alleged to have taken the oath of office, made no record of administering such oath, testimony of witnesses present when the oath was administered was admitted to prove the fact. Bassett v. Marshall, 9 Mass. Rep. 312. See Colburn v. Ellis & al., 5 ib. 427. Welles & al. v. Battelle & al. 11 ib. 477.

On an indictment for uttering, &c. a counterfeit bank-note, parol evidence is admissible to prove that the person whose name appears on a note as president, actually was president of the bank. Smith v. Smith, 5 Day, 175. So parol evidence is admissible to prove that the defendant is a judge, on the question of discharging him on common bail. Gratz v. Wilson, 1 Halsted, 419. Documents, certified by a foreign notary, tending to prove a transfer of an American vessel to a foreigner, may be contradicted by parol evidence. U. States v. The Jason, 1 Peters, 450.]

(A) (See post tit. Receipt.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 392. [2] Id. xxi. 425. [3] Id. xxiv. 256. [4] Id. xix. 530.

way the defendant proposed to explain the document; and it would not be safe to rely much on so very loose a report.

In the common case of a confession taken before a magistrate, on a charge of felony, the practice is for the prosecutor to prove by evidence that the written document produced is a faithful account of the prisoner's statement; upon principle, therefore, it scarcely admits of doubt that the prisoner is at liberty to meet such evidence by contrary testimony, and to show that the written instrument is inaccurate. The statutes which authorize the magistrate to take the examination of prisoners do not give them an exclusive force, and their admissibility and operation as evidence seem to stand upon the same footing with any other admissions at common law (i), which, in such instances, are usually inconclusive (k). And it seems that in general, where a document, such as a letter, not being matter of compact and agreement, is given in evidence as an admission by the adversary, the latter may adduce evidence to show that it originated in mistake, or to explain it by circumstances (l).

In an action brought by bankers to recover back money paid on a cheque purporting to be drawn by the defendant, but alleged to be a forgery, and which was the fact in issue, held, that minutes of the defendant's examination on a charge made against a party as having forged the cheque, were receivable, although he afterwards signed a regular deposition (m).

2dly. Next, with respect to the parties, and the particular facts which it recites.—The instrument offered in evidence, whether record, deed, or simple contract, is offered either as between the same parties, or where either one or both are different. Even where both parties are the same, it frequently happens that the instrument will not operate as an estoppel unless it be specially pleaded (n); and if it has not been pleaded, parol evidence of the fact is usually admissible in contradiction of the written instrument. As to what facts inconclusive inter parties.

In the next place, even where a record or deed exists, which is conclusive upon the parties, it is not always conclusive upon all points.

Thus, evidence is admissible to prove that a deed was executed, or a bill of exchange made, at a time different from that of the date (o), or that the party in whose name a contract for the sale of goods was made, was but the *agent of another (p) (1). And even in the case of records, which are *788

(i) Supra, tit. Admissions. (k) Supra, tit. Admissions.

(l) Supra, tit. Admissions, and see Holsten v. Jumpson, 4 Esp. C. 189; 1 T. R. 182.

(m) Williams v. Woodward,[1] 4 C. & P. 346.

(n) Supra, Vol. I. tit. Estoppel.

(o) The plaintiff may declare on a bond bearing date on one day, and prove a delivery on another day (Goddard's Case, 2 Rep. 4, b), or allege a deed to have been delivered on a day different from that on which it bears date. Hull v. Cazenove, East, 477. Stone v. Bale, 3 Lev. 348. A latitat alleged to have been issued on a particular day after term, may be proved to have been so issued, though tested of the preceding term. 1 Vent. 362.

(p) Wilson v. Hart,[2] 7 Taunt. 295. So a purchaser of land, having made the purchase in the name of another, may show that he (the purchaser) paid for it, in order to raise a resulting trust. Vern. 366. Where parol evidence was offered (to raise an equity) that a pension granted by the Crown absolutely was in trust for the plaintiff, which the defendant, by his answer, denied, the evidence was rejected by Lord Thurlow. Fordyce v. Willis, 3 Bro. C. P. 577. Parol evidence is admissible to show that land described in a deed as meadow was not meadow, for it is not the essence of the deed, but merely matter of description. Skipwith v. Green, Str. 610. Or that land described as containing 500 acres, does not contain so many. S. C. Bac. Ab. Pleas, I. 11. Where a deed contains a generality to be done, as to perform all agreements set down by A., 1 Rol. 872, l. 5; to carry away all the marl in close B., Ib.; to release all his right in C., Ib.; 2 Cowp. 600; he is not estopped from denying such agreements, &c. Com. Dig. Estoppel, A. 2.

(1) [The acts of agents do not derive their validity from professing on the face of them to have been done in the exercise of their agency; but the liability of the principal depends on the facts, 1st. That the act was done in the exercise, and 2d. Within the limits of the power delegated; and on ascertaining these facts, as conclusive as far as regards substance, averments and proofs may be received to contradict them as to time and place and many other particulars (q).

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 412. [2]Id. ii. 112.

The reason is, that in the case of the record, the points of variance would not have been considered to be material at the trial, and therefore the evidence does not in effect contradict the record; and that in the case of deeds or other agreements it was not the intention of the contracting parties to bind themselves precisely as to such particulars, such instruments being, for the sake of convenience, frequently executed on days different from those on which they bear date, and commercial agreements being as frequently made on behalf of a principal in the name of an agent (r).

The parties to a written agreement are not, in general, precluded from proving facts consistent with the agreement, although not expressed in the agreement. Where the written agreement was, that Maxwell should purchase of Sharp 2,000*l.* stock, it was held that the plaintiff Maxwell might give in evidence a parol agreement to buy 2,000*l.* stock (which belonged to Sharp and Abbott, but stood in the name of Sharp) of Sharp and Abbott, the parol being consistent with the written agreement (s) (1).

And as between the parties to a deed, or those who claim in privity, evidence is admissible to show the purpose and intention of executing the instrument, provided it be perfectly consistent with the legal operation of the instrument, and not inconsistent with its express terms.

Thus, in the case of Milbourn v. Ewart & others (t), where a man, in contemplation of marriage, executed a bond to his intended wife (the plaintiff), conditioned for the payment of money by the heirs or executors of the obligor to the plaintiff, at the expiration of twelve calendar months from and after the death of the obligor, and to an action on the bond against the heirs at law of the deceased husband, they pleaded the marriage, &c., and the plaintiff replied the fact that the bond was made in contemplation of a marriage between the defendant and the obligor, and with intent that, in case the marriage should take place, and the plaintiff should survive her husband, the plaintiff should have the benefit of the bond, it was held that those facts might well be averred, being perfectly consistent with the bond.

*789 *It has already been seen that, as between parties to a deed, evidence of a further consideration than that expressed in the deed is admissible where the evidence does not contradict the deed (u).

A party to support a deed may show a consideration by parol evidence,

(q) See Starkie's Crim. Pleadings, 2d edit. 325, and supra, Vol. I. tit. JUDICIAL INSTRUMENTS. [Brier v. Woodbury, 1 Pick. 362. Binton v. Pond, 5 Day, 160.]

(r) Infra, tit. PARTNERS; and tit. VENDOR and VENDEE.

(s) Maxwell v. Sharp, Say. 187. Where one partner deposited his own deeds under a written memorandum "as a security in the dealings which the party had with him," held that evidence to show that the dealings alluded to were partnership transactions, was admissible, and established the lien on payments made on behalf of the firm. Chuck v. Green,[1] 1 M. & M. 259; S. C. contra, 2 Glyn & J. 246.

(t) 5 T. R. 381.

(u) Supra, 758.

connected with the execution of any written instrument, parol testimony is admissible: Hence, where a check, drawn by a person who was the cashier of a bank, appeared doubtful on the face of it, whether it was an official or private act, parol evidence was admitted to show that it was an official act. Mechanics' Bank of Alexandria v. Bank of Columbia, 5 Wheat. 326.]

(1) [The shipping articles for a fishing voyage, which by the act of Congress (13 Cong. 1 sess. c. 2) are to be indorsed or countersigned by the owners, do not determine conclusively who are the owners, nor with whom the contract is made; but a seaman may have his remedy for his share of the fish taken, against all the owners, and he may show those whom he sues to be such, by other evidence than the papers of the vessel. Wait v. Gibbs et al. 4 Pick. 298.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxii. 302.

so as it be not inconsistent with the deed. A deed operating under the Statute of Uses, and not reciting any consideration, may be supported by evidence of a pecuniary consideration (x).

Except in cases where the Statute of Frauds requires a written agreement, parol evidence may be admissible, in conjunction with written, to prove the agreement. Thus, if an agreement be reduced in writing, parol evidence is admissible to show that the parties, without writing, afterwards varied the terms (y); for here the evidence is offered, not to vary the terms of an instrument which stands admitted as the real record of the intention of the parties, but is offered consistently with the existence of the instrument, and confessing that it does so exist, in order to avoid its effect by proof of a new agreement, adopting the old one, either wholly or in part, but annexing certain additional terms.

It has, indeed, already been seen, that previous or contemporary declarations are not admissible to vary the terms of a written agreement; where, however, the nature of the subject-matter does not require the agreement to be in writing, although a presumption arises, in the absence of proof to the contrary, that the parties expressed in writing the whole of their intention in respect of the subject-matter, and intended the written terms to operate as an agreement, yet that presumption may, it seems, be rebutted by express evidence that what was so written was intended as a mere memorandum of one part or branch only of a more moral agreement, and was not intended to operate absolutely and unconditionally (z), or it may be shown that a parol contract was made independently, wholly collateral to and distinct from a written one made at the same time. In such cases, the parol evidence is used not to vary the terms of the written instrument, but to show either that it is inoperative as an entire and independent agreement, or that it is collateral and irrelevant.

Where a statute requires the agreement to be in writing, the case admits of a very different consideration; there the oral and written terms could *not, it should seem, be incorporated; and it might be very questionable, *790 under the circumstances, whether the previously written agreement would be discharged and revoked by a subsequent oral agreement (a) (1). It has (x) Mildmay's Case, 1 Co. 176. So a deed which recites a pecuniary consideration only, may be shown to have been founded on a consideration of marriage. Villers v. Beaumont, ib. Where premises were purchased at a sale in different lots by plaintiff and defendant, and in their deeds the premises were described only by reference to the then tenants; held, that a handbill exhibited at the sale was admissible, not as controlling, but explaining and applying the deed, and showing what was then in the tenants' occupation. Murley v. M'Dermott, 3 N. & P. 356.

(y) Lord Milton v. Edworth, 6 Bro. P. C. 587. Cuff v. Penn, 1 M. & S. 21. Supra, 761.

(z) See Jeffery v. Walton,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 267. The action was in assumpsit for not taking proper care of a horse. A written memorandum was made upon hiring a horse, "six weeks, at two guineas—W. W." (the hirer); Lord Ellenborough held that evidence was admissible to show that at the time of the hiring it was expressly stipulated, that as the horse was used to shy, the hirer, if he took him, should be liable to all accidents. In many instances, the terms reduced to writing may constitute but a small part of the real contract. Suppose A. to let a house by parol to B. for two years, and that at the time of the parol agreement a stipulation as to the furniture is made, for convenience of calculation, in writing, and that at the foot of the account is written, "B. to take the furniture at the above valuation," it would be difficult to contend that B. would be bound to buy the furniture, although A. refused to let him occupy the house, and that B. would be concluded by the written part of the engagement from showing the real condition annexed to it.

(a) An agreement to waive a contract for the purcase of lands is as much an agreement concerning lands

(1) [Where land was sold and conveyed, and the parties afterwards agreeing to rescind the contract, the conveyances were given up, but, by accident, the notes for the purchase-money were not given up; it was held, that in an action on the notes, that parol evidence of the rescinding of the contract could not be given at law; the land, having been vested by deed, could not be devested otherwise than by deed. Sally v. Sandifie, 2 Rep. Con. Ct. 445. See Barrett v. Thorndike, 1 Greenleaf, 92. Marshall v. Fisk, 6 Mass. Rep. 24. Eames v. Savage, 14 ib. 425.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 385.

been held that in cases which are within the scope of the Statute of Frauds, parol evidence is admissible to show a dispensation with the performance of part of the original contract, such as an agreed substitution of other days than those stated in the contract for the delivery of goods sold (b). But that it was otherwise where the terms of the written contract would be varied by the subsequent agreement (c). But it has since been held that where a written contract states a time and place for the delivery of goods, an alteration as to the time is not valid unless it be in writing (d).

It has already been seen that mere unsigned memorandums, made with a view to a subsequent agreement, need not be proved (e).

Operation of against strangers.

Next, where one of the contending parties was not a party to the record or other instrument.—It has been seen, that in some instances, where the proceeding is, as it is technically termed, in rem, the judgment or decree is final and conclusive upon all (f). Where, however, the record is admissible, but not conclusive evidence, even parol evidence seems to be admissible to prove the fact in contradiction of the record.

Thus, upon an indictment against an accessory to a felony; although the record of the conviction of the principal be admissible evidence to prove the fact, yet as it is not conclusive, the accessory is entitled to adduce any legal evidence in contradiction of the fact stated on the record (g).

Although there are many instances in which a deed or agreement between others is evidence for or against a stranger, or where such a deed or other agreement would be evidence in favour of a mere stranger, as to some extrinsic fact stated in the instrument against a party, yet it seems to be a *791 *general rule, that in all these cases parol evidence of the fact would still be admissible; in other words, the instrument could never conclude the party by estoppel or otherwise.

Thus, in the case of The King v. Scammonden (h), already cited, the

as the original contract is, and must therefore, as it seems, be in writing. See Lord Hardwicke's observations in Buckhouse v. Crosby, Eq. C. Abr. 32, and in Bell v. Howard, 9 Mod. 332. In Parteriche v. Powlet (2 Atk. 384), Lord Hardwicke is reported to have said, that to add anything to an agreement in writing, by admitting parol evidence which would affect land, is not only contrary to the Statute of Frauds, but to the rule of common law before the statute was in being; yet, as mere parol agreements concerning land were operative before the statute, there seems to have been no reason why a written contract should not have been varied by a subsequent oral agreement when it related to lands, as well as in any other case. See Clinun v. Cooke, 1 Sch. & Lef. 35. Subsequently to the publication of the above remarks, it has been decided (Marshall v. Lynn, 6 M. & W. 109; supra, 491) that a contract required by the Statute of Frauds to be in writing, cannot be varied by oral assent.

(b) Cuff v. Penn, 1 M. & S. 21. See also the case of Warren v. Stagg, cited in Littler v. Holland, 3 T. R. 591; where Buller, J. held that an agreement to extend the time was not a waver but a continuance of the original agreement. See also Thrush v. Rooke, 1 Esp. C. 53, cor. Lord Kenyon; where, in a written agreement, an appraisement on a given day was specified as a condition precedent, oral evidence of an enlargement by consent was admitted. Cor. Lord Kenyon. But see Snowball v. Verain, Bunb. 175.

(c) See Lord Ellenborough's observations in Cuff v. Penn, 1 M. & S. 26; where he says, "If this agreement had been varied by parol, I should have thought, on the authority of Meres v. Ansell, (3 Wils. 275), that there had been strong ground for the objection." But note, that Meres v. Ansell, was decided wholly, as far as the report intimates, upon the general principle of the inadmissibility of a cotemporary parol agreement to vary the terms of a written one. In Cuff v. Penn (and the same observation is applicable to Meres v. Ansell), and all other cases within the Statute of Frauds, the statute itself precludes any alteration of a written contract by a subsequent parol agreement.

(d) Marshall v. Lynn, 6 M. & W. 109.

(e) Supra, 57; and see Ramsbottom v. Tunbridge, 2 M. & S. 434; and Same v. Mortley, Ib. 445, and tit. Stamp.

(f) Supra, Vol. I. tit. Judicial Instruments; and vide infra, tit. Settlement.

(g) Supra, tit. Accessory.

(h) 3 T. R. 474. So in R. v. Llangunner,[1] 2 B. & Ad. 616, the deed of apprenticeship stating the money to have been paid by J. M., evidence was admitted to show that it was in part parish money. And see R. v. Wickham,[2] 2 Ad. & Ell. 517, where it was held that a parish might show a settlement by renting a tenement in A., although the lease stated it to be in B. Parish officers are not estopped from showing the true consideration for a conveyance, though the parties are. R. v. Inhabitants of Cheadle,[3] 3 B. & Ad. 833; and inhabitants of a parish were permitted to show that 30*l.* was in fact paid as the consideration upon the sale of an estate, although the deed of conveyance between the parties specified 28*l.* as the consideration. Here the question was as to the value actually given for the estate; and although the agreement was primâ facie evidence as to the fact, and although the parties themselves might have been bound by their own representations of the transaction, it was not binding upon strangers, to the exclusion of the real fact.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxii. 148. [2]Id. xxix. 160. [3]Id. xxiii. 192.

In the case of The King v. Laindon (i), the question as to a settlement was, whether the parties intended to contract as master and servant, or as master and apprentice; the written agreement was as follows: "I, J. M. do hereby agree with J. C. to serve me three years, to learn the business of a carpenter, the first year to have 1*s.* 2*d.* per day, the second year to have 1*s.* 6*d.* per day;" &c. In addition to this, J. C. was admitted to prove, at the trial, that at the time of signing the agreement he agreed to give J. M. the sum of three guineas, as a premium to teach him the trade, and that he was not to be employed in any other work. The Court of King's Bench held that the evidence was admissible, being offered not to contradict a written agreement, but to ascertain an independent fact (k). It is, however, to be observed upon this case, that the question might have been very different indeed had it arisen as between the contracting parties; as if, for instance, a dispute had arisen between them as to the nature of the service which the master had a right to exact by virtue of the agreement. If in that case the servant had insisted on the co-existing parol agreement, to limit his service to carpenter's work, the objection would have operated strongly that this would have been to superadd terms by parol to those contained in the written instrument, or to explain the intention of the parties by parol evidence (l). But the question was between strangers to the contract; the point in issue was, the real intention of the parties when they committed certain terms to writing; the terms so written were admissible evidence, as tending to prove the fact, on the natural presumption, in the absence of all suspicion of fraud, that the parties would disclose their real intention; but this was not the only medium of proof, neither was it an exclusive one, for the private statement of the parties could not, on any principle, bind and estop strangers.

Where the action was brought against the heir and devisee, on a bond, and issue was taken on the fact, whether the defendant had sold the estate *for more than 168*l.*, a lease and release were produced in evidence, from *792 which it appeared that the defendant had sold the estate for 210*l.*, but it was held that he was at liberty to prove that part of the estate so sold did not belong to the testator, but had been purchased by the defendant for the sum of 42*l.* in order to be sold to the vendee (m). Here the evidence was consistent with the terms of the deed; but even if it had not been so, it seems that it would still have been admissible as between those parties; for although, as between the defendant and the vendee, the defendant might have been estopped by his deed from making any averment against it, yet as between the plaintiff and defendant there was no mutuality, and consequently no estoppel, and therefore the defendant was not concluded, upon issue joined as to the amount for which the estate sold, from showing the see R. v. Olney, 1 M. & S. 387. See other cases where evidence has been admitted of a consideration different from that expressed in the deed. Filmer v. Gott, 7 Bro. P. C. 70. Clarkson v. Hanway, 2 P. Wms. 203; 1 Ves. 128; and supra, 548, 555.

(i) 8 T. R. 179. See also R. v. Shinfield, 14 East, 544.

(k) Per Lord Kenyon, C. J. and Lawrence, J.

(l) Supra, 548, et seq.

(m) Grove v. Weston, Say. 209.

real fact. It was held in the same case, that although the deed stated that the consideration was paid to the vendor, evidence was admissible to show that it was paid to a third person, with his privity.

A party to a deed may, in an action between others, contradict the deed by his testimony; thus, one who has jointly with another executed an assignment of a ship, as of their joint property, is competent to prove that he had no interest in it (n).

General rule as to the independent operation of parol evidence.

With the exceptions already adverted to, the general inference, as above stated, seems to be, that oral evidence may be used indifferently as original and independent evidence of a fact, either concurrently with or in opposition to written testimony (o); and that written evidence, however superior it may be, and frequently is in effect to mere oral evidence, does not in any case, of its own authority, unaided by an express rule of law, exclude such evidence (1).

In an action for bribery at an election, it was held that parol evidence was admissible to prove the delivery of the precept to the returning officer, although it appeared that the returning officer had indorsed upon the precept, with a view to prove it, the time of his having so received it, and that the indorsement had been attested by two witnesses (p).

(n) 1 T. R. 301; supra, 10.

(o) An order for goods, describing their number and kind, is evidence for the plaintiff in an action against the defendant for not delivering the goods, although no time or price was mentioned; and the defendant's acceptance of the order, and the price agreed upon, may be proved by parol. Ingram v. Lee, 2 Camp. 521. Where the terms of adjustment with an underwriter were indorsed on the policy, and the money was paid, parol evidence was admitted of a previous agreement, that if the other underwriters should eventually pay a less sum, the surplus should be returned. Russell v. Dunsley,[1] 6 Moore, 233. The fact that a receipt has been given, does not exclude parol evidence of payment by a witness who saw the money paid. Rambert v. Cohen, 2 Esp. C. 213, cor. Lord Ellenborough. An oral admission by a defendant is evidence of a debt, although at the same time a written admission was entered in a book, which cannot be read for want of a stamp. Singleton v. Ballett, 2 Tyr. 409; and see Jacob v. Lindsay, 1 East, 460; Rambert v. Cohen, 4 Esp. C. 213. Maugham v. Hubbard,[2] 8 B. & C. 14. Semble, evidence is admissible that notes were issued by a corporation for a different purpose than that for which they were authorized to issue them. Stark v. Highgate Archway Company,[3] 5 Taunt. 792.

(p) Grey v. Smithies, Burr. 2273. It appeared in the case of Reason v. Tranter, Stra. 499, that the dying declaration of Mr. Lutterel, the deceased, had been taken down in writing by a witness, at the instance of two justices of the peace who were present; the witness had afterwards copied the writing thus made, and produced it at the trial; but the original was not produced. The Court held that the copy was not evidence. Upon this it may be observed, that although the copy was not evidence, the original being still in existence, and being better evidence than the copy, yet it seems that, in such a case, the mere fact that the witness reduced the declarations to writing at the time, would not exclude parol evidence of those declarations, the instrument not being an authentic one, authorized by the statute of Phil. & Mary. See Sayer's Case, 12 Vin. Ab. A. b. 23, pl. 7. In the same case other declarations of the deceased which had not been taken down in writing, made at other times, were received in evidence. See [4]2 Starkie's C. 208.

(1) [Parol evidence is admissible to enlarge the time of performance of a written simple contract. Keating v. Price, 1 Johns. Cas. 22. Or to enlarge the time for performing a condition; or to show a waver of the performance of it. Fleming v. Gilbert, 3 Johns. 528. Or to prove an accord executed in discharge of a written agreement previously made. Hall v. Stewart, 5 Day, 428. {Or to show the conditions on which a deed was placed in the hands of a depository, which conditions, while they remain executory, may also be proved by parol evidence. Raymond v. Smith, 5 Conn. Rep. 556.} Or to show that at the time of entering into articles for the sale of land, it was agreed by the parties, that the instalments should be paid in whatever money was current at the time they fell due, the articles not specifying the kind of money to be paid. M'Meen v. Owen, 1 Yeates, 135. 2 Dallas, 183, S. C. But where certain money had been made a legal tender by statute, parol evidence was held inadmissible to show what kind of money was meant under the words "current lawful money." Lee v. Biddis, 1 Dallas, 176. Bond v. Haas's Ex'rs, 2 ib. 133.

Parol evidence is admissible, in an action by the indorsee against the indorsor of a note, indorsed in blank, to show that at the time of the indorsement, the indorsee received the note under an agreement that he should not have recourse to the indorser. Hill v. Ely, 5 Serg. & Rawle, 363. S. P. Field v. Nickerson, 13 Mass. Rep. 138. Cummings v. Fisher, Anthon's N. P. 4. So in an action, by the assignee against the assignor of a sealed note, to recover back the consideration paid on the assignment, parol evidence was held admissible, on the part of the defendant, to prove that at the time of assigning the note, the plaintiff agreed to put it immediately in suit, and to take it at his own risk. Mehelm v. Barnet, 1 Coxe, 86. See also Storer v. Logan, 9 Mass. Rep. 55.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xvii. 40. [2]Id. xv. 147. [3]Id. i. 268. [4]Id. iii. 316.

*An executory agreement, and under seal, may be discharged by a parol agreement (q). But it seems that a contract under the Statute of Frauds cannot be waived by a subsequent parol agreement (r).

To confirm or contradict unauthenticated written evidence.

Where letters are written in so dubious a manner as to be capable of different constructions, or be unintelligible, without the aid of extrinsic circumstances, their meaning becomes a question of fact for the jury, and parol evidence of such extrinsic facts is admissible; as in the case of libels, threatening letters, or a letter offered in evidence to prove acknowledgements to take a case out of the Statute of Limitations. But if they cannot be explained by extrinsic circumstances, then, like deeds or agreements, their construction is matter of law for the Court (s).

So an instrument in itself defective and inoperative may be confirmed and supplied by oral testimony, and operate in conjunction with it. Thus, where in the bishop's register a blank was left for the name of the patron, it was held that this might be supplied by oral testimony (t), for as the presentation itself might have been by parol, it might have been proved by the aid of the suppletory parol evidence, consequently there was no unwarranted substitution of oral for written evidence.

PARTICULARS, BILL OF.

By a general rule of all the courts of Trin. T., 1 W. 4, it is directed that with any declaration, if delivered, or with notice of declaration, if filed, containing counts in indebitatus assumpsit, or debt on simple contract, the plaintiff shall deliver full particulars of his demand under those counts, when such particulars can be comprised within three folios; and when the same cannot be comprised within three folios, he shall deliver such a statement of the nature of his claim, and the amount of the sum or balance which he claims to be due, as may be comprised within that number of folios (u).

The particulars, when annexed to the record, are authentic without further proof (x); but they are not made part of the record and incorporated in the pleadings (y).

Object of.

The object of a bill of particulars is to give the defendant more specific and precise information as to the nature and extent of the demand made upon him by the plaintiff, than is announced by the declaration (z), in a (q) Ld. Milton v. Edworth, 5 Brown. P. C. 587. Secus, after breach, Willoughby v. Backhouse,[1] 2 B. & C. 824; B. N. P. 152. Case v. Baker, T. Raym. 450.

(r) Goss v. Lord Nugent,[2] 5 B. & Ad. 58.

(s) Per Buller, J., 1 T. R. 182.

(t) Bishop of Meath v. Lord Belfield, 1 Wils. 215.

(u) If the particulars exceed three folios, the defendant may obtain fresh particulars on payment of costs and taking short notice of trial. James v. Child, 2 Cr. & J. 252. If the plaintiff do not supply such particulars as the statute requires, he will not be allowed them in costs, if afterwards required and delivered.

(x) Macarty v. Smith,[3] 8 Bing. 145; 1 M. & Scott, 227; 1 D. P. C. 227.

(y) Booth v. Howard, 5 Dow. P. C. 538.

(z) Wherever the form of pleading is so general as not necessarily to enable the defendant to prepare fully for his defence, as where a general form is given by a statue, such as 9 Ann, c. 14, or 25 Geo. 2, c. 36, it seems that the plaintiff would be required to furnish a bill of particulars. See Tidd's Practice, 7th. edit. [Mercer v. Sayre, 3 Johns. 248.] So where the action is on a bond conditioned to indemnify or to perform covenants. So in ejectment on a forfeiture of a lease (Doe d. Birch v. Phillips, 6 T. R. 597); or if the plaintiff declare generally in ejectment, and without sufficiently specifying the lands sought to be recovered (7 East, 332); so the plaintiff may call on the defendant in ejectment to specify for what he defends, where it is not ascertained in the consent-rule. But where the particulars are specified in the declaration, as in actions of special assumpsit, covenant, debt, or articles of agreement, or in actions for torts specified in the declaration, an order for particulars does not appear to be requisite. Tidd's Practice, 613, 7th edit.—In an action for assumpsit against the vendor for breach of contract in the sale of a house, with counts to recover the deposit, the plaintiff having in his first count alleged that the defendant, who was bound to make a good title, had delivered an insufficient abstract, the Court obliged the plaintiff to give a particular of all the objec-

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ix. 254. [2]Id. xxvii. 33. [3]Id. xxi. 253.

When sufficient.

*mode unencumbered by the technical formalities of pleading. Hence, as will appear from the decisions on this head, referred to below, particulars are in general sufficient, provided they be not so materially erroneous (a) as probably to have led the defendant into error; but if, on the other hand, the particulars vary so materially from the evidence as to render it probable that the defendant has not been apprised of the real claim intended to be made by the plaintiff, the latter will be precluded from going into evidence of that part of his demand.

Objection to omission in, how taken.

In order to preclude the plaintiff from giving evidence of any item not included in the bill of particulars, the order for delivering the bill must be produced, and the delivery of the bill be proved (b). If a first bill of particulars has been delivered, under a Judge's order, and the plaintiff deliver a second without any order, he can give no evidence of any item which is not contained in the first particulars (c), for the latter will not supersede the former, neither will it confine the plaintiff in his evidence (d).

Defects in.

Where the particulars stated merely that the demand was on a promissory note, which for want of a stamp could not be given in evidence, it was held that the plaintiff could not go into evidence of the consideration for which the note was given (e).

If the particulars state the demand to be for goods sold and delivered to the defendant, no evidence can be given of goods sold and delivered by the defendant as agent for the plaintiff (f). Nor of a mere admission that the *795 *defendant owed the particular sum (g). But in an action against an agent for not accounting for goods delivered to be sold, and for goods sold, particulars headed, "Defendant to plaintiff, 10 tierces of porter, 20*l.*," were held to be applicable to any of the counts (h).

A mistake in the date, as to the demand upon a particular item, is not tions to the abstract arising upon matters of fact (Collett v. Thompson, 3 B. & P. 246). In ejectment brought on a forfeiture of a lease, the Court will compel the plaintiff to give a particular of the breaches on which he meant to rely. Doe d. Birch v. Phillips, 6 T. R. 597.

(a) The particulars should contain an account of the items of demand, and state when, and in what manner, they arose; but it is sufficient to refer to a particular already delivered, without re-stating it (Peake's C. 172; Tidd's Pract. 614, 7th edit.) If the bill specify the transaction upon which the claim arises, it need not specify the technical description of the right resulting to the plaintiff from that transaction (Brown v. Hodgson, 4 Taunt. 189.) It will be a contempt of court to deliver a particular as general as the declaration (Brown v. Watts, 1 Taunt. 353); but it is sufficient if it convey the requisite information, although it be inartificially drawn up (1 Camp. 69). It has been said, that where there has been an account current, and the party means to give credit, the particular ought to state those items meant to be allowed (per Lord Kenyon; Mitchell v. Wright, 1 Esp. C. 280). And where an attorney, by his bill of particulars, claimed 200*l.*, although, on allowing for payments, the balance was but 10*l.*, the plaintiff was compelled to take the balance without costs (2 Camp. C. 410). But the practice does not conform with these cases (Tidd's Pract. 614 (e), 7th edit). And in a late case, Holroyd, J. held, upon an application at chambers, that it was sufficient to state the items on the debtor side only (Cooke v. Cooke, MS.). And see Miller v. Johnson, 2 Esp. C. 602, where Eyre, C. J. observed that it was never the intention, in compelling a party to give a particular under a Judge's order, to make him furnish evidence against himself, and that such an use could not be made of it. [Ryckman v. Height, 15 Johns. 222, acc.]

(b) Peake's C. 172; 2 B. & P. 243; 1 Esp. C. 195; 3 Esp. C. 168.

(c) Brown v. Watts, 1 Taunt. 353. Short v. Edwards, 1 Esp. C. 374. Where the plaintiff has made a mistake in delivering his particulars, he ought to amend, on a summons. 1 Taunt. 353.

(d) Short v. Edwards, 1 Esp. C. 374.

(e) Wade v. Beasley, 4 Esp. C. 7. The action was by the payee against the executor of the maker. But see Brown v. Hodgson, 4 Taunt. 189, and supra, 577, note (d).

(f) Holland v. Hopkins, 2 B. & P. 243.

(g) Buckton v. Smith, 4 Ad. & Ell. 468, although the declaration contained a count on an account stated; and see Holland v. Hopkins, 2 B. & P. 243.

(h) Hunter v. Welsh,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 224. And where a carrier had misdelivered goods which the defendant had misappropriated to his own use, the particulars "to seventeen firkins of butter, 50*l.*" were held to be sufficient. Brown v. Hodson, 4 Taunt. 189. Disbursements are evidence under a particular for cash advanced. Harrison v. Wood,[2] 8 Bing. 371.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 365. [2]Id. xxi. 323.

material where the date cannot mislead (i); as where the particular states the work for which the action is brought to have been done in one month, when in fact it was done in another month, and no work was done in the month so specified (k).

The plaintiff is not precluded from recovering a demand made in the particulars by his having omitted to include the item in a bill delivered before the action was brought (l); but the previous omission may, under the circumstances, afford a presumption against the claim.

A reference to an account delivered before the commencement of the action is a virtual compliance with the order for the delivery of a bill of particulars, and the plaintiff is bound by the account (m).

Defect when immaterial.

Where a party cannot have been misled by a mistake made in the particulars, the error is not in general material.

Where the particulars, by mistake, specified a payment made by the plaintiff, on account of the defendant, to A., and it turned out that it had been made to B., the item having been erroneously placed under the name of A. instead of B., it was held to be sufficient, unless the defendant would make affidavit that he had been misled by the particulars (n). So where the particulars, in an action of debt for rent, stated the premises to be at A. instead of B., it was held to be no ground of nonsuit unless the defendant could prove that he held other premises at A. of the plaintiff (o).

So where the particulars specified the amount of a bill at 60*l.* instead of 63*l.*, and made a mistake in the day of the month in stating the date (p).

Effect of, by way of admission.

The plaintiff may recover interest, although the particular merely states a demand upon a promissory note (q).

Where the plaintiff's particulars were for horses sold, and upon an account stated, and the defendant paid money into court sufficient to cover the latter demand, and the plaintiff failed on the former demand, it was held that he could not apply the money paid to the counts for horses sold, on which he had given no evidence; and he was nonsuited (r).

*Where in assumpsit the defendant pleaded non-joinder in abatement, and the particular contained items as due from the defendant and his partner, who was not sued, it was held that the particulars supported the plea, although part of the demand was due from the defendant solely (s). *796

The giving credit to the opposite party, where there has been an account current between them, is not an admission that the sum is due (t).

Particulars of a set-off are for the benefit of the defendant, to enable him

(i) Milwood v. Walter, 2 Taunt. 224. Harrison v. Wood,[1] 8 Bing. 371.

(k) 2 Taunt. 224. (l) Short v. Edwards, 1 Esp. C. 374.

(m) Hatchett v. Marshall, Peake, 172. Etches v. Fellowes, Wightw. 78.

(n) Day v. Bower, 1 Camp. 69, n.

(o) Davies v. Edwards, 3 M. & S. 380. So where, in an action by the assignees of a bankrupt, the declaration stated the action to be for money had and received to the use of the bankrupt, but the particulars of demand stated it to be had and received to the use of the plaintiff, it was held that the variance was not material, the particulars having given substantial information of the nature of the claim. Tucker v. Barrow,[2] 1 M. & M. 137.

(p) Per Abbott, J., Manning's Ind. 240. Fleming v. Crisp, 5 Dow. P. C. 454. Particulars for goods sold by the plaintiffs as brewers will not prevent their recovering as spirit dealers, the defendant not having been misled, Lambirth v. Roff,[3] 8 Bing. 411.

(q) Blake v. Lawrence, 4 Esp. 147. So where the plaintiff confined his particulars to one count of his declaration.

(r) Holland v. Hopkins, 3 Esp. C. 168; 2 B. & P. 243.

(s) Colson v. Selby, 1 Esp. C. 452. And the Court of K. B. afterwards refused to set aside the nonsuit. Qu.

(t) Miller v. Johnson, 2 Esp. C. 602. Note, there the question was upon the particulars of set-off delivered by the defendants, and it was held that the admission of an item in the plaintiff's account did not render proof by the plaintiff unnecessary. See also [4]5 Taunt. 228; 1 Marsh. 33. S. C.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxi. 323. [2]Id. xiv. 219. [3]Id. xxi. 338. [4]Id. i. 88.

to know what to plead, as well as to restrain the plaintiff's proof of his claim in the declaration (u). An admission in the particular of a payment by the defendant is evidence for the latter to prove such payment, and the jury are not, in acting on such proof, bound to adopt the statements made in the particular by the plaintiff in his own favour (v); and such payment need not be pleaded (w).

The particulars of set-off are considered as incorporated with the notice of set-off, which is in the nature of a plea, and therefore a plaintiff cannot make use of a notice of set-off as evidence of the debt under the plea of non assumpsit; nor can he use a particular of set-off for that purpose, for it is incorporated with the notice (x).

Although the plaintiff be restricted in his own evidence by his particular, he may avail himself of any evidence adduced by the defendant to increase his demand (y).

The plaintiff brought an action against his partner, and confined himself by his particular to a balance due on a separate account; the defendant produced a subsequent account, stated by the plaintiff, in which the latter made himself a debtor on the separate account, but on the same paper stated also the general account, by which he made himself creditor to a greater amount than that claimed on the separate account; the Court said that the defendant had made a better case for the plaintiff than he was at liberty to have made for himself, and that the plaintiff was entitled to a verdict for the balance on the general account. Here the defendant himself proved the plaintiff's claim to the larger sum, by giving in evidence *797 *the balance due on the general account, since the whole of the plaintiff's statement was in evidence.

Where a particular as to some counts (e. g. on bills of exchange) is unnecessary, it is sufficient if the particular specify the causes of action in the other counts (z).

Objection that a bill has not been delivered.

If the particulars of the defendant's set-off be not delivered within the time limited by the order (a), he will be precluded from giving evidence in support of his set-off; but the plaintiff cannot make an objection to such particulars at the trial, which might, if taken earlier, have been rectified by the defendant, or by the Court (b).

The objection on the score of variance between the proof and the par-

(u) See the observations of Parke, B. in Kenyon v. Wakes, 2 M. & W. 764; and see Booth v. Howard, 5 Dow, P. C. 438.

(v) Kenyon v. Wakes, 2 M. & W. 764; and see the observations of Parke, B., ib.

(w) Ib., and Coates v. Stevens, 2 C. M. & R. 118. Note, that in the case of Kenyon v. Wakes, the objection that without a plea of payment the defendant could use the particulars in reduction of damages only, and not in bar of the action, was not taken at the trial, and therefore the Court refused to set aside the verdict for the defendant. Parke, B., however, intimated his opinion that a plea of payment was unnecessary, and said, that had it not been for the case of Ernest v. Brown,[1] 3 Bing. N. C. 674, he should have entertained no doubt on the question; and he disapproved of the distinction taken in Ernest v. Brown, between assumpsit and debt, in this respect. And see Rymer v. Cooke,[2] M. & M. 86, n.; and now by the rule, Trin. Term, 1 Vict., where the plaintiff, to avoid the expense of a plea of payment, shall have given credit in the particulars for any sum admitted to have been paid to the plaintiff, it shall not be necessary to plead payment. The rule is not to apply where the plaintiff, after stating the amount of his demand, states that he seeks to recover a certain balance without giving credit for any particular sum. See tit. PAYMENT.

(x) Harrington v. Macmorris, 5 Taunt. 228; 1 Marsh, 33; Supra, Vol. I. tit. PLEADINGS.

(y) Hurst v. Watkis, 1 Camp. 68; and per Parke, B., 1 M. & W. 486.

(z) Cooper v. Amos,[3] 2 C. & P. 267. Day v. Davis,[4] 5 C. & P. 340.

(a) See the form, Tidd, App. c. 22, s. 10. If the order direct the particulars to be delivered forthwith, without prescribing any specific time, and the particulars are delivered so late as to embarrass the party, he waives the objection by an acceptance of the particulars, and cannot urge it at the trial; the proper course is to object immediately, by application to the Court. See Holt's C. 552.

(b) Lovelock v. Chiveley,[5] Holt's C. 552.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxxii. 276. [2]Id. xxii. 257. [3]Id. xii. 124. [4]Id. xxiv. 350. [5]Id. iii. 185.

ticulars must be taken on the trial, after production and proof of the particulars (c) (1).

PARTIES (d).

Grounds of incompetency.

The rule which excludes a party from giving evidence in his own cause is not founded merely on the consideration of his interest; if it did, it would follow that a party might always be called by the adversary to give evidence against his own interest; the rule is partly, at least, founded on a principle of policy for the prevention of perjury (e) (2).

In a recent case, a plaintiff was by consent of the defendant allowed to (c) The plaintiff recovered a greater sum than he claimed by his particulars, and upon discussion, the Court of K. B. approved of the principle on which he recovered, and judgment was entered accordingly, no objection having been made on the score of excess, either at the trial or upon the argument, the Court refused to reduce the judgment to the sum claimed by the particulars. Bell v. Puller, 2 Taunt. 285; 12 East, 496, n.

(d) As to the joinder of parties in an indictment, see Crim. Plead. 2d edit. 33; and supra, tit. Accessories. As to compelling a disclosure of the residence of plaintiffs in a suit, see Worton v. Smith,[1] 6 Moore, 110. Redford v. Birley, MS.

(e) And yet either party may be put to his oath by a bill of discovery in equity, where he is quite as likely to commit perjury as if he were to be examined in a court of common law. It was formerly held (in equity) that though a plaintiff could not examine a co-defendant whom he had unnecessarily made a witness (Gibson v. Allen, 10 Mod. 19), yet one co-defendant might examine another. Ch. Pr. 411; Gil. Eq. Rep. 98. Where a court of equity directs a party to be examined as a witness, the objection is merely reserved qua competency as a party. Rogers v. Whittingham, 1 Swans. 39.

---

(1) [If the plaintiff neglects to deliver the particulars of his demand pursuant to an order, the defendant is entitled to move for judgment as in case of non pros. Henrot v. Durand, 14 Johns. 329.

An order for a bill of particulars should be that a bill be furnished by a certain day, or that the plaintiff show cause why he has not furnished it. Brewster v. Sackett, 1 Cow. 571. An order, staying proceedings absolutely until a bill of particulars be furnished, is irregular. But such order stays proceedings, until it is vacated. Roosevelt v. Gardiner, 2 Cow. 463.]

(2) {And the objection may be made by a party having an interest in the suit, though not a party on record, if called to testify against his interest in the subject-matter of the cause. Mauran v. Lamb, 7 Cow. 174; where the cestui que trust of the plaintiff on record was protected in her refusal to testify, when called upon by the defendant, the action being brought for her benefit.}

[In Willing & al. v. Consequa, 1 Peters, 307, it is said that the foundation of the rule, that a party to a suit cannot be a witness, is the interest which the party has in the event of the suit both as to cost and the subject in dispute; and when that interest is removed, the objection ceases to exist.

In Pennsylvania, the practice is established for a party to the suit to prove the service of notice, to produce papers, and to prove notice of taking depositions. Jordan v. Cooper & al. 3 Serg. & R. 575, 584. Kidd v. Riddle, 2 Yeates, 444. So in summary inquiries, such as questions of bail, the evidence of parties, though interested in the event of the suit, has always been received. Bank of Pennsylvania v. Hadfeg & al. 3 Yeates, 560. So, to prove that a material witness is unable to attend, in order to entitle his deposition to be read. Morris v. Flora, cited 2 Dallas, 117. 1 Yeates, 16. (Aliter, in North Carolina. Willis v. Brown, Martin, 52. Anon. v. Brown, 1 Hayw. 227.) So, to prove the death of a subscribing witness to a deed, in order to let in evidence of his hand-writing. Douglas's Lessee v. Sanderson, 2 Dallas, 116. 1 Yeates, 15. Levan's Lessee v. Hart, cited 1 Yeates, 16. {And in Virginia and New York, a party may be examined so as to lay a foundation for the reception of secondary evidence, by proving the loss of a deed or paper, and the proper search for it. Ben v. Peete, 2 Rand. 539. Givens v. Mans, 6 Munf. 301. Jackson v. Frier, 16 Johns. 193.}

Whether in an action against an innkeeper, for money lost in his house, the plaintiff is a competent witness to prove the contents of a bag delivered to be kept for him? Quære. Sneider v. Geiss, 1 Yeates, 34. Where the master of a vessel broke open a trunk which he had received on board in London to be brought to this country, and embezzled the contents—the owner of the goods was admitted by the Supreme Court of Maine, in an action of trover against the master, to testify to the particular contents of the trunk—he having otherwise proved the delivery thereof and its violation, and there being no other attainable evidence of its contents. Herman v. Drinkwater, 1 Greenl. 27.

In South Carolina, a party interested in a cause is not a competent witness to prove the loss of a paper material to the issue. Sims v. Sims, 2 Rep. Con. Ct. 225. As to other states, see Vol. I. 336; note (1).

In England the shop-book of a tradesman is not evidence of a debt without the oath of the clerk who made the entry. But in most of the States of the Union, the book proved by the suppletory oath of the party is admitted. In different States, this rule has different modifications, and is applied to very different kinds of charges which are entered in parties' books of account.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xvii. 17.

be examined upon oath as a witness in the cause, although he came to defeat the claim of a co-plaintiff (f).

It has been seen, that in general a voluntary admission made by a party to the cause is admissible evidence against him (g). This is true where the party making the admission is affected by it, in his own private and natural capacity; but in other cases the rule is frequently inapplicable.

Where a corporation has been a party, a corporator not disqualified on *798 *the score of interest seems at all times to have been considered to be competent (h). And a declaration or admission by a corporator is not admissible in evidence against the corporation (i). But it has been held that the declaration of a rated parishioner is admissible, although it be exceedingly weak evidence in a case of settlement (j).

Who are parties. Inhabitants of parishes, hundreds, &c.

The inhabitants of contending parishes in settlement cases are considered sub modo as parties, and on this ground it has been held that an inhabitant of the adverse parish is not compellable to give evidence (k). Still inhabitants, if not rated, were always considered to be competent (l). And upon indictments against the inhabitants of counties for the non-repair of bridges, and of parishes for non-repair of highways, the inhabitants, although parties, seem to have been considered as competent witnesses, except so far as they were rendered incompetent by their interest (m). The statute, making inhabitants of hundreds (n) competent, notwithstanding their interest, would have been nugatory if the objection might still have been taken that they were parties.

The respondents' overseer, producing an ancient certificate by the appellant parish, may be examined as to the contents (o). So may a corporator, producing corporation documents.

Party to the record.

It has already been seen that a party to a transaction is, in general, competent, unless he be either a party to the record, or be disqualified by his interest (p). It still remains to be considered how far the being a party to the record will in itself operate as a disqualification. In the first place, whenever there are several defendants in tort, and after the whole of the evidence has been gone through on the part of the plaintiff, he may be acquitted, and examined as a witness for the others (q). But a plaintiff can (f) Norden v. Williamson, 1 Taunt. 378; and Fenn d. Pewtris v. Granger, 3 Camp. 177. If, however, the general rule of exclusion be founded partly on the ground of policy, it seems to be clear in principle that the rule ought not to be infringed, even although a party be desirous of examining his adversary. The above case of Norden v. Williamson was so peculiarly circumstanced, that there could be no danger of perjury.

(g) Supra, tit. Admissions.

(h) Supra, 340. The men of one county, city, hundred, town, corporation or parish, are evidence in relation to the rights, privileges, immunities and affairs of such town, city, &c., if they are not concerned in private interests in relation thereunto, nor advantaged by such rights and privileges as they assert by their attestation. Gilb. L. Ev. 128, 2d ed.; Vent. 351.

(i) Mayor of London v. Long, 1 Camp. 22.

(j) R. v. Inhab. of Hardwicke, 11 East, 579; see stat. 54 Geo. 3, c. 170; and see R. v. Whitley, Lower, 1 M. & S. 636; and Vol. I. tit. Witness. But see the observations there as to the stat. 54 Geo. 3, c. 170.

(k) Ib. But now see the stat. 54 Geo. 3, c. 170, s. 9, vide supra, Vol. I. tit. Witness.

(l) Ibid.

(m) Supra, 530. Vol. I. tit. Witness.—Inhabitant. I am not aware of any instance where exemption from examination has been claimed in such a case by an inhabitant, on the ground that he was a party.

(n) Supra, Vol. I. tit. Witness. And see the stat. 8 Geo. 2, c. 16, s. 15, which recites that hundredors are incompetent by reason of interest.

(o) R. v. Netherthong, 2 M. & S. 337. (p) Supra, Vol. I. tit. Witness.

(q) He ought to be acquitted at the end of the plaintiff's case, per Alderson, J.; and it was so held by all the Judges on consultation, and ruled accordingly by Alderson, J., in Kendall v. Killshaw, Lancaster Sp. Ass. 1834. For otherwise, per Alderson, J., the party against whom no evidence given would be entitled to cross-examine the witnesses for defendant. Supra, Vol. I. tit. Witness. So upon an indictment. R. v. Bedder, 1 Sid. 237. R. v. The Mutineers of the Bounty, 1 East, 313; and see Dymoke's Case, Sav. 34; Godb. 326; Vin. Ab. Ev. I. 5, I. 12; Tr. P. P. 334, 7th edit. But a bankrupt who has pleaded his bankruptcy, is not, on proof of the bankruptcy, a competent witness for a co-defendant. Supra, tit. Bankrupt. Qu. whether, when an action is brought against a constable acting under a warrant, without joining the justice, the constable, in no case examine a co-defendant, although nothing be proved against him (r) on the trial.

*A defendant upon the record, who is no party to the issue tried, may usually be examined as a witness, if he be not disqualified by interest. Thus a co-defendant, in an action of tort, who has suffered judgment to go by default, is competent to prove that a co-defendant is not chargeable (s). But he cannot be called to prove a co-defendant guilty (t). So a defendant in ejectment who has let judgment go by default is a competent witness for either a defendant (u) or plaintiff (v). *799

A co-defendant in assumpsit, who pleads his bankruptcy, is not a competent witness for a co-defendant who has pleaded non assumpsit (w). But where, in such a case, the plaintiff had entered a nolle prosequi as to the bankrupt, the latter was admitted as a witness for the other defendants (x) (1).

Where upon an issue to try the validity of a will, a legatee appeared under a liberty "to attend the trial of such issue," it was held that his counsel might cross-examine witnesses, and suggest points of law, but had no right to address the jury or call witnesses (y).

The effect of a variance as to parties between the record and the evidence is considered under the respective titles of Assumpsit (z), Carriers (a), Case (b), Deed (c), Ejectment (d), Husband and Wife (e), Trespass, Trover, Variance. Variance.

In assumpsit, the joinder of too many, either plaintiffs or defendants, or on proof of the warrant, is not entitled immediately to his acquittal under the stat. 24 Geo. 2, c. 44, s. 6. Vide supra, tit. Justices.

(r) B. N. P. 285; 2 Camp. 333, n. The general rule is, that a party to the record cannot be examined; per Le Blanc, J. Ibid.; and per Abbott, L. C. J., in Blackett v. Weir,[1] 5 B. & C. 387. A plaintiff cannot call a co-defendant in assumpsit who has let judgment go by default. Ib. And it seems to be a general rule, that a plaintiff can in no case examine a co-defendant on the record; a rule founded, principally, on the ground of policy in preventing perjury, and a consideration of the hardship of calling on a party to charge himself. And this rule seems to be strictly observed as to plaintiffs, for the joining so many defendants is their own act, although, in many instances, it may be matter of necessity. The case of a defendant in ejectment who has let judgment go by default (Doe d. Harrop v. Green, 4 Esp. C. 198) is scarcely to be regarded as an exception; for there the proceeding is merely fictitious, and the name of the defendant does not appear upon the record. In the cases of Mant v. Mainwaring,[2] 2 Moore, 9, and Brown v. Brown, 4 Taunt. 752, it was held that a co-defendant in assumpsit, who had let judgment go by default, was not a competent witness for the plaintiff, for by means of his own testimony he would obtain contribution from the defendant who had pleaded. Vide tit. Witness.—Interest.

(s) Ward v. Haydon & another, 2 Esp. C. 552, cor. Ld. Kenyon, 2 Camp. 334, n.; cor. Wood, B. Lancaster, 1809. Where three out of four defendants suffered judgment by default, it was held that one of them might be subpœnaed to produce a deed. Colley v. Smith,[3] 4 Bing. N. C. 285; and 6 Dowl. 399.

(t) Chapman v. Graves, 2 Camp. 333, n. cor. Le Blanc, J. Lancaster, 1810. And see Barnard v. Dawson, 2 Camp. 333, n. cor. Lord Kenyon. But in the case of Worall v. Jones,[4] 7 Bing. 395, it was held that where a party to the record had let judgment go by default, consented to be examined, and had no interest in the cause, it was competent to the plaintiff to examine him. See R. v. Woburn, 10 East, 395.

(u) Vide tit. Witness—Interest. (v) Doe d. Harrop v. Green, 4 Esp. C. 198.

(w) Raven v. Dunning & another, 3 Esp. C. 25. See Emmett v. Bradley,[5] 1 Moore, 332. Emmett v. Butler,[6] 7 Taunt. 599. Peake's Ev. App. lxxxvii. And the Court would not in such a case permit a verdict to be recorded in favour of the bankrupt, for the purpose of enabling him to give evidence. Currie v. Child & others, 3 Camp. 283. [Moody v. King, 2 B. & C. 558.] Where one of several defendants sued as makers of a note, pleaded his bankruptcy and certificate, the Court permitted a verdict to be taken for him, and that he should be examined as a witness for the other defendants. Bate v. Russell,[7] 4 M. & M. 533. S. P. Afflalo v. Fourdrinier,[8] 6 Bing. 306. (x) M'Iver v. Humble, 16 East, 171.

(y) Wright v. Wright,[9] 4 C. & P. 389; and 7 Bing. 450, n.

(z) Supra, 59. (a) Supra, 285. (b) Supra, 298.

(c) Supra, 378. (d) Supra, 430. (e) Supra, 535.

(1) {In New Hampshire it has been decided, that in a foreign attachment the principal, having received from the plaintiff a release of all the debt due to the plaintiff, except so much as may be found in the hands of the trustee, is a competent witness for the plaintiff on the trial of the issue between the plaintiff and the trustee. Wallace v. Blanchard, 3 New Hamps. Rep. 395.}

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xi. 257. [2]Id. iv. 48. [3]Id. xxxiii. 355. [4]Id. xx. 177. [5]Id. iv. 397. [6]Id. ii. 232. [7]Id. xxii. 327. [8]Id. xix. 89. [9]Id. xix. 435.

the non-joinder of plaintiffs, is a ground of nonsuit (f), but the non-joinder
*800 *of other defendants must be pleaded in abatement (g). In actions of tort, on the other hand, although the joinder of too many plaintiffs be a ground of nonsuit (h), the non-joinder of plaintiffs must be pleaded in abatement (i); the joinder of two many defendants is not a ground of nonsuit, since some may be convicted and the rest acquitted (k); the same rule applies in penal actions (l); and the non-joinder of others as defendants in personal actions of tort (m) cannot be taken advantage of, even by plea in abatement. Where, however, the action is founded immediately upon a contract, and for a damage resulting from mere breach of contract, although in form it be an action of tort, the joinder of defendants, who did not contract, would, it seems, be a ground of nonsuit under the general issue (n); and in such case one of two joint contractors cannot maintain a separate action (o).

PARTNERS (p).

Identity of. WHERE two or more unite in partnership, for carrying on a particular trade, or other purpose, they become in point of law so identified with each other (q), that the acts and admissions of any one, with reference to the common object, are the acts and declarations of all, and are binding upon all. The very constitution of this relationship furnishes a presumption that each individual partner is an authorized agent for the rest, but this presumption has no operation where a party who would rely upon it has received express notice to the contrary, or where the transaction between himself and the individual partner is a fraud upon the rest.

*801 *The rules of evidence on this subject result from these general principles of law regarding partnerships, subject to this further consideration, that the acts, conduct and representations of parties, may be conclusive evidence of their partnership, in favour of strangers who are not cognizant of their

(f) Supra, 59—100. Joint-tenants must also join in actions ex contractu (Co. Litt. 180, b.; Bac. Abr. tit. Joint-tenants, K. 1 B. & P. 73); and so must parceners in all actions relating to their estate (R. T. Hardw. 398, 9). Tenants in common may either join or sever in actions on contracts relating to their estate, although they must sever in avowry for rent. Bac. Ab. tit. Joint-tenants and Tenants in Common, K.; 1 Lev. 109; Sir T. Raymond, 80.

(g) Ibid. (h) Supra, 297.

(i) Supra, 297. Joint-tenants and parceners must join in personal as well as real actions for injuries affecting their real property, or the non-joinder may be pleaded in abatement (Bac. Abr. tit. Joint-tenants, K. 2 Vin. Ab. 59; Vin. Ab. tit. Parceners). Tenants in common must sever in real actions, except in quare impedit; but they may join in personal actions for a joint damage to the estate (Bac. Ab. Joint-tenants, K.; 5 T. R. 247; Cro. Jac. 231; 2 Bl. 1077; Yelv. 161), or each may sue separately (5 T. R. 248; 2 Bl. R. 1077). The non-joinder of a part-owner of a chattel must be pleaded in abatement, although the omission appear on the declaration in trover. Addison v. Overend, 6 T. R. 766. Lease to A. and B., A. demises part to D., and gives receipts and a notice to quit in his own name. A. and B. (semble) cannot jointly maintain an action in the nature of waste. Steele v. Western,[1] 7 Moore, 29.

(k) Supra, 285, 297.

(l) Hardyman v. Whitaker & al., 2 East, 573, n. and see Barnard v. Gostling & al. 2 East, 569.

(m) 1 Will. Saund. 291, a.

(n) Weall v. King, 12 East, 452, [and Mr. Day's note.] The plaintiff declared for a deceit alleged to have been practised by means of a warranty made by two defendants upon a joint sale to him, by both, of sheep, their joint property, and it was held that the plaintiff could not recover upon proof of a contract of sale and warranty by one only as of his separate property. See also Max v. Roberts, 2 N. R. 454; where, in an action on the case, upon the delivery of goods to several joint ship-owners, to be carried to A. for freight, and alleging a deviation, it was held, that if the plaintiff failed to prove them all to be owners, he could not recover against the rest. It is otherwise where negligence is the test of the action, although a contract exist relating to the business in which the negligence occurred. See Govett v. Radnidge, 3 East, 62. Supra, 285.

(o) Hill v. Tucker, 1 Taunt. 7. Bail, jointly, employed an attorney to surrender the principal; and held that they could not maintain separate actions for neglecting to surrender the principal.

(p) See the Act for regulating the co-partnership of bankers; 7 G. 4, c. 46. See as to joint-stock companies, 1 & 2 Vict. c. 96, continued and extended by 3 & 4 Vict. c. 111.

(q) Partners are at law joint-tenants, part-owners are tenants in common, and one cannot sell the share of another. Abbott's L. S. 68. See Ouston v. Hebden, 1 Wils. 101.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xvii. 67.

private arrangements, but who must be guided by external indications, although as between themselves, they are not partners. The subject will be considered as it relates to—

Actions by several.

First. Where several plaintiffs bring an action of assumpsit, unless they rely upon a contract expressly made with all, they must prove a joint interest, arising by implication, as by evidence that they are partners, and jointly interested in the subject-matter; for if a contract be made by the joint agent of all, or by one partner in behalf of all, they may sue jointly upon it, although their names have not been expressly mentioned (r). It must be proved that all who sue were partners at the time of the contract: one who has been subsequently admitted into the firm cannot join, although it were stipulated that he should have a share in past transactions (s).

Proof of partnership (A).

The evidence of partnership usually consists in the oral testimony of clerks, or other agents or persons who know that the alleged partners have actually carried on business in partnership; it is unnecessary, even in criminal cases, to produce any deed or other agreement by which the co-partnership has been constituted.

Where several sue as indorsees of a bill, indorsed in blank, it is unnecessary to give any proof of their partnership or joint interest (t).

*Where A. and B. being partners, their agent, after an act of bankruptcy by A. (u) but before an act of bankruptcy by B., paid a sum of money on *802

(r) See tit. Assumpsit, and Vendor & Vendee. In Skinner v. Stocks,[1] 4 B. & A. 437, it was held that the action might be brought either in the name of the person with whom the contract was actually made, or in the names of the parties really interested. Where two brought an action as partners (with whom the defendant had formerly dealt), and at the trial it appeared that at the time of the contract a third person, who had formerly been a partner, and though he had withdrawn his name when the goods were supplied, still continued to receive part of the profits, but was not a party to the action, Lord Kenyon refused to nonsuit the plaintiffs. But where the action was brought in the names of several, who had agreed that Ross (one of them) should carry on the business in his own name, it was held that the defendant was entitled to set off a debt to Ross for business done on Ross's own account; and Lord Kenyon observed that the plaintiffs had subjected themselves to this by holding out false colours to the world, and permitting Ross to appear as the sole owner. Stacey & others v. Decy, 1 Esp. C. 468. Leveck v. Shafto, 2 Esp. C. 468. Where three firms agreed to purchase jointly certain goods, and the purchase was effected by one party, and the broker knew him only, held that all might join in the action for breach of contract. Cothay v. Fennell,[2] 10 B. & C. 671. All part-owners are partners in respect of the concerns of a ship, and all ought to join in an action for freight. Abbott on Shipp. 82. And if any injury be done to a ship and a part-owner dies, the action survives. Ib. 81.

(s) Wilsford v. Wood, 1 Esp. C. 182. Where a guaranty is given to one person for the benefit of all, all may sue. Garrett v. Handley,[3] 4 B. & C. 664.

(t) Rordasnz v. Leach,[4] 1 Starkie's C. 446; and supra, 216.

(u) The consequence of a dissolution of partnership between A. and B. by the bankruptcy of B. is that A.

(A) (Where a note or bill is payable to a firm, strict proof is required that the firm consists of the plaintiffs on the record. M'Gregor v. Cleveland, 5 Wend. 495. In an action against several as partners, although but one of the defendants be brought into court, if he appear and plead the general issue, the plaintiff is not entitled to recover unless he establish a joint liability of the defendants. Halliday v. M'Dougall, 20 Wend. 81. General reputation connected with corroborating circumstances, will be sufficient, at least prima facie to establish the fact that A. was the partner of B. and C. Whitney v. Sterling, 14 Johns. 215. Two persons signing a joint note is no evidence of a partnership between them. Hopkins v. Smith, 11 Johns. 161.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 478. [2]Id. xxi. 146. [3]Id. x. 438. [4]Id. ii. 463.

Assignees of partners.

the joint account to C., it was held that the assignees under a joint commission could not recover this money as had and received to the use of A. and B. before they became bankrupts, or as money received to their use, as assignees since the bankruptcy (x), even although A. knew of the bankruptcy of B.; for a solvent partner may dispose of the partnership effects in discharge of a partnership debt (y). So if A. in such case, after a secret act of bankruptcy by B. dispose of the partnership effects for a valuable consideration, and afterwards commit an act of bankruptcy, the assignees of both under a joint commission cannot maintain trover against the bonâ fide vendee (z).

Where an Act authorized all suits on the part of the company to be commenced and prosecuted in the name of the chairman, held that it did not extend to authorize a suit to be commenced by the chairman against a member for an account of monies received by him for shares which he was employed to sell, but that it was necessary to make the other members parties to the suit (a).

Satisfaction to one, &c.

It is a good defence to show that one of several plaintiffs cannot recover although he may have been guilty of fraud against the rest. Thus A., B. and C. cannot recover on a bill of exchange drawn by them, and accepted by the defendant, A. having (in fraud of his partners) engaged to provide for the acceptance when the bill should be due (b). A covenant by one partner not to sue is not a release of a partnership debt (c).

*803 *Where A. was a partner with B. in one firm, and also with C. in another, and the firm of A. and B. indorsed a bill to A. and C., and B. received securities from the drawer, on an undertaking by B. that the bill should be taken up and liquidated by the house of A. and B., it was held that A. being bound by the act of his partner, could not in conjunction with C., maintain an action on the bill against the acceptors (d). So if one partner be precluded by the illegality of his act from recovering in the particular transaction, his partners, although innocent, cannot recover (e).

and the assignees of B. become tenants in common of each individual article; 15 Ves. 229. The right is not to an individual proportion of each specific article, but to an account; the property is to be made the most of and divided; per Lord Eldon, in Crawshay v. Collins, Ib. See Fox v. Hanbury, Cowper, 449. Where one of several partners (the plaintiffs) drew a bill which the defendant accepted on the condition that such partner would provide for it when due, held that as he having failed in performing the condition could not have sued the defendant, his partner being bound by his acts could not maintain a joint action. Sparrow v. Chisman,[1] 9 B. & C. 241.

(x) Smith v. Goddard, 2 B. & P. 465.

(y) Harvey v. Crickett, B. R. Sittings at Serjeant's Inn before Mich. Term, 57 G. 3; Sel. N. P. 1060; i. e. to one who had no knowledge of the bankruptcy of the partner. If a creditor take the notes of a person after knowledge of the bankruptcy of one of several partners, though the rest are then solvent, he cannot set them off; per three Judges, K. B. Sittings before Mich. T. 1830; and see Biggs v. Fellows,[2] 8 B. & C. 402.

(z) Fox v. Hanbury, Cowp. 449.

(a) M'Mahon v. Upton, 2 Sim. 473. And see Long v. Young, 369.

(b) Richmond v. Heapy,[3] 1 Starkie's C. 102; where it was held by Lord Ellenborough that the parties could not sue out a commission of bankruptcy founded upon that debt (Johnson v. Peck, cor. Holroyd, J. Lancaster Summer Assizes, 1821). Sparrow v. Chisman, 9 B. & C. 241. Jacaud v. French, 12 East, 317. Bolton v. Poller, 1 B. & P. 539. So where A. being indebted to B. and C., allowed the amount on the settlement of a private account between himself and C., and the latter gave a receipt to A. for the amount, it was held that this was a good discharge (Henderson v. Smith, 2 Camp. 561). But where such a receipt was given after notice in the Gazette of the dissolution of partnership between B. and C. and that debts were to be paid to the former only, it was held to be fraudulent and void, Ibid., and afterwards by the Court of K. B. A., B. and C. being partners, and A. and D. being also partners, A. indorsed bills and paid money to A., B. and C., the property of A. and D., in payment of a debt due from A. to A., B. and C., and afterwards indorsed the bills in the names of A., B. and C. to a creditor of the firm; held, that though this was a fraud by A. on D., yet that A. and D. could not recover against B. and C.; and that after the bankruptcy of A. and D. their assignees were not in a better situation. Jones v. Yates,[4] 9 B. & C. 532.

(c) Walmesly v. Cooper, 3 P. & D. 149.

(d) Jacaud v. French, 12 East, 317. (e) 3 R. T. 454.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xviii. 366. [2]Id. xv. 248. [3]Id. ii. 356. [4]Id. xvii. 436.

Thus if goods be sold and packed by a partner living in Guernsey, for the purpose of being smuggled into this country, the parties who live in England, although ignorant of the transaction, cannot jointly with the other maintain an action for the goods, for the act of one partner is the act of all (f).

But where a party colludes with one partner of a firm to enable him to defraud the other partners, the one partner may maintain a joint action with the rest in respect of such tort (g). A joint-stock company, the shares of which may be increased to an unlimited extent, and be assigned or disposed of by deed or will to any persons at the discretion of the holders, are fraudulent and illegal (h).

The non-joinder of a co-contractor as plaintiff, is, in general, a ground of nonsuit. Action by one of several.

A surviving partner cannot recover in assumpsit without naming his deceased partner in the declaration (i), for there is a variance. But where money is owing to two partners, and after the death of one it is paid to a third person, the survivor may maintain an action for money had and received to his own use (k).

On an execution against one of several partners, the purchaser of his interest in partnership property becomes tenant in common with the rest (l).

The party with whom the contract has been expressly made may alone *sustain the action, although it turn out that another person, whose name *804 was not mentioned, is secretly interested (m).

Where business has been carried on in the names of several, one of them may still support an action of assumpsit, provided he expressly prove that the others were not in fact partners (n); and a party in whose name the (f) Biggs v. Lawrence, 3 T. R. 454. See Clugas v. Peneluna, 4 T. R. 466. Waymell v. Read, 5 T. R. 599.

(g) Longman v. Pole,[1] 1 Mood. & M. C. 223.

(h) Blundell v. Windsor, 8 Sim. 601.

(i) Jell v. Douglas,[2] 4 B. & A. 374. Richards v. Heather, 1 B. & A. 29. Webber v. Tivill, 2 Saund. by Serj. Will. 121, n. 1. Israel v. Simmons,[3] 2 Starkie's C. 356. Where a partnership is determined by death, it survives in many cases as to the legal title, but not as to the beneficial interest. Per Ld. Eldon, C., in Crawshay v. Collins, 15 Ves. 227. If a partner die, the debts and effects survive, but the survivor is a trustee in equity, 1 Ves. 248. Croft v. Pyke, 3 P. W. 182. Exparte Ruffini, 6 Ves. 126. 1 Madd. ch. 76. "Hereby it is manifest, that survivor holdeth place generally, as well between joint tenants of goods and chattels in possession or in right as joint tenants of inheritance." 1 Ins. 182. See the diversities between a naked trust and one joined to an estate or interest. Ib. 181. And between authorities created by parties and those created by law for the sake of justice. Ib.

The law will take notice of the Lex Mercatoria, as that there is no survivorship. Per Powell, J. Bellasis v. Hesler, Lord Ray. 281. See Jefferies v. Small, 1 Ves. 217.

(k) Smith v. Barrow, 2 T. R. 476.

(l) Chapman v. Coops, 3 B. & P. 289. And the purchaser takes subject to the rights of the other partner. Per Lord Mansfield, Fox v. Hanbury, Cowp. 449. 1 Salk. 392. West v. Skipp, cited Cowp. 449. Per Lord Hardwicke. If a creditor of one partner take out execution against the partnership effects he can only have the undivided share of his debtor, and must take it in the same manner the debtor himself had it, and subject to the rights of the other partner. The transfer merely gives a right to an account, each partner having an interest not in the whole, but in the surplus. Per Lord Eldon, in Dutton v. Morrison, 17 Ves. 201. And see S. P. 5 Madd. Chancery, 76; 1 Wightw. 50. See Tyler v. Duke of Leeds,[4] 2 Starkie's C. 218. The sheriff must sell the debtor's share and make the purchaser tenant in common. Holmes v. Mentze,[5] 4 Ad. & Ell. 127.

(m) Lloyd v. Archbowle, 2 Taunt. 324. Mawman v. Gillet, Ib. 325. And per Sir James Mansfield, Ibid.: "If you can find out a dormant partner you may make him pay, because he has had the benefit of your work; but a person with whom you have no privity of communication shall not sue you." But see Skinner v. Stocks,[6] 4 B. & A. 437. Supra, Leveck v. Shafto, 2 Esp. C. 468. Lucas v. De la Cour, 1 M. & S. 249.

(n) The banking trade was carried on in the joint names of the father and son, and the accounts were headed in their joint names in the banking books; and it was held that the father could not maintain a separate action without proof that the son (although proved to be a minor) had no share in the business.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxii. 297. [2]Id. vi. 451. [3]Id. iii. 380. [4]Id. iii. 322. [5]Id. xxxi. 42. [6]Id. vi. 478.

business has been carried on as a co-partner is competent to prove that in fact he was not a partner (o).

Against several.

Proof of partnership.

Secondly. In an action against several, upon a contract on which they are liable as partners, the proof of partnership usually consists in evidence that they have acted as partners in the particular (p) business. Less evidence is usually sufficient in this case than is requisite where partners sue as plaintiffs, for there they are cognizant of all the means by which the fact is capable of being proved: but where they are sued as defendants the plaintiff may not be able to ascertain the real connection between the parties; it is sufficient for him to show that they have acted as partners (q), and Teed v. Elworthy, 14 East, 210. Atkinson v. Laing,[1] 1 D. & R. 16. Parsons v. Crosby, 5 Esp. C. 199. Leveck v. Shafto, 2 Esp. C. 468.

Where the contract was originally entered into by A. for himself and partner, under the name of "H. and Sons," held that it was not necessary to join parties who were by a subsequent agreement to have a share in the contract. Havill v. Stephenson,[2] 4 C. & P. 469.

In an action for business done by the plaintiff, as an attorney, it being proved that his son's name was joined as a partner, in letters, and on the door of the office, but he swore that he was not in fact a partner; held that the plaintiff was not entitled to maintain the action alone if the son were believed, notwithstanding the evidence might be sufficient to render them jointly liable in an action for negligence. Kell v. Nainby,[3] 10 B. & C. 20.

A father and son, being joint farmers, the son died, and the father carried on business for benefit of himself and next of kin. Held that the property was well laid in the father and son's next of kin. R. v. Scott, Russ. & Ry. C. C. 13; and R. v. Gaby, Ib. 178. D. and C. were partners, C. died intestate, leaving a widow; the widow acted as partner. Stolen property was held to be well laid in D. and W.

(o) Glossop v. Colman,[4] 1 Starkie's C. 25.

(p) Partners in a particular concern are not liable in respect of transactions foreign to that concern unless they have held themselves out to others as partners in such transactions. See below, notes (r) and (s).

(q) Even although the partnership is by deed (Alderson v. Clay,[5] 1 Starkie's C. 406). To make one liable as partner, there must either be an actual contract to share in profit and loss, or he must have permitted his credit to be pledged by the use of his name as a partner (Hoare v. Dawes, Doug. 371). An agreement to share profits alone raises a liability, in point of law, to losses with respect to creditors (Hesketh v. Blanchard, 4 East, 146. Waugh v. Carver, 2 H. B. 247). Where a debtor and creditor agree to be jointly concerned in an adventure abroad, which is to be purchased by the debtor, and the returns are to be paid to the creditor in satisfaction of the debt, both are liable as partners to vendors from whom the debtor in consequence purchases goods abroad. Gouthwaite v. Duckworth, 12 East, 421. And see Waugh v. Carver, 2 H. B. 235, and Gardiner v. Childs,[6] 8 C. & P. 345. A. directs B., a broker, to buy goods, and it is agreed that B. shall be interested therein one-third, acting in the business free of commission, and the concern is afterwards treated as a joint one; it was held that B. had power to pawn the goods, there being no ground for imputing fraud or collusion. Reid v. Hollingshead,[7] 4 B. & C 867.—The communion of profit and loss is the true test of partnership. An agreement by several to take aliquot parts of a commodity to be purchased by A., where there is no agreement for a re-sale, does not make them partners (Coope v. Eyre, 1 H. B. 37). An agent whose wages are paid by a proportion of the profits, is not a partner (Meyer v. Sharpe,[8] 5 Taunt. 74). [Rice v. Austin, 17 Mass. R. 197.] If A. be paid by a portion of the profits, he is as to third persons a partner; but if he be paid by a sum in proportion to the profits, it is otherwise. Ex parte Hamper, 17 Ves. 404. Per Lord Eldon, Ex parte Rowlandson, 1 Rose, 91. Grace v. Smith, 2 Bl. 398. An agreement that A. shall make purchases for B., and in lieu of brokerage, have one-third of the profits arising from sales, and bear a proportion of the losses, makes him a partner as to third persons. Per Holroyd, J., Smith v. Watson,[9] 2 B. & C. 409. An agreement that A. for his labour shall share the profits made by B.'s vessel, constitutes them partners as to third persons; secus, of an agreement that he shall receive half the gross earnings. In the former case there is a communion of profit and loss; the latter is merely a mode of payment for labour. Dry v. Boswell, 1 Camp. 329. See Wish v. Small, Ib. 331. Benjamin v. Porteous, 2 H. B. 590. Mair v. Glennie, 4 M. & S. 240. Cheap v. Cramond,[10] 4 B. & A. 663. Wilkinson v. Frazier, 4 Esp. C. 182. R. v. Hartley, Russ. & Ry. C. C. L. 139. Joint proprietors of a coach, each of whom provides horses for his own stage, but who share the gross proceeds, are not, it seems, jointly liable for goods supplied for the horses (Barton v. Hanson, 2 Taunt. 49); but qu. whether the particular agreement inter se was not known. [See Wetmore v. Bakar, 9 John. R. 307.] Where A., B., C. and D. were partners in a coach concern, but A. provided coaches and horses at a certain allowance per mile, it was held that A. alone was liable for the repairs of the coach, to one who knew the agreement, although the names of all appeared on the coach. Hiard v. Bigg and another, per Holroyd, J., Winch. Sp. Ass. 1819, Mann. Ind. 220. But they are jointly liable to one who sends goods. Ibid. So for any damage done in the management of the coach. Ibid. And see Waland v. Elkins,[11] 1 Starkie's C. 272, and Green v. Beesley,[12] 2 Bing. N. C. 108. A. agreed to carry a mail from M. to N. at so much a mile, the money received for parcels to be equally divided, and losses borne equally; they were held to be partners. Ibid. Executors who continue the share of a deceased partner in trade, for the benefit of the deceased partner's infant child, are liable as

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xvi. 415. [2] Id. xix. 477. [3] Id. xxi. 17. [4] Id. ii. 279. [5] Id. ii. 445. [6] Id. xxxiv. 420. [7] Id. x. 460. [8] Id. i. 20. [9] Id. ix. 122. [10] Id. vi. 556. [11] Id. ii. 337. [12] Id. xxix. 275.

that by their *habit and course of dealing, conduct and declarations, they have induced those with whom they have dealt to consider them to be partners (r). Hence if a person has represented himself to be a partner, and has been trusted as such, he is bound by that representation, and it is no defence for him to show that he was not in fact a partner (s). One who partners. Wightman v. Townroe, 1 M. & S. 412. One of several joint proprietors of a ship, who assigns his interest to another, the register remaining joint as a collateral security, is liable for repairs. The amount or proportion of profit received is not material. R. v. Dodd, 9 East, 527.—It frequently happens that a partner in a firm may be considered a third person in transactions between the firm and a party with whom the firm deals (per Eyre, C. J., Bolton v. Puller, 1 B. & P. 546, 7). [Gill v. Kuhn, 6 Serg. & R. 333.] But in actions by the firm, the liability of any one partner as a defendant is a bar to the action. Supra, 241, and 802. The knowledge of participation in profits by one who seeks to charge the participator as a partner is not material. Ex parte Geller, 1 Rose, 297. See Vere v. Ashby,[1] 10 B. & C. 288.

(r) If it can be proved that the defendant has held himself out to be a partner, not "to the world," for that is a loose expression, but to the plaintiff himself, or under such circumstances of publicity as to satisfy a jury that the plaintiff knew of it, and believed him to be a partner, he is liable to the plaintiff on all transactions in which he engaged and gave credit to the defendant upon the faith of his being such partner. Per Parke, J., in Dickinson v. Valpy,[2] 10 B. & C. 140. To prove the liability of G. as the partner of S., evidence that a former partner with S. introduced G. to the witness as an in-coming partner, and that afterwards he (the witness) reported that G. and S. were partners, is admissible, although neither G. nor S. were present at the time when the witness so reported. Shott v. Strealfield, 1 Mo. & R. 8.

(s) As to the general principle, vide supra, 40. In an action against the defendant as a partner and shareholder in a joint-stock mining company, for goods supplied to the firm, it was held that it was necessary to prove either that she was in fact a partner, or that she had induced the plaintiff to suppose that she was a partner, and that it was insufficient to show by letters and conversations that the defendant had admitted herself to be a shareholder, or to show payment of money on account of shares. Vici v. Lady Anson,[3] 7 B. & C. 409. Where, in an action by the indorsee of a bill of exchange drawn and accepted by order of the directors of a mining company, it was proved that the company had entered into a contract for the purchase of mines, taken a counting-house in London, engaged clerks, and also an agent to reside in the country, and had worked some of the mines, and that the defendant had applied to the secretary of the company for shares, some of which had been appropriated to him, and that he had paid an instalment of 15*l.* per share, attended the counting-house of the company, and there signed some deed, and afterwards attended a general meeting of the shareholders, the Court were inclined to think that there was not sufficient evidence to show that the defendant had either actually become a partner, or held himself out to the world as such, and that at all events it was necessary to prove that the directors had authority to bind the members by drawing and accepting bills of exchange, of which there was no sufficient evidence. Dickinson v. Valpy,[2] 10 B. & C. 128. A prospectus was issued for a distillery company, with a capital of 600,000*l.*, and 12,000 shares, and to be conducted pursuant to the terms of a deed to be drawn up; all persons who did not execute the deed within eighty days after it was ready, were to forfeit all interest in the concern. No more than 7,500 were ever allotted, only 2,300 persons paid the first deposit, only 1,106 the second, and only sixty-five signed the deed; and the directors, after the time for paying the second instalment had elapsed, advertised that persons who had omitted to pay had forfeited their interest in the concern. Held, that an application for shares, and payment of the first deposit, did not constitute a partner one who had not otherwise interfered in the concern, and that the insertion of his name by the secretary of the company in a book containing a list of the subscribers, was not a holding himself out as a partner. Fox v. Clifton & others,[4] 6 Bing. 776. Where, in contemplation of forming a company for distilling whiskey, the following prospectus was issued in May, 1825: "The conditions upon which this establishment is formed, are, the concern will be divided into twenty shares of 100*l.* each, five of which to belong to A. B., the founder of the works, the other fifteen subscribers to pay in their subscriptions to Messrs. Moss & Co., bankers, Liverpool, in such proportions as may be called for: the concern to be under the management of a committee of three of the subscribers, to be chosen annually on the 10th of October; ten per cent. to be paid into the bank on or before the 1st of June next:" held, that this prospectus imported only that a company was to be formed, not that it was actually formed, and that a person who subscribed his name to this prospectus, and who was present at a meeting of subscribers when it was proposed to take certain premises for the purpose of carrying on the distillery, which were afterwards taken, and solicited others to become shareholders, but never paid his subscription, were not chargeable as a partner for goods supplied to the company. Bourne v. Freeth,[5] 9 B. & C. 632. But in Perring v. Hone,[6] 4 Bing. 28, where the plaintiff's name was entered in a book with those of several other subscribers to a projected joint-stock company, and he received scrip receipts, but sold them before the deed for the formation of the company was executed, and he was not a party to the deed, yet it was held that he was a partner, and that all who subscribed to the fund must be taken to have assented to the deed. In this case the Court seem to have considered that the plaintiff became a partner by being an original subscriber to the undertaking. And in Lawler v. Kershaw,[7] 1 M. & M. 93, it was held by Lord Tenterden, C. J., at Nisi Prius, that a party paying a deposit on shares in a trading company, and afterwards signing a deed of partnership, was to be considered as a partner from the time of the deposit. Evidence that A. B. had contributed to the funds of a building society, and had been present at a meeting of the society, and was a party to a resolution that cer-

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxi. 79. [2]Id. xxi. 41. [3]Id. xiv. 63. [4]Id. xix. 233. [5]Id. xvii. 460. [6]Id. xiii. 328. [7]Id. xxii. 261.

By one as manager, &c.

lends his name to *a firm, although he receives no part of the profits of the trade, is liable on *the engagements of the firm (t), to one who is ignorant *807 of the real fact (u).

In an action by one as manager of a district banking company, the return to the Stamp-office under the stat. 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, is not the only admissible evidence of his being one of the public officers; the fact may be proved aliunde (x).

Where bills drawn on A. and Co. are accepted by B. in the name of A. and Co., it is evidence against B. that he is a partner (y).

A party cannot be liable merely as a partner unless he was a partner at the time of the contract (z); and therefore although the acts and admissions of a party, made subsequently to a contract, may be used as evidence to show that he was a partner at the time of the contract, yet if it be clear that he was not then a partner, no subsequent admission will render him liable in point of law (a). Thus one who has been admitted into the firm is not responsible for goods previously sold and delivered, even although he acknowledge his liability, and accept a bill for the amount (b).

Admissions.

Although the declaration or admission of each individual member of a firm, that he is a partner, is evidence to charge himself, it is no evidence of the fact against any other party (c) (A).

tain houses should be built, was held to be sufficient to make him liable in an action for building those houses, without any proof that he had any actual interest in the houses, or in the land on which they were built. Braithwaite v. Schofield,[1] 9 B. & C. 401. By the rules of the company, upon the transfer of shares, the party transferring ceased to be a proprietor from the time the transfer was registered, and the person purchasing was not to be deemed a proprietor until he executed the deed: upon a plea, in an action against the company, that the promises, if any, were made jointly with one of the plaintiffs, a co-proprietor; there being evidence by the letters of such party that he was a share-holder, although there was no actual proof of his having executed the deed (it having been done under a power of attorney not produced), and there having been no transfer of his shares, it was held he had not relieved himself from his liability as a partner. Harvey v. Kay,[2] 9 B. & C. 356. An action was brought against two, for goods supplied to a mining company, originated in fraud, but of which the jury found the defendants to have been ignorant, they had never signed the partnership deed, and had transferred their scrip before the action brought, but both had attended a meeting of the company; it was held that they were liable. Ellis v. Schmœck,[3] 5 Bing. 521. The defendants consented to become directors of a proposed company, for which an Act was intended to be obtained, and they paid instalments on the number of shares necessary to qualify them as directors, and attended meetings, and the contract with the defendant for certain works was by tender sent in to the directors, in consequence of an advertisement to receive proposals; held, that having held themselves out or allowed themselves to be represented to the public as directors, and done no act to divest themselves of that character, they were liable. Doubleday v. Muskett,[4] 7 Bing. 110. And see Nockells v. Crossby,[5] 3 B. & C. 814. Cromford v. Lacy, 3 Y. & J. 80. Vere v. Ashby,[6] 10 B. & C. 288.

(t) Guidon v. Robson, 2 Camp. 302. The consent of the party is of course necessary. Newsom v. Coles, 2 Camp. 617; 2 H. Bl. 235. As by allowing his name to be exposed over a shop door, or to be used in invoices, bills of parcels, or advertisements. Fox v. Clifton,[7] 6 Bing. 794; 4 M. & P. 714.

(u) Alderson v. Pope, 1 Camp. 404, n. See Teed v. Elworthy, 14 East, 214. And see Kell v. Nainby,[8] 10 B. & C. 21. De Berkom v. Smith, 1 Esp. C. 29. Ridgway v. Broadhurst, 1 C. M & R. 415.

(x) Edwards v. Buchanan,[9] 3 B. & Ad. 788. It is sufficient in such case, if in the return the party be described as A. B. of, &c. esq., a public officer of the co-partnership. The right to sue is not defeated by the omission of the places of abode of one or more partners in the return. Armitage v. Hornen,[9] 3 B. & Ad. 793.

(y) Spencer v. Billing, 3 Camp. 312. And it was said that it may be shown that bills have been invariably accepted in this way, without producing them, per Lord Ellenborough, C. J.

(z) See the cases cited below, 810, note (s). There is no distinction between trading and mining companies; and where a party takes shares in a concern, on a prospectus holding out that a certain capital is to be raised for carrying it on, he will not be liable as a partner unless the terms of the prospectus be fulfilled, or it be shown that he knows and acquiesces in the directors carrying it on with a less capital; where the jury negatived such knowledge or acquiescence, and found the defendant not liable, the Court held the finding right. Pitchford v. Davis, 5 M. & W. 2.

(a) Saville v. Robertson, 4 T. R. 720. (b) Ibid. But he would be liable on the bill.

(c) Vide supra, 31.

(A) (The declarations of one of several partners cannot be given in evidence to prove a partnership, they

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xvii. 404. [2]Id. xvii. 391. [3]Id. xv. 526. [4]Id. xx. 67. [5]Id. x. 237. [6]Id. xxi. 79. [7]Id. xix. 233. [8]Id. xxi. 17. [9]Id. xxiii. 187.

An affidavit for the registry of a ship, made by A., stating that A. and B. are the owners, is not evidence of the fact against B. (d).

Where two of three defendants in assumpsit were outlawed, it was held that a letter written by the third, who had pleaded non-assumpsit, in which he admitted the partnership, was evidence of the fact (e).

An admission by A., in the discussion of a particular transaction, that he is a partner with B., is not evidence to bind him as a partner in any other matter unconnected with the particular transaction (f). But if A. publicly *and generally represent himself to be a partner of B. it will be evidence *808 to prove his liability as a partner on a contract unconnected with the real object of the partnership (g).

Where A. made an entry at the Excise-office of himself and B. as joint dealers in beer, according to the statute, it was held that this was not conclusive evidence of the partnership, in an action by a private person against A. (h); but with respect to the Crown the entry would have been conclusive against A. (i).

The record of an issue out of the Exchequer, to try the fact of the partnership of A. and B. has been admitted as evidence in an action against A. and B. to charge them as partners (k).

When the fact that several parties are partners has once been established, the act or declaration of the one relating to the subject-matter of the partnership is evidence against the rest; although the partner whose acts or declarations so given in evidence be no party to the suit (l), or although the admission be made after a dissolution of the co-partnership (m) (A).

(d) Tinkler v. Walpole, 14 East, 226. M'Iver v. Humble, 16 East, 169. Flower v. Young, 3 Camp. 240. Smith v. Fuge, 3 Camp. 456. Ditchburn v. Spracklin, 5 Esp. c. 31 [and Mr. Day's note]. An unsigned entry in the office for licensing stage-coaches, is not evidence that the persons named in the license are the owners (Strother v. Willan, 4 Camp. 24). The entry of a cart in the books of a tax-gatherer, as the joint property of A. and B., is not evidence against them, without proof that they authorized the entry. Weaver v. Prentice and another, 1 Esp. C. 369.

(e) Sangster v. Mazaredo,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 161.

(f) De Berkom v. Smith, 1 Esp. C. 29, cor. Lord Kenyon, C. J. Where two defendants, who were sued as acceptors, were joint agents of a regiment, but not otherwise connected, and in the habit of accepting bills by a clerk, it was held to be no defence that the bill was accepted by one for his own benefit, and that this might have been known by inquiry of the clerk, if there were no proof of fraud, or of the holders being cognisant of the circumstances. Sanderson v. Brooksbank,[2] 4 C. & P. 286. In an action against several for breach of contract for building an engine, made by one in the name of B. & Co. he, being asked what other persons constituted the firm, endorsed the names of the other defendants, and one of them being asked whether the endorsement by B. was correct, answered that it was; and it appeared also that he was occasionally present at the factory, inquiring how the engine was going on, but it being proved in fact, that he had but a limited interest in the concern; it was held that it was a question for the jury whether his admission and acts were referable to such limited interest or not, and the jury having found that he was not a partner, the Court refused a new trial. Ridgway v. Philip, 1 C. M. & R. 415; 5 Tyr. 131.

(g) Ibid. (h) Ellis v. Watson and others,[3] 2 Starkie's C. 453. (i) Ibid.

(k) Whatley v. Menheim & Levy, 2 Esp. C. 608. Lord Kenyon thought it was conclusive evidence, but left the fact to the jury. The proceedings in the Exchequer suit would clearly be evidence against the party who alleged the partnership; such evidence would operate by way of admission. But qu. how far the record would be evidence of the fact as against the defendant, who denied the partnership; as to him, it should seem that the record would, in principle, have no more operation than it would have had in case he had contested the fact of partnership with a stranger. Vide supra, Vol. I. tit. JUDGMENT. See Studdy v. Sanders,[4] 2 D. & R. 347.

(l) Supra, 30; and Thwaites v. Richardson, Peake's C. 16. Whitcomb v. Whiting, Doug. 652. Such an admission, in order to take the case out of the Statute of Limitations, ought to be clear and unequivocal. Per Lord Ellenborough, Holme v. Green,[5] 1 Starkie's C. 488.

(m) Wood v. Braddick, 1 Taunt. 104.

are testimony only against the party making them. M'Pherson v. Rathbone, 7 Wend. 216. Nelson v. Lloyd, 9 Watts, 22. Corps v. Robinson, 2 Wash. C. C. R. 388. But if the defendant first gives in evidence their declarations to disprove a partnership, then the plaintiff may also give the same kind of evidence to produce a different result. Nelson v. Lloyd, supra.)

(A) (In cases of partnership, the confession of one partner in relation to a partnership concern is, in gene-

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 338. [2] Id. xix. 388. [3] Id. iii. 427. [4] Id. xvi. 93. [5] Id. ii. 479.

The principles upon which the admissibility of such evidence depends, and some of the decisions on the subject, have already been referred to (n).

*809 *It is sufficient to prove that a co-defendant in assumpsit is a dormant partner with the rest (o); it is at the option of the plaintiff to join him as

(n) The question to what extent the acts of one partner are binding upon another, with reference to the subject-matter of the co-partnership, is one of law. One partner may bind another partner in trade by drawing or accepting bills of exchange; supra, 205; such an authority is inferred from the ordinary course of partnership dealings (Rooth v. Janney, 7 Price, 193), unless the latter give express notice that he will not be bound, or unless covin be practised between the partner and the taker of the bill (Ibid). An acceptance by one partner in the name of the firm for his own debt, after a secret act of bankruptcy, is binding against the firm in favour of an innocent indorsee. Lacy v. Woolcot,[1] 2 D. & R. 460. But a partner cannot, by drawing bills in his own name, and procuring them to be discounted, render a co-partner liable, although the produce was actually carried to the partnership account; Emly v. Lye, 15 East, 6; and although the discount was procured by an agent who had procured bills drawn by the firm to be discounted by the same banker. Ibid. Secus, where the firm trade in the name in which the bill is drawn. South Carolina Bank v. Teague, 9 B. & C. 427. And where A. and B. agreed to take a farm from C. and pay him for certain articles by bills at three months, and C. afterwards, without the knowledge of A., took bills from B. payable at six and twelve months, accepted by himself in his own and A.'s names, it was held that as that was done without the assent of A., C. would not recover on the bills. Greenslade v. Dower,[2] 7 B. & C. 635. One partner has not authority to bind another by deed (Harrison v. Jackson, 7 T. R. 207), [Green v. Beals, 2 Caines R. 254]; {Gerard v. Busse, 1 Dull. 119; Clement v. Brush, 3 John. Ca. 180}; or by a guaranty of the debt of a third person (Duncan v. Lowndes, 3 Camp. 478. {Sutton v. Irwine, 12 Serg. & R. 13; New York F. Ins. Co. v. Bennett, 5 Conn. R. 575. Foot v. Salin, 19 John. R. 154.} A part-owner of a ship has no authority to insure on account of the rest, although a partner has (Hooper v. Lusby, 4 Camp. 66). One partner in a contract with Government, has no authority to pledge goods consigned to him by another partner, for the purpose of performing the contract (Smith v. Burridge, 4 Taunt. 684). One partner possesses no general authority under a power of attorney, granted to a co-partner. Edminston v. Wright, 1 Camp. 88. See Warner v. Hargrave, 2 Roll. R. 393; 2 Ch. C. 202. Parker v. Kett, 1 Salk. 95. The implied authority of one partner to bind another is generally limited to such facts as are in their nature essential to the general object of the partnership; as the borrowing of money for the defraying of the expenses of a partner in transacting the business of the house (Rothwell v. Humphreys, 1 Esp. C. 406), or the purchasing of goods, although one partner fraudulently converts them to his own use, unless the seller be privy to the fraud. (Bond v. Gibson, 1 Camp. 185). [See Marsh v. Gold, 2 Pick. 285.] One of several partners may pledge the goods, if it be done without fraud or collusion on the part of the partner. Reid v. Hollingshead,[3] 4 B. & C. 867. Tupper v. Haythorn, Gow. 135. Ex parte Gillow, Rose, 205. A partnership cannot acquire property by the fraud of one of the partners. Reilly v. Wilson,[4] 1 R. & M. C. 178. The knowledge of one that a trader is insolvent, affects all. One partner cannot bind another by submission to arbitration. Adams v. Bankart, 1 C. M. & R. 681. S. P. Boyd v. Emerson, 4 N. & M. 106,[5] 2 Ad. & Ell. 184. Where one of three partners, in two Scotch firms, all being partners in English firms, executed a trust-deed in favour of Scotch creditors; held not to be an act within the authority of a partner according to the English law, and that the general assignees of all who had become bankrupt could not homologate it. Douglas v. Brown, 1 Dow. & C. 71.

(o) Swann v. Heald, 7 East, 209. Grellier v. Neald, Peake's C. 146. And per Sir J. Mansfield, in Lloyd v. Archbowle, 2 Taunt. 324. A sleeping partner is liable, or he could receive usurious interest without risk. Per Lord Mansfield, in Hoare v. Dawes, Doug. 356. Where a partner by an acceptance pledges the partnership name, of whomsoever it may consist, and whether the partner be named or not, and whether known or secret partners, the partnership will be bound, unless the title of the party seeking to charge them can be impeached; but where the partnership acceptance was only in part pledged to satisfy the private debt of such partner, with the knowledge of the taker as to such part only being his separate debt; held, that the secret partner was liable as to so much as was not, to the knowledge of the taker, applied in fraud of the partnership. Wintle v. Crowther, 1 Cr. & J. 316, and 1 Tyrw. 216. Although a partner going abroad to establish a branch concern, exceeds his powers in respect of the extent of his dealings, indorsing bills for the purpose of such dealings in his own name, the firm in England subsequently sanctioning the transactions which were for the benefit of the firm, are bound as indorsees. South Carolina Bank v. Case,[6] 8 B. & C. 427. Ashley, Rowland & Shaw being partners, but under an agreement that the name of Shaw should not appear, a bill was drawn, addressed to the firm of Ashley & Co., and was accepted by Rowland in the name of Ashley & Rowland; no fraud being found, and a consideration having been given for the bill by the payee to the drawer, it was held that the action was maintainable, notwithstanding the variance between the names of those to whom the bill was addressed and those by which it was accepted. Lloyd v. Ashley,[7] 2 B. & Ad. 23.

---

ral, admissible in an action against the other. Such a confession is admissible to take a case out of the Statute of Limitations, and to establish not merely the amount but the existence of a joint demand even when made after the dissolution of the partnership. Corps v. Robinson, 2 Wash. C. C. R. 338. Contra, Baker v. Stackpoole, 9 Cow. 423—as to admissions made after a dissolution of the firm.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xvi. 101. [2]Id. xiv. 106. [3]Id. x. 460. [4]Id. xxi. 409. [5]Id. xxix. 68. [6]Id. xv. 256. [7]Id. xxii. 17.

a defendant (p). But the liability of a dormant partner who withdraws, though recently, ceases in respect of future transactions, as regards those who were ignorant of the partnership (q).

But it is not sufficient to show that one of the defendants became a partner *after the time of the contract (r), or that he was by agreement afterwards permitted to share in the adventure (s). Defence. *810

As the authority of one partner to bind another is merely presumptive (t), the presumption may be rebutted by evidence that the partner gave express notice to the plaintiff that he would not be responsible for the acts of another. Thus if A., being partner with B., give notice to a creditor to deliver no goods to B. without A.'s concurrence, the creditor cannot recover for goods delivered to B. without proof that A. adopted the sale, or derived benefit from the goods (u) (1).

Again, if one partner give notice that he will not be responsible for bills drawn in the name of the firm, he will not be liable to a party who takes such bills after the notice, even although the latter has given a valuable consideration for them (x).

The presumption may also be rebutted by proof of fraud or covin between a co-partner and another (y). As by evidence that the bill was given by two of three partners in payment of a debt due from the two previous to their partnership with the third (z). Fraud.

(p) Lloyd v. Archbowle, 2 Taunt. 324. Ruppell v. Roberts,[1] 4 N. & M. 31. The rule, however, does not extend to an express written contract, formally made between the parties. Beckham v. Knight,[2] 4 Bing. N. C. 243. For an express contract excludes mere presumption.

(q) Carter v. Wholley,[3] 1 B. & Ad. 11; Heath v. Sansom,[4] 4 B. & Ad. 172; and see Keating v. Marsh, 1 Mont. & Ayr. 570.

(r) The defendant on the 24th June agreed that he was to be considered a partner with A. and B. from the 18th of May previously, but that his name should not appear, and he continued to be a partner until the 21st of September following. The plaintiffs, who before and after the agreement had been the bankers of the firm, discounted one bill for them on the 21st of May, and two others on the 13th July, and placed the amount to the partnership account, but were ignorant of the defendant being a partner until the winding up of the account; held, that the defendant was not liable on the first, when he was not in fact a partner, nor his credit pledged, but that he was for the latter. Vere v. Ashby,[5] 10 B. & C. 288. But where two parties agree to enter into partnership by a deed to be executed on a day stated, but which was in fact executed on a later day, it was held that one was bound by a contract entered into by the other during the interval between the two days. Batly v. Lewis, 1 M. & S. 155; 1 Scott, N. S. 143. Negotiations take place with a view to the defendant's taking an interest in a building speculation, and buildings are erected which are to be valued; the defendant afterwards expressly contracts to become a partner from the date; the partnership being prospective only, the defendant is liable only from the date. Howell v. Brodie, 6 Bing. N. C. 44.

(s) Young v. Hunter, 4 Taunt. 582. And see Lloyd v. Archbowle, 2 Taunt. 321; Mawman v. Gillett, 4 Taunt. 325; supra, 808.

(t) Rooth v. Janney & Quin, 7 Price, 193. Note, the action there was against the firm on a bill accepted by Quin, who had let judgment go by default; the defence by the other defendant Janney was, that the plaintiff had received previous notice of the dissolution of partnership; and the Court of Exchequer held that an answer in equity by Quin, to a bill filed by Janney, was not admissible evidence against Janney to show a continuance of the partnership; sed qu. et vide Grant v. Jackson, Peake's C. 268. Wood v. Braddick, 1 Taunt. 104.

(u) Willis v. Dyson,[6] 1 Starkie's C. 164.

(x) Lord Galway v. Matthew, 10 East, 264. Supra, 205.

(y) Supra, 205.

(z) Shireff v. Wilks, 1 East, 48. It has been said that the mere single circumstance that the bill has been given in discharge of the separate debt of one partner is not in itself sufficient to raise a presumption of fraud, without some proof that it was without the assent of the rest. Ridley v. Taylor, 13 East, 175. There the bill was drawn for a larger amount than the particular debt, and it was known to the separate creditor that the indorsement was made by the hand of the partner so indebted to him, and direct evidence might have been given of fraud and covin, if any had existed (2). In the case of Arden v. Sharp & Gilson,

(1) {If money be lent to one of two partners, who says he borrows it for the firm, and he misapply it, and there be proof that the plaintiff lent it under circumstances of negligence, and out of the ordinary course of business, he cannot recover against the other partner. Lloyd et al v. Freshfield et al. 2 Car. & Paine, 325.}

(2) {See however Chazourne v. Edwards, 3 Pick. 5.}

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxx. 370. [2]Id. xxxiii. 342. [3]Id. xx. 333. [4]Id. xxiv. 44. [5]Id. xxi. 79. [6]Id. ii. 339.

*But where two firms carry on trade under the same name, one partner being common to both, the members of one firm will be liable on a bill drawn, accepted, or indorsed in the name common to both, although this has been done for the use and benefit of the other firm (a). Yet here the claim may, it should seem, be rebutted by evidence of fraud and covin between the partners in the firm for whose benefit the bill is actually used, and the taker.

A partner having obtained a transfer of stock by a forged power of attorney in the name of a customer, the proceeds of which were paid into the partnership account, but afterwards appropriated by him, it was held, that as the other partners might have known the fact had they used due diligence, they were liable at law for money had and received to the use of the customer (b).

Where a partner of a firm called the N. and S. W. Coal Co. made a note in the name of the N. Coal Co., payable at a bank where the partnership had no account, it was held to be a question for the jury to say whether it was made with the authority of the firm (c).

Dissolution. Where the joint liability results not from a contract expressly made with all the defendants, but from the fact of their partnership, it is competent to the defendant to prove a dissolution (d) of the co-partnership previous to 2 Esp. C. 524, the plaintiff discounted a bill brought by Gilson, who desired that the business might be kept secret from his partner; and Lord Kenyon held that the action would not lie. And in Wells v. Masterman, 3 Esp. C. 171, Lord Kenyon said, that if a man have dealings with one partner only, and he draw a bill on the partnership on account of those dealings, he is guilty of fraud. Where A., B. and C. carried on the cotton trade under the firm of A. and B. (C. not being known to the world as a partner), and A. and B. traded under the same firm as grocers, and a bill given to them in the cotton business was indorsed in the name of the firm common to both partnerships, and given in payment by A. and B. for goods received in the grocery business, it was held that C. was liable to pay the bill to the holders, although the indorsement was unknown to C., of whom the indorsee had no knowledge at the time of the indorsement. Swann v. Heald, 7 East, 209.—Where one partner clandestinely drew and accepted a bill in the name of the firm, partly to discharge a debt due from the partnership, and partly to discharge his own private debt, it was held that the payee could recover no more than the debt due from the firm, although money had been paid into court on the count on the bill. Barber v. Backhouse, Peake's C. 61. See also Green v. Deakin,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 347.

(a) Baker v. Charlton, Peake's C. 80. Swann v. Heald, 7 East, 209, and supra, n. (z). Although one be but a dormant partner. Ibid. But where S. being indebted to a firm in which he was partner, gave a note in the name of another firm to which he also belonged, in discharge of his individual debt, the payees indorsed it over, and the indorsees sued the parties who appeared to be makers: held, that this note was made in fraud of S.'s partners in the second firm, and could not be enforced against them by the payees, and that at least under these circumstances of suspicion, the indorsee could not recover without proving that he took the note for value, though no notice had been given him to prove the consideration. Heath v. Sansom,[2] 2 B. & Ad. 291.

(b) Keating v. Marsh, 1 Mont. & Ayr. 570.

(c) Faith v. Richmond, 3 P. & D. 187.

(d) The authority of one partner to bind another in respect of partnership property ceases on the dissolution of the partnership. The moment the partnership ceases, the partners become distinct persons; they are tenants in common of the partnership property undisposed of, from that period: and if they send any securities which did belong to the partnership into the world, after such dissolution, all must join in doing so. Per Ld. Kenyon, in Abel v. Sutton, 3 Esp. C. 110. Where, on the dissolution of partnership between A. and B., the latter was entrusted with the settlement of the affairs, it was held that he could not indorse, in the name of the firm, a security, which was part of the joint effects (Abel v. Sutton, 3 Esp. C. 108, cor. Lord Kenyon. Kilgour v. Finlayson, 1 H. B. 155); and qu. whether A. would have been liable on the indorsement, although made during the partnership, if not negotiated until after the dissolution. See Kilgour v. Finlayson, 1 H. B. 155.—Where A., a partner with B. and C., drew a blank bill in the name of the partnership firm, payable to their order, and delivered it to their clerk to be used according to exigency, and A. died, and B. and C. assumed a new firm, and the clerk, inserting a date previous to the death of A., circulated the bill, it was held that B. and C. were liable to a bona fide holder, although they had received no value for the bill. Usher v. Dauncey & others, 4 Camp. 97; and the Court of K. B. refused a new trial. [See Putnam v. Sullivan, 4 Mass. R. 45.] One who allows his name to be used after a dissolution of partnership, is liable on a bill drawn in the name of the firm after the holder knew the dissolution. Brown v. Leonard,[3] 2 Ch. 120. But a bill drawn after an actual dissolution, in the name of the firm, but dated previously to the dissolution, does not bind a former partner if the holder had notice of the dissolution. Wright v. Pulham,[3] 2 Ch. 120.—Where A.,

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 377. [2] Id. xxii. 78. [3] Id. xviii. 270.

*the contract; this, however, will not be in itself sufficient where the defendants have openly acted as partners, unless notice to the plaintiffs of the dissolution be also proved. It is sufficient if the plaintiff in the first instance prove a partnership at a time anterior to the contract; when that is once established, a continuance of the partnership is to be presumed, until a dissolution be proved, and proof of a dissolution will still be insufficient unless reasonable proof be given of notice of the fact to the plaintiff; for although the partnership may in fact have been dissolved, yet if the parties do not announce it, they by their silence induce strangers to trust to the joint credit of the firm as before.

Where a minute of an agreement between partners to dissolve the partnership, made in order to be advertised in the Gazette, and signed by the parties, and attested, is produced in evidence to prove the dissolution, an agreement stamp is necessary (e).

Where express notice has been given of the dissolution of the partnership to those with whom the firm have had any dealings (a measure which in prudence ought never to be neglected), the notice must of course be proved in the usual way (f). Such notice may also be proved by means of an advertisement in the Gazette, or in a public newspaper; but a newspaper containing such a notice cannot be read in evidence without previous proof either that the plaintiff read an impression of the same paper, or at least that he was in the general habit of reading that paper (g). And notice in Notice (A).

B. and C., being partners, ordered goods from abroad, and afterwards dissolved partnership, and assigned their property to trustees for the benefit of creditors, and A. and B. acted as agents to settle the affairs of the firm, and the goods arrived, and were delivered to A. and B., in an action against A., B. and C. for the freight, it was held that C. was not liable. Pinder v. Wilks,[1] 1 Marsh. 248. Where, after dissolution of a partnership, the defendant accept a bill drawn by one only, it is no defence that by the deed of dissolution it was stipulated that the other partner should receive all debts due to the firm. King v. Smith,[2] 4 C. & P. 108. After a partnership has been dissolved, one partner cannot bind the other to pay costs as between attorney and client; and a cognovit, signed by one in an action against both, was therefore set aside. Rathbone v. Drakeford,[3] 6 Bing. 375. A partnership firm enter into a joint speculation with the plaintiff and another; the general dissolution of the partnership of the former does not put an end to the partnership in the joint speculation with the latter, nor relieve one partner from the acts of his co-partner in the joint speculation, after the general dissolution. Ault v. Goodrich, 4 Russ. 430.

Where a bill was drawn upon partners by the name of the P. & M. Co., and accepted by procuration for the company, it appearing that one of the defendants, originally a partner, had withdrawn from the concern before the acceptance given; held, that the defendant not having represented himself to the plaintiff, nor ever appeared publicly as a partner, nor had the plaintiff ever dealt with him as such, no notice of his withdrawing himself was necessary. Carter v. Whalley,[4] 1 B. & Ad. 11. A notice of dissolution, signed by a partner, is evidence against him of a legal dissolution, though the partnership be created by deed. Doe d. Waithman v. Miles,[5] 1 Starkie's C. 181. Where the concern is entirely put an end to, and nothing left but to get in the debts and settle the credits, one partner cannot pledge the credit of the others; but where a retiring partner gave a general authority to the one who was to wind up the concern to do what he thought proper with the existing securities of the firm; held, that the latter might endorse bills in the partnership name, and it was not necessary that such authority should be by deed or writing. Smith v. Winter, 4 M. & W. 454.

(e) May v. Smith, 1 Esp. C. 283.

(f) Supra, tit. Notice. Where printed circular letters have been sent, or duplicates made out, it would be sufficient to produce and prove a duplicate original; but it might still be proper to give notice to produce the original. Supra, tit. Notice.

(g) Jenkins v. Blizard & another,[6] 1 Starkie's C. 418.

(A) (General notice in a newspaper of the dissolution of the partnership is sufficient as to all persons who have had no previous dealings with the firm. But as to those with whom the firm has dealt such constructive notice is not enough. Actual notice must be shown, otherwise as to these the act of one of the former firm in the partnership name will bind all the former partners. Graves v. Merry, 6 Cow. 701. And the fact that sufficient time to give a public notice had not elapsed between the dissolution of a firm and the subsequent making of a note by one of the late partners in the name of the firm, will not excuse the partners from their liability to pay such note in the hands of a bona fide holder. Bristol v. Sprague, 8 Wend. 423.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. i. 208. [2]Id. xix. 299. [3]Id. xix. 105. [4]Id. xx. 333. [5]Id. ii. 347. [6]Id. ii. 451.

*the Gazette, if admissible at all, is very weak evidence, if it be not supported by some evidence to show that the plaintiff saw the Gazette (h).

There seems indeed to be little if any difference between a notice in the Gazette and a notice in any other newspaper, with respect to contracts of partnership, and other matters which are not of a public and official nature (i).

Proof of notice is still requisite, although the plaintiff had no dealings with the partners previous to the actual dissolution of partnership (k). But it seems that if notice be given to all the parties with whom the partners have dealt, and be also advertised in the Gazette, it will be presumptive evidence of notice against one who had no previous dealings with the firm (l).

Where notice of dissolution has been published in the Gazette, and has been given to the proper parties, the retiring partners are not liable on a contract subsequently made by one of the former firm, although he carries on business in the name of the former firm, unless it can be proved that they either interfered in the business subsequently to the dissolution, or authorized the use of their names (m), although the plaintiff was in fact ignorant of the dissolution.

The making an alteration in the description of the partners of a firm of bankers in their printed cheques, is notice to customers, who have used the new cheques (n).

Evidence of the general notoriety of the fact of dissolution is not sufficient where no express notice has been given, and no advertisement has been published in the Gazette (o).

An infant partner must, on attaining his age, having continued to be a partner up to that time, give notice, in order to relieve him from future liability (p).

In the case of a mere secret or dormant partner, it is sufficient to prove an actual dissolution previous to the contract in question, for his liability depends upon the mere fact of partnership, and no credit has been given to him personally as a supposed member of the firm (q). But if it appeared that the acting partner had stated the existence of the partnership to one dealing with the firm, notice of the dissolution would be requisite (r).

Where it appeared that the plaintiff knew that the defendants intended to dissolve their partnership, and that they were actually carrying that intention into execution, it was held to be incumbent on the plaintiff, who *814 *relied upon a subsequent contract, to show that their intention had been abandoned (s).

(h) Godfrey v. Macauley, Peake's C. 155, n. Semble, that notice in the Gazette is notice to all the world. Wright v. Pulham,[1] 2 Ch. 120.

(i) Infra, note (l).

(k) Parkin v. Carruthers, 3 Esp. C. 248. There the retiring partner allowed his name to continue in the firm. Graham v. Thompson, Peake's C. 42. Graham v. Hope, Peake's C. 154.

(l) See Newsome v. Coles and others, 2 Camp. 617. Godfrey v. Turnbull, 1 Esp. C. 371; where an advertisement in the Gazette is said to have been considered to be presumptive evidence of notice. But see another report of the same case, entitled Godfrey v. Macauley, Peake's C. 155, n.; from which it seems that the jury were directed to consider the probability that the plaintiff had seen the Gazette. [See Shaffer v. Snyder, 7 Serg. & R. 503.]

(m) Newsome v. Coles and others, 2 Camp. 617, cor. Lord Ellenborough. For they were not bound to apply for an injunction.

(n) Barfoot v. Goodall, 3 Camp. 147.

(o) Gorham v. Thompson, Peake's C. 42.

(p) Goode v. Harrison,[2] 5 B. & A. 147.

(q) Evans v. Drummond, 4 Esp. C. 89. Newmarch v. Clay, 14 East, 239.

(r) Ibid. Even, as is said, although the communication was made after the actual dissolution; but qu. as to the latter point; for by the dissolution the power of the acting partner to bind his former co-partner ceased.

(s) Paterson v. Zachariah and another,[3] 1 Starkie's C. 71.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xviii. 271. [2]Id. vii. 49. [3]Id. ii. 300.

Where a secret or dormant partner has retired from the firm, and goods have been supplied previous to the dissolution, and payments have been made by the parties who continue the business, subsequent to the dissolution, it is a question of evidence whether such payments are to be applied to the previous or to a subsequent debt (t).

An agreement by a creditor, after notice of dissolution, to transfer the account from the old to the new firm, will be evidence to show that he accepted the latter as his debtors, and will discharge a retiring partner (u).

Answer to notice of dissolution.

The plaintiff may rebut the proof of notice of dissolution by evidence of the subsequent conduct and declarations of the co-defendants, tending to induce the world to suppose that the partnership still subsisted, as by proof that they subsequently interfered in the management of the business, or allowed their names to be used, or in any way authorized the parties acting in the concern to make use of their names and credit (x).

Plea in abatement.

A defendant cannot take advantage of the non-joinder of others as co-defendants (y), except by plea in abatement; upon issue joined on this plea the onus probandi usually lies upon the defendant (z). And the plaintiff in indebitatus assumpsit against a surviving partner, may recover a debt due from such survivor, though the declaration make no mention of the latter (a). It will not be sufficient to prove, upon issue taken on this plea, that he has a secret partner (b).

Non-joinder.

Where one of several partners promised individually to pay the debt, *without making any mention of his partners, it was held to be conclusive evidence that the debt was due from him individually (c). *815

Actions, inter se.

Thirdly. Where the parties contest the question of partnership inter se (d), it seems that such evidence as would be sufficient to establish their partnership in a suit by a stranger, will raise a presumption of the fact of partnership inter se (e).

(t) Newmarch v. Clay, 14 East, 239. There goods had been furnished subsequently to the secret dissolution of the secret partnership, and bills which had been given, previous to the dissolution of the partnership, for goods previously sold, having been dishonoured, were given up to the continuing partners, they giving new bills which were sufficient to cover the debts incurred previous to the dissolution, although not sufficient to cover the goods subsequently furnished, and it was held that the transaction afforded evidence of an appropriation of the new bills to discharge the old debt.

(u) Kirwan v. Kirwan, 2 C. & M. 617. And see Hart v. Alexander, 2 M. & W. 484.

(x) See Newsome v. Coles, 2 Camp. 617.

(y) In what cases contracts are joint, and when several, is of course a question of law. A contract made by two partners to pay a certain sum of money to a third person, equally, out of their own private cash, is a joint contract. (Byers v. Dobey, 1 H. B. 236). A trader retiring from business lends money to his partner, and receives, by agreement, an annuity, to be paid for a specified number of years; this is not a continuance of the partnership (Grace v. Smith, 2 Bl. 298). The consignment of a bag of dollars to A., with directions to pay over a specified number to B., does not make them joint-tenants. Jackson v. Anderson, 4 Taunt. 24.

(z) Vide supra, p. 2. The practice upon the question, whether the plaintiff's or defendant's counsel shall begin, has not been uniform (see Pasmore v. Bousfield,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 296. Roby v. Howard,[2] 2 Starkie's C. 555). In such cases the question as to damages does not arise until the issue on the plea has been determined; and the more convenient course seems to be to try the issue first, the defendant's counsel beginning. This course was adopted by Bayley, J. at York Summer Assizes, 1821.

(a) Richards v. Heather, 1 B. & A. 29. A demand against a surviving partner as such may be joined with a demand due from him individually. Golding v. Vaughan,[3] 2 Ch. C. T. M. 436. Where A. being partner with B., took a warrant of attorney from C., a creditor to A. and B., in his own name, knowing that C. was insolvent, and after an act of bankruptcy committed by C., the latter, at A.'s desire, sent goods to the warehouse of A. and B., as a further security; and after the dissolution of partnership between A. and B., A. received sums of money on account of the warrant of attorney; it was held that the assignees under a commission of bankruptcy against C. were entitled, after the death of A., to recover the whole from B. Biggs v. Fellows,[4] 8 B. & C. 402.

(b) Supra, p. 2, note (h).

(c) Murray v. Somerville, 2 Camp. 99, a. Vide supra, tit. Admissions.

(d) Vide supra, 804.

(e) Per Lord Ellenborough, Peacock v. Peacock, 2 Camp. 45. The father told the son, on his coming of [1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 397. [2]Id. iii. 472. [3]Id. xviii. 390. [4]Id. xv. 248.

Although one partner cannot maintain an action against another, whilst the partnership accounts remain unliquidated (f), it is otherwise where the accounts have been settled and a balance struck, or even where one insulated transaction alone remains (A), or where the cause of action arises out of a transaction perfectly distinct from the general dealings (g), or where the liability to be sued is matter of contract (h).

But an action is not maintainable by one partner against another on a bill of exchange given in respect of an unascertained balance (i).

Parties engaged in a joint adventure in the whale-fishery, deposited the proceeds in a warehouse; the share of each was separated in bulk, and remained at the disposal of each by delivery orders, but subject to be retained until the ship's husband had been satisfied all expenses of the *S16 *adventure; it was held, first, that this was to be deemed not an absolute but a qualified appropriation; and that upon the general account between one of the partners and the ship's husband, such party being found to be indebted to the other part-owner, who were liable to pay the expenses incurred, the assignees of such partner could not maintain an action for age, that he should have a share in the business; the son acted as a partner for five or six years. Upon an issue out of Chancery to ascertain the son's share of the profits, it was not presumed that he was entitled to a moiety, but it was left by Lord Ellenborough to the jury to say to what proportion he was fairly entitled under the particular circumstances. Note, that Lord Eldon, C. was not satisfied with this decision. See 16 Ves. 56. If a partnership terminate by efflux of time, and the parties continue to trade without any new agreement, they are pronounced to go on upon the old footing. Per Lord Eldon, in Crawshay v. Collins, 15 Ves. 228. In an action to recover a subscription under the Thames Tunnel Act, it was held that those only were to be deemed subscribers who had signed the contract, so as to be liable for the amount of shares. Thames Tunnel Co. v. Sheldon,[1] 6 B. & C. 341. As to liability to pay subscriptions, see Norwich, &c. Navigation Co. v. Theobald,[2] 1 M. & M. 151. A partner cannot be permitted to place himself, in pursuit of his private advantage, in a situation which gives him a bias against the due discharge of the trust and confidence he owes to his co-partner; where one partner had purchased partnership stock, in exchange for his own separate shop goods, held that his co-partner was entitled to share in the profit of such barter. Burton v. Woolley, 6 Mad. 367.

(f) The defendant, a shareholder and managing director of a company, receiving a commission, and also a del credere commission, drew bills on a purchaser of the company's goods for the amount, and indorsed them to the actuary of the company, who indorsed them to the plaintiff, also a shareholder, and who purchased goods for them, and was a creditor at the time, of the company, for an amount beyond the bills; it was held, that he could maintain no action against the defendant on the bills, nor could he on the money counts for the amount received by the defendant from the acceptor's estate, because, having received it, not in his individual character, but as a member of the company, in each case the same consequence would follow; it would be a recovery by one contractor against another, and if he succeeded, give the defendant immediately a right to call on the plaintiff for contribution. Teague v. Hubbard,[3] 8 B. & C. 345.

(g) See Coffee v. Brian,[4] 3 Bing. 54, and the cases cited supra, 99. Where the plaintiff and defendant had been engaged as partners in particular purchases and sales of wool, and having had mutual dealings, stated an account, stating, amongst other items, "loss on wool," and having a balance against the defendant, which he signed and admitted to be due from him, held sufficient evidence of a promise to pay it, and that the plaintiff might sue for the amount of that item, and that a subsequent assent by him to take out the balance in meat, being merely matter of accommodation, did not preclude him. Wray v. Milestone, 5 M. & W. 21.

(h) One partner may sue another on a special agreement for a stipulated penalty. Radenhurst v. Bates,[5] 3 Bing. 463. Part-owners of a ship may each sue on agreement with each other. Owston v. Ogle, 13 East, 538; Abbott on Shipp. 81.

(i) Verley v. Saunders,[6] 2 Ch. 127; and an indorsee who takes the bill after it is due, cannot recover. Ib.

(A) (Where in an action between partners to recover the balance due from the defendant upon the dissolution of the firm, the plaintiff obtained a verdict, but it appeared at the trial that there was one debt against the firm which had not been paid, the plaintiff was nevertheless permitted to take judgment upon releasing to the defendant the amount of that debt. Brinley et al. v. Kupfer, 6 Pick. 179.

An agreement between two individuals to enter into a single transaction of purchase for the purpose of profit, does not create a partnership such as will confine the remedy of either to an action of account-render. Assumpsit will lie. Galbraith v. Moore, 2 Watts, R. 86; Musier v. Trumpbour, 5 Wend. 274.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiii. 194. [2]Id. xxii. 272. [3]Id. xv. 234. [4]Id. xi. 25. [5]Id. xiii. 53. [6]Id. xviii. 274.

the bankrupt's share until they had satisfied what was due from him to the partnership (j).

Where the plaintiff and defendant agreed to buy goods on their joint account, the defendant undertaking to furnish the plaintiff with half the amount in time for payment, and the plaintiff paid the whole, it was held that an action lay for the moiety, although an account was still to be taken between them as partners, on the subsequent disposal of the stock (k). So if one partner wrongfully carry money belonging to the other to the joint account, an action lies for money had and received (l). But where A., B. and C. had been members of a trading company, and after its dissolution B. and C. being sued as members of the company, retained A., who was an attorney, to defend them, it was held that as A. as a member of the company was jointly liable to contribute to the expense of the defence, he could not maintain an action for the costs (m). So an agent employed by a company of subscribers for an application to Parliament for an intended railway, being himself a subscriber, cannot maintain an action for his services, either against the body of subscribers or against the chairman (n).

Where B. ordered goods on his own credit to be shipped by A., on an agreement between them that if any profit arose, A. should have half for his trouble, and goods were ordered, and afterwards paid for by B., it was held that he might recover the amount of such payment from A., who had not accounted to him for the profits, the contract not constituting a partnership inter se, but an agreement for compensation for trouble and credit (o).

Where an account is taken at the dissolution of a partnership, assumpsit will lie without proof of an express promise (p) (A).

Notice by one partner that the partnership has been dissolved, is evidence against that partner that it has been dissolved by competent means, even by a deed, if a deed be essential (q); and in such case an ejectment lies, upon the demise of one co-partner, against another, for a house agreed to be *occupied jointly during the partnership, without proof of a notice to quit (r). *S17

(j) Holderness v. Shackels,[1] 8 B. & C. 612.

(k) Venning v. Leckie, 13 East 7; [and Mr. Day's note.]

(l) Smith v. Barrow, 2 T. R. 476.

(m) Milburn v. Codd,[2] 7 B. & C. 419. Damages having been recovered against one of several coach-owners who horsed a coach for different stages, in an action against one for contribution, the partnership still continuing, Lord Denman held, that it was an unliquidated account. Pearson v. Skelton, York Sp. Ass. 1836. One partner having paid a partnership debt by compulsion, cannot recover contribution. Sudlow v. Hickson, K. B. 1834, for he could not have recovered had the payment been voluntary.

(n) Holmes v. Higgins,[3] 1 B. & C. 74. A. being a member and also the agent of a joint-stock company, drew a bill, accepted by a purchaser of goods from the company, and indorsed it to the secretary of the company, who again indorsed it to B., another member, who purchased goods for the company, and was a creditor of the company to a larger amount than the bill; the acceptor having become insolvent, A. received 10*s.* by way of composition; held that B. could not sue A. on the bill, for it was drawn on behalf of the company, nor recover the sum received, because it was received by A. in his character of member of the company. Teague v. Hubbard,[4] 8 B. & C. 345.

(o) Hesketh v. Blanchard, 4 East, 143.

(p) Per Gibbs, C. J., Rackstraw v. Imber,[5] Holt's C. 368.

(q) Doe d. Waithman v. Miles,[6] 1 Starkie's C. 181; [4 Camp. 373, S. C.]

(r) Ibid. By an agreement on a dissolution of partnership between the plaintiff and the defendant, the latter being considerably indebted on his private account to the plaintiff, it was agreed that the plaintiff should take two-and-half per cent. on his private debt for six months, and five per cent. afterwards; that the accounts should be wound up, and the debts received by the plaintiff, and the defendant's share go in liquidation of his private debt; and it was stipulated that the partnership might be dissolved upon certain notice,

(A) (Assumpsit lies for one against his co-partner for money paid him on a dissolution and adjustment of the concerns of the co-partnership, more than was actually due. Bond v. Hays, 12 Mass. R. 34.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xv. 315. [2]Id. xiv. 67. [3]Id. xiii. 27. [4]Id. xv. 234. [5]Id. iii. 132. [6]Id. ii. 347.

The ship's husband, being a part-owner, at the request of the defendant, also a part-owner, advanced his share of the outfit; he is entitled to sue for such advances for the separate share of such expenses; and the defendant having represented himself as owner of one-fourth, and dealt as such, is liable to the others in that proportion (s).

In an action for calls, after all the requisite forms of the Act had been complied with, against a party whose name had been inserted in the Act as an original proprietor, and who had subsequently acted as such, a misrecital in the Act that parties had signed a contract binding themselves and their heirs, which was not in legal effect true, the contract not being under seal, is no defence (t).

Where the Act establishing a joint-stock company, declared that a certain sum should be subscribed before any of the powers, &c. should be put in force, it was held that such sum being incomplete at the time of making the call, no action could be maintained for such call, and that it was not sufficient that the subscription list was complete before the action commenced (u).

Competency. In general, a co-partner with the defendant in the subject of the action is incompetent to be a witness for the defendant, where a verdict for the plaintiff would diminish the joint property, or he would be liable to any part of the costs; even although the tendency of his evidence be to charge himself with the whole debt (v). But in order to raise this objection, it must be shown that he is a partner; it is not sufficient merely to suggest it (x). Thus, in an action for goods sold and delivered, a witness is competent to prove that the goods were supplied on his credit, and for his use, although it be suggested that he is a partner with the defendant (y).

In an action brought to charge A. as a partner in a trading company, a witness, who, by other evidence than his own, appeared to be a shareholder in the company, was held to be competent to prove that A. was a partner (z).

A party is a competent witness for the plaintiff, although he has purchased from the plaintiff an interest in the contract on which the action is brought (a).

In an action against three directors for goods supplied to a company, the defence being that the defendant was a shareholder, a release by all the defendants to a witness (a shareholder) renders him competent (b).

*818 *Upon a plea in abatement in assumpsit, for goods sold and delivered, that the promises were made jointly with E. F., the latter, it has been seen, is a competent witness for the plaintiff (c) (1).

on the 1st day of any January, but in consequence of the arrangement it was not expected to take place at the ensuing January; held, that there being no express stipulation for any suspension of the private right of action, nor for any definite period, the plaintiff was not precluded from suing for his separate debt. Simpson v. Rackham,[1] 7 Bing. 617.

(s) Helme v. Smith,[2] 7 Bing. 709.

(t) Cromford Railway Company v. Lacey, 3 Y. & J. 80.

(u) Norwich and Lowestoff Navigation Company v. Theobald,[3] 1 M. & M. 151.

(v) See Birt v. Hood, 1 Esp. C. 20. Young v. Bairner, 1 Esp. C. 21.

(x) Ibid.

(y) Birt v. Hood, 1 Esp. C. 20.

(z) Hall v. Curzon and others,[4] 9 B. & C. 646.

(a) Supra, tit. WITNESS.—INTEREST.

(b) Betts v. Jones, 9 C. & B. 199. But a release by one defendant only would not be sufficient. Ib.

(c) Hudson v. Robinson, 4 M. & S. 475; supra, tit. ABATEMENT.

(1) [In an action against A., B. and C. on a bill of exchange, drawn by C. on A. and B., payable to the plaintiff, to be placed to the credit of a certain vessel, one of the counts in the declaration of which charged the defendants as owners of the ship, and another that C. drew the bill as agent for the defendants; it was held that C. was not a competent witness to prove the partnership of the defendants in the ship. Miller v.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xx. 260. [2]Id. xx. 300. [3]Id. xxii. 272. [4]Id. xvii. 466.

An examined copy of an answer in Chancery by two of the defendants, to a bill by a third defendant, is good evidence against the parties so answering (d).

A stipulation in a deed of a joint-stock company that shareholders should not be at liberty to inspect the books of the company, is no bar to the production of them in a suit by the shareholders against the company (e).

PAYMENT (A).

When to be pleaded.

Proof of payment of the debt was formerly evidence under the general issue in assumpsit (f), but must have been pleaded specially as a bar to an action on a debt by record or specialty. But now by the new rules of Hil. T. 4 W. 4, where payment is insisted on as a defence to the action, it must be pleaded in bar (g). And by one of the new rules of Trin. Term. 1 Vict. it is directed that payment shall not in any case be allowed to be given in evidence in reduction of damages or debt, but shall not be pleaded in bar. And by another of these additional rules, in any case in which the plaintiff, in order to avoid the expense of the plea of payment, shall have given credit in the particulars of his demand for any sum or sums of money therein admitted to have been paid to the plaintiff, it shall not be necessary for the defendant to plead the payment of such sum or sums of money (h).

(d) Studdy v. Sanders,[1] 2 D. & R. 347.

(e) Hall v. Connell, 3 Y. & Cr. 717 (in Equity).

(f) Supra, Assumpsit.

(g) Under these rules payment has been allowed in reduction of damages without any special plea of payment, &c. in an action of assumpsit. Shirley v. Jacobs, 4 Dowl. P. C. 136;[2] 2 Bing. N. C. 88. Although in debt such evidence was held to be inadmissible without a plea of payment. Cooper v. Morecroft, 3 M. & W. 500. Belbin v. Butt, 2 M. & W. 522. But now see the additional new rule of Trin. T. 1 Vict. The plea of payment is divisible, and operates pro tanto to the extent that payment is proved. Cousins v. Paddon, 2 C. M. & R. 547. Probart v. Phillips, 2 M. & W. 40.

(h) Under the former new rules a difference of opinion had obtained as to the effect of an admission in

---

M'Clenachan & al. 1 Yeates, 144. A partner in a company is not admissible to prove that another person, defendant in the case, is also a partner—especially where there are written articles. The State v. Penman, 2 Desauss. 1. A dormant partner, not being a party to the suit, is a competent witness for the other partner in an action by him to recover the price of goods sold, where the interest of the dormant partner was, at the time of the contract, unknown to the defendant. Clarkson v. Carter, 3 Cow. 84.]

(A) (In general a payment received in forged paper or any base coin is not good, and if there be no negligence in the party who receives such payment he may recover back the consideration paid for it, or sue upon his original demand. United States Bank v. The Bank of Georgia, 10 Wheat. 333. Markle v. Hatfield, 2 John. R. 455. Hargrave v. Dusenbury, 2 Hawks. 326. Anderson v. Hawkins, 3 Hawks. 568. Bank-notes are a part of the currency of the country; they pass as money, and are a good tender unless specially objected to. United States Bank v. The Bank of Georgia, supra. Phillips v. Blake, 1 Metc. 156. But this principle does not apply to a payment made bona fide to a bank in its own notes, which are received as cash, and afterwards discovered to be forged. United States Bank v. The Bank of Georgia, supra. And where a forged check of a customer is received by a bank as cash, and passed to the credit of a depositor (who is ignorant of the forgery, and who has paid the full value of the check), it is equivalent to an actual payment; and if the depositor, after having been informed of the forgery on a sudden misconception of his rights, agrees, that if the check is a forgery it is no deposit, it will not constitute a promise to refund. Levy v. The Bank of the United States, 4 Dall. 234. S. C. 1 Binn. 27. The note of a purchaser given at the time of the sale is no payment unless there be an express agreement to receive it as such. So of his agent's note. Porter v. Tullcott, 1 Cow. 359. Maze v. Miller, 1 Wash. C. C. R. 328. But the acceptance of a negotiable note on account of a prior debt is prima facie evidence of satisfaction, and the plaintiff cannot recover upon the old debt without showing the note to have been lost, or producing and cancelling it at the trial. Holmes & Drake v. De Camp, 1 John. R. 34; Pintard v. Tackington, 10 John. R. 104; Burdick v. Green, 15 John. R. 247. And a promissory note, taken by express agreement in payment of a judgment, is an extinguishment of the preceding debt. The New York State Bank v. Fletcher, 5 Wend. 85. Whether a note was taken absolutely as payment or not is a question of fact for the jury. Johnson v. Weed, 9 John. R. 310. The acceptance of the note of a third person on the sale of a chattel for the consideration money is payment. Rew v. Barber, 3 Cow. 272. Symington v. M'Lin, 1 Dev. & Bat. 291. But the receiving of the promissory note of one partner in payment of an open account against a firm and delivering up the account in writing does not of itself discharge the original demand. Wilson v. Jennings, 4 Dev. 90. Henton v. Child, 4 Dev. 460. A check upon a bank given in the ordinary course of business is not presumed to be received as an absolute payment, even if the drawer have funds in the bank, but as the means whereby the holder may procure the money. Crommell v. Lovett, 1 Hall. Rep. 56. The People v. Howell, 4 John. R. 296.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xvi. 93. [2] Id. xxix. 266.

This rule is not to be applicable where the plaintiff, after stating the amount of his demand, states that he seeks to recover a certain balance, without giving credit for any particular sum or sums.

Onus probandi.

Upon issue taken on a plea of payment, the onus of proof lies on the defendant. The proof is either general, under the plea of solvit post diem, or special, under the plea of solvit ad diem.

It is a general principle that the party to be discharged is bound to do the act which is to discharge him (i). The obligor of a bond conditioned for the payment of money on a particular day, is bound to seek the obligee if he be in England, and on the set day to tender him the money (k). Consequently the burthen of proving such a discharge is, in general, incumbent on the party who seeks to be discharged.

*S19

*Payment being pleaded generally to a declaration in indebitatus assumpsit, it lies on the defendant to prove payment to the extent of liability proved against him. Issue being taken for the plea of payment, to a declaration for work and labour, &c., although the defendant prove payment to an amount exceeding the aggregate of the sums stated in the declaration, the plaintiff may, without a new assignment, show works, &c. to a larger amount than is claimed, and recover the balance (l). Assumpsit for money lent, plea, payment, a new assignment and plea of payment, on which issue is joined: the plaintiff claimed a debt of 15*l.* in August 1833, and having proved a debt then due by the defendant, by the defendant's acknowledgement, and the defendant proving a payment to that amount in October 1833, it is incumbent on the plaintiff, in support of his new assignment, to prove a second debt (m).

The party must prove, 1st, a payment of the money, or its equivalent; 2dly, its application to the particular debt (1).

Direct evidence.

The proof of payment is either direct, or presumptive; in the former case payment has been made either to the plaintiff or to his agent.

Where a receipt has been given for the money, the receipt should be produced, and proof given of the handwriting of the party to whom the payment was made (2).

A receipt is merely primâ facie evidence of payment; it may be proved that it was obtained by fraud or mistake (n).

the plaintiff's particulars of the payment of a sum of money. On the one hand, the effect of such an admission has been held to be to restrain the plaintiff from going into that part of his demand which was covered by the payment; on the other, that the effect was merely an admission of payment operating as evidence, and that a plea of payment was requisite to make such evidence admissible. Coates v. Stevens, 2 C. M. & R. 119. Ernest v. Brown,[1] 3 Bing. N. C. 674. Nicholls v. Williams, 2 M. & W. 758. Kenyon v. Wakes, 2 M. & W. 764.

(i) See Lord Ellenborough's observations in Cranley v. Hillary, 2 M. & S. 122.

(k) Litt. sec. 340; and per Dampier, J., 2 M. & S. 122.

(l) Freeman v. Crofts, 4 M. & W. 4. Per Alderson, B., it is like a plea of license in trespass; the defendant must prove a license for every trespass the plaintiff can prove; so on a plea of payment, you undertake to prove that whatever demand the plaintiff can establish, you have paid him.

(m) Hall v. Middleton,[2] 4 Ad. & Ell. 107. The under-sheriff having left it to the jury to say whether the 15*l.* said to have been lent in August had been so lent; the Court held, that the question was whether there had been two debts.

(n) Stratton v. Rastall, 2 T. R. 366; & supra; see Rowntree v. Jacob, 2 Taunt. 141; infra, tit. Receipt.

(1) [In Pennsylvania, the defendant is permitted under the plea of payment in an action on a bond, to give in evidence mistake or want of consideration. Swift v. Hawkins & al., 1 Dallas, 17. So if notice be given to the plaintiff, fraud in the execution or consideration of a bond may be given in evidence. Baring v. Shippen, 2 Binney, 154. Or other matter, which shows that ex aquo et bono the plaintiff ought not to recover. See cases collected in Wharton's Digest, 467, 468. Carpenter v. Groff, 5 Serg. & Rawle, 162.]

(2) {But see Southwick v. Heyden, 7 Cow. Rep. 334, in which it was decided, that proof of a sale of goods, or payment of money, may be made by parol, though there be a receipt, without accounting for its absence; parol proof being of as high a nature as the receipt.}

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxxii. 276. [2]Id. xxxi. 40.

A payment to one of several persons who (not being partners) have deposited money in a bank without the authority of the others, is not good as against them (o).

Where the payment has been made to an agent (p), an authority from the principal to the agent must be proved: the agent is a competent witness *for that purpose (q). Whether such authority has been given to an agent to receive payment, or to receive it in a particular manner, are usually questions of fact for the jury (r). Such an authority may be implied from the relative situation of the principal and agent, the habit and course of dealing between the parties, or from some recognition by the principal of the authority of the agent subsequent to the payment (s) (1).

Of payment to an agent. *S20 Proof of agent's authority.

Where a principal entrusts an agent with the sale of goods, as to sell them in a shop, or a horse at a fair, a presumption arises that he empowered that agent also to receive payment (t). So payment to a broker who sells (o) Innes v. Stephenson, 1 Mo. & R. 145. Stewart v. Lee,[1] M. & M. 158.

(p) Payment to another by the creditor's authority is a payment to himself, and may be so pleaded.—Taylor v. Beal, Cro. Eliz. 222. Goodland v. Blewith, 1 Camp. 477. Cootes v. Lewis, Ib. 444. In general, if an agent be employed to receive money, and the debtor pays in money, he is discharged; but if the debtor does not pay in money, but settles the account by considering a debt due to him from the agent as paid, it is no discharge; per Abbott, C. J. in Todd v. Reed,[2] 3 Starkie's C. 16. And therefore, where a broker adjusts a loss with the underwriter, and his name is struck out of the policy and adjustment, the broker becoming bankrupt within the month, the underwriter cannot set off against the assured the balance due to him from the broker at the time of adjusting the policy. Ib.; and see Russell v. Bangley,[3] 4 B. & A. 395; Jell v. Pratt,[4] 2 Starkie's C. 67. Where it had been agreed between two partners that a third person should collect and pay the debts, of which the defendant had notice, and promised to pay at a future time, but before that paid it to one of the partners; held, that such agreement amounting only to an authority to such agent to receive, and to make his receipt of the debt, if paid to him, a good discharge, it did not restrain the rights of the partners, and the payment to him therefore was good. Porter v. Taylor, 6 M. & S. 156. A traveller engaged in receiving orders, is not justified in receiving payment from a customer in other goods, but it will be for the jury to say what acts of his employer amount to a subsequent ratification. Howard v. Chapman,[5] 4 C. & P. 508. Where the defendant, as owner, was clearly liable to the plaintiff for necessaries, &c. supplied for his ship and crew, by the direction of the broker and agent, to whom the defendant entrusted the whole management, and the plaintiff, before the expiration of the credit, had applied to and received from the broker his acceptances for the amount, allowing discount, the latter having effects of the defendant's beyond the amount in his hands at the time; and the bills were subsequently renewed, and the interest added: held, that upon the broker becoming bankrupt, and the bills remaining due, the defendant was not discharged by such bill transaction, having neither been misled nor prejudiced by it. Robinson v. Reed,[6] 9 B. & C. 449. The defendant sent a person to the plaintiff's counting-house to pay the amount, with a letter, objecting to certain items, which was there paid, and the letter delivered to a party sitting in the inner part of the counting-house, and who gave a receipt for it; held, that although a stranger and not authorized, nor in the employment of the plaintiff, that the defendant was discharged by such a payment to a person so appearing to be entrusted with the plaintiff's concerns. Barrett v. Deere,[7] 1 M. & M. 200.

(q) Supra, Vol. I. tit. Witness.—And see tit. Agent.

(r) Supra, tit. Agent. (s) Supra, tit. Agent.

(t) 12 Mod. 230. A payment to a person found at the vendor's counting-house, and who appears to be entrusted with the conduct of the business, is a valid payment, although the person receiving the money had, in fact, no authority to receive it; for the debtor has a right to suppose that the trader has the control over his own premises, and that he will not suffer persons to come there and intermeddle with his business without authority. Barrett v. Deere,[7] 1 M. & M. 200. Wilmot v. Smith, ib. 288. So where a debtor sent a servant to the house of the creditor to tender the amount of the debt, and the servant having been informed by a servant of the creditor at his house that his master was at home, delivered the money to that servant to be delivered to the creditor, and the creditor's servant went into his house, and returned with an answer that the master would not receive it; Lord Kenyon ruled that there was evidence of a tender for the consideration of the jury. Anon., 1 Esp. C. 350.

(1) [Where A. and B. agreed to sell and convey land to C., and the payment was made to A., who in fact had no legal title to the land; it was held that B. could not afterwards object to such payment, but that it was to be considered, in effect, the same as if paid to B. Waters v. Travis, 9 Johns. 450. A. having constituted B. his general agent in a county, and also given him a particular agency to sell a tract of land, and receive payments of part of the purchase-money, is bound to allow credits for any other payments made to him before notice that his powers are revoked. Spencer & al. v. Wilson, 4 Munf. 130.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxii. 274. [2]Id. xiv. 149. [3]Id. vi. 459. [4]Id. iii. 247. [5]Id. xix. 499. [6]Id. xvii. 418. [7]Id. xxii. 291.

for a principal not named, and who makes out the bought-and-sold notes to the buyer and seller, is a payment to the principal (u).

So, as has been seen, the authority of an agent to receive payment on bonds, bills, or other securities, is usually evidenced by the agent's possession of the instruments which are delivered up or cancelled upon payment (x).

Where the question is, whether the person who received money on a security was the agent of the owner for that purpose, it is not essential to call the agent himself (y); the possession of the security by a third person, and receiving payment for it, and giving a receipt for it in the name of the principal, afford strong presumptive evidence that he was employed as agent for that purpose (z).

Payment of the debt to the marshal or sheriff in whose custody the debtor is, is no satisfaction to the plaintiff (a).

*821 *Where payment has been made to an attorney, proof should be given of his employment by the plaintiff (b).

Payment to a country attorney who is merely employed by the attorney of the principal to execute the writ, is insufficient (c); so is a payment which is made to an attorney on record, who has never been employed by the plaintiff (d); but payment to the attorney really employed by the plaintiff, although after he has been privately changed without leave of the Court, is a good payment (e) (1).

Where payment has been made to a servant or other agent, in a cheque

(u) Favenc v. Bennett, 11 East, 36. Vide infra, 821.

(x) Supra, 43.

(y) See Owen v. Barrow, 1 N. R. 101; where, in an action on the Statute of Usury, Chambre, J. said, "I should be sorry to have it laid down as a general rule that agency must be proved by the agent himself."

(z) Owen v. Barrow, 1 N. R. 101. The action was to recover penalties for usury in discounting a bill of exchange; in proof of the receipt of the money, it was proved that B., in the name of the defendant, the owner of the bill, had commenced an action against the acceptor, and that he had received from him the amount of the bill and costs, on producing the bill, and that he had given a receipt in the name of the defendant; and this was held to be good prima facie evidence, without producing the proceedings in the action.

(a) Taylor v. Baker, 2 Lev. 203. Slackford v. Austen, 14 East, 418; and per Holroyd, J. in Crozer v. Pilling,[1] 4 B. & C. 32.

(b) Payment to the attorney pending the action is good; secus as to a payment to his clerk, who shows no authority but his master's order to receive it. Coore v. Callaway, 1 Esp. C. 115.

(c) Yates v. Freckleton, Doug. 623; 1 T. R. 710. (d) Robson v. Eaton, 1 T. R. 62.

(e) Powel v. Little, 1 Blaek, 85. So a plaintiff is bound by the act of the agent in town, in taking money out of court. Griffith v. Williams, 1 T. R. 610.

(1) (In general, payment to an attorney at law is good, on the custom of the country, especially if he have possession of the bond, &c.; though under particular circumstances, this rule might not apply; as if notice were given that no such power was vested in the attorney. Hudson v. Johnston, 1 Wash. 10. The attorney at law who obtained the judgment, is, in general, authorized by the custom of the country to receive from the defendant the money recovered, and his receipt will discharge the judgment, though more than a year and a day elapsed between the date of the judgment and the time of payment to the attorney. Branch v. Barnley, 1 Call, 147. See Wycoff v. Bergen, 1 Coxe's Rep. 214. Where a judgment has been recovered in any court of law, the attorney of record of the judgment creditor has authority to receive payment, and to discharge the judgment. Lewis v. Gamage & al. 1 Pick. 347. Langdon & al. v. Potter & al. 13 Mass. Rep. 319. See Jackson v. Bartlett, 8 Johns. 361. Kellogg v. Gilbert, 10 Johns. 220. Crary v. Turner, 6 Johns. 51. Richardson v. Talbot, 2 Bibb, 382.

Payment to the plaintiff's attorney of the sum for which judgment was obtained, if made within a year after execution is extended on land, is held, in Maine, to be a good bar to a writ of entry afterwards brought by the creditor against the debtor for the land. Gray v. Wass, 1 Greenleaf, 257.

Payment, by an officer of money collected on an execution, to the creditor's attorney of record, but whose power had been revoked before the officer received the execution, is not a discharge of the officer, but he is still liable to the creditor. Parker v. Downing, 13 Mass. Rep. 465. See also Wart v. Lee, 3 Yeates, 7. Where an attorney indorsed on an execution that he had received the note of a stranger, for a greater amount than the judgment, payable to the judgment debtor, which he (the attorney) was to collect, but which was lost by his negligence; it was held that the judgment was not discharged. Langdon & al. v. Potter & al., ubi sup. Commissioners v. Rose, 1 Desauss. 461, S. P.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. x. 271.

or bill, it is a question of fact whether the agent had authority to receive such a payment (f). And where the payment has been made according to the usual practice in similar cases, such an authority is, it seems, to be presumed (g). And, in general, slight evidence of acquiescence on the part of the master will serve to show his assent to any particular mode of payment (h).

Payment by the debtor's attorney to a creditor will satisfy an averment of payment by the debtor, although the latter has not repaid the attorney, but has merely given his promissory note (i).

If the broker sells goods as his own, and the vendee has no notice to the contrary, a payment to the broker is good, although the mode varies from that which was agreed upon (k).

Though it be known that the party is but an agent, the payment will be good, if it be made according to the agreement (l), and without notice from the principal not to pay to the agent (m); and even where such notice has *S22 *been given, payment to a factor will still be good, if the principal, on the To an balance of account, be indebted to the factor, for he has a lien on the debt (n). agent.

(f) Supra, 44. An agent employed to sell has no authority, as such agent, to receive payment. Per Littledale, J., Mynn v. Jolliffe, 1 Mo. & R. 326.

(g) Ibid. note (s).

(h) Ward v. Evans, Salk. 442; supra, 44.

(i) Adams v. Dansey,[1] 6 Bing. 506.

(k) Blackburn v. Scholes & another, 2 Camp. 343. And see De Leira v. Edwards, 1 M. & S. 147. Favenc v. Bennett, 11 East, 36, infra, n. (l). So also if the principals have allowed the agent to act as the principal in the sale of the goods (Coates v. Lewis, 1 Camp. 444. Gardiner v. Davis,[2] 2 C. & P. 49). So where the principals allowed the broker to draw bills in his own name (Townsend v. Inglis,[3] Holt's C. 278. Favenc v. Bennett, 11 East, 36). So if the factor sell in his own name, the buyer may set off, as against the claim of the principal, the debt due to the factor (George v. Claggett, 7 T. R. 359; 2 Esp. C. 577). Aliter, if the buyer be informed of the principal before the whole of the goods are delivered (Moore v. Clementson, 2 Camp. 22). Where a party sells in the character of an agent, although without disclosing the name of his principal, yet, if the disclosure be made before payment, the effect seems to be the same as if the name of the principal had been disclosed on the face of the contract. See Lord Ellenborough's observations, 4 M. & S. 573.

(l) Favenc v. Bennett, 11 East, 36. The goods were sold for a principal not named, on the terms of "payment in one month money," and the jury found that the meaning of the terms, in commercial understanding, was payment at any time within a month, and that the payment within the month to the brokers, with whom the defendant had dealt, without the knowledge of the principal, was a good payment. But it is otherwise if the payment vary from the terms of the original contract. Campbell v. Hassel and others,[4] 1 Starkie's C. 233; and evidence of an usage to substitute an equivalent mode of payment is inadmissible.

(m) But although the factor sell in his own name, and without disclosing the name of his principal, yet, if the principal give notice to the buyer to pay him, and not the factor, the buyer will not be discharged in afterwards paying the factor. (B. N. P. 130. Houghton v. Matthews, 3 B. & P. 485. See also Powel v. Nelson, 15 East, 65 n.)

(n) Drinkwater v. Goodwin, Cowp. 251. Vide etiam, Hudson v. Granger,[5] 5 B. & A. 27. The plaintiff sent goods to A. B., his factor, to whom he was indebted in a larger amount; the factor sold the goods to the defendant, to whom he was indebted in a larger amount; the factor became bankrupt, and his assignees settled with the defendant, and it was held to be an answer to the plaintiff's demand. In the case of Schrimshire v. Alderton, (Str. 1182), the jury, contrary to the direction of the Court in point of law, found that a payment to a factor who sold under a del credere commission, after notice by the principal to the contrary, was a good payment (and see B. N. P. 130), on the ground that the factor, in such a case, was to be considered to be the real principal with whom the contract was made. The circumstance, however, of a del credere commission, which is no more in effect than an agreement by the factor to ensure the debt to his principal, cannot, it seems, at all affect the relative situation of the principal and the vendee. See Morris v. Cleasby, 1 M. & S. 576; 4 M. & S. 566. Gurney v. Sharp, 4 Taunt. 242. And see Lord Ellenborough's observations in Cumming v. Forrester, 1 M. & S. 499, and the judicious observations in Mr. Long's book on Sales, 243, and the authorities there cited.—As to payments made by a principal to a broker employed to buy for him, see above, p. 819; and see the case of Powell v. Nelson, 16 East, 65, cited by Lord Ellenborough. There the factor made purchases for his principal, who made payments on account; the vendor wrote to the factor for payment; the letter coming into the hands of the purchaser, he transmitted it to the factor, and afterwards paid him the remainder of the debt; and Lord Mansfield held that the principal was still liable to the vendor.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 149. [2]Id. xii. 22. [3]Id. iii. 101. [4]Id. ii. 370. [5]Id. vii. 10.

The effect of a bill or note in payment has already been considered (o) (1). Payment by bills is primâ facie evidence of payment; it lies on the plaintiff to show that they have been dishonoured (p).

(o) Supra, Bill of Exchange, 264. C. guarantees the payment of A.'s debt to B. by instalments; C., after the first instalment was due, remits bills to B. not due; B., by keeping the bills, waives the objection. Shipton v. Capon,[1] 5 B. & C. 378. In an agreement between the defendant with the plaintiff and other creditors for a composition of 15*s.* in the pound, it was stipulated that certain bills which had been indorsed by the defendant, and delivered to the plaintiff, should be considered as part payment. It was held that these were not to be considered as an absolute payment, and that the defendant was liable on one of them which was dishonoured at maturity. Constable v. Andrew, 1 C. & M. 293. Where a purchaser gives the seller an order on a third person, entitling him to receive cash, instead of which he elects to take a bill, the payment is good although the bill be dishonoured. Vernon v. Bouverie, 2 Show. 296; Smith v. Ferrand,[2] 7 B. & C. 19. So if the purchaser give the seller an order for a good bill on London, the seller must take care that he gets a good bill. Balson v. Reichard, 1 Esp. C. 106. Secus if the order for payment be on the purchaser's agent, and the seller take a cheque which is dishonoured. Everett v. Collins, 7 B. & C. 24, 25; 2 Camp. 515. And where the freighter's foreign agent being furnished with funds to pay the freight, the master took a bill on a third person, it was held (by Gibbs, C. J.) that the freighter was not discharged. Marsh v. Pedder, 4 Camp. 257. A cheque to operate as payment must be unconditional in its terms. A cheque directing bankers to pay the plaintiff's balance account railing or bearer, was held to be no proof of payment. Hough v. May,[3] 4 Ad. & Ell. 954. It was held to be no misdirection to leave it to the jury whether the plaintiff received the cheque as money. Ib. Judgment on a bill without satisfaction does not operate as payment, supra, 264 (c), although it was formerly held otherwise. See Drake v. Mitchell, 3 East, 251.

(p) Hebden v. Hartsink, 4 Esp. C. 46. Stedman v. Gooch, 1 Esp. C. 4. The giving a cheque is prima

(1) [A bill of exchange or promissory note, either of the debtor or any other person, is not payment of a precedent debt, unless it be so expressly agreed. Greenwood v. Curtis, 6 Mass. Rep. 388; 4 ib. 93. Johnson v. Johnson, 11 Mass. Rep. 361. Goodenow v. Tyler, 7 Mass. Rep. 36. Murray v. Gouverneur, 2 Johns. Cas. 438. Herring v. Sanger, 3 Johns. Cas. 71. Johnson v. Weed. 9 Johns. 310. Schermerhorn v. Loines, 7 Johns. 311. Tobey v. Barber, 5 Johns. 68. Sheehy v. Mandeville & al. 6 Cranch, 254. Nor is a receipt for a note, as cash, evidence that it was taken as an absolute payment. 5 Johns. ubi sup. It is merely a suspension of the right of action during the time allowed for payment by the note. Putnam v. Lewis, 8 Johns. 389. And whether a note was taken absolutely as payment, or not, is a question of fact for the jury. 9 Johns. ubi sup. But the acceptance of a negotiable note, on account of a prior debt, is prima facie evidence of satisfaction. Holmes & al. v. D'Camp, 1 Johns. 24. Pintard v. Tuckington, 10 Johns. 124. Maneely v. M'Gee & al. 6 Mass. Rep. 143. Thatcher & al. v. Dinsmore, 5 Mass. Rep. 299. Chapman v. Durant & al. 10 Mass. Rep. 47. The reason assigned by the court of Massachusetts for this doctrine is, that otherwise the debtor might be put to inconvenience, and perhaps be obliged to pay his debt twice; as he could not set up a payment of the original debt, after a seasonable indorsement of the note, against the claim of an innocent indorsee. Johnson v. Johnson, ubi sup.

In Wiseman & al. v. Lyman, 7 Mass. Rep. 286, it was decided that if a creditor receive a note of a third person in payment of a demand against his debtor, where there is no fraud, such note is at the risk of the creditor, unless there be an agreement to the contrary; and he shall not afterwards have an action against the debtor on the original contract. In Barelli v. Brown, 1 M'Cord, 449, it was held, that the liquidation of an account by a note, though it be the note of a third person, unless expressly received in payment, does not destroy the open account. See also Roget v. Merritt, 2 Caines, 117. Wilson v. Force, 6 Johns. 110.

In general, a payment received in forged or worthless paper, or in any base coin, is not good; and if there be no negligence in the party, he may recover back the consideration paid for them, or sue on his original demand. See Hargrave v. Dusenbury, 2 Hawks. 326. Markle v. Hatfield, 2 Johns. 455. Young v. Adams, 6 Mass. Rep. 182. Salem Bank v. Gloucester Bank, 17 Mass. Rep. 1. Gloucester Bank v. Salem Bank, 17 Mass. Rep. 33. Bank of the United States v. Bank of Georgia, 10 Wheat. 333. {As to what amounts to negligence in such a case, Raymond v. Baar, 13 Serg. & Rawle, 318.} But this principle does not apply to a payment made bona fide to a bank in its own notes, which are received as cash, and afterwards discovered to be forged. 10 Wheat, ubi sup. See also Levy v. Bank of the United States, 1 Binney, 27; S. C. 4 Dallas, 234.

In Alexander v. Owen, 1 T. R. 225, it was held that where goods were delivered under an agreement to take a specific parcel of copper money in payment, a delivery of such copper was a good bar to an action for value of the goods, though it proved to be counterfeit money. {Curcier v. Pennock, 14 Serg. & Rawle, 51.}

So in Ellis v. Wild, 6 Mass. Rep. 321, it was decided that if the innocent holder of a forged note sell it for merchandize, without any knowledge of its being forged, the buyer of the note cannot afterwards maintain an action against him to recover payment for the merchandize; for both parties being equally innocent melior est conditio possidentis. But in Salem Bank v. Gloucester Bank, ubi sup, it is said, if the holder of the note had intended to buy merchandize, and the payment by the note had not been a part of the original stipulation, but an accommodation to him, then the forged note would not have been a payment, and an action would have been maintainable for the merchandize.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xi. 254. [2]Id. xiv. 6. [3]Id. xxxi. 235.

If the master of a vessel is to get payment in the best mode he can, and has no power to get anything but a bill, he must take that; but if he could get paid in any other mode, he should do so, otherwise he will be bound by taking a bill (q).

Proof of payment by remittance, &c.

If a creditor desire his debtor to remit a bill or note by the post, it will be sufficient to prove that the debtor remitted the bill as directed, and if it *be lost the loss will fall upon the creditor(r). But in such case proof of a delivery of the letter, not at the post-office, or at a receiving-house, but to a bellman in the street, would not be a compliance with the creditor's directions, and the loss would fall on the debtor (s). *823

This authority seems, however, to have been overruled by a later decision (t).

In the absence of any direction by the creditor, it is said that the sending bills or notes by the post would be primâ facie evidence to show that they were received by him (u). It is clear that in such a case it would be competent to the creditor to show that he had never in fact received the bills, and that they had fallen into other hands.

A payment made by compulsion of law is always sufficient to protect the party who made it from a second demand (x).

Presumptive evidence (A).

In an action of covenant against the defendant, the drawer of certain bills, to pay to the plaintiff the amount of his acceptances of bills so drawn, the possession by the plaintiff of bills accepted by him, and drawn by the defendant is primâ facie evidence that the plaintiff has paid them (y) (1).

The mere production of a cheque drawn by the defendant on his banker, and payable to the plaintiff or bearer, is no evidence of payment to the plaintiff, without proof that he received the amount, or that it was in his possession; but proof that he indorsed his name upon it affords primâ facie evidence of payment to him (z).

facie evidence of payment where a debt is due, but it may be shown by circumstances that a loan was intended. Boswell v. Smith,[1] 6 C. & P. 60.

(q) Per Payley, J., Strong v. Hart,[2] 6 B. & C. 161. See Robinson v. Read,[3] 9 B. & C. 449; Taylor v. Briggs,[4] M. & M. 28.

(r) Warwick v. Noakes, Peake's C. 67.

(s) Hawkins v. Rutt, Peake's C. 186.

(t) Parcke v. Alexander,[5] 3 Moore & Scott, 789.

(u) Peake's Ev. 289; where it is also observed, that where the creditor requires a remittance by the post the sending bank notes uncut would not discharge the debtor, since the more usual and prudent course is to send them by halves.

(x) Supra, 443, note (d).

(y) Gibbon v. Featherstonhaugh,[6] 1 Starkie's C. 225.

(z) Egg v. Burnett, 3 Esp. C. 196.

(A) (A delay of twenty years to demand the money, or bring a suit upon a contract under seal, will raise a presumption of payment. Jackson v. Hotchkiss, 6 Cow. 401. Henderson v. Lewis, 9 Serg. & R. 379. Dunlop v. Ball, 2 Cranch, 180. But this presumption may be rebutted by any facts which destroy the reason of the rule upon which it is founded. Dunlop v. Ball, Jackson v. Hotchkiss, supra. Blackburn v. Squib, Peck. 60. Peytavin v. Maurin, 2 Louis. R. 481. The possession by the defendant of an order on him, signed by the plaintiff, to pay money to a third person, whose receipt is indorsed but not proved, if not objected to as evidence to go to the jury, may be charged by the court to be evidence of payment, though not conclusive. Weidner v. Schweigart, 9 Serg. & Rawle, 385. See also Joublane's Ex'r v. Delacroix, 5 Martin, 477. An account signed by one acknowledging the receipt of articles from another, whose bond the first holds for a larger amount, should be left to the jury as evidence of payment on the bond. McDowell v. Tate, 1 Dev. 249. A presumption in law arises from the payment of the last instalment, upon a bond that the preceding ones have been paid, provided it has been made in the manner, and at the time contemplated by the parties; if otherwise, it is a presumption that the parties are acting under a new agreement. Ward v. Green's Ad'r, 2 Car. L. R. 108. If receipts be given for several instalments of a debt, due by instalments, as a salary, and the receipt be for a less sum than the creditor was entitled to receive, yet each receipt be for the same amount and expressed as being in full, it will be presumed that the remainder was remitted, and that the smaller sum was received in full payment. Girod v. Mayor et al., 4 Martin, 698.)

(1) [S. P. Patton's Adm'rs v. Ash & al., 7 Serg. & R. 116. The People v. Howell, 4 Johns. 296. Dennie v. Hart & trustee, 2 Pick. 204.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxv. 282. [2]Id. xiii. 130. [3]Id. xvii. 418. [4]Id. xxii. 238. [5]Id. xxx. 318. [6]Id. ii. 366.

The mere fact of the payment of money by A. to B. is presumptive evidence of the payment of an antecedent debt, and not of a loan (a). In an action on the bond of the testatrix, proof of a transfer of stock by the testatrix to a larger amount is evidence of payment (b).

Payment may be presumed from lapse of time. Under the Statute of Limitations, lapse of time may, it has been seen (c), be pleaded as a bar to the action. Still the statute operates but presumptively, and the presumption may be rebutted by evidence of an admission of the debt in writing, within the limit (d). And although the statute has not been pleaded, payment may be presumed by the jury, from lapse of time and other circumstances, which render the fact probable (e).

Satisfaction of a bond might, before the late statute (f), have been presumed from a lapse of twenty years, without any demand or acknowledgement of the debt within that space (g), or in a shorter time if circumstances rendered satisfaction probable (h). But a lapse of twenty years, before the *824 *statute, was no legal bar, but merely afforded a presumption in fact for the jury (i) (1).

The effect of an indorsement on a bond, of the receipt of interest, within twenty years, has already been considered (k).

In the usual course of business, a security, where the money is paid, is either delivered up to the debtor or destroyed; and therefore, where the fact of payment is otherwise doubtful, the possession of the entire instrument by the creditor affords a presumption that it is still unsatisfied (l).

(a) Welsh v. Seaborn,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 474; and see Aubert v. Welsh, 4 Taunt. 293.
(b) Breton v. Cope, Peake's C. 30.
(c) Supra, tit. Limitation.
(d) Ibid.
(e) Cooper v. Turner,[2] 2 Starkie's C. 497.
(f) 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 42; supra, tit. Limitation.
(g) 1 T. R. 270. The surrender of a mortgage term is not to be presumed in less than twenty years. Doe v. Calvert,[3] 5 Taunt. 170.
(h) [Henderson v. Lewis, 9 Serg. & R. 379.] Ibid. Colsell v. Budd, 1 Camp. 27. 3 P. Wms. 287. Rex v. Stephens, 1 Burr. 434; 3 Burr. 1396. Forbes v. Wale, 1 Bl. 532. Where the drawers of bills accepted by the defendant (who when due had paid the drawers not being the holders, but neglected to have them delivered up), had paid large sums to the plaintiffs, their bankers, the then holders, and they had not only entered the bills to their debit, but had treated them as paid; held, that by the course of their own accounts they were precluded from saying the bills had not been satisfied. Field v. Carr,[4] 5 Bing. 13; and 2 M. & P. 46.
(i) Ibid.
(k) Supra, tit. Bond. See also tit. Release. Washington v. Brymer, Ibid. and Peake's Ev. Append. lxxiii. Moreland v. Bennett, Str. 652. See Searle v. Lord Barrington, Str. 825; Vol. I. 306. Such indorsements have been held to be inadmissible unless proved to have been made at a time when it was against the interest of the party to make them. Rose v. Bryant, 2 Camp. 321; and see 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 1; and even then the admissibility of such evidence is very questionable in principle. But in the case of Parr v. Cotchett, Dom. P. May 6, 1824, it was held, that where the indorsee of a promissory note had made indorsements of the half yearly payments of interest, from the time of making the note until his death, which happened within six years of the date of the note, like indorsements by his executor, who died before the commencement of the action, were admissible in evidence in answer to the statute, although there was no extrinsic evidence to show the time when the indorsements were made, and although more than six years had elapsed between the death of the maker and of the executor. It is observable, that in this case, as well as that of Searle v. Lord Barrington, the party who made the entry was dead at the time of the trial. In the late case of Glendow v. Atkins, in the Exchequer, proof having been given, in an action on a bond, of payment of interest to a third person, an indorsement on the bond by the obligor, stating that the bond was to secure trust-money for that third person, was held admissible, there being a memorandum of the trust on the bond of even date with the bond, and attested by one of the two witnesses to the bond. Such evidence is now excluded by the express enactment of the stat. 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 1.
(l) Brembridge v. Osborn,[5] 1 Starkie's C. 374.

(1) [The law does not positively presume payment of a judgment after nineteen years: That is a question for the jury. Lesley & al. v. Nones, 7 Serg. & R. 510.] {But after a lapse of twenty years, unless there are circumstances accounting for the delay, a presumption of satisfaction arises, which is not subject to the discretion of a jury, being a presumption of law. Cope v. Humphreys, 14 Serg. & R. 15.}

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 473. [2]Id. iii. 447. [3]Id. i. 53. [4]Id. xv. 348. [5]Id. ii. 433.

A receipt for rent due at one time affords a presumption that the rent due at an earlier date has been paid.

Payment may also be presumed from the habit and course of dealing between the parties; as where the practice has been to pay wages, or for goods supplied, weekly, and a demand is made at a distant time (m).

2dly. Where the payment is capable of different applications, proof is frequently necessary to show the application of the payment to a particular debt. The usual rule of law is, that the party who pays money has the Application of payment (A).

(m) Lucas v. Novosilienski, 1 Esp. C. 196. Evans v. Birch, 3 Camp. 10. The action was for the proceeds of milk daily sold to customers by the defendant as agent to the plaintiff; and evidence was given that the course of dealing was for the defendant to pay to the plaintiff every day the money which she had received, without any written voucher passing; and upon this evidence Lord Ellenborough held, that it was to be presumed that the defendant had in fact accounted, and that the onus of proving the contrary lay on the plaintiff.

(A) (A person indebted to the same creditor on different accounts or demands, and making payment, may apply the payment to which account or demand he pleases, and if he fails to make the application the creditor may apply the payment to which account or demand he pleases. Baker v. Stackpoole, 9 Cow. 420. Hall v. Constant, 2 Hall, 185. The right of appropriation, however, by a creditor can only be exercised within a reasonable time after the payment, and by the performance of some act which indicates an intention to make the application. The rule may be thus stated; the debtor has a right to make the appropriation in the first instance, and if he fail to exercise it the same right devolves on the creditor. But where neither has made the appropriation, and the interest of the debtor can be promoted thereby, the law makes the appropriation in the manner most conducive to his advantage; if, however, the interest of the debtor could not be promoted by any particular appropriation, the law then makes it in the manner the most to the advantage of the creditor. Hacker v. Conrad, 12 Serg. & R. 305. See also M'Farlane v. M'Farlane, 1 Tenn. R. 488. A different view has been taken of the rule in some cases, and it has been held in them that the intention of the debtor is to be always the guide in the appropriation of payments. Judge Story, in a learned opinion in Gass v. Stinton, 3 Sumner, 99, maintains, that since the doctrine of the common law, as to the appropriation of indefinite payments, has generally been borrowed from the Roman law; the doctrine of that law is, or at least ought to be held, and may well be held to be the true doctrine to govern in our courts. And hence, if the creditor has a right in any case to elect to what debt to appropriate an indefinite payment, it can only exist when it is utterly indifferent to the debtor to which it may be applied. See also Patterson v. Hull, 9 Cow. 717. The creditor's right to make an election is certainly applicable only to voluntary payments. Blackstone Bank v. Hill, 10 Pick. 129. See also The Westmoreland Bank v. Rainey, 1 Watts, 26. Where A. transmited to B. some money, which A. directed to be distributed among his creditors in certain proportions; it was held to be a trust-fund, and that it could not be attached in the hands of the correspondent. Sharpless v. Welsh et al. 4 Dall. 279. And where a mortgagee of two parcels of land released one of them to an assignee of the mortgagor, the money paid in consideration of such release must be applied in discharge of so much of the sum due on the mortgage, although the mortgagor was still indebted to the mortgagee on other accounts. Hicks v. Bingham, 11 Mass. R. 300. So where a surety on a promissory note gave money to the principal and directed him to pay the note with it, and the principal took it to the holder and told him it was the surety's money sent to pay the note, the holder however declined receiving it upon the note, but took it in payment of another demand against the principal, to which appropriation the principal ultimately assented, it was held, that the holder must be deemed to have received the money of the surety in payment of the note. Reed v. Boardman, 2 Pick. 441. [There may be cases in which the debtor's right of directing the application of his payments to whichever debt he may choose, would be completely exercised without any express direction given at the time. A direction may be evidenced by circumstances as well as by words. A payment may be attended by circumstances which demonstrate its application as completely as words could demonstrate it. A positive refusal to pay one debt, and an acknowledgement of another, with a delivery of the sum due upon it, would be such a circumstance. Per Marshall, C. J. Tayloe v. Sandiford, 7 Wheat. 20, 21. Where a creditor has two demands against his debtor, and the debtor pays a sum of money without directing to which it shall be applied—if the amount paid exceed one of the demands, and is exactly equal to what remains due on the other, it will be considered as having been paid in discharge of that other. Robert & al. v. Garnie, 3 Caines, 14. If an agent, having blended a demand due to his principal with one due to himself, receives a general remittance from the debtor, it shall be applied towards the discharge of both debts in proportion. Barrett v. Lewis, 2 Pick. 123.

Where one debt is guarantied, and another not, the creditor is not bound to apply a payment so as first to relieve the surety. Brewer v. Knapp & al. 1 Pick. 337.] S. P. Clark v. Burdett, 2 Hall, 197.

If the creditor, receiving a payment unappropriated by his debtor, have two demands against him, the one as a co-debtor with a third party, and the other and more recent claim against the payer individually, it seems the law will appropriate the payment first to the extinguishment of the individual debt. But the creditor cannot wait until the individual debt become larger and then appropriate the payment, if sufficient, to the extinguishment of the increase of that debt, leaving a previous debt unpaid. Baker v. Stackpoole, 9 Cow. 420. As a general rule, in the absence of all indications of the will or intentions of the parties, the power to apply it as he chooses, but that if he does not apply it, the party who received it may make the application (n). For these purposes, evi-*825 dence *is admissible of what passed at the time of payment, or of letters enclosing bills or money, and directing their application.

In some instances, the law applies the payment, or the intention of the party paying the money is inferred from the circumstances of the particular case; as where a trader owes 100*l.*, and after he has ceased to trade incurs a further debt, and then pays money on account, it will be set against the old debt (o).

A bond reciting that A. and B. were partners is conditioned for the payment of advances to them; this extends only to advances to the co-partnership; and remittances made subsequently to the death of one are, in the absence of any specific appropriation, to be applied in liquidation of the old balance (p). Where one of several partners who are in debt dies, the sur-

(n) Goddard v. Cox, 2 Str. 1194. Plomer v. Long,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 153. Marryatts v. White,[2] 2 Starkie's C. 101. Matthews v. Welwyn, 4 Ves. 118; Cro. Eliz. 68. Peters v. Anderson, 5 Taunt. 596. Hall v. Wood, 14 East, 243, n. Kirby v. Duke of Marlborough, 2 M. & S. 18. Bosanquet v. Wray,[3] 6 Taunt. 597. Bodenham v. Purchas, 2 B. & A. 39. Smith v. Wigley, 3 M. & S. 174. The party who pays the money ought to appropriate it at the time of payment; per Bayley, J., in Mayfield v. Wadsley,[4] 3 B. & C. 363. But a creditor is not bound to make an immediate application. Simson v. Ingham,[5] 2 B. & C. 65. And he is not bound by an entry in his book which he has not communicated. Ib.; and see Cox v. Troy,[6] 5 B. & A. 474. And therefore a mere transfer in the books of a London banker to the credit of an old firm in the country, one of whose members is lately deceased, is not such an appropriation of subsequent receipts as to discharge the condition of a bond for the payment of all monies advanced to the late firm. Simson v. Ingham,[5] 2 B. & C. 65. A., a solicitor, receives from a client a sum to be paid into Court on the client's account; A. pays the amount in a country bill into his bankers without any notice, being then indebted to them in the sum of 450*l.*; for which they held securities, and as to which they kept an account distinct from the general account; A. dies; the bankers, after notice from the client, still keep the accounts separate, but ultimately deducting the 450*l.* from the proceeds of the bill pay the balance to A.'s executrix; it was held that as there was no agreement to keep the account separate, and the bankers had no notice till after the amount was received of the purpose to which it was intended to be applied, the client was not entitled to recover the proceeds of the bill. Grigg v. Cocks, 4 Sim. 438. Several parties joined as sureties with the principal in a note to his bankers, who carried it to the account in his pass-book, and charged him with interest on it yearly; upon a change of partners in the banking firm, and a balance struck between the old and new firms it was held that the defendants appearing on the face of the note to be principals, and not having confined their liability to the then existing firm, that it continued, and that the action was properly brought in the names of the partners to whom it was given; and that being made payable on demand, there was no obligation in the bankers to appropriate any balance of the principal to the discharge of that note; and that there having been no appropriation by the debtor, the debt could not be considered as discharged. Pease v. Hirst,[7] 10 B. & C. 122. In assumpsit for money had and received to the use of the plaintiffs, as assignees of A. & Co., being the proceeds of a bill remitted by A. & Co. to the defendants, with orders to get it discounted, and apply the proceeds in a specific way, but before they became due A. & Co. became bankrupt, and required to have the bill returned, it not having been discounted, but the defendants received the amount when due; held, that the assignees were entitled to recover, and that the defendants could not set off a debt due to them from the bankrupt. Buchanan v. Findlay,[8] 9 B. & C. 739; and see Key v. Flint,[9] 8 Taunt. 21.

(o) Meggott v. Mills, Ld. Raym. 286; Comb. 463; Supra, tit. Bankruptcy. Dawe v. Holdsworth, Peake's C. 64.

(p) Simson v. Cooke,[1] 1 Bing. 452.

---

law will apply the payment to the extinguishment of the debts according to the priority in time. Seymour v. Van Slyck, 8 Wend. 403. Payments made generally on a bond, payable in instalments, without appropriation at the time, to any particular instalments, will not be applied by law to such as are not then payable, but to such as are payable, according to the dates at which they respectively become so. Seymour v. Sexton, 10 Watts, 255. See also, Berghaus v. Alter, 9 Watts, 386. Goss v. Stinson, supra. So the payment in such a case, is to be applied to a debt that carried interest, rather than to that which carried none; to one secured by a penalty, rather than to that which rests on a simple stipulation. Goss v. Stinson, 3 Sumner, 110. The rule in equity, it would seem, is different. And it has been held that where money has been paid, and no application to particular debts directed by the debtor, or made by the creditor, if it becomes necessary for a court of equity to make the application, it will direct that those debts, for which the security is most precarious, be first extinguished. Field & al. v. Holland & al. 6 Cranch, 8.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 334. [2]Id. iii. 265. [3]Id. i. 201. [4]Id. x. 110. [5]Id. ix. 25. [6]Id. vii. 163. [7]Id. xxi. 38. [8]Id. xvii. 486. [9]Id. iv. 3. [10]Id. viii. 377.

vivors continuing their dealings with a particular creditor, who joins the transactions of the old and new firm in one entire account, payments made from time to time by the survivors are to be applied to the old debts (q). So payments by a debtor from time to time to surviving partners upon a general account, including the whole debt, are to be applied, in the first place, to the old debt (r). In case of a continuing account, such as a banker's cash account, the ordinary appropriation is according to the order of time (s).

*Where an old debt is due, and new debts are contracted, and payments are made from time to time, agreeing in amount with the new debts, a very strong inference arises that the payments were made in respect of the new debts (t), especially in favour of a surety for the new debts (u). *826

Where a creditor has a legal claim on bills of exchange, and also an equitable claim on a mortgage assigned by a third person, and a payment is made by the debtor generally, without prejudice to his claim on any securities, it is to be presumed that the payment is in discharge of the legal debt (x).

Where a secret partner had retired from the firm, and bills given in payment for goods previously supplied to the firm were dishonoured, and new bills were given by the partners who continued in the firm, on the dishonoured bills being delivered up; it was held that these were to be considered as applicable to the old debts, and not to new debts contracted since the dissolution (y).

Where a party placed in the hands of his banker the note of a third person, informing the banker that it was made for his accomodation, and afterwards paid in money generally, after which new credit was given by the banker, it was held that the banker could not recover from the maker more than the balance due on the note, after deducting the amount so paid in (z).

(q) Per Bayley, J., Simson v. Ingham,[1] 2 B. & C. 72; and see Clayton's Case, 1 Merivale, 572. Brook v. Enderby,[2] 2 B. & B. 71.

(r) Bodenham v. Purchas, 2 B. & A. 39. Secus, where the old debt is not brought into the new account. Simson v. Ingham,[1] 2 B. & C. 65. And where there are distinct demands by the whole firm, and by a partner, if the money paid be the money of the partners, the creditor cannot apply the payment to the debt of the individual partner. Thompson v. Brown,[3] M. & M. 40.

(s) Where a continuing account is treated as one entire account by all parties, the rule of appropriation does not apply. In the case of a banking account, there is not room for any other appropriation than that which arises from the order in which the receipts and payments take place and are carried to account; presumably, it is the first sum paid in that is first drawn out; it is the first item on the debit side of the account which is discharged or reduced by the first item on the credit side. The appropriation is made by the very act of setting the two items against each other; upon that principle all accounts are settled, and particularly cash accounts. Clayton's Case, 1 Merivale, 572. In general, where payments are made upon one entire account, they are considered as payments in discharge of the earlier items. Per Bayley, J. in Bodenham v. Purchas, 2 B. & A. 46. A general payment is applicable to a prior legal demand, not to a subsequent equitable one. Goddard v. Hodges, 1 C. & M. 33. Where a bond was given to secure advances to be made by partners, and one partner died, the account was continued, and the two accounts were blended together, subsequent payments being applied generally in reduction of the whole balance; it was held that the subsequent payments must be considered as payments in discharge of the former balance. Bodenham v. Purchas, 2 B. & A. 39; and see Williams v. Rawlinson,[4] 3 Bing. 76.

(t) Marryatts v. White,[5] 2 Starkie's C. 101.

(u) Ibid. per Lord Ellenborough. But it seems that the law will not apply a payment in favour of a surety, unless there be some circumstances to show that payments by the principal were intended to be made in discharge of the particular debt. Plomer v. Long,[6] 1 Starkie's C. 153; and see Kirby v. Duke of Marlborough, 2 M. & S. 18; and Williams v. Rawlinson,[4] 3 Bing. 71.

(x) Birch v. Tebbutt,[7] 2 Starkie's C. 74.

(y) Newmarch v. Clay, 14 East, 239.

(z) Per Lord Kenyon, Hammersley v. Knowlys, 2 Esp. C. 665.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ix. 25. [2]Id. vi. 23. [3]Id. xxii. 242. [4]Id. xi. 34. [5]Id. iii. 265. [6]Id. ii. 334. [7]Id. iii. 252.

Where money is due from a debtor as executor, and other money is due on his own private account, and he makes a payment generally, it must be applied to the latter debt (a).

Where a broker sold goods of A. and also goods of B. to C., and the latter made a payment generally on account, insufficient to discharge both debts, and then became insolvent, it was held that the money so received was to be applied in proportion to the debts (b).

Where a creditor has several demands, some of which cannot be enforced
*827 *because they are illegal, and money be paid generally, it will be applied to the legal demand (c).

A transfer of funds into the names of trustees, with an illegal intent to evade the legacy duty, without any communication made to such trustees, is not a binding appropriation (d).

Solvit ad diem.

In the case of mortgages, bonds, and other instruments, by which the party engages to pay money within a certain time, proof of payment on the last moment of the day will satisfy the allegation on issue taken on the plea of solvit ad diem (e).

What will amount to payment under the circumstances of the particular case is a question of law (f).

(a) Goddard v. Cox, 2 Str. 1194. But see Steindale v. Hankinson, 1 Simons, 393, where it was held, that where B. was indebted to the plaintiff on a balance of account for goods, and B.'s widow continued his trade after his decease, and continued to receive goods and make payments, and she was charged by the creditor with the debt, B.'s debt was discharged by the payments, and that the ultimate balance could not be proved against B.'s estate. It appeared that the plaintiff had adopted the administratrix as his debtor, by making her debtor to the balance, and that accounts had been rendered to her in which she was so debited.

(b) Favenc v. Bennett, 11 East, 36.

(c) Ribbans v. Crickett, 1 B. & P. 264. Wright v. Laing,[1] 3 B. & C. 166. [See Hilton v. Burley, 2 N. Hamp. R. 193.] But where one of the demands is for spirituous liquors, supplied in quantities not amounting to 20*s.* at a time, the receiver of the money may apply it to that demand; the stat. 24 G. 2, c. 40, operating merely to prevent the seller from maintaining the action. Cruickshanks v. Rose, 1 Mo. & R. 100. He may so apply it, although his particulars claim the whole demand, and he may make the appropriation at any time before trial. Philpott v. Jones,[2] 2 Ad. & Ell. 41; 4 N. & M. 14; and see Cruickshanks v. Rose, 1 Mo. & R. 100.

(d) A party had directed his bankers to transfer certain funds to the accounts of certain persons, as trustees for his wife and others, for his son, with a view to evade the legacy duty, and the bankers accordingly did so, and placed the dividends accruing thereon to such accounts respectively; but such transfers were never communicated to the persons so named trustees, and the party had evinced an opinion that he had still a control over the funds; held, that they were not binding appropriations, being made with a fraudulent intent; and it being clear that the entire control had not been parted with, the funds were therefore on his death to be accounted for as part of his personal estate. Gaskell v. Gaskell, 3 Y. & J. 502; and see Wharton v. Walker,[3] 4 B. & C. 163. See further, tit. Appropriation, supra.

(e) Per Lord Kenyon, in Leftly v. Mills, 4 T. R. 173, citing Hudson v. Barton, 1 Roll. R. 189. Cabell v. Vaughan, 1 Saund. 287; Moor, 122, pl. 166; Salk. 578.

(f) Payment in notes which turn out to be worthless is no payment in law. Owenson v. Morse, 7 T. R. 64. Brown v. Kewley, 2 B. & P. 518. Tapley v. Martens, 8 T. R. 451. Bodenham v. Purchas, 2 B. & A. 39. The giving a note of hand does not operate to alter the debt till payment; and therefore, although A. gave a note for rent in arrear to B., and took a receipt for it, it was held that B. might still distrain for the rent. Harris v. Shipway, B. N. P. 182. Secus, if A. indorse a bill or note to B. in payment of a debt, and B. neglect to demand payment from the drawer in time. Ewer v. Clifton, B. N. P. 182; Andr. 190. Where the agreement was for the sale of goods for ready money, and payment was made to the vendor's brother in a bill of exchange, accepted by the vendor, which when due had been dishonoured, and the bill, though objected to in the first instance, was taken and not returned, it was held, in the absence of fraud, to be a good payment as against the assignee of the vendor. Mayer v. Nias,[4] 1 Bing. 311; infra, tit. Set-off. The taking of credit may be equivalent to payment. A. receives country bank-notes in payment from B., and by an agreement between B. and the country bank A. has credit for the amount; it is equivalent to a payment by the bank. Gillard v. Wise,[5] 5 B. & C. 134. Or it may be by a transfer of a debt. If A. be indebted to B., and B. to C. in the same amount, and by agreement C. takes A. for his debtor, this constitutes a loan from C. to A. and operates as a payment by B. to C. See Wade v. Wilson, 1 East, 195. Surtees v. Hubbard, 4 Esp. C. 203. The observations of Holroyd, J. in Bodenham v. Purchas, 2 B. & A. 47. Browning v. Stollard,[6] 5 Taunt. 450. Cecil v. Harris, Cro. Eliz. 140; supra. Secus, where no new person agrees to become a debtor. A., B. and C. being partners, A. retires from the firm; a transfer of a debt from A., B. and C. to D. from the old to the new firm, with the assent of D., does not discharge A. David v. Ellice,[7] 5 B. & C. 196;

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. x. 44. [2]Id. xxix. 24. [3]Id. x. 302. [4]Id. viii. 330. [5]Id. xi. 177. [6]Id. i. 154. [7]Id. xi. 201.

*The payment of money into court was formerly proved by the production of the rule for paying it into court (g). It was proved either by the plaintiff or the defendant. Payment of money into court.

But now by the rule of Hil. T., 4 W. 4, such payment must in all cases be pleaded. The effect of paying money into court by way of admission seems to remain as it was before.

The effect of paying money into court, upon a special count, or generally when the declaration contains a special count, is an admission of the right to recover on that count, which supersedes the necessity of the usual proof of the making of the contract (h) (A). Effect of.

and see Lodge v. Dicas,[1] 3 B. & A. 611. Newmarch v. Clay, 14 East, 239. Where the defendants gave orders to their bankers to place a sum to the credit of the plaintiffs, so as to make the same as a bill of one month, and the brokers assented, but treated it as a payment to be made at a future day, and gave notice to the defendants accordingly, and became bankrupts before the day, it was held to be no payment. Pedder v. Watt,[2] 2 Ch. C. T. M. 619. An execution against the person of the debtor operates as a legal satisfaction of the debt. Cohen v. Cunningham, 8 T. R. 123. Burnaby's Case, Str. 653. Goddard v. Vanderheyden, 3 Wils. 262. Payment to the obligee of a bond, after notice of assignment, is not sufficient to discharge the obligor (in equity). Baldwin v. Billingsley, 2 Vern. 539. Ashcomb's Case, 1 Ch. Ca. 232. An order by a creditor on his debtor to pay the amount to a third person, after being assented to by the debtor, is not revocable. Hodgson v. Anderson,[3] 3 B. & C. 842. If A. owe B. 100*l.*, and B. owe the same sum to C., and the three met, and it is agreed that A. shall pay C. the 100*l.*, B.'s debt is extinguished, and C. may recover from A. Per Buller, J., in Tatlock v. Harris, 8 T. R. 174; and per Bayley, J., 3 B. & C. 855. So if A. engage to pay C. the amount due to B. when ascertained. Crawfoot v. Gurney,[4] 9 Bing. 372. And C. may recover from A. notwithstanding the intermediate bankruptcy of B. Ib.; and see above, 79, 80. Payment of one entire rent to the clerk of seven trustees of a charity, coming to their title at different times, is prima facie evidence of a joint title. Doe v. Grant, 12 East, 221. In general, money voluntarily paid under a knowledge of the facts cannot be recovered. Supra, tit. Assumpsit. Gower v. Popkin,[5] 2 Starkie's C. 85; 1 B. & A. 571. To a rector in lieu of tithes, when exempt from rate. R. v. Boldero,[6] 4 B. & C. 467.

(g) Israel v. Benjamin, 3 Camp. 40; Tidd's Pr. 645, 7th edit.

(h) 4 T. R. 579. Cox v. Parry, 1 T. R. 464. Elliott v. Callow, 2 Salk. 597. Guillod v. Nocke, 1 Esp. C. 347. Watkins v. Towers, 2 T. R. 275; and see Cox v. Brain, 3 Taunt. 95. Payment of money into court admits everything which the plaintiff must have proved to recover it. P. C.,[7] 1 B. & C. 4. And such admission is conclusive, 1 C. M. & R. 207; which a payment before action brought is not, Ib.; to show that the plaintiff has a legal demand to the extent of the money brought in. Blackburn v. Schoole, 2 Camp. 341. It admits the right to sue in the particular capacity (Tuson v. Batting, 3 Esp. C. 192), and supersedes the usual proofs in the case of a bill of exchange. Gutteridge v. Smith, 2 H. Bl. 374. Jenkins v. Tucker, 1 H. & B. 90. Bennett v. Francis, 2 B. & P. 550; 2 Camp. 357; Peake's C. 14. Dyer v. Ashton,[8] 1 B. & C. 3; 2 D. R. 19. It admits the sufficiency of the stamp. Israel v. Benjamin, 3 Camp. 40. It conclusively admits the character in which the plaintiff sues. Lipscombe v. Holmes, 2 Camp. 441. As also that in which the defendant is sued. Lucy v. Walrond,[9] 3 Bing. N. C. 841. It excludes (where the work was done under one contract) the defendant from objecting to the non-joinder of a co-plaintiff. Walker v. Rawson, 1 Mo. & R. 250. If all the defendants pay money into court, there being but one contract in fact, they are excluded from the defence that one of them was not a party. Ravenscroft v. Wise, 1 C. M. & R. 203. Where several breaches of covenant are assigned, payment on a single breach admits the deed. Randall v. Lynch, 2 Camp. 352. Payment into court generally, where no special contract is stated, admits no more than that the sum paid in is due; but where there is a special contract, the payment admits that contract. Seaton v. Benedict,[10] 5 Bing. 31; and 2 M. & P. 67, 301. In an action on a security bearing interest; the defendant pays into court a sum sufficient to cover the principal, and interest up to the time of the action brought but not up to the time of paying money into court; the plaintiff is entitled to proceed in the action, and may recover damages for the remaining interest. Kidd v. Walker,[11] 2 B. & Ad. 705. A sum of 4*l.* is paid into court on the account stated; the plaintiff cannot recover a larger sum by showing that on an application to the defendant he admitted that something was due, insisting however on a cross-demand, with proof that a larger sum in fact was due; for the account stated is applicable to but one accounting. Kennedy v. Withers,[12] 3 B. & Ad. 767. Payment of money into court admits the contract and breach of it as alleged, but asserts that no more was due than the sum paid in. Per Bayley, B., Lechmere v. Flecher, 3 Tyr. 455. On a general account, where it appears that there is one entire contract between the parties, the payment of money on the general count admits the contract. Meager v. Smith, 4 B. & Ad. 673. Secus if there be no entire contract. Where money had been paid into court on a general indebitatus count, Parke, B. held that the plaintiffs, to recover a further sum on a further cause of action, were bound to prove the partnership of the plaintiffs.

(A) (A payment of money into court admits the contract and damages only pro tanto, and if the plaintiff does not establish more at the trial, he must be nonsuited or have a verdict against him. Donnell v. The Columbia Ins. Co., 2 Sumner, C. C. R. 366.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. v. 397. [2] Id. xviii. 432. [3] Id. x. 247. [4] Id. xxiii. 309. [5] Id. iii. 257. [6] Id. x. 380. [7] Id. viii. 4. [8] Id. xxxii. 349. [9] Id. xv. 354. [10] Id. xxii. 174. [11] Id. xxiii. 182. [12] Id. xxiv. 138.

*Thus a general payment admits the policy of insurance, alleged in a special count, and precludes the defendant from proving by evidence that the policy has been vacated by a material alteration (i). And in an action by a farmer of tithes under the statute, the payment admits the title, and reduces the question to the quantum of damages (k).

It has even been held that the admission by paying money into court will support the contract stated upon the declaration, although it appear upon the evidence, that if the admission had not been made the plaintiff must have been nonsuited (l); as where in an action of assumpsit for negligence in the carriage of goods, it appeared that according to the terms of the contract actually made, the plaintiff was not entitled to recover at all (m).

Admission, by paying money into court.

And such payment amounts to an admission of a contract for goods sold and delivered, with respect to goods of the plaintiff tortiously converted by the defendant to his own use (n).

Although in the case of a special contract, the payment admits the contract, yet in the case of indebitatus assumpsit, where the demand is made up of several distinct items, the payment admits no more than that the sum paid in is due (o). And it seems that the liability as to the rest may be disturbed under this plea, although non assumpsit be not pleaded (p).

But in an action against a justice of the peace for an action done in his official capacity, the bringing money into court by virtue of a statute, does not, it is said, admit the right of action (q).

In an action against an infant for work and labour done for him, the payment of money into court does not exclude infancy as a defence, for to that amount he may have been liable for necessaries (r).

*830 *Such payment operates merely as evidence of the defendant's admission of the contract, upon which a jury may act; and if they do not in a special verdict expressly find the contract, but merely the fact of the payment of money into court, it seems that the Court cannot make the inference (s).

Paley & others v. Barker, York Lent Assizes, 1835. The payment of money into court, in an action for use and occupation, precludes the defendant from questioning the plaintiff's title or alleging the non-joinder of another as co-plaintiff. Dolby v. Isles, 3 P. & D. 287. In an action on a guaranty, the plea admits an agreement signed according to the Statute of Frauds. Middleton v. Brewer, Peake's C. 15. The plea admits the right to sue in the court in which the action was brought. Miller v. Williams, 5 Esp. C. 19. The performance of conditions precedent. Harrison v. Douglas,[1] 3 Ad. & Ell. 396. The declaration stating a contract to pay a specified sum for particular articles, the payment of part of the money into court, by admitting the contract, admits the sum originally due, and the question is as to the remainder. Cox v. Brain, 3 Taunt. 95. Payment generally admits something to be due on each count. Stoveld v. Brewer, 2 B. & A. 116. But see Stafford v. Clarke,[2] 2 Bing. 383. Drake v. Lewin, 4 Tyr. 730.

(i) Andrews v. Palsgrave, 9 East, 325; and supra, note (h).

(k) Broadhurst v. Baldwin, 4 Price, 58; and see Cox v. Parry, 1 T. R. 464.

(l) Yate v. Willan, 2 East, 128. Pigott v. Dunn, Ibid. Where goods had been sold by sample at a stipulated price, and the defendant in an action of indebitatus assumpsit for goods sold and delivered, paid money into court, it was held at Nisi Prius that he could not afterwards insist upon the inferiority of the goods, and that he ought to have returned them. [3]2 Starkie's C. 103; sed qu.

(m) Yate v. Willan, 2 East, 128; infra, 830, note (x). But in a subsequent case the court held that this case could not be supported to the full extent, and that the defendant might still avail himself of a stipulation by which the amount of damages was limited. When it appears that there is a material variance between the contract declared upon, and the real contract, the plaintiff, it seems, cannot recover; for although the defendant admits the contract stated, yet the plaintiff must show damages from the breach of that contract, which he cannot do where the damage has resulted from the breach of another and different contract. See Mellish v. Allnutt, 2 M. & S. 106; infra, 830.

(n) Bennett v. Francis, 2 B. & P. 550. Qu. whether, independently of this consideration, the plaintiff might not waive the tort, and recover as for goods sold and delivered. Vide supra, 83.

(o) Meager v. Smith,[4] 4 B. & Ad. 673. Seaton v. Benedict,[5] 5 Bing. 32.

(p) Booth v. Howard, 5 Dowl. 438. (q) 13 East, 202, 3.

(r) Hitchcock v. Tyson, 2 Esp. C. 482; and see Cox v. Parry, infra.

(s) Mellish v. Allnutt, 2 M. & S. 106.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxx. 125. [2]Id. ix. 437. [3]Id. iii. 206. [4]Id. xxiv. 138. [5]Id. xv. 354.

Where the plaintiff had misled the defendant, and induced him to prepare to try a question of fraud, the Court would not permit him to insist upon the admission made by the payment of money into court, so as to exclude the defendant's evidence of fraud (t).

Such payment merely admits the contract and damages pro tanto, and the plaintiff will be nonsuited unless he prove that a greater sum is due (u). And where a limitation has been annexed to the real contract, the effect of which is, under certain circumstances, to preclude the plaintiff from recovering more than a specified sum, the defendant, although he has paid money into court generally, may prove the limitation, and show that the plaintiff is not entitled to recover more than has been paid into court.

In an action against a carrier, on a breach of an assumpsit to carry goods safely, 5*l.* having been paid into court generally, it was held that it was competent to the defendant to prove notice to the plaintiff that no more than 5*l.* would be accounted for, for any goods, unless entered as such, and paid for accordingly (x); for the notice did not alter the contract for safe carriage, but merely limited the amount of damages for breach of that contract.

In an action on a valued policy, the payment of money into court upon a count which states a total loss by capture, does not admit a total loss, and the plaintiff is bound to prove a damage exceeding the sum so paid in (y). And where the declaration was for the price of bark sold to the defendant, to be paid for at the average price, as ascertained on a day specified, it was held that the payment of money into court did not admit the average price to be as stated in the declaration (z).

Such payment into court does not preclude the defendant from objecting to the illegality of the contract, in order to bar the plaintiff from recovering more than has been paid into court (a). Neither is the defendant precluded from insisting that the loss complained of did not result from the breach of the particular contract (b).

Effect of paying money into court.

Thus, where money is paid into court generally, on a declaration containing a special count on a policy, the defendant may dispute his further liability with respect to goods which were not loaded according to the terms of the policy (c). Such payment does not preclude the defendant from *taking an objection to the recovering beyond that sum, although if money had not been paid into court, the objection would have been an answer to the whole demand (d). *831

Where the payment into court is applicable indifferently to several (t) Muller v. Hartshorne, 3 B. & P. 556. The declaration contained a special count on a policy of insurance, and the money counts, and money had been paid into court generally.

(u) 3 T. R. 657; 2 Salk. 597; 4 T. R. 10; 7 T. R. 372; 2 H. B. 374. Rucker v. Palsgrave, 1 Taunt. 419; infra, note (f).

(x) Clarke v. Gray, 6 East, 564. In the previous case of Yates v. Willan (2 East, 128), it was held, that in such an action, and payment of money into court, it was sufficient for the plaintiff to produce the rule, and prove the value of the goods, to entitle him to recover to the full amount; and that the defendant could not avail himself of a notice that he would not be responsible for more than 5*l.* unless, &c. But in the latter case of Clarke v. Gray, the Court intimated that the former case could not be supported to the full extent. See also Cox v. Parry, 1 T. R. 464.

(y) Rucker v. Palsgrave, 1 Taunt. 419; 1 Camp. 557. Payment of money into Court in an action on a promissory note payable by instalments, is an admission only to the extent paid, and does not exclude the Statute of Limitations as to a further sum payable on the same note. Reid v. Dickens,[1] 5 B. & Ad. 499.

(z) Stoveld v. Brewin, 2 B. & A. 116. See also Everth v. Bell,[2] 7 Taunt. 450; Lechmere v. Fletcher, 1 C. & M. 623.

(a) Cox v. Parry, 1 T. R. 464. (b) 2 M. & S. 106.

(c) Mellish v. Allnutt, 2 M. & S. 106.

(d) Cox v. Parry, 1 T. R. 464; where the action was on a policy which was void.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxvii. 113. [2]Id. ii. 171.

grounds of claim alleged by the plaintiff, the plaintiff cannot apply the admission resulting from the payment of money into court generally, so as to make it evidence of any one particular ground of claim.

The plaintiff, on a declaration on a policy on fish, free from average, unless general, or the ship be stranded, averred that the ship was stranded, bulged, damaged and wrecked, and it was held that payment of money into court was not evidence of a total loss, and of a stranding; for the loss, consistently with the declaration, might have arisen from other means than by stranding (e).

If money be paid into court generally, and the plaintiff insists upon several claims, some of which are illegal, and others legal, the Court will apply the payment to the legal demand (f). And where money cannot be paid into court upon some of the counts, the payment will be applied to those upon which it might legally be made (g) (1).

If as to part of the demand the plaintiff be entitled to recover, but not as to the rest, the payment will be attributed to the former, and will not entitle the plaintiff to recover in respect of the latter demand (h). Such payment does not take a case out of the Statute of Limitations (i).

The rule of Trinity Term, 1 W. 4, as to annexing the particulars of the plaintiff's demand to the declaration, does not make the payment of money into court to operate as an admission of such particulars (k).

Where the defendant has taken out a rule for the payment of money into court, but has not paid the taxed costs to the plaintiff, and the plaintiff proceeds in the action in order to recover the costs, it is sufficient for him to produce the rule of court and the master's allocatur, and this will entitle him to a verdict for nominal damages (l), unless the defendant prove that he has paid the costs under the rule, pursuant to the master's allocatur. And it is not necessary to such case for the plaintiff to prove a previous demand of costs, where they have been taxed, but the defendant has omitted to pay them (m).

Unless the plaintiff proves his claim to a larger sum than that which has been paid into court, he is liable upon the production of the rule to be nonsuited (n). But if the plaintiff, after taking the money out of court, take a verdict for the whole sum, without deducting the sum paid into court, the Court will set it aside, although no evidence be given of the *832 rule (o). It has *been doubted whether the production of the rule by the defendant is to be considered as evidence given by him, so as to entitle the plaintiff's counsel to a reply; but by a rule of the Court of Common Pleas, it is not to be so considered (p).

(e) Everth v. Bell,[1] 7 Taunt. 450; 1 Moore, 158.

(f) Ribbans v. Crickett, 1 B. & P. 264. The late rules require illegality to be pleaded; but where such a defence is open, it seems that payment into court will be no waver of the incapacity to sue. See Wills v. Longridge, 5 Ad. & Ell. 383.

(g) Cotterell v. Apsey,[2] 6 Taunt. 322; 1 Marsh. 581.

(h) Where the action was for use and occupation by the bankrupt, and afterwards by his assignees (the defendants) at their special instance and request, and the defendants paid money into court, which on the evidence was sufficient to cover their own occupation, they had a verdict as to the rest. Naish v. Tatlock, 2 H. B 319.

(i) Long v. Greville,[3] 3 B. & C. 10. Reid v. Dickens,[4] 5 B. & Ad. 499.

(k) Booth v. Howard, 5 Dowl. 438. Meager v. Smith,[5] 4 B. & Ad. 673.

(l) Horsburgh v. Orme, K. B. Sitt. in H. T. 49 Geo. 3, 1 Camp. 558, in note.

(m) Smith v. Smith, 2 N. R. 473. Smith v. Battersby, 7 Price, 674.

(n) By the terms of the rule. See 3 T. R. 657; 4 Salk. 597; 4 T. R. 10; 7 T. R. 372; 2 H. B. 374.

(o) 2 Taunt. 267. (p) 2 Taunt. 267.

(1) {The payment of money into Court on several general counts, one of which only is applicable to the plaintiff's demand, admits a cause of action on that count only. Stafford v. Clarke, 2 Bingh. 377.}

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 171. [2] Id. i. 400. [3] Id. x. 5. [4] Id. xvii. 113. [5] Id. xxiv. 138.

Of taking money out of court.

The act of taking money out of court, and accepting it with costs in satisfaction, will not operate as conclusive evidence in a collateral action, to show that nothing more was due.

By the defendant.

In an action on the statute, for selling five chaldrons of coals, and delivering them short by sixteen bushels, the plaintiff proved, that in an action by the present defendant for the price of the five chaldrons, the plaintiff, then defendant, paid the amount into court, minus the value of the sixteen bushels, and that the then plaintiff took the money out, and had his costs; and this the plaintiff contended was conclusive to show the deficiency. But Lord Ellenborough held, that as the act of the attorney in taking the money was equivocal, he would admit evidence for the purpose of explaining the intention (q).

If money has been paid into court in a case where it could not regularly be paid in, the plaintiff should move to discharge the rule (r).

Money which has been paid into court cannot be recovered back, though it was paid wrongfully, for it is acknowledged on the record to be due (s).

Where, on a plea of payment, the defendant proved payment to the plaintiff's attorney, on his account, held that the attorney was a competent witness for the plaintiff to show that the defendant afterwards called upon him and got back the money (t).

PEDIGREE.

In proving A. to be the heir-at-law (u) of B., in strict and formal detail (v), it is necessary to prove, 1st, their relationship through their common ancestor (x); and, 2dly, negative proof is requisite that no other descendant from the common ancestor impedes the descent to A. (y).

(q) Hildyard v. Blowers, 5 Esp. C. 69, cor. Lord Ellenborough; the defendant had a verdict.

(r) Griffiths v. Williams, 1 T. R. 710.

(s) Malcolm v. Fullarton, 2 T. R. 645. And the Court will not order money paid in through mistake to be restored, unless it appear that some fraud or deceit has been practised upon the defendant. 2 B. & P. 392.

(t) Bowers v. Evans, 3 Cr. M. & R. 214.

(u) Vide supra, tit. Heir. One born in America after the treaty of 1783, is an alien, and incapable of inheriting lands in England. Doe v. Acklam,[1] 2 B. & C. 779.

(v) As to presumptive evidence, vide infra, 833.

(x) By the late stat. 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 106, several important alterations have been made relating to the descent of real property. By sec. 2, the descent shall always be traced from the purchaser, and the person last entitled to the land, shall, for the purposes of the Act, be considered to have been the purchaser, unless it shall be proved that he inherited the same; and in like manner, the last person from whom the land shall be proved to have been inherited shall be considered to have been the purchaser, unless it shall be proved that he inherited the same.—By sec. 5, no brother or sister shall be considered to inherit immediately from his brother or sister; but every descent to a brother or sister shall be traced through the parent.—Sec. 6. Every lineal ancestor shall be capable of being heir to any of his issue; and in every case where there shall be no issue of the purchaser, his nearest lineal ancestor shall be his heir, in preference to any person who would have been entitled to inherit, either by tracing his descent through such lineal ancestor, or in consequence of there being no descendant of such lineal ancestor; so that the father shall be preferred to a brother or sister, and a more remote lineal ancestor to any of his issue other than a nearer lineal ancestor or his issue. Sec. 7. The male line is to be preferred. No female maternal ancestor shall be capable of inheriting, until all the male maternal ancestors and their descendants shall have failed.—Sec. 8. Where there shall be a failure of male paternal ancestors of the party from whom the descent is to be traced and their descendants, the mother of his more remote male paternal ancestor, or her descendants, shall be the heir or heirs of such person, in preference to the mother of a less remote male paternal ancestor or her descendants; and where there shall be a failure of male maternal ancestors of such person and their descendants, the mother of his more remote male maternal ancestor, and her descendants, shall be the heir or heirs of such person, in preference to the mother of a less remote male maternal ancestor and her descendants. By sec. 11, the Act shall not extend to any descent before Jan. 1st, 1834.

(y) The person who claims as heir at law to the person last seised, must prove not only his relationship, but the failure of issue from the persons who intervene in the course of descent, by negative evidence (Richards v. Richards, B. R. 4 Geo. 2, Ford's MSS.). Where the plaintiff claimed as heir by descent, and proved the death of his elder brothers, but did not prove that they died without issue, it was held to be insufficient; but reputation of the negative, where such brothers had been absent from the family, would have been sufficient. Doe v. Griffin, 15 East, 293; infra, 604.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. ix. 238.

Proof of relationship.

*1st. In order to prove the relationship of A. and E. supposing C. to be the common ancestor, and D. and E. to be his son and grandson in the one line, and B. and A. to be his son and grandson in the other, the direct course would be to prove the marriage of C. and his wife, and that B. and D. were his legitimate children (z); and also the marriages of B. and D., and that A. and E. were respectively the issue of those marriages (a).

2dly. Proof is requisite of the deaths of E. and B. (b), and also that B., C., D. and E. had no issue, which, according to the well-known rules which regulate descents, would take in preference to A., or if they had, then to show the failure of such issue by negative evidence, or to prove that the issue, if any exists, which would otherwise take in preference to A., is of half-blood, &c. (c).

Presumptive evidence.

As in matters of pedigree it is impossible to prove the relationships of past generations by living witnesses, resort must usually be had to traditionary declarations made by those now dead who were likely to know the fact, and to declare the truth, or to evidence of general reputation.

Proof by declarations, &c.

Proof of the cohabitation of parties who publicly acknowledged each other in the characters of husband and wife, their treating and educating children as their legitimate offspring, according to their rank and station in life, and their acknowledging them to be such in the face of the world; or,

*834 *on the other hand, the representation and treatment of a child as illegitimate; are all of them solemn and deliberate admissions relating to facts necessarily within the knowledge of the parties making them, accompanying and corresponding with their acts and conduct. Such representations are therefore admissible in evidence, on the broad and general elementary principle already adverted to (d).

They are not to be considered as mere wanton assertions, upon which no reliance can be placed; on the contrary, in the absence of any motive for committing a fraud upon society, it is in the highest degree improbable that the parties should have been guilty of practising a continued system of imposition upon the rest of the world, involving a conspiracy in its nature very difficult to be executed. So far, upon the strictest principles, the evidence is receivable, but the necessity of the case warrants a far greater latitude.

(z) By direct proof, or by copies from the registers, with evidence of identity, or by reputation where direct proof, &c. cannot be had.

(a) By the testimony of members of the family, or of those conversant with it, or by reputation. See below, 833, 843.

(b) Supra, 364. Proof of letters of administration to the effects of A. B. is not sufficient evidence of the death of A. B. Thompson v. Donaldson, 3 Esp. C. 63; and per Park, J., Lanc. Sp. Ass. 1830. See Moors v. Bernales, 1 Rus. 307; Polhill v. Polhill, Hil. 1701, cited Bac. Ab. Evidence, F. In order to establish the determination of a life estate, hearsay evidence of the death of the cestui que vie is not, as in the case of pedigree, sufficient; nor is the register of a dissenting chapel, nor are inscriptions on the tombstones in the adjacent burial-ground, receivable. Whittuck v. Waters,[1] 4 C. & P. 375. Where the brothers of an ancestor to whom the plaintiff claimed to be heir died a century ago, held that, in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, it might be presumed that they died without issue. Doe d. Oldham v. Woolley,[2] 8 B. & C. 22; and 3 C. & P. 412.

(c) By the late stat. 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 106, s. 9, any person related to the person from whom the descent is to be traced by the half-blood shall be capable of being his heir, and the place in which any such relation by the half-blood shall stand in the order of inheritance, so as to be entitled to inherit, shall be next after any relation in the same degree of the whole blood, and his issue, where the common ancestor shall be a male, and next after the common ancestor where such common ancestor shall be a female; so that the brother of the half-blood on the part of the father shall inherit next after the sisters of the whole blood on the part of the father and their issue, and the brother of the half-blood on the part of the mother shall inherit next after the mother.

(d) Supra, Vol. I. tit. REPUTATION.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 427. [2]Id. xv. 150.

All those who knew the actual state of the family at a remote period may now be deceased, and very possibly no means of proof remain, except such as are derived from traditionary declarations of members of the family, or persons connected with it, now deceased, or from general reputation (1). The great difficulty of proving remote facts of this nature renders it necessary that the Courts should relax from the strictness which is required in the proof of modern facts, in the ordinary manner, by living witnesses (e).

Hence the traditionary declarations of deceased members of the family are in general admissible as evidence, after the deaths of those persons, as to the degrees of relationship of the different branches of the family, their intermarriages, the number of their children, and the times of their respective births (f).

Such declarations, made by persons who must have known the facts, and who laboured under no temptation to deceive, carry with them such a presumption of truth, as, coupled with the great difficulty of procuring more certain evidence, sanctions their reception.

Connection of the declarant with the family.

To warrant the admission of declarations relating to pedigree, it is essential, 1st, that the parties who made the declaration be proved to be dead at the time of the trial, otherwise it is not the best evidence (g); 2dly, that the declarants were likely to know the facts. The tradition must therefore be derived from persons so connected with the family, that it is natural and likely, from their domestic habits and connections, that they are speaking the truth, and that they could not be mistaken. Lord Eldon observed (h), that "declarations in a family, descriptions in wills, inscriptions upon monuments (i), in bibles (k) and registry-books, are all admitted upon the principle that they are the natural effusions of a party who must know the truth, and who speaks upon an occasion when the mind stands in an even position, without any temptation to exceed or fall short of the truth."

*Proof by one of the family that a member of it went abroad many years ago, and was supposed to have died there, and that the witness never heard in the family that he had ever been married, was held in a late case to be good evidence of the death of that person (l). *835

Declarations by the deceased husband as to the legitimacy of the wife, are admissible after his death; for although he was not connected by blood, (e) See the observations of Le Blanc, J. in Higham v. Ridgway, 10 East, 120.

(f) See Higham v. Ridgway, 10 East, 120; the case of the Berkeley Peerage, 4 Camp. 404; and the Lord Chancellor's judgment in the case of Vowles v. Young, 13 Ves. 143.

(g) Supra, Part I. tit. REPUTATION. Pendrel v. Pendrel, 2 Str. 924; B. N. P. 113; 1 M. & S. 689. Doe v. Ridgway,[1] 4 B. & A. 53; supra, 368.

(h) Whitelocke v. Baker, 13 Ves. 514.

(i) A copy of a mural inscription in a church, made at the time when, by repairing the church, it was effaced, in pencil, afterwards traced over with ink, was held to be admissible on a question of pedigree. Slaney v. Wade, 7 Sim. 595.

(k) Entries in a religious book treated by deceased owners as important family memorials, were held admissible, although it did not appear by whom they were made. Hood v. Beauchamp, 8 Sim. 26.

(l) Doe v. Griffin, 15 East, 293. Proof by an elderly person that a particular individual went abroad to the West Indies many years ago, when he was a young man, and that, according to the repute of the family, he had afterwards died in the West Indies, and that the witness had never heard in the family of his having been married, is prima facie evidence that that person died without issue (Ibid. and see Doe d. George v. Jesson, 6 East, 80). Proof that the husband went abroad, and had not been heard of seven years, was held to be sufficient evidence to entitle the widow to her dower (3 Bac. Ab. 369, 6th edit.). So evidence that a tenant for life of premises, born in 1759, had absented himself from his relations ever since 1804, given by a person who resided near the spot, but who was not a member of the family, was held to be good evidence to show that the tenant for life was dead in the year 1818, although no member of the family was called as a witness. Doe d. Lloyd v. Deakin,[2] 4 B. & A. 433.

(1) [Hearsay is evidence in case of pedigree only where the fact sought to be established is ancient, and no better evidence can be obtained. Briney v. Hann, 3 Marsh. 326.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 347. [2]Id. vi. 476.

yet it is probable that he would be well acquainted with the fact, and possess better means of information than a remote relation would (m).

But declarations of mere strangers are inadmissible evidence as to pedigree (n); it has lately been held, that even the declarations of those who lived in intimacy with them, and who consequently possessed the means of judging, if not relations, are inadmissible (o) (A).

Absence of suspicion.

3dly. The very foundation on which such declarations are admisible fails *where it is probable that the parties who made the declarations laboured under any temptation to misrepresent the facts (p); when that is the case, such evidence is admissible. Although the practice on the subject has not been uniform (q), it seems to be now settled by the cases of the

*836

(m) Vowles v. Young, 13 Ves. 143. Doe d. Northey v. Harvey,[1] 1 Ry. & M. 297.

(n) 3 T. R. 723. But where a trustee conveyed property to a party, entitled as a child of a particular marriage, by deed reciting that he was such child, held, that as an act done under a state of things which, if true, the trustee would have been compellable to do, and coming out of proper custody, the deed was admissible on a question of pedigree, although res inter alios acta, and was not the description of evidence to which the doctrine of lis mota was applicable; held, also, that where a testator bequeaths a legacy to a person designated as a "relation," it is to be presumed that he was a legitimate relation. Slaney v. Wade, 7 Sim. 595; and affirmed 1 Myl. & Cr. 338.

(o) See the observations of Buller, J. 7 T. R. 303; where he says, "I admit that the declarations of members of a family, and perhaps of others living in intimacy with them, are received in evidence as to pedigrees." See also Lord Kenyon's observations, Ib. And see B. N. P. 295; where, in the case of the Duke of Athol v. Lord Ashburnham, Mr. Worthington's declarations were admitted in evidence. In Weeks v. Sparke, 1 M. & S. 679, Le Blanc, J. says, "In questions of pedigree, the evidence of what persons connected with the family may have been heard to say, is received as to the state of the family." And see Higham v. Ridgway, 10 East, 120. See also Lord Kenyon's observations in R. v. Eriswell, 3 T. R. 723. Doe d. Lloyd v. Deakin, 4 B. & A. 443; supra, note (l). But in the case of Johnson v. Lawson,[2] 2 Bingh. 86, it was held that the declaration of servants and intimate friends of the family were not admissible in cases of pedigree. {Chapman v. Chapman, 2 Conn. R. 347. See however, Jackson v. Cooley, 8 Johns. R. 99, (2d edit.). Lessee of Banert v. Day, 3 Wash. C. C. R. 243.} The declarations of an illegitimate child were held not within the rule as to members of the family of his reputed father, and have been rejected in a question of pedigree, as evidence of reputation. Doe v. Barton, 2 M. & R. 28. A declaration by a party that she heard her first husband say, that after his death the estate would go to F., and after his death to his heir, under whom the lessor of the plaintiff claimed, is evidence to show the relation of F. to the family. Doe v. Randall,[3] 2 M. & P. 20. Where A. claims property as the heir at law of B., the declarations of C. deceased, who is proved to be a member of the family of A., are evidence to prove B. to be a member of the family of C. and A., though there be no evidence to show that C. was in any manner recognized by B. as his relation. Monckton v. The Attorney-General, 2 R. & M. 156; by Brougham, Lord Chancellor; and the evidence was afterwards admitted by Littledale, J. On a question of legitimacy, the declarations of deceased persons supposed to have been married (who might themselves have been examined when living), are admissible to prove the fact of marriage. R. v. Inhabitants of Barnsley, 6 T. R. 330. The declarations of a deceased parent, though they are evidence of the time of a child's birth, are not evidence of the place. R. v. Inhabitants of Erith, 8 East, 539.

(p) Supra, Vol. I. tit. Traditionary Declarations. Lord Eldon's observations, supra, 834.

(q) In the case of Goodright v. Moss, (Cowp. 591), the Court held that an answer in Chancery, by the mother of the lessor of the plaintiff, to a bill filed by the committee of a lunatic, the person last seised, against the lessor of the plaintiff, and his mother, in which she stated the lessor of the plaintiff to be illegitimate, was evidence against the plaintiff; but this appears to have been so decided on the general principles relating to the admissibility of declarations in cases of pedigree; and the particular objection, as to the time of making the declaration, does not appear to have been urged. It is also to be observed, that it was unnecessary to decide upon this point, the defendant being clearly entitled to a new trial, on the ground that other evidence, viz. of declarations made by the father, had also been rejected, which clearly were admissible; such evidence, however, appears to have been received by Lord Camden, in the case of Hayward v. Firmin, Sitt. after Trin. T. 1766, cited by Lawrence, J. in the case of the Berkeley Peerage; and see Nicholls v. Parker, 14 East, 331, in note. On the other hand, Reynolds, C. B., in a case cited Vin. Abr. Ev. I. b. 21, as tried Dev. Spring Ass. 1731, rejected such evidence arising subsequently to the controversy.

(A) (It is not every statement or tradition of a family that can be admitted as evidence. The tradition must be from persons having had such a connection with the party to whom it relates, that it is natural and likely from their domestic habits and connections that they are speaking the truth and could not be mistaken. Stein v. Bowman, 13 Peters, 209. Jackson v. Browner, 19 John. R. 37. Gregory v. Baugh, 4 Rand. 611. But in Lessee of Banert v. Day, 3 Wash. C. C. R. 242, it was held that it is not a valid objection to the competency of a witness who deposes as to general reputation of pedigree, that he is not a member of the family, or intimately acquainted with it. Such evidence is, however, entitled to more or less weight in proportion to the means of information possessed by the witness.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxi. 443. [2]Id. ix. 329. [3]Id. xvii. 200.

Banbury Peerage (r) and Berkeley Peerage (s), that a declaration as to (r) Supra, 196.

(s) In the case of the Berkeley Peerage, before a committee of privileges of the House of Lords (4 Camp. 401), in order to prove the legitimacy of the claimant of the peerage (which depended upon the validity of a marriage alleged to have been contracted by his parents in the year 1786), the claimant, who was born subsequently to that marriage, but previous to a marriage contracted between the parties in 1796, had in the year 1799, conjointly with two brothers, born also after the first, but previous to the second marriage, filed a bill in Chancery to perpetuate the evidence of their legitimacy, on the ground that they were entitled in remainder in tail to certain lands then held by the father for life. The children born after the second marriage were defendants, along with others entitled in remainder after them.

The Earl of Berkeley was one of the witnesses examined on interrogatories for the plaintiffs, and in his deposition swore positively to the plaintiff's legitimacy, and the validity of the first marriage. The counsel for the claimant proposed to read this deposition before the committee, as a declaration in a matter of pedigree.

The admissibility of this evidence being objected to, the following questions were submitted to the Judges by the House of Lords:—

1st. Upon the trial of an ejectment respecting Black Acre, between A. and B., in which it was necessary for A. to prove that he was the legitimate son of J. S., A. after proving by other evidence that J. S. was his reputed father, offered to give in evidence a deposition made by J. S. in a cause in Chancery, instituted by A. against C. D., in order to perpetuate testimony to the alleged fact disputed by C. D., that he was the legitimate son of J. S., in which character he claimed an estate in White Acre, which was also claimed in remainder by C. D. B., the defendant in the ejectment, did not claim Black Acre under either A. or C. D., plaintiff and defendant in the chancery suit:

According to law, could the deposition of J. S. be received, upon the trial of such ejectment, against B., as evidence of declarations of J. S. the alleged father, in matters of pedigree?

2ndly. Upon the trial of an ejectment respecting Long Acre, between E. and F., in which it was necessary for E. to prove that he was the legitimate son of W., the said W. being at that time dead, E. after proving by other evidence that W. was his father, offered to give in evidence an entry in a Bible, in which Bible W. had made such entry in his own handwriting, that E. was his eldest son born in lawful wedlock from G., the wife of W., on the 1st day of May, 1778, and signed by W. himself:

Could such entry in such Bible, be received to prove that E. is the legitimate son of W., as evidence of the declaration of W., in matter of pedigree?

3dly. Upon the trial of an ejectment respecting Little Acre, between N. and P., in which it was necessary for N. to prove that he was the legitimate son of T., the said T. being at that time dead, N. after proving by other evidence that T. was his reputed father, offered to give in evidence an entry in a Bible, in which Bible T. had made such entry in his own handwriting, that N. was his son born in lawful wedlock from J., the wife of T., on the 1st day of May, 1778, and signed by T. himself; and it was proved in evidence on the said trial, that T. had declared "that he T. had made such entry for the express purpose of establishing the legitimacy, and the time of the birth of his eldest son N., in case the same should be called in question in any case or in any cause whatsoever, by any person after the death of him, the said T.:"

Could such entry in such Bible be received, to prove that N. is the legitimate son of T., as evidence of the declaration of T., in matters of pedigree?

There being a difference of opinion upon the first question, the Judges delivered their opinions seriatim.

Bayley, J. held that the deposition was inadmissible, because it was made post litem motam, after a controversy raised upon this very point; because J. S., the witness who made it, was brought forward to speak to the point, by a person who had a direct interest in establishing it, because the deposition is upon interrogatories formally put to J. S. by an interested party; and because B., against whom it is proposed that the deposition should be read, had no opportunity of putting any questions on his own behalf. In general, when evidence is given viva voce in courts of justice, the witnesses speak to what they know, and each party has, in turn, an opportunity of putting such questions as he may think fit, for the purpose of drawing forth the whole truth, and of throwing every light upon the subject which the witness is capable of giving. Whoever has attended to the examination, the cross-examination, and the re-examination of witnesses, and has observed what a very different shape their story appears to take in each of these stages, will at once see how extremely dangerous it is to act on the ex parte statement of any witness, and still more of a witness brought forward under the influence of a party interested.

Wood, B.—The admission of hearsay evidence of the declarations of deceased persons in matters of pedigree, is an exception to the general law of evidence, and it has ever been received with a degree of jealousy, because the opposite party has had no opportunity of cross-examining the persons by whom the declarations are supposed to be made; but the declarations to be receivable in evidence, as I have always understood, and as was said in the case of Whitelocke v. Baker, must have been the natural effusions of the mind of the party making them, and must have been on an occasion when his mind stood in an even position, without any temptation to exceed or fall short of the truth. Upon this principle it has been the general rule, as far as my experience and knowledge go, to reject hearsay evidence of the declarations of deceased persons, not only relative to matters of actual suit, but in dispute and controversy prior to the commencement of judicial proceedings.

Graham, B.—I have the misfortune to differ upon this question, not only with the two learned persons who have preceded, but, I am afraid, with the rest of my brethren who are to follow me; but the opinion I am about to offer is the conclusion to which my mind has come with perfect satisfaction. Under the circumstances of the case, I think there is no legal objection to receiving this deposition in evidence, not as a deposition—that I am not prepared to say—but as a declaration of the deponent. One ground on which I am induced to doubt the soundness of that rule which has been laid down by my learned brothers is, that I cannot pedigree, if *made post litem motam, that is after the commencement, not merely of the litigation, but of the controversy, is not admissible (A).

find it stated in any book of law that ever fell within my reading. If there be a rule that the declaration of a deceased person upon a subject on which evidence of reputation may generally be received, is inadmissible when made subsequent to suit commenced, it is a rule with which, in my little experience, I have not become acquainted, and which is confined to the breasts of a few peculiarly conversant with the business of Nisi Prius. I must likewise observe that great uncertainty will arise in the application of the rule. We are told that it extends to all declarations after a suit is in contemplation. But how is it to be determined whether the parties did or did not contemplate a suit at any given moment of time? Then, if it should be clearly shown that the party making the declarations could not, by possibility, know that a suit was commenced or contemplated, surely the declarations are receivable; but if you exclude them when his knowledge of the lis mota is made to appear, what a field of inquiry is opened as often as evidence of reputation is tendered to a judge and jury? It seldom happens that an investigation of a pedigree takes place till an action is brought or resolved upon, and it will often be a great hardship to reject what was then said by a member of the family who dies before the trial. Suppose a man is privately married before the English ambassador at Paris, where no register is kept, and has a son; on his return to this country he is re-married, to satisfy the scruples of his wife, and afterwards has another son. In the progress of twenty or thirty years, when all the witnesses to the marriage, except the father are dead, an estate is left to the eldest legitimate son, who enters into possession. The youngest son brings an ejectment to recover this. The father hears of such a proceeding with surprise and dismay, makes a solemn declaration of the legitimacy of the eldest son, and dies. I should require strong authority, and clear principle, for the rule which should exclude his dying declaration at the trial of the ejectment. You may have the natural and voluntary effusions of the mind of the individual after a suit is commenced, although what he then says may be subject to more suspicion.

Lawrence, J.—I concur with the Judges who have stated their opinions against the admissibility of the evidence. From the necessity of the thing, the declarations of members of the family, in matters of pedigree, are generally admitted; but the administration of justice would be perverted if such declarations could be admitted which have not a presumption in their favour that they are consistent with truth. Where the relator had no interest to serve, and there is no ground for supposing that his mind stood otherwise than even upon the subject, (which may be fairly inferred before any dispute upon it has arisen,) we may reasonably suppose that he neither stops short nor goes beyond the limit of truth in his spontaneous declarations respecting his relations and the state of his family. The receiving of these declarations, therefore, though made without the sanction of an oath, and without any opportunity of cross-examination, may not be attended with such mischief as the rejection of such evidence, which, in matters of pedigree, would often be the rejection of all the evidence that could be offered. But mischievous indeed would be the consequence of receiving an ex parte statement of a deceased witness, although upon oath, procured by the party who would take advantage of it, and delivered under that bias which may naturally operate on the mind in the course of a controversy upon the subject. Notwithstanding what is said in Goodright v. Moss, I cannot think that Lord Mansfield would have held that declarations in matters of pedigree, made after the controversy had arisen, ought to be submitted to the jury. They stand precisely on the same footing as declarations on questions of rights of way, rights of common, and other matters depending upon usage; and although I cannot call to mind the ruling of any particular Judge upon the subject, yet I know that, according to my experience of the practice (an experience of nearly forty years), wherever a witness has admitted that what he was going to state he had heard after the beginning of a controversy, his testimony has been uniformly rejected. If the danger of fabrication and falsehood be a reason for rejecting such evidence in cases of prescription, that will equally apply in cases of pedigree, where the state is generally of much greater value. In looking for authorities upon the subject, I have found two cases of Nisi Prius, Spadwell v. ——, before Lord C. Baron Reynolds, at the Spring Assizes at Exeter in 1630, and Hayward v. Firmin, before Lord Camden, at the Sittings after Trin. Term, 1766. In the first of these, the declarations of an aunt, as to which of three brothers came first into the world, made after the dispute had arisen, were rejected; but such as she had made prior to the dispute were received. Therefore, in that case, the learned Judge took the distinction of before and after litigation commenced. Hayward v. Firmin, was an issue to try the legitimacy of a child, and the declarations of the mother as to that fact were received in evidence, though made after the commencement of the suit. But it appears that the case determined by Lord C. Baron Reynolds was not at that time brought under the consideration of Ld. Camden. In Goodright v. Moss, the point whether declarations could be received which were made while the dispute was existing, was not adverted to; and in considering the authority of that decision, it must not be forgotten that Mr. Baron Eyre, who tried the cause, was of opinion that the answer was not admissible evidence. The authorities being thus balanced, I think the point must be considered as without any decision; and we must resort to principle, and the uniform practice which has obtained in matters of prescription. Hardships may arise in rejecting declarations made between the commencement of the suit, and the time of the trial; but such hardships are not confined to the case of pedigree. In other cases, if witnesses die before the trial of the cause, the party who relied upon their testimony must sustain the loss. For avoiding uncertainty in judicial proceedings, general rules must be laid down and adhered to, without regard to our feelings or our wishes on particular occasions. Besides, the hardship may generally be avoided by a bill to perpetuate the testimony. In the supposed case of a marriage at Paris no difficulty need have arisen; for under a bill to perpetuate the testimony the father might have been examined on behalf of the eldest son, and his deposition as to all the circumstances of the first marriage regularly read, against the younger son, on the trial of the ejectment. Although the exclusion of declarations made in the course of the controversy may prejudice some individuals, it is better to submit to this inconvenience than expose Courts of Justice to the frauds which would be practised upon them were a contrary rule to prevail. That this is not an imaginary apprehension will occur from what happened at the bar of your Lordships' house in the Douglas and Anglesea causes; in the first of which, fabricated letters were given in evidence before your Lordships, and in the second, false declarations. Notwithstanding the danger of incurring the penalties of the crime of perjury, there is scarcely an assize or sittings in which witnesses are not produced who swear in direct contradiction the one to the other; and it may be feared that persons who have so little regard to truth may be induced to make false declarations, when they run no risk of punishment in this world, as no use can be made of their evidence till their death. We know that passion, prejudice, party, or even good-will, tempt many who preserve a fair character with the world, to deviate from the truth in the laxity of conversation. Can it be presumed that a man stands perfectly indifferent upon an existing dispute respecting his kindred? His declarations post litem motam, not merely upon the commencement of the lawsuit, but after the dispute has arisen (that is the primary meaning of the word lis), are evidently more likely to mislead the jury, than to direct them to a right conclusion, and therefore ought not to be received in evidence.

(A) (The declarations offered in evidence were made subsequent to the commencement of the controversy, and in fact after the suit had commenced. It would be extremely dangerous to receive such evidence. This would enable a party by dangerous contrivances to manufacture evidence to sustain his cause. It is therefore essential that the declarations offered as evidence should have been made before the controversy originated, and at a time, and under circumstances where the person making them could have had no motive to misrepresent the facts. Stein v. Bowman, 13 Peters, 209. Contra, Boudereau v. Montgomery, 4 Wash. C. C. R. 136.)

*It is not necessary, in order to the exclusion of the evidence, to show that the lis mota was known to the person who made the declaration.

Heath, J. and Macdonald, C. B. agreed with the majority.

Mansfield, C. J., after observing upon the latitude allowed by the practice of Scotland in the reception of hearsay evidence, observed, "But in England, where the jury are the sole judges of the fact, hearsay evidence is properly excluded, because no man can tell what effect it might have upon their minds. To the general rule with us there are two exceptions; first, on the trial of rights of common, and other rights claimed by prescription: and secondly, on questions of pedigree. With respect to all these, the declarations of deceased persons who are supposed to have had a personal knowledge of the facts, and to have stood quite disinterested, are received in evidence. In cases of general rights which depend upon immemorial usage, living witnesses can only speak of their own knowledge to what has passed in their own time, and to supply the deficiency, the law receives the declarations of persons who are dead; there, however, the witness is only allowed to speak to what he has heard the dead man say respecting the reputation of the right of way, or of common, or the like; a declaration with regard to a particular fact which would support or negative the right, is inadmissible. In matters of pedigree, it being impossible to prove by living witnesses the relationships of past generations, the declarations of deceased members of the family are admitted; but here, as the reputation must proceed on particular facts, such as marriages, births, and the like, from the necessity of the thing, the hearsay of the family as to these particular facts is not excluded. General rights are naturally talked of in the neighbourhood, and family transactions among the relations of the parties; therefore what is thus dropped in conversation upon such subjects, may be presumed to be true. But after a dispute has arisen, the presumption in favour of declarations fails; and to admit them would lead to the most dangerous consequences. Accordingly, I know no rule better established in practice than this, that such declarations shall be excluded. With respect to questions of prescription, I have known many instances in which the rule has been acted upon; I never heard the contrary contended, either by counsel or judge. I think the rule is equally applicable to questions of pedigree, and the violation of it here would be still more alarming. There is no difference between the declarations of a father and those of any other relative; and if the declarations of a father, after the suit has begun, be received, so must the declarations of all related to the parties, whatever their station in society, and whatever their private character. I do not feel that much mischief is likely to arise from such declarations being rejected.

"I have now only to notice the observation, that to exclude declarations, you must show that the lis mota was known to the person who made them. There is no such rule. The line of distinction is the origin of the controversy, and not the commencement of the suit; after the controversy has originated all declarations are to be excluded, whether it was or was not known to the witness. If an inquiry were to be instituted in each instance, whether the existence of the controversy was or was not known at the time of the declaration, much time would be wasted, and great confusion would be produced. For these reasons I conceive that the deposition now offered in evidence is not admissible.

Lord Eldon, C., after referring to the case of the Banbury Peerage, said, "Upon the admissibility of such evidence, Judges have held different opinions; and it might appear remarkable that a declaration under no sanction was receivable, and a declaration upon oath was not. I therefore thought it material to ascertain from the highest authority what the law is upon the subject. Accordingly, in the Banbury Case, as the depositions under the bill to perpetuate testimony, contained many statements with regard to pedigree, a question was put to the Judges, whether, if they could not be received as depositions, they could be received as declarations. The Judges thought that, at all events, the depositions could not be received as declarations, unless the individuals whose declarations were supposed to be incorporated in the depositions were aliunde proved to be relations, and that there was no such evidence. I therefore thought it right that the question should be again put to the Judges in the present case, it being of great importance to the claimant and to the public. Your Lordships have heard the opinions which the learned Judges have delivered, and I have no difficulty in saying that I agree with that of the majority. In the case alluded to, decided in the Court of Chancery by myself (on which I ought to place less reliance than any other noble Lord), conscious of my liability to err, and prone to doubt (an infirmity which I cannot help), I delivered the sentiments which

After the *controversy has originated, all declarations are to be excluded, without regard to the knowledge of the witness; for if an inquiry were in *840 each case *to be instituted, whether the existence of the controversy was or was not known at the time of the declaration, much time would be wasted, and great confusion would be produced (t). Such declarations however, though they tended to show that the person making them might, if they were true, derive an interest by proof of the fact, are still admissible, provided they were made ante litem motam (u).

*841 Declarations, to what facts limited.

*There is a material difference between traditionary declarations in matters of pedigree, and those which relate to ancient rights, dependent on usage; in the latter case, the admissibility is confined to general declarations and reputation concerning the right, such as a right of common, right of passage, or the like (x); and it does not extend to declarations concerning particular facts, from which the right may be inferred, for those are not likely to be made matter of public notoriety and discussion, as general rights are. But in the case of pedigree it is otherwise, and particular declara-

I believed to be according to law. I have heard nothing since which has convinced me I was wrong. I have attended most anxiously to the distinctions taken by Mr. Baron Graham; but on revolving the subject in my mind, I am forced to concur with the opinion so forcibly expressed by Mr. Justice Lawrence, that if the writing was not evidence as a deposition, it was not evidence at all. The suit in equity is commenced on the ground that, unless the testimony be so perpetuated that it may be used as a deposition, it must be entirely lost. Being embodied in deposition, are you to say that this same testimony is to be received as declaration, and read in evidence from the deposition? The previous existence of the dispute would be a sufficient ground to proceed upon. I have known no instance in which declarations post litem motam have been received. When it was proposed to read this deposition as a declaration, the Attorney-general flatly objected to it; he spoke quite right, as a western circuiteer, of what he had often heard laid down in the west, and never heard doubted. Lord Thurlow was most studious to contradict the case of Goodright v. Moss, and he had learned his doctrine in the same school; so had the Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, and I believe Mr. Justice Heath, the result of whose experience your Lordships have just heard. Therefore, although the authorities are at variance, principle and practice unite in rejecting the evidence. I introduced the Bible into the second and third questions, as the book in which such entries are usually made. If the entry be the ordinary act of a man in the ordinary course of life, without interest or particular motive, this, as the spontaneous effusion of his own mind, may be looked at without suspicion, and received without objection. Such is the contemporaneous entry in a family Bible, by a father, of the birth of a child."

On the second and third questions, Mansfield, C. J. delivered the unanimous opinion of the Judges.—Referring to the second, he said, " I cannot answer this question, without adding something to the answer beyond what is in the question, because it supposes that an entry written by a father in a Bible would be of more weight than the same written in any other book. Now I know no difference between a father writing anything respecting his son in a Bible, and his writing it in any other book, or on any other piece of paper; and therefore the answer I would give is, that such a writing by a father in a Bible, or in any other book, or upon any other piece of paper, would be a declaration of that father in the understanding of the law, and like other declarations of the father, might be admitted in evidence. Were it to appear in your Lordships' Journals that the answer was given in the very words of the question, some persons might suppose that the admissibility of the entry depended upon its being written in a Bible, and therefore I submit that the answer should be, 'that such a writing in a Bible, or any other book, or any other paper, would be admissible in evidence, as a declaration of the father, in a matter of pedigree.'

" The third question is the same in effect, with the addition that the father is proved to have declared that he had made such entry for the express purpose of establishing the legitimacy of his son, and the time of his birth, in case the same should be called in question after the father's death. The opinion of the Judges is, that the entry would be receivable in evidence, notwithstanding the professed view with which it was made. Its particularity would be a strong circumstance of suspicion; but still it would be receivable, whatever the credit might be to which it would be entitled. Of course, I should wish the same addition to be made to this as to the former answer, 'a Bible, or any other book, or any other piece of paper.' "

See also R. v. Cotton, 3 Camp. 444; and supra, Vol. I. p. 319; and the case 12 Vin. Ab. T. b. 91. See below, note (b).

(t) Case of the Berkeley Peerage, 4 Camp. 401; and Sir James Mansfield's observations, Ibid. 40; and supra, note (s).

(u) Doe d. Tilman v. Turver,[1] 1 Ry. & M. 141; where declarations were received which tended to show that the parties making them were entitled to a remainder on failure of the issue of the then possessor of the estate. So in a case of title to a peerage in the House of Lords, a widow was admitted to prove the declarations of her deceased husband, in support of her title, though her husband, if living, would have had the right which the declarations went to establish. Ib., per Tenterden, L. C. J.; and his Lordship added, that the precedent had since been acted on.

(x) Supra, Part I. tit. REPUTATION.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxi. 399.

tions as to marriages, births, deaths, &c. are receivable, because from the nature of the case those are facts which are within the peculiar knowledge of the members of the family, and of those who are intimately connected with them (y).

The extent to which such declarations are evidence is defined by the reasons which warrant its admissibility; the principles apply generally to declarations concerning the state of the family, the members of which it consisted, the degrees in which they stand related, their births, marriages, and deaths, their ages, (1) seniority, and their legitimacy (z). Thus, the declaration or entry of a father is evidence as to the time when his son was born, or of the fact that he was born previous to the marriage (a).

Where the question was, which of three sons, all born at a birth, was the eldest, the declaration of a female relation, that she was at the birth, and that she tied a string round the arm of the second son in order to distinguish him, was admitted as evidence (b). But in the case of The King v. Erith (c), it was held that the declaration of the deceased father, as to the place of the son's birth, was not admissible, since it was a simple fact involving only a question of locality; and it was observed by the Court, *that the case did not fall within the principle of, and was not governed by, *842 the rules applicable to cases of pedigree, and was to be proved as other facts are generally proved, according to the ordinary course of the common law (2).

A declaration by a party that she heard her first husband say that after his death the estate would go to A. and afterwards to his heir, under whom the lessor of the plaintiff claimed, was held to be evidence to show the relationship of A. to the husband's family (d).

(y) See the observations of Mansfield, C. J. in the case of the Berkeley Peerage, 4 Camp. 417, 18; and supra, note (s). In Baker v. Whitelocke, 13 Ves. 514, the Lord Chancellor observed, that there may be many circumstances forming a part of the tradition which you would reject, taking the body of the tradition. It is not necessary that the fact declared should be cotemporary with the declaration. A mere declaration that his grandmother's maiden name was M. N., is admissible. Per Brougham, C. in Monkton v. Attorney-general, 2 Russ. & M. 158.

(z) Herbert v. Tuckal, Sir T. Raym. 84. Upon a trial at bar, cited in Roe d. Brune v. Rawlins, 7 East, 290. See also Higham v. Ridway, 10 East, 109. See Monkton v. Attorney-general, 2 Russ. & M. 147. So it seems that monumental inscriptions, and declarations made by deceased relations, are evidence to prove the ages of the parties referred to. See Kidney v. Cockburn, 2 Russ. & M. 167. Tindal, C. J., had rejected such evidence, but Brougham, C., expressed a strong opinion in favour of its admissibility, and afterwards stated that Littledale and Park, Justices, concurred with him. In the course of the argument, the case of Rider v. Malbone was cited, in which Littledale, J., admitted evidence of an inscription on the tombstone, stating the age of the deceased, the age being material. An old tracing from an effaced monument is also admissible. Slaney v. Wade, 7 Sim. 595.

(a) Goodright v. Moss, Cowp. 591. Case of the Berkeley Peerage, 4 Camp. 401.

(b) A man had eight sons; the three last were all born at a birth. Question, on ejectment, which was the eldest? They were baptized by the names of Stephanus, Fortunatus, and Achaicus. Declarations of the father were proved that Achaicus was the youngest, and he took these names from St. Paul, in his epistles. The son of Fortunatus was lessor of the plaintiff; è contra, it was proved from the declarations of one M. F., who was a relation, and at the birth, and upon the birth of the second child took a string and tied it round the arm, to know one from the other, &c. Objection was made that the declaration of this woman was not evidence, seeing it was since the death of the fifth son (the said Stephanus and all the other sons dying before him without issue), when there was a discourse about this matter; but what this woman said soon after the birth was allowed in evidence, when there was no prospect of a controversy. Per Reynolds, C. B., at Devon Lent Assizes, cited in Vin. Ab. Ev. T. b. 91. This, it seems, is the case cited by Lawrence, J., supra, 838.

(c) R. v. Erith, 8 East, 539. [Shearer v. Clay, 1 Little's R. 266, acc.]

(d) Doe v. Randall,[1] 2 M. & P. 20.

(1) [In the case of Lessee of Albertson v. Robeson, 1 Dallas, 9, it was held that evidence of hearsay, from the father and mother, is not admissible in a question of age.]

(2) {Wilmington v. Burlington, 4 Pick. 174. See 1 Pick. 247.}

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xvii. 200.

Written entries.

Written entries being written declarations, stand upon the same footing with oral ones, as to admissibility.

An entry by a father in a Bible, or in any other book, stating that A. B. was the eldest son born in lawful wedlock, by M. N. his wife, at a time specified, is evidence to prove the legitimacy of A. B. (e) (1).

Written entries and inscriptions.

Upon the same principles, a pedigree hung up in a family mansion, inscriptions on rings (f) used by members of the family, inscriptions upon tombstones (g), and other matters of the like nature, are admissible to prove a pedigree, for they are all in their nature equivalent to declarations made by the family upon the subject (h). A bill in Chancery, by a father, in which he states his pedigree, is also admissible for the same purpose (i) (2).

So the recital in a family conveyance by a trustee is evidence of parentage (j).

So it has been held that a paper found with other papers relating to the private concerns of the party last seised of an estate, in a drawer, in his house, purporting to be the will of Richard, the grandfather of the person last seised, was evidence to show that the grandfather acknowledged a brother of the name of Thomas to be older than a brother of the name of William (k), although the will was found in a cancelled state, and although (e) Case of the Berkeley Peerage, 4 Camp. 401. Supra, 836. Goodright v. Moss, Cowp. 591; 4 Bl. Comm. C. 7.

(f) A ring worn publicly, stating the date of the death of the relation whose name is engraved upon it, is admissible, Per Brougham, L. C. in Monckton v. Attorney-general, 2 Russ. & M. 147.

(g) Baxter v. Foster, Vin. Ab. Ev. T. b. 87; Sty. 208.

(h) Cowp. 591; 12 Vin. Ab. Ev. T. b. 87; 13 Ves. jun. 148, 514; B. N. P. 233; 10 East, 120.

(i) Taylor v. Cole, 7 T. R. 3, n. i. e. where there is no controversy as to the pedigree. But in general a bill in equity, and depositions taken under it, are not evidence of the statements they contain as declarations concerning pedigree. See the case of the Banbury Peerage, Sel. N. P. 712; and Vol. I. tit. Bill in Equity.

(j) Slaney v. Wade, 7 Sim. 595. See Doe v. Pembroke, 11 East, 504.

(k) Doe d. Johnson v. Earl of Pembroke & another, 11 East, 504.

(1) [An entry respecting the age of a child, in a book called the family bible, in the hand-writing of the brother of the child, and supported by his oath, that by the direction of the deceased father, he copied that and other entries, respecting the ages of the family, from another book in which the original entries were made in his father's hand-writing—without accounting for the non-production of the book in which the original entries were made—is not evidence. Curtis & al. v. Patton & al., 6 Serg. & Rawle, 135. Aliter, if the original be proved to be destroyed or lost. Ibid.]

(2) [An ex parte affidavit, made abroad, may be admitted to prove pedigree, and the identity of a person so far as respects marriage, but not to establish an independent fact. Fogler's Lessee v. Simpson, cited 2 Dallas, 117. 1 Yeates, 17. Winder v. Little, 1 Yeates, 152. Lessee of Lilly v. Kintzmiller, 1 Yeates, 28. But such affidavit made in another State, is not admissible. Semb. Douglas's Lessee v. Sanderson, 2 Dallas, 118. But depositions made by deceased witnesses, whether in or out of the State, in a case between other parties, may be admitted to prove pedigree. Boudereau v. Montgomery, Circuit Court, Nov. 1821. Wharton's Digest, 247. The acknowledgement of a deed from persons describing themselves as heirs taken according to the directions of statute, before the mayor of London, is a circumstance of weight in evidence of pedigree. Jackson v. Cooley, 8 Johns. 128. Recitals in a conveyance are evidence of pedigree.

In tracing a pedigree, in a suit for freedom, what a witness swore to, on the executing of a writ of inquiry between the mother of the plaintiff and another person, may be given in evidence to prove the said mother to have been descended from a female Indian ancestor, although the name of that witness be not recollected, nor the witness himself positively known to be dead; it being proved by the witness stating the substance of his testimony, that he was a very old man when he gave his evidence—that he believed him to be dead, and had endeavoured in vain, as counsel for the plaintiff, to find a witness to prove the point to which he had testified. Pegram v. Isabel, 2 Hen. & Mun. 193. See Mima Queen & Child v. Hepburn, 7 Cranch, 290.

Letters purporting to have been written in a foreign country, by a widow, in which she speaks of the death of her husband, and of the existence of children by him—and testimony of a third person that he had seen a letter from the husband, in which he mentioned his marriage and his children—and reputation in the vicinity that the husband had died abroad leaving children—are not admissible evidence for the tenant in a real action, wherein the demandant (a co-heir of such supposed deceased) claims title by descent—the tenant not claiming under him or his heirs. Crouch v. Eveleth, 15 Mass. Rep. 305. Whether such evidence would be admissible in a suit against the defendant by persons claiming as heirs at law of the supposed deceased.—Quære. ibid.] there was no evidence that it had ever been acted upon, or that it had ever been proved.

The probate of a will is not admissible to prove matters of pedigree; the will itself ought to be produced (l).

In the case of Zouch v. Waters, (m), an old book from Lord Oxford's library, containing the pedigree of William Zouch, of Pilton, and signed by him, was admitted as evidence to show that the plaintiff was not descended from William Zouch of Pilton.

A paper in the hand-writing of a person deceased, purporting to give a genealogical account of his family, is admissible evidence to prove the truth of the relationship there stated, although it was never made public by the writer, although it be erroneous in several particulars, and profess to *be founded chiefly on hearsay (n); and although the object be to connect *843 the family of the narrator with that of a party deceased, to whose property one of the family of the narrator lays claim (o).

Public registers of authority are also admissible for the same purpose, being documents made under the authority of law (p). But the entry of the time of a child's birth, although contained in a public register, is not evidence as to the time of the birth (q), unless it can be proved that the entry was made by the direction of the father or mother; and then it seems to be receivable as a declaration made by one of them; for a clergyman has no authority to make an entry as to the time of the birth, and possesses no means for making any inquiry as to the fact (r).

It seems also that the herald's original visitation books are evidence for the same purpose, since it was their business to make out pedigrees (s). So are inquisitions post mortem (t).

With respect to general reputation, it is to be observed, that the public has an interest in the state of each of the individual families of which society is composed; the whole mass, from the highest to the lowest ranks, is bound together by the connecting ties of marriage and consanguinity. Society in general, therefore, has not only an interest in knowing, but possesses the means of knowing, from its connection with each individual General reputation.

(l) Doe v. Ormerod, 1 Mo. & R. 466.

(m) Guildford Lent Assiz. 5 Geo. 1; 12 Vin. Ab. T. b. 87, pl. 5.

(n) Monckton v. Attorney-general, 2 Russ. & M. 147.

(o) Ibid.

(p) Supra, Vol. I. p. 243.

(q) So held in a case in the K. B. Mich. T. 2 Geo. 4, MS.

(r) Goodright v. Moss, Cowp. 591; 3 Bl. Comm. c. 7; B. N. P. 233; 10 East, 120. A public register does not prove the time of birth. Cowp. 391.

(s) Steyner v. Burgesses of Droitwich, Skinn. 623. But see the animadversions upon these documents in that case; and 12 Vin. Ab. Ev. T. b. 87. And note, that a charter of pedigree is not evidence, without showing the books and records whence it is deduced, although the heralds swear that the pedigree was deduced out of the records and ancient books in the office. Earl of Thanet's Case, 2 Jones, 224; and Vin. Ab. Ev. T. b. 87. And see Zouch v. Waters, Ib. In order to impeach the pedigree attempted to be established by the lessor of the plaintiff, the defendant having proved that Ann Brack was of the family of the lessor of the plaintiff, produced books from the Heralds' Office, containing an entry, purporting to be the affidavit of Ann Brack, stating the different members of her family. An officer from the Heralds' College stated that affidavits sent thither with a view to the making out a pedigree were copied in the herald's books, and that the originals were sometimes kept and sometimes returned, and that search had been unsuccessfully made for the original, the copy of which was contained in the book. Littledale, J., held that the copy was admissible evidence for the defendant, for the purpose of contradicting the pedigree set up by the lessor of the plaintiff; but held that the pedigree in the Heralds' Office, compiled from it, was not admissible. Doe d. Hungate v. Gascoigne, York Spring Assizes, 1831.

(t) Inquisitions post mortem, whilst they were in use, frequently afforded great facilities for tracing descents (see 13 Ves. jun. 143). These, under the feodal system, were taken before the justices in eyre, upon the death of a person of fortune, to inquire into the value of his estate, the tenure by which it was holden, and who, and of what age, his heir was, and thereby to ascertain the relief and value of the primer seisin, or the wardship and livery accruing to the heirs thereon. These, at last, having been greatly abused, were abolished in the reign of Hen. 8, and the Court of Wards and Liveries erected in their stead. See 2 Bl. Comm. 69; 32 Hen. 8, c. 46; 4 Inst. 198.

family, the state of that family, the members of which it consists, and their various degrees of kindred. The laws which exclude the marriages of parties within certain limits of consanguinity, and those also which regulate the descent of real and the distribution of personal property, according to known and settled rules, make it a matter of interest, as well as duty and necessity, that the various degrees of relationship, not only in each individual family, but also in those with which it is connected, should be ascertained and known. The public forms of solemnizing marriages, births, and burials, *844 *tend also to the same end. Lastly, it may be remarked, that no fraud can usually be practised in affairs of this nature, which will not probably interfere with the rights of individuals connected with the family; and that the difficulty of practising such impositions successfully, and the vigilance with which they are likely to be watched, not alone by those whose interests are likely to be prejudiced by them (u), but by those who are actuated merely by a spirit of curiosity, so apt to be excited in such affairs, powerfully conspire to support the authority of this species of evidence.

Hence it is that not only particular and specific declarations as to the state of a family, made by those connected with it, are admissible with a view to pedigree, but so also is general reputation, as that A. was the father, or B the husband of C. Such reputation or general opinion may be presumed to be the general result in the opinion of the public, founded upon actual knowledge and observation of the acts, conduct, and declarations of the family, tending to that conclusion (x).

It seems, however, that evidence of reputation must be of a general nature, such as that A. was generally reputed to be the son of B., or the father of C., although a much greater latitude is allowed to traditionary declarations; for although it is probable that the general facts of relationship would be matter of public notoriety and discussion, it is not to be presumed that the same would happen with respect to particular declarations or circumstances of a domestic nature; but that, on the contrary, the knowledge of the latter would be confined to a few who were either members of the family, or closely connected with it (y).

It has been doubted whether general evidence of heirship be sufficient to warrant the finding one person to be heir to another; or whether it be not necessary that the claimant should prove that he and the deceased were descended from some common ancestor, or at the least from two brothers or sisters (z) (1).

Upon an ejectment, Thorn, the lessor of the plaintiff, gave slight evidence of a reputed relationship between himself and the person last seised, and of acknowledgements that the Thorns were his heirs at law, but made no de-(u) Even the most abject poverty does not exempt the parties from rigorous observation; the omission of the marriage ceremony, or the unlawful repetition of it, seldom escapes the scrutinizing eye of the parish officer, who, with a view to parochial interests, prosecutes for bastardy, bigamy, &c., according to the exigency of the case.

(x) Le Blanc, J. observed (10 East, 120) that reputation was no other than the hearing of those who might be supposed to have been acquainted with the fact handed down from one to another.

(y) Vide supra, Vol. I. tit. Reputation. (z) 2 Bl. 1099.

(1) [In Chapman v. Chapman, 2 Conn. R. 347, it was held that in order to make hearsay admissible evidence of relationship on a question of title to land, it must come from persons having a connection with the party to whom it relates; and that it is essential that such persons be named, and that the declarations should specify such relationship as makes the party, to whom they refer, heir to the land in question. {But see Banert et ux. v. Day, 3 Wash. C. C. R. 243.} See Butler v. Haskell, 4 Desauss. 651. In Jackson v. Cooley, 8 Johns. 128, the lessor of the plaintiff, in an action of ejectment, resided in England, and claimed as the heir of the person who died seised of the land in question. A witness here deposed that he knew the ancestor, and had charge of the land as his agent, and corresponded with him; and after his death, corresponded with the lessor, who sent him a power to act for him as heir and devisee—and that his information was also derived from persons acquainted with the family of the lessor. It was held that this was sufficient evidence, prima facie, of pedigree or heirship to go to the jury.]

duction of pedigree, nor was able to state how the relation arose, or who was the common ancestor, or whether any ancestor of Thorn was a brother or sister to any ancestor of the deceased. The jury found for the plaintiff. Upon a motion for a new trial it appears that the Court did not agree upon the general question; but the Judges agreed in opinion that the evidence was too loose and insufficient to prove even general kindred (a). Upon *showing cause against the rule for a new trial, the plaintiff's counsel cited *S45 the case of Newton and the Corporation of Leicester and The Attorney-general, as having been tried at Leicester about eight years before, where the lessor of the plaintiff obtained a verdict, although there was no deduction of pedigree, because it was proved that the deceased used to call him cousin.

The onus of proving the death of a person once known to be living is incumbent on the party who asserts the death; for it is to be presumed that he still lives, till the contrary be proved (b). But it seems that the presumption of the continuance of life ceases at the end of seven years from the time when the party was last known to be living (c) (A), in analogy to the Statute of Bigamy (d), and the statute concerning leases for lives (e). Proof of death.

Proof by an elderly person that a member of her family went to the West Indies many years ago, when he was a young man, and that according to the repute of the family he died there, and that she never heard of his being married, is primâ facie evidence that the party died without lawful issue (f) (B).

It is now perfectly settled that the parents are competent to prove or disprove their marriage (g), or to establish the legitimacy or illegitimacy of a child, by proof that it was born after or before marriage. A mother has been allowed to prove a clandestine marriage, in the Fleet, to the father of the child, previous to its birth (h); and the Dowager Countess of Anglesea was admitted in the House of Lords to prove her marriage with the Earl of Anglesea previous to the birth of their son, Lord Valentia, where the question was as to the legitimacy of the latter (i). So the evidence of parents is admissible to bastardize their own issue (k), by proof that they have never been married. But such evidence is open to great observation (l). Competency.

(a) Roe d. Thorn v. Lord, 2 Bl. 1099. Note, the argument urged in favour of a strict deduction was, that if it were unnecessary, the estate might be carried, contrary to the rules of descent, to the half-blood, to the maternal instead of the paternal line, &c. It would surely be going a great length to admit a mere presumption in favour of so harsh a rule as that which excludes relations of the half-blood; to rebut a reasonable presumption, when once established by any means, that the claimant is the real heir; and the danger of preferring the maternal to the paternal line cannot arise where there is but one claimant, who, whether he claimed through the paternal or maternal line, would still be entitled in preference to a mere stranger. The Judges who held that strict deduction was necessary, founded their opinion on the doctrine relating to real actions, conceiving that the same deduction of descent which ought to be pleaded in real actions ought to be given in evidence in ejectment, in order to make out a title by descent. Quære.

(b) Per Lord Ellenborough, in Doe v. Jesson, 6 East, 80. Rowe v. Hasland, 1 W. Bl. 404. And see Doe v. Deakin,[1] 4 B. & A. 433; B. N. P. 233, 294–5. Cowp. 591.

(c) See tit. PRESUMPTION.

(d) 1 Jac. 1, c. 11, s. 2.

(e) 19 Car. 2, c. 6.

(f) Doe d. Banning v. Griffin, 15 East, 293.

(g) Cowp. 593.

(h) Per Lord Mansfield, Cowp. 593.

(i) Ap. 22d, 1771; and per Lord Mansfield, Cowp. 594.

(k) R. v. Bramley, 6 T. R. 330. St. Peter's v. Swinford, B. N. P. 112.

(l) Per Lord Kenyon, 6 T. R. 330.

(A) (See Post. tit. PRESUMPTION.)

(B) Pancoast v. Addison, 1 Har. & J. 356. See Jackson v. Boneham, 15 Johns. 226. Ewing v. Savary, 3 Bibb. 236. Hearsay evidence of finding the body and burial of one supposed to be dead, is inadmissible; though otherwise as to the fact of his death. But that one was missing at a particular time, with a report and general belief of his death, is, it seems, prima facie evidence of his death. Jackson v. Ety, 5 Cow. 314.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 476.

The wife is competent to prove acts of incontinency with others, because, as it is said, this is a matter peculiarly confined to her own knowledge; but it is fully settled that neither the wife nor the husband can prove the fact of non-access (m); a rule founded upon grounds of policy and of decency (n).

Declarations. Where the parties, if living, would have been competent witnesses to negative the marriage, their declarations to that effect are evidence after their decease (o).

The declaration of the father is, after his death, admissible to prove that the son was born before the marriage (p).

*846 *But as the evidence of parents would not be received in their lifetime to prove the bastardy of children born during marriage, by evidence of non-access, so neither are their declarations to that effect admissible after their death (q).

PENAL ACTION.

Particulars of proof. In an action of debt to recover a penalty under a statute, issue being joined on the usual plea of nil debet, it is necessary to prove (r),

1st. The affirmative of all the essential averments (s).

2dly. In qui tam actions, that the offence was committed within the county, &c.

3dly. That the action was commenced within time, &c.

Proof of averment. It has been seen, that where a person is charged with a criminal omission, the proof of the negative lies upon the party who makes the charge (t); where, however, the action is founded on the doing an act without a legal qualification, the existence of which, if it exist at all, is peculiar within the knowledge of the defendant, it seems to be incumbent on him, notwithstanding the rule, to prove his qualification (u).

Variance. Where a contract is averred, a material variance will be as fatal as in an action of assumpsit. Where the plaintiff declared for a penalty for fraud in the measuring of coals purchased from the defendant by A. and B., and it appeared in evidence that the purchase was made by A., B. and C., the variance was held to be fatal (x), although a separate delivery was made to A. and B. of their shares. The same was held where the plaintiff declared for a penalty for an illegal insurance of a particular lottery ticket for the sum of 42*l.*, and it turned out that this sum had been given for that and other tickets (y).

And the same proof must be given of a contract where the evidence of a contract is essential, as in an action on the contract. Thus, in an action

(m) R. v. Reading, B. N. P. 112. R. v. Kea, 11 East, 131. Rex v. Rook, 1 Wils. 340.

(n) Per Lord Mansfield, Cowp. 594; and per Lord Ellenborough, 11 East, 133.

(o) R. v. Bramley, 6 T. R. 330; B. N. P. 112. May v. May, Ibid.

(p) Goodright v. Moss, Cowp. 591. May v. May, B. N. P. 112; where, upon an issue out of Chancery, the preamble of an act of parliament, reciting that the plaintiff's father was not married, and to the truth of which he was proved to have been sworn, was given in evidence, yet, upon proof of a constant cohabitation, and his owning the mother upon all other occasions to be his wife, the plaintiff obtained a verdict.

(q) Cowp. 591.

(r) In an action for the penalty incurred by acting as a magistrate without being qualified, the defendant is not entitled to notice of action. Wright v. Horton,[1] Holt's C. 458; cor. Wood, B. York, 1816.

(s) See Vol. I. 418.

(t) Supra, Vol. I. 418, 421.

(u) Supra, tit. GAME.

(x) Parish, q. t., v. Burwood, 5 Esp. C. 33. Everett v. Tindall, 5 Esp. C. 169. See R. v. Goddard, Leach, 617. Partridge v. Coates,[2] R. & M. 153. Fox v. Keeting,[3] 2 A. & E. 670.

(y) Philips, q. t., v. Mendez da Costa, 1 Esp. C. 39. Secus, if the declaration does not aver a particular premium, but a particular premium is proved to have been given. Ibid.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 156. [2] Id. x. 461. [3] Id. xxix. 173.

against a master of a vessel for hiring a deserter from another ship, if the prior hiring was by contract in writing, it must be produced and proved, and cannot be proved by the parol evidence of the deserter (z).

A declaration alleged that the defendant advertised a proposal for a promise to give, &c. to any one who would procure A. B. a place under Government: the advertisement was, in fact, for a proposal to receive a promise. It was held that the words "for a promise" were surplusage: the words "under Government" were sufficient, though the language of the statute is "office in the gift of the Crown" (a).

*In debt for using a trade (b) without having served an apprenticeship, *847 it was held that it need not be proved that the defendant used it for the Amount of penalties.
whole of the time laid in the declaration, provided that it was alleged that he forfeited 40*s.* for every month, (c), and proved that he used the trade for a month together.

Where several lottery tickets are insured at the same time, one penalty only can be recovered (d); but it is otherwise where several tickets are insured at different times, although on the same day (e). But the plaintiff cannot recover more penalties than are included in the affidavit to hold to bail (f).

If the jury find a general verdict for one penalty (g), it is for the plaintiff Penalty.
to apply it; but, after applying it to one count, which turns out to be defective, he cannot afterwards apply it to another, although the evidence would have warranted a verdict on the latter (h).

2dly. Within the county.—An offence against a penal statute must in Within the county, &c.
general be alleged and proved to have been committed within the proper (z) Martin v. Greenleaf, 2 Esp. C. 729.

(a) Clarke v. Harvey,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 92.

(b) The averment of the trade was held to be material. Averment of the trade of a sawyer is not proved by evidence of setting to work in the trade of a mast and block-maker. Spencer v. Mann, 5 Esp. C. 110. But semble, a misdescription of the master's trade would not be material, Ib. See Beach v. Turner, 4 Burr. 2449.

(c) Powell, q. t., v. Farmer, Peake's C. 57. Under the statute, 5 Eliz. c. 4, s. 31; this branch of the statute was repealed by the statute 54 G. 3, c. 96.

(d) Holland v. Duffin, Peake's C. 58. So under the stat. 29 C. 2, s. 7, which enacts that no tradesman, artificer, workman, labourer or other person, shall do or exercise any worldly labour, business, or work of their ordinary calling on the Lord's Day, except works of necessity and charity, and except dressing of meat in families, or dressing and selling of meat at inns, cooks' shops or victualling-houses, for such as cannot otherwise be provided, &c. on pain of forfeiting 5*s.* &c.; it was held, that a baker who exercised his trade on a Sunday could not be convicted in more than one penalty in respect of the same Sunday, and that there could be no more than one offence on one and the same day. Cripps v. Durden, 2 Cowp. 640. So if an unqualified person kill several hares on the same day, he cannot, it is said, be convicted in so many different penalties, as the offence for which the statute gives the forfeiture is the keeping of dogs and engines, and not the killing the hare. R. v. Matthews, 10 Mod. 26. Supra, 500; and per Ld. Kenyon, in Peshall v. Layton, 2 T. R. 512; Marriott v. Shaw, Com. 274. Yet qu. whether every distinct instance of killing a hare be not a different using of a gun, &c. to destroy game? For the statute is in the disjunctive, keep or use. See R. v. Gage, 1 Str. 546. R. v. King, 1 Sess. C. 88. In the case of Brooke v. Milliken, 3 T. R. 509, it was held that several penalties might be incurred on the same day, on the 12 G 2, c. 36, for distinct acts of sale of books reprinted in another country, which were originally printed and published here. If a man first shoot a hare, and afterwards, though on the same day, shoot a pheasant, it seems that the acts of using are as distinct as the acts of sale were in Brooke v. Milliken.

(e) See Brooke v. Milliken, 3 T. R. 509; and the preceding note.

(f) Phillips v. Mendez da Costa, 1 Esp. C. 34.

(g) One penalty may be recovered against several under the game laws. Hardyman v. Whitaker, 2 East, 572. Secus, in proceeding against two proctors for practising without certificates. Barnard v. Gostling, 1 N. R. 245.

(h) Holloway v. Bennett, 3 T. R. 448. Hardy v. Cathcart,[2] 5 Taunt. 11. Penal information for using a private still, for which the party was liable to the penalty of 20*l.*, under an ancient statute; the Court quashed a conviction in the sum of 200*l.*, which could only arise by inference from recent statutes, which impose the greater penalty for having in custody, &c. R. v. Bond, 1 B. & A. 390.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 310. [2]Id. i. 4.

county (i) (1). A variance in this respect is matter of defence upon the trial (k).

*848 Contract. *Where a contract was made for the purchase of coals, without stating the specific quantity, it was held that the offence of selling coals of a different description from those contracted for, was committed in the county where the coals were delivered, the contract having been made in a different county (l). But the not justly measuring such coals being a local omission contrary to a local Act, is completed at the place where the coals are kept for sale, and where the bushel is required to be kept for the purpose of measuring (m).

The offence of driving a distress out of the hundred is not complete till the cattle have entered the second hundred; and if the latter hundred be situated in a different county, the defendant will be liable to be nonsuited if the venue be not laid there (n).

Where a draft was given for usurious interest in the county A., and the money was actually received on the draft in the county B., it was held that the offence was committed in the latter county (o).

An action for non-residence, although the offence consist in an omission, must be brought in the county where the living is situate (p).

In an action of debt for using a trade without having served an apprenticeship, it was held that proof was requisite that the defendant exercised the trade for one entire month (q) within the same county (r).

Although the venue be changed into another county for the purpose of trial, the cause of action must still be proved to have accrued in the county where the venue is laid (s).

(i) By the stat. 31 Eliz. c. 5, s. 2, which enacts that the offence against any penal statute shall not be laid to be done in any other county than where it was in truth done. This statute extends to all actions by common informers upon a penal statute, whether made before or after that statute. (B. N. P. 194. Com. Dig. Action, N. 10. 2 T. R. 238; 2 B. & P. 381. Barber v. Tilson, 3 M. & S. 429). The statute, however, contains some exceptions as to informations by the Attorney-general in the Exchequer, champerty, &c.— By the stat. 21 Jac. I, c. 4, all informations, either by or on behalf of the King or any other, for any offence against any penal statute, shall be laid in the county where, &c. This statute, it has been held, does not apply to offences created by subsequent statutes, (3 M. & S. 438; B. N. P. 195; Hickes's Case, 1 Salk. 372, 3). But held to extend to an offence created by a statute which had expired before 21 J. 1, but continued by subsequent statutes, which give it effect from the time of first being passed. Shipman v. Henbest, 4 T. R. 109. And neither of these statutes extends to actions brought by the party grieved. Ibid. and B. N. P. 195. By the latter statute, s. 3, the informer shall make oath that the offence was committed in the county where the suit was commenced. The venue of an information for being a tanner and shoemaker, under the stat. 24 G. 2, c. 19, need not be within the county. Attorney-general v. Farris, 3 Ans. 871. Sed qu.

(k) 4 East, 385.

(l) Butterfield v. Windle, 4 East, 385, under the stat. 3 Geo. 2, c. 26. (m) Ibid.

(n) Pope v. Davies, 2 Camp. 266; and see Platt v. Lokke, Plow. 35. Sav. 58.

(o) Scurry v. Freeman, 2 B. & P. 381. And see Wade, q. t., v. Wilson, 1 East, 195; where it was held that if a premium be taken at the time of an usurious loan, receiving interest at the rate of 5*l.* per cent., the offence is complete as soon as any interest is received. If an usurious contract be entered into by a deed executed in London, appointing the lender to be the receiver of the borrower's rents in Middlesex, with a pretended salary, and the lender receive the rents in Middlesex, but settle for the balance with the borrower in London, the venue, in an action on the statute, is well laid in London (Scott, q. t., v. Brent, 2 T. R. 238); and per Ashurst, it might be laid either in London or Middlesex (Ibid. 240). But P. C. K. B. Hil. T. 1825, the venue must be laid in the county where the money is received, and not where the contract is made. As to the venue in cases of conspiracy, game, libel, &c. see these titles respectively; as to the venue in cases of indictments, see Starkie's Crim. Pleadings, Ch. I.

(p) In the K. B. MS.

(q) R. v. Barnett, 3 Camp. 344. Pearson v. Gowran,[1] 3 B. & C. 700.

(r) Cunningham v. Watson, 3 Camp. 249. This penal law is now repealed. Supra, 847, note (b).

(s) Robinson v. Garthwaite, 9 East, 296. See the stat. 38 Geo. 3, c. 2, s. 1.

(1) [An action upon the statute of New Jersey, for restraining certain persons from navigating the waters between that State and New York, was held to be transitory. Gibbons v. Ogden, 1 Halsted, 285. See Gilbert v. Marcy, Kirby, 401.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps, x. 215.

Where part of the penalty sued for is given by the statute to the poor of the particular parish where the offence was committed, evidence is also requisite to prove that the offence was committed in that parish according to the allegation in the information or declaration (t). Parish.

*It is sufficient if the parish be described by its popular and well-known name, although that be not the name of its consecration (u); but where, in an action to recover penalties for non-residence, the parish was described to be St. Ethelburg, and it appeared, on the defendant's evidence, that the name was St. Ethelburga, the variance was held to be fatal (x). *849

Where the plaintiff had closed his case without proof of the local averment, he was held to be precluded from afterwards adducing such evidence (y).

3dly. The commencement within time, &c. (z).—The suing out a latitat was a commencement of the action (a). Commencement.

The production of the writ shows that a qui tam action was commenced in time, although there be no evidence to connect the writ with the action (b), provided the declaration appear to have been filed in time (c); but the record of an issue in the Common Pleas did not prove the time of filing the declaration (d).

(t) See R. v. Lookup, 4 Burr. 2018. Evans v. Steevens, 4 T. R. 226. R. v. Priest, 6 T. R. 538; the statute gave a part of the penalty to the overseers of the poor where the offence was committed, and in the conviction it was adjudged to be paid to the overseers of the township of Ullesthorpe; the fact having been alleged at Ullesthorpe; and the Court were of opinion that the conviction was irregular. In R. v. Wyatt, (2 Ld. Raym. 1478), in a similar case, where the offence was laid to have been committed apud Villam de Mottram Andrews, the Court, after conviction, said that they would intend that the parish was co-extensive with the vill, and that if the vill was extra-parochial, the informer would have the whole.

(u) Williams v. Burgess, 3 Taunt. 127. And see Kirtland v. Pounsett, 1 Taunt. 570. Burbidge v. Jakes, 1 B. & P. 225. In an action of debt on the stat. 3 Hen. 8, c. 11, against Dr. Leigh, for practising physic in the parish of St. George's in the East, within seven miles of the City of London, it appeared from the consecration deed, that the name of the parish was St. George's, in the county of Middlesex; but Lee, C. J. held it to be well enough, for it was more generally known by the former than by the latter description. And see Wilson, q. t., v. Van Mildert, 2 B. & P. 394, where it was held that three united parishes might be described in pleading as one rectory.

(x) Wilson v. Gilbert, 2 B. & P. 281.

(y) Tovey v. Plomer, Esp. on Pen. Stat. 142, cor. Ld. Ellenborough; but see below, 850, notes (e) and (h).

(z) By the stat. 31 Eliz. c. 5, s. 5, all actions, indictments, &c. brought for any forfeiture upon a penal statute, whereby the forfeiture is limited to the King only, shall be brought within two years, &c.; where the benefit is limited to the King and the informer (except where the action, &c. is brought on the Statute of Tillage), within one year; or on default, then by the King, within two years, &c. Upon the construction of this statute, and that of 7 Hen. 8, c. 3, where the penalty is given to a common informer alone, the action must be brought within one year (Lookup v. Sir T. Frederick, 4 Burr. 2018; B. N. P. 195, where the action was brought on the stat. 9 Ann. c. 14); and it extends to all actions upon penal statutes, whereby the forfeiture is limited to the King, or to the King and a common informer, whether made before or since the stat. 31 Eliz., 3 M. & S. 421, 434;[1] 5 Taunt. 754; 9 East, 296; but it does not extend to actions brought by the party grieved. 1 Lord Ray. 78; Haw. b. 2, c. 26, sec. 47; Cro. Eliz. 645; Carth. 232; 3 Leon. 237; Show. 354; Tidd's Practice, 13, 14, seventh edition; Willes, 443 (a). It has, however, been doubted whether the statute applies where the whole of the penalty is given to the informer. Culliford v. Blandford, 4 Mod. 129; affir. Chance v. Adams, Ld. Ray. 78; cont. 4 Com. Dig. 410. Frederick v. Lookup, 4 Burr. 2018; B. N. P. 195. If a statute give a moiety to the informer and a moiety to the King, though an information after the year be void as to the informer, it is good as to the King. Haw. b. 2, c. 26, s. 46; 3 Wils. 250; Moor, 58; Savill, 6. The stat. 31 Eliz. c. 5, extends to offences of omission as well as commission. 5 M. & S. 427;[2] 2 Chitty's Rep. 420; Chitty on the Statutes, 700. The limitations in the statute being incorporated in the stat. 12 Anne, apply to Scotland as well as England. Surtees v. Allan, 2 Dow. 254, and now see the late statute, supra, 656.

(a) Hardyman v. Whittaker, 2 East, 573. Culliford v. Blandford, Carth. 232, by two judges, Holt, C. J. dissent. For other observations and decisions, connected with this subject, vide supra, tit. JUSTICES.—HUNDRED; and infra, tit. TIME.

(b) Hutchinson v. Piper, 4 Taunt. 555. (c) 6 Taunt. 141; 3 Marsh. 497.

(d) In Thistlewood v. Cracroft,[3] 6 Taunt. 141, 1 Marsh. 497, the writ was returnable Easter 1813, but had not been returned; the issue was of Hilary 1815, and the plaintiff produced rules for times to declare from Mich. 1813 to Trin. 1814; and it was held that this was not sufficient evidence to show that the declaration had been filed in time.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. i. 253. [2] Id. xviii. 384. [3] Id. i. 335.

*The writ may be produced in order to show that the action has been commenced within time, after the objection has been taken (e).

In an action for penalties for using a trade without having served an apprenticeship, it was held that no penalty could be recovered which was completely incurred a year before the action brought; for each month's employment is a distinct offence (f).

Under the Uniformity of Process Act, the writ is the commencement of the action, and the record shows the day on which it was issued (g). The plaintiff's counsel having neglected in the first instance to prove the commencement of the suit, Lord Kenyon held that it might be proved in any stage of the cause (h).

The evidence as to the corpus delicti is referred to under the appropriate heads (i).

Defence. The defendant may, under the general issue of nil debet, avail himself of any proviso, either in the principal statute, or any other which exempts him from the penalty, by evidence that he is, in point of fact, within the exemption (k). But the defendant cannot, under this issue, prove that the penalties have already been recovered by a stranger; for the fact ought to have been pleaded, in order to give the plaintiff an opportunity of replying that the recovery was fraudulent (l).

An offence against a penal statute cannot be punished after the repeal of the particular clause creating the offence, although the offence was committed previous to the repeal of the Act unless the repealing statute contain some special exemption (m).

Competency. *S51 An informer who is entitled to any part of the penalty is, it has been *seen, incompetent to give evidence (n); but in some instances such informers are made competent by the express provisions of particular statutes (o);

(e) Maugham v. Walker, Peake's C. 263. Where the plaintiff, after he had closed his case in a penal action, and after an objection had been taken to the insufficiency of the evidence, offered further evidence in order to remove the objection, Lord Ellenborough said that he would receive it, if the omission arose from inadvertence on the part of plaintiff's counsel, but not otherwise. Alldred v. Halliwell,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 117.

(f) Evans v. Hunter, 2 Camp. 293. (g) See tit. Justices; Hundred; Time.

(h) Maugham v. Walker, Peake's C. 163. But where the plaintiff had closed his case, having omitted to prove that the offence had been committed in the proper county, Lord Ellenborough excluded subsequent proof. Tovey v. Palmer, Esp. on Pen. Stat. 142; but qu.

(i) See Game, Usury, &c. A penalty is inflicted by stat. 3 Geo. 2, c. 26, s. 13, on coal dealers who shall neglect to fill the sacks sent out from a measure prescribed by the Act. Proof that the coals, on being remeasured at the place of delivery, were short of the proper quantity, and the testimony of one who saw the coals delivered out of the barge into the cart, and who continued with them until remeasured, that he saw no bushel used, is sufficient proof of a neglect within the statute. Warren v. Windle, 3 East, 205. And even without such testimony, the former evidence is presumptive proof, in support of an averment in an action on the statute, that the coals had not been justly measured within the statute. Ibid. Where, in an action for unshipping foreign glass without paying duty, the master of a homeward-bound vessel coming up the Thames was proved to have hired and sent off a boat and men, accompanied by one of his own crew, to bring away certain boxes of foreign and British glass lying on the sands on the Essex coast, to be landed at Woolwich, which they find and bring as far as Gravesend, where the whole is seized by the custom-house officers; held to be sufficient for a jury, of a being concerned in unshipping foreign glass without payment of duty, and in unshipping British glass shipped for exportation, subjecting the master of the vessel to the penalties for both those offences, although the whole was one transaction. Attorney-general v. Towns, 6 Price, 198.

(k) B. N. P. 225; 2 Roll. Ab. 683. R. v. Hall, 1 T. R. 320. It was formerly held otherwise, where the exemption was contained in another Act, or where it contained matter of law. Gilb. L. Ev. 11. [See U. States v. Hayward, 2 Gallison, 485.]

(l) Bredon v. Harman, 2 Str. 701; supra, Vol. I. tit. Judgment; and see the statute 4 H. 7, c. 20.

(m) Miller's Case, 1 Bl. 451. [See Hollingsworth v. Virginia, 3 Dallas, 378. U. States v. Passmore, 4 Dallas, 372.]

(n) Supra, Vol. I. tit. Witness.—Informer.

(o) See the stat. 32 Geo. 3, c. 56, s. 7, which prohibits counterfeit certificates of the characters of servants. And see the Hackney-coach Act, 33 Geo. 3, c. 75, s. 17. See the statute 1 Geo. 4, c. 56, as to malicious trespasses. And see also as to parishioners, supra, Vol. I. tit. Witness.—Inhabitant.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 321.

and in some other instances also, informers have been held to be competent, by necessary inference from particular statutes, on the consideration that such statutes would otherwise be in a great measure nugatory (p).

(p) As in the case of the Bribery Act, 2 Geo. 2, c. 24. See Heward v. Shipley, 4 East, 182. Bush v. Rawling, Say, 289. Mead v. Robinson, Willes, 425. Dover v. Maester, 5 Esp. C. 92. So in a prosecution under the stat. 21 Geo. 3, c. 37, against exporting machinery (R. v. Teasdale, 3 Esp. C. 68). So under the stat. 23 Geo. 2, c. 13, s. 1, for seducing artificers to leave the kingdom, although the informer is entitled to half the penalty (R. v. Johnson, Willes, 425, n. (c). So on a prosecution for penalties under the stat. 9 Ann. c. 14, s. 5, the loser of money at play is competent to prove the fact. R. v. Luckup, Willes, 425 (c). Proof of exemption lies on defendant. R. v. Neville,[1] 1 B. & Ad. 489. See also Sutton v. Bishop, 4 Burr. 2284. Sibly v. Cuming, 4 Burr. 2469; B. N. P. 225. R. v. Pemberton, 1 Bl. 250; 1 M. & M. 42. The new rules do not apply to such penal actions as are within the 4th sect. of the stat. 21 J. 1, c. 4. See Lord Spencer v. Swannel, 3 M. & W. 154; and semble, that the st. 21 J. 1, c. 4, applies to actions on statutes subsequent as well as prior to that Act. As to the limitation of actions for penalties by parties aggrieved, see the 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 71, s. 3, and supra.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xx. 433.

END OF VOL. II. PART I.